Burtchaell defends composition of priorities group

Priority Committee Chairman James T. Burtchaell said yesterday that selection of committee members was not influenced by the two faculty letters protesting administration policies last spring.

He went on to state that no operating schedule has been set and it remains with the committee to determine the agendas.

Concerning the faculty letter, Fr. Burtchaell said, "Frankly, the first notice I ever took of that, and I suspect that's also true of everyone else who had a hand in putting the committee together, was when I happened to read it in the Observer yesterday."

The selection process began five months ago with discussions between University President Theodore Hesburgh and Fr. Burtchaell, and recommendations from faculty and administrators around campus.

The Steering Committee of the Academic Council also discussed several names. Fr. Burtchaell added, "the campus was canvassed for a group with broad gage."

wide range

The selection of Howard Bathon as the only undergrad was based on his range in two colleges, and a high recommendation by a faculty member. Several students were interviewed with an eye out for one shrewd and with a broad base.

"One thing that is clear from Fr. Hesburgh's instructions is that every constituency in the University has to be canvassed and asked for suggestions, statements of position and suggested programs," the Provost said.

When asked if the meetings are to be open or closed, Fr. Burtchaell replied that it remained to be determined, but that at any rate an interim letter will be provided.

While the committee has no authority, it will probably make most of its suggestions to the Academic Council which will review them before sending them to the Trustees.

Questioned as to any specific considerations which seemed viable, especially in the area of coeducation, Fr. Burtchaell said he could not speculate on the committee's agenda as chairman, but it is possible that such items as the budget will be discussed."

composition not critical

"I don't think the composition of the committee is going to be that determinative, Fr. Burtchaell stated in relation to the committee's dimensions. He added, "The committee plans to solicit and receive many comments and suggestions from the University community and co-opt the services of so many backgrounds. Its task will be to "orchestrate the wisdom and observations."

The small size of the committee and its domination by faculty are also points which Fr. Burtchaell feels are advantageous to the success of the committee. The perspectives of the faculty and students will be there, but hopefully the perspective of the faculty will predominate because of their academic experience, Fr. Burtchaell concluded.

Running for sheriff

Mailer hits Nixon and women's lib

by Ann Therese Darin
Campus Editor

Norman Mailer, Americanus litteratus, reactivated his campaign for United States sheriff last night at Stepan Center.

Mailer thumbed through the pages of his latest book of judgement, St. George and the Godfather, a chronicle of the two national political conventions which was published yesterday, and gave his pronouncement on 1972 Smrtivs.

Wearing a "Norman Mailer for Sheriff" button, holdover from his 1966 mayoralty campaign in New York City, Mailer read several excerpts dealing primarily with the Democratic and Republican conventions to the Stepan Center-capacity crowd.

He characterized this year's Democratic convention as "a most peculiar convention of 1972 and the convention of 1992. It's as if philosophy finally entered politics."

On the Republicans, Mailer revealed, "Richard Nixon is the greatest political genius since Machiavelli. We applaud his professional hypocrisy."

It took 50,000 words, he reported, for him to adequately describe the GOP convention which Mailer acknowledged fascinated him.

Reflecting on social issues, Mailer concentrated on women's liberation and abortion.

"I am in favor of abortion rather than contraception (the pill)," he asserted. "Abortion is the objective correlative of sanity...Abortion is the act of self-recognition of woman. The Pill is an insulation against sanity because you can't change your mind...its effectiveness is not impaired. But abortion—if a woman has the right to begin extraordinary life, she has the right to destroy it."

After caricaturing several other political figures ("Pat Nixon is like a Readers Digest editor attacking a paragraph, Agnew looks like a wealthy French hangman"), Mailer opted for questions from the floor.

Questioned on who he had endorsed for President, Mailer replied, "George Abraham Lincoln McGovern—or better yet, make that George Abraham Lincoln Gary Cooper McGovern."

"The medium is the message as Marshall McLuhan has said. The type of questions that you are asking me cannot be answered from the podium...they must be answered in a better atmosphere." With this analysis, Mailer dismissed the convocation to the Lounge in Flanner Hall.

moves to flanner

En route to Flanner, Mailer analyzed last night's audience in comparison with the audience at his first Notre Dame speech four years ago at the Sophomore Literary Festival.

"In 1968 they were more lively...they were excited. This year while they seemed enthusiastic, it wasn't the same sort of thing," he remarked.

At Flanner, students tried to pressure Mailer into commenting on American letters and his work as a writer. However, Mailer stuck to the guise of a politician instead.

"This week I am a politician...next week I don't know," he announced.

"This is an apocalyptic time—the swing of the pendulum has been going faster and faster," he said. "Nixon sees himself as a man deserving of the word great. A man with no respect for language can't be great, however. With the possible exception of

New psych program

A doctoral program in counseling psychology of the Department of Graduate Studies in Education at the University of Notre Dame has received accreditation from the American Psychological Association, one of 22 in the nation to meet the criteria necessary for recognition.

Now directed by Dr. Paul Banikiotes, assistant professor of psychology, the counseling psychology program was started at Notre Dame in 1967 with three faculty members and five students. Today it includes a professional staff of six and enrolls 30 students.

The program prepares students to function as psychologists in a wide variety of settings and capacities. Graduates work in community mental health agencies, hospitals, medical centers, university counseling centers, social service agencies, and as faculty members in institutions of higher education. Required to complete a one-year internship before they receive their doctoral degree, the students, as part of their graduate studies, work in Notre Dame's counseling center and in service agencies in the South Bend area.

Respect life week

In conjunction with the National Respect Life Week (October 1st-October 8th), the Right to Life Committee of St. Joseph county is sponsoring an educational program for the public at the American National Branch Bank 2121 E. McKinley on Thursday, October 5, at 8:00 P.M.

