Agnew attacks Demo candidates

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. (UPI) — Vice President Spiro T. Agnew emerged from a two hour meeting with President Nixon yesterday and accused Democrats of using "the big lie" to raise unwarranted fears that the country is headed toward "a recession, depression or worse."

"The Democrats are using the kind of fear or scare tactics that they continuously accuse me of using," Agnew told an outdoor news conference at the Western White House.

Agnew said Democratic candidates for the Senate in California, Nevada and Utah have predicted the administration will close or reduce activity at key military bases throwing great numbers of people out of work. "I want to brand those statements...false and maliciously false," Agnew said.

At the same time, President Nixon emphasized his concern about law and order with a special directive to the Justice Department to assist in investigating all attacks on police officers.

"We have seen shooting of officers as they sat in their patrol cars. We have seen bombs planted and booby traps set for investigating officers. We have seen unarmed police officers shot at their desks in police stations," Nixon said in a statement.

He said the Justice Department's investigative resources should have a "detering effect" on such activity.

The Vice President's statements about campaign smears echoed comments made by Nixon following a campaign appearance Saturday night in Salt Lake City.

"Those who engage in this type of tactic owe an apology to the workers, their families and their opponents," Nixon told newsmen before flying back to the Western White House.

Agnew cited in particular Democrat John V. Tunney who is seeking the Senate seat of Republican George Murphy.

The President and Vice President discussed their personal campaign swings in Nixon's San Clemente office after attending services together at La Jolla Presbyterian church.

Agnew said both her and the President were impressed in their travels by the vitality of the nation, adding, "this certainly is not a sick country." He has covered 32 states and approximately 32,000 miles in his campaign. Nixon has covered 22 states and about 15,000 miles.

"This is nothing more than the big lie," Agnew said of Democratic charges that the unemployment is rising and inflation spiraling.

He said all of the recognized indicators of economic activity point "in the opposite direction."

The "real GNP," the measure of the value of goods and services excluding the effect of inflation "is steadily improving," he said.

Housing starts are up sharply,

President Nixon and Vice President Agnew and their wives leave services at the La Jolla Presbyterian Church yesterday (Photo by UPI)

the prime interest rate has declined and the rate of inflation—when figured in three month segments—has declined during the first three quarters of this year, he claimed.

Agnew did not mention that although real GNP has improved from last winter and spring when it declined, the most recent figures show a rate of growth less than half of that which economists generally believe is necessary to avoid increases in unemployment.

In addition to Tunney, whom he cited by name, Agnew said Democrats who were using fear tactics included Democratic Senate candidates in Nevada and Utah—Sens. Howard Cannon and Frank Moss, and the Democratic candidate for Governor of Kansas.

Ticket plan OK'd

By Floyd Kezele

Approval for the plan to donate Notre Dame student football tickets for the Georgia Tech game to children from South Bend was given recently by Father Edmund P. Joyce following some uncertainty as to whether the plan would be approved.

Jack Candon and Eric Andrus, organizers of the proposal, said that there had been some doubt that the plan would be approved because of a clause in the ticket policy that states that any transfer or sale of the ticket would result in confiscation.

Father Joyce, who had been out of town for the greater part of last week, was unavailable when the plan's organizers sought him, and thus the future of the event remained uncertain.

However, Candon said, "Both Father Joyce and ticket manager Donald Bouffard have been extremely cooperative with us on this project, and once we were able to contact Father Joyce he gave us his approval."

Under current plans Notre Dame students would turn in their football tickets for the Georgia Tech game on November 14 to the ticket office at the A.C.C. during the preceeding week. Candon stressed that the student's tickets would not leave the office but that their numbers would only be transferred to special tickets for the children of South Bend, with students being able to pick up their tickets from the A.C.C. the following Tuesday.

Once the tickets are collected, letters will be sent out to the children's parents explaining the project and monitors would be assigned for each ten children attending the game. Candon said that other details such as the exact procedure for turning in one's ticket would be made available at a later date after further talks with Mr. Bouffard.

Letters explaining the project will be mailed today to participating children's parents with instructions to reply by Friday. The replies will determine the exact number of tickets needed and prevent any extra ticket donations. Monitors will be assigned for every ten children attending the game. Candon said that other details such as the exact procedure for turning in one's ticket would be made available at a later date after further talks with Mr. Bouffard.

NCATE to rate ND-SMC

By Ann Therese Darin

One week from today the National Council for Accreditation of Teacher Education will begin a comprehensive evaluation of St. Mary's and Notre Dame.

This evaluation, according to Dr. Eugene A. Campanale, newly appointed chairman of St. Mary's education department, may result in a ten-year unqualified teaching accreditation for Notre Dame. St. Mary's may also profit from the critique of the 10-man NCATE team by receiving a ten-year unqualified accreditation for its secondary education department.

