Macheca clarifies drug policy

by Jerry Lutkus
Editor-in-Chief.

Dean of Students John Macheca refused to confirm yesterday The Observer report of three drug raids in campus residence halls saying that "the individual student's right to personal reputation outweighs the student body's right to know the particulars of disciplinary proceedings."

While stating the policy of his office not to reveal information on cases under disciplinary action, Macheca further claimed that it is "unfortunate that hearsay reports on disciplinary matters most often contain serious inaccuracies."

"There is no question," he said in explaining the university's position of drugs, "that pushers are not going to be tolerated in this community. This does not exclude the providers or the dealers."

In a statement that he released to the campus media, Macheca established two guidelines that the university will follow in drug investigations:

1) The privacy of a student's campus residence will only be compromised if there is good reason to believe that there is a violation of university rules or regulations taking place within that room.

Macheca's guidelines were issued in conjunction with an SLC recommendation that the Student Affairs Office "publicize the procedures used in enforcing regulations and clarify the rights of the students involved." Also in line with those recommendations, Macheca did not give any details of individual cases.

"A general awareness of what's going on with a problem like drugs is good," Macheca said. "It's the awareness constructive for the community." He added that the awareness established through his guidelines would hopefully "decrease the reported paranoia."

The Dean of Students emphasized his belief that drugs are a "Mutual problem which needs a mutual effort to rid the campus of them." He continued that students who get involved in drug problems can expect

"There is no question that pushers are not going to be tolerated in this community," said Macheca the worse if it comes to the attention of the university.

When questioned about the pushers moving off campus, Macheca said that if they attempt to exploit the campus student population from off campus, "they will be dealt with."

"If I am aware of drug dealing that I am not in a position to affect, I will refer it to anyone who can," he said.

The Dean of Students also clarified the university rules about drugs that have been passed by the Student Life Council. There are three classifications of drug regulations, he explained. 1) Providing for others is a serious violation. 2) Possession or use of any narcotic or hallucinogenic is a serious violation and 3) The university does not consider the use of marijuana acceptable.

Macheca warned students not to bring quantities of drugs with them following the semester break. He claimed that all students have been given "fair warning" about the consequences of drug violations.

The complete statement of Macheca to the campus media follows:

Student Affairs has begun to implement a new program emphasizing the educational role of our office in the lives of students beyond the classroom. At the heart of this program is our level of awareness of student life. However, we will never use improper means to increase that degree of knowledge. On the other hand, we do welcome and encourage the input of students to sensitize us to the realities of student life here at Notre Dame.

Student Affairs has worked over the summer and the beginning of the year to restate the rules and values of this community as the initial step in the process of identifying them as part of our lives here. As the Dean of Students, the latter becomes one of my larger areas of responsibility, but it is not exclusive to me. On the contrary, it is shared by everyone on the Student Affairs staff, to say nothing of the community in general.

The individual student's right to personal reputation outweighs the student body's right to know the particulars of disciplinary proceedings.

The privacy of a student's campus residence will only be compromised if and when there is good reason to believe that there is a violation of University rules or regulations taking place within that room.

Provided there is sufficient advance knowledge of a violation, the Dean of Students will provide the occupant(s) of a room with a written explanation of the reason for the official inquiry as well as any appropriate verbal elaboration. Such inquiries will normally be the responsibility of Student Affairs personnel, including the staff of the particular hall.

Representatives of St. Edward's Hall confirmed yesterday that one resident of the hall has been expelled over the drug situation as reported in Tuesday's Observer. However, they denied that any raid had taken place in the hall. The representatives did not elaborate on how the individuals were apprehended.

Kissinger, Tho win 1973 Nobel Peace Prize

OSLO (UPI)- Henry Kissinger and North Vietnamese chief negotiator Le Duc Tho today won the 1973 Nobel Peace Prize, the Nobel Peace Committee announced.

Kissinger, the new U.S. Secretary of State, and Le Duc Tho negotiated the Vietnam cease-fire during a series of meetings in Paris last year.

Politicians and Nobel Prize experts said the announcement was the greatest surprise in the history of the award.

Kissinger and Tho were selected from a list of 40 nominees which included President Nixon, President Tito of Yugoslavia and Brazilian bishop Dom Helder Camara.

The two winners will share a record of $130,000 cash prize.

First since 1971

It was the first Nobel Peace Prize to be awarded since 1971. The Nobel Prize Committee last year named no winner because it said it could not find a suitable candidate. The last previous winner was West German Chancellor Willy Brandt in 1971.

The Nobel committee said Kissinger and Tho were nominated by Jon Sannes, professor of history at Oslo University and director of the Norwegian Foreign Policy Institute.

Three-year effort

In explaining the award the committee said, "For more than three years they have used all their strength and good will to achieve a negotiated solution, a peaceful solution of the Vietnam War.

"Thereby, they have performed a feat which is in the best accordance with Alfred Nobel's thoughts, that conflicts should be tried to be solved through negotiations and not through war."

Most gruesome war

The Vietnam War was described as the most gruesome and long conflict the world has experienced after the second World War," the committee added. "It was a gruesome war that did not only force upon the Vietnam civilian population enormous sufferings but that also poisoned the atmosphere in and between other countries in the whole world."

In a briefer formal announcement the committee said: "The war in Vietnam was the most gruesome and longest military conflict since the second World War was brought to an end with a cease-fire. The Norwegian Nobel Prize Committee has given the Peace Prize of 1973 to the two negotiators who with a joint achievement brought about the cease-fire January 23 this year. Dr. Henry Kissinger, U.S.A., and Le Duc Tho of the Democratic Republic of Vietnam."

At the time of the Nobel anouncement, Kissinger was in Washington at the White House, meeting with other security advisers, presumably on the Middle East conflict.

Before the award was announced, Nobel Institute Director

August Schou named two nominees who would not be considered- Soviet physicist Andri Sakharov, a leading Russian dissident, and the late President Salvador Allende of Chile, overthrown recently in a military coup.

Washington--Vice-President-nominee Gerald R. Ford said Tuesday an allegation in a book about Washington politics that he was the patient of a psychotherapist for a year is "categorically inaccurate." Ford responded to reporters questions about a reference in the book "Washington Pay-Off" by Robert N. Winter-Berger that he was a patient of Dr. Arnold Hutschnecker of New York who columnist Drew Pearson said at one time also treated Richard M. Nixon. Winter-Berger was a self-described Washington lobbyist who claimed intimate friendship with leading politicians.

Washington--U.S. District Judge John J. Sirica, saying five Watergate defendants "knowingly, intentionally and voluntarily" pleaded guilty in January, refused Tuesday to release them on bail. Sirica, however, did set hearing for Oct. 29 and Nov. 5 on motions by the five to change their pleas to innocent. A defense lawyer indicated he may subpoena former White House aides to testify.

Yonkers, N.Y.--Drummer Gene Krupa, whose flying sticks symbolized the swing era, died Tuesday after a lengthy illness. He was 64. The cause of death was not immediately announced. Krupa had suffered for years from benign leukemia, and he entered a Yonkers hospital last week for treatment of a heart problem connected with the disease.

Drape named News Editor

Tom Drape, a junior American Studies major, has been named news editor of The Observer, Jerry Lutkus, editor-in-chief announced Tuesday. Drape is presently serving in the post of wire editor for the newspaper and in the past has served as a day editor and a reporter.

Drape, a native of Kansas City, replaces Anthony Abowd of Farmington, Mich., who held the position of Observer news editor since October, 1972. Abowd, a junior Economics major, will retain a position on the Observer Editorial Board as an associate editor.

Ann McCarry, another junior American Studies major, will replace Drape as the wire editor. McCarry spent last year in the Rome program and has recently returned to the newspaper serving as an assistant night editor.

Marlene Zloza, a junior American Studies major, will also assume a post on the editorial board with Drape and McCarry. She has accepted an appointment as the third Observer associate editor.

Bill Brink, a sophomore in Arts and Letters, has assumed Zloza position as Sunday night editor. Dan Sanchez, a freshman from San Antonio, Texas, will serve as Brink's assistant night editor.