Right to Life is a non-profit, non-denominational group established to present a positive philosophy towards human life. The group invites anyone with a similar philosophy to join Right to Life in its campaign against abortion. They are also against euthanasia and hope to help present to the people of this County a definite attitude towards the value of all human life. Presently, the committee is involved in presenting viable alternatives to abortion and in making the public and the lawmakers aware of these alternatives. For any further information call Patti Zych at 232-2501

Law and pollution

The University of Notre Dame's Law School and Department of Civil Engineering are cooperating in a program to bring law and engineering students together in the study of environmental problems. Directed by Michael V. McIntire, associate professor of law and Dr. Philip C. Singer, assistant professor of civil engineering, the interdisciplinary program is funded through a $68,836 grant from the Environmental Protection Agency.

The program features a summer "workshop" course, which will focus a team of law and engineering students on a water pollution problem of local importance. McIntire suggests such studies might include certain phases of thermal pollution of Lake Michigan, Chicago phosphate limitation legislation or pollution from steel companies in the Gary-Hammond complex, among others. The students will be asked to develop practical, effective and enforceable methods of resolving the problems studied. Solutions may include judicial enforcement of existing technology, new legislation, or any combination of these.

During the year, students in law will take courses dealing with the technical problems associated with water pollution, while engineers will become acquainted with laws and procedures available to deal with environmental offenders.

SAGA food tours

Saint Mary's SAGA Food Service is really proud of what it has to offer, so proud, in fact, that the service is offering tours of its kitchen facilities to the students.

Each twenty minute tour is conducted by the manager, Ken Levitt, who hopes they will result in a better insight and more appreciation of the work involved in feeding 1400 students and faculty.

Each group of 10 people who participate in the tour is shown the storage areas, freezers, ovens, bakery and salad departments. They also get to see that the preparation of their meals is not a one-man process, but is an organization of 30 full-time employees and 100 students working together to give the student body the best there is to offer.

Sign-up posters will be put up for all those interested in participating in this informative tour.

Medieval lecture

Rev. Paul E. Reichner, C.S.C., a specialist in Medieval studies at the University of Notre Dame, will deliver the first talk in a series planned in conjunction with the current art showing at 8 p.m. Wednesday in the O'Shaughnessy Hall Gallery. The talk is open to the public without charge.

Several medieval manuscripts from the Rosenwald Collection are included in the current display which incorporates the best works from Notre Dame's permanent collection. Sculpture by Michael Todd, a Notre Dame graduate presently teaching at the University of California, is on display both inside and outside the gallery.

Father Beichner is a former dean of the graduate school at Notre Dame and a member of the Medieval Academy of America. He is the author of a number of articles on medieval literature.

Ujamaa plans culture week

by Marty Miller
Observer Staff Reporter

The newly formed Society of Ujamaa is planning a Black Cultural week for next spring, which will feature Dr. Alvin Poussaint, Harvard psychiatrist, the Fisk Jubilee Singers and Catherine Dunham dance troupe from Southern Illinois University. The Society was formed in January 1972 after restructuring the defunct Afro-American Society.

Robert McCrady, member of the society's executive board said, "The Afro-American Society didn't recognize the fact of other student organizations on campus, it was an isolated vacuum and little progress was made."

McCrady stressed that the goal of the Society of Ujamaa is to create better relationships between blacks and whites at Notre Dame. "It is not a separatist group," added McCrady.

The society also plans a series of guest speakers this year. The list includes John O. Killans, a black author, Jarvis Tyner, authority on the black nationalist question and P. Cheke Onwauchi, director of the Afro-American Studies at Howard University. They have also invited Angela Davis and Julian Bond, but it is not yet known if they will come.

The Ujamaa Society will also sponsor black theatrical groups that show the historical contributions of black people in America. "Hopefully the Notre Dame community will get a better understanding of black people," said McCrady.

A committee is to be formed sometime in the near future by the society, composed of both blacks and white to work with the Ujamaa Society in cooperative projects.

The society of Ujamaa operates out of the Black Cultural Center on the third floor of LaFortune student center. The room was given by University President Theodore M. Hesburgh, who asked that it be open to the whole Notre Dame Community in order that students might have the opportunity of being exposed to black culture.

The society will meet at 7 p.m. in the LaFortune amphitheatre.

HPC discusses hot dog stand locations

by Patti Shea
Observer Staff Reporter

Controversy over hot dot stands and hall theaters sparked the main discussion at last night's meeting of the Hall Presidents' Council.

Presidents of several halls questioned the assignment and location of the hot dog stands set up during football weekends. Representatives from the north quad reported heavy losses on the stands while the south quad listed profits from sales at last weekend's game.

In addition to location problems, the assignment of stands to various University organizations was considered. "These hot dog stands were originally set up by the halls themselves," remarked Steve Jeselnick, executive coordinator of the HPC, "and I would like to see the banning of University clubs setting them up."

At present, each hall and University organization is allowed to set up a stand during two of the five home games.

Competition between University organizations and the halls prompted reactions from hall presidents about the number of movies shown on campus.

Fred Baranowski, president of Holy Cross Hall, cited incidences of hall film publicity being torn down. "Competition is heavy," Baranowski said. Although the HPC found no need for formal regulation of the problem, Chariman Butch Ward urged halls to work together in coordinating the movies and times they are shown.

Opinions regarding HPC action on coresidential housing were also aired by a few hall presidents and were generally varied.

"The guys at Sorin feel that coresidential housing is one of the possible directions," commented Walt Spak, Sorin Hall president, but we should not focus all our efforts in this area." Parietal changes and hall renovation were listed as more pressing concerns by Spak.

Plans for such hall improvements are being drawn up by the individual halls. Since the renovations have to be approved by the University, various hall presidents stressed the importance of detailed and practical blueprints and statements to be presented.

