

As fighting rages on ND-SMC Nicaraguan students wait anxiously

by John McGrath

Nicaraguan students at Notre Dame and Saint Mary's are keeping a close watch on developments in their homeland where bloody fighting has erupted in opposition to the rule of President Anastasio Somoza.

There are five Nicaraguans attending Notre Dame and one at Saint Mary's and, according to student Roberto Arquello "it's a slow agony."

"What happens when you can't even call home?" Arquello asked. His family is from Managua, the capital of the troubled Central American nation. "I have enough money for the first semester, but that's all," he said, explaining that due to an emergency currency restriction no one is permitted to take large amounts of money out of the country.

The origins of the conflict are deep-rooted, but they have been aggravated recently by two developments - the alleged corruption of the Somoza regime in its handling of the 1972 quake recovery effort, and the bungling of investigations into the murder of one of Somoza's opponents, Pedro Joaquin Chomorro, editor of one of the country's leading newspapers.

According to the Nicaraguan students, the situation grew desperate this year as a result of nationwide general strikes and terrorist attacks throughout the country, including a late-August raid on the Congressional palace, staged by an anti-government guerilla unit known as the Sandinistas. The Sandinistas are leading the attempt to oust Somoza.

Arquello, a second year MBA student, stressed repeatedly in a telephone interview that the American press was not accurately reporting the situation in his homeland. "The Sandinistas are Communists," he said. "It's a question of the lesser of two evils, but if Somoza leaves, there is no question that there will be a Communist takeover. And if Nicaragua is taken, all of Central America will be lost."

Enrique Salvo, also a student and a former member of the board or directors of the Nicaraguan Chamber of Industry, was a bit more moderate in his assessment of the situation. "Most businessmen are in the middle of the situation and have no arms with which to fight." Asked whether the Sandinistas were a Communist group, Salvo admitted "some of the leaders are professed Marxists, but young people who are against Somoza don't have any other party that could fulfill their political needs, so they have joined the Sandinistas."

Frederico Tefel, a sophomore, said that his family had left Nicaragua for Mexico until the situation improves. His brother is still in Managua, "but it's almost impossible to get through to him," he said.

Maria Jose Mantica, a Managua and a senior at Saint Mary's told of a telephone conversation with her mother in Managua on Wednesday night. She learned that her grandparents' house in Chinadenga, one of the rebel strongholds, had been burned to the ground.

"I'm scared to think about what might happen to my family," she said. "It feels really lousy when you don't know what is going to happen. Where are we going to end up?"

"I know of brothers and sisters of Notre Dame alumni who are with Somoza or with the Communists," Arquello said, "I remember on-

SBP McKenna modifies proposal; calls letter 'an overstatement'

by Mark Rust
Staff Reporter

Describing a Hall President's Council (HPC) letter that appeared in last Friday's Observer as "some-what of an overstatement," Andy McKenna, student body president, yesterday released a slightly modified version of a student rights proposal that he will take before the Board of Trustees at their meeting on October 12.

The modification in the proposal concerns the power of ultimate veto. While the original version calls for the Campus Life Council (CLC) to share the final power to legislate and veto University policy, the new version calls for a "system of checks and balances," McKenna said.

McKenna outlined a four-pronged attack to support the proposals last night. The main thrust of the attack will be to make students aware of, and concerned about, the proposal, according to McKenna.

McKenna will have a hearing with the Student Affairs Committee of the Board of Trustees to air the proposed rights reform. "The kind of things we will discuss with them are very reasonable," McKenna said. "I'm hopeful that we will be well received."

Student awareness of the issue is vital to the proposal's passage, McKenna said. His plan for campus support includes a series of columns in The Observer, beginning next week, a hall-to-hall campaign to enlist support, the circulation of a petition, and a forum to answer student questions.

The forum, scheduled for next Thursday in Washington Hall, will feature James Roemer, dean of students, and Fr. John Van Wolvlear, vice-president for Student Affairs. The forum will be moderated by Philip Faccenda, General Counsel.

The Student Affairs Committee is chaired by John Schneider, a New York based broadcast consultant and former president of CBS. Schneider was described by McKenna as "a sharp guy and very student oriented."

Schneider, along with other committee members, will take time during the meeting to "walk around, talk to students, and get a feel for campus," according to McKenna.

"If we are successful in our

Hashish washed ashore

THE HAGUE, Netherlands - About 800 pounds of hashish with a street value of almost $400,000 washed up on beaches near the Hook of Holland earlier this week, police said yesterday. Police said they believe the Hashish, which was packed in cans and sacks, was dumped overboard by a smuggling vessel forced into port unexpectedly by heavy weather. Authorities said the smugglers probably feared a customs check and discarded the contraband.

Mail strike unlikely

WASHINGTON - With a mail strike still possible but considered unlikely, postal unions sent ballots to members yesterday for the second time in a long-running contract dispute with the Postal Service. The arbitration decision last week by labor specialist James J. Healy is binding. But presidents of the two largest postal unions say they must conduct ratification votes under union rules. The results of the mail balloting are not expected to be known for about three weeks.

From Caribbean connection

Pot, cocaine confiscated

SAN JUAN* Puerto Rico [AP] - Customs inspectors made a routine check on a Nashville, TN, woman's baggage and said they found 47 pounds of cocaine. A similar check netted four pounds hidden in a statuette bought by a woman arriving from Peru.

Drug officials say the women are "mules" - carriers of illegal drugs - that are working the new Caribbean connection that has developed since authorities cracked down on the old Mexico-Texas route.

Here there are special problems. Cruise ships and airplanes carry large numbers of tourists to this resort island both from South America and the U.S. mainland. Once inside Puerto Rico, tourists do not have to undergo thorough customs inspections before leaving this U.S. commonwealth on the way to the mainland.

The two recent seizures were only minor raids by law enforcement officers on the new routes from South America that have made Puerto Rico a convenient jumping off point to the profitable U.S. market.

In a larger operation - which is an ironic twist - the U.S. Coast Guard is now making the raids on "mother ships" on sea lanes where pirates used to raid Spanish galleons. Ronald Seibert, regional director of the Drug Enforcement Administration, said these Colombian ships carry as much as 100 tons of marijuana in a single trip.

Sign regulations announced

All students desiring to display signs on the field at the Michigan game will be required to present them for approval before the game.

Students must bring signs to the Student Government offices located on the second floor of LaFortune, between 1 and 5 p.m. today or 9 to 11 a.m. Saturday.

A special pass will be issued to students with acceptable signs. Specific details on what type of signs will be accepted, and at what gate students will meet to take signs on the field will be given at these times.

He estimated that some 1,500 pounds of cocaine destined for the U.S. Eastern Seaboard are smuggled annually into Puerto Rico from South America.

There is no realistic estimate of other drugs passing through the Caribbean lanes now being used by smugglers following the crackdown on more established routes through Mexico and other points.

Most of the smuggling is not done by the ships but in smaller quantities by "carriers" lost among the thousands of tourists passing through Puerto Rico and other Caribbean resort areas.

Customs and Drug Enforcement Administration agents seized 76 pounds of cocaine in the first six months of 1978. Seibert said authorities estimate they confiscate only about 10 percent of the total destined for the mainland.

On Aug. 25, agents arrested Betty Inman, 37, of Nashville, TN, as she landed in San Juan from Caracas, Venezuela.

Authorities said three of her 14 bags contained 47 pounds of cocaine with an estimated street value of $14.3 million. She also had $64,676 in cash and more than 100 gold jewelry items, they said. She is now awaiting trial.

Patty Wilson given key to South Bend, IN

by Lynn Daley

Patty Wilson, a California high school senior, was presented with the key to South Bend yesterday afternoon on the steps of Administration building. Wilson, an epileptic, is running 2000 miles from Minneapolis to Washington D.C. in hope of raising $2 million for epileptic research.

Peter Mullens, a representative from the mayor's office, commended Wilson for her "very courageous effort." Referring to the size of the key, Mullen added that he hoped it would be small enough to enable her to wear it on her run.

Other speakers at the ceremony included Chuck Linster, a spokesman for the South Bend Business Community, who welcomed Wilson on behalf of the Chamber of Commerce of South Bend and Mishawaka.

Andy McKenna, Notre Dame student body president, presented Wilson with roses and a Notre Dame pennant as "an example of our admiration for your 2000 mile run and the example you're setting for the entire country."

Congressman John Brademas sent a welcoming message in which he expressed his admiration for Patty, and offered his hopes that the run would "enhance public education and awareness of epilepsy."

Kathy Scholl, representing the Clark Equipment Company in Michigan, presented Wilson with a check for $500, and the Notre Dame Hockey team captain, Steve Schneider gave Patty what may have been her favorite gift: an autographed hockey stick.

After expressing delight over the hockey stick, Patty thanked everyone present. She commented on how far she is from home and how hard it is to keep going, "but as people are happy, we're happy and want to keep going," she said. "People from Notre Dame are super. It's super to have people appreciate you as you go along."

Concluding her remarks, Wilson wished the football team good luck against Michigan on Saturday and donned a Notre Dame sweat-shirt to lead off the "Father Cavanaugh Run for Patty." While she couldn't run the whole 2-mile route because of a strict running schedule, runners attempting to go the distance included the Notre Dame hockey team, ROTC recruits, members of the Logan Sheltered Workshop and Special Olympics and a group of St. Mary's women.

While Wilson is the main participant in the 2000 mile run, she travels with a caravan of loyal followers. Her father, runs with her every step of the way, and the rest of the family also run a bit every day. Mrs. Wilson acts as the

SMC seniors plan activities

by Jean Powley
Saint Mary's Editor

Plans for this year's senior class activities are proceeding at a quick pace, according to Donna Noonan, Saint Mary's senior class president.

"We've been working very well with Notre Dame on many plans including the senior class trip, senior week and senior formal," she explained.

This year's Senior Week is planned for Nov. 6-10. It will include the traditional death march plus several new activities. "We're going to try to make it a really big week," she said.

As for the senior formal, a decision will be made within the next week on its location. A tentative date of April 21 has been set.

Also this year, for the first time, the Saint Mary's senior class will have a senior assembly, composed of representatives from each hall. The assembly will act as a sounding board for the class officers' ideas, Noonan said. It will also handle Career Development Center and alumnae-senior matters.

Senior Assembly members are: Ann Stockwell, Ann Davey, and Eileen Lynch from Augusta; Janis Warner and Marie Vatali from Holy Cross; Nancy Little from McCandless; Libby Lamb, Lindsay Riehl, Kate Simonds and Valerie Cannon from LeMans; Suzanne Davis from Notre Dame Apartments; and Debbie Spangler from Campus View.

Vance attempts to win Arab, Jordanian support

RIYADH, Saudi Arabia [AP] - Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance failed to get quick Jordanian endorsement of the Camp David accord and flew to this desert capital yesterday to try to win Saudi Arabia's crucial support for the plan.

Although Jordan's King Hussein did not commit himself to the accords, he did promise not to close the door on the new peace initiative.

Vance's visit here tested the Carter administration's contention that cultivating the friendship of the Saudis - by selling them F-15 fighter jets, for example - has encouraged them to play a moderating role in Arab world.

Shortly after his arrival, Vance met with King Khaled and Crown Prince Fahd in the royal "working palace."

Fahd is the real power in the Saudi hierarchy. Khaled takes little part in day-to-day government affairs and suffers from ill health. It was reported yesterday, in fact, that he will travel to Cleveland for heart surgery next Tuesday.

U.S. officials traveling with Vance said the American envoy's mission is being made no easier by public statements made by Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin, including the Israeli leader's sharp disagreement with the White House over how long Israel agreed to freeze its settlement program in occupied territories.

In Damascus, meanwhile, Syria's foreign minister said the Arab "rejectionist" states would move to "foil the Camp David agreement" and hinted that this might include steps aimed directly at undermining Egyptian President Anwar Sadat's political position. Vance is to meet with the Syrians in Damascus this weekend.

Sadat was in Morocco yesterday, meeting with that country's conservative monarch, Hassan II, to solicit his endorsement for the accords, reached last Sunday at Camp David, MD, between Sadat and Begin with President Carter's mediation.

Jordanian Foreign Minister Hassan Ibrahim, seeing Vance off at the Amman airport yesterday, told reporters Jordan still has reservations about the Camp David peace plan but will continue to consider it and has not ruled out joining in the negotiations.

Vance conferred with King Hussein for a second time yesterday morning. Hussein's participation in peace talks is one of the keys to success of the Camp David plan and an overall agreement in the Mideast.