Sophomore Rick Blower and freshman Ann Moriarty have been named assistant night editors to Wednesday night editor Al D'Antonio.

Mid-term vacation changes schedules

by John McEachin
Staff Reporter

Classes are about the only thing that will not be happening during the midsemester break. Notre Dame students this weekend will be enjoying the first mid-term vacation since the University started scheduling final exams in December.

For those who plan to remain on campus during the break, the South Dining Hall will close after the evening meal on Thursday. Meals will be served for all students in the North Dining Hall.

Breakfast on Friday, Saturday and Monday will be from 8:00 to 8:30 and on Sunday one hour later, from 9:00 to 9:30. Lunch all four days will be from 12:00 to 1:00, and dinner Friday, Saturday and Sunday will be served from 5:30 to 6:30.

The South Hall will re-open Monday for dinner at 5 p.m. as the regular meal schedule resumes in both Dining Halls. The public cafeteria will be open as usual from 7:45a.m. to 7 p.m.

Huddle patrons should not that the Huddle will not be open Saturday and Sunday. Thursday evening it will close at 7:30 and Friday's hours will be from 8:00 to 4:00. Regular Hours will be followed on Monday, 7:30 a.m. to 12:30 a.m.

The only change in the Library's hours is that it will close at 5:00 p.m. Friday and Saturday and remain closed all day Sunday. The Bookstore will be open as usual, as will the ACC and the Rockne Memorial.

The Observer is published daily during the college semester except vacations by the students of the University of Notre Dame and St. Mary's College. Subscriptions may be purchased for $8 per semester ($14 per year) from The Observer Box Q, Notre Dame, Indiana 46556. Second class postage paid, Notre Dame, Ind. 46556.

HPC allocates money to halls

by Jim Eder
Staff Reporter

HPC Chairman Fred Baranowski announced last night that the Hall Life Fund allocation committee has distributed over $7800 among twenty-one halls and has placed $600 in a HPC contingency fund.

Holy Cross and Howard Hallshave received the largest allotments, $550 each. The smallest stipend awarded, $150, went to Badin.

The funds will be used for a wide variety of hall improvements, ranging from pianos to ironing boards. Athletic equipment, color television sets, and kitchen supplies were the three most frequent requests.

The allocation committee announced last week that it would not allot funds for hall banquets, but only for capital improvements. Consequently, Stanford and St. Edward's halls, both of which had asked for large banquet funds, submitted revised requests last weekend and received allocations for more permanent improvements. Requests for small banquet allotments by Badin and Alumni were denied.

The committee reviewing the requests of all the halls for allocations consisted of Fred Baranowski, HPC chairman; Pat McLaughlin, HPC executive coordinator; Wally Gasior, president of Dillon; Bob Chong, president of Howard; Ray Vorce, a Student Government representative and Kathy Cekanski, rec-tress of Breen - Phillips

Speaking for the committee, Baranowski said, "We allocated the money with several things in mind; (1) the amount awarded to each hall last year, (2) the type of improvements sought, and (3) our own knowledge of each hall's situation. We believe we have been consistent in both our approvals and rejections of the requests."

S.U. normal

Commissioners drop

Rybarczyk charges

by Tony Proscio
Staff Reporter

Student Union is back to normal. SU Director Jim Rybarczyk, whose recent impeachment by the Board of Commissioners was dropped Monday, has said his office will function "just as we did before this whole thing started."

"I don't see any bitterness here," he commented. "This hasn't hurt our relationship with Student Government at all. I'll still go out drinking with 'h' (Student Body President Dennis Etienne), and I hope they feel the same way."

Rybarczyk's impeachment, which drew protests and resignations from Student Union administrators, caused a two-week delay in regular Union business.

"The dormant period slowed us down a lot," Rybarczyk continued. "We'll have to accelerate now to keep programs going, but beyond that, there has been no real hinderance to the Student Union."

Public relations, he noted, have not been damaged. Citing a "quick start and several successes" early this year, Rybarczyk expressed confidence that student reactions will continue to be positive.

"Student Union stands on its record," he explained. "Given our history of past accomplishments, I think that as long as we are functioning, have good programs and are working for students, our PR should be good."

The impeachment, he charged, was a "freakish misunderstanding," resulting from rumors, a lack of communication, and "sensational news." A particular case against the office of director was exaggerated into a campus-wide issue, he said.

The charges, which were addressed to Rybarczyk alone, caused further controversy when three SU officials threatened resignation and cancellation of non-contract events if impeachment was begun. Associate Director Kenneth Muth, Assistant Director Peter Bohlander, and Comptroller Robert Fahrenbach submitted resignations when the commissioners voted unanimously for impeachment.

"Our resignations are withdrawn," Fahrenbach said, "in light of Ralph's (Rybarczyk) not being dismissed. I think the impeachment was partially motivated by an emotional response on both sides."

Bitterness was temporary, Fahrenbach continued, but Student Union and Student Government attitudes now favor greater communication and cooperation.

"We look to the future with hope," Rybarczyk commented. "We can work problems out peacefully and rationally; we proved that here."

Fieldhouse alive and well

by Bill Powers
Staff Reporter

Five years after the threat of demolition the Fieldhouse is alive and well, and still renovating to suit the needs and activities of the campus artisans. In addition to the various studios and the student gallery, the art department is currently constructing a ceramics area in the center of the Fieldhouse.

In the past week, a 33' by 60' cement base was constructed on the dirt floor by students and helpers. Under the direction of Bill Kramer, a ceramics instructor, two gas kilns will be fired pottery are being built. The building of a third kiln is expected to be a student project.

In addition six potters' wheels will be used, thereby transferring the ceramic activity from O'Shaughnessy to the more spacious fieldhouse. Under the south bleachers, rooms are being designed by Fr. Albert Moore, implementing colorful acrylic plastics.

The old boxing and fencing rooms, as well as the handball courts are now used as studios for undergraduate and graduate work. Undergraduate studio art courses are held in the Fieldhouse as well.

Student cooperation in improving the Fieldhouse has been cited by Thomas S. Fern, the Chairman of the Art Department.

"The creative and artistic motivations of the students have produced aesthetic decisions and are to be praised," commented Fern.

The best examples of student work can be viewed in the Isis Gallery, directed by graduate student Chris Gregory. The required Senior Seminar for art majors is now planned in conjunction with the student gallery.

Since athletic activity has terminated in the Fieldhouse, the autonomous Art Department has made ample use of the structure. The remarkable factor contributing to its success is the cooperation of the students and faculty to make it almost accommodating and comfortable place to learn.

Personality key in next election

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Howard Baker, R-Tenn., vice chairman of the Senate Watergate Committee, said Tuesday he believes the 1976 presidential candidates will be personality oriented rather than issue oriented.

"I think it's unlikely you're going to have an issue oriented candidate elected," Baker said.

"You're going to have a personality oriented president."

Baker made his comments in off-the-cuff remarks to newsmen attending a seminar on presidential power sponsored by the Washington Journalism Center.

He also said he thought vice president-designate Rep. Gerald R. Ford, Mich., could be a person to put one of his own pet ideas into practice — the building up of the presidential presence in the Congress.

Although such duties are not spelled out in the Constitution, Baker said, the office of the vice president "could be expanded" and the vice president could act as "the surrogate" of the President on Capitol Hill.

"I have a hunch Jerry Ford could do that," he said.

Baker said Ford was "steady, honest (and has) good perception. He is at least as qualified as Harry Truman was when he was selected."

Baker also suggested that the Watergate Committee might turn over its records and investigatory material to standing committees of the Senate for a probe of campaign practices prior to the 1972 election. The Watergate committee is prohibited by its Congressional mandate from looking at any election but the 1972 campaign.

His suggestion that Ford might be able to provide a presence on the Hill was made within the context, he said, of his feeling that the presidency should become "a little less regal."

"I would like to see us revert to a first name presidency," he said.

