Student body elects new Senate

Bob Weaver: Lack of interest in Senate due to decline of Senate significance.

by Bill Davidow

Amidst a flurry of last minute confusion in many halls, including the postponement of one election, a new Student Senate was elected yesterday.

This new group of representatives will have the duty of legislating a new "merger" constitution between Notre Dame and St. Mary's.

"A lack of communication" was blamed by Stay Senator Don Patrick for the half-hearted effort put forth by the various halls. Patrick explained that an ad was placed in the Observer and an announcement made at the weekly Hall Presidents Council meeting regarding the entry of candidates names to the Election Committee.

Bob Weaver, Executive Coordinator of Student Government, attributed the lack of interest in the Senate elections to the declining significance of the assembly.

As far as any change in the role of the Student Senate is concerned, Student Body President John Barkett cited the forthcoming constitution as essential in deciding the future role of the Senate. The constitution, soon to be submitted by the Constitutional Revision Committee, must be passed by the Senate.

Presently the major function of the Senate is the budgeting of the Student Government finances. When asked if he had any specific plans for this body, assuming its existence after the constitution is processed, Barkett expressed the desire for the Senate to "look into" the room pick situation on campus, hopefully to prevent the forcing of students off-campus.

Other matters requiring the attention of the senate are the security force and the Hammes bookstore.

Stay Senator Patrick hopes to assimilate SMC girls into the assembly as soon as possible, but he, too, feels that setting the budget straight and passing a new constitution are the main concerns of the Senate at this point.

Patrick said one important thing to keep in mind is the objective of merging Student Governments.

Like Barkett, Patrick plans on the Senate assuming investigatory procedures into various area of campus life.

The new group of Senators, along with the St. Mary's Student Assembly, have, as their main responsibility, the passing, with or without amendments, of a new constitution which could not only alter the role of the Student Senate, but also the complete structure of Student Government itself.

Harlan leaves bench

By James M. Naughton
© 1971 NEW YORK TIMES

Washington September 23 associate justice John Marshall Harlan retired today from the supreme court after 16 years as its most craftsmanlike conservative. His physician said Harlan was suffering from bone cancer.

The decision was conveyed to President Nixon in a typewritten note from the 72-year-old justice, now a patient in George Washington University Hospital here.

harlan stepped down from the bench six days after the retirement, also for reasons of health, of associate justice Hugo L. Black. Together, the two vacancies assured Nixon the opportunity to solidify the transformation of the court into an instrument of his philosophy of judicial restraint

Ronald L. Ziegler, the the White House press secretary, said that Nixon would act "as swiftly as possible" to fill the two vacancies on the nine-member court with individuals whose views would be "compatible" with the President's philosophy of strict construction of the constitution.

Immediate speculation focused on the possibility that Nixon would nominate the first woman justice to fill one vacancy. He already was said to be searching for a southerner as a successor to Black, with most attention centered on Rep. Richard H. Poff, R-VA.

No member of the court in recent years was more attuned to the President's legal attitude than was Harlan, whose hallmark was a determined adherence to judicial precedent. Together with Nixon's two previous appointees--Chief Justice Warren E. Burger, and Associate Justice Harry A. Blackmun--and with Associate Justices Potter Stewart and Byron R. White, Harlan adhered to the philosophy of judicial

SMC Rome program continues

Despite rumors that St. Mary's Rome program will go the route of the Andrea Doria, Sr. Alma Peter, director of the college's foreign studies programs, denied yesterday that the study program would be cancelled.

In a telephone interview, the director emphatically dismissed the allegation with the fact that over 100 freshmen are currently enrolled in Beginning Italian, a pre-requisite for the Italian program. She added that the program was prospering in its second year with a new director, Sr. Madonna, former president of Cardinal Cushing College, Brookline, Massachusetts, and over 80 St. Mary's students and approximately 20 Notre Dammers. That Notre Dame students would be accepted for this year's Rome Program surprised many. Last spring management of the Hotel Tiziano, the center of the college's Rome campus, evicted all of the male students for reasons as yet unclear to the men.

Some students believe that the problem centered on violations of the room visitation rules. (Unlike university parietal regulations, it is forbidden for a student to be in the bedroom of a student of the opposite sex at any time.)

$13,000 should be available to the halls this year pending Senate approval announced student body president, John Barkett, late yesterday. Reportedly the purse consists of $8,000 from student government and $5,000 from the University Administration.

Outlining the plan, Barkett stated that conceivably the Finance Committee (7 members) which makes recommendations to the Senate on the budgets for Student Union, Student Government, and its subsidiaries, may meet next Friday. It is through this Committee that the proposal to allocate the $10,000 must first

Any organization wishing to operate such a stand must register its intent with Mike Kearsse of the Student Union. From these, "four or five" will be randomly selected.

Father Shilts stated that the decision to limit the number of stands came from his office, along with the Student Union. Kearsse, however, denies that the Union had any part in making the decision.

Fr. Shilts:

or five stands

"It was not our idea," said Kearsse. "We are only following Father Shilts' orders. In fact, no one here wants to have any part in carrying out such a proposal."

