Funds denial called discrimination SBP supports charges

by Fred Schaefer

Last night Dave Krashna, Student Body President, made charges of "blatant discrimination" in the scholarship denial case of senior Jim Werner.

Werner was recipient of a scholarship funded by Mr. Carl Koch. Last spring, he wrote a letter to his donor informing him of his progress at Notre Dame. In his remarks he included a list of his activities, among which was the Students Against Racism.

Approximately three weeks later, the letter was returned to him by Koch, with the comment "Nuts! You are probably a bum!" concerning his participation in the SAR. He also remarked that, "You are a radical or you would put your zip code on. If I were you, I would not accept any more money from the Koch fund."

When contacted last night, Mr. Koch admitted that he had written the comments. He did say, however, that "I have at no time been in contact with the University concerning the suitability of James Werner as a recipient for my fund." He went on to say that the University, not he, administers the fund.

Werner went to Brother Kieran Ryan, then director of Financial Aid and Scholarships, and was assured that academics is the only criterion in the removal of a scholarship.

During the summer, he received a letter dated July 3 from Ryan stating that his scholarship was being revoked because of his failure to maintain a 3.00, one of the stipulations of the scholarship. Werner has a cumulative average of 2.548.

Werner alleges that another student on the Koch scholarship has an average similar to his, but still holds the grant.

Ryan also wrote, "We also must recognize the unfavorable reaction you have given to the donor of this award who is keenly concerned with the recipient's achievements."

However, in November, Father James T. Burchaell, University provost, wrote a letter to Werner's parents, stating, "Mr.

Dave Krashna and Jim Werner at last night's press conference

Carl Koch at no time communicated with the University specifically regarding James, or requesting that scholarships be unavailable to students involved in certain social or political activities. Thus, the decision to relieve him of the scholarship in no way was initiated by the donor."

On July 31, Ryan wrote another letter to Werner further explaining the action. He noted that in the Spring of both 1969 and 1970 a letter of warning was sent due to his failure to maintain a 3.00. In 1969 Werner had sent a letter to the Office of Financial Aid and outlined problems he was facing and how he intended to resolve them.

In 1970, Werner did not supply an explanation after he had received the warning letter. Ryan then wrote "We do not have any information to justify the poor grade point average which you had for the Fall 1969 semester...In your case, over and above the academic requirements, the scholarship is one which is closely observed by the donor, and I do not have to

Article challenges Sheedy refutation

An agreement was reached between Notre Dame and Saint Mary's trustees concerning an enrollment ratio of 3:1 according to remarks made by Rev. Neil G. McCluskey in an unpublished interview conducted before Christmas.

This is in direct contradiction to the statement made by Rev. Charles Sheedy in Thursday's Observer where he denied such an agreement was ever made.

"Part of the agreement last year in Key Biscayne and part of what I pushed for for many years was that in return for not going co-educational on its own... that is, the girls who would come to Notre Dame would be through St. Mary's... St. Mary's would agree to expand to a ratio of three to one..." McCluskey said.

Rev. McCluskey, who is Dean Director for the Institute for Studies in Education at Notre Dame and a St. Mary's trustee, also said that this expansion of enrollment was "only a first step."

Rev. Sheedy's remarks as reported in Thursday's Observer was that there is no understanding between Notre Dame and St. Mary's such that St. Mary's will increase enrollment to a 1:3 ratio with Notre Dame in return for Notre Dame not going co-ed on its own.

Observer reporter Dave Fromm interviewed Rev. McCluskey along with Rev. Sheedy, who is Chairman of the Co-Education Coordinating committee and Mr. Phillip Faccenda, Vice-President and General Counsel for a story on coeducation that was to appear in the Wednesday December 9th edition of the Observer. Due to space limitations the story was held out and with the issuance of the Park-Mayhew report was believed to be outdated. The story, which was filed for back-

Annexation expected to fail

by Cliff Wintrode

Mayor Lloyd Allen's proposal to annex the properties of the University of Notre Dame, St. Mary's College, and Holy Cross Junior College will almost certainly be defeated tonight at the South Bend Common Council meeting.

University forces need only to capture one of the three straddler's votes to deny Allen's bid for annexation.

The latest count shows that there are four Council members definitely against annexation, two definitely for annexation, and three "leaners and fencestraddlers." Five votes are needed for passage of the measure.

One of the three "leaners" has said that he "always leans against annexation." Two weeks ago he voted in the majority against a proposal to annex a tract in Clay township.

A university presentation before an informal meeting of some of the Council members, yesterday afternoon, which included two of the undecideds, was expected to be the final offensive for either side.

The battle lines between the universities and the city have been clearly drawn. Allen claims that the annexation of Notre Dame is "essential to the future growth of the city." The university says annexation would benefit no one.

Allen claims that the tax rebates the city would receive for the increased population will make annexation beneficial to the city.

The university contends that costs for university services will make annexation a burden to the city. Annexation will also harm the smooth relationship that now exists between the town and the university say Notre Dame officials.

The educational institutions fear that annexation will bring possible pressures from city residents to tax them for services provided and threaten their tax-exempt status.

Father Theodore M. Hesburgh has said that taxation of private educational institutions will mean the doom of such institutions.

Notre Dame has threatened court proceedings if the Common Council decides favorably on annexation.

The Council will meet on the fourth floor of the City-County Building tonight at eight o'clock. 225 spectators will be allowed inside the Council chambers and 75 spectators will be allowed in the lobby inside. The limit has been set to protect the crowd in the case of a fire or other emergency.

Poll to be taken at SMC

by Jeanne Sweeney
SMC News Editor

The St. Mary's members of the Coeducation Co-ordinating committee, headed by Miss Elizabeth Noel of the English department, have set up a task force to collect and compare judgements at SMC on the coeducation report recently filed by Rosemary Park and Lewis Mayhew.

Miss Noel, who sees her function on the task force as essentially one of tabulation, has contacted members from each area of the community for their reactions, recommendations, and criticisms of the Park-Mayhew report.

She explained that she had sent letters to such people as administration members, the faculty, department chairmen, the student government president and the chairman of the Faculty Assembly. Miss Noel has also asked Mother M. Olivette Whalen, Chairman of the College Board of Trustees, for any comments on the report with reference to those aspects which concern the Sisters of the Holy Cross.

Getting student opinion on the report was Miss Noel's only problem because unlike the faculty, who are reached through their assembly, departments and individually, she could only contact Ann Marie Tracey, Student Body President, for an evaluation of student opinion.

