

Hall presidents negotiating for new 'party house'

by Marlene Zloza
Associate Editor

Prompted by recent problems in planning hall parties and social events, a group of five hall presidents have formed a committee and begun working with University officials to establish a 'party house' on campus.

The committee met yesterday afternoon with Vice President for Student Affairs Philip Faccenda, Assistant Dean of Students Fr. Terry Lally, and assistant to Student Affairs Fr. Thomas E. Chambers and discussed possible locations and the implementation process. According to Phil Byrne, Alumni Hall president, "we have total agreement that there is no place for hall events now available," and things are underway to change that situation."

Sorin President Ed Chute organized the student committee when he realized that at least nine halls have a dire need for some facility to accommodate hall social events including 400-600 people and the serving of alcoholic beverages.

The problem was discussed at a recent HPC meeting and then Chute formed the committee and set up the meeting with Faccenda.

Mr. Philip Faccenda
Vice-President of Student Affairs

Mr. Faccenda:

The HPC Party Committee formally requests that the Central Staff of Student Affairs implement their plans for party facilities on the campus. The committee also requests that the Central Staff of Student Affairs act immediately on their resolution, considering the present situation in which nine residence halls do not possess adequate space for large gatherings. The halls expressing the need for better facilities are Alumni, Badin, Cavanaugh, Dillon, Howard, Morrissey, Pangborn, Sorin and St. Ed's.

The HPC Party Committee recommended that the gymnasium behind Holy Cross be renovated for use as a party facility. Considering the fact that the residence halls are not the proper place for a larger gathering, the halls expressed a desire to use this facility once made available. In order to facilitate the renovation of the gymnasium behind Holy Cross, the HPC Party Committee agrees to work in conjunction with the Central Staff of Student Affairs on this project.

Respectfully yours,
HPC Party Committee

Ed Chute-Sorin

Plans for a party house first originated early in the semester during the revising of the Student Manual party regulations. Faccenda mentioned the possibility of such a facility and the 'red barn' on the edge of campus loomed as the first choice. Several weeks ago the barn burned down and after that all planning stopped.

According to Byrne, Faccenda told the committee that with no organized efforts by the students to push through the plan and little interest expressed to administration officials, the issue had been put aside for the time being.

But recent experiences in several halls prompted the presidents to reactivate interest and push for a quick solution to the problem.

In Sorin, Chute claims that there are "no facilities for over 50 people to gather in one place," and several private parties have already posed problems.

Steve DeCoursey, Cavanaugh Hall president, admitted that several parties in his hall "were in the planning stages but couldn't be followed through" due to lack of facilities.

Academic Council asks students about calendar

In a meeting initiated by Academic Council representative John Mazzo, a committee of five hall presidents, two Academic Council members and the Student Body Vice President finalized plans to survey the student body to gauge the reaction to the 1973 Academic calendar as announced in Friday's Observer.

While the administration deferred comment on the specific calendar until its official release Friday, it is known that the calendar includes a pre-Labor Day start and a week-long semester break in October.

The survey will be distributed to the hall presidents at tonight's HPC meeting and Mazzo hoped that they would be distributed to the section leaders who would then do the actual polling.

"It will be up to the section leaders and the hall presidents to see that they are filled out and returned," Mazzo said. He hoped that they would be returned by Friday.

The group, which met in the St. Ed's Hall Chapel, also encouraged the off-campus students to fill out the surveys. The O-C students can pick them up in the Off-Campus Office in the basement of LaFortune Student Center.

The group intends to withhold action on the new calendar until the results of the survey are known. They will be distributing a petition along with the survey calling for a reconsideration of the schedule, but no further action will be initiated until the results are revealed to the HPC in their first meeting after Thanksgiving.

If the results prove negative to the new calendar, Mazzo hopes to take the issue to both the Academic Council for reconsideration and the Faculty Senate, where he hopes to secure the support of the faculty members of the council.

The Academic Council, according to Chris Nedeau, the Student Government Academic Commissioner, has the power to "extend or contract" the length of the semester, while the actual scheduling is the Administration's responsibility.