"Notre Dame is not accredited now," revealed Dr. Campanale. "Although over 200 Notre Dame students come to take classes at St. Mary's in the education department which is accredited, they take the rest of their requirements for a degree at Notre Dame which has not yet been accredited," he said.

SMC merited initial NCATE accreditation in 1958. At this time, the elementary education program received an "unqualified recommendation" for 10 years. The secondary education department, however, only received a three-year accreditation pending further working relationship of the coexchange program.

Since the NCATE team last evaluated the educational system here, Dr. Campanale and his department have worked to rectify the problems. For example, at the time of the last evaluation, there was no record kept of the Notre Dame students majoring in education at St. Mary's. Today, not only are records maintained in the SMC office of education, but Dr. Campanale also made sure that both Notre Dame and St. Mary's students receive equal treatment in the department by having the same requirements.

Another problem present when the team last evaluated the department was the counseling program for education majors. In the past, the Notre Dame student had no advisor from the St. Mary's education department. "Now we have 5 advisors to counsel 650 plus students," disclosed Dr. Campanale. "I feel that this is one of our principal jobs."

When the NCATE educators come in two weeks, they will be presented with a 438 page report of education on this campus. The result of a summer vacation of work by Dr. Campanale and his staff, the report is an in-depth analysis of the Institute of Education at St. Mary's and

Volunteers paint fieldhouse to be ready for showings

Last Saturday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. combined volunteers from Notre Dame and St. Mary's met to paint the old fieldhouse, now the Cultural Arts Center. They replied to a plea publicized in The Observer and through various handbills posted around the campus: The leaders of the groups expressed disappointment at the attendance, 20 people, but said they expected it.

Those present were then organized into two groups by Richard Fitzgerald, the leader of the group. Fitzgerald is a member of the Arts Council, which has been the driving force behind this endeavor. Volunteers came mainly from this source and the Art Department, although a few of those present were not affiliated with either of these two organizations.

The first group took a former ticket office and transformed it into a Dramatic Arts Center. This center will be primarily dedicated to poetry readings, which will take place every other Sunday and small dramatic presentations. Already there are two on-campus drama groups that are willing to perform.

The second group, made up mainly of Art Dept. members, continued its chore of converting a locker room and showers into an Art Gallery. They have been working on this gallery, called Isis, after the Egyptian god of light and darkness, for some time now in expectation of their first room show.

This is to take place on Friday, November 6 and run for roughly two weeks. The three people whose works will be exhibited are John Kelly, Dan Molitor and Paul Jalbert, all of whom are University Art Students. The show will be composed of work done by the trio while traveling through Europe.

The emphasis, in this and future shows will be on the student's work. Most of the future shows will be open to products of any member of the student body.

The administration projects that 1.7 million dollars will be needed to renovate the fieldhouse completely. The Arts Council is asking for $6,800 for their activities this year. They are also asking the support of the student body.

The two endeavors previously mentioned are only a start towards what there people believe the Fieldhouse can be.

The solution of the Arts Council to an old eye-sore of a building which no one wants is a students center, which would primarily be dedicated to the arts but which could branch out to envelope all student activities under one roof. According to Fitzgerald, "The future of the fieldhouse as a cultural Art Center, its continued existence or demise, is in the hands of the student body."

The trouble with beating Navy is...

by Terry Shields
Observer Sports Editor

Last Thursday, Notre Dame's right guard Gary Kos explained the problem that a nationally ranked team like Notre Dame faces when it plays a once victorious team like the Naval Academy. "I really hate to play in one of these games. There is nothing you can do to impress people. If you win big then they say you're piling on the score and if it's close then some may say that we don't have that much."

On Saturday Kos and his teammates took the first approach to the problem and the undefeated Irish pummeled the Navy by the convincing score of 56-7. It was a typical ND rout. The statistics were totally dominated by the Domers and the second team once again saw as much action as the first.

Irish Score First

The contest was enjoyable for a neutral football for only one quarter then only Irish eyes could be found smiling. The Irish took the opening kickoff and marched relentlessly for 80 yards and a touchdown. Joe Theismann, who put on another brilliant display of how to play quarterback, threw only one pass in this drive and that was a 17 yard beauty to Tom Gatewood, the nation's leading receiver going into the contest.

Darryll Dewan, substituting for a shaken-up Ed Gulyas, carried six times in the drive for over 30 yards including a three yard burst for the touchdown.

Navy surprisingly came right back and caught the vaunted Notre Dame defense napping. Middle qb Ade Dillon fired two passes to end Carl Schwelm for a total of 57 yards and this set up the five yard keeper play by which the Midshipmen scored.