The Jordanian indecision makes the attitude of the Saudis even more important. As custodians of Islam's holiest shrines they are regarded as religious leaders in the Arab world, and their oil riches and huge aid programs give them considerable sway over Jordan and other poorer Arab states.

The objections the Saudis have expressed to the Camp David plan are the same as those voiced by Jordan's Ibrahim - that it does not guarantee a total Israeli pullout from the Arab territories captured in the 1967 Mideast War, and it does not guarantee the right of Palestinians to form an independent state.

American officials believe it will take the approval of the Saudis, privately if not publicly, before Hussein would risk the wrath of more radical Arabs and join the negotiations.

The Camp David "framework for peace" calls for Jordan to participate in talks with Israel, Egypt and representatives of the Palestinians in the occupied West Bank of the Jordan River and the Gaza Strip to settle the future of those two disputed territories.

In the West Bank on Thursday, Israeli soldiers dragged ultranationalist Jews from a mountaintop where they had tried to set up an outpost in defiance of Prime Minister Menachem Begin's agreement to suspend the Jewish settlement program under the Camp David plan.

The question of just how long the settlement program will be "frozen" remained unanswered, however.

Angry White House officials insisted yesterday that Begin committed Israel to a five-year moratorium on settlements - the period during which the future status of the West Bank and Gaza are to be negotiated. But Begin claims he made a commitment for only a three-month freeze - the period during which Israel and Egypt are supposed to negotiate a peace.

"The most prominent men in Nicaragua are Notre Dame graduates. Notre Dame has a big impact on my homeland," Arquello said.

"I have talked to Fr. Hesburgh and I really believe that he is one of the persons who can really help Nicaragua," Arquello said. He pointed out that Hesburgh has many close friends in Nicaragua and is keeping a close eye on the situation.

All of the students expressed their anxiety over the situation. Many of them wonder what the next step will be. "We're between two fires (Somoza and the Communists) and the situation is getting worse," Tefel said. He echoed all the Nicaraguans, uncertainty about returning home, commenting "If the situation gets any better, which I doubt it will, I might be able to go back."

Ombudsman director sought

The Ombudsman Service will begin the selection of a new director on Oct. 2. Any qualified Notre Dame student may notify Tom Lux at 8777 or Joe Kaczmarek at 3184 sometime between 5 p.m. this Sunday, and 5 p.m. Monday, Oct. 2, of his intention to interview for the position. The term of the current director, Tom Lux, expires Oct. 8.

Israeli troops evict West Bank settlers

TEL AVIV, Israel [AP] - Would-be Jewish settlers used fists to fight Israeli troops who began to evict them yesterday from an outpost set up on the West Bank of the Jordan River in defiance of the Camp David accords.

A Defense Ministry spokesman said soldiers had to carry demonstrators one by one down the rocky slopes to the road a mile away.

Israel radio said seven soldiers and seven settlers were injured in fistfights when the army moved in on the unauthorized camp near the Arab town of Nablus. Other settlers barricaded themselves in huts, the radio said.

"Our people will not go by themselves," said Zvi Slonim, a spokesman for the conservative Gush Emunim movement. "Our main bloc of 250 people is standing together hand to hand."

On Tuesday about 100 settlers moved into the camp, but the government ordered them out later that day. Troops surrounded the site, but more sympathizers slipped into the settlement.

Slonim said three Parliament members, Geula Cohen and Moshe Shamir of the ruling Likud bloc and Haim Druckman of the National Religious Party, were at the camp. The three say they are part of the Gush Emunim movement, which has no registered membership, but are not settlers.

Members of Gush Emunim, Hebrew for "Bloc of the Faithful," occupied the site to protest the U.S.-mediated accord signed at the White House Sunday by Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin and President Anwar Sadat of Egypt.

The settlers claimed a God-given right to settle anywhere in the West Bank, the biblical land of Israel, and fear a proposed Israeli evacuation of Sinai settlements could set a precedent for dismantling Israel's 50 settlements in the West Bank.

The Israeli Parliament is to decide on the evacuation of the Sinai settlements within two weeks. Egypt says it will not sign a peace treaty with Israel until the 20 Sinai settlements are gone.

Defense Minister Ezer Weizman and Army Chief of Staff Lt. Gen. Raphael Eytan visited the West Bank site Wednesday to ask the group to leave voluntarily. Yesterday Israel radio reported that the settlers agreed to an offer by Eytan to move into a nearby army camp, but Weizman vetoed the deal.

The government apparently wanted to avoid a confrontation similar to violent clashes between the Gush Emunim and the labor government of former Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin three years ago.

In 1975 Gush Emunim settlers made eight attempts to settle at Sebastiyeh, also near Nablus, an area heavily populated by Arabs. Seven times troops tried to remove the settlers, prompting Jew-against-Jew clashes that traumatized the nation. The government finally allowed the settlers to move to the nearby army camp at Kaddum.

SB police take special home game precautions

by Sue Wuetcher
Staff Reporter

Local law enforcement and security agencies take special precautions mainly for traffic control as they try to insure that things run smoothly for all Notre Dame home football games.

Captain Jim Sweitzer, of the South Bend Police Department, stated yesterday that there are approximately 150 men assigned to deal with crowd and traffic control at each game. These include Indiana State Troopers, South Bend Police, Saint Joseph County Police, React Radio men, and Civil Defense personnel.

He also said that 50 city police are stationed in the stadium during the games.

React Radio men are placed at key locations in the area, and keep law enforcement officials in constant radio communication with each other. There are men stationed at the entrance to the Indiana Toll Road, the intersections of Angela Boulevard and Michigan Avenue, Angela and Notre Dame Avenue, Douglas Road and Juniper Road, and Dorr Road and Juniper. In addition, there are men located at the entrance of each parking area, and at Gate 10 of the ACC.

Sweitzer said that a one-way traffic system is used to direct cars into the parking areas, adding that the reverse pattern is in effect after games. Beginning at 10 a.m., Angela is one way east from Michigan; Eddy run one way north from South Bend Avenue; Edison runs one way west from South Bend; and Juniper is one way south from Cleveland Road.

Sweitzer added that the local police agencies take no additional precautions for the big games such as Michigan.

Harold Benninghoff, maintenance supervisor for the athletic department, explained yesterday that the stadium is secured the Friday prior to each home game. "Usually during the year there is one gate open for visitors," he said. "On football weekends, none of the doors are open. People haven't access to the stadium."

Benninghoff commented that there are ushers in each of the ramps and also at field gates during the games. "Their job is mainly to direct people to their seats," he said.

He added that cans and bottles are not allowed in the stadium for safety reasons. "We don't bother to scrutinize everyone in the stands," he stressed, however. "We don't worry unless someone gets obnoxious or inebriated, and starts bothering his neighbors."

Century Center plans events for Fall

Jazz to classical music and improvisational comedy to dancy will enliven Century Center this fall thanks to an energetic Century Productions 1978-79 Series, according to Director Ron Wray.

Opening the series tonight will be The Proposition, an improvisational musical-comedy troupe of five members from New York City, bringing their fast-paced revue to the Bendix Theatre at 8:30.

The company relies largely on audience suggestions as it creates instant "magic" theatre, spontaneous musical-satire based on audience suggestions for plot, character or type of music.

The cabaret setting will be a feature of a nightclub-type performance, with dancing, of The Wolverines, a 12-piece band from Minnesota doing numbers from the Roaring Twenties, by such artists originally as Paul Whiteman, Cab Calloway and Billie Holiday.

"Since band jazz in the late 1920's, early 1930's was often dance music or created for production numbers in large nightclubs, we are offering a recreation of that atmosphere with the band in tuxedos, a "red-hot mama" vocalist, cash bar and dance floor," Wray said. The program will be at 9 p.m. Oct. 20 in Convention Hall. Century Productions will collaborate with the South Bend Art Center to present the Warsaw Mime Company at 1 p.m. Oct. 29 in Bendix Theatre. This highly-acclaimed Polish company is a part of the Warsaw chamber Opera and will appear in conjunction with the opening of the Art Center's "Polish Graphics" exhibition.

The season is headlined by a performance by Preservation Hall Jazz Band at 8:30 p.m., Nov. 2 in Convention Hall. This world-famous band from historic Preservation Hall in New Orleans play the "New Orleans jazz" it helped to create.

Logan Center sponsors 'bikathon'

Logan Center is sponsoring a "Bikathon for the Retarded" on Sunday. The bikathon is the most important fund raising event of the year, with money being contributed to the St. Joseph County Council for the Retarded as well as other state and local councils.

Volunteers are needed to help with registration (beginning at 5:30 p.m.), serving refreshments, and clean-up.

Ford concedes

Commission unaware of plots

WASHINGTON [AP] - Former President Gerald R. Ford conceded yesterday the Warren Commission was unaware of CIA plots to kill Fidel Castro when it ruled out the possibility of a conspiracy behind President John F. Kennedy's assassination.

Ford agreed that with this knowledge, the commission would have broadened the scope of its investigation. But he voiced doubt that a such an inquiry would have changed the commission's basic conclusion that Kennedy was shot to death by a lone assassin - Lee Harvey Oswald.

"Had the Warren Commission known of assassination plots directed against Castro, this might have affected the extent of the commission's inquiry," Ford told the House assassinations committee.

"It certainly would have required the commission to extend its inquiry into those operations," he added. "But I don't think they, in and of themselves, would have changed the conclusions."

Ford, one of only three still-living members of the panel set up by Lyndon B. Johnson a week after Kennedy's murder, also acknowledged that he secretly briefed an FBI official on the coings-on within the commission.

But Ford insisted that only two such contacts were made with Cartha DeLoach, a top aide to then-FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover, and that the sessions dealt only with organizational problems involving the seven-member commission.

Ford said he stopped discussing commission business with DeLoach when the panel moved into the investigative phase of its work.

The former vice president, who was a Republican member of the House at the time of Kennedy's death, listened as one committee member described a deposition furnished by former Attorney General Nicholas Katzenbach.

Rep. Stewart McKinney, R-Conn., said Katzenbach had voiced astonishment that the Warren Commission could have been left in the dark on the CIA plots when one of its members was the late Allen W. Dulles, a onetime CIA director.

"He was unique because he could draw on his intelligence background," Ford said of Dulles.

"I had the feeling then that we were getting all the information from the agencies, including the CIA. Obviously, some information, such as on the assassination plots, was not given to us. Why we weren't given it, I frankly don't understand."

Ford said the U.S. ambassador to Mexico at the time presented the commission with "forceful" arguments that Castro was somehow involved in Kennedy's murder.

He said the commission also got "a long memo" from former CIA Director Richard Helms on the possibility of a Cuban conspiracy. Ford gave no details on what it said. In its final report, the Warren Commission detailed its investigation of possible conspiracies, including Cuban conspiracies, but concluded that Oswald alone was responsible for Kennedy's death on Nov. 22, 1963, in Dallas.

Jersey Supreme Court upholds convictions

HACKENSACK, NJ [AP] - The New Jersey Supreme Court upheld contempt convictions of The New York Times and Times reporter Myron A. Farber yesterday, and ordered Farber back to jail unless he surrenders notes to a judge in a murder case by Tuesday.

Attorneys for Farber and The Times said they would appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court--probably today.

In a 5-2 decision, the state court found that neither the First Amendment to the U.S. Constitution nor a state newsman's shield law protects Farber from having to surrender his notes in this case.

It found the shield law inapplicable when it conflicts with the constitutional guarantee of a fair trial--and particularly in this case, because Farber had cooperated with the prosecutors.

The case involves a major conflict between the constitutional rights to a free press and a fair trial. It could set important precedents defining the rights of reporters to protect confidential sources.

The decision, written by Justice Worrall F. Mountain, rejected The Times' argument that the First

freak hurricane Predicted

"It could change the lives of thousands", stated the world renowned psychic-meteorologist Dr. Part Lee Cloudy at his September 15 press conference at Jefferson Lounge in South Bend. Dr. Cloudy was speaking of the Hurricane, which he claimed would pass through the Notre Dame area in a few weeks. Many questions were put to Dr. Cloudy pertaining to the possibility that such a freak event could occur. For instance, this reporter stressed the fact that South Bend is 1,000 miles from the nearest ocean. But Dr. Cloudy merely smiled, said something about a shift in the jet stream, and urged me to stick around for the next few weeks to see if he wasn't right. Then he added, "Of course, South Bend has not been fortunate enough to experience anything like this in the past, both because of its unfortunate geographical location and because of the lack of imagination of area residents. However," he exclaimed, "I believe that a hurricane is exactly what this community needs to shake it of its present image of a boring mid-western city." Dr. Cloudy definitely swayed his initially skeptical audience with his enthusiasm. Toward the end of his speech, the good doctor urged all Notre Dame and Saint Mary's students to be prepared for an education in sight and sound that could not be found in their hum-drum curriculum. This reporter left the lounge with the conviction that a hurricane the size and strength of the one predicted by Dr. Part Lee Cloudy will have an enormous effect on the Notre Dame-Saint Mary's community. This hurricane could be the most outrageous event of the year.