"It is entirely possible that the same organization could be given the opportunity to have a stand, three, or more times, and this could really cause some hard feelings," Kearsse said.

It would be hard to characterize the elections by an emphasis on high turnout. In most halls less than one-third of the students voted.

The turnout in the Towers was particularly disappointing, with

Albania wants roll-call vote

(C) 1971 New York Times Service Sept. 23-- Albania today told the co-sponsors of her resolution to oust Nationalist China from the United Nations that she would ask the General Assembly tomorrow to block from its agenda the item on China sponsored by the United States. The Albanian move would force the 130 members of the assembly to go on record in a roll-call vote. This would give some indication of the amount of support that the United States has gained for its two resolutions on China.

The American resolutions seek to keep the Nationalist government in the United Nations while at the same time, admitting the Peking government and giving it the Chinese seat in the security council. Informed sources said that the Albanian ambassador, Reis Malile had received instructions from his government today to carry the fight to the assembly floor tomorrow. The vote will have far more psychological than practical significance. Each side has been trying to create a bandwagon movement. The assembly is expected to defeat the Albanian motion, but a narrow vote would be regarded as a perhaps fatal sign of American weakness. Yesterday the assembly's General Committee voted 11 to 9 in favor of inscription of the American item on the agenda. The item is listed under a neutral heading, "The representation of China in the United Nations."

Dining program explained

Gary Caruso, Director of Co-ex Dining, explained the details of the dining program which will begin on Monday.

He stated that each ND hall will be assigned a night to introduce freshmen and others to the program. After October 18th, the tickets will be available on a first-come, first-serve basis at the Student Government offices in La Fortune.

Ann Sullivan, the SMC Director, will make available 160 tickets for SMC students at the SMC Student Government offices located in the south end of the Holy Cross basement. Office hours will be from 1 to 5 each day.

SMC meals will be served Monday through Friday from 4:30 to 6:30, away football Saturdays from 4:45 to 6:15, home football Saturdays from 5:00 to 6:30 and Sundays from 11:30 to 1:00 PM.

ND meals will be served Monday through Saturday from 5:00 to 6:30 and Sundays from 11:45 to 1:15 PM.

Caruso hopes that each ND hall will contact SMC girls and invite them to dine with sections of the hall on specified nights. "One hall already made similar arrangements. Arrangements of this type can be easily made for any group or organization which wishes to invite girls to ND."

Caruso added, "Since the ND supply is limited, the only way all ND students can have a frequent opportunity to dine with SMC girls is to invite them over here."

Student govt merger

By Bill Sohn

The possibilities and types of merger between the Student Governments, both undergraduate and graduate, were discussed last night at the Law School.

According to Denis Hauptly, Third Year Class President at the Law School, "There is much to be said for at least some form of co-operation."

Pat McDonough, a law student, added that, "This is the only major university in the nation without an association of all students."

Other reasons given for the merger by Hauptly and McDonough were: more size and therefore more influence, more respect for the Student Government from the Administration, and a better chance to deal with common problems.

Hauptly gave three possible levels of co-operation: first, an informal co-operation between the groups with common problems discussed; second, a system of regular meetings of all groups; third, an actual "confederation" of all the groups. Hauptly said that he personally prefers the third or "confederation" method.

All attending the meeting, Kathy Barlow, S.B.P. of St. Mary's, Bill McGrath, President of the Student Union, and Hauptly and McDonough, voiced approval of the idea and said that they would bring the idea before their respective organizations. Those not in attendance, the Graduate Student Union and The Notre Dame Student Government, will be informed of the ideas and opinions brought out at the meeting.

restraint pledged by Nixon in the 1968 presidential campaign.

Ziegler said that the President, in accepting Harlan's decision to retire, had described him as "one of the great legal scholars in the history of the court" and a jurist who would be remembered by future generations as a "towering figure."

White House officials said privately that they would not rule out the prospect that Nixon would nominate a woman to the high court, nor did they feel his choices both must be Republican.

One official said that what most important was that the nominees reflect Nixon's philosophy and be young enough, preferably under the age of 50, to assure its dominance for some years.

A Count of Fate

(C) 1971 New York Times News Service

Washington -- The retirement of Supreme Court Justice John M. Harlan gives President Nixon a rare opportunity to nominate two justices at once, and presents a real possibility that the time may have come for a woman justice to sit on the Supreme Court.

Uppermost in his mind will be to mold a "Nixon Court" that will impress his strict-constructionist philosophy upon the law for decades to come. These will be his third and fourth vacancies to fill, and if he wins a second term, he will probably appoint at least a five-member majority of the court.

Warren G. Harding appointed four justices in an 18-month period, and left a conservative court that bedeviled the "New Deal" for years. Then attrition gave Franklin D. Roosevelt eight seats to fill, and he and his democratic successors created a liberal tribunal that is just now giving way to the political thinking of the Nixon era.

Now the opportunity to nominate a ticket of two jurists has presented Nixon with a chance to milk political gain and or psychic satisfaction from a wide range of options--the most obvious of which would be to name the first woman justice at a time when the Nation's most restless majority group is pressing for recognition.