Gatewood Nears Record

The score remained knotted at seven for the remainder of the period and then the Irish broke loose for their most productive stanza of the season. Taking advantage of good field position ND marched over the Navy goal line four times. Bill Barz, who didn't have a particularly good day, managed two dirt dives and Theismann found the "Swinging Gate" (Gatewood) with two six-point passes. The second brings the junior receiver close to Jim Seymour for most TD passes caught in a career (16), Gatewood has 15.

The first team sat out the final three minutes of the half and returned to action for one final drive in the third quarter. Denny Allan completed the 75 yard drive with a sweep from three yards away with 12 minutes remaining in the quarter.

Pat Steenberge led the hungry shocktroops in quite a few drives but most of these drives faded without any results on the scoreboard. John "Cisco" Cieszkowski did dent the score sheet and probably a few Navy Helmets on a 30 yard sprint without any zigs or zags, just straight through the Navy team.

Bob Minnix scampered his right end from five yards away to close the scoring for ND late in the game.

Hempel 8 for 8

Scott Hempel kept kicking away at the record books as he booted 8 successful placements.

After the game both coaches had praise for the man that usually wins praise, Joe Theismann.

The Roadrunner had 1700 folks down from his home town of South River, N.J. to cheer him on and he obliged by completing ten of 13 passes for 161 yards plus ground gains of 49 yards in only six attempts. Joe has completed 80 of 126 passes for a phenomenal 63.5%.

Rick Forzano, Navy coach, said that if "there was any team better than Notre Dame he would have to see them." He also said that any great team "has to have that one super player that makes it go. It's obvious that on this awesome Notre Dame team Theismann is the man that does this.

Irish coach Parseghian agreed wholeheartedly as he praised Theismann and Gatewood again as if it were a recording of previous post-game conferences. Ara would not commit himself on questions concerning bowl activity for his third ranked ball club. "We still have four important games left. If we get through those alright then we'll start thinking bowl."

Defense Outstanding

The defense once again played an outstanding game, that first drive by Navy notwithstanding. In particular, linebackers Rich Thomann, Jim Wright, and Tim Kelly along with defensive back Ralph Stepaniak were all very sharp for this game.

Next on the menu, . . . er, ah schedule for Parseghian's crew is the University of Pittsburgh. The Panthers, who were ranked first in the East, were dropped back to earth by Syracuse, 43-13. This means that the Irish will have to win that much bigger to impress the pollsters. Bets from this desk say they should do that with no problem.

Brown ignites frosh rally

by Vic Dorr
Observer Sportswriter

The Notre Dame Freshman Team received a good scare on Halloween, but in the end it was the spectre of a fourth quarter jinx which returned to haunt coach Rex Dockery and his Baby Volunteers.

For the second week in a row, the Irish frosh played a rather inept first half. Notre Dame took the opening kickoff, and on the second play from scrimmage quarterback Cliff Brown fumbled and Tennessee recovered on the ND 17. Under the direction of Chip Howard, the Vols quickly drove to the two, where halfback Haskel Stanback slashed over for the score. Stanback, who was the leading rusher of the afternoon with 133 yards in 25 tries, scored two of the three Tennessee touchdowns. His second tally of the afternoon came with 17 seconds remaining in the first period. Facing a fourth and one situation from the Irish 28, Howard gave the ball to Stanback and the 6-2 speedster bolted through a hole in the left side of the Irish line and raced unmolested for the score. David Harper kicked the point after, and Tennessee led 14-0.

Following this tally, the Notre Dame frosh mounted a drive which penetrated Volunteer territory, but could not sustain their momentum. Brian Doherty, who is averaging 32 yards a kick as the Irish punter, got off a high kick which was downed by the Vols on their own 19. Howard, who performed artfully during the first half, drove his team steadily downfield. However, facing third and short yardage from the Notre Dame 43, Howard was dropped for an 11 yard loss, and the Irish regained possession. The struggling ND offense could move the ball but three yards, and again punted to the Vols. This time, the quickstepping Howard was not to be caught. His offense knifed deep into Irish territory, and after Stanback had advanced the ball to the five, Howard sprinted around right end and scored himself. Notre Dame's Tom Ross blocked the extra point attempt, and Tennessee left the field at half time in possession of a 20-0 lead.

The Volunteers opened the third period by rolling to the Irish six, but with fourth and two from there, Howard was tackled short of the first down. Following this defensive stand, momentum clearly shifted to Notre Dame. Aided by a call of pass interference at midfield, the ND offense made its first deep penetration of Tennessee territory. Brown found split end Algery Frazier at the Tennessee 15, and four plays later halfback Mark Dunn split the Vol defense with a three yard scoring run. Brown, who has yet to miss an extra point, converted to make the score 20-7. Although the fourth period was less than a minute old at this point, Tennessee still appeared to have a comfortable lead. But moments later, when the Irish defense forced the Vols to punt from midfield, the jinx which had seen Tennessee drop two previous decisions to late-game rallies became a reality.