Baker also suggested that antagonism between the administration and Congress was lessening. He said he noticed this when he was at the White House for the Ford announcement — noting it was "one of the few times I've been there lately."

But he said the Congressmen there were no longer "awestruck. They were chatting and joking — and some of it was quite cruel."

C5A's land supplies

U.S. replenishes Israelis

By MITCHEL VINICOR
AT AN ISRAELI AIR BASE (UPI) — U.S. Air Force C5A Galaxies, the world's largest military transports, landed one after another Tuesday bringing American supplies for Israel's war effort. Israelis in the street were overjoyed at the airlift.

There was no indication how many U.S. transports landed at bases with supplies promised by President Nixon to counter the airlift of Soviet weapons to Egypt and Syria.

The Israeli military command refused to comment on the airlift. "United States jet transports?" said an Israeli official. "They must have come to the American Embassy to bring food, I presume, or cigarettes or booze."

The equipment shuttled in by the big American planes was not disclosed, but the United States said it would supply Israel with tanks, armored personnel carriers, warplanes, artillery, helicopters and ammunition to replace losses in the first 11 days of the war.

The supply planes bore U.S. Air Force insignia and American flags on their 10-story-tall tails.

"I get a good feeling whenever I see one of the planes," said Yehuda, a worker at the base. "We have only one good friend we can rely on and that's the United States."

"My opinion about America is very positive because it is the only good friend of us," said Ari Gershon, who emigrated from Russia 45 years ago. "I wouldn't like to expect direct help with manpower and army personnel from America. But as I see in the newspapers the Russians are helping the Arabs not only with supplies but with personnel."

"They certainly should supply Israel," said a recent immigrant from America who refused to give his name. Asked if he thought the U.S. help would put Israel under pressure to grant negotiating concessions under U.S. pressure, he said: "Pressures? Israel has so many pressures what's one more little one?"

House delays vote on new fuel allocation bill

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House indicated Tuesday there is broad support for a bill to order federal allocation of fuels on a bigger scale than President has proposed, but a final vote on the measure was put off.

Oil state and northeastern congressmen traded charges of sectionalism in lengthy debate that included defeat of efforts to exempt oil producers from the program.

The House bill would direct the President to order producers and distributors to furnish enough fuels to areas of greatest shortage to get through the winter fuel crunch. The bill's authority would run out Feb. 28, 1975.

The bill would apply to crude oil, residual oil and refined petroleum products — covering oil from its production through the wide range of petroleum products.

Such an allocation would, in a sense, spread out any shortages. It would make sure no essential users of fuels such as public health and safety and the national defense would go wanting.

Smaller, independent dealers would get supplies on the same basis as major dealers.

The bill would ban the export of any fuel subject to allocation. A producer could not sell to a profitable foreign market any fuel in short supply at home.

"This is not a permanent bill," said Rep. Harley O. Staggers, D-W.Va., floor manager of the bill. "This is only for the crisis right now. If we don't do this thing, there is going to be a lot of hardship in this land."

Rep. J. J. Pickle, D-Tex., who tried unsuccessfully to get producers exempted, said the President has already ordered allocations of the fuels needed most this winter, propane and heating oil. The House bill would only be "opening up another can of worms," Pickle said.

The Senate has passed a mandatory fuel allocation bill that would operate along the same lines as the pending House bill. No date was set for further consideration of the House measure.

Appeals court to hear IBM case

By JERRY R. WILSON

TULSA, Okla. (UPI) —The IBM-Telex antitrust case will go to a U.S. Court of Appeals without any assignment of damages, a federal judge said Tuesday.

Citing the evidence presented to him as insufficient, U.S. District Judge A. Sherman Christensen of Salt Lake City said he would certify his previous judgment, finding IBM guilty of antitrust violations and Telex guilty of industrial espionage, for review by the higher court but would leave the question of damages open pending a later determination on his part.

"I have concluded that the evidence before me is insufficient to justify the recalculation or redetermination of the amount of antitrust damages by specific or approximated sums and accordingly I intend to grant an amendment to the findings of fact, conclusions of law and judgment leaving the amount to be determined at a special hearing or to grant a motion for a new trial on the subject of damages only," Christensen said.

In a decision handed down Sept. 17, Christensen awarded Telex $352.5 million in treble damages in its antitrust suit against IBM, and awarded $21.9 million to IBM in its industrial espionage counterclaim.

On Oct. 9, however, Christensen notified both parties that he had made a "substantial error" in making his calculations of the judgment against IBM, later explaining that he had failed to deduct from the IBM judgment certain amounts he felt might be used to offset the Telex claim.

Attorneys for both sides commented after the judge's statement that it appeared he would send the original judgment to the appeals court and would decide later on how to proceed with determining the amount of the antitrust judgment.

Christensen said the main thought regarding the appeals court was the hope they would "make a determination on the relationship between trade secrets misappropriations and antitrust actions."

He called the present case "unprecedented" in the conflict between the two suits under consideration.

Jackson leads mayoral election

By SAM MILLER

ATLANTA (UPI) —Maynard Jackson, seeking to become the first black mayor of a major southern city, and white incumbent Sam Massell ran neck-and-neck Tuesday night in early returns from a bitter runoff election for mayor of Atlanta.

With 70 of the city's 193 precincts reporting, Vice Mayor Jackson, the favorite, had 15,034 votes to Massell's 13,362.

Jackson, 35, came within 3,500 votes of winning outright in a field of 11 candidates two weeks ago.

Blacks represent 51 per cent of the population in Atlanta, but there are about 4,000 more registered white voters.

In the race for President of the city council —a newly created post with virtually as much power as that of mayor —white alderman Wyche Fowler was running well ahead of Fowler appeared to be getting a considerable portion of the black vote.

The principal issue in the runoff grew out of Massell's switch to a theme of "Atlanta's black civil rights leader Hosea Williams, with 18,533 votes —over 62 per cent —to 9,038. too young to die." He lumped Jackson and Williams together virtually as a ticket —despite Jackson's refusal to support Williams, and Williams' denunciation of Jackson. He said their election would mean the decline of Atlanta because many whites were "scared" of them.

Philippines victimized

Ruth hits islands

MANILA (UPI) — Typhoon Ruth, the third major storm to hit the Philippines in a week, swept away a bridge Monday night with 40 persons on it and only four were rescued, the official Philippine News Agency said Tuesday. There was no word on the fate of the others, many of them children.

The bridge gave way during the height of the typhoon in Nueva Ecija Province, one of the hardest-hit areas, 70 miles north of Manila, the agency said.

There were at least five other drownings reported due to the powerful typhoon that caused flooding and landslides and forced the evacuation of thousands of persons.

The storms triggered floods from Manila to the "rice bowl" provinces of central Luzon. In metropolitan Manila areas alone, an estimated 15,000 persons fled their homes along the banks of the rain-swollen Pasig River, according to the Department of Social Welfare.

Ruth, however, spared the main Manila area and its 4.5 million residents of the full force of its 85 mile-an-hour winds but it whipped up fringe winds and heavy rains to cause flooding along the Pasig and low-lying districts.

At 10 a.m., she was tracked by land radar about 160 miles northwest of Manila moving towards the South China after an overland sweep across central Luzon and some northern provinces.

Weathermen predicted improving weather over Manila and the rest of Luzon as Ruth moves out towards the South China sea.

Of the two earlier typhoons, Nora and Patsy, Nora caused the most damage with its 160 mile-an-hour peak winds, leaving more than one million homeless and 24 dead.

Pasto wins R.I.T. honor

Dr. Daniel J. Pasto, University of Notre Dame professor of chemistry, has been chosen one of two Rochester (N.Y.) Institute of Technology Outstanding Alumni of 1973.

The award recognizes alumni of the school who through exceptional accomplishment in such areas as professional endeavor, civic contributions and personal integrity have brought significant honor to it.

Pasto, who received his undergraduate degree from the Institute in 1958, earned a Ph. D. in chemistry from Iowa State University. He joined the Notre Dame faculty in 1961.