This opportunity has also confronted Nixon with a basic conflict: How to pick a woman who could be depended upon to go along with his plans for a tame Supreme Court.

The departure of Justice Hugo L. Black leaves only three liberal holdovers from the Warren era--William O. Douglas, now 72 years old; Thurgood Marshall, who has suffered from a variety of ailments recently; and William J. Brennan Jr.

Nixon is expected to replace Black with another southerner, but one of a decidedly more conservative hue. He would join four other justices who tend to line up on the conservative side--Chief Justice Warren E. Burger, and Justice Harry A. Blackmun, Byron R. White and Potter Stewart.

However, White and Stewart occasionally side with the liberals so that Nixon's conservative majority could be a shaky one unless Harlan's replacement proves to be a consistent member of the "Burger" Bloc.

This is where the selection of a woman justice becomes delicate. For while Nixon likes to appoint republicans who are strict-constructionists, the leading women lawyers and judges tend to be democrats who are flexible in their judicial views.

Mrs. Nixon put her finger on the problem when she told reporters wednesday that she has been "Talking it up" with her husband to appoint a woman to the high bench. She said that "If we don't get one this time, they're certainly grooming for them next time."

She mentioned the three women that Nixon has appointed to lower courts--Cornelia G. Kennedy of the Federal District Court in Michigan, and Sylvia Bacon and Normalie H. Johnson of the Superior Court of the District of Columbia. Only Mrs. Kennedy is considered a plausible choice, and, for a male nominee, her credentials would be considered thin.

The obvious choice would have to be Shirley M. Jufstedler, the nation's highest ranking woman jurist, who sits on the United States Court of Appeals in San Francisco. She is so highly regarded that during the past year she delivered both the Holmes lecture at Harvard and the Cardozo Lecture in New York--roughly the equivalent of playing in the world series and the super bowl in the same year.

Other distinguished possible candidates are Dorothy Nelson, Dean of the School at the University of Southern California, Herma Hill Kay, Professor of Law at Berkeley, and Soia Mentschikoff, a law professor at the University of Chicago. None have demonstrated sufficient judicial inflexibility to be expected to stand hitched in the conservative camp after confirmation.

There are, of course, other considerations in replacing Harlan. His retirement leaves no representative from New York, which traditionally has a seat. Nixon also ruffled feelings when he appointed Blackmun, a protestant to fill the "Jewish seat" vacated by Abe Fortas. Finally, Nixon believes in filling high judicial offices with republicans.

This has prompted speculation that the nomination could go to Rita Hauser, a prominent New York republican woman lawyer of Jewish-Protestant parentage. Nixon appointed her to be a United Nations representative, but her age--37--seems to make her an unlikely replacement for the 72-year-old Harlan. Also, Mrs. Hauser once proposed that people of the same sex should be allowed to marry--a proposal that appears to set her apart from the staid tradition of prior Nixon appointees.

A final possibility is Mary Gardner Jones, a New York republican who serves on the Federal Trade Commission. Again, she has gained a reputation as a moderate that might make Nixon shy away.

There are, of course, many other women lawyers, and Nixon who has not let anonymity prevent him from making Supreme Court nominations in the past, could come up with one that fits his conservative mold.

But he may conclude that the concept of a woman Supreme Court Justice is an idea whose time has not yet come--until another of the Court's liberals steps down and it would be safe to take a chance on appointing a woman.

The Most Important Test

Monday could be a bitter day. The Student Life Council will be in session for the first time this year, passing judgement on Stephan's first. It will be a difficult job for the SLC. Administration members - perhaps all of them - will be pressing for capitulation to the Board of Trustees. Notre Dame's own Privy Council, the Board of Trustees, will be wearing apparent power, absent but visible. The temptation to weaken, to compromise, will be there, solid and tempting.

The Student Life Council must not compromise. Superficially, the issue on Monday will be drinking and parietal hours. In reality, there is only one issue, and that is the Student Life Council.

Briefly, it can do one of two things. It can capitulate to the Board of Trustees and recognize their power, or it can defy the Board of Trustees and establish its own power.

We think the second course of action would be the better one. Students, faculty, and administrators working every day with this University are infinitely more qualified to run Notre Dame than a group of lawyers, bankers, and financiers, otherwise unconnected to each other or to here.

When the Student Life Council receives the sanctions set down by the ad hoc committee, it must reject those guidelines, and it must reject the authority that set down those guidelines.

When the Student Life Council officially receives the Trustee's rejection of their Hall Life Report of last year, it must ignore that rejection, and ignore the authority which authored that rejection.

To do otherwise would be to affirm, once and for all, that the Trustees run the school all by themselves; that student voice will be heard when the Trustees want to listen.

To do otherwise would mean the sunset of student rights at Du Lac.

Here are the addresses and telephone numbers of the nine student members of the Student Life Council. We urge you to speak briefly to your representative, and let your feelings be known.

the rap center - help for your hassles

The Rap Center is a switchboard and community service operation run by the people of the South Bend area. Its purpose is to provide crisis-intervention and referrals for any problem. The center is located in a purple-and-orange storefront at 209 Western Avenue, one half block east of Sears.

