Observer editor Bach resigns Publication suspended

The Observer is suspending publication with this edition — but it is not dead.

Observer Editor Dave Bach resigned late yesterday evening. He cited as reasons for his resignation the difficulties in putting out a quality newspaper with the limitations and pressures placed on the present staff.

Bach pointed out that The Observer needed professional help in training writers and other personnel. He also felt that the paper had grown too fast and that the pressures of daily publication had limited the ability of upperclassmen editors to direct and counsel underclassmen.

Observer Publisher Guy De Sapio pointed out that The Observer has been forced to continue to publish five days a week in order to avoid financial disaster.

De Sapio pointed out that editors in the past two years have not been able to evaluate the question of the frequency of publication on its merits. The decision was always based on the need to publish five days a week in order to attract the advertising needed to survive.

Meeting late last night, the editorial board of The Observer decided to suspend publication until the faculty advisory board of the paper could meet to give the staff advice on procedure.

The editorial board pointed out that the following problems would have to be solved before publication could resume.

First, the advisory board will have to select a new editor for the paper. The position is open to any student from St. Mary's or Notre Dame. Application can be made by submitting a statement of intent to: The Observer Board of Directors, Box 11, Notre Dame.

Second, consultations will be made with members of the Notre Dame Department of Communications Arts and with other officials of the university to determine whether professional aid can be obtained in helping to set up the staff. Efforts will also be made to obtain academic credit for Observer personnel.

Third, a decision would have to be made as to how frequently the paper will be published.

Fourth, efforts will be made to establish a sound financial basis for the paper in order to eliminate frequent concern over the paper's ability to publish for financial reasons.

An executive committee of Bach, De Sapio, News Editor Jim Holsinger, Campus Editor Glen Corso, Feature's Editor T.C. Treanor and Associate Editor Cliff Wintrobe has been established to guide efforts toward resumption of publication.

Currently The Observer suffers not only from staff and professional journalistic problems but also from its lack of financial stability.

The Observer's continued existence has depended during the last few years on a financial subsidy from student government. This year The Observer was able to break the tie by obtaining approval from the Vice President's Council to place a two dollar subscription fee on

The following excerpts are taken from the last issue of the VOICE, the newspaper that preceded THE OBSERVER. They appeared in an article entitled "The Voice is dead."

The editorial board of THE OBSERVER wishes to emphasize that publication of THE OBSERVER is merely suspended. Publication will be resumed if the staff can receive the cooperation of the university community in solving problems that it faces.

The VOICE — Thursday, October 27, 1966

"The VOICE was created to act as a medium for the expression of student thought and activity. It sought no more than to shed a true perspective on Notre Dame and its student body, a perspective filled out with the humor and insight that only participation brings."

"To find the men to put out the paper once a week had been hard enough. The strain of twice weekly publication made it almost impossible to find enough good men to cover the news of Notre Dame. As a result, The VOICE often went to press the final product of a small group of dedicated men."

This was caused not only by the burden of frequent deadlines, but also by the lack of training available for the members of the staff. Dedication is a virtue that can carry a venture only so far."

"In spite of the magnitude of these obstacles, The VOICE has still managed to exist. It didn't always appear regularly — lack of money, news and newsmen often necessitated dropping an issue. The amazing thing to many of its cynical followers was that The VOICE would always come back."

"Men interested in doing something for Notre Dame put all they had to see that Notre Dame produces one of the best collegiate newspapers in the country."

THE OBSERVER was born on November 3, 1966. It was published sporadically twice a week for the remainder of the year. Twelve editions in all.

Under Editor Pat Collins, THE OBSERVER began to assert itself in its second year. It came out twice a week, then three times a week. The last two weeks of the year under newly-appointed editor Bill Luking the paper began daily publication.

Under Luking, THE OBSERVER published daily during the 1968-69 school year. It also published football specials on the Saturday's of home football weekends. The paper has not missed a daily publication date since that time. It also inaugurated basketball and hockey program specials for home games last year.

SMC OC housing approved

by Kate Cassidy

The Saint Mary's College Student Affairs Committee last night passed an off-campus housing policy giving juniors, seniors or students over 21 the right to move off campus in the coming year.

The exact proposal of the Committee reads as follows:

"Any student who is a junior, senior, or over 21 has the right to live in off-campus housing by making application with the Director of Housing. The parent's permission must be presented to the Director of Housing at the time of the application if the student is under 21.

If however, the junior, senior or student over 21, who has already registered a room on campus decides to move off, she cannot do so until her bed is filled.

Responsibility for the condition, location, and legal aspects of the housing will be assumed by the student (or the student and her parents if the student is under 21). The address of the off-campus residence must be registered with the Director of Housing."

Debate centered around the question of the protection of the college in the event that too many students would decide to move off-campus, and dorms were not filled to capacity.

The Committee finally decided to preface the bill when it is presented to the Student Affairs Council with the assurance that the policy will be re-evaluated next year.

New flag raising procedure is designed to make salute an affirmation of devotion

The new salute to the flag at football games is an attempt to show "more than just one facet of the world community," says Dave Krashna, Student Body President. The new ceremony was inaugurated last week, to make the salute a true affirmation of devotion.

Rev. James Burtchaell, Provost, emphasized that the new procedure is not intended to exclude the ROTC from the presentation, but rather to include people and groups who are equally deserving of the honor. Krashna told of his reluctance to make the military aspect the sole object of the ceremony.

According to Fr. Burtchaell, the idea has met with the approval of the ROTC, and, overall, there have been no objections from any side.

Tentative plans for future ceremonies call for representatives from Student Government, the Administration, Faculty, and various segments of the university community to take part in the presentation. The salute will be accompanied by a reading; (last Saturday's included a text from Adlai Stevenson).

Both Burtchaell and Krashna hope that the new procedure with emphasize not only the significance of the occasion, but also the fact that the flag represents more than its traditional association with the military.

a student's account to obtain the necessary funds. The Observer had hoped to obtain between $10,000 and $12,000 from the fee.

Although this sum would be enough to enable The Observer to continue to operate it is not enough to allow The Observer to obtain the equipment needed to put out a daily paper that looked professional.

De Sapio contrasted The Observer's financial aid from the university with that which The Scholastic receives. The Scholastic, which is an official university publication receives an annual subsidy of $58,000 from the university. The sum comes out of tuition fees collected. Part of the sum goes to financial aid for the editors of the magazine.

De Sapio pointed out that half the sum which The Scholastic receives would be more than enough, when coupled with advertising revenue to allow The Observer to operate safely.

He noted that currently no member of The Observer editorial staff receives monetary compensation for his work.

The money collected from the student body this year for The Observer remains deposited with

The Editorial board wishes to apologize to any members of the staff who could not be contacted last night to be informed of the decision.