The chairman of the task force said there were no other specific areas besides student government which she knew to contact in order to get more students' opinions. Miss Noel emphasized that everybody has a chance to express his opinion and she has tried to reach them in every way she could

Miss Tracey, said that she has a group of students working with Sister M. Immaculata, the Dean of Students, who will meet with the Student Affairs committee to discuss the report and its implications for the students.

Miss Tracey and Carol Henninger, the Academic Affairs commissioner, are separately formulating their own comments. After both groups conclude their discussions, an open forum of all the students may possibly be held, Miss Tracey said.

All statements from the area must be returned to Miss Noel by February first. On February 13, the SMC task force of the Co-ordinating committee will meet with members of the ND Co-ordinating committee, who will presumably be following a similar plan for dissemination, study, and feedback.

Then on March first they will present to the Acting President, Sr. Alma Peter, a final statement to consist of recommendations fully accepted, those not accepted, and a list of alternatives. On March 13 a final statement will be presented to the SMC Board of Trustees for discussion.

At the March 21st joint meeting of the Executive committees of the SMC and ND boards of Trustees at Key Biscayne, the final statement will be presented.

Crossroads

Psych Bldg use in air; law program continues

Psych Building in Doubt

The future use of the Psychology Building has not been decided upon, according to Rev. Jerome J. Wilson, Vice President of Business Affairs, and Rev. James T. Burtchaeil, University Provost.

Administration plans call for the Biology Department to move all its facilities except for animal-research to the new Biology building, once it is completed. The psychology Department would then be able to move into the Wenninger-Kirsh Building presently occupied by the Biology Department.

When asked what will happen to the Psychology Building, Father Wilson replied: "I don't think anyone knows about that." Father Burtchaeil agreed and added that many departments are in need of more space and they would like the additional room. So far, the Engineering Department has made a request for the building.

Wilson said that the new Biology building was expected to be opened in mid-April, but delays in delivery of materials such as benches and casework have moved the opening back until the summer or even later. Because of these delays, the Psychology Department may not move into the Wenninger-Kirsh Building until September 1972.

Organ Recital

A program of classical organ music will be presented by Dr. Arthur P. Lawrence Friday, January 29, at 8:15 p.m. in Sacred Heart Church on the Notre Dame campus. Dr. Lawrence, an assistant professor of music at Saint Mary's College, will be joined on the program by Miss Susan Stevens, soprano. Miss Stevens is also a member of the Saint Mary's music faculty.

For his program, Dr. Lawrence has chosen: "Toccata in F," Bach; "Prelude in C Minor," Mendelssohn; "Chorale Prelude based on the Lord's Prayer," Boehm; "Postlude for the Service of Compline," Alain; and a soprano-organ duet, "Gaudete" by the contemporary German organist, Anton Heiller.

Dr. Lawrence, who also serves on the music faculty of the University of Notre Dame as director of choral activities, is a graduate of Davidson College. He holds a master's from Florida State, a doctor of musical arts degree from Stanford University and has studied at the University of California at Berkeley. Prior to joining the Saint Mary's faculty in 1969, he taught at Florida State University, Standord and Centre College of Kentucky and served as director of church music for several churches.

Law Program Continues

The Law School's year-around program in London, England, will continue this summer when Professor Peter W. Thornton directs a six-week session at Brunel University. Classes are open to students of all fully accredited law schools.

A distinguished faculty of British and American educators will conduct courses in British and American criminal law and land use systems, international business transactions, trusts, federal jurisdiction, negotiable instruments, and law and technology. A student may choose up to seven hours of courses which comply with the standards of the Association of American Law Schools.

Participants in recent programs abroad have found that their educational experience in the birthplace of the common law and in a leading center of international and comparative law was enhanced by the daily interchange of ideas, viewpoints and experiences with students from more than 40 law schools throughout the world, Thornton said.

Total registration and tuition cost is $300. Student lodging and three daily meals will be available on the Brunel campus for $340 and round-trip air transportation is priced at $199-$299, depending on departure from Detroit or New York. Additional information may be obtained by writing to Professor Thornton, Notre Dame, Ind. 46556.

New Interview Policy

Mr. Richard Willemin, Director of the Placement Bureau, announced the following policy change: each student planning to sign up for job interviews in the spring should provide a copy of his College Interview Form for each representative he intends to see. This will enable the interviewer to have a rough profile of the interviewee before meeting him.

Willemin emphasized the urgency of planning interviews, in view of the current "tight" employment situation.

Future Placement Bureau will be divided into the college status of the applying students; these bulletins will be color-coded: yellow for Arts and Letters, blue for Business Administration, orange for Science, and green for Engineering.

Thanks to YAF

In response to two shipments of gifts sent to Vietnam, Notre Dame's Young Americans for Freedom has received many letters of thanks from US servicemen there. The YAF had sent parcels of gifts financed by collections held in the dining halls before Halloween and Christmas.

The YAF gathered roughly $100 in the first collection and $75 in the second. According to Paul Dube, a YAF member in charge of the program, "every penny was used for gifts and postage". The postage totalled about $40. The rest of the money went into koolaid, various kinds of candy, peanuts, and paper creche decorations.

The YAF mailed the presents to Dube's sister, Captain Maryanna Dube, who serves in the 85th Evacuation Hospital at Phu Bai. Captain Dube then airlifted all the gifts to soldiers in the field.

Language prof dies over break

Dr. Paul A. Duet, 55 assistant professor of modern languages at Notre Dame since 1961, was found dead in his home at 1311 Hickory Road, South Bend, Tuesday January 19, apparently of natural causes. The body was sent from the McGann Funeral Home in South Bend to the Falgout Funeral Home, Galliano, La., where services and burial will take place.

Dr. Duet received his education at Louisiana State University, University of Paris, University of Chicago, University of Mexico and Tulane University. Before joining the Notre Dame faculty he served on the staffs of Southern State College, Magnolia, Ark.; Nicholls State College, Thibodaux, La.; Tulane University, Northeast Louisiana State College, Monroe, La., and Louisiana State University, Baton Rouge.

Thanks very much to everyone who called concerning the driver's position for the Observer. The position has been filled but we will keep your names on file in case of another vacancy.

Listen for the sounds of love...

Where do you hear them?

In a plea for help from someone who needs it? In a dialogue between students and the Establishment? In a talk session for a marriage-on-the-rocks? At a Catholic Mass conducted in an Episcopal Church?

You'd be surprised.

The sounds of love are everywhere — anyone can hear them. If they listen.

The Paulists listen. But, like everything in life, the things that matter most are the hardest.

It isn't easy being a Paulist. But then, the best things in life never are.

ENGINEERING GRADUATES

Ebasco Will Interview on Campus Mon., February 8

It's find out time! Time for you to find out the role you might play in the company that has designed or constructed over 8 billion dollars of fossil fuel, hydroelectric and nuclear plants.