The idea for a place like the Rap Center was floating around several years ago when the need became apparent for a place which could provide short term help for hassles in people's lives. Also discussed were plans for a referral center and a drug help center. These ideas started to come together in the summer of 1970 when the South Bend Jaycees funded the phone and walk-in storefront on Western Avenue which became known as the Rap Center.

Through last fall a number of people began to work there and the physical plant was organized. In December, after a shakeup in the group, a new directorate began to get things together. Since that time, a coherent, trained staff has grown up, functioning administrative machinery has developed, and the center has taken an independent, responsible place in the community. The center is now funded through contributions from the people and has its own legal and psychological resource personnel.

The major special function of the Rap Center is its experience with drug problems. Most of the staff members are freaks with personal backgrounds in the drug culture. These people can help with bummer and overdose situations, talk about drug use problems, and provide factual information about drugs in use today. The Rap Center opposes the use of heroin and the abuse of death drugs ranging from alcohol to barbiturates to speed. The use of non-toxic drugs is not discouraged in every instance. Drugs can be seen as a legitimate part of growth, and any drug problem is treated as a life problem. Only when drugs inhibit human functioning is their use discouraged.

The Rap Center's main concern is assistance and communication with everyday problems of living. Staff members are chosen for their ability to relate to the problems of others, and are trained to listen to other people creatively. Anyone can go in or call to talk about what is hassling him or her. The center has a complete list of referrals for a number of situations. Free draft and legal counseling, pregnancy and abortion information, medical or psychiatric help can be reached through the center. If the people there cannot help you, they can find someone who can. The Rap Center tends to know a good deal of miscellaneous information, so if you want to know something or just want to talk, it may be able to help.

During the last year there have been many hassles about who is entitled to work at the center, and a training program has been established. Each trainee must take a ten hour course taught by center personnel on drug, legal, and psychiatric aspects of the place. The trainee must then do three weeks of on-the-job work at the center, eight hours a week. If these prerequisites are fulfilled, the active staff may decide it would enjoy working with the trainee, and he or she will be voted on the staff. Work at the center demands revolutionary responsibility, dedication, and creativity.

Future plans are already taking shape. The center ran a series of rock festivals this summer and hopes to continue them this fall. Research has been done on an extensive counterculture library. A free clinic and food cooperative are being discussed. These plans will become realities if funds become available.

If anyone has a hassle or is interested in what the Rap Center is doing, you can walk in or call anytime from 10 am to 2 am every day. The address is 209 Western Avenue. The phone is 289-7986.

take note

Towards the far side of November, Juggler, Notre Dame's journal of literature, will once again be presenting the finest in campus-produced poetry and prose. With this date in mind, the editors are now accepting manuscripts from any member of the University community.

Although the magazine has become most noted for its poetry, especially in the last few years, the editors wish to emphasize that Juggler also wishes to include short drama and fiction. The non-fiction section of the journal is also to be expanded to include essays on the fine and performing arts; as well as those dealing with literary topics. These innovations will result, hopefully, in a new realization of the magic of the written word.

Subscriptions to Juggler are now available at the outrageously low price of $2.00 for this year's three big issues - this deal is no mean and paltry thing!

All manuscripts and subscription orders should be sent to:

before the last man

While the Great Crackdown has been gathering all the headlines, a more basic question has slowly been gaining attention.

Will Notre Dame survive the coming world depression? It was last Tuesday evening that we decided there should be one. It seemed like a great idea. Since then I've been looking into the possibilities. Paul Goodman was at the 1st one and says you can have a good time. All you need is a meal, a bed, and some friends.

A leading theorist, Patrick McManus, explained it like this. Before the last depression everyone put their faith in business. Things were going capitolly until '29. When the stockmarket fell it was depressing for almost everyone. The president persuaded the people that everything would be all right if they would just start putting stock in the government. Government and business merged. It has grown into the horrifying monolith that we now see. But, McManus claims, it can't last. The people will lose faith in them, too. Wage-price controls are like a band-aid on a slashed jugular vein. The whole structure is about to topple. The result will be the second great depression.

In the midst of our discussion, someone interjected, "Notre Dame survived the last depression, why not this one?" The reason it will probably fall is closely related to our desire for the depression. All the artificial structures will fall. Yet no one will starve. The fields will still be there. The pressures for success and wealth will dissipate. Study and art will return to their natural habitat. It's easy to understand that Notre Dame, Harvard, Berkeley, Holy Cross Junior College will all fall with the structure that supports them. It's possible they'll change. But at a university where weeks are spent on the question "Is it moral to have a girl in your room at 12:01 on Tuesday?" it seems highly unlikely (and our questions seems much less absurd). As Ricardo one said, "The only thing that doesn't depress me is a depression."

stephen stills 2 - asking questions

If one accepts the premise that the state of rock right now is as confused as it has ever been, then perhaps we can approach "Stephen Stills 2" as a true representation of that confusion. Back in 1967, the last time of pure confusion, with everyone seaching, Buffalo Springfield emerged out of the west coast gliding in on waves of vocal harmony, solid tunes, and hope. They succumbed to inner dissension and hard rock soon after, but the individuals flourished in a number of later efforts. Steve Stills (then) was the force of Springfield, the writing, voice and guitar all claiming an individuality which apparently has not been able to be submerged within a group.