The Council has two more meetings set for this semester. However, the exact dates of the meetings have yet to be set. Mazzo projected that the council would probably meet next year the of November. (near not year)

In that meeting, providing student support, Mazzo hopes to get the question of the calendar included on the agenda, a move that he claimed would be Nedeau's job because of his position on the council's Steering Committee.

Mazzo stated that this issue was an important one, one that "should not go unnoticed." He claimed that "we (the student representatives on the council) shouldn't just watch this sort of thing go by."

He is prepared to recommend a calendar with the proper number of days and a post-Labor Day start, providing student backing.

He claimed that student objections to the calendar are not just "whimsical." Particularly he pointed to the economic arguments against the calendar which eliminates one summer work week for the students.

"There are good reasons for our objections," Mazzo said. "If the students want to change this calendar, we'll help them." He continued that if the Administration "shuts themselves off to the students' wishes," it would be "irresponsible" on their part.

Mazzo explained that he has directed his actions through the HPC because "they are the most representative body" on campus and that he has proceeded with the "support and knowledge" of the SLC and Student Government.

The Hall Presidents in attendance were Wally Gasior, Dillon; Ed Chute, Sorin; Lynn Larkin, Walsh; Art McDonald, St. Ed's; and Bob Howl, Lyons.

At Alumni, Byrne noted the problems his hall has had with their upcoming dance. "We had planned to use the Regina Hall lounge at St. Mary's," stated Byrne, "and when that became unavailable we tried to find a place at ND and the best offer was Stepan Center, which accommodates 5,000 people." As a final choice, Alumni is now renting the SMC Dining Hall and has the problems of decorating in between meals and rearranging all the furniture immediately after the dance.

Two locations were suggested at Monday's meeting and both were discussed and debated. LaFortune ballroom is one possibility, but its public location would necessitate close controls and put limits on other activities in the student center.

The favored choice is the gymnasium behind Holy Cross Hall, which has an isolated location and good size, according to committee members.

"The major obstacle to the gym is that it is now being used as storage space," explained Chute. But if a place can be found to accommodate the stored articles, the gym could be available very soon. All committee members are in favor of the gym and voiced this approval in a formal letter to Faccenda, released last night. The letter, written by Chute and Dillon Hall President Wally Gasior, includes an explanation of the present situation and the request for the procurement of a party facility for general hall use.

According to committee members, Faccenda appeared "completely favorable" to the plan and will present it to the executive officers of the University for their approval. If the plans are implemented quickly, the facility can be ready for use late this semester or early next year.

Committee members are hopeful that the situation can be resolved soon. "It is important for the students to realize that the administration is interested in providing facilities for social events," summarized Gasior. Chute added that student support and cooperation is needed to complete the project successfully.

New cracks discovered

Space flight postponed again

By THOMAS BELDEN CAPE CANAVERAL (UPI) Discovery of additional cracks in the Saturn 1B booster rockets brought a second post-ponement Monday of the Skylab 3 launch; the last scheduled voyage to America's orbiting space station.

William Schneider, Skylab program manager for the federal space agency, said the new cracks were discovered during a "routine inspection" of the booster rocket and caused an indefinite delay in the planned launch Thursday of astronauts Gerald Carr, Edward Gibson and William Pogy in a mission that could last up to 85 days.

"At this point, the launch on Thursday has been scrubbed. We will be able to tell you tomorrow what the full implication of what we found is," Schneider told an afternoon new briefing.

He said engineers were not immediately certain how serious the new cracks might be, but that officials felt they were "of a serious enough nature that we decided we will not launch this Thursday." There is another "window" on Friday during which the rocket could be launched, but delay beyond Friday would mean at least a five-day postponement until the orbiting Skylab space station is again in position for rendezvous with the astronauts in their modified Apollo capsule.

The new cracks were discovered as launch crewmen were finishing the big job of replacing all eight of the 24-story Saturn rocket's tail fins, where hairline cracks were found last week, causing a delay in the originally scheduled Saturday launch date.

