"Complicated" Mission for Cosmonaut

MOSCOW (UPI) — A Soviet air force colonel vaulted into earth orbit aboard a Soyuz 4 spaceship yesterday on a "complicated" mission that could lead to a rendezvous with another manned craft yet to be launched.

The cosmonaut, Lt. Col. Vladimir A. Shatalov, 41, spoke to the "dear Soviet people" by national television broadcast from the cabin of his craft two hours after launching. He corrected the orbit of his ship after it veered briefly off course and then crawled to a separate compartment for a night of sleep on a couch.

But space experts in Moscow speculated that the real complication of the mission would be a rendezvous with either the Cosmos 263 satellite launched Sunday or another manned ship in the Soyuz series that could be launched later in the week for experiments in manned docking and crew exchanges.

Soviet officials described the Soyuz 4 mission only as "complicated and responsible."

Space observers doubted that the Soviets would simply use Soyuz 4 to duplicate the experiments with Soyuz 2 and 3, particularly when their space program needs a timely boost to offset the spectacular success of the United States' Apollo 8 moon voyage.

The last three in the series of Soyuz spacecraft are redesigned models of the Soyuz 1, which crash landed April 24, 1967, and killed Cosmonaut Vladimir Komarov.

Capital Cops Get New Shooting Rules

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The City Council yesterday approved new regulations under which police in the nation's capital may fire at suspects when they believe the threat of death or serious injury exists.

Warning shots would not be allowed.

"Let there be no mistake," said council President John Hechinger.

"This is not a balm for criminals. The officer may shoot to kill."

The new regulations, approved 9-0 by the council, revised an earlier rule restricting the police use of firearms unless an officer or citizen was attacked with "deadly force."

Mayor Walter E. Washington vetoed the earlier measure Dec. 28 because he felt the term "deadly force" was too vague. The new wording, worked out in conjunction with the mayor's staff, was expected to meet with Washington's approval.

The new ruling also allows policemen to fire at or from a moving vehicle under the "death or serious bodily injury" provision.

Nixon Supports Surcharge Extension

KEY BISCAINE, Fla. (UPI) — President-elect Richard M. Nixon yesterday night supported President Johnson's call for extension of the 10 per cent income tax surcharge until "the war, the budget outlook and economic conditions" allow it to be dropped.

In a brief statement made public simultaneously with Johnson's State of the Union address, Nixon said:

"It remains my conviction that the surcharge should end as soon as requirements for the war, the budget outlook and economic conditions will permit.

"It is my understanding that President Johnson shares this same view.

"However, until the new administration and the Congress can ascertain that the facts we face justify permitting the surtax to expire or be reduced, I will support the President's suggestion that the surcharge be continued.

Nuclear Carrier Blaze Kills Thirteen

PEARL HARBOR (UPI) — Fire and explosions erupted yesterday on the nuclear aircraft carrier USS Enterprise, the world's largest warship. The Navy reported 13 killed and 85 to 100 injured.

An undetermined number of sailors were missing.

The Navy said the carrier's nuclear reactor was not involved in the tragedy.

The blaze broke out as the "Big E" was on maneuvers 75 miles southwest of Hawaii in preparation for deployment to Vietnam for the fourth time.

The fire, followed by about a dozen explosions, burned on the flight and hangar decks. Cause of the blaze and extent of damage was not immediately known.

Mother Deprives Brandeis of Protestor

WALTHAM, Mass. (UPI) — Sixty-five Negroes protesting racist policies at Brandeis University by seizing the communications center lost one of their members yesterday when his mother took him home.

The unidentified mother, armed with an umbrella, approached Ford Hall and tried to get in to take her son home. The black students refused her entry.

She took down several signs on the building and tried to climb in through a first floor window of the building, a three story red brick structure with classrooms, the main switch board and a $20,000 computer.

The protestors finally let the woman into the building and she retrieved her son.

Hunter-Davey Present Bill; Senate Has First Reading

The Student Senate went through the first reading of the Hunter-Davey constitutional amendment bill, dealing with the operations of Student Union, last night. A few minor changes were made in the reading of the bill by its proponent, Breen-Phillips Senator Richard Hunter. However, the main provisions of the bill, dealing with the subordination of Student Union to the Senate and Student Body President, remained unchanged.

The bill will come up for debate and final consideration at a special Senate meeting Monday night at 7:00. There was a motion from the floor to discuss the bill last night with the knowledge that no action could be taken until Monday, but the motion was defeated, mainly through the action of Hunter. Hunter, contended that he had not had a chance to prepare a rationale for the altered bill because he had been in constant consultation about it since it was made available Monday evening.