Members of the Executive Committee can be contacted for information about the paper. The paper's business offices will be open as usual.

New Freshman Reading Course Offered

by Tom Gora

A new reading discussion course called the Freshman Colloquium 181 has been offered this fall, on a limited basis, to the members of the Notre Dame-St. Mary's freshman community. The purpose of the course is to acquaint freshmen with the many opportunities for learning and personal growth that exist at Notre Dame by exploring the aims, methods, scope, and possibilities of college education.

Through readings and discussion, the students will have the opportunity to broaden their understanding of "the importance and excitement of developing the discursive and dialectical abilities needed to be a participating member of a community of intellectual inquiry."

The one semester hour credit course is directed by professors Byrd and Musial through the Senior Seminar of Humanistic Education Program. Groups of 10 to 15 students, meeting once a week for 75 minutes, are led in reading and discussion by carefully selected St. Mary's and Notre Dame seniors enrolled in the seminar. The two senior leaders for each group have selected materials to be used in the course, and have submitted syllabi to Professor Musial for approval.

Professor Musial said that "the seniors have selected important readings and extracurricular activities to make the freshman aware of the various educational opportunities." He also stated that he was quite surprised at the amount of preparation and foresight which had gone into each class plan, and that he often had to remind the seniors that this course was to be a supplement to regular courses, and not a full-scale addition.

Professor Musial believes there is an advantage in having seniors lead the colloquium course; "Since they (the seniors) have participated in and contributed to the university experience, they are well qualified to teach a course like this," he said.

Each of the participating seniors is currently enrolled in the Senior Seminar or Humanistic Education Program, headed by Professors Byrd and Musial, which includes education theory, objectives, implementation, and style. The seniors are also being prepared for the practical application of their seminar course, which has been realized in the Freshman Colloquium course.

The idea for such a class originated in the Senior Seminar last year, developed through the Academic Council and the Administrative channels, and first appeared this fall in what was described as a free, changeable form. Professor Musial explained that since about 80% of all learning is done outside of classes, and that "some of the most important things will be learned outside of class," it is imperative that the freshmen are made aware of the opportunities that exist on the campus. One of the best ways to realize this goal, he said, was to make this course available to all freshmen.

Professor Musial asserted that there are still some openings in this semester's classes, and that anyone wishing to register for the course could do so in the College Seminar Office, first floor of O'Shaughnessy Hall, before five o'clock, Tuesday. The classes are co-educational, and are offered at three different times on Thursdays, at both campuses. The course will be offered again next spring for those wishing to enroll then.

Nasser heart attack victim Vice-president takes over

CAIRO (UPI)— President Gamal Abdel Nasser of Egypt, who unified a divided Arab world and was the greatest figure in its modern history, died Monday of a heart attack at the age of 52. His death raised the specter of chaos in the Middle East.

Nasser was stricken at Cairo Airport while seeing off Sheikh Sabah Al Salim Al Sabah, the ruler of Kuwait and one of the Arab leaders who had attended the summit conference Nasser called to end the civil war in Jordan.

The Egyptian president suddenly complained of feeling dizzy and weak and began perspiring profusely, a medical report signed by five doctors said. He was taken by car to his suburban Cairo home at 3:15 pm which is 11 am EDT.

Vice President Anwar Sadat announced Nasser's death in a brief broadcast over Cairo radio in which he said "no words can console us...the only thing is for the Arab nation to remain patient until the victory for which he lived and died is achieved."

"A number of doctors arrived immediately and found his excellency to be suffering from an acute heart attack which resulted from a blockage of the heart artery," a medical bulletin said.

"All necessary medical aid was administered to his excellency, including the use of equipment to regulate the heart beat. But God's will was stronger and he gave up the ghost at 6:15 pm during the administration of this aid."

Moments after Nasser's death Egypt ordered a state of maximum alert on the Suez Canal cease fire front with Israel in an action taken to meet any emergency, the semi-official Cairo newspaper Al-Ahram said. It did not elaborate, but the implication was that Egypt feared the vacuum created by Nasser's death to launch a military operation against Egypt.

In a detailed description of the last moments of Nasser's life, Al-Ahram quoted Nasser as telling Mohammed Hasenein Heikal, his close friend and Minister of Information that he was very tired after the summit conference. Heikal suggested that Nasser take a vacation but the Egyptian President overruled the idea and said: "I want to get a long sleep."

Nasser's death plunged the Arab world into mourning. People wept here and in Arab capitals throughout the Middle East including Amman, Jordan, where peace keepers were trying to implement the Cairo agreement between the Palestinian guerrillas and King Hussein reached under Nasser's leadership Sunday.

In Cairo, Egyptians were at first dazed and incredulous at the news. Then, they broke into tears and wept without shame.

"No, No!" screamed one driver as he beat his head with both hands. "It is not possible!" Women screamed from balconies. Crowds converged on the palace.

There was weeping too, in Beirut, Lebanon, where portraits of Nasser's smiling face look down from many walls. The tall, bulky and graying Nasser, was the idol of the Arab masses. Shopkeepers in Beirut slammed down their iron gates and closed in mourning when news of the death was received.

Nasser's health had never been good; he was treated earlier this year for diabetes and a circulatory ailment in the Soviet Union. But his death was a complete surprise. He appeared hale and hearty Sunday as he greeted Arab leaders at the Cairo meeting and embraced and kissed King Hussein, a man he had castigated last week for waging war against the Palestinian guerrillas.

Radio Cairo after announcing Nasser's death, suspended regular programs and broadcast readings from the Koran. Nasser, a devout Moslem, obeyed its rules of abstinences from alcohol although he was a heavy smoker.

"The United Arab Republic, the Arab nation and the whole of humanity have lost one of their most precious, most courageous and most sincere men," Vice President Sadat said. "He is President Gamal Abdel Nasser who gave up the ghost at 6:15 pm today Sept. 28, 1970, as he stood in the arena of struggle fighting for the unity of the Arab nation and for the day of its victory."

Sadat's statement said Nasser was "bigger than words and he will remain a longer time than words." It concluded by saying: "Peaceful spirit, return to your God content. Go into my Kingdom, go into my heaven."

U.S. diplomatic considered Nasser a moderate despite his fiery statements against Israel. There were fears that his death might bring radical young Egyptian army officers to power in Cairo and with them a new

Brush fire rages in Cal.

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The largest brush fire in California history raged yesterday through mountain canyons near the Mexican border, driving thousands of persons from their homes as the flames advanced.

More than 50,000 persons were evacuated from small communities in San Diego County in the face of the 200,000 acre Laguna fire, which erupted in the Cleveland National Forest Saturday when a falling tree severed a power line. At least 250 structures were devoured by the flames.

The enormous blaze, burning in a football-shaped pattern 30 miles from tip to tip, eclipsed in size the Matailaja fire of 1930 which burned 125,000 acres in Kern and Los Angeles Counties.