There's never-been a more exciting time to join Ebasco. Forecasts call for electrical power systems 3½ times the size of our present national systems. As an engineer at Ebasco you'll be in the forefront of this activity. Ebasco engineers always have been.

See your Placement Director soon to arrange a Q&A session with the Ebasco representative on the above date. If this is not convenient, write to College Relations Coordinator, Ebasco Services Incorporated, Two Rector Street, New York, New York 10006. An Equal Opportunity Employer.

Jobs for '71 grads: New statistics reduce hope; show national hiring cutbacks

by Greg Rowinski

Though actual percentages of placed students are not yet available at the Placement Bureau, other contributing variables provide a less than glowing picture of the employment situation for 1971's graduates. The factors include cutbacks in employer visits and decreased hiring quotas for those employers with campus representatives.

"We are now in a flurry of employer cancellations for campus visits," reported the Bureau in a memo to Administration officials on January 12. The release also told of a continuing "general reduction in hiring quotas for our January, May, and August graduating classes."

The Bureau's figures bear out the first statement. From Christmas 1970 to the present, 18 major employers have cancelled planned visits to the campus. From August 1, the cancellations have numbered 182, or roughly 22% of the 376 employers originally scheduled.

The situation is similar to that at all the nation's universities. It is, in the words of the Bureau's Director, Richard Willemin, "a tight employment situation." He feels that Notre Dame is in a "fair position, comparatively speaking" since some employers have expressed special interest in obtaining its graduates. However, he added, "if the employer isn't hiring, he's not hiring anywhere." with Doctoral degrees face stiffer competition than Bachelors or Masters. The Placement Bureau's figures indicate the same situation on this campus.

On the other side of the scale, the hiring of Arts and Letters graduates in on an upsurge, according to Willemin. Companies are after looking for those with backgrounds in the Humanities, Willemin said, with particular likings for those with strengths in a combination of fields, rather than specialists.

Forced into belt-tightening by the economy, companies have acted to eliminate some "corporate fat", the Bureau's memo said. These companies, instead of turning to the college graduate market, are looking inward. They have chosen to fill gaps in the corporate structure with reshuffling of available manpower, eliminated marginal management and middle-echelon employees, and asked for greater output on all levels. Thus, the squeeze is put on what was formerly the pool that management looked to—the college graduate.

The Bureau, the College Placement Council, and other observers still contend that there is no reason for panic. Willemin said an upturn in early 1971 would alleviate the situation by the end of the year. The situation is "heartening" in one way, according to Willemin, in that "the well-qualified are still being sought." Because the employers can be more selective, he warned, the less-qualified must look hard, contact a good number of employers, take less time than would normally be allowed him to decide, and possibly take an offer that he might not accept under less strained conditions.

Observer Insight

No Asian Studies program at ND

According to Dr. George Brinkley, chairman of the department of Government and International Studies, there are no plans for an Asian Studies Program at Notre Dame., although there will be some new developments in this area by September, 1971.

Though Dr. Brinkley expressed hope in starting an Asian Studies Program someday at Notre Dame, he felt there was little chance of it at least in the next few years. He said there are too many obstacles at this time to seriously consider the program.

"To create an Asian Studies Program, there would have to be a significant expansion of language studies as well as courses in other areas. The university is not prepared to expand like this."

The chairman of the Government department also said there are very few university courses offered in the field of Asian Studies. He commented that there is only one Oriental language - Japanese - offered, and that history courses in the area are rare.

However, it is possible to receive an Asian Studies Certificate, he said. Similar to the Latin Studies Certificate, it requires a year in an Oriental language, 12 hours in courses concerning Asia, and an essay on Asia.

Brinkley gave credit to students enrolled in the Japan foreign studies program of the Certificate idea. He said a number of these students last year requested the Government department to offer something about Asia. In response, the department offered the certificate. He said that four had expressed intention of obtaining the certificate, but that none have been granted yet.

The Government department head also mentioned that there is a possibility for September of a faculty member being hired to teach in Asian studies. He said no decision would be made on this until this spring, however.

In addition to this, the department will offer a course next fall in Easter Political Thought. The course will be taught by Dr. Gerhart Niemeyer who is presently a professor in the department and who has long been interested in a program for Asian Studies. As brought out by Dr. Brinkley though, Dr. Niemeyer's course will cover not just Asia, but also such areas as the Middle East.

Another strong possibility for next year is a course in elementary Chinese. One of the leaders for the language course is Jim Thunder, a junior. He said that to get the course, 10 students are needed. He said four are already signed up for the course, but was confident that others would also sign up.

Thunder announced a meeting for all those interested in taking Chinese next year will be held on Wednesday night at 7:30 in the Rathskellar.

Scholarship refusal

remind you of the unfavorable impression you have made on him."

He then offered Werner a National Defense Student Loan and a University job, which was accepted.

Werner went to Krashna, and together they went to Father Theodore Hesburgh, University President. The case was given, by Hesburgh, to Burtchaell, University Provost.

On September 30, Burtchaell wrote to Werner, saying that his investigation of the matter showed no evidence of discrimination on the part of the University.

Werner's parents then wrote to Burtchaell, and claimed that the scholarship was removed because of their son's social involvement. On November 30, Burtchaell replied to Mr. and Mrs. Werner, and said, "It has been repeatedly alleged that the University removed James' scholarship because of his social involvements. The allegation is unfounded and, frankly, obvious." He maintained that academics are the reason the scholarship was not renewed.

Werner still claims that he was discriminated against. He said last night that he knows of "at least two other Arkansas students who haven't maintained a 3.00, but kept their scholarships."

"We want an honest, clear cut explanation," Krashna said. He continued, "We tried to keep from exposing this, but we have gone through the 'due process'. I spoke with Father Hesburgh twice, Jim and I together have spoken with Father Burtchaell several times. We feel we deserve an explanation."

McCluskey and Sheedy--A Grim Contradiction

In his deplorable statement of support for the equally deplorable Park-Mayhew proposal, the Rev. Charles Sheedy said that there was no "agreement or understanding" between Notre Dame and St. Mary's to raise the present male-female ratio to 3-1. The word came almost exactly one month after Rev. Neil McCluskey, S.J., the Dean Director for the Institute for Studies in Education at Notre Dame and a St. Mary's trustee said in a taped interview with the Observer that exactly such an agreement had been made.

That's a pretty grim contradiction.