The two most important provisions of the bill deal with Article IV of the Constitution. They are:

1) The Director of the Student Union shall be appointed by the Student Body President elected in the spring of that year with the consent of the Senate in a period not to exceed two weeks after the date of inauguration.

2) The Student Union Board of Directors shall with the consent of the Student Senate formulate the administrative policy of the Student Union. The Student Union Director shall execute policy of the Student Union and shall report to the Student Senate at least once each month.

The first of these amendments would assure that the incoming Student Body President would be able to appoint a person that he could deal with effectively instead of being saddled by the selection of the outgoing Student Union Board.

The second proposal would make the Student Union Board of Directors the formulators of Union Policy, with the implication that the Senate would supervise the policy through its frequent examination. Originally the Hunter-Davey Bill provided that the policy be formulated by the Student Body President.

In other action, the Senate tried to arbitrate a dispute between Student Union and the Jersey Club over sponsorship of the student trip to Europe.

Student Union normally handles all student trips. However, last spring, Jersey Club President Herbert Moore got written permission from Vice-President for Student Affairs Rev. Charles McCarragher to sponsor the trip. Moore also received verbal approval from Transportation Commissioner Tim Collins. But he did not receive specific written permission from Student Services Commissioner Allan Knappenberger.

This fall, Knappenberger planned and advertised for a Student Union trip to Europe, ignorant of the verbal agreement between Collins and Moore. The Union spent $325 of the money budgeted last spring to promote the trip. The Union trip, as planned, would have cost $20 more than the Jersey Club trip. The Union trip, however, included a free trip for the director of the trip and the Student Union President (or whomever he designated).

A committee, established earlier in the year, recommended that Student Union be allowed to run the trip with the stipulation that free trips be eliminated. The trips were included in the planning following precedents set by previous trips and social functions sponsored by the Union.

The Senate ignored the committee's recommendation and voted to allow the Jersey Club to sponsor the trip. The Senate's decision was cast into doubt by a legal technicality. In order to be eligible for club rates from the airlines, a club must allow only members of the club to participate. In the past, Committee Chairman John Rank stated that this rule had been ignored by some companies. Because of the dispute, the committee will reconvene and investigate this rule. If it cannot be waived, the committee will probably recommend that the Union again be designated to sponsor the trip.

Student Government Treasurer Richard Roderick in his financial report revealed that Student Government has a deficit of approximately $5,000. The deficit comes mainly from losses incurred by the Social Commission with the student trip to the Michigan State football game and the Harry Belafonte and Lou Rawls concerts. Several senators wanted a specific breakdown of the Social Commission's financial status. Social Commissioner Louis Lanwermyer agreed to present the material at the first Senate meeting of the second semester.

Hesburgh On Demonstrations, Girls, Halls

Current anti-student sentiment is a form of backlash, a "reaction to extremes" against the wave of unrest and disorder on the nation's campuses, and this could be avoided if students were more discreet in presenting their demands to their colleges or universities. This was the response of University President Rev. Theodore Hesburgh to questions regarding campus disorder at his press conference yesterday.

"Any social change is a reaction to extremes," said Fr. Hesburgh. "and the current sentiment in the United States is a reaction to the extreme form some campus dissent has taken recently."

A bill has been introduced in the Indiana legislature to prohibit any form of campus demonstration with stiff penalties accompanying it. Hesburgh commented that if passed, the law would not apply here, because of Notre Dame's independent status.

He added, "I wouldn't want it to apply here. Force is a Gestapo tactic, out of place in a University. Those who have tried to mix a University society with police enforcement have gotten only what they deserve."

Hesburgh said that he did not foresee a repetition of the crisis at the demonstration here against Dow and the CIA, because "we have excellent communications here" and he hoped that the demonstrators have realized that the more peaceful form of their demonstration against Dow was far more effective than the lie-in against CIA interviews.

He said that more violent forms of protest were counterproductive since the disruption of the good order of the University detracted from the argument of the demonstrators.

He said that any demonstration which forced those who disagreed to perform an inhumane act, such as stepping on a person, was disruptive and violent.

Hesburgh said that the hardest part of the job of a University President is to build a community. "A University community must be composed of groups of different viewpoints, young and old, black and white, rich and poor," he said, "and the problems are, I think, obvious."

Fr. Hesburgh was a member of the Carnegie Commission, which has prepared an analysis of American higher education for the Federal government.

He said the report "really pegs the government and its aid program, especially in the area of equality of opportunity."

