In Howard address

Hesburgh stresses need for co-operation

by Ann McCarry

"If you want girls on campus you can't put them in tents," Rev. Theodore Hesburgh, University president said to several unhappy residents of Walsh and Badin Halls in the Howard Hall chapel last night.

The residents were among a crowd of approximately 100 students that gathered to hear the University's president discuss topics which ranged from coeducation to the future of Notre Dame, to the needs of the law school.

Notre Dame's President agreed with the decision to house women in Badin and Walsh and disputed the view that the law school had not received enough aid from the university, saying it had received a "disproportionate" amount of money. He expressed his commitment to merger and said he felt something could be worked out between the two schools.

On the selection of Walsh and Badin as the new women's residence halls, Fr. Hesburgh remarked that he had expected feedback.

"If you want the value of girls on campus, you have to have static." If I were over there," he told one Walsh resident, "I wouldn't agree with it either."

"You assume that no matter what halls you choose you are going to get static."

Fr. Hesburgh supported the decision of the committee headed by Fr. Blantz and Fr. Burtchaell and explained the principles on which the committee based its choices of Walsh and Badin. The halls were chosen primarily on the basis of their location and size, he claimed. The location of the halls near the center of the campus will provide for more effective protection of the 325 girls, Fr. Hesburgh cited, who will enroll next fall as the University's first coeds. The committee also concluded, according to the President, that it would be better to choose two smaller halls so as not to concentrate the female population in one larger hall.

Fr. Hesburgh stressed the need for the cooperation of all the hall presidents in efforts to comfortably move the displaced residents into other halls. "We'll do everything possible to see that the guys get a reasonably good deal."

Fr. Hesburgh also reminded students that in the next four years, while the enrollment of female students is being expanded, the same procedure will be followed every year.

The president also vetoed the idea of coed dorms.

"The Trustees don't want coed dorms and neither do I," Fr. Hesburgh continued saying that he had decided after research on the subject that coed dorms do not provide the privacy both men and women need. He cited promiscuity as another argument against co-habitation.

Fr. Hesburgh said that although at the present time there are no definite plans to build any new residence halls, the expanded enrollment of women might necessitate a new building in the future. He expects the general enrollment to be maintained with perhaps a slight increase due to coeducation.

One student questioned Fr. Hesburgh on the sentiment among members of the law school that the University had not done all it could have for the school.

Fr. Hesburgh disagreed with this statement citing figures which upheld his statement that Notre Dame had spent more on the law school than on any other college of the university. He said that a "disproportionate amount of money" has been allocated to the school both in scholarships and in faculty salaries.

In regard to the new addition to the present law college, Fr. Hesburgh said that he would like to see a completely new law building at ND, but he explained that at the present time this is not feasible. The

The Notre Dame Student Senate approved Student Body Presidential election rules last night that will allow for voluntary coalitions of Notre Dame and Saint Mary's candidates, but will not mandate the "four-man block" campaign that Saint Mary's approved Wednesday night.

The Student Government Election Committee had come away from a meeting with the SMC Election Committee last Sunday without reaching a compromise on the question of the election. The Notre Dame Committee recommended no merger of tickets, and the committee report was accepted by a 23 to 8 vote.

Defending the "four-way street" was Darlene Gallina, SMC Assembly representative and member of the election committee.

Miss Gallina argued that the cooperation that was lacking this year between the two student governments could only be assured by having both sets of candidates come from the same ticket.

Also, she added, "Regardless of the status of the merger between the two schools, we are all students and have certain issues in common."

Stay Senator T. C. Treanor raised two objections to the plan.

He pointed out that one of the schools could be saddled with a minority president, and that there would always be issues the two student bodies did not hold in common.

Dave Jones, Senator from Breen-Phillips Hall, also argued against the proposal to merge the election, saying, "The goal of the election is to get the best candidates from each campus."

Jones pointed out that this would not necessarily be the case with the block ticket.

Miss Gallina and several Senators spoke for the measure, but the Election Committee recommendation passed, 23 to 8.

In other election-related business, the Senate moved the dates for the election and the campaign seven days forward because of Junior Parents' Weekend, which is scheduled for March 3-5.

The voting will now take place Tuesday, February 29.

Campaigning will begin at noon, February 23, and end at 2 am on the 29th.

A run-off election, required if no candidate receives a majority in the first election, will take place Thursday, March 2.

Added to the ballot this year will be a selection titled "None of the above."

This was done on a motion by Sorin Hall Senator "Lefty" Ruschman.

According to this plan, if "None of these" tallies over 50 per cent of the vote, a new election will be held, and none of the candidates from the first election may be placed on the ballot.

A motion sponsored by Student Body President John Barkett "recommending" that all candidates in the election find running-mates on the other campus passed by a 24 to 8 vote.

In other business, a resolution endorsing a Prisoner-of-War bracelet sale on campus received Senate approval with two dissenting votes.

The bracelet sale, sponsored by Chuck Leader, is intended as a show of concern for the welfare of POW's in Vietnam. Each bracelet carries the name of one American soldier missing in action or known to be a prisoner in Southeast Asia.

Gallina: Cooperation between ND and SMC lacking.

Treanor: Possible disagreements on some issues between student bodies.

Mardi Gras nets a cool 127 thousand since 1963

by Noli Kane

As Mickey's hand moves toward 7 o'clock, bankers shove stacks of $5 bills to card dealers; concession sellers pop corn and spin cotton candy; the roulette wheel is greased, and the doors are unlocked to Mardi Gras 1972, at Stepan Center, Feb. 5th through 12th.

"Jiminy Crickets," thinks the student, on entering Stepan Center. The interior is transformed into a Mid-America Disneyland complete with dwarves, Peter Pan and Tinkerbell, Pinocchio and other Disney favorites. Black jack, poker, roulette, movies, picture taking booths, crap games and snack bars all tug at the attention and purse strings.