It's a grim contradiction because it means that the University isn't going to play honest with us on the issue of coeducation. It's a grim contradiction because it indicates a certain contempt for our intelligence, and a certain secure belief that students will be ready to take any statement, any rewrite of history and any outline of the future without reacting anyway stronger than indifferently. And it's a grim contradiction especially because it appears to indicate that the Administration will line up behind the horrendous Park-Mayhew report.

The possibility exists, of course, that Father McCluskey was lying when he said that the agreement had been made. If he was, the Administration should have said so, then and there. It did not.

But somebody is lying. Why?

Was there an agreement, once made and now breached, to raise the male-female ratio in lieu of legitimate coeducation? If so, why was it breached? Was it because of a defensive desire to completely control its own admission policy that asserted itself within the St. Mary's administration after the agreement was made? Or if it wasn't, what was it?

Whatever it was, it wasn't a misunderstanding. The men were too highly placed, and the issue too important, for it to be that. Rather it appears that it was a calculated attempt on the part of the Notre Dame Administration to play politics with this very important issue in order to satiate a growing sense of insecurity that surrounds both institutions and says little for the leadership they are both alleged to exemplify.

Father McCluskey said in the same interview that "... what Father Hesburgh wants, what I want, and what most members of the board want is not simply a sharing of the classrooms, the labs, and the library, but also a sharing of the living conditions." It would be encouraging indeed if Father Hesburgh and the Board of Trustees were as sensitive to what the students want as Father McCluskey. Up to this point, there has been no indication that they are.

In the City

What is the Reality of the City

To speak of the idea of city is to call to mind the most universally devised form of social human living. The modern and obviously reactionary idealist associates the term with notions of abundant commerce, famed educational institutions, centers where arts and crafts can flourish, and places where wide avenues are lined by spacious parks. To suggest that anyone who holds these views has his head in the past is merely to say that he is not allowing his brain to receive the impulses sent to him by his senses from right here in the present.

Without a doubt, these feelings are unpleasant: the eye knows the confusion of sign and billboard and the whirling disarray of traffic; the ear knows the dissynchronous mesh of horn and engine and cash register; the back knows the ache of concrete; our taste and olfaction know the smells.

What our senses are telling us is that the city has become a grotesque. It is a place no longer fit for man because he is a creature whose senses not only are integral parts of his personality but whose senses actually serve to integrate his personality. The information they send him determines much of what he does and is. (An elbow in the ribs, for example, is not something one can usually ignore.) Thus when the senses are handled so violently in the modern city we can only conclude that there is an inward violence being done to the soul.

This question of how the city affects the human soul is not measurable in quite the same way as its effects on the body. If we wish to ask this question, though, our answer can come only by degrees of association, some perhaps subtle, others rude.

What Happens When the City is Built

Within the Mind

Strangers to night streets, winter's city airs, and traffic lights blinking red and green from dry cables, the frozen gray suggests to us that we have walked this square before, have known it before in a thousand dry impersonal places. We think we've been this place before, moved this way when passing long dead nights through deserted cities, travelling cold on gray streets, hearing weary buildings issue calls to vacant alleys; and neon bulbs' cool whispers in the eyeless streets. We think we've known this place before, met this strangeness with open eyes from roofs of tall buildings, looking down to where roads appear and disappear as gray strips indistinct of gray roofs and the fray of walls. We know this is a twilight city, trapped between the light of dusk and light of dawn, changed only slightly with the sweep of gray air and highlighted occasionally by some small light of strong color too large or too bright to be grayed out.

We are not shaken by this strange gray; it does not jolt like cold wind on stone, does not burn light the fire of a winter sunset, does not sound and resound in the dead of a deep night. This gray pervades, is no concentrate, is the dull hueless tinge of winter sky dropped like dusty curtains before the eye; a gray that comes to rest on the backs of hapless mice and lost papers winded to unimportant distances.

This gray is no cousin of the eye or phenomenon of night or day, nor is neither of the city alone nor of that which is not the city, nor of the earth, nor of the clouded sky; this gray is haze that shrouds our dreams, rolls like fog through our imagination, is the impalpable juice our mind becomes when we reach sleep.

ICTUS editor replies to Daniel V.

Dear Editor:

I am very sorry that the reviewer of Ictus in your Friday (January 22, 1971) edition could not find much that was worthwhile in our last issue. The stories and articles in Ictus 5 seemed to move him to a response entirely contrary to the sort we had hoped the magazine would engender. I am uncertain that any precise conclusions can be made from this; perhaps, the failure lies within both us and the reviewer. But, in any case, such is not the essential reason for my responding to you: Daniel V's disillusion with Ictus 5 is more than merely one individual's private disappointment - I would presume, as Daniel infers, that there are many on this campus with similar feelings of disgust for our "corrupt society" and our personal and collective inability to reach beyond its degrading and exhausting influences. I would only then like to comment to some degree on what the magazine really is, or better, what it is trying to be - to clarify a few of the points that Daniel and probably many others found so useless and repetitive.

The editors of the magazine bear no illusions of saving this society, especially through the printed word .... if we were so nefariously idealistic you can believe that we would publish more than four times a school year. We have tried to refrain from the mistakeable notion that we can transform (politically, spiritually, or otherwise) the campus "masses," a very ugly word used often by some in the frenzied midst of their rabidly good intentions. We are not "evangelists" attempting to tattoo a silver message across our reader's ignorant cerebrum. There was a time when we sought a kind of crude philosophic thrust of unenlightened non-violence, yet I am afraid that our ideological days have faded and we are now involved in the complicated process of growing and changing, sifting experience and knowledge into hopefully a handful of decisions that will shape our lives into loving vessels of suffering service to one another's salvation. If you happen to have an affinity for "bags" and "slots" then I guess you might shade us a bit toward non-violence, but I will insist that you not, in the witty attempt to take Ictus lightly pass us off as a myopic and frothing band of scab-lickers and raving neurotics. If the students and faculty of Notre Dame so choose to ignore us for this kind of reason then it will be their loss, just as it is their regrettable loss to have not shared in what the Scholastic expresses for so many weeks of the year.

Perhaps, it is the theatrical and threatening tone that repels many of our readers, but the paragraph that Daniel V chose to quote in his review states much to the point what we see the reader's task to be: we have no answers (i.e. "philosophy"), pat and simple, to offer the reader in order to pry him loose from his own "personal torment" over life; what we do have are the reflections and expressions of a few people struggling to work through their own agonies and misgivings. There are indeed repetitive as only human life can be, and it is with these unpretty and frustrating accounts that the reader must search for his own soul's image, painfully molding it into the suffering flesh and spirit that he knows it must be. We are creative in the mournful, passionate sense, perhaps just beginning to understand what it means to live on the thread's edge, finally deprived of the illusory, surrogate security that has continually cluttered and obstructed much of our lives, yet young.