On Notre Dame's abortive bid to have Barat College move to South Bend, Hesburgh said that the main reason that the move could not be made was the lack of a buyer for their Lake Forest, Ill. campus.

He did not entirely leave out the possibility that there may be women's residence on campus next year. He reported that a program was being discussed whereby a number of women would come from Barat, and perhaps from several other schools, and live on the ND campus.

On the hall overcrowding, Hesburgh said that Ellerbe

Architects' report would be adopted as a standard, and that current plans call for approximately half of the new rooms to relieve overcrowding in present facilities. "We hope to be able to make an enormous improvement," he said. "Within a week we should have a plan ready for the entire campus."

SLAC Ready To Act, Legal Aid Available

Gary McNerny, a member of the Student Legal Aid Committee (SLAC), said yesterday that the committee is interested in helping any student who needs advice in a disciplinary problem. The SLAC was formed under the Judicial Code this year in the senate.

McNerny is currently defending Marty McNamara before the Judicial Board in the SLAC's first case. Marty has been charged with impeding other students' rights in connection with the demonstration against the CIA. McNamara went to the SLAC for help because of a recommendation by the SDS. In the first trial, McNerny won a postponement until February 9.

"Before the trial, McNamara had a hearing which wasn't provided for in writing in the Judicial Code. It seems there are many discrepancies and vague passages in the Judicial Code. This vagueness was exemplified when in the last trial there was a lack of communication between the defense and the Chairman of the Board," said McNerny.

For this reason McNerny claimed that not only is Marty on trial but also the Judicial Code. Because the Judicial Code is setting precedents, the SLAC is interested in making sure that students are treated in a fair and non-discriminatory fashion.

The SLAC would like to defend more people who come before the Judicial Board or the Honor Council. "We can take all cases, not just one's like Marty's," said McNerny. "The SLAC is a committee created to aid any student under investigation or accusation by any disciplinary organ or official of the university."

However, McNerny said that most students do not know about the help they can receive. He said that anyone who needs assistance or would like to know more about the SLAC should contact him at 3591 or Bob Rigney at 6875.

YAF Blasts Campus Judicial Board

Notre Dame's chapter of Young Americans for Freedom has issued a statement blasting the Campus Judicial Board for honoring the defense motion for continuance in the trial of Marty McNamara, who is charged with infringement of rights.

The statement has been read on WSND radio for the past two days in advertising time purchased by the YAF. Bob Narucki, YAF Chairman, said that the ND Young Republicans will co-sponsor the message in today's advertising.

Narucki said that the purpose of the statement is to "more or less set a precedent. We're trying to bring out the fact that no one has taken any action on this. They cry for student responsibility around here, and then nothing is done when responsibility is needed."

The statement reads in full: "The campus chapter of the Young Americans for Freedom is appalled to learn that the Campus Judiciary Board has failed to take decisive action in the case involving the unlawful November demonstration against the CIA on campus. In honoring the defense motion for continuance, they have negligently avoided consideration in this vital matter, in the same manner as the Student Senate, the Student Life Council, and the Administration itself. We feel that it is an insult to the entire student body to have its rights so flippantly ignored."

Chris Wolfe Some Different Ideas

Over the vacation I was talking to an older friend who works in the State Department. Joe was pretty unhappy about the deadlock at the Paris peace talks because he feels that there are some pretty easy ways to help break it.

"The first thing that we could do", he said, "is to try to foster some good will by saying something nice about the communists. Why not for instance, thank them for reducing the flow of war materiel since the bombing halt?" When I pointed out that they had increased it considerably, he responded "that is just the simplistic attitude of moral superiority that is preventing progress at the talks. When you are concerned with an issue as important as peace you don't let trifles stand in your way. We have to compliment the communists for their peaceful intentions just as any guy courting a girl would have to say that she looked good in a miniskirt—even if she had thighs like a sumo wrestler."

One of the major areas of improvement, as Joe sees it, is a shuffle in the U.S. representatives at the talks.

He does want Averell Harriman to stay on as the ceremonial head, "because of his past diplomatic successes". (When I asked what those successes were, he replied "I don't know, but everyone around here says that he had some, so there must be a couple".) Through back up men though, he wants to make what he calls "a two prong attack on the stalemate". The attack is based on the idea that if two people take different approaches to the talks, one is bound to work.

The first person is George Romney, who would have to take a leave of absence from the Cabinet. Joe said that Romney's diplomatic credentials were impressive, and proved it by showing me a Romney quote from his presidential campaign: "I didn't say that I didn't say it. I said that I didn't say that I said it. I want to make that very clear". If he can get the communist representatives thinking about some statement like that, they'll go crazy and sign anything! If that doesn't work, he can just pretend that he's been brainwashed, and is actually on their side; then they'll sign anything he gives them.