Learning A Lesson

Now that the Student Union "crisis" has subsided and the Board of Commissioners has decided to turncoat on their original decision to impeach S. U. Director Jim Rybarczyk, it's time to look back at the crisis and suggest methods with which to handle the ticket situation. Also, it is the time to make a suggestion for the return of a popular Union activity.

In 1970 and 1971, football tickets for the Homecoming Game were distributed through a lottery system. All students interested in purchasing tickets got into the lottery and took their chances.

That system for some reason was scrapped last year, but if the union learns by their mistakes, they will see that the lottery system should be resumed. (Even though this union staff will not be in power next year, they can lay the groundwork and pass on the advice.)

On two days of the week, the Student Union Ticket Office should be used as the sign up area. All students including Union members should register at the office for the lottery. The registrations would be passed on to a computer which would then do a random selection program and come up with a list of 250 people who can buy a pair of tickets -- and all 500 tickets should be sold. That list can then be posted in the Huddle and printed in The Observer.

The day that the list is printed in the paper until the end of that week, those 250 students can present their ID's at the Ticket Office and purchase their tickets. If at the end of the week, all 250 pairs are not picked up, then the students who have number over 250 can serve as a waiting list and get their opportunity to purchase the tickets.

This lottery system is the only fair way of handling the tickets. Also, hopefully, the union won't be stuck with the misfortune next year of having to use a game of the magnitude of the SC game as the Homecoming Game. This year there was no choice in the matter, hopefully, next year that won't be the same.

The Over-The-Hill night on Wednesday nights in LaFortune is the activity that should return. Over-the Hill was a project initiated by the Union a few years ago featuring campus folk talent and rock bands in the second floor ballroom of LaFortune every Wednesday night. It was always a great way to break up the week and gave an informal gathering spot for students. Further, it created a large showcase for campus talent and brought many people into the student center.

The return of an activity of this order would be a big plus for the S.U.

Opinion Where Are The Students? Leanne Jacques

Last weekend that famed elusive group, known as the SMC Board of Regents met. The revised male visitation policy remained tabled with a 12-12 vote. Why? Mary Ellen Stumpf, student representative, declares the new Board members (12 of them) needed time to get "informed about the entire picture". Why weren't these new members informed before the meeting? Because they weren't chosen in ample time. Why weren't they chosen within a considerable amount of time by which they could have received information? Doesn't St. Mary's at least owe this much to the students?

And what do the students owe? They owe it to themselves the opportunity to get out from under the barrel. I don't believe that the students are apathetic because there seems to be genuine concern over the issue. The problem results from a defeatist attitude. "What can we do?" is the common question.

First of all the Board of Regents meet during hard times for the students. Right before breaks. During breaks. Exam time. Clearly, taking time for action jeopardizes a student's grades which are important. Yes, sir, exams certainly keep us in line. (Remember the merger?)

Secondly, any action such as a mass violation of the no-male visitation policy works against rather than for the student body. We would only prove that we ARE "irresponsible" and confirm the idea that we are not mature enough to handle parietals.

Obviously the Board of Regents do not recognize the change in student life as it is today. They view the halls as wall to wall bedrooms rather than the homes that they are to the people who reside in them. Nothing is immoral about entertaining in your homes.

It seems ironic that the women at St. Mary's, in the eyes of the nation, are old enough to marry and bear children, but in the eyes of the college are not old enough to run their own lives. Ironic! It's pitiful.

The objection of violating someone's privacy is totally absurd. Privacy is something that roommates work out among themselves, not something handed down by holy decree. Privacy is not dictated. It is negotiated between the involved parties.

The social life at St. Mary's lacks a comfortable and natural atmosphere. (Oh, those phrases from across the road!) St. Mary's is going to need all the social advantages it can get. The increasing co-education of Notre Dame will make the social situation at St. Mary's a lot tighter. St. Mary's decided for academic independence but still carries a social dependence on Notre Dame. Isn't it time we shared social opportunities rather than lived off them?

So what CAN we do? Last year a random survey was sent out among the student body to poll opinion on the parietal issue. We need a total view of the student body, a complete poll. This poll could then be sent to each member of the Board of Regents. And then? Try to set up a trial visitation weekend. How? Through governmental processes, which could take a while, but if the pressure was really on, the proposals made up quickly and accurately enough, emergency meetings called for this purpose the time would be greatly shortened.

And if after we have acted reasonably, maturely and logically and still get no response or even an inane response... what do we do? (Raise our status. Become equal to parents and alumni. Initiate bake sales and funding campaigns to raise bribe money.) Hold a mass violation of the rules. What have we got to lose then?

Anyone interested in working on a telephone polling committee call 4027.

Bad Waves

Dear Editor:
On Friday morning I woke to the sound of my phone ringing. I fell out of bed to answer it and on the other end of the line was a friend of mine screaming hysterically to turn on the radio and tune in to WSND. It seems that Spiro Agnew, former vice president of our nation, was being publically screwed by the University of Notre Dame.

I turned on WSND, "the voice of Notre Dame," and could only listen for a minute. It was sad, the radio station representing the University of Notre Dame, acting so juvenile, so bush-league, just because the person running the show, Fred Graver seems to have a personal gripe against the Nixon administration.

I have read Graver's articles printed in the Observer and respect him as a journalist, but I think it is sad that he took advantage of his air time on the radio to castigate Mr. Agnew. Or maybe it wasn't just Graver, maybe it was the entire staff of WSND.

It seems funny to me that a radio station as bad as WSND would have the nerve to desecrate someone else's name when, in reality, someone should have the nerve to desecrate theirs.

I only hope that no one other than regular listeners of WSND heard this show, for it certainly was a bad reflection and disgrace for the entire University.

Gina Haffey, a staff member at WSND, once told me that those letters stood for "We Serve Notre Dame." I think, more appropriately, they should stand for "We Shame Notre Dame."

A Strange Peace

I woke up today (Tuesday) to read the most disturbing news in a long time.

While American military supplies were being loaded onto the deck of the Aben Det., President Nixon was speaking at a Medal of Honor ceremony in Washington. This is what he had to say: "I would conclude by saying that the men honored today and the thousands of other Americans who also should be honored, who served this country in Viet Nam, made it possible for the United States to play the honored role of peacemaker in the world."

After reading his comment my eyes moved to a poster on my wall. I read the quote I have read at least thirty times already. "Peace cannot be kept by force. It can only be achieved by understanding." (Albert Einstein)

I must be crazy. Did we bring peace to Viet Nam and the entire Indochina area? I have been living under the impression that the fighting in Southeast Asia continues to this very day.

What makes our President think we are the "peacemaker of the world"? (If military supplies were drugs we'd be the "junkie of the

Tips On Journalism

To the editor:

Regarding the controversy of the refusal of the stadium to allow the couple to enter with their 5 month old baby and the corresponding University policy, the Observer and therefore the manipulated student opinion has been somewhat quick in responding with their proclivity of condemning the administration. I am not defending the university's policy in the case, merely expressing criticism of its thoughtless condemnation. The point has been repeatedly made that the motivator for this policy is dollar oriented. Not since 1964 has Notre Dame failed to fill its stadium and it becomes increasingly less likely each year that we will have any sub-capacity crowds. Anyone capably of the least logical thinking would realize that by insisting even infants have tickets for admissions, not more tickets will be sold. Therefore there will be no moe gate receipts. Obviously then, the motives behind this policy are not to get their grubby hands on an additional $8 from a child who will not even remember the game as was implied and boldly stated by the Observer. Perhaps a good reason would be the inconvenience to paying customers of being squeezed off the bench by a family who would abuse such a privilege and perhaps there is no good reason. However anyone with journalistic responsibility must recall that speculative reporting and hasty conclusions will frequently lead to erroneous judgement.

Respectfully,
Joe Fegoosk

Becoming A Man

Editor:

On Thursday evening, Mark limped into the cafeteria with a sprained ankle. He waited in line, got a tray of food and tried to hobble to a table with both crutches under one arm, and the tray balanced on the other hand. He slipped on a piece of tomatoe, and fell to the floor in a painful heap. The tray flew through the air and struck the wall with a crash. Broken glass, roast beef, potatoes and gravy lettered the floor.