Joan Aldous delivers 'Careers' lecture today

Joan Aldous, the first Kenan professor of Sociology, will deliver a lecture entitled "Family Careers Over Time" in the Center for Continuing Education auditorium today at 3:30 p.m.

The public is invited to attend the lecture, which is scheduled as part of formal inaugural ceremonies honoring the holder of the William R. Kenan, Jr., Chair in Sociology. Members of the Arts and Letters Advisory Council will be among special guests at the inaugural reception and dinner tonight.

A distinguished family sociologist, Aldous joined the faculty in 1976. Her research is concerned primarily with the socialization process within families, and she has written articles and books in a wide area of family life, including the recently published Family Careers: Developmental Change in Families (John Wiley, 1978).

She received her bachelor's degree from Kansas State University, an M.A. from the University of Texas, and a doctorate from the University of Minnesota in 1963. Aldous has served on the faculties of the Universities of Minnesota, Georgia and Tennessee, Tulane University and George Peabody College.

The Kenan Chair was endowed in 1973 by a grant from the Kenan Charitable Trust of New York City, which has established 79 endowed professorships at colleges and universities. It is named for William R. Kenan, Jr., president and part owner of the Flagler Systems Companies and part owner of the Western Block Company, who died in 1965.

Homecoming solicits candidates

Off-campus candidates for homecoming king and queen should submit their names to the secretary in the student government offices during office hours Monday through Wednesday of next week.

Applications for Homecoming committee judges will be available today through Wednesday in the Notre Dame Student Union office or the Saint Mary's Student Affairs office. A general election for judges will be held for off-campus students next Thursday in the Huddle from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m..

Patty Wilson receives award

Another member of the caravan is John Loftis, from the Epilepsy Foundation of America's (EPA) headquarters in Washington. Loftis is the group's consultant and makes general arrangements so that everything runs smoothly from town to town.

Patty trained hard for this marathon. Last year she ran a total of 1310 miles. In the past she has run from her LaPalma, CA home to such diverse places as Los Angeles, San Diego, Las Vegas, San Francisco and Portland. She originally planned that her run to aid the EPA would be either to Alaska or St. Louis, but this was changed so that she might run through larger cities.

The start of this campaign was delayed a bit when Patty strained a ligament in her knee. She was put on a slow build-up program and may run "only" around 25 miles a day, rather than the 40 or more she hoped for. Her epilepsy doesn't hinder her in the least, according to her brother Rich, "in fact," he said, "it may help because of the exercises she must do."

The Allstate Insurance Company and the NFL Players' Association are sponsoring the event in order that all money collected might go directly to the EPA. Allstate pays for food, gas and publicity, such as a commercial Patty made with Henry Winkler. And, as Mr. Wilson's employer, Allstate is allowing him time off to run with his daughter. The company is also producing a documentary film on the event and is in charge of many other details. Right now, the company is attempting to have a presidential reception for Patty when she arrives in Washington sometime in the beginning of November, which is National Epilepsy Month.

If this run seems ambitious for a 16 year old girl, wait until next year. Wilson is in the planning stages of a cross-country NY to LaPalma run.

AAUP to discuss hiring practices

by Mike Shields
Staff Reporter

Racial and sexual discrimination along with religious preference in faculty hiring, will be the subjects of a discussion by a panel of Notre Dame professors at this semester's first meeting of the American Association of University Professors (AAUP), according to Prof. Thomas Shaffer, president of the Notre Dame AAUP Chapter. The meeting, open to all Notre Dame and St. Mary's faculty, will be at 4 p.m., Monday in the University Club.

Professors Alberta Ross and James Stewart will speak on both the University's affirmative action program and problems concerning equal employment opportunity encountered by women and by members of racial and ethnic minorities.

Prof. Philip Moots, director of the Center for Constitutional Studies at the Notre Dame Law School, will discuss the constitutional and public policy arguments in favor of a church-related college exercising religious preference in employment practices.

Professor Stewart, director of the Black Studies department, stated that Notre Dame has only 10 black and three Chicano professors on its teaching faculty. He will discuss "The absence of reasonable numbers of minorities on the Notre Dame faculty," he said.

Stewart blamed the situation on "the problem of supply," noting "there are not enough minority professors to go around." He said the University can help overcome the problem by "a systematic search for minority professors and (by) increasing the supply (of professors) through graduate study programs."

Stewart will also discuss the "inactivity of the affirmative Action Committee and higher administration" with regard to the situation, he said.

Dr. Ross, a professional specialist in the Radiation Chemistry laboratory, will center her observations on recent court decisions involving sexually discriminatory retirement plans which require females to pay higher percentages of their salaries before retirement, or which give males higher sums after retirement.

Ross is the chairwoman of committee W of the AAUP, which deals with the status of women in academics, she said. She stated that there are over 90 women listed on Notre Dame's faculty, but only 29 of them are on the continuing teaching faculty.

The Notre Dame AAUP Chapter recently sent a letter to University President Theodore Hesburgh complaining that the retirement system here is "inequitable and unjust." It asked Hesburgh to correct the system here and to lead a movement for change in the Teachers Insurance Annuity Association (TIAA).

Hesburgh is a member of the Board of Trustees of TIAA, which insures the vast majority of university and college retirement programs.

Hesburgh is taking the matter "under consideration," according to Ross.

Ross said she hopes "Notre Dame will provide a speedy solution and that the solution will be extended to other universities."

Shaffer added he hoped Hesburgh would act to correct the situation "not as president of the University, but as a person responsible for policy."

Shaffer also sees Monday's meeting as having "an indirect effect on students. It is vitally important that women, blacks, and chicanos who come here to study can have someone with whom to identify," he said.

The Notre Dame AAUP Chapter was formed in the early 1940's to represent the interests of professors. It has helped "initiate the process of discussion," Shaffer said, and has aided in resolving such issues as retirement programs, fringe benefits, salary levels, academic freedom, tenure and student rights.

Holy Cross hit with rash of false alarms

by Tom Jackman

A flurry of false fire alarms at Holy Cross hall last week served as yet another reminder to the University community that when an actual fire does strike, it may very well cost some lives.

At Holy Cross, alarms were going off two to three times per day last week, and the malfunction that caused this has not yet been diagnosed, according to Director of Fire Safety Jack Bland. Similar difficulties also occurred last year.

Bland pointed out that Morrissey Hall had the same problem last year, and when an actual fire occurred there, people not responding to the alarm "had to be literally dragged out of bed" by RAs. Holy Cross students are also not responding to alarms, and in one of the oldest dorms on campus (some sections were constructed in 1889), this is an added danger.

Holy Cross also has no exit signs or sprinkler systems, several top windows are nailed shut, and the dorm has "open combustible stairways," according to Bland.

However, Holy Cross is "one of many" dorms with these problems, says Bland. "When these older dorms were built, they were built according to the fire codes of that time. It wasn't taken into account what might be put into them years later.

"In the fifties, the average student had a bed, a desk, a cabinet, a chair, a lamp, and maybe a radio. Today, well...you name it. And all that furniture is just adding to the building's fire hazards."

Bland said that student attitudes weren't helping the matter either, quoting from an article in yesterday's Observer, which said that fire regulations take away one feasible and immediate solution to cramped rooms. After reading the passage, Bland commented, "It's about time the student body becomes concerned (with fire safety). It's one of me against 5600 of them."

Holy Cross Rector Fr. George Wiskirchen doesn't feel the problem is extremely serious, but reiterated that students still need to exercise caution. On the lack of response to the false alarms, he commented that "there'd be much more running around and commotion during a real fire than during one of these false alarms. I think people would have the common sense to bang on their next door neighbor's door, or get their roommates out of bed." He added that, "regardless of the newness of a dorm, it can still burn quickly. The one up at Providence College was relatively new."

Bland noted that with new alarm systems being installed in eight dorms, the number of false calls is bound to increase. The Notre Dame Fire Department has already answered 16 false alarms this year.

In addition to fire inspections, Bland is meeting with the hall staffs of each dorm this year to discuss building rules and particular problems of each hall. He added that RAs play a particularly important role in the event of a fire, the responsibility of rousing the people from their rooms who either don't hear or don't respond to alarms. He commended RAs in Howard and Morrissey for getting people out of the building during fires last year.

Erich Klinghammer speaks

by Cathy Tragesser

"Wolf Behavior, Research, and Conservation" was the subject of a lecture given by Dr. Erich Klinghammer Wednesday evening in St. Mary's Carroll Hall. Dr. Klinghammer, an ethologist from the Psychology Department at Purdue University, also showed the film "Death of a Legend" in his presentation to the American Scene program.

The American Scene program, a series of lectures on aspects of American life, is a one-credit St. Mary's course.

The film presented the lifestyles and habits of wolves in the Canadian wilderness and confronted the problem of the wolf as endangered species.

Dr. Klinghammer spoke about wolf conservation and management programs that have been instituted in Minnesota since the passage of the 1973 Endangered Species Act.

As director of Wolf Park, a wildlife area near Battle Ground, Indiana, Dr. Klinghammer has been involved in the study of animal behavior and the establishment of conservation centers, such as the wolf management plan in Superior National Forests of Minnesota.

"We must preserve the wilderness," Dr. Klinghammer stressed in his lecture. "This can be accomplished in part by bringing to the general public our knowledge of wolf behavior. We must educate people about wolves."

Dr. Klinghammer urged that effective action to protect wildlife is necessary.

"America's idealistic attitude toward endangered species must be transferred into political action," he noted.

Dr. Klinghammer encouraged students to visit Wolf Park in order to gain a better knowledge and understanding of the wolf. Visitors can watch wolves mate in February or view the young being born in April, as well as being able to view wolves in a natural environment at any time of the year. Wolf Park offers extended visits for students interested in serious study of animal behavior.

The Plan of Action

This column appears in the Observer as the second in a student government series aimed at educating students about student rights and the achievement of them.

In the August 1972 issue of Notre Dame Magazine an article appeared entitled "In Loco Parentis: Life With(out) Father" by Father James Burtchaeil. In that article, a school of thought concerning the University's stand in reference to students was vividly spelled out. In essence, in loco parentis means that the administration of the University stands in the place of our parents during our tenure at Notre Dame.

Acting in this capacity as surrogate parent, the administration establishes rules, sets punishments and directs student life according to what it feels is good for their "temporary children." Although such a stand is based on good intentions, this one-sided posture CANNOT CONTINUE.

The recent alcohol directive and its manner of issuance, clearly shows the administration's authoritarian attitude. This attitude has existed at Notre Dame for too long. For example, student input prior to the issuance of the directive was virtually non-existent. If the administration had any serious desire to involve the students in the running of this "community," they never should have taken such a unilateral action.

When asked yesterday about the University's stand on in loco parentis, Vice President for Student Affairs, Fr. Van Wolvlear stated that such a doctrine has never been an official stand taken by the University and that it is an extremely overused term. Instead, Van Wolvlear stressed the need to concentrate on promoting more democratic-type dealings as students and administrators working for a common cause. When asked about the Student Government's plan to strengthen the CLC and make it the primary vehicle for the students into the administration, Fr. Van replied that "the CLC has to be a viable mechanism if the office of the vice-president for Student Affairs is to find out what both the students and administration have to do to have the type of community we want."

Whether or not in loco parentis is an official University position does not weaken the fact that there is a profound discomfort with what students see as the paternalistic rule of a distant administration. Concerning the CLC, we must recognize the tremendous potential that exists within a body such as the CLC. However, we must be careful not to let the CLC become an inept advisory body whose cries for student rights fall on deaf administrator's ears. We must demand that the needs of the students as vocalized through the CLC are heard and acted upon by a administration who views students as equals and not children. And finally, let us hope that the Administration, especially Fr. Van Wolvlear, is conscientiously trying to strengthen the voice of the students.