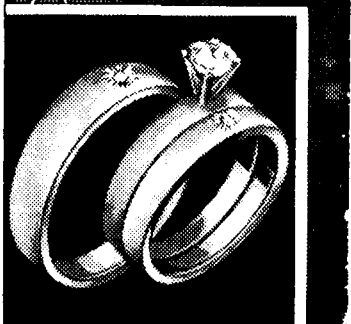

The other possible representative is Curtis LeMay. Since the communists have always seemed to think that peace talks were primarily designed to make the wildest assertions and propositions possible, we could just make a deal with them. According to the deal, the most wild, unrealistic threats and proposals would determine the winner of the talks. Then all we would have to do is sit back, and let Curtis take over. After he talked about U.S. manifest destiny for a while, he'd threaten to blow North Vietnam, China, Russia, and anybody who gave buses to them off the face of the earth, and he'd walk away with first prize.

Joe had some other good ideas for speeding up the talks. "Since most progress seems to have been made during tea breaks," he said, "why not build a twenty foot tall tea kettle, put the delegates inside, and bring it to a slow boil? Most of the observers are already being brought to a slow boil anyway. To find out exactly how quickly this method would take, we can just ask the communists, whose experience at this type of think makes them experts of a sort."

Finally, there is a very simple solution to the problem of the shape of the table. First of all, the communists are obviously right when they say that there are more than just the good guys and bad guys (two sides): there are four sides: the good guys and their comradely national liberators and the bad guys and their greedy capitalistic exploiters. But since South Vietnam won't agree to four sides, the solution is simply to eliminate the table altogether. The talks would be easier and a lot more fun, after all, if they were held in a playpen.

When I pointed out to him that the seating might be a little uncomfortable he said that he was sure the delegates would make the sacrifice in lieu of a better solution. Whereupon I made my own meager contribution to the success of these historic talks by musing out loud that "maybe the student senate would let you use its sand-box . . ." Joe enthusiastically agreed with this solution, and if he can convince his Department, don't be surprised if you see some unusual activity around LaFortune.

Detroit Tonight

Stellar Olympian Spencer Haywood leads the University of Detroit (10-3) against the Irish tonight in a 7:30 p.m. Convo contest.

The 6'8" sophomore standout leads the nation in rebounding, hauling down an average of 23.2 per game. He also ranks third in scoring, behind Pete Maravich and Calvin Murphy, hitting at a 32ppg clip.

The Titans broke from the starting gate quickly this season, winning their first ten games. But they've run into a midseason slump which has seen them drop consecutive tilts to Minnesota (85-80) and Marquette (85-71) on the road, and Dayton (64-62) on their home court.

As many as eight of Coach Bob Calihan's charges figure to see the action. The tentative starting line-up consists of Haywood and Jerry Schwartzfager (6'6" senior) at the forwards, 6'7" junior Larry Moore at center, and Jimmy Jackson (5'10" soph) teaming with Dwight Dunlop (6'1" jr.) in the backcourt.

Moore is second in team scoring at 11.5 ppg, followed by Jackson (9.8) and Schwartzfager (9.5). Six foot two inch Bob Calihan Jr. should see some action at guard, as should 6'5" Vern De Silva and 6'4" Vito Abramavicius up front.

Detroit runs a freewheeling attack. It might be termed a pivot offense since they do a lot of cutting off a high post. They like to fast break on occasion.

ND Icers Bow, 5-3

By GREG WINGENFELD

The Irish dropped their first home hockey game of the season yesterday afternoon, taking a 5-3 whipping from Michigan State's freshman team.

The initial du Lac goal was a production of the front line, Joe Bonk scoring with assists going to mates John Womack and Kevin Hoene. This marker came 20 seconds after MSU's Bob Campbell had drawn first blood by knocking in a rebound.

A pair of second period goals by Jim Cordes gave ND a short-lived, 3-2 lead. Cordes, a freshman center, pulled an "Eric Nesterenko" on his second goal, following up his shot all the way into the net.

But the Spartans took advantage of a sagging Irish defense to pepper goalie Dick Tomasoni for three scores to clinch the victory. Coach Lefty Smith blamed the poor third period showing on "half-hearted fore and backchecking."

Tomasoni was virtually alone in his defense of the net. "We were going for the puck instead of for the body," lamented Lefty, who wants to see some violent checking as bad as fans do. "We were letting them get into the attack zone. Against a poor team you can get by." Assistant Coach Tim McNeil considered the Spartan frosh "one of the best teams we've played all year."