Md. court overturns judge's abortion order

by Diane Bauer
(C) 1972 Washington Star-News

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 3—A 16-year-old Kent County, Md., girl, who was held in jail for seven days after refusing to have an abortion, has been freed in an emergency hearing of the Court of Special Appeals of Maryland.

County Circuit Court Judge George D. Rasin Jr. had ordered the school girl held in jail until she was to be taken by the County Sheriff to a hospital to undergo an abortion requested by her mother.

Acting at the request of Kent County Public Defender John Sause Jr., the six-judge court reversed Rasin's order during an emergency meeting on Wednesday, the day the operation had been scheduled.

The court upheld Rasin's ruling that the girl should be under the court's supervision. She was released the next day in the custody of relatives.

The girl and her boyfriend, also 16, who has been released in the custody of his parents, had attempted to obtain a marriage license but failed because a boy must be 18 in Maryland to marry without parental consent.

The two were taken into court Sept. 21 after running away a week before because the girl's mother was insistent on an abortion. Rasin heard the case on Sept. 25.

The girl's court-appointed lawyer, Floyd Parks of Chestertown, told the judge, "She has advised me that she thinks an abortion is murder."

He said the couple plans to marry, if possible, and that they youth, also a Kent-County student, has a job paying $60 a week.

Asked why she ran away, the girl explained, "because me and (the boy) didn't want to have an abortion."

The boy testified "We figured that if we stayed away long enough so that she couldn't get an abortion then her mother couldn't make her get (one)."

Rasin told them, "The court does not believe it is in the interest of an unborn child to be born under these circumstances." He ruled that they were both "children in need of supervision."

Rasin directed that the girl "shall obey her mother in submitting to the medical procedures at Easton Memorial Hospital to terminate her pregnancy."

He added that the girl was to be held in jail "by the sheriff of Kent County, who shall deliver her to (the) hospital, at the request of her mother."

Judge's Abortion

A judge in Kent County, Maryland, made a decision that no man (or woman) has any right to make. Fortunately, the Court of Appeals saw the light and reversed the decision.

Judge George Rasin had ordered a 16 year old girl to undergo an abortion against her will. Abortion-on-demand is clearly one of the most controversial issues in America today but this new variation (abortion-on-the-court's-demand) is well beyond the scope of even the most pro-abortionist argument. No one anywhere has contended that anyone other than the mother should have ultimate power to make the decision to undergo an abortion. Many laws leave the decision to perform an abortion up to the individual physicians but this position presumes that the mother has requested one not that some court has ordered one.

Rasin declared that "The court does not believe it is in the interest of an unborn child to be born under these circumstances." An astute observation but clearly inaccurate. The question of the best interests of an aborted child is perfectly absurd. The court cannot possibly argue that it is anyone's personal best interest to be killed.

Rather Rasin should have noted that it is not in the unborn child's best interest to be raised by an unmarried 16 year-old girl. Then, he should have provided psychological counseling for the girl, her boyfriend and the girl's mother. Finally, he should have ordered the child surrendered for adoption at birth.

Instead, Judge Rasin comes out of the whole mess looking like the most unbalanced character of all. One wonders if he considers it in his best interest to be alive.

Cancel Cuts

Senator Edward Kennedy is speaking on campus this Friday. His Stepan Center speech will certainly be covered by media in South Bend and Chicago. In fact, there may even be national press coverage. Beyond a doubt, no matter what one's personal political convictions are, there is an enormous campus interest in the speech.

This is as it should be in an election year, especially one which has so much added importance for college students. It would be unfortunate if some students were prevented from attending the speech because of class conflicts. In order to prevent this problem, Fr. Burtchaell, acting in his capacity as chief academic policy maker, should issue a statement declaring that all class absences in 9:00, 10:00 and 11:00 Friday classes will be considered "cancel cuts."

It's up to the professor to decide if he wants to hold class on Friday morning but no student should be penalized for perfectly legitimate political interests. This is particularly true since the university, especially Fr. Hesburgh, has openly invited national political candidates to speak on campus. It would be discourteous to both the speaker and the students to penalize anyone for attendance of the events.

Just Basic Dirt

Dear R. Calhoun

tom long

Originally, I intended this to be an attack on R. Calhoun Kersten, but in all honesty, I couldn't attack him. Instead I've written an appeal to a friend who could change things on this campus. I only hope he will follow my advice.

R. Calhoun, I think it should be known that you are on the biggest ego trip on this campus. I've known you since you were that crazy freshman down the hall wearing a Beach Boys tee-shirt; but, many things have changed since then - namely you've really begun to think you are a King. Robert, you're the man who once personally exposed the ridiculous clique of ingifters who called themselves student government, however you have fallen to levels even lower than their poo-bahish tactics.

Playing Politics

You're not only as pompous as they were, but you've also tried to cover up the political goals of your friends - something they never tried to hide. I wonder what the student body's reaction would be if they knew that when you accused The Observer of running tickets in the SLC elections, that you did so only after your friends which were running in each district had been beaten. Or what would the reaction be if everyone knew that one of those terrible Observer endorsements, which you so vociferously attacked, went to a man you personally asked to help H-man run the student government.

Unfortunately, not everyone is aware of these actions, especially since the one media which can reach the students has been so discredited by your comments. I don't deny your loyal following, but doesn't the truth count for anything anymore. For instance, I was shocked last night when a freshman told me that the King really knew what was going on. Maybe he was referring to some other king because, Robert, the one who professed to be the Prime Mover sat in the student government offices last spring and told H-man, "H, I'm out of here - I don't know what's going on and there's too much work for me to do."