"We've barely kept up with the situation," said Arlen B. Cartwright of the State Division of Forestry. "The problem seems to come from the fact that fire nuts — pyromaniacs — run around and see flames and smoke and this makes them want to set more fires — which they do."

Arson was suspected in two other major blazes in San Diego County, and five arrests were made in Los Angeles County.

More than 5,000 men worked 36-hour shifts on the fire lines and the neighboring county of San Bernardino was stripped of all but five of its fire engines. A 500 acre fire started in that county Monday afternoon.

In Los Angeles County, diminishing winds enabled fire fighters to go on the offensive for the first time against a 30,000 acre blaze in the Malibu area near the coast.

But when a 100-yard long, 75-foot high wall of flames leaped over a ridge above Fernwood Canyon Monday afternoon, 600 homes and one nudist camp were ordered evacuated for the third time in three days. One resident ignored the request and lounged in a hammock.

SLC fails to act on Judicial Code

by Greg Pudhorodsky

The Student Life Council met last night in the Center for Continuing Education in an unsuccessful effort to redesign the Burtchell Proposal for resubmission to the Board of Trustees. The Burtchell proposal, which concerns the establishment of a student Judicial Code, was defeated in the spring session of the Board of Trustees.

The substantial extent of the meeting was spent in discussion of a recommendation by Professor Edward Vasta that "the final disposition of all cases (that come before the Judicial Board) are subject to Presidential review." Vasta continued that the added amendment should provide that if "the President or his delegate disagrees with the final disposition of any case that they should meet with the judicial body last involved in the case." If disagreement persisted that final decision would rest with the President.

As originally written the proposal gave the Dean of Students the right to appeal a student's case after a private trial. Such an appeal could follow whether the student was found guilty or innocent of the offence. Vasta argued that "a Code which invites a student to seek private trial from his adversary would appear to mock justice."

The discussion which followed the proposal was extensive. A few of the members of the Council expressed the view that despite the fact that any judicial decision which lacked the Administration's backing would be weak and defective, that the very structure of the University provided intrinsic support for such decisions.

It was also brought out, the main proponent being Father James Riehle, Dean of Students, that with such wording the added amendment would also burden the office of the Presidency with incidences that should properly be handled on hall and similar levels.

With the adjournment of the meeting drawing near it was mentioned that the proposal be brought to a vote. After a brief caucus Mark Winings, Student Body Vice-President moved that the amendment be tabled to the next agenda. The tabling process carried. It was decided, however, that a committee, consisting of three students, an administrator and a faculty member be formed to consider and present the Vasta proposal and a similar one by Professor James Massey before the next general Council meeting which will be held on October 12.

Muskie in Senate race

AUGUSTA (UPI)— Maine's senatorial contest is regarded as a step toward the White House for Sen. Edmund S. Muskie.

How big a step depends on his margin of victory over his Republican contender, Neil S. Bishop, self styled "dirt farmer" turned high school teacher.

Muskie, THE Democrat's 1968 vice presidential nominee, is expected to defeat Bishop for a third term. There are no "ifs," "ands" or "buts" about that, in the reasoning of the pros. The big question is: by how much?

The size of the vote Muskie gets could bear heavily on his presidential aspirations for 1972. Going into the November election, the 56 year old Muskie is rated a frontrunner for his party's presidential nomination.

A far closer race is the gubernatorial scrap between Democratic Gov. Kenneth M. Curtiss, a progressive liberal, and Republican attorney general James S. Erwin, a moderate conservative.

A key issue is a 5 per cent state income tax Curtiss rammed through the Republican controlled legislature in 1968. The economic slump aggravated resentment against the levy, especially among low income working people vital to Curtiss' re-election.

The Curtis Erwin fight is considered a toss up. Democratic Reps. Oeter N. Kyros and William D. Hathaway are expected to defeat GOP challengers with ease.

Republican strategists with an eye toward 1972 would be delighted to see Bishop deflate Muskie's victory margin. However, Bishop has not received and apparently will not get—White House help, except for good wishes.

The 66 year old Bishop, a former state senator, is coming from a decade of political retirement. He twice was defeated in a bid for the governorship and twice for Congress.

Egypt declares maximum alert

fullscale war against Israel. But first indications were that there would be no immediate power struggle.

President Nixon, in a statement issued from the U.S. aircraft carrier Saratoga in the Mediterranean, called for calm in the Middle East a few hours after Nasser's death was announced.

"The tragic loss requires that all nations and particularly those in the Middle East calm passions, reach for mutual understanding and build lasting peace," Nixon said.

Nasser's body was removed to a Republican Palace and placed in state there prior to a funeral on Thursday.

Al Ahram said Monday's seizure was Nasser's second heart attack. It said the Egyptian President suffered a previous heart attack last September, but it was decided to keep that secret and to say in public that he was merely ill with flu. At the time he spent six weeks in bed and doctors advised him against overexertion.

REFLECTIONS

On Msgr. John J. McGrath

In the current push for student participation in campus government, the vital relationship between the faculty and the administration often takes a background position.

Several SMC faculty members were asked for their evaluations of Msgr. John J. McGrath's two-year administration, and for their opinions as to what qualities the new president of SMC should possess.

Sr. Franzita Kane, of the English department, said that Fr. McGrath tried to tackle the problem of the relationship of Catholic colleges and universities to the religious orders that sponsor them. She said that he had an interest in clarifying the situation in terms of both canon and civil law, and that he prepared a document to be used as a guideline for this clarification.

Sr. Franzita said that Fr. McGrath believed in the principles of the American Association of University Professors (AAUP) including those concerning student rights and academic freedom. He was a leader in the movement to clarify these issues on the campus. "He was optimistic that the Christian community was the way to proceed."

Fr. Raymond Runde, C.S.C., a faculty member in the education department and a close friend of Fr. McGrath's, said that the late president favored a more open curriculum and the all-college major and that he saw a distinction between the kinds of education that should be provided for men and women.

He also believed in a consensus of opinion in order to act, but Fr. Runde added that some problems required a single decision. Fr. Runde said that Fr. McGrath opened the concept of the community working together and cited his efforts to get students on various administrative committees.

He added that the late president had a healthy rapport with Notre Dame and that he and Fr. Hesburgh were able to talk on a "man-to-man" basis.

"He had no concept of caste," Fr. Runde observed. "He would tell a student what he would tell the faculty. He couldn't say anything he didn't believe. . . he couldn't bring himself to pretend."

Fr. Runde said that, if given the time, Fr. McGrath would have made St. Mary's a financially independent institution and would have obtained a high quality faculty. He said that the Monsignor enjoyed being president of the college and that he "liked the girls and was proud of them."