Schneider said engineers planned not only to investigate the new cracks, but also to undertake a "careful reassessment" during Monday evening and Tuesday morning of other aluminum alloy material in the rocket. It was structural members made of the alloy which showed the cracks last week and Monday.

The cracks discovered Monday were near the point where the first and second stages of the Saturn are joined on aluminum spars which remain with the first stage after separation.

If these cracks proved serious enough to require replacement of the aluminum, as was the case with the tail fins, it could mean a lengthy delay which would have the Saturn returned to its assembly building, the stages separated and the repairs made.

Disbarment petition filed against Agnew

ANNAPOLIS, M. (UPI) THE Maryland State Bar Association initiated action Monday which could lead to former vice president Spiro Agnew being barred from practicing law anywhere in the United States.

The association filed a petition in the state Court of Appeals requesting a court hearing on disbarment of Agnew because of his conviction on a charge of federal income tax evasion.

The judges of the appeals court were expected to name a three-judge panel within the next two days to conduct the disbarment hearing, according to Court of Appeals Clerk James Norris.

Norris said the Appeals Court judges can name any state judge to the panel and also will determine where the panel meets. He declined to predict how long the disbarment proceeding might take. The State Court of Appeals will have final review of the recommendations of the three-judge panel.

The petition seeking the court hearing was accompanied by the docket entries from the U.S.

District Court in Baltimore concerning Agnew's conviction last month on a charge of federal income tax evasion, and allegations of bribery and extortion. Agnew resigned the vice presidency last month after pleading no contest to the tax charge. He paid a $10,000 fine and was placed on probation.

The Board of Governors of the state bar association voted last week to file a petition seeking Agnew's disbarment. It was originally expected that the petition would be filed in the Circuit Court of Montgomery County where Agnew lives.

Our war, we trust, is over. The nation now has much to do, much that it can do only as a united people. There is too little mutual trust among us, too much that is corrosive of hopes and spirits.

A general and unconditional amnesty would be a simple and clear act. It would be a sign that we want to live at peace with each other, that we want to end within ourselves the awful divisions caused by the way, that we want to get on with the work of making this a better land.

Who can be opposed to such an act? Can the dead speak, and advise us? Or can any speak for them? Would we really want to turn to parents of the dead and set them speaking against each other, some urging amnesty and some opposed?

Does this nation, that was established to "form a more perfect union" and to "insure domestic tranquility," not want to heal itself? Do we not want to take this chance on justice?

There are few acts a government can decide upon that clearly and immediately benefit individuals; amnesty would be one. We think it would be even more. We would be saying to ourselves that we now put the Vietnam war behind us, with its terrible freight of bitterness and recrimination, and of corruption and brutality too. We would signal a decisive turning away from the darkness of the war years, and toward position on one side of a disputably "undebatable" question, and throw its moral weight into the antiabortion issue. Some years ago at the height of the civil rights and Vietnam crises others passionately urged that the University take a public stand on these questions. Thus far the University has wisely avoided asserting that it has an official position, as a University, on any number of political, moral, ethical and theological issues. It should hardly be necessary to suggest the scope of problems which the University might be called upon, by various advocates, to assert its presumed collective force. McGovern reflects one year later

by Dave Kaminski
Staff Reporter

This interview with Senator George McGovern was conducted during a car ride from the airport to the Morris Inn, immediately after the Senator's arrival in South Bend.

Observer: During last year's campaign, you called on America to 'come home' to the principles on which the country was founded. Because of the Watergate affair, are we indeed starting to come home?

McGovern: I do think that in an ironic way, the tragedy of Watergate juxtaposed against the Nixon landslide, was the shock that the country may have needed to force a reexamination of the course we were on.

I detect a new hunger to put this country back on a constitutional foundation. We can't go on with the kind of arbitrary, expedient rule that the Nixon administration has practiced, particularly the callous disregard for law and constitutional procedure that Watergate represents.