Just Honesty

R. Calhoun, I don't intend this as a personal attack on you. I only ask that you explain to the students that in all honesty you don't give a damn what goes on and really could care less if anybody knows about it. Also, admit that H-man would like to attempt to make some progress with student government because after being over in the office, he has enjoyed working there, but in reality, he lacks the experience to do the job. He would do a great job if he could have some help from those guys who have some idea of how to work with the administration, but, I only ask, Bob, why should they bother helping H, when you continuously shit on them?

Another question which immediately comes to my mind, shouldn't the students have some idea of what is happening to the 80,000 dollars they have contributed to the student government fund. After all, a joke is a joke - but, your $5 dollar campaign with your own money is not $80,000 coming from a lot of other people's pockets.

To be truthful, Robert, I don't even know if student government is worth while but shouldn't it be given a chance, especially after the respectability it gained last year? After all, I recall you saying that the one thing you'd like to see something done with is the social wasteland this place exists in. How can anything be done if no one is able to start a new program?

What Can We Lose?

Bob, you and I have both said forget the whole thing, perhaps we're right, but that doesn't mean that we are absolutely right. If you allow the student government to organize and the students fail to support it, and it achieves little as usual, no one will have been hurt. But if you don't allow it to organize, and the students would have supported it, and it finally would have achieved something, then a golden opportunity will have been missed.

R. Calhoun, your majesty, why don't you step off your throne and quit telling the students to eat cake. Allow some people to do a decent job, I'm not saying who, but just give someone a chance. And quit being the front man for a bunch of guys whom I've enjoyed as friends, but who are terribly inexperienced for the positions you are planning to give them. Robert, you have served your purpose well - you broke up a clique of poo-bahs who were so ego and power hungry they didn't bother to think of the students - don't make the same mistake they did.

Letter . . .

To quote a famous long lost author:

You'll lose your mind,
you'll lose your grin
There's no use trying,
You ain't going to win.

We, the scum, are rampantly and rabidly indignant with Bro. Gorch's sacrilegious upgrading of our holy terminology. Is nothing sacred? Mere students addressed as "rif-raf"? Come to your senses. No honorable scumbags would risk the enervating specter of the student center. The 'home of everything decent and beautiful' is a boy named mark

rev. robert griffin

The boy named Mark was not a theology major, nor a turned-off religious type; he was just a Catholic who had been told from his infancy that the bread and wine of the Eucharist was alive with the glory of Christ.

The boy came at midnight last night to inquire about a priest's faith on this point. Priests, after all, are the keepers of the Eucharist: at Mass, they say, "This is My Body. This is My Blood," and not "This is Christ's Body. This is His Blood." The boy thought it was pretty cool for the priest to identify himself with the Lord in the Eucharistic declaration. Surely the priest should know, after that, whether a miracle of presence had occurred in the heart of the bread, in the depths of the wine. So the boy named Mark asked the question: is Jesus really there in the papery little wafer; and if so, could the priest make the Christ—presence tangible enough to the emotions so that it could be experienced by a boy desperate for divine encounters?

Apparently there is a whole genre of fiction known by nuns and taught to the students in the Catholic grade schools in testimony of the truth of the doctrine of the Real Presence. In these tales, Communion Hosts drip with the blood of an outraged Lord, or the tongues of sacrilegious children are, with some regularity, reduced to soot and ashes as a punishment for communions received while in a state of lost grace. More edifyingly, there are the convent legends of the Reverend Mother who, when she was mistress of novices, felt during a holy hour with the Blessed Sacrament that Jesus was winking at her from the sacred monstrance. In my own dealings with the sacramental bread and wine, I have never seen signs either of the Lore's pleasure or of His flirtatiousness. With all my heart, I believe that at Mass, Christ invests with His holiness the blessed elements of the feast, according to the idioms of the doctrine of transubstantiation. I also believe that bread and wine have learned to keep their secrets well. The quick-eyed cherubim may be guardians at the tabernacle, but I have never seen them there. Christ's cup may be incandescent with the Saviour's life, but the wisps of glory have escaped me. Only once, there was a trick of light, and the wine became a mirror reflecting the image of Jesus crucified above the altar. The effect was startling enough to keep me from swearing for a week.

I have no signs and wonders, then, to share with the boy named Mark. Signs and wonders would only confuse him, as well as me, anyway. If the Blessed Mother should appear this afternoon in the clothes closet of my room in Keenan, what would be the about closets with the Harris tweeds, and value of the news? Pilgrimages would be made to that closet, vigil lamps lighted, freshmen would besiege the spot with petitions about chemistry, and I would never get any sleep. All this fuss would be made because God's mother was traipsing the real news is that Christ dined at noon time in the Huddle, only everyone thought it was a teenage hippie, bearded to cover up the acne. In the Kingdom where God is the vine and we are the branches, Jesus has other dimensions than those of a Galilean carpenter with holes in His hands. Every man reveals Christ to me, and his humanity is the only sign I need to know that the Lord is near. If we can once get over the hangup that God is in hiding, we will find that He is jostling us in every crowd, and we really don't need places (like closets) where we can meet Him as a holy person.

The heresy is to confine Him and His operations mostly to the heavens, with distances so great that no Deity in His right mind would make the earth-bound trip. In the face of a Judean springtime, the family of Lazarus doubted the miracle of new life quickening those dead bones, as though flesh would be more resistant than earth when the command would come to live again. The raising of a man to life, seen in the contest of April, is no more mind-shattering than the bursting-out of begonias. One suspects that the wonder-worker gave us April gardens full of begonias to prepare us for the emptying of graves.

So it is when boys named Mark come to me at midnight to inquire after the experience of the Eucharist, I say consider the context. Consider all the ways that God is in the world. His genius and design are found in every leaf and flower. His beauty and love are over us as the rainbow, and under as the earth, and within us as the light of our souls. The Incarnation was a celebration of the marriage of His spirit with our flesh. He chooses to identify Himself with the hungry, the thirsty, the naked, and the prisoner, so that we might serve Him and touch Him in times of famine and drought, and in the ghettos and jails. God is constantly invading our world with His nearness. Is it any wonder then that he takes bread and wine, the staples of the table with which He feeds us, and surrounds and endows them with this life?