Admittedly, an evening at Mardi Gras is not cheap - but it isn't intended to be. All profits go to charities such as Manasa, Neighborhood Student Help Program and Sr. Marita's Day School.

Raffling off a '72 Grand Prix should rake in the most cash, although this year's raffle is falling behind the expectations of Greg Stepic, General Chairman of Mardi Gras. To date, the raffle has collected $14,000.

Finances

Since 1963, financial records show Mardi Gras has made $127,000 for charity. Mardi Gras '66, '67, and '68 reaped fat profits of $22,000 apiece.

Then came the financial disaster of 1969 when the carnival lost $3,500 and paid its debts by borrowing money from the Student Government. Mardi Gras tried again in 1970 and netted $11,000.

The slump in profits was caused by students' growing apathy towards the purpose of Mardi Gras, which is to earn money for charity, according to Stepic. "Mardi Gras is worthwhile only if everyone gets involved in it," he said.

Mardi Gras has also faced dollar disaster at the hands of burglars last February and again this year. In 1971 a thief hid in Stepan Center at closing time, and stole $2,200 in bogus $5 bills. Serious loss was averted by refusing to honor the fake money for the remainder of the carnival. Officials estimated a $100 cash loss.

Sunday night the carnival was burglarized, again for $5 bills worth $2,000 in real cash. A special stamp on all money is being used this year to prevent any loss.

The colorful paper and wood booths which house the games are operated by Notre Dame halls, organizations and clubs that want to make money.

To get a booth into Stepan Center, each organization submitted a design to the architecture chairman. The best designs won a place to set up on the condition that they gave 80 per cent of their profit to charity.

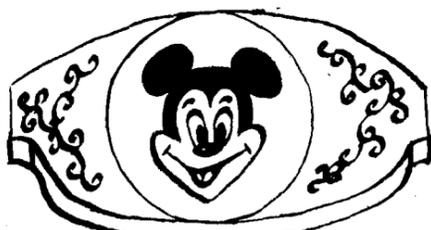

Construction of the booths began January 25, but planning and preparation starts in September when dates are cleared, raffle tickets ordered, and entertainers booked.

Earliest Records

Earliest records of Mardi Gras date to 1962, although one alumnus, reminiscing during a football game this fall, claimed there was a Mardi Gras back in 1951. And a police guard says he has patrolled Mardi Gras since he joined the force in 1958, when the carnival, then much smaller, was set up in the old fieldhouse.

Past "big concerts," at the end of Mardi Gras week, have spotlighted such groups as "The Four Tops", "Grand Funk," David Frye and the "Supremes." This year Richie Havens and the "Winter Consort" will play Sunday at 8 p.m.

Possibly unprintable musings on the shuttle bus find articulation through chattering teeth.

But there's still hope for partial sections

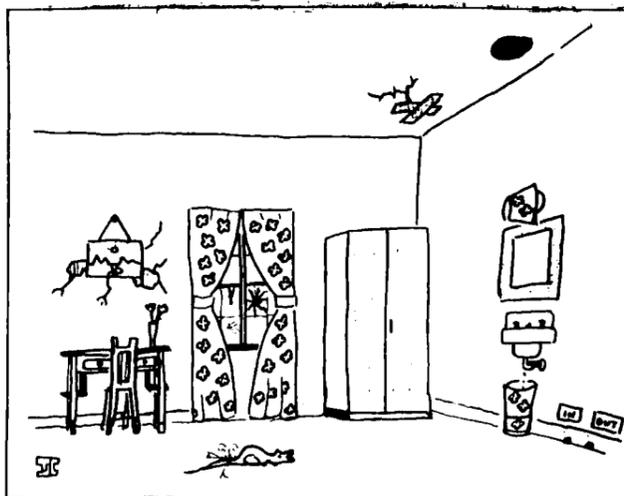

Displaced students from Badin and Walsh may be able to get rooms together in other halls around campus, director of Student Housing, Fr. Thomas E. Chambers explained yesterday. Up to ten students might be able to get adjacent rooms, the Holy Cross priest said.

However, Fr. Chambers added, nothing will be definite till the results are in on a survey of who is staying on campus, and who is moving off campus. Quotas for each hall and picking procedures will then have to be made. He also commented that he and the Hall Presidents Council will do all they can to make the move easy for the residents of Badin and Walsh.

Bill Dembinski, President of Holy Cross, said that his hall could possibly give up a group of rooms together for 6-10 students. He added that he thought other halls might have some difficulty doing this.

Agreeing with him was Ron Pogge of Alumni, who said that he was "favorable to the idea" of giving the displaced students groups of rooms. He also commented that everyone will have to sacrifice, not just the residents of Badin and Walsh.

Phil Michaels of Dillon said that giving a block of rooms would be "very difficult" for his hall. He suggested that each hall be assigned a quota of displaced students and that these students be given full rights for room picks as if they had been in the hall since they were freshmen.

There's more than one way to make a hall livable.

Reversal feasible, three Walsh residents say of dorm choices

by Pete Fries and John Klose

Walsh residents are split in their feelings regarding the recent decision to convert Walsh and Badin halls into female dormitories. All 10 residents interviewed were disappointed with the decision, but only 3 held any hope of a reversal.

Sophomore Mark Thickpenny believes a reversal is feasible because "...there are many valid reasons why Walsh is an illogical choice. Also, we think we can get the majority of the rectors on our side."

Other students, however, think their chances are slim but still intend to write to the alumni to invoke a reversal. One of these students, Ed Gray, another sophomore, said "there isn't a whole lot you can say. It's a bad decision. The ideal situation would be a university-wide pick and let the girls pick into any hall they choose. Right now it's just a little St. Mary's."