Leaving Crosby, Stills, Nash and Young to patch into themselves again fairly soon, a look at Stills (now Stephen) reveals the same qualities, even more developed in writing, and remarkably consistent in the more technical skills. But then is the same as now--the overall artistic approach which the reatest rock-people have managed to achieve, even those in his own circle, has not come together for him Neil Young, another Springfield-born talent, lacks the amazing virtuosity of Stills instrumentally and in the music writing phase, yet ever since "Broken Arrow" Young has found an individual form suited perfectly to his intense imagination, and has driven relentlessly on to work within it until his latest two solo albums. "Neil Young" and "After the Gold Rush", can be termed real masterpieces. This same kind of positive, defined direction is evident to listeners of Graham Nash and David Crosby, both of whom are talented musicians but who do not have all of Stills' capacities.

Sweet Stephen is continuing to ask questions of himself, possibly to find that direction he needs, and unevenness results. He appears at his best alone, with spare, clean accompaniment, like "Fishes and Scorpions", or the gem of "2", "Singin' Call". (What remains for me his best moment, "Black Queen", on the previous solo work, was done completely by himself on one take--I have a beautiful mental picture of that scene, leaning back from his old Martin, filling every riff with a sort of tortured glory.)

Contrasting those cuts, the Memphis Horns blare out on "Ecology" and his voice and guitar are lost in the frenzied production, the height of futility. Somewhere in between, he finds the right combinations in "Change Partners" and "Sugar Babe", which are important in their instant success--he still can reach most of the people with out sacrificing too much, and these cuts carry the rest of the album to all the stereos of America. "Marianne" and "Nothin' to Do but Today" are fun rockers, and nothing more need be said to enjoy them. The unevenness of "2" is to me either a sign of hope or dismay--it is probable that the experiments can help Stills move toward an integration of his own talents, but it is a possibility that the man is unable to find the direction needed to make himself into an artist. On the inside cover, his arm points to something cut out of the picture. I hope it's the next mountain, not empty space.

Campaign trail for HHH again?

(c) 1971 New York Times News Washington, Sept. 23 - Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey has moved to the brink of another bid for the Democratic Presidential nomination.

In a luncheon interview with reporters of the New York Times today, the Minnesota democrat said he had decided to "take a stronger look, a little more perceptive look" at the situation. As a result, he went on, he plans to step up his travel schedule, commission polls and prepare for an active candidacy next year. "I will really put a few of my chips on the line between now and the end of the year," the former Vice-President said.

Although he left open the possibility that he would decide in January to give up his attempt, Humphrey left little doubt in his listeners' minds that he thought he would run—and that he thought he had a good chance to win.

Humphrey, the unsuccessful democratic Presidential nominee in 1968, had been saying for months that he would lie back until the spring of 1972, waiting for the field of hopefuls to sort itself out.

But today he said that rather than waiting for the California and New York primaries in June, he might well enter several scheduled for May—such as the District of Columbia on May 2, West Virginia on May 9 and Oregon on May 23.

The Senator's comments further muddled the already confusing Democratic Presidential picture. Because he and Sen. Edmund S. Muskie of Maine tend to draw support from the same centrist constituency, Humphrey's candidacy would threaten Muskie most.

The Maine Democrat has already been hampered in fundraising efforts by the reluctance of former Humphrey contributors to do anything until Humphrey's plans for 1972 have been clarified.

However Muskie could attain a commanding position before Humphrey faces his first test, if the Minnesotan sticks to his strategy.

He said that he would enter the first six primaries, which take place in New Hampshire, Florida, Wisconsin, Rhode Island, Massachusetts and Pennsylvania in March and April, where his name would almost automatically go on the ballot. Humphrey said he would not file an affidavit of non-candidacy but simply announce that he was unable to mount a costly campaign.

Both Florida and Wisconsin would list Humphrey on their ballots if he seemed a bona fide candidate, and a refusal to campaign there could cripple his chances later in the year, a fact that Humphrey acknowledged.