So it may be that the revelations of Watergate will accomplish what I tried unsuccessfully to bring about through my candidacy, namely, a mood where we can begin to return to a rule of law rather than the rule of men, especially the rule of one man. Observer: Despite President Nixon's sharp drop in popularity, do you think that the country will take that extra step necessary to impeach a president, whomever he may be?

McGovern: The present administration has cultivated a notion that the presidency itself is almost beyond the reach of our political process. Nevertheless, the Constitution provides for recourse against a president whose integrity and loyalty to constitution and law has come under serious doubt. I think that the House Judiciary Committee should continue to investigate the possibilities of impeachment.

And I am in favor of impeachment rather than resignation because resignation leaves questions unanswered. A thorough going impeachment investigation will finally establish the guilt or innocence of the President.

Observer: Can the President offer an explanation of his actions in the Watergate affair that would give people something to believe in?

McGovern: I think that opportunity is gone. There have been too many coverups, slick explanations, and reversals for that. I don't think the public can any longer exonerate the President on what he contends is a full disclosure. I think that day is gone and now the only option open to the President is either resignation or impeachment.

Observer: If President Nixon either resigns or is impeached, what do you think of the possibilities of a special election?

McGovern: There is a possibility of a special election. But I think that a practical pre-condition of either persuading the President to resign or persuading Republican members of the Congress to vote for impeachment will be the confirmation of Gerald Ford as Vice President.

Although I question some of Ford's ideological views, I don't know of any scandal or illegality in his background. That being the case, the Republicans did win the election of 1972 and I would be inclined to vote for the President's choice for Vice President.

Observer: Do you see a danger in stopping with the removal of the President and not going on to reform in this country?

McGovern: I hope that our current crisis doesn't merely stop at the removal of a president. Congress is partially responsible for the trouble our country is in today. We haven't insisted on full disclosure, especially in regards to national security and foreign policy. I would hope that the Congress would become critical of itself and reassert its responsibilities, especially in the areas of war, peace, and the powers of the purse.

I don't think that the system of checks and balances is working well today. We have moved, in the words of Prof. Arthur Schlesinger, to an "Imperial Presidency." The President now takes all legislative initiatives, allocates the budget, and rules a combination of veto, impoundment of funds, and secrecy.

I hope that this arrangement between the President and Congress will be squarely challenged.

Observer: How much do you think the Watergate scandal is a matter of momentum and attention? If no further revelations come to the surface, or if the attention of the nation shifts to another area, is there a chance that the move toward impeachment will die?

McGovern: I think the action has now moved from the Senate Watergate Committee to the House Judiciary Committee. And the action of that committee doesn't

by Judy Rauenhorst
Staff Reporter

St. Mary's College contributed $800.10 to the United Way through an auction held during dinner at the dining hall October 31.

Senior Kathy Hessert initiated the idea of an auction and organized the event through Student Government. Hessert had seen the Democratic Committee for the State Party in Indianapolis have a successful auction.

"They auctioned off everything from a shetland pony to a complete funeral," said Hessert. "It is an easy way to make money because the donations are not difficult to obtain from local merchants. All we needed was manpower."

"Student Government officers went to stores and solicited for donations. All of these contributors received free publicity," Hessert explained. Donations come from the administration, faculty and students as well.

Items donated included a silver cup from Fr. Hesburgh celebrating the 125th Anniversary of the University, a typewriter, hair-dryers, pop-corn poppers and an autographed N.D. football that went for $70.

The auctioneer, Mark Bam-benek, professor of chemistry, made a raspberry cheesecake that sold for $18. A steam iron was donated by South Bend Mayor Jerry Miller. Donald Hornig, Chairman of the Sociology department, offered a candle-light dinner for two at his home, and a room-cleaning for a girl's dorm room.

Hessert added that $48 were made in private contributions following the auction.

"We want to thank everyone. There was an overwhelming amount of enthusiasm from students and generosity from those who donated," SAID Hessert.

G.O.P. Chairman Bush to appear at Law School

Republican National Chairman George Bush will be on the question-and-answer firing line during an unrehearsed "Conversation with Bush" scheduled for 2:15 p.m. Tuesday, November 20.