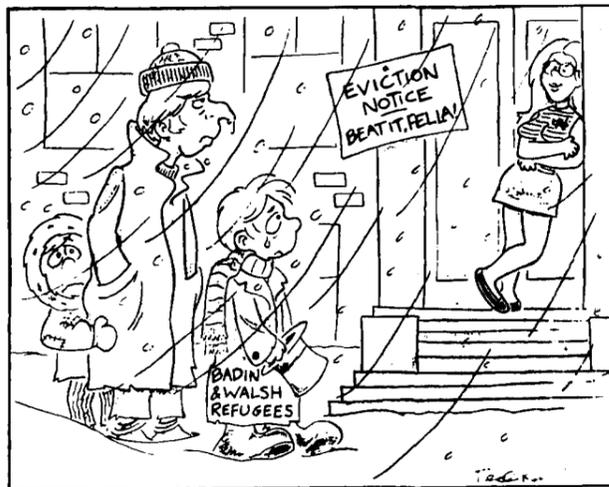

Further opposition was expressed by Don Flake who felt that the women "...should be treated just as Notre Dame students and not be given any preference."

Another one of these students is Jerry Bushelman, a sophomore who worked on the committee which studied the location of female housing. He commented that "There would be ill-feeling if it (the decision) were changed." Bushelman also felt that the members of the committee were slighted and should have been consulted in the decision.

The rest of the students interviewed are looking farther ahead to what can be done to help themselves find suitable housing. Many expressed the same feeling as that of Bob "Bruiser" Fanning a junior resident of Walsh who will "take it in stride and see about what the university does in relocating the students." All the residents felt that the university should have made suitable arrangements for displaced students.

world briefs

(c) 1972 The New York Times

Paris--The chief American delegate at the Vietnam peace talks refused to agree to a date for the next session and accused North Vietnam of organizing a rally near Paris to place "intolerable" pressure on the negotiators.

Saigon--Military spokesmen in Saigon reported increased enemy attacks on South Vietnamese positions in the central highlands and the heaviest American air strikes in six months in retaliation for the attacks. The central highlands is where officials have predicted a major enemy offensive during the Tet holiday.

Washington--The Price Commission ordered privately owned utilities not to raise their rates for one month pending commission hearings on "more explicit" guidelines on utility rates. In another action, the commission temporarily rescinded part of a rate increase granted the New York Telephone Co.

Washington--President Nixon, at his news conference, said he had ordered a study on whether a constitutional amendment or congressional action would be needed to stop the extensive busing ordered by courts to achieve school integration. The President has long opposed busing.

Washington--Sharpening his attack on the Democratic presidential candidates who disagree with his Vietnam peace plan, President Nixon said that his critics might have to share the blame for the failure of the Paris talks. He said criticism of his policies encourages the communists to wait until after the presidential election before seriously negotiating.

Riehle fed up

Shoplifters to go

Shoplifting in the Notre Dame bookstore will be a little more costly now that Dean of Students Rev. James Riehle plans to immediately suspend any student convicted of the crime.

"My patience is at an end," commented Fr. Riehle. "I plan to threaten the heck out of the students now."

Fr. Riehle recently announced that "any student apprehended and convicted of stealing ... will be suspended for the current semester."

Since December 1, 1971, the Dean has talked to 70 students who were apprehended attempting to steal articles in the bookstore ranging from 49 cent Bic pens to $20 textbooks. One was suspended while the others were put on disciplinary probation.

"From now on, there won't be any more second offenders," remarked Fr. Riehle.

The great increase in the number of shoplifters caught in the past two months is attributed to the stricter security measures being employed in the bookstore.

Fr. Riehle said he has heard every conceivable rationalization for stealing from those already apprehended. Some told him, "it's a big joke to tell your friends you swiped something from the bookstore." Others say, "the bookstore overcharges so much that I've got a right to take things."

Almost every student apprehended for shoplifting had the money in his pocket, according to the Dean.

"I can't understand why a student would now attempt to steal from the bookstore. It's ridiculous!" exclaimed Fr. Riehle. "If a student was suspended he probably could not get into another university. It would go on his permanent record, and he could forget about any Law School or Med School in the country."

Prior to 1968 the penalty for stealing in the Notre Dame Book Store was immediate suspension upon conviction. However, Fr. Riehle considered it too severe and began a policy of disciplinary probation for first offenders with suspension upon the second offense.

The Dean is now convinced his policy failed. "It's my hope and prayer that extreme measures such as these will resolve the problem," he said.

Dance a dance for Mardi Gras

by Marlene Zloza

"Mardi Gras Super Soul," a dance in co-operation with the Mardi Gras Festivities, is scheduled for tonight, from 9:00 to 1:00, in Regina Hall. Billed as "a dance you can dance at" by its sponsors, the SMC Campus Ministry, the event will feature a local band, "The Impacts."

All proceeds from the evening will benefit the Mardi Gras fund. Admission to the dance is 50 cents, which includes refreshments. The dance is open to all ND-SMC students.

Co-ordinator Fr. Ned Reidy described the affair as "an effort to restore dancing to our culture. It will provide a chance to hear some good soul music."

If this dance is a success, the Ministry plans to sponsor others throughout the semester, added Fr. Reidy.

Nixon awaits peace response from Hanoi

by Terence Smith

(C) 1972 New York Times

Washington, Feb. 10 --

President Nixon sought today to reassure President Nguyen Van Thieu about his intentions at the Paris peace talks and simultaneously to warn North Vietnam that the allies will make no new offers until Hanoi responds to his latest proposal.

"We are not going to negotiate in a way to undercut our allies," Nixon told reporters at an impromptu news conference in his office, "Nor will we negotiate any settlement over the heads of our allies."

"We have put a proposal on the table and we are ready to negotiate it. Until and unless the enemy responds to it, there will be no more proposals and no more concessions on our part."

Nixon summoned reporters to his oval office at 4 p.m. to discuss arrangements for his for-

English grads' finals changed

by Mike Baum

Change in the University's Spring vacation schedule has caused the English Department to reschedule the Graduate students' written and oral finals, according to Prof. James Dougherty, Director of Graduate Studies.