Standing not four feet away were three cafeteria workers, proudly displaying their new striped jackets. Seeing Mark on the floor, they immediately sprang into action. The first stood there and laughed. The second pointed at Mark and laughed. The third just stood there.

Four people closely following Mark almost tripped over him, and then walked quickly away to their tables, thankful that they did not have to get involved. People sitting all around made no move. Finally, a fellow sitting half way across the cafeteria got up, ran over, helped the invalid to a chair, cleaned up the mess, and got the man another tray of food. The cafeteria workers ignored him, being pre-occupied with slouching against the stained wall, showing off their new jackets and their manly lack of sympathy.

Meanwhile, a blind black man walked into the serving area. Miscalculating he walked right into the glass shelves holding deserts. The worker stocking the shelves uttered no word of warning, neither did the people around him.

And where did all this happen? Right here at Notre Dame. Right in the middle of a Christian community so intent on eating and slouching that they couldn't take a minute to help a fellow student, a fellow Christian, a fellow human being!

Why didn't the people all around him-- in the name of God, common courtesy or human decency-stop to help. What is it that drives a man so far into himself that he has nothing to give, no concern to share with his fellow man? What type of person can call himself a MAN if he cannot show compassion, if he cannot stoop to help someone else? It doesn't take large monetary contributions to the overseas missions. It doesn't take hours of collecting for the United Appeal. While all these things are good in themselves, to be a man, all a person has to do is stretch out his hand, sincerely and honestly, to someone standing close by who has a need-be it physical, mental, or deeply emotional. Or maybe it's just the need for a friendly smile and someone to talk to.

Maybe if we give it a try, just once, to try to reach someone, others might get the idea too. And maybe, someday, we won't see invalids lying on floors while people trip over them and others point and laugh. And maybe we won't see blind people walking into blind alleys without a word of direction. And maybe we won't hear people refusing to help someone in their class because school is cut-throat, and it might raise the curve if somebody else does well. And maybe we won't find people standing like dumb cattle next to each other-physical inches apart, and yet personally beyond reach. And just maybe, someday, we'll all wake up and be able to sincerely say to ourselves, "Hey, I'm proud to be here. I'm proud to be a member of the Notre Dame county. I'm proud to be a man."

Students unaware of activities

by Judy Rauenhorst
Staff Reporter

Many students are unaware of off-campus activities and job programs offered to minority students through Student Activities. Cassell Lawson, director of off-campus student activities and minority student affairs, is the man behind these two programs.

As director of off-campus student activities, Lawson coordinates volunteer functions with the South Bend Community. He said that 1200 students spend time outside the University in volunteer roles. One program involves students who work with the Urban League Street Academy. "These students spend time with dropouts in a tutorial capacity or as teacher's aids," explained Lawson.

The second aspect of Lawson's job, that of working with minority students, involves coordinating black organizations on campus.

"I see our role as a service type role and a training type role," said Lawson. In explaining the service role, Lawson said it mainly involves counseling minority students that may not seek it elsewhere. "The emphasis is to help students to get a direction and to better understand the structure they are caught up in," he stated.

"This counseling addresses itself to all aspects of student life: social events, financial aid, boy-girl relations, admissions, anything that is not within the academic realm. All academic questions go to Dr. Joseph Scott of the Black Studies Program," continued Lawson.

The director of minority student affairs is responsible for two facilities in LaFortune. "The Black Cultural Arts Center on the third floor allows students to have a place they can go, external to the classroom. It is an extension of the classroom complete with artifacts and literature, enabling the individual to become intellectually involved," explained Lawson.

He emphasized that the center is open to all students to become aware of the Black situation and to socialize. "Every Wednesday evening we have a film in the center in conjunction with the Black Studies Program," said Lawson.

In describing the training role, Lawson told of the seven students he works with. Undergraduates Lionel Phillips, Greg Crawford and Richard Dickinson keep the Black Cultural Arts Center open. Albert Mendez and Billy Banner man the Minority Counseling Center located in the basement of LaFortune. Two graduate students, Sharon Browner and Craig Adams, act as a liaison between the two centers.

"These people are in interims of training. Each week we meet and discuss skills that help them to work efficiently," said Lawson. "When notified of a student that needs help, we move out into the University environment and knock on doors. If we cannot help, we will direct the student to a special service. It is important that the trainees know how to communicate and confront people in their own environment," added Lawson.

One of the activities this semester was a black student convention held September 15. "I saw students sit down and take a hard look at the issues in the community," said Lawson. As a result of the conference they hope to implement academic houses where 'improved' students could live to reinforce their behavior and eliminate anxiety.

Lawson emphasized that the programs set up are nothing new. "We want to coordinate counseling functions with the University for students who might come to LaFortune while feeling reluctant to go to the Administration Building," said Lawson.

"I feel very warm and positive about what has happened to minority students and I am happy in my role. I think things will continue to improve in working with the students toward their goals," claimed Lawson. His main objective is to help students achieve academic excellence and allowing them to make adjustments to a new environment. "We have a lot to do, but I am comfortable in the progress we have made," concluded Lawson.

Prior to coming to Notre Dame in 1970, Lawson was director of the Urban League in South Bend for three years. He is presently working toward his doctorate in Counseling Psychology.

Professors receive awards

by Ken Bradford
Staff Reporter

Three Notre Dame economics professors have received the Kazanjian Foundation Award for their achievement in economic education.

The winning program was developed two years ago by Professors William Davisson, Frank Bonello, and Kenneth Jameson, along with Frank Navratile, a graduate student here last year.

The Kazanjian Award is presented by the Joint Council of Economic Education for improvements made in the teaching of economics.

In addition to winning its recipients a $1000 cash prize, the award, according to Jameson, "helps establish Notre Dame as one of the main economic teaching centers in the country."

Jameson described the change in approach by saying that in many classes "concepts are thrown at students; they memorize them, take an exam, and forget them."

The innovative program involves "teaching students the skills which economists really use," Jameson explained. Students are introduced to computer programming and statistical testing techniques.

The Economics 101-102 course taught by Professors Davisson, Bonello and Jameson is offered to forty freshmen and consists of two lectures and one lab every week.

In the lectures, students are taught the basic concepts and the philosophy of economics. In the lab sessions, they concentrate on analytic economic problems.

"Actually, they do whatever economists do," Jameson added.

A key force in their winning the award was the success students taking the course displayed through the quality of their work, Jameson said.

Jameson also said that the program received valuable support from Dr. Dennis Duggan, Chairman of the Economics Department, and Dr. Frederick Crosson, Dean of the College of Arts and Letters.

Committee probes dark spots

by Jeanne Murphy
Staff Reporter

Have you recently seen a group of girls walking around campus at night with a flash light in one hand and a map in the other? They were part of a Lighting Committee organized by Sister John Miriam Jones to find the darkest spots on campus.

Sr. John Miriam, assistant to the provost, has been concerned for some time about the inadequate lighting facilities on campus. She attributes the major problem of the "unevenness" of lights to the fact that "lighting has not kept pace with the expansion of the campus."

She organized a committee of ten women students who made nightly tours of the campus and indicated on a map, dark areas which needed lighting. The girls on the committee were: Diana Merten and Kathy Johnson from Breen-Philips; Ann Weber and Evelyn Mongovran from Badin; Maureen Lathers and Barbara Budde from Farley; Ginna Smith and Sue Darin from Walsh; and from Lewis Hall, Sr. Theresa Sandok and Sr. Arlene Lenox.

The committee designated fourteen different locations where lights are needed. Some of these dark areas include Sacred Heart Church between the Administration Building and Sorin Hall; St. Edward's Hall and the Administration Building route to the laundry; the area between the Huddle, the Business Administration Building and Nieuwland Science; the right and left sides of the Field house; between Howard, Lyons and Morrissey; the road along the lake to the ROTC building, to Old College, and to Lewis Hall from the power plant; and the St. Mary's road to St. Joseph Hall where there are no lights at all.