He commented that the new president should be aware of the academic situation and faculty problems and have the courage of his convictions. He added that a member of the clergy would be better equipped to deal with the religious order and with Notre Dame than a lay president.

Dr. Anthony Black, chairman of the SMC faculty assembly and a member of the history department faculty, described Fr. McGrath as having a "genuine sense of Christianity."

"He was an orthodox Catholic theologian, which is not found here or at Notre Dame with great frequency."

Dr. Black said that Fr. came to the college presidency at a moment when "we needed a man who could take an independent position. . . he was a positive factor in our existence."

Dr. Black pointed out that the late president was faced with a situation of transition -- between the religious orders and the colleges and between SMC and ND.

He said that Fr. McGrath had no time to make many specific moves and that his contributions were not as measurable as, for example, the erection of a new building.

Dr. Black added that he did take a stand when necessary because "the buck stops there" -- at the college presidency.

"He was a victim of his times. . . and limited circumstances."

The new president, Dr. Black commented, should be "committed to the idea that there is a place in the 20th century for an undergraduate liberal education in a Catholic framework for women."

Dr. Mark Bambanek, of the SMC chemistry department, observed that the Monsignor established the concept of community at St. Mary's -- "he got the wheels moving."

Dr. Bambanek said that the late president was scholar and that he was "forced to spend time on things he liked less. The administrative and financial end of it was part of his job."

"He liked people and had planned this fall to go back to the classroom."

Dr. Bambanek commented that Fr. McGrath was faced with what the chemistry prof calls "academic inertia," a resistance to change because change is not always identified with progress on the college campus. Fr. McGrath was confronted with outright opposition by some faculty members when he worked to include students on committees, Bambanek said.

"He tried to benefit the whole school. There was bound to be disagreement."

"He was possibly the most human college president I have ever known, with all the connotations of human weaknesses and human strengths."

Campus Opinion

Wake Up, Hanoi

Walter Secada

Frank Borman's return from his round the world jaunt, and his subsequent report to the Senate raises up once more the issue of American prisoners held in North Vietnam. The International Red Cross is not allowed to visit them; there are many women in this country who are in limbo concerning their loved ones; and rumor has it that their treatment makes the tiger cages at Khe Sanh seem like a minimum security prison by comparison. Regardless of what position one takes concerning the American role in Southeast Asia, these are people; and people, regardless of their criminality or whatever must be treated with a certain respect for their humanity.

The Senate unanimously agrees, however, that there is very little which can be done -- unless students do it. The moral imperative for students to take an action wherein they inform Hanoi that any movement in the improving of treatment of prisoners will make the peace effort more credible should be obvious. Washington seems to be convinced that a letter writing campaign from Hanoi's closest allies in this country would have to do some good.

I say let's take them up on it. . . but with a new twist. Students should write Hanoi. But they should do it at the most opportune time possible -- now before the elections.

From here, they should canvass Middle Class America with petitions saying something to the effect that we respectfully request that Hanoi improve the treatment of American prisoners. But, here's the rub.

We do it for peace candidates. The whole effort should be extremely partisan to get doves and other liberal elements into Congress.

How can John and Jane Middle Class America backlash against clean cut students who are circulating "tell it to Hanoi" petitions? At the same time that these are being circulated, we distribute literature and campaign for the candidates who will get at the root of the fact of these prisoners.

We are not only going after the immediate problem -- prisoners of war, at the same time, we are going to the root of the problem -- American involvement in Southeast Asia.

This type of activity educates the voters about student's attitudes, shows that students are willing to make a show of goodwill, and may just counteract Spiro, John and Martha Inc.

Obviously, if Hanoi would show it's bit of goodwill say on November 1 or so by releasing, at large, the names of some prisoners, the result could be best described as trading letters for votes.

From there, John Mitchell and Spiro Agnew can take their incendiary, backlash-provoking, radical rhetoric and cram it into whichever orifice of their bodies they feel it would enter easiest.

The point is to tell it to Hanoi when America is listening.

those people who oppose the Princeton Plan because students "would be used" are engaged in paternalistic dreaming. Let the students learn for themselves.

Those who say the University should not become political should read Machiavelli who says that war is the extension of politics. From there, let them cut off all the University's ROTC programs, war research, etc.

Those who claim such a move is arbitrary should look at our spring calendar where we have a spring break for no reason. At least here is the possibility that the time will be used as a furthering of the education for those who get involved in the election process.

See you at campaign headquarters.

Homesickness

Observer Surrogate Phantom

I suppose that it's reasonably safe to assume that a multitude of you studious beings are plagued by the old ailment of homesickness. This dreaded affliction is not reserved solely to the freshmen. The upperclassmen also suffer from this disease. The only difference is that the upperclassmen like to brag about having this "communicable disease," while the freshmen don't even know what one is. Knowing how you snivelling fools feel, I believe I ought to clue you in on a few of the known cures for your malady.

One of the most common medicines is a simple little thing that requires little or no intelligence, which should thrill the majority of you. Simply rip all of your name tags out of your wardrobe and then sew them in backwards. This bit of idiocy will frustrate you when the realization strikes, that you will have to tear all of them out again and sew them back in properly. This little exercise of appendage agility should take you anywhere from 2 weeks to 6 years, depending on the seriousness of your illness and your stitching ability.

A more advanced cure for the more advanced sufferer is one of the old family favorites. All you do is go out and marry the first girl you see. What could be easier? Since I enjoy this job, I won't tell you what could be easier. Anyway, now that you're married, you have someone to do your home cooking, type up your papers, and sew your nametags back into your clothes after you've torn them out. The only problem with this solution is that some guys read the cure a little too loosely. "...the first girl that you see..." Consequently, some nearsighted fellows have married female armadillos, girl-type ground sloths, and, in one strange case, a female king penguin. Some guys just won't learn to read carefully. Everyone knows that a king penguin can't sew.

For extra-quick relief, you can call the overseas operator and ask her to connect you with the piers in Lisbon, Portugal. When someone answers, you calmly inquire as to how the sardines are running. As soon as he begins to answer, that's your cue to hang up. The only drawback to this antidote is that it will cost you between $35 and $429.67, depending on whether you desire to know the quality of the blue crab meat, in comparison to prior years.

For the super-intelligent homesick victim, there is a real cerebrum-cruncher. All you have to do is to count from 1 to 10 in Lithuanian. That might sound extremely simple, but just see how long it takes you to get a hold of an Elementary Lithuanian book. Once you find the text, it's all downhill. Of course, you run the risk of being nominated as a candidate for the booby hatch, for walking around in public and counting from 1 to 10 in Lithuanian, or of being deported as a pinko.

The last gasp is perhaps the best. Go home. See the fam. Have anything you want to eat. Go over to your HTH's house and mess around. The only stumbling block is that you most probably can't have girls in your room, or hootch on your breath. I guess that's what home is really all about.