Can I prove that He is there? Mark, I can't prove to you that He is anywhere. But to me, it is a happy, though not an astounding certitude, that when I have fulfilled the prescriptions of ritual, God is present at my fingertips as holy bread and blessed wine.

In a sense, it is as though He were always standing there as a guest at the door; now, He knocks so that I can be certain of His whereabouts.

"This is my faith, Mark. It has lighted candles in the sanctuaries of the world for centuries. It is the doctrine of the Real Presence. I hope that faith in the Real Presence can light candles in the sanctuary of your heart at every midnight in your life.

Delbert & Glen tonight with John Mayall

John Mayall, England's leading contributor to the contemporary blues scene, brings his new band to South Bend this Wednesday for a concert at the Morris Civic Auditorium. A tall, quite-spoken native of Manchester, England, Mayall is noted for his taste, professionalism, and for the brilliant bands he's put together over the years. John's extensive professional background spans some twenty-five albums recorded for London and Polydor Records. His most recent album "Moving on" is yet one more facet of his love for the blues. Like his previous album, "Jazz-Blues Fusion", the new disc gives an exciting and in-depth pictures of the blues.

Mayall has assembled a very impressive band for the current North American tour. Keef Hartley will be featured on drums, Richard Blue Mitchell on trumpet, Freddie Robinson on guitar, Victor Gaskin on bass, and Fred Clark on sax. Several of these musicians have had their own bands and all of them have played with a wide variety of artists from one end of the music spectrum to the other. These artists include Duke Ellington, Howlin' Wolf, Ray Charles, Cannonball Adderly, Paul Williams and Muddy Waters. Mayall has played with such English greats as Eric Clapton, Peter Green, of Fleetwood Mac fame, and Mick Taylor, now with the Rolling Stones.

A new group, Delbert and Glen, will also perform Wednesday night. Their music is self-described as "down-home, blues-based, countrified, folk-rooted Texas-Kansas-California funk", applied to predominantly original songs by group leaders Delbert McClinton and Glen Clark. Tickets are still available for Wednesday's concert and are available at the Morris Civic Box Office at $4.50 in advance or $5.50 at the door Wednesday night. The concert is scheduled to begin at 7:00 p.m.

cac: preview of a year

The 1972-73 Dance & Drama Series of the Cultural Arts Commission will feature a performance by Marcel Marceau, "the world's greatest mime." To a large extent, Marcel Marceau is responsible for elevating pantomime to a fine art. In the last twenty-five years, he has appeared and been acclaimed all over the world. His pantomime character "Bip," modelled on Chaplin's "Little Tramp," has become a classic figure in the theater. Marcel Marceau will appear as the third event in the series, on Feb. 16th in O'Laughlin Auditorium.

The opening of the series will feature the National Players from Washington D.C. in Aristophanes' classic comedy "The Birds". The Players will present an "acting version," as adapted by Walter Kerr, in which the original lines are reduced to their simplest meanings and then recast in a colloquial vein. The play follows the adventures of two clumsy Greeks who try to find a better society among the birds, only to be beset by all the Athenian characters they have been trying to escape.

This will be the third consecutive appearance at N.D.S.M.C. for the Players, who are in their 24th year as the leading repertory touring company in America. They will appear in O'Laughlin Aud. on October 17th at 8p.m.

The second event in the series will be the Second City players from Chicago on Nov. 4th. Since their origin in the Playwrights Theater in 1953, the Second City troupe has always produced outstanding satirical humour. David Steinberg, Mike Nichols and Elaine May, Joan Rivers, and Shelly Berman are only a few of the people who started their careers at the Second City. This will be the second time the players have appeared at N.D. They will present "The Best of Second City," featuring skits from their revues "No, No, Wilmette," "The 43rd Parallel," and "Premises, Premises." The performance will be at 8p.m. at O'Laughlin Aud.

Following Marcel Marceau in February will be the fourth event of the series, Saeko Ichinche and her ballet company. A contemporary choreographer of great distinction, Miss Ichinche draws on her experiences in Asia and the West to create an entirely original form of modern ballet. This will be the first American tour for this Japanese Ballet Company. The performance will be at O'Laughlin Aud. on Feb. 27th at 8 p.m.

The final event of the series will be announced at a later date but it will be something in the realm of contemporary theater.

The Dance & Drama Series of the CAC is an attempt to create a solid basis for a yearly performing arts program for the University. This is with the hope that from year to year, top contemporary artists will be attracted to the campus. In an attempt to make this series available to as wide an audience as possible, a patron card is available for all five events. The Patron Card costs $7.00 and entitles the holder to attend all the events FREE—please make note—once you pay the seven dollars for the card, there is no additional charge at the door to attend the events. There is one thing to note for all people who purchase patron cards—you must present your patron card at a ticket outlet or at the box office to obtain your ticket for such events. In the event of a sold out house, patrons are not guaranteed seats. The tickets for each event will be on sale well in advance of the performance and will be available at the Student Union Ticket Office and The Cultural Arts Office—plus off-campus locations that will be publicized at a later date. Patron Cards for the series will be on sale at the dining halls, the Student Union Ticket Office, and the Cultural Arts Commission office on the 4th floor of LaFortune. For any further series or ticket information, call 283-3797 between 12-3 on Mon. through Fri.

Prisoners' rights discussed at CCE

The problems and prospects of prisoners' rights and social changes were discussed by the Catholic Commission of Urban Ministry recently at the Center for Continuing Education.