The University's Spring Break, scheduled for two weeks at Easter would necessitate a two week delay between the written and oral finals, which are scheduled for the last week in March by department regulation, Dougherty noted.

He said that objections raised by the graduate students had caused the department to reschedule the finals to eliminate this delay, under recommendation by the Graduate Studies Department.

In the revised schedule the written finals in English will be administered from the 5th to the 8th of April, with the orals beginning the 13th. Prof. Dougherty added that the faculty favored the change when polled yesterday and Monday.

thcoming trip to China. He fielded questions on a wide range of issues and made the following points:

--he will depart for China next Thursday and will spend two days in Hawaii and one in Guam before arriving Monday on the Chinese mainland.

--He will defer any decision on the recognition of the new state of Bangladesh, formerly East Pakistan, until after his return from China. Future United States policy towards the sub-continent will be "pro-Indian, pro-Bengalese, pro-Pakistan, but mostly pro-peace."

--he has decided against any new taxes or tax increases this year. Although he intends to submit a program to replace local property taxes, the value-added tax would be used for this purpose only if a formula could be devised that would make it less regressive.

--he has ordered a study to determine whether a constitutional amendment or legislation is needed to negate the trend of recent federal court decisions requiring extensive busing to achieve integration.

Nixon vows no more proposals until word comes from Hanoi.

A "Bogus Bill"

A Secrecy Blanket

Ever hear of a secrecy blanket? It is pretty much the same as a security blanket. It is used to hide behind.

Notre Dame and St. Mary's have thrown a secrecy blanket around the recently reconvened merger talks. They have thrown a blanket around them and opened the way for them to play their little games with no outside pressure, until the second coming, or perhaps even after then.

If the people who were in these secret talks were trustworthy then there probably wouldn't be anything to worry about, but they aren't.

These people are the same ones who produced last November's abortion. These people are the same ones who muttered pieties about honor to assembled students and swore at each other in private. These are the same people who said they were honor bound not to reveal the reasons behind the unmerger and then leaked their version to every student reporter they met.

So, we have a group of essentially untrustworthy people gathered together in secrecy, making decisions that could wreck people's lives. The catch is that any decisions they make won't wreck anyone's lives but ours.

The Notre Dame and St. Mary's administration and trustees have protected themselves by having ample representation on the negotiating teams. The St. Mary's faculty is also protected by having their people present. By all indications the Notre Dame faculty neither needs nor wants a part in the proceedings.

So who do we have left. The students naturally, the people who are the first to get nailed to the wall around this place.

The secrecy policy is aimed at us. It is aimed at us so we won't find out what's going on until it's too late to do anything about it. It's aimed at us so as to prevent or forestall the kind of pressure that was exerted last year from being exerted again.

The St. Mary's administration and trustees backed down last year because the students put the pressure on them. They backed down because students kicked and screamed and threatened to take their money out of the school. They backed down because they were afraid St. Mary's would end up at a bankruptcy sale in ten years.

But that same kind of fear and that same kind of pressure won't come into play again if another adverse decision is reached. They won't come into play because if an adverse decision is reached it will be reached in secret. It will be reached in secret and if the people running the show have any kinds of smarts at all, the secrecy won't be lifted until the summer.

We're responsible for the secrecy. We're the ones who are letting them get away with it. And we'll be the ones to blame if and when another abortion is produced. And then it will be too late.

The Death of Notre Dame

As an undergraduate at Notre Dame, I always found letters from old graduates a joy to read; generally they were pathetic pleas for a return to the past, and the views expressed were so completely archaic as to render them ridiculous. Alumni were strange creatures, to be enjoyed over lunch and laughed at, but never, ever to be taken seriously. Notre Dame does not belong to them, despite all their claims to the contrary.

With this in mind, I write to you. Ex-student, one year removed. I write because I have been completely puzzled by my latest visit here. Let us leave aside any pronouncements of right or wrong, good or bad. The problem is simply this: it seems to me that between last year and this something strange has occurred, that something is substantially different. I don't understand this place at all any more; a year ago I was one who was sure he knew where things stood. Some of this can be traced to changes in me--a lot of it, in fact. But much of it has taken place right here.

Notre Dame is dead.

There is a cloud hanging over this community, a cloud which has no name but which bears a pervasive, persistent sadness. Media labels this "disillusionment;" to break it down further, it seems to me that the Notre Dame community, which remains (face it!) one of the straightest places in the country, has simply decided that if change is gonna come, so that actually working to change things faster than this "natural" schedule would allow is a waste of time.

Let me just say it. This entire merger thing, and your handling of it, is making asses out of all of you. I think by now that everybody realizes that, my God, men and women really can make it together. You know it's gonna happen. Machismo really is a thing of the past. But every time you sit down to "work out the details," machismo rears its head and shouts, "I ain't got much time left but I'm gonna fight it out to the end." In a community where there are so many enlightened people -- and visits elsewhere, to other large universities, show that archaity is by no means a Notre Dame exclusive -- in such a community, anyone who speaks with a positive view about the future, about the future we all know has got to come, is either studiously ignored or viciously put down. So in increasing numbers those students with a view of the future move off-campus, and good educators leave Notre Dame completely.

Buckminster Fuller is dead right when he says that if you wish to speak of the future in terms of radical change, the only way to keep people off your back is to project ahead fifty years; nobody much cares about what things will be like in 2020. To deal with what must be done in the immediate future is to invite scorn and ostracism.

Passivity has always been one of our strong points here. We have a new kind of alcohol now, and the ritual of stoned-out sitting between the stereo speakers has become a religious ritual as stale as an old watch-the-priest Latin mass. What once had real creative possibilities, this marijuana stuff, has for most become the 1972 version of going to Frankie's. Do-sn't the phrase "Man, we were so ripped (wasted, spaced out, fucked up) last night" have a familiar ring?