The appearance is sponsored by the Notre Dame Law School Student Bar Association and will be held in the Law School Lounge. The conversation will be open to the public and there will be no formal address by Bush. Instead, he will answer questions from the audience.

After the Conversation, the national chairman will be one of the honored guests at the Michiana Republican Rally at 7 p.m. Tuesday, November 20, in the Notre Dame Athletic & Convocation Center. The featured speaker will be Presidential Adviser John B. Connally. Honorary co-chairmen are Governors Otis R. Bowen of Indiana and William G. Milliken of Michigan.

Bush has been Republican national chairman since January, 1973. Before that, he served two years as the permanent U.S. ambassador to the United Nations. In 1966, he was the first Republican to be elected to Congress from Harris County (Houston), Texas, and in 1968 he was re-elected without opposition.

George Bush will answer spontaneous questions from the public on Nov. 20.

True House seeks Christian goals

by William Murphy
Staff Reporter

"True House allows us to, in a real way, make Christ the center of our lives," said John Murtaugh and Jim Kelleher, members of True House, describing the purpose of their charismatic community.

Origin

The roots of True House were formed in 1967 as the Charismatic Renewal was first developing. Two Notre Dame students decided to take advantage of, what they termed, God's actions in the Charismatic Renewal, to form a Christian community whose total lifestyle was involved with God.

The name, True House, comes from Dr. Herbert True who donated the building where the original community lived. The building, itself, is gone now but the name remains as a reminder of the help of True during the community's early stages.

Beliefs and Purpose

"Love", said Murtaugh, "is the highest ideal of True House, just as in the Catholic Church. The charismatic community wholeheartedly supports the teachings of the Church. Our liturgy has the same essential parts as well as spontaneous prayer and the exercise of other charismatic gifts."

"The idea of True House," said Kelleher, "is to allow people to live out a committed life to Christ, a total Christian life shared with other members of the community."

Kelleher pointed out that some people on campus might view True House as an elitest group. He stated that the members of the community don't think this is true. "The means of leading a Christian life", said Kelleher, "are many and varied. People must find what is best for them. We believe True House is best for us."

Structure of True House

True House has about 60 members from Notre Dame, St. Mary's and recent graduates and married couples from South Bend. The community has five coordinators drawn from within itself. Reverend Edward O'Connor, associate professor of Theology, and author of The Pentecostal Movement in the Catholic Church, serves as a spiritual advisor to the community.

"Fr. O'Connor", said Murtaugh, "has been involved in the Charismatic Renewal since its inception and has been a driving force within our community." Reverend Kenneth McGuire, also a member of the community, acts as another spiritual adviser to the members of True House.

Observer Insight

The basic unit, into which True House is divided, is the household. There are three households at Notre Dame, one at St. Mary's and several Off-Campus. The household meets for morning prayer for spiritual preparation towards the coming day. They eat a communal breakfast and sometimes meet for other meals during the day.

"We lead a normal life", said Murtaugh, "except that it is explicitly Christian."

Murtaugh also pointed out that the on campus household is not the idea. All the members do not live together as they might Off-Campus, therefore not as much of their lives are shared. True House does encourage the members of the household to try and room together, according to Murtaugh.

Ongoing Plans

There are, at present, no plans for a single main house for the community, said Kelleher. "We will continue to try and establish more households for the community as needs and resources dictate," he explained.

"We do have an ongoing evangelism program", stated Murtaugh, "to draw people to True House. We invite people to attend our various community functions and as they see a need to lead a deeper Christian life we hope they will become more involved in the community."

"There is something else we wish to make known", said Kelleher. "The evangelical thrust of True House is to bring people to an awareness of what it means to follow Christ. People not in True House may still receive help from or participate in our activities."

"We also wish to point out that there is a distinction between True House and the Charismatic Renewal. If someone wishes to undergo a baptism of the spirit to become part of the renewal they need not join our community," noted Kelleher.