We are, at last, not seeing or demanding instantaneous change, individually or collectively, through the language and drawings of our magazine. Each person must will that kind of change, himself, and expose his life to the thoughts, words, and acts that he feels will reveal some kind of subjective light by which to travel. The magazine simply lives in witness to this kind of change, witness to a life plucked out from among thorns and stones and made to radiate the suffering love that is only ours to give until death.

Vacation came and I went with my family to see John Leary cop his Cub Scout Bobcat badge. I entered the Pack meeting 'midst whispers of young blueshirts, ("Look, a Lumberjack. Ha. Haa.") to catch the commencement - a nifty chauvinist flag fetishism presided over by pompous, pot-bellied, Khaki-clad scouters. After a homey TV rap by the head Akela impersonator, complete with fake Indian headdress and law and order commercial, it was award time. Old eagle scout that I am, I was outraged and about to leap up and denounce the whole Honko process. However suddenly my ears were struck by mystic pole pounding. CLACK. CLACK. CLACK. Some crazy Cub was sending metal vibrations at the solemn ceremony. I noticed that my brother John, getting his Bobcat badge, was not standing at stiff-assed attention, but slouching; his hands in his pockets. Meanwhile some Den mother was silencing the pole pounder, causing Cubs to turn and laugh and point, causing the whole sad scene to happily degenerate into a state of creative Anarchy.

THESIS: All children are born anarchists, destroyers of enslaving symbols, truth seekers, enemies of the Honko-Cossack Mindbenders. Cub Scouts, initiated into uniformed silent ceremonies, rebel against them and their absurdities. Forced toward their first taste of authoritarianism, they rebel by pounding poles; they learn to whisper in the face of the silent hand sign; they slouch in the teeth of allegiance; they form a secret brotherhood opposed to the mutant rulings of the Akela-imposters. (I remembered my old Cub Scout days and hours of forced Colonel Bogey marching in Pack Meeting preparation; we counterattacked, whistling atonal gorbings and reverting to modified trucks when the scouter-martial-master had his head turned. Then I recalled my Boy Scout Days when, being the only bearded 14 year old in camp, I posed as a Scout Master and requisitioned contraband food, plus beer and cigarettes, for my patrol. The fact that I was later caught and forced to peel 200 pounds of potatoes only strengthened my anarchist resolve.)

VIVA CUB SCOUTING!! It not only introduces the young to the tyranny of khaki fascist iron-handedness, but it lets kids bop into the woods where they can surreptitiously escape their masters, scream, run around, and recognize wild dope plants. The Cub Scouts are our Yippie Yungen. Please don't tell J. Edgar HUAC.

A small story

Back in the late 1940's, Notre Dame and the nation was recovering from the war. Those were the days when droves of war-weary veterans returned to Notre Dame, where the young Father Hesburgh counseled the married veterans living in Vetville, where the football team, led by Leahy, Johnny Lujack, and Leon Hart, battled its way into athletic immortality, and Brother Justin presided over the freshmen.

In those years the lights were turned out at 10:00 in the evening on weekdays, and at midnight on the weekends. Students were obliged to attend daily Mass three times on weekday mornings, and rare athletic defeats were blamed on insufficient communicants. Certain areas of South Bend and Chicago were off limits, and the reverend clergy patrolled the areas to insure compliance.

The freshman, during those times, were housed in the Administration Building. On one floor were the showers and sinks and toilets, on another floor were the beds, and on another floor was a study area. Brother Justin was the freshman disciplinarian and lived and slept on the same floor with the freshmen.

One winter night one of the freshmen had been engaging in a game of pool. After the game this same freshman pocketed one of the pool balls and made his way back to the Administration building. As the freshmen lay in their bunks, dreaming of who knows what, this mischievouslad hurled the pool ball along the wooden floor, sending it bumping and thumping off the metal legs of the bunk line. True to our gaming tradition, the awakened freshmen quickly caught on to this breach of order, and would catch the careening pool ball as it rolled on in the dark and send it once again along the floor, afresh with momentum and energy and noise and chaos and all that.

As I said, Brother Justin, as his name might indicate, was charged with preventing breaches of the nightly peace. Turning on the lights, he demanded to know who had brought the contraband pool ball into the sleeping area. As might be expected of those fun loving frosh, no one violated the comradely solidarity and the culprit went unnamed.

So Brother Justin, without a minute's delay, ordered the freshmen out of bed and into the wintry night for a walk around the campus. Once assembled back in the improvised dorm, the freshmen were asked again to name the violator and once again silence prevailed. And so the boys went back to bed.

Just as sleep had returned to the minds and bodies of those Catholic rebels, Brother Justin once again turned on the lights, ordered the freshmen out of bed, and marched them through the cold and snow around the silent campus. And so the process was repeated. And as the humor of the deed turned rancorous in the minds of the wearied boys, the name was given out, Brother Justin's authority was preserved, the jester was duly punished, and peaceful slumber returned to the rows of sleeping freshmen in the Administration Building.

Irish skaters stuck at .500 mark

Jim Cordes' goal, 31 seconds into the sudden death overtime period, gave the Notre Dame hockey team a 6-5 win over the University of North Dakota Friday night and enabled the Irish to split their two-game weekend set with the Fighting Sioux. The Sioux revenged their setback in the opening game of the series by trouncing the Irish 7-1 on Saturday night.

The Irish had to come from behind twice in their thrilling victory over the Sioux, battling back from 4-2 and 5-4 deficits to force the game into overtime. Cordes didn't keep the crowd of 4113 (record attendance for an ND hockey game) in suspense long as he fired the puck, past the Sioux goalie Dave Murphy after just 31 seconds had elapsed in the extra stanza.

The Irish controlled the puck well in the early portions of the first period and put good pressure on Murphy in the North Dakota nets. After making some nice saves, the Sioux netminder gave up the first goal of the game at the 11:13 mark in the period when Phil Witliff tipped in Bill Green's slap shot. Green had taken a hard shot from the circle to the right of the North Dakota goal and Witliff deflected the puck into the upper left hand corner of the net.

The goal seemed to fire up the Sioux and they began to take the play away from the Irish, eventually tying the score with 3:08 to go in the period. Greg Cameron carried the puck in on the right side for the Sioux and made a pretty pass to Jim Cahoon, who took the puck about 25 feet in front of the net and fired it past Irish goalie Dick Tomasoni. The period ended with the clubs deadlocked, 1-1.