Safety precautions, not so much security precautions are Sr. John Miriam's main concern. She claims that there are many hazardous spots on campus where it is hard to see where you are walking. Thus, she is "not interested in supermarket lighting," but rather, maintaining a "soft light effect."

Sr. John Miriam reports lighting for safety, not only security.

A private lighting company has been sought to conduct their own survey on the campus light situation. After this company has completed their investigation, all the data from the committee and company will be compiled to see where new lights should be added.

Eighteen lights were previously ordered before the committee went on their search, but Sr. John Miriam feels that more lampposts will be needed to sufficiently cover the dark areas on campus.

Ken McCandless, a member of the Campus Committee for Environment, feels that the committee is "good in the sense that it lists places, it is good input and needed." He has submitted several proposals which would change the lighting situation on campus, but none of his suggestions have been implemented. He claims that the committee's work should not be the only input into any decision, but the men on campus should also have some input and voice. Lights accommodate both sexes, he said. Therefore, the girl's committee should not be the only voice on the situation.

Homecoming dance detailed

by Rick Scharf
Staff Reporter

"A Barn Dance" is the theme for the 1973 homecoming dance scheduled for Fri., Oct. 26, from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. in Stepan Center. Some confusion concerning the dance has hurt ticket sales thus far, according to Rich Guiltinan, student co-ordinator of

A's net Mets in 11th, 3-2

NEW YORK (UPI) Bert Campaneris singled home an unearned run in the 11th inning Tuesday night to give the Oakland A's a 3-2 victory over the New York Mets in the third straight World Series game decided by defensive lapses.

The victory gave the A's a 2-1 lead in this wild Series which hasn't been notable for much good play but has had plenty of excitement.

New York staked Tom Seaver, its best pitcher, to a 2-0 lead, but he wasn't able to hold it when Joe Rudi punched a single just under first baseman John Milner's glove in the eighth inning to score Campaneris with the tying run.

Errors by Felix Millan, the goat of the Mets' first-game defeat, gave the A's scoring chances in both the 9th and 10th innings but each time Tug McGraw pitched out of danger. But in the 11th, a strikeout-passed ball play, reminiscent of catcher Mickey Owens' famous gaffe which cost Homecoming events. The dance will not conflict with the pep rally or the free folk concert scheduled earlier that evening. Also, the rumor that an armory party is planned for homecoming weekend is false.

"It will not be a square dance," stressed Guiltinan. "The band we are having will play rock, popular music, and some country-western songs." The band booked for the dance is "Windjammer."

A buffet dinner, catered by the Capri Restaurant, will be served consisting of sandwiches, potato salad, and soft drinks.

Stepan Center will be decorated extensively to create the atmosphere of a barn. A horse and wagon will also be available for those who would like to have their picture taken at the dance.

A theme was chosen for this year's Homecoming Dance due to the success of the '72 dance which used the theme of Prohibition. "About 500 couples attended last year's dance and I think everyone really had a great time," Guiltinan added.

Tickets for the dance, on sale at the Student Union Ticket Office LaFortune Center and in the Dining halls during meal hours, are $6 per couple.

UFO'S sited around the world

By United Press International

It's red. It's blue. Some times it turns green. It has wrinkled skin, crab-claw hands and pointy ears. It has a beard. It foams at the mouth. And the Russians say it may be trying to say howdy.

It has been seen down by the old fishing hole at Bascagoula, Miss., out near the airport at Beckley, W. Va., in the piney woods of Louisiana and in the hallowed halls of the College of the Ozarks in Arkansas.

And it has been heard in Moscow.

The UFO craze is on again with a vengeance.

Two Pascagoula shipyard workers claimed they were hustled aboard a blue, fish-shaped craft by three weird creatures who gave them the once over with an eye-like scanning device.

A Northwestern University astronomer, Dr. Allemn Hynek, said flatly the craft was from another planet.

"Where they are coming from and why they were here is a matter of conjecture," Hynek said. "But the fact that they were here on this planet is a beyond a reasonable doubt."

The attorney for the two shipyard workers - Charles Hickson, 42, and Calvin Parker, 18 - said they were "just resting" Tuesday and would take lie-detector tests in a week or so to prove their story.

Around the world in Moscow, Soviet scientists said they picked up unusual radio signals from space and did not rule out that they came from another civilization.

The Tass news agency said the signals, of a type never heard before, came in pulses after definite lapses of time, last for several minutes and are repeated several times a day. Tass said scientists have ruled out the possibility that the signals are from satellites launched from earth.

"It is not precluded that they may be sent by a technically developed extra terrestrial civilization," the Russian report said. Tass said Professor Samuel Kaplan of Gorky University was the first to pick up the signals. Later they were heard in other Soviet cities.

At Pine, La., sheriff's deputies chased five orange-reddish flying objects 12 miles through the woods early Tuesday.

"One of our deputies was scared pretty bad," said Deputy Michael Moore. "He turned on his red lights, and they came down at his patrol car. He turned them off and they just vanished like in a cloud."

Pine and Pascagoula are 150 miles apart. Down the road at Slidell, across Lake Pontchartrain from New Orleans, Lloyd Mercier said he was driving home when he saw a UFO that was 20 feet thick with a streak through it.

"All I could see was a red glow. It looked like it came straight out of the water. I've seen it tonight with my own natural eyes," Mercier said. "I have to believe what I see. It was no moon and it was no balloon and it was no ship."

At the College of the Ozarks in Clarksville, Ark., a "ghost-like bearded creature with long, gray hair who foams at the mouth" has been seen by students and faculty members. But that creature has been hiding for four days.

"He was last seen Friday behind McLean Hall," said Vernon McDaniel, a college official. Mrs. Fritz Ehren, wife of the vice president of academic affairs and two night watchmen also said the saw the monster.

Blots at the Raleigh County Airport at Beckley, W. Va., saw a mysterious night flyer that turned red, then green, then white.

"It just kept moving away from me," said one pilot who chased the object in a small plane. "I couldn't get any closer. I don't think it was an airplane because the whole thing would change color at the same time."

Other reported UFO sightings came from Gulfport and Meridian, Miss.

An exceptionally fast-moving and brilliant "star" caught the attention of three Breen-Phillips residents yesterday evening. Appearing directly overhead, the object travelled in a straight line and then curved, making a rather circular motion while shifting its light intensity. These girls weren't the only ones who spotted a strange object in the sky at 6:40 p.m. yesterday evening.

Eight other calls reported sightings of UFO's were made to the Indiana State Post at Ligonier. The reports were received from residents in Noble, La Grange, Steuben and De Kalb Counties.

According to Officer Don Hayden of the post, all reports "describe 'it' to be white and yellow; 'they' remain stationary

Party vehicle

runs today

by Terry Keeney
Staff Reporter

The "Party Bus" is on the road again. The non-express shuttle bus between Notre Dame and St. Mary's will be transformed into a party bus between noon and 5 p.m. today.

Along with the usual party decor and refreshments of soda pop and potato chips, Juan Manigault, special projects commissioner for the Social Commission, has provided live entertainment. Riders can listen to live guitar music or play "Pin Woodstock on Snoopy" - the "Peanuts" version of pin-the-tail-on-the-donkey.

"Your friendly host and hostess for the ride will be Tom Callahan and Debbie Sansoni," said Manigault.

Manigault believes that the shuttle bus is a good vehicle for meeting people. Yet too often the riders make no effort to mingle with others. He hopes the "party bus" can stimulate more interaction.

"The purpose of the party bus is to create a feeling of warmth on the bus with a party atmosphere," explained Manigault. "This way people lose their inhibitions and see others as people, instead of as statues."

for a short period and then change location with great speed; and "it" as reported by one observer, caused interference with a walkie talkie radio.

Goshen Police Department stood outside their station last night to observe a "stationary, bright light, that had been moving." This light appeared to be directly above Goshen College.