1970 Observer Culinary All-American Team

Are you already discouraged about the quality (or lack of such) of the food at the Huddle, the cafeteria, dining halls, etc? Are you on an acid trip — with your own excess stomach acid? Do you get brownies from home — an use them for diamond cutters? Is intravenous feeding looking more attractive to you with each passing day?

C'mon now, it isn't the food as much as the atmosphere on campus which gets you down! You have an all-American city at your disposal, a cultural watershed calculated to stimulate your mind. It's full of goodies — if you know where to look for them — which will make your digestive tract sing out, in four part harmony, no less.

Eating American style is something which every ND man worth his Bromo should try, and our Observer resident gourmets (who eschewed Huddleburgers and sacrificed countless continental breakfasts) set forth recently to choose those places which best portrayed Americana at its hearty best. Here they are, the creme dela creme of River City; bon appetite to you all.

ARCHIE'S BAR & GRILL (13467 Peptic Avenue). They have a big door handle about four feet above the welcome mat, and if you can open the door, they'll serve. Except when the ABC makes its quadrennial trip to Archies; then you'll be carded. No worry, though. Archie has 20/1000 vision and can't tell a 9 from a 6. One more thing — you must speak up loud enough to be served, for Archie's hard of hearing, too.

BLACK AND BLUE AVENUE (100 North Mishmosh Ave.). The ultimate in "status" in town; even the water costs $1.00 a glass and up. Don't even attempt to read the menu (which is written in algebra anyway), just slip the waiter a $50 tip and ask him to bring him "the usual." What the hell, you're there to impress people, not to fill your greedy belly.

PIZZA SHACK 12 (just one mile off campus — the Purdue campus, that is). This is the only eatery endorsed by an Interhall Frisbee team. Once a month, they order a batch of pies "to go", which are about ten times as unbreakable as the toughest plastic known to science. Whatever pies are left over at month's end are used to make 6-ply snow tires to fight the eternal Indiana winter.

DREARY'S BREWERY (318 Slurry Boulevard). You've seen the Big "D" in town, perhaps you've even drunk some (probably when you had no beer and had to settle for Dreary's). When you're 21, you can take a free tour of the plant in town where the stuff is brewed. Watch how they use genuine water (?) from the St. Joe River, marvel as they use neither hops nor alcohol, and gape at the sump pump they hand you when you buy a keg of Big "D". The brew is cheap, too; you've probably heard the old expression "a beer tastes on on a Dreary's budget." Such extravagance!

BURGER BARON (1864 Platinumwood Avenue). This chain of drive-ins was recently awarded the Sinclair Lewis Memorial Trophy for most original substitutes for meat in their burgers. The competition was rough, as seventeen other chains laced their wares with everything from rat tails to mucilage. But the Baron, an old KP man from way back, outdid them all. (Rumor has it that he's slated to be next manager of the North Dining Hall). He seldom gets complaints from customers and uses his credo to explain it: Dead men tell no tales.

Cotton Candy between Consenting Adults

by Pete Peterson

I read with interest the article concerning the circus which appeared in Monday's Observer. I was struck by the force of its basic contention—that the circus is out of place in a world that has death and war and unwanted pregnancies. Not to mention the girl down the hall who uses drugs (Whether this means alcohol, nicotine or caffeine wasn't clear. Maybe it referred to Monosodium Glutamate and other preservatives in her food.) A seven year old could appreciate a circus, but not someone at Notre Dame-Saint Mary's, ie. "childhood's end." Heavy place, childhood's end. The beginning urges of adolescence are hard on us all.

"How many seven year olds want to run away and join the circus?" our reporter asks. I can only guess at the number of people who want to run away and join the circus; I would say nearly everyone who is trying to keep a sense of perspective in a world where a rah-rah little football college in Indiana is seen as "childhood's end" when it is obviously childhood's finest hour, (the happiest years of your life, and don't knock it until you're out on your own trying to feed your kids and put them through four years of blissful isolation). Anyone trying to maintain in a world of doom-wailing prophets who must find cause for deep concern in a place where the deepest thing on campus is the library reflecting pool (and that's nearly always empty.)

But don't worry. The circus is dying. In another fifty years, even if we haven't killed off each other, we certainly will have killed off anything remotely resembling a tiger, an elephant...or a clown. Until then it is my contention that death, war, and unwanted pregnancies are out of place in a world that has circuses.

Letters to Uncle Bass

Dear Sir:

I would like to object to the article which appeared Monday which tabbed John Barkett as a prospective candidate for SBP next March. It is not that I dislike John, or object to the fact that he may be running next spring. I do think it is a bit early to start naming people, since this year's government has barely been given the chance to get off the ground, but that is not my purpose here.

What I must object to is the author's not so veiled attack on Phil McKenna. As a former co-worker, and as a friend, I can offer testimony that Phil McKenna is not a pseudo anything. Many things Phil might have been, but he was not, and is not artificial in any way.

What your correspondent saw as "pseudo-philosophy" was, in fact, a sincere concern about the quality of the Notre Dame experience, the goals of the University and Student Government, and the means which administration and students used to achieve those goals. I did not always agree with Phil, but I never questioned his sincerity or his dedication to principle.

The McKenna administration was different than any of its predecessors—and will probably be different than any that follow—and because it was different, it was misunderstood. Out of that misunderstanding came criticism which began almost as soon as he took office, and continued until the day he stepped aside.

McKenna said in his campaign certain things which all candidates say. The biggest difference was that he lived up to them. He did what he said he was going to do, to the surprise of even some of us who worked with him.

Phil's administration was much like the man himself—quiet and thoughtful. Rossie's term was characterized by a great activity, but Phil's was a more subdued year. Not that many things weren't accomplished—the establishment of black concentrations, the new tighter budgeting system, the increased commitment to minority recruiting, the establishment of a strong community relations program under Student Government, and the first real steps toward co-education—a study to see what it will entail to reach that goal—were all promised in McKenna's platform, and all these promises were delivered upon.

Still, it was a relatively quiet year. It took over 40 pages for McKenna to write his platform, and would take nearly that long to describe all of what was done last year both to the University and to those of us who worked with Phil. For Phil's real contribution was in the way he strove to change attitudes, to make people question where they were going and how they were going to get there. If that sense of questioning never got beyond Morrissey Hall and LaFortune, it is as much the fault of we who worked in Student Government as of McKenna himself.

I do not want to make this a "Why we should apologize to Phil McKenna because he is such a great guy" letter. So, rather than continue in the vein I've been in, I will conclude very simply. Phil McKenna laid the groundwork for much of the change which we shall see at this University in the next five years, and shook a lot of people out of their previous molds. I am proud to be Phil McKenna's friend, and I am sorry that other people in this University did not get to know him as I did. But most of all, I am distressed that this misunderstanding has led to yet another public maligning of Phil McKenna and I hope I have cleared up some of it.