Both teams came out "flying" in the second period and each had scoring opportunities in the early going but were thwarted by sturdy defense. Ian Williams looked like he might put the Irish ahead midway into the period, when he took a pass from Kevin Hoene and came in alone on Murphy, but the Sioux goalie stopped Williams' shot.

The Irish gained a man advantage when North Dakota's Rich Wilson was sent to the penalty box for tripping at 12:41 and it took the Irish just 33 seconds to net a power play goal and go ahead 2-1.

Witliff came around behind the Sioux cage, passed to Gary Little and screened Murphy. Little slid the puck past Murphy from 12 feet out and the Irish had the lead once again.

It didn't take the Sioux long to retaliate, however. With 14:30 gone in the period Cameron netted the equalizer for the Sioux, taking a pass from Bob Duncan and shooting a 10-footer past Tomasoni.

Just six seconds later Duncan gained control of the puck in the neutral zone, skated towards the Irish goal and beat Tomasoni with a sinking, 30-foot slap shot.

The Sioux upped their advantage to 4-2 with a little over two minutes left to play in the period when Cameron netted his second goal of the game, an 8-footer from slightly to the left of Tomasoni. Brian Dipiero and Dave Bragnalo were credited with assists on the score, and the Sioux took the 4-2 lead into the locker room at the period stop.

The Irish moved to within one goal of the Sioux in the second minute of the final stanza when Eddie Bumbacco, recovered from a bout with mononucleosis, drilled home a rebound of a Ric Schaffer slap shot.

The Irish kept hustling and tied the score with 3:09 gone in the period when Witliff, taking a pass from John Roselli, skated down the right side and drilled a 30-footer past Murphy.

Both clubs battled hard for the go-ahead goal and the Sioux scored it, going ahead 5-4 with 15:15 gone. The Irish were having difficulty clearing the puck from their defensive zone when Allen Henry of the Sioux took a pass from Cameron and fired a 40-foot slap shot into the net.

The Irish came battling back though and knotted the score at 5-5 with 3:24 left in regulation time as Paul Regan deflected a shot from the right point by Schaffer past the Sioux goalie.

Neither club made a real threat in the closing minutes of regulation play and the Irish went into their second overtime game of the season. They had lost an extra session encounter early in the season to Michigan Tech, in Houghton, 5-4.

The Sioux won the faceoff at the start of the sudden death stanza and dumped the puck into the Irish end of the rink. Notre Dame cleared the disc out without difficulty however and moved toward the Sioux goal. Gary Little passed the puck to Witliff who fed Cordes skating down the slot. Cordes fired the puck toward the Sioux goal but his shot was blocked. The puck went off Murphy's pads and back out to Cordes who this time beat Murphy for the game-winner.

The young Irish and their coach, Lefty Smith, were very happy in the locker room after the game.

Witliff expressed the sentiments of the players, saying, "This was our best game of the year, everyone played well. This is our biggest win so far."

Smith was "very, very pleased - both with the team and with the crowd". "The boys skated well," he said. "Anytime you can come back and win is most satisfying."

Saturday night was a different story as the Irish were outplayed by the Sioux and dropped a 7-1 decision.

The Irish outshot the Sioux 38-31 but Jim Nelson was outstanding in the North Dakota goal, making a number of great saves. Bob Duncan of the Sioux put on a fine offensive show, netting three goals and picking up a pair of assists.

North Dakota grabbed the lead at 7:04 of the first period when Greg Cameron took a pass from Duncan and shot the puck into the goal from 20 feet out.

The Sioux added another tally at 10:25 while Ric Schaffer of Notre Dame was in the penalty box for interference. Murray Wing slapped home a 20-footer for the score as Cameron and Duncan were credited with assists on the play.

North Dakota scored their third goal of the period while both clubs had two men in the penalty box. Allen Henry came down the ice all alone after an Irish rush had failed and beat Tomasoni with a wicked shot from 25 feet.

The second period was an especially frustrating one for the Irish because, although they outshot North Dakota 15-8, with many of their shots coming from close range, they still trailed the Sioux 4-1 at the end of the stanza.

Duncas put the Sioux ahead 4-0 in the first minute of the second period when he tipped in a slap shot by Mike Baumgartner, fired from the right point.

Kevin Hoene spoiled Nelson's shutout bid at the 7:20 mark taking a pass from Paul Regan, standing at the circle to the left of the net, and poking the puck in from 10 feet.

The Sioux added the three goals in the final period to turn the game into a rout. Duncan scored his second goal of the game at 1:58, Tim O'Keefe tallied at 8:24 and Duncan completed his hat trick with 14:00 minutes gone, putting in a 10 foot shot.

The Irish are now 8-8-1 for the year, 4-7-1 in WCHA play. The Notre Dame icers will be in action next weekend, opposing Michigan State in East Lansing Friday and Saturday nights.

'No gimmicks... we just beat them'

by J.W. Findling
Observer Sportswriter

It was one of those rare days—splendid and priceless—when this school rises above the odds, rises beyond the limits of belief to conquer a seemingly invincible foe. That autumn afternoon in 1913 was such a day when two young men by the names of Rockne and Dorais etched a gridiron destiny for Notre Dame by shocking Army 35-13. Another such day was January 1, 1971 when a skinny-armed quarterback by the name of Thiesmann and the creative coaching of a man called Parsegian humbled the No. 1 ranked Texas Longhorns 24-11. January 23, 1971 was still another such day. And if the sport had changed, the feeling of the moment had not. Notre Dame, this time on the hardwood and led by the incredible Austin Carr's 46 points, stunned No. 1 ranked UCLA 89-82.

As Sid Catlett said after the game, "No gimmicks... we just beat them." They sure did. And Carr wasn't the only hero this time. Catlett who played the last 18 minutes with four personal fouls made life miserable for the Bruins' Curtis Rowe. The difference in this game may have been the inspired play of John Pleick, the senior from El Segundo, California, who knows most of this UCLA team. Although he fouled out with 14:20 left to play and scored all of his nine points in the first half, Pleick's aggressive board work and remarkable defensive hustle against Steve Patterson ignited the Irish at both ends of the court.—Collis Jones, as underrated as any college forward has ever been, proved that he was only a step behind UCLA's All-American Sidney Wicks. Collis forced Wicks into several bad shots and led an Irish rebounding corps that picked off 44—the same number as UCLA. Coach Johnny Dee said of his big three, "I thought all along that Pleick, Jones and Catlett were in a class with Sidney Wicks, Curtis Rowe, and Steve Patterson—and today they proved it."

Jackie Meehan, the clever master-at-the-controls, played a smart basketball and, as usual, got twice as many assists as he got points. Doug Gemmill, a mere twig amidst the sequoias of UCLA, practically jumped out of the ACC twice—going above Curtis Rowe and Steve Patterson for a pair of improbable tip-ins.