It can no longer be denied by students or administrators that a real need exists for a "united community" at Notre Dame. A community which in reality, we as students see crumbling under the yoke of in loco parentis!!!

Good Work, Carrie!

I would like to congratulate Carrie Ewing for the fine job she has done as coordinator of this year's freshman orientation program at Notre Dame. Since her appointment as coordinator last spring, Carrie has worked devotedly to insure that freshman and transfer students would adjust quickly and easily to campus life. She and her committee have achieved that goal as far as I am concerned, by spending long hours planning picnics, mixers, and movies, to name a few; for example, plans for Activities Night consisted of registering and training participating clubs in procedures to follow, preparing a floor plan and setting up tables and chairs at Stepan Center, and manning an information table at Stepan on Activities Night.

Carrie's interest in each of the freshman and transfer students is apparent from the time she has spent at each orientation activity, trying to meet as many new students as possible, and offering to help with any problems they might encounter. These new students are pleased with the program, too. Those with whom I have conversed have confirmed my belief that the program has benefited them greatly; one freshman remarked, "Within two hours of my arrival at Notre Dame, I went from feeling totally alone to feeling like part of the community."

I am not a freshman; I am a senior who remembers the somewhat poorly organized program during my freshman year, which did little to allay my feelings of confusion and loneliness at the time. It's good to see someone taking the time to insure the success of this year's program.

Editor's Note: In response to the following letters, the Observer would like to note the following facts. The Observer did not release the names of the disc jockeys. Because any radio station is a public medium, their names were already known by anyone who had heard the broadcast. Also, all WSND FM broadcasts are logged, and these logs are later turned into the FCC to become a matter of public record. The Observer reporter tried to contact the individuals several times before writing his story, but was unable to do so. Mr. Rust never quoted the disc jockeys as saying they were drinking beer at the station. This quote was attributed to John Foster, production manager for WSND.

The disc jockeys' views were covered in the Observer of September 13.

License to Fictionalize

Dear Editor,

Literary license should not give reporters free rein to "fictionalize" news events. I refer to the front page article "Security Responds to Call-WSND Disc Jockeys Switched Off" which appeared in the September 12th Observer.

With the exception of the final ten minutes I listened to the entire show. I later went up to the station to become one of the "six guests" referred to in the article. I wish to make a few comments concerning statements made in the article:

1. "obscene sexual references"-in my opinion no such references were made.
2. The disc jockeys in question never said that they were drinking beer at the station. In fact, upon my arrival I saw no indication that any alcoholic beverages had been consumed either in the station or on the roof.
3. When security arrived Twardzick and Coughlin proceeded to remove the hibachi from the roof. The did not "hibachi in hand" lead "six guests up to the roof of the station's office for a barbecue. No barbecue ever took place.

The apparent use of "sensationalistic" style (i.e.: "while he readied his hand on the circuit breaker switch") is more befitting a murder mystery. A newspaper that repudiates itself to be a servant of the student body obligated to the factual account of pertinent news items should not allow this kind of "reporting" to take place.

I suggest that Staff Reporter, Mark Rust recheck his sources and make another attempt to contact Twardzick and Coughlin for comment. I also suggest that the Observer print a retraction of that article due to its slanderous content.

Gene McCullagh

WSND Coverage

Dear Editor,

The recent printing of the story concerning the two Notre Dame students who were found violating FCC regulations struck me as a gross misuse of your newspaper.

The publishing of the accused individuals' names may not, strictly speaking, violate the ethics of the Observer, but it is an unfortunate occurrence that your newspaper found its "interest" in the relaying of "good print" more important than the reputation of these two students. By naming them you have influenced 8000 people as to their character.

The frequency of mistakes within the text and your inability to get information from both those who are doing the accusing and the accused before printing the article only exhibits the unprofessional standards of the Observer.

Certainly the Observer has a right to publish what it deems fit, but when serious matters arise involving students it is better to consider the privacy of the students and the sensational effect such a story would cause before incriminating anyone.

Mark Szarflarski

Renovate Washington Hall

Dear Editor:

Anyone who has taken a good look inside Washington Hall lately can see the deplorable state in which the building exists.

The hall, once a classically beautiful theater, has fallen into such terrible disrepair as to make producing a play there almost impossible and viewing one dangerous. Attempting to light show at Washington is an exercise in futility and constructing sets is even worse. The abominable electrical system could easily produce a fire which, once started, would consume the entire wooden structure in a matter of minutes. It has even been rumored that the balcony structure is weak enough to collapse under a full load of people. Yet, there are groups which, out of necessity, continue to use the building despite the dangers it poses.

If nothing is done soon, events such as the Keenan Revue, Student Player's productions, Glee Club and Orchestra concerts, as well as various speakers will have to join the cultural exodus over to St. Mary's. Then where will we be? We need a theater here at Notre Dame. Right now, we are probably the only university in the nation without a working theater.

Washington Hall, with all its tradition, can and should be restored, renovated, and rejuvenated into the viable theater it once was.

Nicholas T. Matich

Major League Reporting

Dear Editor,

What ever happened to the other three divisional races in the major leagues? I seem to remember two or three other divisions in my not so distant past.

Granted, the Bosox and the Yankees do have a great race going. However, there are some baseball fans at ND who hail from somewhere other than the East coast. How about replacing the hit by hit rundown of the New York and Boston games with the line scores from several other 1st or 2nd place teams in the country.

For many students, the Observer is the only contact with the outside world. It would be nice if everyone had the opportunity to keep tabs on his home team. I will look forward to more comprehensive journalism by the Observer.

Study Lounge Living

Dear Editor:

I am fed up with hearing about this housing situation.

Being a regular resident of Grace Hall, I have not been able to understand the nasty treatment the Department of Student Housing has been dishing out to the students living in the lounges. If there isn't room for these students at this point in the semester, why can't the lounges be their permanent home? A number of students in Grace and Flanner contend that they are being deprived of their "study area," even though the massive Memorial Library stands a mere 200 yards away.

Many lasting friendships have been or are in the process of being made. Is it worth separating these people for the sake of study space?

Perceptive Commentary

Dear Editor,

I have never read a more perceptive analysis of an issue of primary concern at most colleges and universities than Jim Seifert's article, "The Teacher and the Researcher," in last Monday's Observer (Sept. 18).

Somoza or else

art buchwald

Washington - A well-known columnist came into my office the other day and asked, "Who are you for, Somoza or the commies in Nicaragua?"

"Why do I only have a choice between a dictator and the Communists? Why can't I be for Lopez?"

"Who's Lopez?"
"I don't know who Lopez is. Let's say he's the guy in the middle who hates Somoza and can't stand the Communists."

"Because Lopez would get eaten up by the Commies. If you're for the American interests in Central America you have to be for Somoza."

"I don't want to be for Somoza. He's a tyrant and from what I read, a crook. He's milked the country dry for 40 years. I hope he gets bounced out on his ear."

"What he is and what he does is not our concern. Do you realize if the other side kicks Somoza out, the commies will have a dagger pointing right at the Panama Canal?"

"Maybe so. But it's obvious Somoza can't hold on much longer, and we should see to it that Lopez is pro-American too. We're not going to do it if we keep training Somoza's national guard officers to shoot the Nicaraguan people."

"So what you're saying is that we should get in bed with Castro?"

"I'm saying no such thing. All I'm saying is that I don't see why we always have to support a military junta when the people want to throw the rascals out."

"It's quite simple. Most of the generals in South America have been trained at West Point, including Somoza. They speak good English and you can do business with them. You let the people take over and you'll have another Cuba in six months."

"Not if we support Lopez," I said. "The reason the Commies have a chance of taking over is because the people know we're on Somoza's side."

"You're living in a dream world," the columnist said. "Lopez doesn't have the strength to run a middle-of-the-road government."

"He would if we gave him as much military hardware as we've given Somoza. The only thing that's keeping Somoza in power is the stuff we've sold him. Why can't we give it to Lopez?"

"Because if we give the stuff to Lopez it will eventually fall into the hands of the Commies when they topple him. The only way Lopez can stay in power is by being anti-American."

"The people of Nicaragua are only anti-American because they know we support Somoza. If we said we were supporting Lopez we wouldn't get ourselves in a Marxist box."

"How can you be so sure of Lopez? We know what we've got with Somoza. He may be an s.o.b. but he's OUR s.o.b."

"So that means we have to support s.o.b.'s all over the world because it's in our best interests?"

"Every time we don't we get another Allende."

"But he was elected by the people and we knocked him off."

"With good reason. We haven't had to worry about Chile since."

"I'm not going to support Somoza no matter what you say."

"Okay, but when Lopez nationalizes the United Fruit Co.," my friend said, "don't come crvng to me." [c] Los Angeles Times Syndicate

Apoliticality and Notre Dame

Emil Faber College and similar institutions notwithstanding, one of the idealistic conceptions of a college is that it is the focus of the intellectual curiosities of men and women who are at a very energetic stage in their lives. It is not unreasonable to assume that this curiosity should be directed occasionally to the events of the day, and that, if a college student takes seriously his role as both a citizen and human being, he will attempt to remain as well informed as is possible in a relatively isolated college town.

This is at least my conception of the idyllic college existence, and because of this I must say that I was disappointed by the reaction of fellow students to the announcement on Sunday, September 17 of the Israel-Egypt peace agreement.

In the first place, because I was away from my room when the news first broke, I didn't hear anything about it until about an hour after the announcement was made by Carter, Begin and Sadat. When I finally heard a brief, incomplete account (in a priest's sermon at Mass), I returned to my dorm and attempted to find someone who might be able to fill in the missing details. After twenty minutes of responses which ranged from shrugged shoulders to mumbles of "who cares," I found someone who had seen the televised news conference and who reported that the prevailing sentiment among his friends was indignation that "Battlestar Galactica" was being pre-empted.

The sluggish spreading of the year's biggest news story cannot be attributed to faulty word-of-mouth communication in our halls; witness how active the informal teletype machine is when someone gets too drunk at a section party or when a fist fight breaks out between roommates. And apathetic responses were heard even from those who had seen the televised news conference, so the supposed "isolation" of South Bend from the rest of the nation cannot be blamed. The reaction which I encountered can be attributed to a depressing apoliticality which is characteristic of this campus and possibly of this entire college generation.

Before I am criticized for issuing a blanket indictment on the basis of an experience with a limited number of students in one dorm, let me say that this was just the most recent indication of what I see as a college phenomenon. I have made this judgment on the basis of encounters with other students from other halls and from other campuses and from a disillusioning set of statistics - showing, for example, the relatively low voting turnouts among young adults. And before anyone claims that people are "tired" of the Middle East issue and therefor animated reactions were not to be expected, I note that dozing citizens should be awakened by a shock which a totally unforeseen, albeit tentative, Israel-Egypt agreement surely qualifies as.

What many political discussions come down to among inner-directed students in the "me decade" is the question, "How is it going to affect me?" A dishearteningly large number of the questioners are demanding "effects" so personally direct that it is hard to convince them to even read a on the role of any teacher in a higher institution, although I'm sure that others may challenge some of his points. I hope that every teacher at SMC and ND read the article (and urge the Observer to send copies of it to everyone of us to ponder or discuss). We teachers should do a great deal of self-examination on the points which Jim made in the 3rd paragraph of the article. Thanks, Jim.

For Tomorrow

We'll be on the Winning Side

Oh behold, two weeks have gone by.

And none of us did really die. Though suicide we did have in mind,

And good reason we did surely find.

We each kept a good head on our shoulder,

With foresight that in a fortnight we would be bolder.

For you see, we lost to a team which should have been beat,

Ending all hopes for a year without defeat.

It was sad, frightening, and unbelievable,

To N.D. and the bookies, unconceivable.

The following's what happened, I say with regret,

But optimism allows it with my brow free of sweat.

The Tigers ate the Irish, and won it three-zip,

Not once in the game did we look like we'd rip.

Oh, rip we sure did, but right down the seams,

And ended on the wrong side of the scoring of the both teams.

But, Michigan we'll trounce upon, on this you can bet,

Making their namesakes resembled a tamed pet.

We'll wallop their bodies, and tear off their hides,

And throw them around and take them for rides.

So get ready and rough, but please do abide,

For tomorrow now we'll be on the winning side.

Dear Editor:

I wish to remark upon The Observer article in which is set forth the shabby news that two OSU fanatics have chosen to devote their patently finite imaginations to the creation and distribution of "Wipe Michigan" toilet paper. We learn that this noble enterprise is inspired as, presumably, scatological retaliation to equally tasteless creations by U of M "students" prior to a previous OSU-Michigan orgiastic display of national folly.