The three man panel discussion was part of the weeklong conference now in progress for one fourth of the 1,000 member committee, which was formed in 1966.

It was formed to give more support to people working full time in urban social affairs, and as a means of exchanging information between such workers.

The panel was split two to one in favor of abolishing prisons. Alving J. Bronstein, director of the ACLU Prison Reform Project, and South Bend attorney Thomas DiGrazia argued that although prisons were formed to help people do penance for their crime and become better people, the system has failed.

"Most correction people today don't rehabilitate themselves, because the institution doesn't help you," Bronstein said, and he cited the case of an inmate who was forced to do prison work before studying for college degree as he desired. The inmate studied between 12:30 and 5:30 each morning.

In addition to calling prisons "cages," Bronstein also attacked the parole system for being time consuming and not revealing reasons for denials, thus preventing inmates from correcting their faults.

Bronstein criticized most Americans for having a "punitive mentality," which he claims, leads them to think prisons work and are for the betterment of society.

DiGrazia, who specializes in prisoner's rights, extended the criticism to the juvenile system labeling it as a cruel and dehumanizing. He said there should be "an individual program for each kid," and thinks the solution should be found in the communities where the child is delinquent.

Fr. Raymond Gallagher, of Lafayette, Ind., argued in favor of prison reform as opposed to giving up the possibility of rehabilitative experiences.

He spoke in favor of privacy, and opportunity for reflection and religious experience, family visitation rights, and constructive work experience with reasonable pay as aspects of reform.

The conference is focusing on criminal justice and alternate modes in the educational system in the hopes of bringing change to the criminal justice system, and to make the best research and study available to private and public schools for improvement of current educational patterns.

Huddle proposal to committee

Would you like to see the Huddle open for a 24 hour day? This is a question that has no simple "yes" or "no" answer for Dr. Robert Ackerman, the director of Student Activities.

"The proper channels are open and interested in getting reasonable proposals," Dr. Ackerman said in reference to Vice President of Student Affairs Phillip Facenda's request last week for a report on the question of a 24 hour Lafortune.

Dr. Ackerman pointed to Student Activities Night as a beginning point for the study. "Many of the students had never been in the building until then," he said. He is hard at work trying to make the facility into a student "center", along with Dave Caruso and Dan Shapp, both undergrads from Keenan Hall.

They have formed a nine man committee to serve as a "listening post to student needs." They met Friday and concluded with the intention of generating increased student use of the facility. "Unless more things go on in the building," said Dr. Ackerman "merely expanding the hours may not be the answer."

Dr. Ackerman would like to examine the possibility of future renovations. "This may or may not be the best site on campus to memorialize Dr. Tom Dooley," and he wonders if it is feasible for the Rathskellar to change into a coffeehouse or even a bar if Indiana is to lower the legal drinking age to 18 years. Dr. Ackerman also mentioned that office and the seldom-used ping pong room place too great a premium on available space.

Any changes will naturally involve the problem of funding, but there are other problems to consider, such as Lafortune's questionable electrical capacity. Security Director Arthur Peers said the extra security is a problem but a resolvable one, and Edmund Price's food service staff would have to be increased.

These are only a few of the considerations which Dr. Ackerman called "homework" for his committee. Expecting the center to be open around the clock before resolving these problems is like "putting the cart before the horse."

Chinese paintings at Moreau

by Andy Schilling
Observer Staff Reporter

An exhibition of Chinese Paintings by former Saint Mary's teacher Dr. Susan Yang Kiang opened in the Moreau Gallery yesterday.

The paintings were done in the contemporary traditional Chinese style, using both black and colored inks. Traditionally, the painter used either all black or all colored inks, but never a combination of both in a single painting.

The style differs from that of American painters in that the painter keeps his wrist locked as he paints, and frequently strokes away from his body, rather than toward it. Each stroke has its own special meaning which contributes to the symbolic effect of the picture.

Subject matter of the sixty paintings includes flowers, birds, grass, insects, and bamboo, which is Dr. Kiang's favorite subject material.

Sister Rose Ellen of St. Mary's College, the director of the exhibition, has many future plans for the gallery. She would like to open a children's museum by November which would be an "experience" for the children, a departure from the traditionally strict "Don't touch" museums.

Sister Rose also plans to furnish a room adjoining the gallery as an Alumna Room, "where you could go talk with your friends." The room is already furnished with furniture supplied by a million dollar benefactor of St. Mary's; wall decorations, including a tapestry, are presently being sought.

One observer at the Kiang exhibition described attendance as "fantastic, but spread out. Two hundred people would leave, and two hundred more would come."

The exhibition will be at the gallery for twenty-six days, and will be open Saturdays from 1PM until 5PM. Sundays and Tuesday through Friday the hours will be from 1PM until 9PM. The exhibit will be closed Mondays.

Mailer becomes politician

Waiting Novel

While Mailer refused to elaborate his future plans, he did say that he was working on the novel he promised that he would write 20 years ago. "I already have 60,000 words on it, but I am not going to give away its content since it has radically changed from what I said it would be about twenty years ago. A writer should have some secrets from his public," Mailer pronounced.

Suprisingly Mailer came out in favor of women's colleges. He substantiated his view by claiming that marriage has not proved to be the most successful relationship between men and women. He thought that the sexes should be separated in schools since there was no reason to bring them together. Segregated education provided women with a richer experience.

Responding to whether the trend toward Jewish writers in American literature has peaked, Mailer replied that it was too early to tell, but probably the blacks would predominate over Jews. However, he does feel that each ethnic group will similarly dominate American literature.

"Really it could have been any ethnic group which dominated American literature in the 1960's I think it was the Jews because they have a heritage grounded in literature and writing. It was natural for them to make a social comment," Mailer added.