And then, of course, there was Austin Carr. It's already all been said about this amazing young man. Certainly, he is the one against whom all others are measured. Carr has had trouble getting started in his last three games, but as he said himself, "today I was ready." So were his fellow students. Having only seen the Irish twice this season and after a long holiday break, the Notre Dame student body went berserk. The ND band planned the Victory March enough that it should be echoing in UCLA's ears for a long time—maybe even until March. Asked what different the crowd made, Coach Johnny Wooden simply replied, "the game."

The Irish never trailed in the contest. They jumped off to an early 10-3 lead and with only 5:33 left in the initial period Notre Dame had pushed ahead to a 37-24 advantage, the biggest of the afternoon. But UCLA closed the margin quickly and Notre Dame enjoyed only a 43-38 halftime advantage.

UCLA tied the game at 47 with 16:40 left to play the second half. At this point things looked bleak for Notre Dame. Pleick and Catlett had already picked up their fourth personals. But Collis Jones sank a free throw, and then on what could have been the turning point of the game, if such a thing was possible in this game, Austin Carr made two driving layups that were...hell, you saw them...they were unbelievable. At this point it was evident that this Notre Dame team was a courageous bunch and they were not to be intimidated by anyone. The last 6½ minutes belonged to Carr; he halted every UCLA threat by scoring 15 of Notre Dame's last 17 points.

Johnny Wooden politely answered questions and signed autographs outside the Bruins' locker room after the game. For a man who had just seen his team lose only its fifth game in the last 136, he was remarkably at ease—a perfect gentleman who offered no excuses, no alibis. "When you get whipped, it's usually the other team that beats you...I don't know how Notre Dame has lost four games; they sure didn't lose four games playing like this." Another woman stuck a folded program in front of him. Coach Wooden signed it, smiled, and said, "I think all these circles and free throws you have here are for the wrong team."

Johnny Dee was remarkably calm considering the circumstances. "It was one helluva win, one of the biggest ever for us. We needed help in the trenches. Today John Pleick and the "Cat"(Catlett) came to play." But the most unforgettable thing in the Notre Dame locker room that afternoon was huge John Pleick sitting in the corner—weeping.

This was no fluke. The Bruins' first fourteen games were lemons while the Irish, on the other hand, met rough competition—much of it on the road. Of course, few are ready yet to project the Irish as a better squad than the Bruins. Nevertheless, Saturday afternoon Notre Dame was a better team than UCLA. Time will tell us more—a rendezvous in Houston would provide a rational verdict.

But the moment is ours—all of Notre Dame cherishes the glory. However, one man gave it dignity, mystique, and brilliance. Austin Carr rode high on the shoulders of those who love him. And one could sense that all those 11,343 who saw it in person and the millions more who saw it across the nation wanted to touch him because they realized that on this Saturday afternoon—splendid and priceless—Austin Carr had become the Rockne of his sport.

The Irish Eye

Igniting the Charge

It was the same feeling all over again. It was Dallas flash backed to our minds. It was that crazy, "little Boy" happiness that was experienced just 22 days prior to Saturday. The unbeatable foe was conquered. For that euphoric hour or two after the game there was no one who could say that ND was not number one.

That "drunken with glee" feeling is gone now but the sweet memory remains. We must come back to earth even though we like to savor special victories such as Saturday's for a greater amount of time than usual. Nonetheless, things must still be put into perspective.

A nine and four record is far from the most impressive in the country even if the Irish have beaten some flashy opposition. There is still a difficult agenda that Johnny Dee's charges have to meet before this season is a success. The Irish shouldn't let up after this BIG win, moreover they should just be igniting a charge that could carry them to Houston or at least an NCAA bid.

Two more tough opponents are staring at the Irish this week. Michigan State has not been beaten by ND for six years. Illinois can remember their loss last year in Chicago Stadium to ND. Both would love the prestige of toppling the nation's number one giant killer.

Finishing the remainder of the season without a loss would be asking too much. The schedule doesn't lighten up enough to allow for many let down games. Then too, there is Villanova in the Palestra, a task rivaling that of beating UCLA.

Saturday was the game that Irish fans have been looking for from this team since Austin Carr & Co.'s junior year. The team put together their individual talents and played, well...like a team. The major point that is trying to be stressed here is that the Irish cannot rest on what has been accomplished.

Victories in the next two ball games could well give Notre Dame enough momentum to make a serious run for Houston. They finally proved what everybody knew all along, i.e. they are a good team with the potential to be a great team.

Another note of interest is that Austin Carr has shaken a mild shooting slump (and how!) and his performance was one of the closest to perfection on a basketball court that anyone can ever witness. To say he was fabulous would be an injustice.

But at least for the moment ND can rest on top of the basketball world. It's doubtful if Johnny Dee will let his team stay in the clouds for more than one day, however. He remembers all too well what MSU has done to his Irish since he commenced coaching at du lac.

That feeling sure was great while it lasted. Probably the only thing that could approach that magnitude would be another big victory, this time in the southern part of Texas. But that's completely out of the question...or is it?

That's right Henry, it's in the hoop.

Leprechauns smash GAFB

by Vic Dorr
Observer Sportswriter

Notre Dame's freshman basketball team defeated Grissom Air Force Base 101-65 Saturday, and the Irish yearlings had very little trouble as they rolled to their fifth victory in eight decisions.

The visiting Skyhawks, who were at a severe height disadvantage, were never in the game. In fact, the first half was but 2:40 old when the skyhawks found themselves trailing 10-0 and were forced to ask for a time out. But the Irish starters ripped off six more points before Grissom managed to get on the scoreboard.

So lopsided was the first half, that ND coach Tom O'Connor pulled his entire first string with 7:53 left. 6-7 forward Ken Wolbeck and 6-6 forward Chris Stevens, who entered the lineup when Tom O'Mara injured his ankle, were big factors in the first half onslaught. Wolbeck, who finished with 10 points, and Stevens, who ended 13, kept the offense hot while the Irish defense—a well played man-for-man—was limiting the Skyhawks to very few good shots. When the Notre Dame bench was emptied with 2:29 remaining, the score was 51-23, and any questions as to the eventual outcome of the game had long since vanished.

But any Irish fans who hoped to see a similar second period were disappointed. Although O'Connor elected to go with his starting unit—minus O'Mara, who did not reappear, the ND freshmen were unable to recapture their first half momentum. The Notre Dame attack, plagued by sloppy ball handling and numerous second half turnovers, found itself reduced to a rather haphazard operation, and it was only this that prevented the game from becoming even more of a slaughter. The Irish frosh also suffered a degree of inaccuracy from the foul line, as they missed 17 (of 32) free throw attempts.