Steve Novak

No one in his right mind would deny McKenna's sincerity. The contention of the "correspondent" wasn't that McKenna didn't want to be a philosopher, or that he didn't think he was a philosopher, but that he thought he was a philosopher and really wasn't. One doesn't become a philosopher by constantly suffering the existential dread. One doesn't become a philosopher by jumping up and down every time one runs across injustice. One doesn't become a philosopher by smoking a lot of cigarettes every time a crisis arises, or by crying. One doesn't become a philosopher by "walking naked at the beginning of the road." Somewhere along the line Mr. McKenna mistook Dionysius for Diognes. He didn't travel any road. He tripped. Right at the beginning.

Nixon visits Pope- Learns of Nasser's Death

Aboard the USS Saratoga (UPI) — President Nixon called for calm in the Middle East last night and cancelled a show of American naval power in the Mediterranean out of respect for Egypt's fallen leader.

President Nasser's death stole some of the purpose from Nixon's European tour. He had planned to ask the presidents of Spain and Yugoslavia to use their friendship with Nasser to try to get peace talks moving again at the United Nations.

Nixon received word of Nasser's heart attack shortly after his arrival by helicopter from Rome where he had a lengthy meeting with Pope Paul VI, unexpectedly visited 26 freed American airliner hostages and received Italy's warmest welcome for any American President since Dwight Eisenhower in 1959.

Pat Nixon remained behind in Rome when her husband left to review a scheduled American show of force by the 6th Fleet in the Mediterranean where Russia is challenging U.S. dominance. But Nasser's death immediately recast the tone of Nixon's five nation visit.

"The tragic loss requires that all nations and particularly those in the Middle East calm passions, reach for mutual understanding and build lasting peace," the President said in a statement issued aboard this carrier in the Mediterranean off the coast of Naples.

Nixon flew here by helicopter after discussing with Pope Paul VI in the Vatican the dangers of a new outbreak of bloodshed in the Mideast. That was before they learned of Nasser's death.

But when he learned of Nasser's death, he cancelled the air and sea maneuvers which had been scheduled for Tuesday to demonstrate American determination not to be squeezed out of the Mediterranean by the challenge of an expanding Soviet flotilla.

The traveling White House announced that a representative of the U.S. government would be sent to Nasser's funeral. The United States does not have diplomatic relations with Egypt, making it unlikely that Nixon would attend.

Nixon's call for calm in the Mideast reflected fears expressed around the world that the loss of Nasser's leadership — a moderating force despite his fiery rhetoric — would bring new eruptions between the Arabs and Israelis.

"The world has lost an outstanding leader who tirelessly and devotedly served the causes of his country and the Arab world," Nixon said. He sent America's sympathies to Nasser's widow and children.

Arriving here from a wild sendoff by an estimated 10,000 cheering Romans, who stamped Nixon when he left his car to shake their hands, Nixon addressed the sailors and officers of the Saratoga.

He told them their presence had been an indispensable factor in settling Jordan's war with Arab guerrillas on her territory.

In Rome, Pope Paul VI told Nixon he feared a "vast and fearful conflagration" unless diplomats brought about an accord between Arabs and Israel and its neighbors.

ROME (UPI) — President Nixon personally greeted freed American hostages yesterday, visited with Pope Paul VI and received a tumultuous acclaim from thousands of Romans as he ended his official visit to Italy.

Nixon interrupted his official schedule to greet 26 surprised hostages, telling them that a combination of U.S. power and restraint led to their liberty.

"I think I feel as happy as you do," said Nixon, beaming as the passengers, who had flown in an hour earlier from Nicosia, Cyprus, crowded around him at Rome International Airport.

Then after a lengthy meeting with the Pope, Nixon was cheered by thousands as he emerged from the Vatican. He stood on top of his limousine at one point when tumultuous crowds pressed through police lines to reach him.

It was the warmest reception given him — or any American President — since Dwight D. Eisenhower visited Rome in 1959.

So many people jammed into the broad Via Della Conciliazione the President was forced to delay his scheduled departure by helicopter for his visit to the U.S. 6th Fleet.

Police said 10,000 persons lining the streets cheered Nixon, in sharp contrast to the indifferent reception earlier when he traveled in a 13 car motorcade to the Vatican. But several leaflets were scattered along the route earlier denouncing Nixon and U.S. foreign policy.

In a communique, the Vatican said Nixon and the Pope talked about "the conflicts which are affecting some regions of the world."

It said "particular reference was made to the situation in the Middle East, which risks disappointing the hopes aroused by the Arab-Israeli ceasefire and by the prospect of possible negotiations."

SMC sex program : response runs high

by Ann Therese Darin

Yesterday afternoon St. Mary's health committee met to formulate a sex education pilot program. Prompted by an overwhelming response favoring the program, they have scheduled a sex education panel discussion as their first project.

"This comprehensive sex education program covering everything from venereal disease to dating is tentatively scheduled to begin October 13th at 6:15 p.m. in Carroll Auditorium," according to Kathy Eglet, program director.

As panelists, she has invited Drs. William Gantonio (ND sociology), Robert Lappin (SMC psychology), and Harold Weiss (SMC theology). Dr. Gordon

Cook, a physician from Memorial Hospital, South Bend, and Mrs. Ann Thatcher, president of South Bend's chapter of Planned Parenthood, will also speak.

After the panel, students will organize into smaller groups with a panelist as moderator to discuss the presentation.

"Since it is a pilot program, attendance will be restricted to SMC student advisers and ND undergraduate resident assistants," stated Miss Eglet.

With the $100 budget which was allocated in the SMC student government fund for this committee, Miss Eglet said that she is planning to have some type of program for the student body if the pilot proves successful.

Broad military aid proposed for Israel

WASHINGTON (UPI) A military aid proposal for Israel already one of the most generous arms transfer measures ever written by Congress was broadened Monday to include ground weapons as well as aircraft.

Senate and House negotiators, in a report on the $19.9 billion military procurement bill, said that measure would cover "ground weapons, such as missiles, tanks, howitzers, armored personnel carriers, ordnance, etc. as well as aircraft."

The provision, written by Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D. Wash., authorizes President Nixon to transfer to Israel aircraft or "equipment appropriate to . . . protect such aircraft" he believes necessary to counter "past, present or future" Soviet military aid to the Arab states.

The conferees said it was their intention that the language "not be narrowly interpreted by the executive branch as imposing a requirement that only ground weapons which are to be deployed by Israel in the physical proximity to airfields may be acquired by Israel under the authority of this section."

The measure thus permits the President to sell Israel any quantity of virtually any non-nuclear weapon on the most favorable possible credit terms without any ceiling costs. Nuclear weapons presumably would be excluded because of the terms of the nonproliferation treaty, which the United States has signed, as well as the terms of the U.S. Atomic Energy Act.