Another South Bend student spotted "seven real bright dots in the sky. They were in a v-formation and were going like a streak of lightning but we got a good look at them." Both students of Central Night School, called the police department at approximately 7:30 p.m.

Typical of other reports called in to local police stations throughout the state and nation, a local state police officer received a report from a resident of Culver who sighted a light glow with a redish tint to the east of Culver. The party calling mentioned that they observed it for at least 20 minutes prior to calling.

Again, the light intensity of the object alternately dimmed and brightened. Upon contacting the Culver police department over this incident, a South Bend state trooper received no positive verification. Of all UFO reports gathered, this Culver sighting was the only one that received no verification.

Pablo Casals

dead at 96

San Juan, P.R., UPI - Cellist Pablo Casals, 96, one of the century's greatest string players, was in critical condition today with a heart attack and lung complications. His wife, Marta, 36, was at his hospital bedside.

Casals was struck by a heart attack Sept. 30 as he played dominos at the home of a friend.

Casals was born in the Catalan town of Vendrell, near Barcelona, Spain, Dec. 29, 1876. He began playing violin and piano and composing at age 5.

In 1957 he initiated the Casals Festival here, and that same year married "Martita," then 21, one of his students. He was 80.

Tom Clements--consistently cool

by John Fineran

Notre Dame's offense has drawn much criticism this fall for its inability to score consistently. Many times this young season, the Irish have failed to score because of many key breakdowns and turnovers.

Other football teams would have lost their first four games by making similar mistakes. One of the reasons Notre Dame has won their first four is Tom Clements, the 6-0, 185 lb. junior quarterback from McKee's Rock, Pa.

Clements is quite aware of the criticism, but he has a sufficient answer for it. "People fail to realize that we are a young team on offense," he says. "Frank Pomarico, Gerry DiNardo and Dave Casper were our only players experienced before the season on the line."

"It took a while for the new people to coordinate with them. They are just coming around right now after those two tough wins against Purdue and Michigan State."

Still, Clements thinks the youth has helped the Irish. "I think everyone tries to do his best. We all try to help one another. We're enthusiastic for each other."

And the Irish and their fans are enthusiastic about Clements. Noted for his running ability, Clements is also a dangerous roll-out passer. Northwestern coach Johnny Pont can attest to this point.

Playing only the first half against the Wildcats, Clements threw for 152 yards on nine of 12 completions, including one for a touchdown. "Clements really hurt us with those passes in the flat," a dejected Pont said after Notre Dame's 44-0 opening victory.

Clements is also noted for his accuracy throwing to his left. The most difficult pass to throw for any right-handed quarterback is the one to his left. It is the most difficult, that is, for all quarterbacks except Clements.

"When you are rolling out, you have to remember to square your shoulders," he says. "It is a lot easier to the right side."

In the Michigan State game, Clements was a big factor in the Notre Dame 14-0 lead at halftime. Spartan coach Dennis Stolz realized this.

"The defensive adjustments we made at halftime were to use our linebackers more," he said. "We had to get a pass rush on Clements."

We could not contain him. He was particularly effective on the broken plays and scramble situations."

It was one of those "defensive adjustments" that led to the Spartans only touchdown of the afternoon. Clements rolled right on a third-and-long situation deep in Notre Dame territory. As his pass sailed toward a waiting Eric Penick, MSU linebacker Ray Nester intercepted and returned the ball into the Irish endzone.

Clements has been criticized for his throwing mistakes, but he knows what he has to do to eliminate them. "It is just a matter of execution and judgement," he says. "That's what I have to work on."

Obviously, Clements gave it much of his attention last week before the Rice encounter because not one of his passes was intercepted. In fact, he threw a 21 yard TD pass to tight end Dave Casper.

Still, it was Clements' running ability that boiled the Rice defenders and their coach Al Conover.

"Clements is really a slippery runner, he said of the performance which left the junior only one-yard short of the century mark.

The way the season has been going for the Irish thus far this season, there is indeed optimism, especially as far as Southern Cal is concerned. But Clements is talking the games one at a time.

"I think everyone has been pointing toward Southern Cal all year," he says. "We know, however, if we lose any games prior to or after the game, beating them will mean nothing. So we are still concentrating on each game.

"And that means Army this Saturday," he emphasized. "They are well-conditioned and they come to play."

"Any time you play a service academy, you're in for a tough game," he concluded.

Notre Dame has won four games this season, and with attitudes like Tom Clements, they will win many more. There are six games left in 1973, and if the Irish win them all, alot of the credit will go to Tom Clements. It will be deserved.

Junior QB Tom Clements takes aim on Army's defensive secondary. Clements and the Irish "O" performed solidly in last week's win over Rice.

Army next for undefeated Irish

by Vic Dorr
Sports Editor

It's often been said that there's no lovelier place to watch a college football game than the campus of the United States Military Academy.

West Point and upstate New York at the peak of autumn, the massed troops of Cadets, and quaint, cozy Michie Stadium all combine to make Army's home weekends—in their own way—nearly as distinctive as those in South Bend, Knoxville, or Baton Rouge.

And on Saturday afternoon, when Ara Parseghian takes a Notre Dame football team into West Point for the first time since 1922, one of Army's home weekends will take on more than the color of the "Long Gray Line," and more than the color of the surrounding fall foliage. It will take on the color of one of college football's oldest and most fabled rivalries.

Notre Dame began playing the Academy way back in 1913, and the series, from that starting point, continued more-or-less regularly until 1970, when the Cadets took a three-year hiatus from the Irish schedule. But now they're back, and in three days, in West Point's Michie Stadium, Notre Dame and Army will play football for the forty-first time.

Nineteen-seventy three's renewal of the ND-Army series, though, will lack in glamor what it has in color. Irish fans once looked on the Cadets with all the wariness now reserved for opponents such as Southern Cal and Michigan State, but things have changed since the late '40's and '50's.

The two teams have met four times since Ara Parseghian has been Notre Dame's head coach, and in those four meetings the Irish have outscored the beleaguered Cadets 148-10.

And this year's confrontation between the two clubs has all the markings of another on-paper mismatch. Army will bring an 0-4 record into Saturday's game, while the Irish are 4-0. The Cadets' most recent setback came last week against Penn State (coach Tom Cahill's club absorbed a 54-3 drubbing), while Notre Dame, on the other hand, displayed signs of offensive perkiness and defensive consistency while blanking the Rice Owls, 28-0.

"We showed definite improvement in our game with Rice," observed ND's head coach. "For the first time in three games we put together two good, solid halves of football. I'm pleased with that kind of improvement, and I hope to see it continue."

Parseghian's plans for continued improvement include this week's clash with Army, and Ara, ever-cautious, is working to ward off any Irish let-downs.

"Army has been an up-and-down ball club," he said. "They lost to Georgia Tech in Atlanta, 14-10, in a game they could easily have won. They were riddled by Penn State, but comparative scores really don't mean anything. I have a very clear memory of last October, when we played Missouri after they'd been beaten one week earlier by Nebraska, 62-0.

"Then Missouri came in here, and upset us in our own stadium. So we certainly aren't going to take this Army team lightly. They have an excellent quarterback in Kingsley Kink and in Barry Armstrong they have both a fine receiver and return man. And Army had several players hurt during the course of the game with Penn State, and as a result we could see several personnel changes."

But those changes won't involve the Cadets' air attack, where Fink and Armstrong, prior to their run-in with Penn State, were ranked among the nation's leaders. Fink (6-0, 186) was rated 9th in passing and 10th in total offense, Armstrong (6-2, 210) was second in all-purpose running (which includes both pass receptions and kickoff returns), and flanker Jim Ward (6-0, 190) the offensive co-captain, was ranked fourth in receiving.

Defensively, the Cadets are led by four returning lettermen: co-captain Skip Whitman, a 6-0, 210-pound linebacker, junior tackle Neil Begley (6-5, 244), cornerback Jim Cisek (6-2, 190), and outside linebacker Dave Melton (6-0, 215).