If all this seems a bit directionless, it is supposed to; remember, I am trying to describe Notre Dame as it is today, February 1972. The symptoms are everywhere. Once there literally dozens of excellent music people here, and surely there must still be; but now they play for themselves in their rooms. Walk down a campus sidewalk and notice that in this enlightened age of Aquarius it's still considered a little wierd to talk to strangers, or even smile at them. And only the bravest black man or woman would come here to study; I wouldn't.

Logic says that in the future no non-coeducational institution will be able to survive; that if you get ripped and just sit "getting into the music" for long enough, the building will get old and fall down around you: that you can only drive away so many good people from your midst before there's nobody left. And then you die. Sorry about that, it is a bit of a downer, but it is the way of the world. One gets the feeling that Notre Dame, without the fire and strength and calm and beauty of the feminine influence, without the cultural contribution of as many "minorities" as possible (in quotes because in world terms we Caucasians are a small minority), without any prick of conscience, is dying, insanely, like a man whose legs catch on fire and say's, "Far out, I've never been through the 'burn trip' before."

I began by emphasizing that Notre Dame does not belong to alumni. This ain't my place we're talking about, it's yours. And I believe I can truthfully say that I don't care what you do with it, 'cause I've got things to do. But as long as you as a community would simply rather not deal with the future in realistic terms, you are dying. And if you would rather not deal with it at all, then you, as an institution, are dead.

Two artists are having a show at the Isis gallery in the Old Fieldhouse opening February 12th. It makes one wonder why an artist would want someone to come and view his work. Is it an ego trip? Does an artist paint for himself or others? He paints for himself. He paints as he eats and breathes - to survive. Does he then show his art to express his opinions? If it is mere opinion that he wishes to express, his art will be crude; comparable to propaganda or Madison Avenue advertising. It cannot be opinion that he wants the public to see. He is driven by and driving at something more. He gives birth to an image which registers on an unconscious level. When an artist shows to the general public and not to a chosen clique, he and the viewer meet blind. The reaction, either said or unsaid, is the chord shared by each. The viewer comes in order to have that chord struck. To have the conflicts vitalized and subtly to define and redefine himself. "You are with me, I am with you--are we in the same world?" The artist's feedback is watching the public view his painting. The artist questions, "Am I on an ego trip or is there something there?"

Two streams meet to form limitless possibilities. A large stream envelops a smaller stream and demands it to accept its destiny. The small stream may accept its fate or it may resist. The possibilities of its resistance are as limitless as the streams' meeting. The small stream may form a current within the larger stream and reject the larger streams tendencies. The small stream may unite with the larger stream but retain enough of its tendencies to colour the larger stream. Each stream may cleanse or pollute the other. In this, size may be of no concern. The strength of the tendencies within one or the other becomes the deciding factor. A large clean stream is met by a small polluted stream. A stream polluted by the strength of wastes and chemicals. The large stream is helpless against this strength. It is forced to accept the pollution. The larger stream must submit to the tendencies of the smaller stream. A large mildly polluted stream is met by a small clean stream. The small stream has the strength to dissipate the pollution of the large stream. The large stream is cleansed with this dissipation. A large polluted stream meets a small clean stream. There cannot be any dissipation of the larger streams pollution. The large stream conquers the smaller stream and destroys its cleansing tendencies.

Cynthia Huff and E. M. McDonough's show is opening in the Isis gallery Saturday night at 9:00 pm. It is a show concerned with representations of masquerade, escape and death. It is evidence to the belief in the dualities of conscious and unconscious thought and feeling. These considerations are most basic to human awareness.

new addition will approximately double the size of the present school, providing a sizable increase of space in the law library.

Although a news blackout is in effect with the present merger negotiations, Fr. Hesburgh did comment saying "First of all, I believe strongly in it."

Fr. Hesburgh recognized a commitment to junior and senior St. Mary's students in ND majors. He also expressed dedication to the idea of co-exchange classes "no matter what happens."

The president continued to cite problems with the administrations of the two schools

The sources added that one of the tasks of Robert G. Attempts to reach Irving, who compiled the "autobiography," for comment were unsuccessful.

Fr. Ted says aye to drinking bill

by Ann McCarry

Notre Dame's president Father Theodore Hesburgh expressed support last night for a bill passed Wednesday by the Indiana legislature that will lower the drinking age to 18.

"If a guy's old enough to go out and get shot at, he's old enough to drink a beer," laughed Hesburgh, when asked what he thought of the bill.

Father Hesburgh did not see any big change in student life at Notre Dame because of the change in the drinking age. He noted the University "kind of jumped the gun" on the decision. The bill will also lower the minimum age for entering into contracts and business agreements to 18.

After passing the legislature, the bill now rests with Indiana's Governor Whitcomb, awaiting signature into law or gubernatorial veto.

Although he has "mixed emotions" on the new law, Whitcomb is expected to sign the bill. The Indiana legislators are believed ready to pass the bill over any veto.

last night, we were still trying."

In conclusion, the president of 20 years spoke briefly on the future of Notre Dame, and the quality of education here.

"I'm under the impression that you learn almost as much outside the classroom as you do in the classroom," said Fr. Hesburgh. He went on to define the quality of a Notre Dame education as a combination of "high competence" and compassion, a good basis for a philosophy of life. "Around here we should try to develop a society of people that care." "Whatever we do, we should try to be special," he remarked.

And a Brief Note...

Junior Don White had his underwear "ripped off" by the laundry service and he wants it back.

While many students claim that the laundry has lost their wares, this time the laundry admits it goofed. But the only compensation offered White was a pair of someone else's briefs.

"Regardless of the embarrassment," White claimed, "if the laundry doesn't respond properly, I am going to sue."

When White returned from Christmas vacation, he placed the shorts in his laundry bag along with another pair. He noticed that only one pair was returned when he picked the package up.

The laundry told White to wait a week because the missing goods would be returned in his next bundle, but they didn't appear.