It is my fond hope that the ND student body will exercise good taste in this matter by resisting the temptation to participate in and thus propagate an atavism which, while seemingly appropriate to the Big-10/Big 8 mentality, must surely be scorned here.

Letters to a Lonely God

The Balms in Gilead

Reverend Robert Griffin

Did you ever sense, among alumni coming back for a football game, that along with souvenir-searching at the bookstore and the picture-snapping at the Grotto, some of the Old Grads are searching for the experiences that belong to religious faith & Notre Dame, the Emerald City, God's green and holy acres; Jerusalem and Canterbury and the Isle of the Blessed; City of the Blessed Sacrament, Mary's dowry, the chapel watched by hermits where the Holy Grail is kept. Under the cheering for victories and the chants that claim us to be Number One--after the final echo has been shaken down from a broken firmament--the Old Grad looks at lakes and searches faces, hoping for a glimpse of needed glory.

One's religious faith is shaped out of so much beauty: night skies seen from a mountaintop; the tiny shape of a baby's hand; the softness of a woman's cheek beneath our fingertips; the green earth on a summer's morning; the love of a friend who stands by us when we fail. Faith also has its darker moods, learned in the crises that we feared would kill us. Most of us survive pain, even when our heartbreak is from the death of children. Forever afterwards, we suffer the wounds, but we have heard news that there is a balm in Gilead. Gilead, for some Old Grads, seems like a place lit by candles that they knew as young men.

I remember one shimmering moment of faith that happened in New York at the end of the summer. As I stepped out of a taxi onto the sidewalk in front of the old Allied Chemical Tower in Times Square, a black woman began to sing. Her song contradicted all the human mischief that makes New York sick...

I sing because I'm happy--I sing because I'm free

His eye is on the sparrow, and I know he watches me.

Great God almighty, what an absurd affirmation to bounce off the buildings in Times Square. In Rome that afternoon, a new Pope had just been elected, and church bells were ringing throughout the world. But a hundred thousand church bells couldn't be as beautiful as one black woman at peace with the Lord, singing like a lark inheriting the sky.

Faith experiences are as irregular as lightning. You can't trap them into a schedule. They would seem like muggers jumping out of the darkness if they were not so lovely, taking you by surprise, delighting you in ways you could never expect, as when you turn the corner of the road by the ROTC building, and find that the moonlight has filled St. Mary's lake with silver.

Old Grads would resent it, I think, if you said you thought of them as pilgrims on the road to Mecca. Yet even when they're stumbling around the quads, looking for classmates who have brought extra ice, they keep casting sideward glances, peering at initials on the sycamores that will excite them with nostalgia. After Mass at Sacred Heart in the late afternoon, they will tell you: "The Mass was more unforgettable than the game; the church is more wonderful than the stadium. This is what we really came for. This is what I wanted my wife and kids to see." Half truths with no harm in them, I think, proving that O'Hara as well as Rockne could start a tradition that makes Notre Dame a place to want to feel hugged by.

Sometimes on a football Saturday, Notre Dame seems like a place you don't really need. You can't stand the noise of stereos stuck out the window, and you are driven crazy with embarrassment that you can't remember names. The strangers who look so familiar turn out to be your college roommates. They're so disappointed you couldn't remember so dear a truth as who they are, they are going to change the names of the kids they've called after you. Just when you are at the point of calling for security to blow out the candles and send home the mob, some red-faced Catholic tells you in an Irish whisper: "I came to this game so that I could get a Notre Dame priest to hear my confession. It's been a helluva long time, Father, and I'll miss the game if you'll just hear my confession." Suddenly you know it's not just a football game being played in the stadium; it is also a religious festival. It's a homecoming where prodigals are seeking the embrace of a father's arms.

Undergraduates don't need souvenirs from the bookstore nor pictures of the Grotto. Faith, at the undergraduate age, is still being separated from the fantasies of childhood. Innocence, if it has been lost, has only been a little lost; guilt is not yet a daily nag defeating peace. Pain is mostly an experience encountered at funerals in other student's families. All the balms of Gilead are more easily attainable at Aspen and Ft. Lauderdale.

But someday you may need the place as much as any Old Grad who has brought his grandchildren to watch the sun making haloes around the Blessed Mary's head. There are other games than football that Domers play. We don't win all the victories, but we can win the important victories, the final victories. To win victories, sometimes, you should go back to the place where you started. Beginning again, I suspect, for some Old Grads, is the inner grace that the outward signs of a football weekend are all about.

Beat Michigan!

Notre Dame to battle fifth-ranked Wolverines

by Tony Pace
Editor-in-Chief

It has been 35 years since Notre Dame and Michigan have done battle on the gridiron, but tomorrow's game may well be worth the wait.

Michigan is ranked fifth in the AP poll courtesy of a 31-0 whitewash of Illinois last Saturday, while the Irish are listed in the 14 position by the pollsters. Of course, if the Irish had not dropped their opener to Missouri, they too would have been in the top ten.

The Wolverines are a very fast team, both offensively and defensively.

Rich Leach returns to lead the UM point-producers. Leach has started at quarterback for each of the past three seasons. He was named All-Big Ten quarterback each of the last two seasons and was a second team All-America choice in 1977. He figures to be a top Heisman candidate this year. Leach already holds the Michigan mark for career total offense and he should add greatly to that total this year.

Leach is joined in the backfield by two seasoned ball carriers, Harlan Huckleby and Russell Davis. Huckleby has galloped for 1883 yards coming into the 1978 season and places third on the Wolverine list of average per carry with a 5.4 mark. Davis, a 220 pound fullback, is right behind Huckleby with 1867 career yards rushing. Both are three-year lettermen.

When Leach wants to put the ball in the air, his main targets will be junior wingback Ralph Clayton and sophomore split end Rodney Feaster. Clayton caught 24 passes for 277 yards and two touchdowns last year while Feaster saw only limited action. Tight end Gene Johnson, who attended the same high school as Leach, is also a good target.

Up front the Wolverines are shallow. Tackle Bill Dufek, who missed all of last season, is out for at least six weeks with a broken bone in his foot. Also the much publicized "Pro Franchise" line of last season has graduated. Coach Bo Schembechler must replace two All-Americans and one first round NFL draft choice. The tackles should be Jon Geisler and Dan Kwiatkowski, Greg Bartnik and John Arbegnini will be at guard and Steve Nauta will be the center.

As important as Leach is to the UN offense, Ron Simpkins is to the Wolverine defense. Simpkins is the 6-2, 225 pound junior linebacker was named All-Big Ten last season after setting a Michigan record for tackles. He started off the 1978 season right where he left off, with 13 solo tackles and 4 assists against the Illini.

The other linebacker in Michigan's 5-2 defensive alignment is Mel Owens. Owens has seen only limited action prior to this season.

The 5-man line features three down linemen and two stand up defenders. Nose guard Dale Keitz is flanked by tackles Curtis Greer and Chris Godfrey. The two outside linemen, Jerry Meter and Tom Seabron, are very active. Each of them had a pair of tackles for negative yardage in the Wolverines gaining victory. Meter was moved to the outside position last spring after playing at linebacker in the 1977 season.

Junior Mike Jolley is the only returning starter in the secondary. He should be joined by junior Mike Harden and senior Mark Braman. The Wolf back is junior Gene Bell.

Senior Greg Willner will handle both the punting and place kicking chores. Last year he connected on 42 of 44 PAT's but only 3 of 12 field goals. Willner did not punt last year but he had little trouble last Saturday as he boomed 6 punts for a 40.6 yard average.

The starting offensive unit for Notre Dame will be the same unit that started against Missouri with the exception of Tim Huffman playing at right guard in the place of injured Jim Hautman. Quarterback Joe Montana will be looking to get the first Irish points on the board for the 1978 season. His chief passing target could be wingback Pete Holohan.

The converted quarterback hauled in five Montana aeriels in the Missouri contest. Jerome Heavens and Vagas Ferguson will again do most of the ball carrying.

The opening defensive unit should be the same as that of the Missouri game, anchored by tackles Mike Calhoun and Jeff Weston, linebackers Bob Golic and Steve Heimkriter and safety Jim Browner.

Michigan coach Schembechler has been trying to play down the importance of the game to his players, but Notre Dame coach Dan Devine sees this as Michigan's biggest game this season.

Tomorrow's game will be televised to roughly 80 percent of the country, courtesy of ABC. Because of television, game time has been moved from the normal 1:30 EST to noon.

In the 1943 clash between ND and Michigan, Creighton Miller [#37] went 66 yards for a ND touchdown on the first play from scrimmage.

ND, Michigan resume series after 35 years

by Mike Henry
Sports Writer

It is a well-kept secret that coaches Woody Hayes of Ohio State and Bo Schembechler of Michigan disdain intersectional games, since a blemish in one virtually ends their title hopes. Experts affirm that the Big Ten is one of the weaker conferences anyway, and Hayes and Schembechler, more than anybody, realize this and dread games against teams like Penn St. and Notre Dame. It should come as no surprise, then, that tomorrow's showdown between the Wolverines and the Irish is the first such meeting since 1943. The series is scheduled to run until 1990 with only two interruptions.

Michigan leads the series 9-2, with nine of the contests being played when college football was in its embryonic stage. As a matter of fact, in 1887, Michigan traveled to South Bend, taught the game to some eager Domers, and then whipped them 8-0. Two games were played between the teams in 1888, Michigan winning both in an era when touchdowns counted for four points and field goals for five.

Ten years later, coach Frank Hering

(better known as the founder of Mother's Day) brought his eleven to Ann Arbor for the first of four games between 1898-1902. "The Champions of the West", as the polite version of their fight song refers to them, captured all four games without allowing a point. Interestingly, Red Salmon, Notre Dame scoring leader until Dave Reeve came along, was captain of this 1902 team. Salmon rushed for 53 yards in ten carries during one series of downs on the 110 yard gridiron, but received little support in a 23-0 pasting.

The final games before the modern era were played in 1908 and 1909. The Wolves escaped with a 12-6 triumph in '08 despite being outplayed and in 1909 the Irish gridders came home from Ann Arbor with an 11-3 upset. Harry Miller, father of Irish star and Hall of Famer Creighton, was superb in Notre Dame's first win over their northern rivals. He lugged the ball tirelessly, pausing only to let teammate Pete Vaughn score the first touchdown. Vaughn's run was so determined that he kayoed the goalpost on a crashing collision.

Notre Dame and Michigan have met only twice since those distant days, during World War II when much of the game programs were devoted to detailing how the two schools were assisting the war effort. Frank Leahy and Fritz Crisler led the teams onto Notre Dame's field in 1942 with something to prove. Michigan was coming off a 16-14 loss to Minnesota's Gophers, while the Irish had compiled a 5-1-1 slate, having tied Wisconsin 7-7 and losing to Georgia Tech 13-6. Angelo Bertelli, a year away from becoming Notre Dame's first Heisman Trophy winner, was the quarterback, with a sophomore at right tackle named Zygmunt Czarobski.

Michigan blew open a close game in the third quarter with nineteen points, led by their brilliant backfield of George Ceithaml, Tom Kuzma and Paul White. The Irish started off well a touchdown strike from Bertelli to Bob Dove, then fell well behind before Creighton Miller tallied in the final stanza to make the final 32-20. The third sellout in Notre Dame's history returned home to wait twelve long months for revenge.

And, before a huge throng of 86,408 and the largest press coverage of a sporting event up to this time, Notre Dame spoiled Michigan's Saturday night plans by rolling to a 35-12 victory. Leahy's 1943 contingent was a powerhouse, crushing opponent after opponent until Great Lakes stunned them with a winning touchdown in the last minute of the season. The Irish had already beaten Pitt 41-0 and Georgia Tech 55-13 before the Michigan game. Bertelli, who captured the Heisman despite playing in only six games, was five for eight for a whopping 172 yards, and he threw a 70-yard touchdown pass to Fred Earley to make it 14-7 in the first half. Miller had scored first on a 66-yard dash down the right sideline. He finished with 150 yards. The Irish lead continued to mount until Leahy sent in the shock troops in the fourth period, among them freshman quarterback Johnny Lujack.