The only limitation imposed in the bill itself is a Sept. 30, 1972, expiration date added by the conferees to provide the "customary periodic spending authorization surveillance by Congress."

The procurement measure has already passed both Houses in differing forms. Routine final action on the compromise could come later this week.

Members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee had objected to the arms transfer provision when the Senate approved it last month, contending it was an end run around the committee's jurisdiction over military aid and arms sales to foreign governments.

Chairman J. William Fulbright, D. Ark., charged that the provision ran counter to the trend in Congress during recent years to place tighter and tighter restrictions on overseas military sales and to play a greater role in overseeing foreign policy.

Fulbright and others who have argued for limits on U.S. intervention overseas contend that arms transfers frequently lead to other forms of U.S. involvement, first with technicians to train foreigners to operate the weapons then with troops to protect the American advisors.

Placement Bureau plans open house

Mr. Richard D. Willemin, Director of the Notre Dame Placement Bureau announced an Open House Wednesday and Thursday of this week from 2 to 5 p.m. for University officers, heads of departments, college deans and members of the Student Life Council. The purpose of the Open House is to increase communication between faculty members to whom students might go for assistance in choosing their careers and the Placement Bureau.

If the Open House planned for this week meets with favorable results, Willemin said that the program will be repeated next week for the benefit of the students.

James Cooney, secretary of the Board of Directors of the Notre Dame Alumni Association, said yesterday that the board was concerned over student drug use on campus.

Alumni meet with Krashna

by Joe Griffin

The Board of Directors of the Notre Dame Alumni Association met over the past weekend and held discussions with members of the university administration and SBP Dave Krashna.

The Alumni Judiciary Board met with Fr. James C. Riehle, Dean of Students; the Student Affairs Committee met with Frs. Thomas E. Blantz and James L. Shilts, Vice-president and Asst. V.P. for Student Affairs; the Religion Committee met with

Fr. William A. Toohey, Director of Campus Ministry; and the Admissions Committee met with Dr. Peter Grande, Director of Admissions. Many of the administrators are new, and James Cooney, secretary of the board said, "The board was enthusiastic of the grasp these people had of their positions and their programs."

On Friday the board met with David Krashna and discussed his ideas. Cooney stated that the board was pleased with the person-to-person nature of Krashna's programs. They also held a question and answer period with Krashna in which the topics ranged from drugs on campus to social life and co-education.

Regarding coeducation, Cooney said that he felt that the board would be in favor of continuing the present program as far as was feasible in the eyes of the administrators of both colleges. He also said he had been instructed to develop a better relationship with the SMC Alumnae Board on matters of mutual concern.

The Executive Committee of the board also selected the receipt of this year's Sorin Award, to be announced at a later date.

Cooney stated that the major concern of the board was the use of drugs on campus. Cooney said that they are concerned because after the student has been given a great deal of personal responsibility, he has become ego-centric and has not developed a concern for his fellow student. The board said that they could not understand the reluctance of the student to leave his own sphere to turn in offenders.

The board also heard Fr. James T. Burtchael, University Provost, speak on continuing education and Fr. Thomas E. Chambers, Director of Student Housing, speak on the function of the residence hall in the total picture of university life, said Cooney.

He also said that since 40% of the 44,000 alumni which the board governs had graduated since 1960 and 60% since 1950, the Executive Committee entertained a motion to include younger men in the board. A decision will be given in January, and Cooney said it had a "good chance" of passing.

The Board of Directors is the governing body of the Alumni Association.

Homecoming events outlined

Student Union Social Commission listings of Homecoming events are as follows.

Friday Oct. 9th
7 p.m. Stepan Center-Pep Rally.

9:30 p.m.-1 a.m. Homecoming dance to be held on the ACC concourse. The dance is entitled "Blackout" and is to resemble an underground cabaret from W.W. II days. The attire for the dance has been dubbed "striped tie" but merely refers to semi-formal. This year the band featured for the dance is THE NEIGHBORHOOD best known for their hit single Big Yellow Taxi. There are 950 dance bids available at $8.00 a piece. The bids will not be awarded by lottery as done in years past, but on first come basis. Dance bids will be on sale Tuesday, Sept.

29th in the Fiesta Lounge, 3rd floor La Fortuna from 6:30 p.m.-9:30 p.m.

All bid holders are eligible to enter the lottery for Army football tickets and motel rooms. Some 400 plus football tickets and another 60 motel rooms have been allotted for student use. Lottery sales for those "lucky winners" will be distributed on Thursday, Oct. 1. All payments for bids, football tickets and motel rooms must be made by check only.

Saturday is the Army-ND game and a concert that evening.

The Homecoming concert will be Johnny Rivers and Sha Na Na at the ACC.

Fr. McGrath

"He gave people more of a realization that this is their college. They had a part in St. Mary's from the day they walked on this campus - including parents. That will never die."

Dr. Bambanek said that the new head of SMC should have "vision as an academician" and should be able to see "where St. Mary's as an academic institution should be moving and changing."

He added administrative ability as a criterion for selection but observed that, although St. Mary's is a business, the product - education - is intangible.

Dr. Richard Hutcheson, chairman of the SMC philosophy department, found one of Fr. McGrath's greatest contributions to be his efforts to improve the faculty and faculty salaries.

Dr. Hutcheson commented that SMC needs a president soon "in these critical times." He said that the new president should be a "legitimate scholar in a legitimate academic field with a variety of academic experiences and an acquaintance with a variety of academic institutions."

He added "presence and poise" to the list of qualifications to aid the new president in dealing with Notre Dame, alumni and other outside organizations.

Dr. Bruno Schlesinger, humanistic studies chairman and a member of the presidential search committee, feels that Fr. McGrath had little time in which to make many changes at St. Mary's. "His second year was overshadowed by what we know now to be grave illness."

In Dr. Schlesinger's opinion, Fr. McGrath was "less at home in academic matters" and his training as a lawyer was helpful to him in his efforts to improve the overall structure of the college in the form of community government.

"He followed the general course of engaging many avenues of cooperation (with Notre Dame) while retaining overall independence."

Dr. Schlesinger said that the new president should be a man of "proven administrative ability... clearly a man of strong academic background... with an understanding of students, faculty and the world of books." He added the desirability of a charismatic quality that would make the new college head "more than a functionary, more than an official."

"It's a lot to be asked."

He observed that Fr. McGrath "restored confidence in the college at a difficult period" and "realized that students, faculty and administration should be gathered" to govern the college together.

Injury ends Bill Etter's career

SOUTH BEND Ind. (UPI) Bill Etter, Notre Dame's No. 2 quarterback has resigned from the football team and given up his football career on the advice of team physicians, coach Ara Parseghian said Monday.