Within the next three weeks, White claims to have visited the laundry office no less than three times. Each time he was told that he would be given a pair of someone else's unclaimed underwear.

"The idea doesn't really appeal to me," White said.

White has contacted the Ombudsman, student government's problem solver, and SBP John Barkett with no success.

He concluded his brief remarks with the claim that he is "only a poor college student."

Dead Sea Scrolls revived in lecture

The second lecture in the University of Notre Dame's series on the Dead Sea Scrolls will be delivered Monday (February 14) at 8 p.m. in the Memorial Library Auditorium by Dr. William H. Brownlee of Claremont Graduate School in California.

The title of his talk, which is open to the public, is "The People of God: the Qumran Community and the Early Christian Church."

Brownlee has been involved with the scrolls since 1947-48 when he was a visiting scholar at the American School of Oriental Research in Jerusalem and was one of the few scholars on hand when the ancient Jewish writings first came to light. Besides translating two of the most important of the scrolls, the "Manual of Discipline" and the "Commentary on Habakkuk," he has written "The Meaning of the Qumran Scrolls for the Bible," published by the Oxford University Press in 1964.

In addition to the public lecture, Brownlee will lead three seminars on more specialized aspects of the Qumran community.

Notre Dame's series, inaugurated last month under sponsorship of the theology department, consists of five lectures by Christian and Jewish scholars during the spring term to commemorate the 25th anniversary of the discovery of the scrolls near the Dead Sea.

The National Players of Washington, D.C., one of the nation's oldest theatrical repertory companies, will present "The Trial," an adaptation of the Frank Kafka novel, in a single performance at 8 p.m. Sunday, February 20, in O'Laughlin Auditorium of Saint Mary's College, Notre Dame, Ind.

Arousing controversy from its first appearance, "The Trial" is the story of a man, Joseph K., accused and tried for an unnamed crime. Scholars who have analyzed it have seen it a parable of guilt-ridden man, a clairvoyant vision of totalitarian society, or have transposed it into dramatic form, as Orson Welles did in his film by the same name.

Appearing in the lead at S THE Saint Mary's performance will be Alan Wade, a graduate of Northwestern University who appeared in 17 roles while a member of the school's prestigious dramatic department. He received his master's degree at Catholic University of America and was awarded the Gilbert award for best performance by an actor in "Rosencrantz & Guildenstern Are Dead."

Tickets for the Saint Mary's performance, part of the Performing Arts Series, are on sale at the O'Laughlin box office and may be reserved by calling 284-5424.

Those off-campus seniors who do not have their nominating forms by Monday or Tuesday should call the Student Union Academic Commission at 283-6244 between 1 and 5 p.m. on those afternoons.

Fennell. Director of forensics at the Toledo school is Donald Terry. The 1972 question debated was: Resolved: That greater controls should be imposed upon the gathering and utilization of information about U.S. citizens by government agencies.

Southern Illinois University was awarded third place in the tournament in a decision over a second team from Butler University.

Ice Capades will be appearing at the University of Notre Dame's Athletic and Convocation Center from Wednesday, February 16 through Sunday, February 20.

Ice Capades' scouts are constantly searching for new skating talent and auditions for new skaters in the South Bend and Michiana area will be held Friday, February 18 at 4:00 pm and immediately following the performance that evening.

Prospective skaters must be 17 to 23 years of age in order to join Ice Capades. Boys should be 5'8" to 6'2" and girls 5'2" to 5'9".

Seven performances of Ice Capades are scheduled -- Wednesday through Saturday nights at 8:00 pm. and three matinees -- Saturday at 2:00 pm. -- Sunday at 2:00 and 6:00 pm.

Fanning - ND's best ever?

by "Lefty" Ruschmann

Down in the "pits" of the Convo Center's auxiliary gym, Terry Mather's wrestlers go through their calisthenics, accompanied by rock music from the gym's record player. By the corner sits a big man, quietly going through his exercises. Mike Fanning, Notre Dame's ace heavyweight wrestler, prefers to let his record, and his coach, do the talking for him.

The record for the imposing 6'6", 265-pound freshman shows an impressive total of 17 wins without a defeat this season, with 15 of those triumphs coming by pins. Earlier this year, Mike eclipsed Phil Gustafson's school record for consecutive pins enroute to compiling a string of twelve straight.

Already he is ranked by Mather as being on a par with Dick Arrington, the finest wrestler in Notre Dame history. In 1965, Arrington placed third in the national tournament and Mather holds great promise for greater things from his young star.

Fanning, like Gustafson and Arrington before him, plays football for the Irish. Mather encourages this practice, claiming that "wrestling develops the same qualities needed to play football." As for the drain on time caused by playing two sports, Mike shrugs off the problem. "Sure, it takes a lot of time, but I like it."

Mike's introduction to the mat scene came during his sophomore year at Edison High School in Tulsa, Okla. In three Swimming and Fencing teams at home Sat.

Notre Dame's swimming and fencing teams will display outstanding records in front of the home fans this weekend.

The unbeaten Irish fencing team, 8-0 following four victories last weekend, faces highly regarded Detroit and the University of Chicago at 1:30 p.m. in the Athletic and Convocation Center on Saturday. Mike DeCicco's team has won 18 straight dual matches over the past two years but the last Irish setback was at Detroit, 15-12, exactly a year ago during a 21-3 campaign.

Notre Dame's 6-2 swimming team, fresh from two victories over Oakland University and Wayne State on the road, meets St. Bonaventure Saturday at 2 p.m. in Rockne Memorial Pool.

Jim Kane and Ed Graham established new varsity records in the 67-46 win over Wayne State. Kane won the 100 freestyle with a record time of 49.36 while Graham lowered his mark in the 200 individual medley with a 2:11.29 effort.