Tomorrow's game is the second meeting between head coaches Dan Devine and Bo Schembechler. In 1969, Devine's Missouri Tigers upset the Rose Bowl-bound Wolverines, 40-17, at Ann Arbor. Schembechler remembers that embarrassing defeat vividly. Hopefully, he'll look back on tomorrow's battle in precisely the same light.

Beat Michigan!

Notre Dame and Michigan boast Heisman candidates

by Craig Chval
Sports Writer

Saturday's Notre Dame - Michigan game will not only showcase two of the nation's finest teams, but it will also match two of the country's premier quarterbacks--Notre Dame's Joe Montana and Michigan's Rick Leach.

Each has had his name bandied about as a possible candidate for the Heisman Trophy, but it's a long way from pre-season hopeful to one of the four finalists that we'll once again see on prime-time television this December.

Notre Dame boasts six winners of the award--Angelo Bertelli, John Lujack, Leon Hart, John Lattner, Paul Hornung and John Huarte. But five of those came during the fourteen-season span between 1943 and 1956, and the most recent winner--John Huarte, came fourteen years ago, in 1964. The Wolverines have yet to produce a Heisman winner.

The Heisman Trophy is an award that defies description. Of course, it is an annual award presented to the outstanding collegiate player in the nation by the Downtown Athletic Club of New York, and the first winner was the University of Chicago's Jay Berwanger in 1935.

But since Berwanger, its winners have been as diverse as their names. Only one player--Ohio State halfback Archie Griffin--has won the award twice, in 1974 and 1975, and only two linemen have ever been acknowledged. Notre Dame tight end Leon Hart shares that distinction with Yale's Larry Kelley.

Winners have traditionally been from football powers, but a team's win-loss record isn't always a major factor. Pittsburgh's Tony Dorsett won the award in 1976, while he was in the process of leading the Panthers to the National Championship. But Notre Dame's Paul Hornung captured the honor for the 1958 year, a season that saw the Irish compile a 2-8 mark.

And despite three national titles since 1966, Notre Dame fans haven't toasted a Heisman Trophy winner since Huarte in 1964. The most notable near-misses were Ken MacAfee and Ross Browner last fall, and quarterback Joe Theismann, who finished second in the balloting in 1970 after leading Notre Dame to a 10-1 season.

Behind Theismann's battle for the Heisman lies the most oft-repeated story of how a good sports information director can go a long way toward boosting a player's hopes.

When Theismann made his debut as a freshman on Notre Dame's campus, he pronounced his last name Theezman. But according to legend, Notre Dame Sports Information Director Roger Valdiserri took poetic license with the name, and the pronunciation became Thize-man. As in Heisman.

Unfortunately, Joe finished second to Stanford's Jim Plunkett in that year's voting, but the pronunciation stuck. To this day, the starting quarterback of the Washington Redskins is known as Joe Thize-man.

And although anyone in public relations field will tell you that a Heisman winner can't be "manufactured", a good sports information director plays a vital role in the national exposure a player receives.

Last year, Valdiserri and his since-departed assistant Bob Best found out the hard way why it is so difficult for a lineman--especially a defensive lineman--to win the award.

After a spectacular junior season in which he won the Outland Trophy, symbolic of the nation's top lineman, defensive end Ross Browner was listed prominently as a candidate for the Heisman. But as the season wore on, Browner wasn't matching the statistics of his junior year.

Last season's award also gave an example of how it's not always one of the preseason favorites that walks off with the award. Early in the fall, Browner, along with Oklahoma State's Terry Miller and a handful of others, dominated the Heisman discussions.

But out of nowhere came the Texas Longhorns to emerge as the nation's lone undefeated team after the regular season. And Earl Campbell, injured much of his junior season after promising freshman and sophomore campaigns, was a darkhorse winner.

Of course, winning the Heisman Trophy is no guarantee of an illustrious pro career. Dorsett, the 1976 winner, made an auspicious debut in the NFL with the Dallas Cowboys last fall. And O.J. Simpson won the award in 1968 after a sparkling career at Southern Cal.

But alongside those names as past Heisman winners, you'll also find such notables as Steve Spurrier, Pat Sullivan and Gary Beban.

But Notre Dame alumnus Huarte received perhaps the unkindest cut of all. Not too many seasons ago, he was waived by the Chicago Bears.

Irish defense to meet challenge from MU

by Gregory Solman

It must have been a little like moving into a new neighborhood for Mike Calhoun this spring: some familiar faces, but all in different places. For the first time since his freshman year, Calhoun was not flanked by stalwarts Ross Browner and Willie Fry, nor was he playing next to Ken Dike. In fact, he was the only returning starter to the defensive line.

However, good defensive players are noted for their ability to adjust, and Calhoun, being just that, encountered few problems getting used to his new linemates, Jeff Weston, Jay Case and John Hankerd.

"They're new," says the 6-5, 237-pound senior from Austintown, Ohio, "but they're pretty experienced for the most part and they knew what to do."

If Calhoun felt any different, he didn't show it on the field, and by the end of spring ball he had copped the Hering Award for the outstanding defensive lineman.

Certainly, if the defensive line is the first line of defense and Mike Calhoun is representative of the line, then one has to wonder why there has to be a second line of defense. But the ever-present war of the trenches is not always won, and Calhoun sees the function of the line as being instrumental to the rest of the defensive team.

"Part of my job as a defensive tackle," related Calhoun, "is to keep opposing linemen off of the linebackers, and to fill inside holes."

"I think we surprised a lot of people," Calhoun commented of the Notre Dame defensive effort during the Missouri of the Missouri game, "and we played well as a team. We simply beat ourselves."

Calhoun hopes that his team will not slip into the pitfall it seems to have in the last two years following highly praised defensive efforts.

"Remember," cautioned Calhoun, "They were talking about how well the defense played the game before Mississippi, and the game before Georgia Tech. We have to avoid complacency. We can't let it go...we have to work harder."

Calhoun insists that defeating Michigan will be hard work.

"My job and Jeff Weston's is Russell Davis. We have to stop him up the middle. This Michigan team is very talented. We expect them to try to pop Davis up the middle to open up their offense for the option."

If linemen set the tempo for games, then credit Calhoun with some pretty fancy tempo-setting. Last season, he was second on the team in tackles for losses with 13 for a negative 63 yards, and had a particularly outstanding Cotton Bowl to cap a fine season. And Calhoun, for one, has not dismissed a repeat of last year yet.

"Repeating the National Championship is difficult, basically because the press won't give you a second chance," commented Calhoun, "They're always looking for someone to knock you off. There is a lot of pressure, but this is a new team. We have to play the '78 season, and forget the '77 season. We can't rest on our laurels."

"Well, we don't want to forget '77 completely," said Calhoun, checking himself and smiling, "The memories are too nice."

You might say that Steve Heimkreiter has high aspirations for the coming season.

"I want to lead the team in tackles, break the single-season tackle record, make All-American and," adds Heimkreiter quickly, "win the National Championship again."

If linebacking strength is any indication of Irish chances for repeating, then Heimkreiter would give Notre Dame the edge over all others.

"I can't think of any other school in the country that has better linebackers than we do," said Heimkreiter, referring to fellow players Bob Colic, Mike Wittington, Bobby Leopold, Pete Johnson, and others, "We have linebackers on the bench that could start anywhere else in the country."

And, maintains, "the Critter", the Irish will need every bit of their linebacking to defeat the Wolverines.

"Michigan is a powerful team," warned Heimkreiter, "and they're going to try to win by pitting force against force. Judging from what I've seen on the films, they come right at you...and Notre Dame has the same kind of powerful defensive team."

And what does an outside linebacker think about Rick Leach, known as an outstanding option quarterback?

"I agree with Bo (Schembeckler) that he's probably the best option quarterback," commented Heimkreiter, "but he's not the best all-around quarterback in the country."

Heimkreiter, too, saw bright spots in the Irish defense, despite the 3-0 loss to Missouri.

"I think our team defense was fairly good," said Heimkreiter, "Even with the complex breakdowns, alignments and responsibilities we had to learn, I think we played well. And once we get the hang of working together, I think we'll be as good as any defensive team has been."

Heimkreiter, a 228-pound, 6-2 senior, hails from Cincinnati, which has been a virtual breeding ground for Irish football talent. Heimkreiter is coming off an excellent spring practice in which he won the Hering Award for being the top linebacker. He finished third on the team last year in tackles, with 98. In 1976, he led the entire team with 118.

Heimkreiter had an interception to set up a score in the biggest game of his career, the Cotton Bowl.

Michigan, he claims, is not far behind in importance. "It's certainly the second biggest game I've played in throughout my entire career. The Michigan game this Saturday is the National Championship game for this year. That game will make or break our season. A good game could start us rolling."

And after Michigan, the pressure continues with a tough contest each week. And Heimkreiter likes it that way.

"I love this year's schedule," remarked Heimkreiter, who revels in the finer aspects of the game, "We're seeing good teams with many different styles of offense...Hell, I'd rather play the big teams every week. I wouldn't mind it if the game was on National TV every game...in fact, I look forward to the games when they are."

Few serious football players would debate long over the question of whether to play for Notre Dame or for Harvard. Notre Dame, after all, is Notre Dame--Knute Rockne, the Four Horsemen, the mecca of college football. Harvard is, well, Harvard--Franklin Delano Roosevelt, the Daily Crimson, the Boston Commons, and, yes Oliver Barrett III. Why would any serious devotee of the pigskin want to play football at Harvard?

Joe Restic at one time had to make that debate, and he is as serious about football as anyone.

But then, not every player's father coaches Harvard football like Joe Restic's does. In fact, Joe Restic may have the proudest father in the world that has missed almost every game that his son has ever played--You see, he has a game of his own to worry about each Saturday.

"After I had it all boiled down, it was between Notre Dame and Harvard,"

Beat Michigan!

Few match Michigan's success against ND

by Paul Mullaney
Sports Writer

In Notre Dame's long and illustrious football history, Irish fans have pointed to such great rivals as Southern Cal, Purdue, Michigan State, Army, Navy, Pittsburgh, and more recently Alabama and Texas, as supplying some of the most enjoyable pigskin memories ever.

Amazingly, the thing which stands out in the competition between Notre Dame and these opponents is that the Irish hold the upper hand in their all-time series with each of these schools.

Millers helped to defeat MU in Irish wins

Lou Severino
Sports Writer

Although Irish fans know that Notre Dame has defeated Michigan only twice, few realize that a father-son combination has played prominent roles in both ND victories. Harry (Red) Miller in 1909 and his son Creighton in 1943, contributed heavily to the lone ND victories in the 11 game Michigan series.

Red Miller, a 6-0 175 pounder started at left halfback for the 1909 Fighting Irish. After 3 consecutive victories, Notre Dame traveled to Ann Arbor to face the mighty Wolverines known as the "Point a minute club", because of their prolific offense. The Irish had lost to Michigan in all 8 previous games and in fact had scored only 16 points in those games. But this day was to be a different story. Red Miller carried on 10 of 12 plays in a 78-yard drive setting up Pete Vaughn's 2-yard plunge, the game's first score (worth 5 points in those days). Later in the game with ND holding a slim 5-3 advantage, Miller led a fearsome rush which smothered a Michigan field goal try. The Irish recovered the blocked kick and moments later Bill Ryan broke loose for a 30 yard touchdown run. That closed out the scoring as Notre Dame captured their first victory of the series 11-3.

Red Miller, who had been converted to center for the 1908 season showed the durability and toughness which was a trademark of the 1909 Fighting Irish. This club finished with a 7-0-1 record and won the Western Collegiate Championship. Even more amazing is the fact that the Irish defense allowed only one touchdown all year.

Red Miller was only one of 5 Miller brothers to play football at Notre Dame. His proudest moment came in 1943 when his son Creighton led ND to their only other win over Michigan before 90,000 at Ann Arbor. This matchup of the top two teams in the country was hailed as 'the game of the decade'.

Creighton Miller a 6-0 185 halfback broke the game open on Notre Dame's first play from scrimmage with a 66-yard touchdown run. A 70-yard pass from Angelo "The Arm" Bertelli to Fred Early and a 4-yard run by Jim Mello upped the Irish to 21 points and ND went on to a 35-12 victory and an national championship. Bertelli, the Heisman Award winner in '43 enjoyed an outstanding day completing 5-8 passes for 172 yards and booting all 5 extra points. Miller turned in an even more spectacular performance with 159 yards in only 10 carries despite having a 58-yard run called back because of a holding penalty. Miller rushed for 911 yards and scored 13 touchdowns in this national championship year. His football exploits reached a pinnacle recently when he was named to the College Football Hall of Fame, an honor also held by 3 of his teammates on the 1943 Fighting Irish.