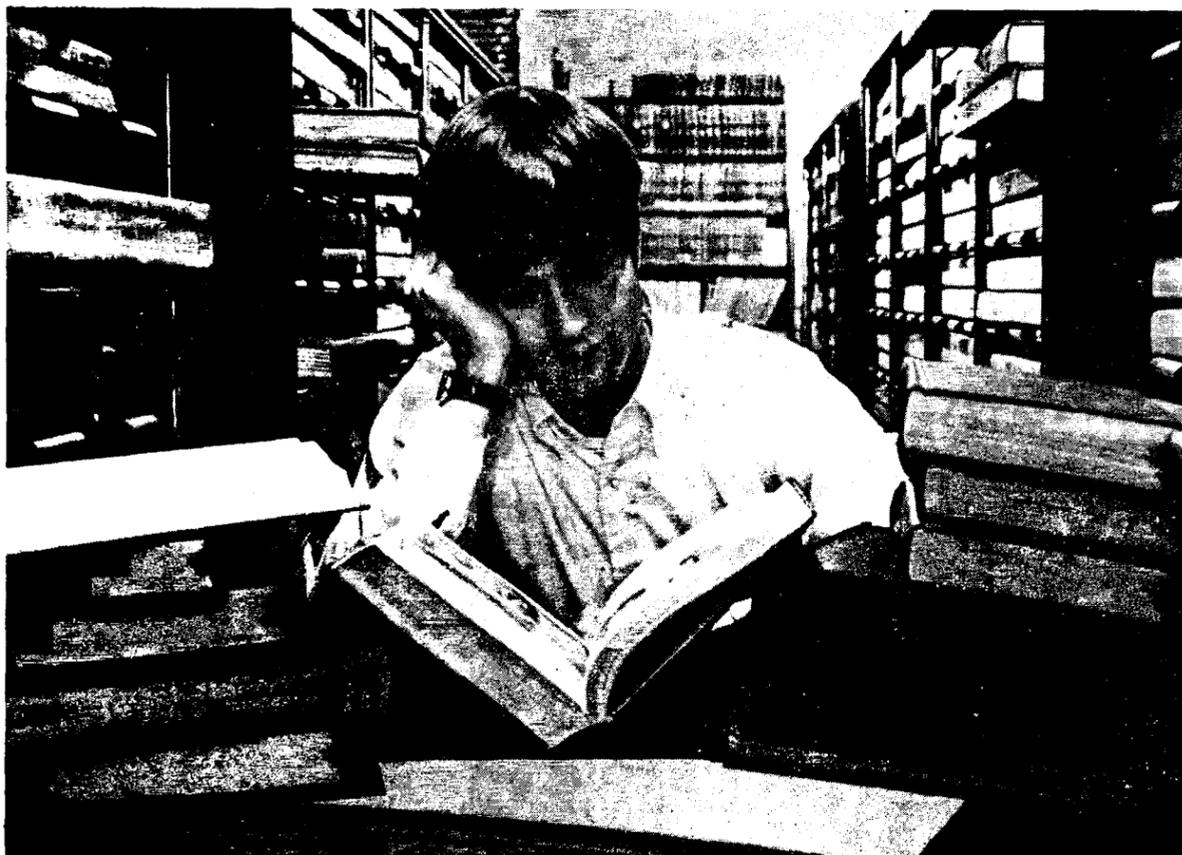

The former Vice President, effervescent and obviously delighted to be talking presidential politics again, asserted that "There will not be a consensus (on a presidential candidate) among democrats before the National Convention opens."

Although he refused to discuss Muskie in specific terms, his comment indicated that he felt that Muskie would be unable to lock up the nomination during the primaries. Two of his close associates argued that Muskie, even now, was not the frontrunner, noting that recent Gallup polls showed Humphrey, Muskie and Sen. Edward M. Kennedy making about the same showing when matched with Nixon.

"He doesn't think Muskie is likely to make it," said one aide.

One indication of Humphrey's decision has been his sudden interest in Minnesota politics, where he has moved strongly to assure himself control of that state's delegation to the national convention.

Boilermakers, ND renew rivalry

by Jim Donaldson
Sports Editor

Last year, Notre Dame partisans were looking forward to the Purdue game with a frenzy that bordered on blood lust.

Several hundred people turned out on the North Quad on the Thursday night before the game to shout themselves hoarse at a "pre-rally rally". And on Friday night, the Irish faithful almost took Stepan Center apart. They wanted a victory over the Boilermakers, the team that beat Notre Dame three straight seasons. Ara Parseghian did something he'd never done before at Notre Dame - he

And he delivered. The Irish avenged three consecutive bitter losses to Purdue by belting the Boilermakers 48-0 in Notre Dame Stadium. It was a day for rejoicing.

This year, the attitude on campus is different. Many people feel the Boilermakers are no longer Notre Dame's special nemesis and are looking past Purdue to other, "bigger" games.

Parseghian and the Irish aren't underrating the Boilermakers, however. They're aware that this year, in the 43rd renewal of the rivalry, Purdue wants revenge. And the Boilermakers are out to get it in front of a sellout crowd of 69,200 in Ross-Ade Stadium - a place where Notre Dame hasn't won since 1961.

"Our scouts were very impressed with Purdue last Saturday," Parseghian commented earlier this week. "They are very much improved on offense."

The Boilermakers scored 35

points in a losing effort against the Washington Huskies in their season opener last weekend.

Directing the Purdue offensive machine is junior Gary Danielson. With Danielson at the helm, the Boilermakers picked up 383 yards in total offense, of which Danielson accounted for 209.

Danielson, who started the Boilermakers' last four 1970 games, connected on 11 of 23 passes against the Huskies, including an 80-yard touchdown bomb to halfback Darryl Stingley, good for 183 yards. Danielson also ran 43 yards for a touchdown on a keeper play, so he's a man to be reckoned with.

Danielson gives Purdue an aerial threat, something they were sorely lacking last season when workhorse sophomore halfback Otis Armstrong rushed for 1009 yards, 30 more than the Boilermakers gained as a team through the air.