Mike Fanning will be looking to boost his pin total to 17 this weekend as the Irish wrestlers meet Findlay and Akron U.

years of varsity competition, he placed second and fourth in statewide competition, which earned him an offer from NCAA mat champion Oklahoma State. But Mike really wanted to play college football, so it came down to competing offers from Notre Dame and Oklahoma. "I decided to come to Notre Dame because I liked the campus. And the football team here is the finest in the nation," Fanning explains.

For a freshman, Mike has displayed a great deal of poise, both in dual meets and in tournament competition (he took first place in both the Rochester Invitational and National Catholic tourneys.) His greatest strength is his talent for recovering after he is down, though he is sharpening his all-around play. During meets, he nonchalantly occupies the end of the Irish bench, waiting his turn to wrestle. "I'd really rather be first to wrestle every meet," he confesses, "but I can't do anything about it." Even the transition from high school to college competition hasn't caused him much worry, although the longer college matches have been demanding. "The roughest problem is getting in condition for these matches," he says.

In addition to wrestling, Mike hopes to land a starting assignment on the Irish defensive line, where he saw a lot of action in last fall's freshman campaign. He also hopes for a shot at the NCAA title next month against what is regarded as the toughest field of competitors in the tourney's history.

Meanwhile, Fanning will

If the Notre Dame swim team can defeat St. Bonaventure Saturday, it will ensure the Irish of their first winning season since 1966-67.

attempt to keep his perfect record intact when the Irish wrestlers tangle with Findlay College Friday in the Athletic and Convocation Center at 7 pm and then Akron University Saturday at 7:30 pm. The Irish matmen are 8-2 over all but finished a disappointing fifth in the National Catholic Tournament in Cleveland last weekend.

Irish seek to bedevil Demons

by Vic Dorr

The editors of Sports Illustrated, in their annual college basketball issue, laid it on the line. "DePaul will not trouble anyone," they said.

But that pre-season analysis was not an altogether correct one, and when the DePaul Blue Demons take the floor against Notre Dame tomorrow afternoon (1:10) at the Convocation Center, they will be sporting a record that shows they have given a good bit of trouble to a good number of people.

The Demons will come into their game with the Irish with an 8-7 mark. They are currently suffering a two-game losing streak, but before those last two outings (against Marquette and South Carolina), DePaul was playing better-than-average basketball.

They upset the Dayton Flyers, 75-72. They fell to Marquette by the same margin as Notre Dame--nine points. They lost to Villanova by 11 and to St. Bonaventure by 14. And tomorrow afternoon Digger Phelps and the Irish cage squad could be in for a display of the same sort of "trouble."

The DePaul squad is a blend of experience and youth. Coach Ray Meyer starts four juniors and a sophomore, but he can go to a soph-laden bench when he has to.

Meyer has only two starters returning from last year's 8-17 team, but DePaul's '71 freshmen were 19-2--though they were toppled by last season's ND frosh, 86-73--and so far the second-year men have justified Meyer's confidence in them.

DePaul is scoring at an average of 79.6 a game, and most of the firepower comes from the trio of Al Burke, Mike Gillispie, and Nick Hartzig. Burks, a 6-5, 185 lb. junior forward, is leading the team in both scoring (20.0) and rebounding (9.0).

Gillispie (6-6) is the pivot man, and he is averaging 15 points and five rebounds a game. Hirtzig, a backcourt starter, is good for 13 points every time out. Guard Doug Bruno (6-1) and forward Harry Shields (6-5) are scoring 6.1 and 6.5 respectively, and they round out the team's starting unit.

6-5 sophomore Jim Marino is the sixth man, and he has averaged 11.5 points and 3.2 rebounds while appearing in all but one of the Blue Demon's games.

DePaul's scoring average is slightly above that of their opponents. In rebounding, though, the Blue Demons are only averaging 39 a contest, and that is a figure which should delight the Irish cagers.

Notre Dame's young team has been frequently beaten on the boards this year, but they have still been able to pull in 45 caroms a game, and that could spell the difference against DePaul.

Tomorrow's game will be televised regionally, and it will give the Irish a chance to even out their tube record for the year. ND dropped two televised games to UCLA, but won a TV encounter with Tulane.

The Irish, 4-14 on the year, will be paced by scoring (19.2) and rebounding (10.1) leader Gary Novak. Tom O'Mara (13.7), Willie Townsend (9.4) and John Egart (7.1) are the top scorers behind Novak, and Townsend is the second leading rebounder.

"I don't really know DePaul that well," said Willie, "except that I saw them play Marquette on TV. I do know they're a multi-defense team, and that they like to change defenses a lot as they come down the floor.

"I can't really say that we're going to do anything different against them. We're going to try to win, and we're going to try to do our best. But one can never tell. We may have their defense down to a T, and we may be hot on offense at the same time. But they may have our defense figured out, too. You really can never tell.

"Losing to St. John's was quite a let-down," Townsend admitted. "I thought we should have won it. I don't care what anyone says about how physical they were on the boards--I think we should have won that game. I felt strongly about the St. John's game, and I feel strongly about this one."

The Irish will remain at home following the DePaul contest for a Monday game against Bowling Green, and then will journey to New York's Madison Square Garden for a showdown with the North Carolina Tarheels.

The Irish frosh will take on the DePaul yearlings immediately after tomorrow's varsity contest. Tip-off time for the second game is 3:30.

Hustling Willie Townsend and his teammates will be shooting for their fifth victory of the season and their first home court triumph since Dec. 6 tomorrow afternoon against DePaul.

ND thinclads to run in MSU Relays

Freshman standouts Eric Penick and Greg Cortina will receive their first major competition of the indoor track season in East Lansing Saturday in the 49th running of the Michigan State Relays at Jenison Field House.

But the spotlight will also be focused on Notre Dame's shuttle hurdle relay team that set an American indoor record of 28.4 in the same meet a year ago.

"This is a meet for stars but we could do well in several events," said Irish coach Alex Wilson, who indicated that veteran Tom McMannon will once again anchor the shuttle hurdle team. McMannon, who has recorded an 8.0 70 high hurdles effort this winter, will be joined by senior Pat Mullaney, freshman Jack Gerwe and brother Mike McMannon.