Injuries, as Parseghian indicated, may be a factor in Saturday's game, but the Irish coach will have to consider injuries to both clubs. Army's defensive co-captain is a questionable starter because of a banged-up knee, and sophomore defensive back Al Staerke was hampered last week because of a mild shoulder separation. But the Cadets received good news from their training room, too. Defensive tackle Ernie Chachere, a starter in last year's clash with the Navy, saw slight action against Georgia Tech, a heavier load against Penn State, and may see even more duty against the Irish.

Notre Dame's medical outlook is not so encouraging. Frank Pomarico, a pre-season All-American guard who has yet to see time this year because of an injury to the ligaments in his ankle, may see limited action against the Cadets, but beyond Pomarico the news is all bad.

Steve Niehaus, Notre Dame's sophomore All-American candidate at defensive tackle, suffered a knee tear in the Rice game and has been lost for the duration of the '73-'74 campaign. Niehaus underwent surgery earlier this week, and ND team physicians are waiting to see whether Tom Bolger, Pomarico's replacement at offensive guard, will also require knee surgery as the result of an injury sustained in Houston.

But Ara is satisfied with the status of the rest of his players, and he'll take those players to West Point on Friday afternoon in preparation for the 41st renewal of the series with the Military Academy.

And then, at 2:00 p.m. on Saturday, in front of a Michie Stadium sellout crowd of 41,482, Notre Dame and the Army will play football again.

The Irish defense has fared well on the road this year, allowing just one TD in eight periods of play. Here, Luther Bradley thwarts a Purdue thrust with an acrobatic interception.

Frank Pomarico

Captain's Corner

Belonging

Notre Dame 28, Rice 0. That's the kind of game I like to see Notre Dame play. It was like old times for the Irish offense, who had over 100 snaps from center and a total performance of over 500 yards.

Defensively, we shutout the Owls and held them to about 150 yards. This was a great victory for Notre Dame, for the South wanted a part of us. We met their challenge, however, and stuck it in their ears.

The game, however, was very costly. First, Tom Bolger popped his knee and is out indefinitely. Second, Steve Niehaus tore up his knee pretty good for the second consecutive year. Steve was operated on Monday and is doing fine. This has to be a very depressing time for both of these guys, but they are very strong people and will overcome their misfortunes.

About injuries, Ara stated at a team meeting, "We have to regroup our team and keep going. Life is full of disappointments and one has to live with them and strive to accomplish his goals."

Injuries are tough for players to take both physically and mentally. Today I would like to tell you what happens to a ball player before he is hurt, while he is injured, and after he is healed.

To begin with, you feel fine on and off the field. The big season is coming up, and you have worked hard all summer long, trying to get in shape. After the first week, it all seems to have paid off.

Then comes Saturday, September 1, and the first scrimmage of the preseason. Both the offense and defense look good. Then on the third series, you pull out to block the end and during the block, you are hit from behind. Slowly but surely, you feel your ankle ripping. The next thing you know, doctors, trainers and coaches are huddled over you, but all you see of them is the outline of their bodies against the sun.

That night, you are sitting in your room with a full leg cast on, and you can't believe what has transpired that day. The doctors say from four to six weeks in a cast which means you'll miss the first four or five games of the season. You feel depressed, drained emotionally, and tired of life with no meaning as to why YOU got hurt.

Still, life goes on and days turn into weeks. Finally, the day comes when they take the cast off your ankle. You notice that your leg is smaller than the other one, but you are determined to show everyone that you are back.

There are no more casts, no carts to take you around. You can walk by yourself, and you begin to enjoy life again. Your ankle hurts, however, and it swells when you walk. But, day to day working on it improves the ankle. Soon, you can run and you want to get back so bad that it is killing you.

Finally, the week has come. Your ankle, although not like it was before you hurt it, is good enough to play on. Once again, you are happy, you start to see things different. Just the simplest things about football are now appreciated more than before. You are now again part of the Notre Dame football team.

As I sit in my room, autumn knocking at my door, I try to show you a little bit of what it is like to be injured. For you see, the character in this story is Frank Pomarico and I am ready to play again. I hope to be out there this Saturday.

Football is a challenge for every injured player, and an injury haunts you until you are back.

With this week comes another challenge for Notre Dame — the Black Knights of the Hudson. Notre Dame must win to keep its record unblemished, to win the National Championship. GO IRISH, BEAT ARMY.

Digger's cagers begin Year III

Digger Phelps opened his third and most promising season as Notre Dame basketball coach Monday when practice for the 1973-'74 campaign began for tryouts at 4:30 p.m. and for Scholarship players at 7:30.

Phelps greeted all five starters and six reserves from last year's National Invitational Tournament runner-up team, and a cluster of 50 walk-on tryouts—a group which included four Notre Dame coeds.

"I was extremely proud of our players last season," says Phelps. "There was never a time when they gave up hope in themselves. We got off to a slow start but that's to be expected playing with four sophomores and a junior against the kind of teams we faced. Our schedule this year is just as difficult but we've got people back who are better equipped from their experiences last season."

Those people include center John Humate (Elizabeth, N.J.), who was named the Most Valuable Player in the NIT last season. "The Shue" was the team's top scorer (21.0 ppg) and top rebounder (12.2 rpg). He broke the Notre Dame single-season field goal percentage record held by Austin Carr (.555) by connecting on 257 of 434 attempts (.592). That mark included a nine-for-nine night against Louisville in the NIT and his first 11 against North Carolina for a 20-for-20 streak.

Gary Novak (LaSalle, Ill.), one of just four seniors on the roster, will probably start at forward for the third straight season. He was named by the coaching staff as the top defensive player last year. Novak led the 1971-72 Irish with a 19.5 average, but dropped off to 12.8 ppg last year while taking in 9.8 rebounds per game.

Guard Gary Brokaw (New Brunswick, N.J.) was another potent scorer last season. He finished with a 17.4 average and led the regulars in free throw percentage.

Guard Dwight Clay (Pittsburgh) and forward Peter Crotty (Rockville Centre, N.Y.) rounded out the Notre Dame starters. Clay became an effective "quarterback" after the first month of the season and led the team in assists with his clever passing. His fall-away jumper with four seconds left won the Marquette game and a 25-footer at the buzzer sent the Pittsburgh game into overtime. Crotty matured, too, over the season and grabbed 203 rebounds while scoring eight points per game. His play the last month was a major factor in Notre Dame's outstanding showing.

Roger Anderson (St. Paul, Minn.) missed four crucial weeks at the beginning of his freshman season but is expected to give the Irish support at either forward or center this year. Myron Schuckman (McCracken, Kan.) is another sophomore who can fill in at the same two positions.

Seniors Chris Stevens (Washington, D.C.), Ken Wolbeck (Peoria, Ill.) and Greg Schmelzer (Park Ridge, Ill.) have all had game experience at the low post and can be expected to see action.

Junior Tom Varga (South Bend) helped lead the Irish attacking early last season before sustaining an injury, shelving him for the season.

Phelps might also get some help from six freshmen. Frontline candidates who will battle the incumbents include Adrian Dantley (Washington, D.C.), Bill Paterno (Lincroft, N.J.) and Toby Knight (Port Jefferson, N.Y.).

Three other freshmen will press the returning guards. They are Ray Martin (Long Island City, N.Y.), Bill Drew (Centereach, N.Y.) and Dave Kuzmick (South Bend).

"We feel we now have nine or 10 players who can totally commit to our goals," says Phelps. "Our entire starting team returns and we have some promising freshmen. This will enable us to be much more flexible. I hope we can now run more, press more and be stronger on the boards. We should have the personnel to cope with our challenging schedule—one of the nation's most competitive."

Notre Dame will meet national champs UCLA home-and-away again this season. In addition to the Bruins, Indiana, Kentucky, Marquette, and South Carolina—all NCAA Tournament participants last year—appear on the schedule, as do Big Ten contenders Ohio State and Michigan State, defending National Conference champion Davidson, Atlantic Coast powerhouse Duke and Big Eight contender Kansas.