Armstrong's '70 performance broke Leroy Keyes' school rushing record and this year he's supposed to be even better. Against Washington he carried the ball 19 times, gained 121 yards and scored a touchdown. He can catch the ball too, (13 receptions in '70) and he is a break-away threat from anywhere on the field.

Stingley is another offensive standout in the Boilermaker backfield. Purdue's leading pass receiver last season, making 23 grabs, he has been switched from split end to halfback this year by second-year coach Bob DeMoss. He gained 34 yards in four carries against Washington and caught three passes, good for 98 yards.

Fullback Ron North, a strong runner, rounds out the Purdue backfield.

Junior Rick Sayers has beaten out veteran Ashley Bell for the starting spot at split end for the Boilermakers. Bell is relegated to backup duty behind Mike Cota at tight end.

Purdue's interior line possesses good size, although most of the players have switched positions this fall. Bob Hoidahl (219) returns at center but guards Mike Williams (218) and Ken Watkins (230) and tackles Tom Luken (237), a pre-season All American pick and Tim Huxhold (230) all played other positions in '70. Williams and Watkins were centers and Huxhold and Luken were guards.

The Boilermaker defense yielded 38 points to Sonny Sixkiller's Huskies but did record some positive statistics last Saturday. They managed to intercept four of Sixkiller's passes and dropped Huskie runners behind the line of scrimmage 11 times. The Boilermakers' "D" is big, too.

Two standouts, senior Jim Teal and junior Rick Schaviatello, man the other two linebacking spots. The pair combined for 32 stops against Washington.

The Riveters' secondary is comprised of soph Carl Capria at cornerback, junior Chuck Piebes (who started at quarterback against the Irish last season) at safety, Arnold Cater, a senior, at halfback, and senior Charlie Potts will be the "ripper".

The Boilermaker defense will provide the key to Purdue's upset hopes. If the Boilermakers can stop Notre Dame's strong running attack and force the Irish to pass, then a good rush by Purdue's big front line might be enough to rattle the Irish signal callers.

Coach DeMoss is aware that his club will have a tough time doing this however and is prepared for a difficult encounter.

"Notre Dame has the same people that trampled us last year returning to its defense and we will need a supreme effort from our offensive line to give our backs breathing room," he said.

"On offense they defy you to stop their power running game. Their backs are big and quick and they showed they had plenty of them last week."

"Notre Dame is a great football team," he concluded.

The Irish impressed a number of people with their showing against Northwestern, even Dan Jenkins of Sports Illustrated. But despite their romp past one of the tougher teams in the Big Ten, coach Parseghian wasn't entirely pleased with his club's performance.

"Our offense needs improvement," he said. "They made a lot of mistakes Saturday. I was very pleased with our defense, though. They got the ball for the offense in outstanding field position a number of times."

With the exception of halfback Ed Gulyas, out of action with a broken leg, the Irish will go with the same starting lineup they did against Northwestern, although it's questionable whether Willie Townsend, who saw considerable action against the Wildcats at split end, will play against Purdue.

The defensive unit is at full strength and that bodes ill for the Boilermakers. The front line of Walt Patulski, Fred Swendson, Greg Marx and Mike Kadish limited Northwestern to just 37 yards rushing and continually harassed Wildcat quarterback Daigneau last Saturday and will be out to do the same this weekend to Purdue.

The linebacking crew of Eric Patton, Jim Musuraca, Jim O'Malley and Rick Thomann is set to go, as is the veteran secondary of Clarence Ellis, Ralph Stepaniak and Mike Crotty.

Offensively, Parseghian is once again planning to shuttle quarterbacks Bill Etter and Pat Steenberge.

"I thought they turned in an overall fine performance," Parseghian commented. "I'm going to continue platooning them until one demonstrates he should be the top guy. I feel that each compliments the other."

Neither Steenberge nor Etter turned in a statistically impressive outing against Northwestern, although Etter ran well, but the pair did get the Irish into the end zone four times and points, not statistics, win ball games.

Bobby Minnix and Larry Parker will be vying for Gulyas' vacated halfback spot. Bill Gallagher again will start at right half and Andy Huff will get the nod at fullback.

All-American split end Tom Gatewood has recovered from a bruise sustained Saturday and will start against Purdue. Mike Creaney will be at tight end for the Irish, Jim Humbert and John Dampeer will start at tackle, Frank Pomarico and John Kondrck will be the guards and veteran Dan Novakov will man the pivot position.

The winner of tomorrow's game will take possession of the Shillelagh Trophy. Although the Irish hold a 24-16-2 edge in the series, the Boilermakers have won the Shillelagh in nine of the 14 years the teams have battled for the trophy.

Parseghian is wary of the Boilermakers and expects that, "We'll have our hands full." But Purdue has beaten the Irish four of the seven years Parseghian's been at Notre Dame and it doesn't seem likely that Parseghian and the Irish will miss the opportunity to square the count.