Starting from his own seven, Brown hit Gary Diminick with successive passes, the second of which moved the ball to the 46. Again aided by an interference penalty, Notre Dame advanced to the Vol 11. John Dwyer struggled to the six, and Diminick threaded his way into the end zone on the next play. Brown's kick made it 20-14. Tennessee was unable to generate any type of offense, and with less than five minutes remaining, again punted to the Irish. Brown, who seems most effective in comeback situations, set the ND attack in motion. Faced with fourth down from his own 40, the Notre Dame quarterback chose to go to Algery Frazier for the crucial yardage. Frazier, who was the leading receiver of the game with six catches for 92 yards, took Brown's pass and was downed at the Tennessee 28. The play covered 32 yards. Brown ran the keeper to the 20, and with slightly more than two minutes remaining, Dunn dove for first down yardage at the 17. On the following play, Dunn sprinted into the end zone and broke for the left flag. Brown's pass was perfect, and Dunn's reception tied the score at 20-20. The kick was good, and with 2:07 remaining, Notre Dame led 21-20. The Vols mounted a desperation drive, but a sparkling defensive effort by cornerback Mike Townsend, and an interception by guard Gary Potempa on the last play of the game wrapped up the win for the Irish frosh.

For Tennessee, it was an unbelievable and disheartening way to lose. But for Notre Dame, this game was a tonic, and will give them new life when they face the Michigan yearlings next Saturday in Ann Arbor.

Metzger answers charges

By Steve Kane

Student Union Academic Commissioner Jim Metzger, under criticism lately for purportedly presenting a biased speakers program, responded to his attackers recently by saying that they have over-emphasized the issues involved.

Metzger remarked that, "It doesn't upset me that the speakers have been one-sided as much as it does that they have received such over-emphasized attention."

He further explained his comment in reference to Miss Atkinson's appearance. "The purpose was to expose the students to the philosophies behind the Women's Liberation Movement," Metzger said. However, with her unexpectedly bitter message accompanied by the heckling of the audience, the whole affair proved counterproductive.

"Furthermore, George Mc-Govern, Congressman John Brademas, and Draft Resister David Hawk were not scheduled or sought, but rather became available and were welcomed by the commission."

According to Metzger the commission's function is to sponsor people who have something to offer the Notre Dame Community, whether it be cultural, political, or intellectual. He pointed out that the most desirable policy is to present a variety of subjects and people, covering different backgrounds, beliefs and persuasions.

As Metzger described it, there are inherent obstacles to cope with in preparing a calendar of lectures, including a speaker's cancellation at the last minute or his raising of a previously accepted fee. With problems such as these, arranging a perfectly balanced and organized calendar is very difficult.

After communism

chism, communism and fascism have shown little success. Movements identified with the New Left lack organization and ideology, he said.

The four industrial centers will cluster on common cultures. These centers would reach a point where technological development would be the same in all areas, hence there would be little existing rivalry.

Problems faced in international relations would be those of boundaries and trade. The ideology problem would be nonexistent without a successor to Communism. The boundary problem would be slight because of the lessons of the past. Dr. Niemeyer stated that the successes of Japan and Italy have shown that political domination of a country's needed natural resources is not necessary. Trade problems in relations would be diverted with countries operating planned economies, keeping economic agitation away from the external policies of a country.

International relations would be dependent on qualitative development. Dr. Niemeyer related the French student rebellion of 1968 as disrupting the internal affairs of the country because of demands for the nation's well-being.

Parents' Weekend not for sophs only

Speaking on the upcoming Parents Weekend, Gary Caruso, the Executive Coordinator for the Sophomore Class, told the Observer yesterday that he has a surplus of 100 tickets and stressed the fact that the weekend is for parents of all students, not just for Sophomore parents.

Caruso, stating that the Sophomores must sell the tickets or take a loss, explained that anyone who knows that their parents are coming for the game and would like to come to the dinner, please telephone at 7935 or contact him at 309 Lyons.

The Sophomore class worked with the Social Commission last year, to obtain Sergio Mendez and Brazil '66 which should attract both younger and older generations. The show is at 8:30 p.m. in the Athletic Convocation Center.

Caruso emphasized the fact that he has 600 reserved tickets waiting for parents that are coming to the weekend and he stated that the tickets would be available before and after the meal.

Buckley invited

William F. Buckley, editor of National Review magazine and noted national spokesman for conservatism, has been invited to speak at Notre Dame next April. Chris Wolfe, secretary of the Orestes-Brownson Society, said the society had contacted Buckley through National Review, but definite plans or commitments could not be made at this time. According to Wolfe it won't be until late November or December before Mr. Buckley will be able to promise an appearance.