The Miller family has set an unparalleled record of success in Fighting Irish football history. Although their exploits are admirable on an individual basis, they are even more spectacular because they were accomplished by a father-son combination.

Tomorrow, when Bo Schmebeckler's Michigan Wolverines invade Notre Dame Stadium for the first of five straight yearly contests, Irish fans may add the defining Big Ten championship to their elite list of rivals. Saturday's regionally-televized affair will rekindle the oldest series in ND grid history after a 35-year sabbatical.

Michigan, however, differs from the other great Irish rivals in that they have dominated play against the Irish, winning all but two of the 11 games which date back to the last century. The only other modern day Notre Dame opponents which can stake that claim are Missouri and Mississippi. Only some of the more dated Irish fans might be able to add Great Lakes Naval Base, Yale, Chicago and Indianapolis Artillery to the list of teams holding career edges over the Irish.

Ironically, it was in November of 1887 when a Michigan team introduced Notre Dame students to football, although it was more like rugby than the game we know today. The students from Ann Arbor, already having played 19 games, instructed the academic-minded Notre Dame students how the game was played before winning 8-0 on a muddy playground on which now stands Nieuwland Science Hall.

In fact, Notre Dame suffered three losses to Michigan before winning their first game ever, a 20-0 triumph over Harvard (Chicago) Prep in 1888.

The two schools didn't meet from 1888 until 1898, when Michigan continued its dominance over Notre Dame with a 23-0 victory. Michigan victories followed in 1899, 1900, 1902 and 1908 before the Irish finally beat their volunteer teachers, 11-3, in 1909.

After that initial Notre Dame win, relations between the two schools broke the two teams met again in 1942, when the visiting Wolverines won 32-20. A 1943 Irish victory, 35-12, in Ann Arbor was the last encounter between the current football powerhouses.

Tomorrow's game not only finds the Irish in search of a 3-9 all-time mark against the Wolves, but in search of a balanced ledger for the 1978 season. Notre Dame's opening game loss to Missouri put the Irish under .500 for the year as well as below average against Missouri in the Irish-Tiger career series.

The Irish defeated Dan Devine's 1970 Mizzou team, 24-7, in Columbia, before being upset by the 1972 Tigers, 30-26, at Notre Dame. The Missouri triumph two weeks ago, 3-0, makes the Tigers 2-1 overall against the Irish.

Mississippi, the only other modern-day opponent to hold a series edge over the Irish, upset Notre Dame 20-13 last year in the only meeting ever between the two schools.

The Great Lakes team was a power during the period of World War II, when its series with Notre Dame ended at 2-1-2. The obsolete rivalry started in 1918, when Knute Rockne's Irish tied the Sailors, 7-7. It was actually a moral victory for a Notre Dame team that was undermanned, for the lone Great Lakes score late in the game was almost thwarted by Notre Dame.

The series resumed in 1942 at Chicago's Soldier Field with The Lakes coming off six consecutive shutouts. The green and gold clad Irish rose from a 13-0 halftime deficit to tie the score in just three-and-a-half minutes of second half play. The game ended deadlocked at 13 apiece.

The following year the two teams met at Notre Dame in the season finale. The Irish, led by Heisman Trophy winner Angelo Bertelli, were seeking an unblemished mark for the ten-game season. That goal appeared to have been fulfilled until a sophomore quarterback Steve Lach threw a touchdown pass to Paul Anderson with only 25 seconds left in the game. The 19-14 Notre Dame loss, however, didn't affect the Irish National Championship hopes as they were voted number one by Associated Press.

It took a Notre Dame football team 26 years and four tries to do it, but the Irish finally defeated Great Lakes in 1944, 28-7. In a game played in the snow, the Irish of coach Ed McKeever gave up the first score and came back to dominate the rest of the game.

In the decisive game in the career series, the two schools met in Hugh Devore's last game of his only season as head Irish coach. Led by fullback Marion Motley, Great Lakes destroyed Notre Dame from the outset and handed the Irish a 39-7 setback.

Yale has the distinction of never having lost to Notre Dame. In the only meeting between the two schools, Jesse Harper's 1914 Irish fell to Yale 28-0, one of two losses in eight games that year for Notre Dame.

Chicago and Indianapolis Artillery also can make that claim. Those two schools had little problem handling Notre Dame back in the days when there was no forward pass, a touchdown was four points, a field goal was worth five, a point after counted for two, games were played during the middle of the week and captains had to coach.

In 1895 Artillery beat the Irish 18-0, while Chicago won 8-0, 18-0, 34-5 and 23-6 in games between 1894 and 1899.

Wolverines to test ND defense

[continued from page 12] relates the younger Restic, "And when I approached my father with this, he left the decision completely up to me, saying that I couldn't go wrong with either school."

Looking back over free-safety Joe Restic's career here at Notre Dame, it is clear that he was not in error coming here. Restic, who led the team in interceptions last year with six, was an honorable mention all-American in 1976 and 1977. All of this, and a punter, too, Restic had a 38.1 yard average last year to add to his punt average of 148, the highest in the history of Notre Dame football. And if Restic does eventually end up a Harvard, it will be to attend their exclusive dental school (they accept only 21 applicants a year). That should tell you something about his grades.

Still, it must have been difficult for Coach Restic to see his son, the one he personally imbued with his football knowledge, shuffle off into the wilds of Indiana after all of the work he had put into his son's football education.

"When I was in high school," recalls Restic, "Dad and I used to get together in our cellar and review football films of our games. Even now I talk to him over the phone about our Notre Dame games. It's a tremendous feeling knowing that you can talk with someone that close to you, and be confident that he knows all of the specifics of the game. It's a common bond that has brought us closer together."

Restic was proud of Notre Dame's defensive effort against Missouri. Proud, but not surprised.

"The preseason question of whether or not our defense was good came from outside of the team," insists Restic, "We knew that we had some key people and that our talent would come together...but that's beside the point. I think we proved ourselves as a team, both offensively and defensively."

As the last line of defense, Restic does not take Michigan quarterback Rick Leech lightly.

"Leech runs the option as well as anybody," warned Restic, "But I can't take anything away from his as a passing quarterback."

Joe Restic has trained hard to get where he is. Admittedly, all he does in the summer is get ready for the fall. A superlative weightlifter, Restic entered Notre Dame at 170 pounds, now weighs 200 pounds and can bench-press almost one half of what he weighed his freshman year.

"It gives you extra confidence to know that you are as strong as some of the linemen you play against," smiles Restic.

Despite his individual efforts, Restic claims no magic formula to account for his frequent interceptions.

"Usually when I get an interception," says Restic, "It's not because I risked anything, but because a solid team defensive effort forced the ball into my zone of coverage."

Isn't it just like the best not to admit it...

I may be wrong, but....

The Irish Eye

The Irish Eye rebounded off a mediocre opening round of predictions and picked all twelve contests correct last week including the unanimous decision by Ali. However, the vacation of easy games is over as conference battles begin and national powerhouses lock horns (not to mention that Notre Dame is playing again.) The top games this week include the Irish versus Michigan and the battle in Birmingham between number one ranked Alabama and seventh ranked USC. So with the help of Tony Pace (remember his pro picks—neither do I) here are this week's sure bets:

Yale at Brown: Many experts feel that the Ivy League title will be decided in the first game of the year between these two teams. Last year Yale won the title by virtue of their one-point margin over Brown but it looks as though time has finally run out on the Eli. Gone is All-Everything John Pagliaro, the second-best rusher in Yale history. Carm Cozza also must find a new QB while Brown's offense is ready to go. If Brown's defensive front can hold than the perennial champs will be unseated by a 4-point margin. Pace tabs Yale by 6. (His cousin plays defensive back for Yale.)

Texas A&M at Boston College: Ever since BC took on ND three years ago, they have become gluttons for punishment. If they are trying to build their program, they are going about it in a strange way. Last year the Eagles went to Texas and were annihilated by the Longhorns. I think the Red Sox are sponsoring this game so that they won't be the only team massacred in Boston. The Aggies could be the dark horse this year although they will have to overcome injuries (FB George Woodward is out for the year). However Curtis Dickey should have a field day Saturday and A&M will pick up mucho points in the rankings as they tromp by 31. Pace sees the Aggies winning by 20.

USC at Alabama: If Bear can pull a victory out of his hat this weekend his team should snag every pollsters vote as numero uno in college football. The game is at Birmingham so that gives the Crimson Tide at least a three-point edge even before the opening kickoff. Alabama has the offense to add to that total but the defense was suspect in the first half against Missouri. Alabama will eventually be upset but they are too up for this game and USC is going to show the mistakes of a talented but inexperienced squad. Charles White (presently third in the nation in rushing) will do his thing as he drives for the Heisman Trophy but it will not be enough as the Tide rolls to a 9-point victory. Pace sees the Trojans avenging last year's loss by upsetting 'Bama by 3.

Clemson at Georgia: Evidently Georgia is not as weak as everyone thought they were. They are not winning but they put up a good fight. Steve Fuller has picked up where he left off last year for Clemson and as long as he is around, they will linger in the top twenty. Fuller should be able to pick the Bulldogs defense apart with the option as he looks to capture ACC Player of the Year honors for the second straight year. With the game at Georgia, the first half will be close but the Tigers will eventually claw their way to a 12-point decision. Pace likes Clemson by 17.

Florida State at Miami: While Florida State continues to hang on the top twenty charts, ranking mean nothing when these two teams get together. The Seminoles barely escaped with their lives last year and this time around they might not be quite as fortunate as the game is not in their backyard. Jimmy Jordan is second in the nation in passing after two games connecting on 33 of 53 tosses for 440 yards and four TD's. However Lou Saban had an excellent recruiting year and the dividends should begin to come in as the defense is finally sound. If Don Smith can avoid two blockers and get to Jordan, Saban might have his first upset of the year. That probably will be asking for a bit too much so I'll stay with FSU by 6. Pace picks the Seminoles by 13.

Tulane at Georgia Tech: The Yellow Jackets are not all they were cranked up to be but Tulane's dangerous offense is turning out to be harmless. Rich Hontas and Willard Browner have had troubles going forward. With 18 returning starters, the lack of success cannot be blamed on inexperience. Pepper Rogers dumped the wishbone to improve the offense but teaching players that have not seen a pass since they enrolled how to throw the ball is no overnight task. With 16 returning starters, the Wrambling Wreck was supposed to start clearing paths towards a collision course with ND but after Missouri Devine would be glad to be down South. Nevertheless G.T. wins by default claiming a 9 point victory. Pace can't believe such a worthless game is included in this week's picks and passes.

Columbia at Harvard: Joe Restic's Crimson play most of their games at home and while they don't have the firepower to take the Ivy League title, they should have fun playing the role of spoilers. Led by QB Larry Brown, Restic's multiflex offense is ready to confuse coaches, players and fans alike. It better because the defense isn't going to scare any schoolboy off the field. Columbia will definitely be improved in 1978 only because they couldn't be worse. There are bright spots on both offense and defense and Lions fans should be happy for that but don't expect to win as Harvard grabs this debut by 14. Pace tabs the Crimson by 24.

Maryland at North Carolina: Terp coach Jerry Clairborne must have a lot of friends because Maryland is getting enough votes to linger in the top twenty polls. They are highly touted despite the fact that they have no QB to speak of and the rest of the offense is mediocre. As usual the defense is tough but there are no All-Americans. On the other hand, N.C. has several All-American candidates including "Famous Amos" Lawrence (1,211 yards as a frosh). The Tar Heels were No. 1 in the nation in scoring defense last year and will be nearly as strong this year. Claiborne will say goodbye to the legitimate top twenty teams as his squad loses by 8. Pace selects the Tar Heels by 14.

Mississippi at Missouri: This battle of Irish spoilers should be interesting. No one can tell if the Tigers are for real as they bounced back from a 17-point first half deficit against Alabama only to be shut out 21-0 in the second half. Mississippi's kickers are their weapons if the defense can hold an inconsistent Tiger offense. Jim Miller can pin a team deep with punts in the ozone (45.9 avg. led the nation in 1977). Hoppy Langley can hit with extreme consistency inside the forty. If Ole Miss can get that close they can upset but don't bet on it as Missouri stays in the top twenty via a 10 point win. Pace likes Missouri by 6.