True House offers a seven week, "Life in Spirit" seminar leading to baptism of the spirit which is open to everyone. The seminar deals with an awareness of our relationship with God; the role of Jesus in that relationship; and how the power of the Holy Spirit can become an active force in our lives.

depend on exciting new developments as it does just a thoroughgoing investigating of the leads they already have. They're already investigating 22 separate impeachable offenses. In any one of those develop a fairly solid foundation, then they have a fairly strong case for removal from office.

Observer: If the President is impeached, you will be sitting in the Senate in judgement, to determine if the evidence warrants his removal from office. Is the evidence against Nixon strong enough to do that now?

McGovern: I would want to reserve final judgement until all the evidence is in. But I am convinced in my own mind that probable cause of guilt is sufficient to continue on with impeachment investigations. Beyond that I will have to reserve judgement until a later date.

Observer: Can you predict what effect such scandal in our government will have on politics in the future?

McGovern: I don't think anyone will be elected to high office in the near future without a high moral standard. You're going to see more emphasis placed on ethical and moral conduct.

Observer: How is this similar to the reform movement in American city politics?

McGovern: I think we will be going through that kind of phenomenon, where clean, high minded candidates will have a better chance at being elected than in recent years.

Observer: Will the Democrats overwhelmingly benefit from the scandal of this Republican administration?

McGovern: I don't think that this is going to lead to a partisan sweep for the Democrats. There is going to be a voter cynicism and skepticism in the future.

No longer can you say, "Let's rally 'round the party and get out to the polls. It's going to be a question of who can instill voter confidence and interest."

Observer: We saw the press come to bitter words with the President during his last news conference. How do you think that the American press will change because of the Watergate scandal?

McGovern: I think quite the opposite of President Nixon, that the press has not been too harsh in its criticism of the Nixon Administration. On the contrary, it has not been harsh enough. There is not enough investigative reporting, enough analytical reporting or critical judgement being done. My complaint with the press is that it seems to swallow the conventional wisdom rather than digging behind it.

The best reporting done in recent years has been done by the two young reporters from the Washington Post in uncovering the network of Watergate evils. That's the kind of work that respectable reporters should do, and hopefully will be doing in the future.

'Big Red' captures IH title, downs Keenan in overtime

by Sam Yannucci

In contrast to Pro football's "Super Bowl," which in recent years has been more of a "Blah Bowl," Sunday's 1973 Interhall football championship was filled with plenty of action and excitement. For the third consecutive year sudden death overtime was needed to determine the IH title.

Involved in each of these last three encounters has been Dillon's Big Red and this year by virtue of their 8-6 win over Keenan, Dillon reigns once again as Notre Dame's football champions. Although Dillon loomed as the pre-game favorites, Keenan was not about to hand the title to the Big Red on a silver platter--Dillon scrapped hard for the victory, winning it by scoring on its first possession of the sudden death period and then foiling Keenan's attempt at deadlocking the score.

Sudden death which seems to be quite fashionable in IH title games, for those football fans not versed in IH procedure, is nothing more than a tie-breaking mechanism. Should the game end in a tie, each team has a chance (4 downs) to score from the 10 yard line. This procedure is continued until one team has scored and held its opposition from scoring.

The Keenan-Dillon match up figured to be a classic battle from the very beginning. Dillon came into the game as Interhall's most explosive averaging 27 points per game, while Keenan had the IH's number one "D" whitewashing every opponent it faced this season. During the "regulation" game both teams played pretty much as expected, Dillon stuck to its ground game and moved the ball well but Keenan's defense rose to the occasion when they had to. In fact Dillon was denied five times--they threatened once in each of the first three quarters and twice in the last stanza but the Big Red could never muster enough strength to puncture the spirited Keenan "D."

"I can't say enough about our defense, commented Keenan coach Tony Walter, "They were great." Dillon's head coach Mike Bireley also had kind words (although not during the game) about Keenan's defense, "We knew they were good. We executed pretty well, they just shut us down."

One excellent sample of how the game was played came in the third period when Dillon's Jeff Pampush hit Mike O'Neil with a nearly perfect 60 yard bomb that carried to Keenan's 5 yard line. The Big Red advanced to the one but then found the going tough and were forced to surrender the ball on downs.