Football Picks

The third weekend of the college football season is upon us and this Saturday's action includes some key games between high-ranking clubs, such as Ohio State vs. Colorado and Tennessee vs. Auburn, and traditional encounters like Texas vs. Texas Tech, Princeton vs. Rutgers, and Notre Dame vs. Purdue. The Irish Eye calls the outcome of these and other games this weekend the way we see them:

Notre Dame over Purdue - The Boilermakers may have to swallow a few drinks of the same name to ease their pain Saturday night. This Irish victory won't be as easy, or as sweet, as last year's but it'll be win number two all the same.

Alabama over Florida - The Crimson Tide is on the rise.

Georgia Tech over Army - The Tech eleven should have no problem taking apart Army's broken down football machine.

Tennessee over Auburn - Both clubs won patsy openers last weekend but they get down to the nitty-gritty tomorrow. Auburn has Pat Sullivan and Terry Beasley but Tennessee has a great defense and the advantage of playing in front of all those Vol supporters in Knoxville.

So. Cal. over Illinois - No problem for the Trojans. Illinois has Bob Blackman now but still no ballplayers.

LSU over Wisconsin - The Badgers are playing good ball this season but they can't cope with the Tigers.

No. Carolina over Maryland - The Tarheels should step on the Terrapins.

Oklahoma over Pittsburgh - If the Panthers can win this one than Pitt is well on its way to reaching their former heights of glory, but I think the Sooners are better.

Wake Forest over Miami - Wake Forest is the defending ACC champion and has a strong team returning. They also have the home field advantage so things look bleak for Fran Curci's Hurricanes.

Michigan over UCLA - The Bruins don't have the same bite on the gridiron they do on the hardwood. Loss number three coming up for UCLA, win number three for the Wolverines.

Northwestern over Syracuse - Alex Agase will get his Wildcats on the win trail this weekend.

Texas over Texas Tech - The Longhorns still reign supreme in the Southwest Conference.

Princeton over Rutgers - The Tigers are the favorite in this tradition-packed contest. Princeton and Rutgers first met 102 years ago, playing the first intercollegiate football game in 1869. Rutgers won that game but they won't be so lucky tomorrow.

Nebraska over Texas A&M - This won't be the week the Irish usurp the Huskers at the top of the polls. Devaney's Red Machine should chalk up another victory.

Upset of the Week:

Colorado over Ohio State - The Buffaloes have already beaten LSU in Baton Rouge. There's no reason why they can't stop the Buckeyes in Columbus.

Chinese problems continue

(C) 1971 New York Times
 New York, Sept. 23 -- Western diplomatic reports said today that there appeared to be a continuing political crisis in China.

According to information reaching Washington and Western Governments that maintain embassies in Peking, the reported curtailment on military and civilian air activity over China remained in effect as of today.

Reports in Communist newspapers in Eastern Europe said that basic political changes might be in the making in China.

A commentary in the Warsaw newspaper, Zycie Warszawy, suggested that Premier Chou En-Lai's influence in the Peking hierarchy could further increase as a result of what the newspaper said were impending changes.

Most western analysts discarded the earlier speculation that the communist party leader Chairman Mao Tse-Tung, may be dead or seriously ill, but authoritative diplomatic reports said that the question of the succession to Mao still appeared to be at the center of what many specialists regard as a power struggle.

credible" information from Peking indicated that the status of the Defense Minister, Lin Biao, as Mao's designated successor is at issue.

Chou was at the Peking airport today to greet Penn North, the Premier of the exiled Cambodian regime, on his return from a tour of Northeast China.

This, reported by the Peking radio, was Chou's first public appearance in three days. Specialists noted, also, that he was accompanied by the deputy Chief of Staff of the Armed Forces, Wang Hsin-Ting, rather than by the Chief of Staff, Huang Yung-Sheng, who usually appears on such occasions.

Huang, believed to be close to Premier Chou, has not been mentioned in the Peking media

These reports said that "highly the Italian government, could have led to classification of the hotel as a brothel by the Italian government, stated the students.

When Sr. Alma visited the program last spring, and discovered the law was not being enforced, she announced her decision to expel the men from the Hotel. Later, however, she apparently reconsidered and agreed to let the men remain, cautioning students "to be discreet," according to several St. Mary's students.

Within three days of Sr. Alma's departure from Rome, however, the hotel management decreed the men would have to find other accommodations.

Other students in the program last year pin the expulsion on a jar of peanut butter. Apparently a gendarmery of police was summoned to the hotel after a jar of peanut butter whizzing out of a hotel window just missed several pedestrians below.

Drugs and the inability of the former resident programs directors to control the program were also cited as problems.

The Notre Dame students in the program were refunded their money by the Tiziano on a pro rata basis ($578) and moved into another hotel

Shilts vs dogs

When asked his rationale behind the move, Shilts said that he thought that the clubs are just hurting each other by having a grill "every 15 feet."

There were 23 stands counted. Shilts felt that it would be better to allow only a few stands each week, and for these to do very good business, instead of everybody making only a little.

No survey was made by Shilts of the amount of profit the various concessions have been making, however, before this was proposed as the basis of the action.

Shilts was asked if this move was made to stem any bad atmosphere which he thought might be developing due to the heavy commercialization: "I do not think that is the case, exactly. I just want this place to have some class--as much class as possible.