Tonight Mailer's movie, "Maidstone" will be shown in the Engineering Auditorium. The film described the efforts of a super-presidential candidate to become elected. Mailer stars as the candidate.

SMC representation needed on board

Following Dr. Edward L. Henry's suggestion that a broad representation on the Board of Regents was a "necessary step to keep Saint Mary's in the forefront of American Colleges," the corporate members of the Board elected Dr. Bruno Paul Schlesinger as the faculty member to serve on the Board of Regents of Saint Mary's College.

The decision to add both student and faculty representatives to the Board occurred last summer at the first meeting of the new Board of Regents. At that time, Jean Seymour, Student body President, and now Student Board Representative, was present at the meeting.

Schlesinger is a native of Austria. He holds a B.A. degree from the University of Vienna and his Ph.D. from the University of Notre Dame in Political Sciences.

Schlesinger has been a Saint Mary's faculty member since 1945; teaching History and History of Art until 1956. At that time, he founded and became Chairman of the program for Christian Culture at the College. It was the first of its kind in the United States; based on the ideas and suggestions of Christopher Dawson, the eminent English scholar.

The program now has been transformed into the Humanistic Studies program, which introduces the student to various aspects of Western civilizations, with history, literature, art, theology, and philosophy viewed as interrelated factors.

Schlesinger was the first recipient of Saint Mary's College Spes Unica Faculty Award in 1958. This citation honors teachers of Saint Mary's College whose selfless service reflects an utter dedication to the communication of truth.

Dr. McCray ACDA head

Dr. James E. McCray, Associate Professor and Chairman of the Music Department at Saint Mary's College, Notre Dame, has been appointed President of the Indiana branch of the American Choral Directors' Association. The A.C.D.A. is the largest national organization for choral conductors, and publishes a periodical, The Choral Journal, nine times a year. Dr. McCray writes a monthly review of new choral materials for this journal.

Dr. McCray holds a Ph.D. from the University of Iowa. He has written many articles on choral conducting and has many of his choral works published.

Dr. McCray is a life member of the American Choral Directors Association, and a member of many music teachers and choral directors associations.

Irish JV's drop Michigan

by Vic Dorr

Denny Murphy, Notre Dame's junior varsity football coach, had every right to sound pleased.

His team had won its first game of the season, a 17-7 triumph over Michigan's jayvees, and they had won it in convincing style. The baby Irish, battling Ann Arbor's rain-slicked artificial turf as well as the host Wolverines, executed well, both offensively and defensively. They took advantage of Michigan's only big mistake, and they unveiled a rushing game that accounted for 233 yards.

"We kept basically to our running game," said the Irish coach. "because of the intermittent showers. The first time we had the ball we moved it real well. We kept it on the ground and moved it right down the field against them. We didn't get a touchdown because of a 15 yard penalty, but that first drive gave us confidence in our offense."

Quarterback Frank Allocco, who directed the Irish attack for three quarters, put the Irish on the scoreboard late in the first period. A Wolverine fumble gave the Irish field position on the Michigan 39, and on the first play after the fumble Allocco passed to split end Pete Demmerle for the touchdown.

Rick Slager's placement gave the Irish a 7-0 lead.

Slager padded the Irish margin in the second period when he booted a 27-yard field goal, and that was the last scoring for either team until the final period.

"It was 10-0 at half," said Murphy, "and it was still 10-0 at the end of the third period. But Michigan finally got a drive going late in the fourth quarter. They had to convert four fourth down situations during that drive, and their touchdown came on fourth and goal from our two."

Eduardo Gonzalez picked up the tally for the Wolverines, but ND's offense, on its next possession, killed any comeback hopes the home team may have had.

Starting from their own 27, with slightly more than five minutes left, the Irish moved the ball steadily on the ground until, with nine seconds remaining, Russ Kernman burst up the middle for a 12 yard touchdown.

Art Best (83 yards) and Ron Goodman (82) led ND's ground game, while Allocco was two of eight for 48 yards through the air.

The Irish jayvees will host a return match with the Wolverines on October 27th.

Sophomore Pete Demmerle pulled in a 39-yard touchdown pass from Frank Allocco in the junior varsity 17-7 win over Michigan.

Changes at ND, MSU practices

There were changes made in the practice routines of both Notre Dame and Michigan State Tuesday as the two clubs prepared for their upcoming meeting Saturday in East Lansing.

For the Irish, the change was from their normal grass practice fields to the newly installed artificial turf practice field. The Spartans changed some personnel, rather than practice areas.

Notre Dame's offensive and defensive units took turns operating against preparation teams which simulated Michigan State's plays and defensive alignments yesterday afternoon on Cartier Field's half-finished Astro-turf playing surface.

"The practice on artificial turf will help us in our preparation for teams with artificial surfaces in their stadiums and will give us a good practice field on wet days," Parseghian said.

The Spartans, coming off a 51-6 trouncing at the hands of Southern Cal last Saturday night, are contemplating making major changes in their Wishbone-T offensive backfield for this weekend's game with Notre Dame.

Coach Duffy Daugherty is thinking about moving Mark Niesen from defensive back to quarterback in place of George Mihailu and backup, quarterback Dan Werner and will definitely move fullback James Bond to halfback.

Daugherty attributed his club's drubbing by the Trojans, his worst defeat in 19 years as a head coach, to the way his players were running the wishbone attack.

"When you don't execute, it

Sailors win at Milwaukee

The Notre Dame sailing club finished first out of five teams last weekend in Milwaukee's Pere Marquette Regatta.

Sailing with borrowed crews, George Gaw and Al Constants, in "A" and "B" divisions, started slowly but improved their performances as the day wore on. Gaw began the day's racing by finishing fifth in a six boat fleet, but came back by posting five consecutive first place efforts, finishing as low point skipper in "A" division.