Several fast break field goals seemed to snap the Irish yearlings from their lethargy, though, as once again Coach O'Connor was able to rest his starters with plenty of time showing on the scoreboard. And through the entire game, O'Connor's scholarship players saw only about 25 minutes of action.

Throughout the final six minutes of the contest, the only matter still in doubt was whether or not the frosh squad would be able to nudge the score above the century mark before time ran out. The Skyhawks, too, were aware of this, and even resorted to a last-minute stall in order to hold down the scoring. Their efforts were unsuccessful, though, as Notre Dame scored on a breakaway layup in the last three seconds to make it 101-65.

ND's Gary Novak led all scorers with 19 points, and he was followed by Stevens with 13, Wolbeck with 10, and John Cornelius with 10. Jim Turner and Jack Blauwkamp both scored 14 points to pace the Skyhawks. The freshman team is idle now until February 3, when it meets Marquette. The last time the two teams met, the Irish came out on the short end of a 79-68 decision.

Victory parties cause much damage

by Bill Carter
Observer Managing Editor

Section parties inspired by the upset victory over UCLA Saturday afternoon led to a number of incidents of destruction and vandalism that night in Flanner Hall. The Sunday morning wreckage included the glass front of the most often used southwest entrance, the plastic casing on the ceiling of elevator one, two frames in the sandwich machine in the hall canteen, and a glass strewn floor on one of the section bathrooms resulting from a beer bottle smashing outburst.

In addition, hallways and elevators were littered with the remnants of the night's parties and the hall fire alarm was pulled three times. A number of minor altercations and near brawls occurred over such issues as keg privileges and girl-stealing.

Hall Rector, Fr. Maurice Amen, expressed distress with the continuing weekend trouble in the tower. "I really don't know why, but it seems we attract a lot of people from outside the hall to the parties here," Fr. Amen said. He felt that much of the mischief was caused by outsiders, sighting the door smashing incident where he had learned the culprit was from Holy Cross Hall.

Much of Saturday night's action centered on the seventh floor where a keg party was held. Fr. Amen said he knew for a fact that at least two of the fire alarms had been set off on the seventh floor. The disorder grew so extensive on this floor that Fr. Amen called in the Alcoholic Beverage Commission Police to help him clear the section and end the party.

A number of disrupted parties spread to other floors causing a number of minor incidents. One developed into a beer-throwing argument on the ninth floor between three misplaced football players and floor resident assistant, Bob Prendergast, who was called in to prevent the three from crashing a section keg party. Prendergast succeeded in separating the outsiders from the section members before the situation could get out of control.

The false alarm fires did not repeat the confusion created by a similar incident in November when teams from the local fire department arrived each of three times in answer to the alarms. Fr. Amen said he had anticipated the trouble and disconnected the alarm from the contact to the local firehouse, relying on the night guard or himself to alert fire officials in case a real fire broke out in the hall.

Fr. Amen said he had not yet taken any drastic measures to answer the problems of destructive vandalism that have plagued the hall. He indicated that most of the hall residents had voiced a disgust with the repeated incidents of trouble during weekend parties, especially the pulling of fire alarms which most agreed had become intolerable. Fr.

Amen added that some sections had actually gone so far as to form types of vigilante groups to keep the peace in the hall on Friday and Saturday nights.

KC: SUSC 'stifling'

by John Powers

Bob Walton, President of the Notre Dame chapter of the Knights of Columbus, yesterday charged the Student Union Social Commission with "totalitarian policies capable of stifling the social atmosphere of the campus."

"The Student Union's policies are totalitarian," claimed Walton. "They're stifling the social atmosphere with their controls. They seem to be afraid of competition. Apparently, they feel that one activity is enough for the entire campus. By doing this, they're killing any kind of diversity."

"We're not trying to compete with Cinema '71 or anything, but just take a look at last week. Rosemary's Baby, 2001, Cinema '71, the hockey games, and the basketball games, all diversw activities, all drew well, and all could be considered successes. There's no sense to the claim that more than one activity kills the other. Competition should be encouraged, it's healthy."

At the present, all activities must be registered and approved with the Social Commission before they are scheduled. Yet, the K of C has failed to have their activities registered with the Student Union. Walton states that the Student Union has no control over the K of C. "We are not solely a student organization. About 4/5 of our membership is alumni, yet the Student Union is trying to get us under the control of Fr. Thomas E. Blantz, Vice-President of Student Affairs. We don't think that is fair."

"We need diversity on this campus," Walton continued, "If Student Union keeps their tight control over activities, this will never happen. It's time for them to employ more realistic policies. For a major university, this place has a small level of activity."

On Wednesday, Walton will meet with Bob Pohl, head of the Social Commission, to air his complaints.

ground information and is also on tape, was brought to the attention of Editor-In-Chief Glen Corso last night.

Rev. McCluskey's remarks concerning coeducational living for the two schools go beyond even what the Park-Mayhew report suggested.

"... what Fr. Hesburgh wants very much and what I want, and I think this is the feeling of most members of the boards... is not simply sharing of classrooms, library facilities, and labs; what we want is to share the living conditions. I feel very strongly that either Flanner or Grace should be turned over exclusively to girls," he said, "and I think that on the other hand one of the big halls at St. Mary's should become a men's residence hall."

"Because the two institutions have historically been single sex institutions and because student desire for new collegiate relationships between the sexes is such a potent force in the present inquiry," The report stated, "the matter of residences living and the relationships between the sexes pose a sensitive set of problems. At this time no formal plan is being suggested regarding women residing on the Notre Dame campus or men on the St. Mary's campus."

Alumni Ass'n elects directors

Five new directors have been named to the University of Notre Dame Alumni Association. Balloting of the 48,000-member organization was conducted during the last month.

Named to three-year terms on the board are Peter F. Flaherty, a 1951 law graduate and mayor of Pittsburgh; Joseph G. Bertrand, president of the Highland Community Bank and candidate for the treasurer's post in Chicago; Paul J. Doyle, vice president of the Rede Company, a financial consulting firm Houston, Tex.; William K. McGowan, Jr., vice president of American Fletcher National Bank and Trust Co., Indianapolis, and Charles F. Osborn, senior partner in a Seattle, Wash. law firm.

A three-year transition of Alumni Board election procedures was concluded with the current balloting. The five new members, elected from a slate of 10 will bring to 15 the number of members serving on the board and provide full geographic representation for each of the 15 regions in the U.S. for the first time.

The new members will attend their first quarterly meeting of the association on the campus Feb. 4-6.