Keenan's superb defensive play, though, didn't attract all the attention. Dillon's defense, anchored by Frank Tombar, and Carl Weyand, although allowing the Black and Gold nearly 4.5 yards per play, successfully stifled Keenan all afternoon.

The Big Red were really tested only once, just prior to halftime when Keenan, aided by a face mask penalty and a pass interference call, moved inside the five yard line. It was here Tombar, Weyand, and company dug in and forced a field goal attempt which was wide to the left.

The Interhall football season came to a close Sunday as Dillon won the title in a hard-fought defensive struggle.

Keenan's Walter, talking about the attempt, said "It wasn't anything new, we've had it in our play selection all year. We were on the 6 yard line with 20 seconds left and had to get some sort of score--it was a chance we had to take."

Had Keenan successfully picked up the three points, it is very probably that they would have won the ball game. Instead of a Keenan victory, however, regulation time ran out with the score stalemated 0-0 and both teams readied for the tie-breaker.

Dillon won the toss and had first crack at the go-ahead score. "We knew we had to score because Keenan had the field goal threat," commented coach Bireley. Dillon's initial strategy was to go to split end Billy Hoy but the first two passing attempts netted a 10 yard loss.

On third down from the 20, Pampush faded back to pass, looked like he was going to be sacked, and then suddenly fired a screen to tailback Joe Riepenhoff who had four blockers in front of him and Dillon had the game's first 6 points.

"It was the perfect play," noted Keenan's Walter, "Dillon borrowed it from St. Joe. They opened the overtime series in a double flanker formation, it tipped us off, we knew they would try the screen on one of the downs--they just executed perfectly." Bireley added "We were going to use it on the opening play but decided to save it."

As it turned out it was well worth saving. Halfback Mike O'Neil then compounded Keenan's worries when he blasted off right tackle for the important two points.

With the score 8-0 the action shifted to Dillon's 10 yard line where Keenan would have its four attempts at knotting the score. On the first play, QB Golden drew Dillon offside, that made it first and five. Two plays later hard-running tailback Mike Parseghian dove over for the touchdown.

That narrowed the score to 8-6 and put all the pressure on the conversion attempt. With the crowd scrambling for better views, Keenan broke the huddle and set up for the biggest play of the afternoon. On "Hike" however, tragedy struck--the center and the quarterback fumbled the exchange. "It was just one of those things," said Walter, "We were a little to anxious."

"Sure it was a disappointment," he continued, "We played well but Dillon is just a great team." Dillon coach Bireley added "We played like winners. The victory was extremely satisfying."

John Fineran

Blarney Stone(d)

The Badger Fan Rule Book

The phone was ringing. I wondered who would be calling me at this hour of the night. I wondered who would be calling me at all. My curiosity, possibly aroused by my insense for the idiot calling me at 2 a.m., motivated me to pick up the receiver.

"Is this John Fineran?" the voice at the other end asked.

I felt like saying no, but like I said before, I get so few phone calls these days. Instead, I answered the mysterious caller in the affirmative.

"Is this John Fineran, the Observer hockey writer?" he asked. Again, an affirmative answer, but with traces of annoyance in it.

"Listen, Notre Dame is playing Wisconsin this weekend," the voice went on. Big deal, this is all I need at 2 a.m. Someone telling me the Notre Dame hockey schedule. I figured it might be Steve Klein of the South Bend Tribune or Notre Dame trainer John Whitmer playing another trick on me.

Before I could tell the prankster where he could stick his telephone, he quickly told me, "I'm from Wisconsin, and I have some information which might help your team beat Badgers."

I quickly jumped out of bed, turned on the lights and took the message: "In your mailbox, I have just put a copy of the official Badger Fan Rule Book." And then he hung up.

I wondered what the hell the damn Badger Fan Rule Book would do for Lefty Smith and the boys. And what if he was feeding me misleading information. Was the Badger book the key to Wisconsin's success story in the WCHA? I wondered.