Al Constants, skipping his first major regatta for the Irish, began the "B" competition by posting fifth and sixth place finishes. But he came back with a string of three seconds and one first.

In all of his races but one, Constants was first to round the windward mark, but infractions and losing a crew overboard cost him his winning chances.

The Irish overcame an 18-point deficit and by the end of the competition emerged with a three-point lead over second-place Oshkosh. Milikin was a distant third, and was followed by University of Wisconsin (Milwaukee), Whitewater, and Marquette.

Next week the Irish tangle with the best competition in the midwest, as they meet Michigan, Michigan State, and six other schools at Ann Arbor.

doesn't make a damn bit of difference what you're running," he said. "It's a problem of getting the right guys in there. We haven't found the right combination of backfield people who will block as well as run."

Talking about the possibility of moving Niesen into the starting quarterback slot, Daugherty said, "He played there all spring and at least half an hour each day all fall in practice."

ND rises in both polls

Notre Dame continued to rise in the national rankings this week, climbing to seventh in the A.P. poll and eighth in the U.P.I. poll. Southern Cal, which romped to its fourth victory without a loss Saturday night against Michigan State, received twice as many first place votes as any team in either set of rankings and retained its number one position.

The Irish, who easily defeated Purdue, 35-14 last weekend, received 490 points in the A.P. ratings, 23 more than L.S.U. and 69 less than Nebraska.

Louisiana State was ranked seventh, just ahead of Notre Dame in the U.P.I. poll, garnering 144 points to 137 for the Irish. Washington was ninth, 72 points behind Notre Dame.

Besides Southern Cal, the only other future Irish opponent ranked in the top 20 was the Air Force Academy, rated 19th by the A.P. and 15th by the U.P.I.

WHY "SWEAT IT?"

Your average reading speed probably ranges between 150 and 300 words per minute. Graduates of the Reading Dynamics course read and study at least 3 to 5 times faster than that. And the average graduate of our course actually improves comprehension over 10 per cent.

Thousands of college students are Reading Dynamics graduates, including over 750 here at Notre Dame. This is the same basic course that first received national recognition when President John F. Kennedy invited Evelyn Wood to the White House to teach her system to top level staff personnel. Recently, 60 members of President Nixon's staff completed the course.

The best way to find out about the Reading Dynamics course is to come to a FREE READING LESSON. You will increase your reading 50 to 100 per cent on the spot. Here you'll learn what it's like to be able to read and study 3 to 5 times faster. You will see a short, enjoyable movie and have all of your questions answered.

The Irish Eye

A sort of love story

What can you say about a football team that loves blocking, tackling, running, passing and winning? And each other, not necessarily in that order.

That it's a young team? Yes. That it can score a lot of points? Yes. That the defense is tougher than anyone, even the coaches, had expected? Yes, that too.

You can say that the team is 2-0, having easily beaten two Big Ten teams. And you can say that the morale on the team is good. Very good, in fact.

Early this fall, Irish coach Ara Parseghian said, "Attitude can make a big difference in a team. A club with good morale, good leadership and determination can overcome inexperience."

He couldn't have been more correct.

Notre Dame has played great football this fall. Morale has been high, the leadership has been supplied by co-captains John Dampeer and Greg Marx and several older players, and everyone on the team has been determined to succeed.

So far, they've been a rousing success. Convincing wins over Northwestern and Purdue have enabled the young Irish to climb from 13th to 7th in the national rankings in just two weeks. But you can't find anyone willing to accept more than 1 out of 11th of the credit for the success of his unit. The team's the thing with the 1972 Irish.

Sophomore halfback Eric Penick, after someone in the locker room had asked him what it felt like to be one of the stars of the Purdue game, replied, "I don't feel like a star—I just feel like I'm playing football for Notre Dame and every game we're playing is for the national championship. We're a young team, too young to feel we've got individual stars."

If anyone deserved the tag of "star" after the Purdue game, it was senior tight end Mike Creaney, who was awarded the game ball Monday for his outstanding performance against the Boilermakers. But Creaney, a three-year starter for the Irish, shrugged off the part he had played in the 35-14 victory.

"If we win and all I do is block, that's fine," he said. "If I catch a lot of passes and we lose, what good is it?"

Creaney also expressed the togetherness that is so evident in this season's Notre Dame team.

"We're much more of a team unit this year," he said. "Who cares who does the job, as long as it gets done?"

One guy who has been doing his job extremely well is sophomore quarterback Tom Clements. His faking and passing ability gives the Irish offense that little extra "something". With Clements running the show, the Irish have a great offense, not just a good one.

But, when reporters swarm around Clements after the game, he prefers to talk about his teammates, rather than himself.

When asked about his outstanding passing performance against Purdue (17 of 24, 287 yards and two touchdowns), Clements replied, "I had all day to throw. The offensive linemen did a great job."

The offensive backs rave about the holes the line has been opening for them, and the linemen love to talk about the power and quickness of the backs.

The Irish offensive players are also quick to praise their defensive counterparts.

"I was really happy to see the defense do well," Creaney commented after Notre Dame's shutout win over Northwestern, "especially at the beginning of the season. It should just do wonders for their confidence. They've got a whole lot of talent. The only question mark was their experience."

Parseghian, of course, has noticed the feeling of unity on his ball club, and attributes it to a combination of several factors.

"We've been getting excellent leadership, we're a youthful team, and we've been successful early," Parseghian said. "Nothing is more depressing than losing. Winning has been a big morale boost."

"The enthusiasm of our younger players has been contagious," Parseghian continued. "But many of the older players have contributed as well."

Whatever the reasons, the Fighting Irish are more than a winning team this year, they're a happy team. They've had good morale, good leadership and determination. And, as Parseghian predicted, they've been able to overcome inexperience.

If Notre Dame continues this way, they could well write a love story with a happy ending.