Penick, the Ohio high school sprint champion last year, has posted a 6.2 60 yard effort and an outstanding 31.0 in the 300. Wilson indicated that Penick will run only in the 300 on Saturday.

Cortina, with efforts of 59-8 and 59-6½ the past two weeks, will battle Michigan's Steve Adams in the shot put.

The McMannon brothers also figure in several other events. Mike, who missed the opening victory over Miami (O.) with the flu, will defend his triple jump title (48-½) while Tom should challenge in the high hurdles.

Penick will receive a test from co-world record holder Herb Washington and frosh sensation Marshall Dill of Michigan State while Tom McMannon will battle Bob Bornkessel of Kansas and Godfrey Murray of Michigan in the hurdles.

Southeastern Conference champion Tennessee, Kansas, Missouri, Air Force and Drake head the 24 team field on the new Tartan track. The Irish (2-1) defeated Ohio State (56-51) but lost to the Air Force (66-56) last Saturday in Columbus.

Irish sextet invades Badgers' lair

by Jim Donaldson
Sports Editor

The Dane County Memorial Coliseum in Madison, Wisconsin, is not a pleasant place to play hockey - unless you're wearing the cardinal and white colors of the U. of Wisconsin Badgers. It certainly isn't the sort of place where you'd expect a slumping hockey team to make a turnabout but that's just what Notre Dame coach Lefty Smith hopes will happen this weekend when his Fighting Irish journey to Wisconsin for a two-game, four-point series Friday and Saturday nights.

There are usually 7,783 rabid, vocal hockey fans jammed into the "lair of the Badgers" rooting for a Wisconsin victory and the Badgers almost always respond. They have lost but one of 14 games on home ice this season.

Wisconsin hasn't lost too often away from home either. The Badgers lead the WCHA with a 15-5 record and 38 title points, and are 19-5 overall.

Notre Dame brings a 7-11 league mark (11-13 overall) and a four-game home ice losing streak to Madison. The Badgers inflicted two of those recent setbacks on the Irish two weeks ago at the ACC, beating Notre Dame twice by 5-3 margins.

The prospects for an Irish victory don't seem bright, but coach Smith was quick to point out earlier this week, that the Badgers are going to have to work hard to post another sweep over the Irish.

"It's amazing, but anyone can

The Irish hockey team will look to John Campbell (with puck) and Ian Williams (5) for scoring punch in their two game series this weekend at Wisconsin.

beat anyone else in this league," Smith commented. "Minnesota proved that last weekend. They didn't look good when we beat them twice a couple of weeks ago but they turned around last weekend and beat Wisconsin twice."

"When Wisconsin's defense has been pressured, they have been beaten," Smith continued. "If we do that, we'll win. But we'll have to be awfully quick, because Wisconsin backchecks as well as anyone in the WCHA."

The Badgers were caught napping last weekend in the Twin Cities, dropping 4-2 and 7-5 decisions to the last place Minnesota Gophers and, if a couple of key performers are healthy,

Wisconsin will try to bounce back in front of the home fans.

The club's leading scorer, Jim Young, sat out the Minnesota series with an eye injury sustained against Notre Dame while ace frosh defenseman Bob Lundeen, who has scored 10 goals this year, sprained an ankle last Friday and did not play Saturday against the Gophers.

The Irish will be at full strength this weekend if high scoring wing Paul Regan's sprained ankle, suffered against UMD last week, is completely healed. Goalie Dick Tomasoni, who did not dress for the UMD series because of a concussion sustained against Wisconsin the previous weekend, appears ready to reassume the goaltending chores for the Irish.

Coach Smith doesn't want to rush Tomasoni, however, and will give the senior netminder an extra day of rest by starting sophomore Mark Kronholm Friday night. Earlier in the year, Kronholm posted a shutout against Colorado College in the ACC.

The Badgers have a pair of excellent goalies who will probably split the weekend's games as they did in their previous meeting with the Irish. Freshman Dick Perkins has a mere 2.50 goals against average while the veteran Jim Makey, who has played most of the Badger's games because of an injury to Perkins, boasts a 2.78 mark.

Wisconsin also has plenty of people that can put the puck into the net. Young's 17 goals tops the club in that department but Gary Winchester, who tallied four goals two weeks ago against the Irish, leads the Badgers in scoring with 33 points on 14 goals and 19 assists. Freshman Talafous (29 points) and winger Tim Dool (23) are also men the Irish defense must watch closely.

Leading the Notre Dame attack are Regan (24 goals, 14 assists) and John Noble, 41 points on 10 goals and 31 assists. Wingers Eddie Bumbacco and Ian Williams have both contributed 18 goals to the Irish point totals.

The Badgers and the Irish have met 11 times in hockey, with Wisconsin winning nine of the games and one ending in a tie.

Indian activities to be held

by John Abowd

The India Association of Notre Dame is sponsoring a Variety show of authentic Indian acts this Saturday night. Funds raised will be used for emergency relief of Bengali refugees now stranded in India.

Three months of intensive preparation by thirty members of the association will be culminated on Saturday at 7:00 in O'Laughlin auditorium. The admission charge is $2.00.

"We intend to collect funds for Bengali refugees who wish to return to Bangladesh. They need food and provisions to re-establish themselves in their homelands and to rebuild their villages," Cajetan Cordeiro, president of the organization said.

The chemical engineering graduate student added that the Indian community has already raised $3,000 in relief funds.

"We feel we are obligated to do our part," he added. "The people back home are paying taxes and other obligations that we don't face. This is our contribution and we would like the rest of the community to share with us."

The show includes:
 --Folk dances from different regions of India. A Gujerat dance representative of the west coast region will be featured. To illustrate the many cultural differences within India the group will also present a more lively Punjab dance which is representative of the northern region.