Etter, a junior from Spokane, Wash., was hospitalized two weeks ago with severe head aches. Doctors indicated a contact sport could develop a head injury from the condition Etter has had for some time, a Notre Dame spokesman said.

"Bill was given extensive tests in the past two weeks and the results indicate that he should give up football or any other contact sport," Parseghian said. "The doctors anticipate no problems but Bill will drop out of school until January and stay with his brother in Arizona."

Etter, although he played in only one varsity season, is the owner of one impressive Notre Dame record. His 10.7 yard per carry last season is the high mark in Irish annals.

The junior signal caller was also a standout performer at Lewis and Clark High School with present Notre Dame teammate Bob Minnix. Both made several high school All-American units.

Besides playing football Etter also won campus-wide fame for his skill in the boxing ring. Two years ago he was campus champ in the 175lbs. division of Notre Dame's Bengal Bouts. Last winter he captured top honors in the heavyweight class.

This setback poses a big problem for Parseghian. Etter was the only experienced quarterback on the squad besides Joe Theisman.

Steenberge, from Erie, Pennsylvania, has played in both Irish victories this season. He does not have Etter's running ability but he is a better passer.

Etter will be replaced at the No. 2 signal calling slot by sophomore Pat Steenberge.

Revenge

Purdue kicks off in the misty rain and the Irish line opens hole after hole, but Theisman slips at the Purdue four and ND settles for a field goal.

Creaney hauls in a 55-yard bomb; The Irish are knocking at the door; A pass to Barz, two Gulyas runs, and Denny Allan goes in for the score.

Theismann and Gatewood begin to click; They combine for a pair of scores; After 30 minutes of play it's up on the board: Purdue 0, Irish 24.

The third quarter brings no reprieve to the battered Purdue eleven; Theismann connects to Gatewood again and the Irish add another seven.

Hempel boots a field goal; Dewan runs for a score; and now Notre Dame has 41 but the fans clamor for more.

Larry Parker ends it all displaying his breakaway speed; The goal is 63 yards away but Larry runs for a 48-0 lead.

Yes, Ara promised us a win, The Boilermakers would be beat. Three years of frustration are forgotten, Ah, revenge is sweet.

Notre Dame's 48-0 thrashing of Purdue Saturday was the most one-sided victory in the history of the series.

The Irish appear to be moving into high gear and, if the South River Roadrunner stays healthy, will pile up a bundle of points this season.

Allan, Gulyas, Barz, Minnix, and Parker rambled through gaping holes opened by the now solid offensive line.

When the ground game falters, the-Heisman, I mean Theismann, to Gatewood combination can open up the defense.

Gatewood put on a tremendous show Saturday, grabbing 12 passes good for three touchdowns. His last touchdown, where he shook off three tacklers to score, symbolized the game. Gatewood trotted to the bench all smiles while the Purdue defenders, including the renowned Veno Paraskvas, lay in the mud.

Theismann was equally impressive, completing 16 of 24 passes for 276 yards.

Other than the weather, I was disappointed by only one thing this weekend — the Golden Girl has a pot belly.

It would appear that Stepan Center has most satisfactorily replaced the fieldhouse as the site for football rallies. Although lacking in tradition, Stepan was also lacking the choking dust of the fieldhouse. Most importantly, none of the Notre Dame spirit was lost in the move to Stepan. It was a great rally.

Since the Irish seem bent on revenging themselves on their traditional rivals it should be noted that Notre Dame has not won a game in East Lansing since 1949 when they beat the Spartans 34-21 enroute to a 10-0 record and the national championship.

The last time the Irish beat Purdue, they won the national title. If the Irish can win Saturday they will have duplicated a feat last accomplished by a national championship team. Are those omens, or just a quirk of statistics?

In the play-for-pay world of sports, the Bears won their second in a row (will wonders never cease?) over the Eagles in one of the worst pro games I've seen in a long time.

The Pirates will be playing the Big Red Machine next weekend in the National League playoffs while the Orioles and Twins square off in the junior circuit. I'll take Baltimore in the American League but rather than risk the wrath of sports editor Terry "Bucco" Shields, I'll bypass a selection in the National League.

Ruggers win over Purdue

The Notre Dame Rugby Club opened their 1970 fall season Saturday morning behind Stepan Center with a victory over Purdue 9-5. The Irish ruggers were in command the entire game which turned into a defense struggle due to the pouring rain.

Herby Giorgio scored a try in the first half to give the Irish the lead. In the second half senior Charley Blum alertly fell on the ball in the end zone for three more points. Mark "Savage" Rubinelli also scored a try in the second half to finish the scoring.

Although the Irish ruggers were not especially sharp on Saturday, they displayed the potential for an undefeated season—a goal which seems very reasonable considering that the Irish have 12 returning starters.

The Notre Dame "B" team crushed the Boilermaker "B" squad 22-0. Tim Standring, Joe DeLois, Doug Smege, Pete Frantz, John Greving, and Phil Kalandra all contributed to the Irish scoring in the preliminary game.

The Rugby club (both A and B squads) travels to East Lansing this Saturday to play Michigan State.

Boilers nip Irish booters

Although the Purdue football squad was trounced Saturday afternoon by the Fighting Irish, the Boilermaker soccer team had better results Saturday morning, topping the Notre Dame booters 4-3 in a game played in a driving rain behind Stepan Center.

The Boilermakers broke a 2-2 halftime deadlock by tallying single goals in the third and fourth quarters to hand the Irish their first setback of the season. The Notre Dame soccer club now has a 1-1-1 record.

The Irish jumped into an early lead Saturday as Jim Schweitzer drove a rebound of a Chris Hanlon shot past the Purdue goalkeeper midway through the first quarter. The Boilermakers fought back to tie the score at 1-1 however before the quarter ended.

The Hanlon-Schweitzer combination put the Irish back on top in the second quarter as they reversed roles, Hanlon knocking in a shot by Schweitzer that had caromed off the Purdue net-minder. Once again, Purdue rallied and tied the score 2-2 after 40 minutes of play.

The Boilermakers moved out to a 4-2 advantage in the second half and although Tom Shriver netted a short shot to bring the Irish to within a goal, 4-3, in the final quarter, Notre Dame was unable to come up with the equalizer.

The Irish booters are in action again this weekend, traveling to Milwaukee Saturday to oppose Marquette.

Closed circuit TV in Convo

If you haven't been lucky enough to get a ticket for the Michigan State game perhaps the Athletic and Convocation Center may hold an answer to your problems. This game will be carried on a closed circuit telecast back to Notre Dame. The Convo will house this telecast in the Arena section of the building this Saturday afternoon at 2:30 p.m.

Prices for this special telecast are $4 and $2. However students will be admitted for half price upon presentation of an ID card. The lower arena seats cost $4 and upper arena sells for $2 (i.e. $2 and $1 for students).