Incidentally, the MSU team was a freshman aggregation from an academic standpoint only. They actually averaged a year per man age advantage over the Irish.

St. John's of Minnesota visits Notre Dame for a pair of 7:30 p.m. matches, Friday and Saturday.

'Rock Ball' Survives Despite Convo Center

By MIKE PAVLIN

The Convo is open for basketball now, but I don't know if I'll ever play there. It just won't be the same as at the Rock (or, as some high-brows call it, the Knute). Hoop at the Rock begins with a lop-sided ball dispensed by King Ed, and continues upstairs on the sometimes dimly-lit court.

Darwin would have been at home there. Natural selection runs rampant as the weaker teams are constantly weeded out. The best battle many times shapes up when a team made up of talented friends blows everyone off the court. Then some individual star will walk around and collect the best four he can find to take on the group.

There are two levels of superior players at the Rock. One is, of course, made up of the varsity, who appear on the fringes of the season. The other level consists of a group of excellent players, many of them all staters.

Two of the best work at the Rock, Vince Cushing and Joe Branciforte. Cushing played ball in the D.C. area, while Branciforte is the Joe DiMaggio of the Rock. He will beat your brains out quietly, fundamentally, without grandstand play.

Kensington, Md. has turned out some of the Rock's finest. Cushing hails from there as do Tom Ryan and John Nesline. Along with Tom McClusky and Mike Van Dyke, they are about the best to be found. Van Dyke is particularly deadly because he played as a 6'2" guard in high school and will kill any defender from both far away and close in.

Among the other stars are Rich Christie, Phil Olson, and John the Teacher.

John, who teaches somewhere in South Bend, frequents the Rock at night, perhaps to escape from his wife. The smooth and superb Ken Hungerford is now a law student. He amazed me once in practice by dropping in a series of long left-handers because his right hand bothered him. Then there is the mysterious Rod, a sophomore transfer student from the University of San Francisco. Currently ineligible for varsity competition, Rod averaged 17 points a game for the USF frosh.

Many at the Rock are specialists in one field or another, the most important being that of shooting. Armand, besides possessing an exceptional behind-the-back pass, has a high lazy lob of a shot. Teacher John sights his deadly jumper at his eyes and lines it in. Pat has a great looking shot. As he jumps, he lays the ball back on his palm without touching it with his finger tips. Then he breaks his wrists forward, rolling the ball of his fingers and producing a highly accurate shot.

By far the wildest looking shot, but also one of the most effective, is the "sling-shot" owned by Jack Schaefer. Out about 25 feet, Jack slides out his right foot and bends backward. Cradling the ball behind his head, he attempts to touch it to his heel. Then he snaps forward and launches a potent line drive. The sheer impossibility of the shot sometimes gets Jack in trouble. Others on his team who have not seen the effect of the shot before may get on his back if he misses a few. Jack usually makes up for any misses by his excellent defensive work and passing skill.

Specialists in other fields included J. Kelly "Rabbit" Guifoyle. Kelly is a rebound devotee, expert at using all parts of his body to remove the opposition from underneath the boards. Mory is only a freshman, but is already one of the best at driving down the lane. He has perfected the standard move of flying down the middle, bringing the ball up and over the defender's head, keeping it at his waist, and spinning it underhanded off the board and in.

A specialist of sorts is "Wild Bill" Keeler. Give him the ball underneath the hoop and it will take him ten shots to hit the rim. But give him the ball when his team needs a point to win and a miracle happens. He will charge downcourt at full speed with his eyes glued to the ball, leap into the grasp of three defenders, throw the ball in the general direction of the roof, and run grinning up the court as the shot goes in, as if he had it planned that way.

The best time I can remember (which isn't very far, as I'm only a soph) at the Rock took place last year around Easter. With their season over, the frosh jocks descended upon the Rock in all their splendor. They treated the gathered crowds to some tremendous free-lance basketball as well as highlights like: Sid Catlett bringing the ball upcourt, dribbling behind his back; Collis Jones missing a dunk and sitting dazed and surprised on the floor; Tom Sinnott competing with nine mortals, playing a few games, then running wind sprints to complete his workout.

I wrote this article to mark the passing of the real Rock season. The good players will still frequent the floor but they will now have to wait their turn along with the multitudes who cram the building. With scores waiting to play, the Rock has a higher turnover than a drive-in restaurant. Winter ball at the Rock becomes largely a matter of picking the right times.