Finally, I ambled down to my mailbox in Dillon Hall, encountering an assistant rector wearing robe and slippers. He wondered what I was doing up. Perhaps I had a girl in my room, he pondered.

I told him I was making a trip to the third floor health spa. He quickly dissipated, but I didn't. Instead, I took out my key and opened the box marked 363. What I found would later surprise me.

There, in an envelope, was a red pamphlet with the title the caller gave me. Most of its information was similar to our cheering. We have a Sieve Cheer and we did occasionally hear Marcia play Three Blind Mice when the referees came on the ice.

Reprinted below is the excerpt which completely surprised me. I felt it was indeed most influential aspect of Wisconsin's success. It reads as follows:

Article IV: Use of the Standing Ovation

1. Maximum allowed. There is no maximum of using said standing ovation when Badgers play.

2. Types Permissible. Any excessive noise, which would scare the opposition, can be used. Anything which can stimulate excessive noise (i.e. horns, trumpets, drums, blowhorns, bells, etc.) is permissible as long as it remains silent when the other team scores or makes an appearance.

3. Times permissible. The Standing Ovation should be used at the correct times. Whenever the Badgers come on the ice at the beginning of the game or period, a standing ovation is called for. Whenever the Badgers leave the ice, a standing ovation is in order. Even if they lose. Whenever a Badger scores, a standing ovation is called for. Assists and hat tricks, too. Whenever an opposing player is detected for a penalty, a standing ovation, marked with a cry of "You, You, You" is in order. Whenever the Badgers successfully kill a penalty, a standing ovation is called for.

4. Times not permissible. A standing ovation is not to be given in any other cases.

After finishing the pamphlet, I thought to myself how silly those Badger fans really are. After all, Notre Dame has the greatest fans in the world, and they don't need any written material to tell them how to cheer.

It is too bad those Badger fans couldn't have seen South Bend's Finest fans that is, not police. Anyway, Wisconsin students seem to always have a dislike for the other type of "Finest" in action on October 27. And it is equally too bad the Badger gang won't be able to see the Irish fans in action on November 16 and 17. I really am sorry.

The spirit here at Notre Dame is spontaneous. Hopefully, that spirit will be so spontaneous on this weekend that Badger fans will be able to hear it back in Madison. And if you want to know something else, Notre Dame fans have class, a lot more than those Wisconsinites could ever hope to have. Anyone who has ever been to the Dane County Coliseum will realize this fact.

Fans are really detrimental to the hockey program. Bob Johnson has accomplished a great deal in building Wisconsin into national contenders each year.

On the other hand, Notre Dame fans are an asset to not only the hockey program, but all athletic programs at the University. In short, Notre Dame fans have class.

I could have gone to Wisconsin when I graduated. I had been accepted here. After seeing their fans, though, I'm glad I came here. I really am.

So this weekend, as the Irish open their home season, give them a standing ovation. Give them standing ovations until it hurts, then give some more. Then give yourself one for being the classiest, the greatest fans in the world. Behave with class, because that is what Notre Dame has plenty of -- class.

OBSERVER SPORTS

JV icers open with win

The Notre Dame Junior Varsity hockey team opened its season Saturday and Sunday with a pair of wins against the Port Huron Juniors. The JV Irish had to come from behind to record both victories.

Saturday afternoon, Notre Dame came back from a 4-1 deficit in the second period to score three goals in just over four minutes late in the period.

Notre Dame then poured in six unanswered goals in the third period for a 10-4 win. Tom Wurst and Rick Locke had hat tricks for the Irish, while Warren Schintzius' pair and single tallies, by Lew Curry (Steve's younger brother) and Rick Martinello finished the Notre Dame scoring.

On Sunday afternoon, Wurst, Tim McCarthy and Dave Howe each drilled home a pair of goals as the Irish made it a sweep, 8-5. Bill Guisti and Locke had the other Irish tallies. Notre Dame had trailed 3-1 in the second period.

Don Smith and Dave Caron, both trying to backup Kronholm with the varsity, each played one game, Caron returning yesterday from East Lansing to tend net. Each was outstanding in goal for Notre Dame.