Colorado State at Brigham Young: Fans will go home with sore necks after this game is over as the ball will be in the air for most of the 60 minutes. Colorado's biggest question mark was supposed to be at QB but Steve Fairchild, the nation's J.C. total offense leader, has done an admirable job. He admirably leads the nation in total offense (277 yards per game) and is fourth in passing (18-27, 2 TD's and 287 yards). Keep an eye on this dark horse for the Heisman Trophy. BYU boasts QB Marc Wilson who is the returning total offense leader in the nation and set an NCAA record by passing for 571 yards against Utah in his first start. Whoever throws better will win the game but since BYU is at home I'll give them the nod by 6. Pace sees a Wilson aerial show leading BYU to a 17 point victory.

Rice at Oklahoma: This is my sure bet for the week because I would never be able to live down missing every game. It seems safe to say that Oklahoma could fumble on every play and still manage to win this game. If they don't fumble at all it could be a record-breaking contest for most points scored in a game. Barry Switzer will make excuses for beating the stuffing out of lowly Rice but he will get the poll votes he is looking for. Michigan disappointed me by beating Illinois by a mere 31 points but Oklahoma should come through with the 50 point margin. Pace, again laughing, picks Oklahoma by 63.

Michigan at Notre Dame: Schembechler's offense was hurt when All-American candidate Bill Dufek broke his foot last Saturday. The Wolverine offense is still a powerful running attack although ND has had much success against running teams. The Wolverine defense has yet to be tested but if the Irish offense performs like it did two weeks ago, Michigan will have to wait until their third game to test the defense. ND is a good team and Montana is a good QB. Now if they would go out on the field and play like they can it will be a very close game. There are no excuses when you have two weeks (it seemed like three) to prepare for an opponent and it is at home. I MAY BE WRONG BUT I'LL PICK ND BY SIX. Pace expects a strong ND comeback from 2 weeks ago and takes the Irish by 10.

MICHIGAN-- One Year Ago

Editor's Note: This article first appeared in The Observer last fall after Notre Dame had surprised Southern Cal with green jerseys and a 49-19 victory. But there's more to it than just a USC game--it has a lot to do with a confidence that suddenly swept over the campus prior to the USC game, and with certain observations made by people from the University of Michigan, home of the Ann Arbor Gag Bunch, whom ND will be facing tomorrow. It is reprinted as the F-Page's small contribution to a 97-point victory over Bo Schembechler, Rick Leach, and the rest of the noose-gooses from Michigan...

It was the Thursday before the Notre Dame-Southern Cal game, and I was in Michigan for a visit. There I happened to run into an old high school classmate who now attends the University of Michigan. Good ol' Fitz. Fitz the omnipresent wisecracker. Fitz the ingenious one-line sarcastic rag artist who loves nothing more than to relentlessly insult anything you might hold as sacred, dear, or otherwise important to your present life situation--your family, your friends, your job, your college. Good ol' smartaleck Fitz--a good guy really, a close buddy--who gets his hate up for ND whenever I'm around and available for a little target practice. Good ol' Fitz--standing and laughing in my face, telling me that ND "really looked impressive against Mississippi." (The Irish lost to Mississippi, 20-13.)

"Yeah, Fitz," I retorted. "You go ahead and laugh now. Laugh right up until the Rose Bowl when Ricky Leach and the boys pull their annual choke."

Fitz laughed harder, screaming now. "No WAY, Bryan! Not this year. All the way this year! Notre Dame was the big, bad team in September--and myyyyyy but they did look big and bad against Mississippi, and against Pittsburgh. Pretty shoddy, I'd say. Pretty shoddy."

"So, screw that, Fitz--we're gonna ream USC on Saturday."

Fitz was now in tears with laughter. "Sure, sure--we'll see about that. We'll see..." And he was still chuckling when I walked away.

It wasn't until much later that I realized Fitz hadn't used a single clever one-liner to tear down my team. Too bad he didn't take the chance while he had it. But then--how could he have known?

Poor ignorant foot-in-the-mouth Fitz--how could he have known about what was then happening in South Bend, about what would happen in South Bend that very Saturday?

How could he have known about the urgent frenzy that would overwhelm this campus that USC weekend? How could he, who has never been to this campus but once, envision the beer-crazed mob of students and alumni filling the streets between Nickie's and Corby's with a thirsty delirium that officially began the weekend on which the Trojans would get their heads stomped. He couldn't have known.

He couldn't have known about the ND Game Psyche: the alumni everywhere, the motels filled almost back to Chicago; students whooping their loyalty across the keg-spotted Green Field, where a young man from New York City, no alumnus mind you, told me, unabashed and unblinking, "No doubt. The Irish'll kill 'em by 35." And all the giddy bookworm undergrads coming right off endless midterms into a joyous Friday night resurrection (back to real life?), then four hours sleep, then up and at 'em, shotgun a beer if they must, and out to the tailgaters. Of course the alumni cavorting about in every direction, one laying a whole seven big ones on the Irish, and all the others in for perhaps their biggest surprise in fourteen seasons. And signs of every color and kind, even double meanings by gosh, draped about the entire campus--crudely paintsplashed foreshadowings of the imminent destruction of Southern Cal. One student put SC in brilliant red-and-gold perspective on a simply wrought t-shirt: "USC S---s." It was the whole damn campus forgetting the book-and-pen rigamorole, quelling the beast Academia, and stepping forthright and happy into a world of frenetic Eddy Street insanity and cocky, Trojan-beating, football fantasy. But not fantasy at all, no--49-19 ultimately belied that. But poor Fitz could have known nothing about all of this until long after that Saturday score had come down upon his head, until it was too late to take back his words...

SPOKE TOO SOON--how could poor Fitz have known about what would be the greatest psychological move of the week-end, the most dramatic part of the ND Game Psyche: the wearing of the greens? When I first heard that ND would be in green-and-gold, assured myself and everyone within shouting distance that the Irish would surely crush SC like a box of stale cornflakes. Southern Cal coach John Robinson would get sick at the sight of those jerseys. Fitz would get sicker. When the team gathered in the tunnel just before the game, the rowdy Irish throng confirmed the worth of the green-jersey gambit with a tremulous uproar that seemed never to diminish until we were far in the lead. At the sight of the greens and of the Trojan Horse rolling ominously onto the field, everyone seemed to know that the Irish would win. For they'd been there--on Eddy Street, in the happy Friday night mobs, on Green Field huddled about a keg, amidst the clamoring alumni, and now, in the stadium, where many were seeing the Irish in green-and-gold for the first time...unlike Fitz, who knew nothing of green or gold, or of Trojan Horses, or of USC weekend madness, or, most importantly, of an entirely new confidence that swept over the ND populace the moment the team took the field. The Irish KNEW. In the stands they jumped and mobbed and toppled over each other in their excitement, some running onto the field to greet the team, others hefting flasks and goatskins to their mouths for what they certainly believed to be pre-victory belts. THEY KNEW. Probably there were those cynical few who doubted that ND would win...but the cynicism and doubt had finally been silenced for the first time this season. Along with the great beast Academia, the gargoyle Skepticism had, for at least a day, been trodden down and laid to rest. Dan Devine, Joe Montana, and the rest of the Fighting Irish finished the job off by destroying USC and resurrecting Notre Dame's hopes for a National Championship....

A few days later, I was in Ann Arbor to visit friends who were also Michigan students and supposedly steadfast Wolverine fans. On this particular evening, they were none too pleased with their football team, it having been so shockingly upset by Minnesota, 16-0. They talked about their team while, on a television in another room, Coach Bo Schembechler could be heard chuckling and dismissing his team's poor performance as unimportant.

"Listen to that," one of them said. "Bo's laughing about that game. Who's he trying to kid?"

"Maybe he's drunk," suggested another.

The first one laughed, and I asked him if U-M had really played all that badly against Minnesota. I was a bit surprised at his answer.

"Ah, they been playin' bad all year. They never deserved to be Number One." (Which, incidentally, they were ranked for a short time.)

Shades of attitudes at Notre Dame during the first part of the football season? The cynicism, the doubt? I enjoyed hearing another school's fans voice such skeptical feelings, feelings that had been so totally forgotten in South Bend prior to the Irish embarrassment of USC. Still, I said nothing, realizing that the same old feeling could well spring up again at ND. I silently hoped that it wouldn't. It was better, more fun when the Irish knew.

Before I left, one of my Michigan acquaintances offered a sudden tribute to my school. Reaching across a kitchen table, he extended an open hand and said with a sheepish grin, "Hey, I watched that Southern Cal game the other day. And I just want you to know that all of us here at Michigan think you got one class school."

"Yeah," I laughed. "I know."

Performance

Aerosmith; September 30; 8pm. ACC. Any diehard rock and roll fan should enjoy this show as long as Steven Tyler doesn't imitate Jagger too much and as long as the band doesn't play music from their last two albums. ACDC opens for Aerosmith. I've only heard one of their albums and their name fits the music. They couldn't decide what to play or how to play it.

Performance

Yes; September 22; 8pm. ACC. A more than adequate follow-up to the Bruce Springsteen concert. Rick Wakeman, Jon Anderson, and friends have unrivaled talent in their ethereal brand of rock and roll. If you have an extra $8 lying around, the music and accompanying show will be well worth it.

The Proposition, September 22-29; Century Center. A play by Century Production. There is theater in South Bend and it's good theater.

Elizabeth Humes, soprano, Penelope Crawford, fortepiano; September 24; 8pm. SMC Little Theater. Sponsored by the SMC Music Department.

Other Boogie

Century Center; September 22, 23; 8:30 pm-2am. Disco night. They have to pay the electric bills somehow.

Pep Rally; September 22; 7pm. Stepan Center. Speakers: Terry Hanratty and Ziggy Czarowski. A good way to let out frustrations and anxieties and, at the same time, lose half of the water in your system.

Bourne denies all rumors

WASHINGTON [AP] - Looking back on the controversy that forced him to resign as President Jimmy Carter's chief adviser on drug abuse, Dr. Peter Bourne says he was most upset by rumors of widespread drug use in the White House.

"I have no acquaintance of anyone in the White House using drugs," Bourne said in a recent interview in the drawing room of his large, elegant townhouse in northwest Washington.

"I would have been the last person anyone would have told," he added. "But that rumor was around fairly actively. A lot of people were saying that."

The 39-year-old, British-born psychiatrist said he was neither sad nor bitter about his resignation in July from a $51,000-a-year job as presidential assistant for health and drug abuse affairs.

Bourne resigned 36 hours after disclosure that he had written a prescription for Quaalude, a powerful and much abused sedative, for Ellen Metsky, his administrative aide, using a fictitious name. Bourne said he used a false name to protect Metsky's confidentiality.

Her friend, Toby Long, was arrested in suburban Woodbridge, Va. when she attempted to fill the prescription for Metsky, and faces a preliminary hearing in November on a felony charge of seeking to obtain a controlled drug "by fraud, deceit or misrepresentation." No criminal charges were brought against Bourne or Metsky.

Shortly after he resigned, Bourne was quoted as saying there was a "high incidence" of marijuana use among members of the White House staff, as well as "occasional" use of cocaine by a few of them.

Asked about the accuracy of that report, Bourne replied: "I don't want to get into arguments about who said what. A lot of people were saying that. It was just a rumor floating around everywhere."

He added: "The last thing I would ever want to say is that there were people using drugs in the White House when the whole argument was that this was a legitimate prescription given for medical purposes."

Bourne said talk of drug use in the White House has "just annoyed me enormously, because I felt that there was a scurrilous effort on the part of publications to sort of go out after it" and a willingness to "let the facts become very loose."

Bourne said the only time he had seen drugs being used, with marijuana and cocaine "everywhere," was at a party given last year for the National Organization for Reform of Marijuana Laws. It was the same party where some reporters said they saw Bourne using cocaine.

"No, no. I was not snorting cocaine," Bourne said.

He denied he had ever used drugs while he held the White House job. He acknowledged, as he had at his confirmation hearings, that he had previously used marijuana. And he said he once tried cocaine "several years ago."

While he was in the White House, Bourne said, he wrote "not more than a dozen" prescriptions for fellow staff members, including presidential aide Hamilton Jordan. He said he used a fictitious prescription name only once - for Metsky.

"In fact, I even raised the issue of confidentiality to Hamilton, but he was totally blase about it," said Bourne, who said he prescribed some diet pills for Jordan.

Bourne, whose wife, Mary King, is deputy director of ACTION, the federal volunteer agency, said he was enjoying his relaxed life.

"I never realized how much pressure I had been under and how fantastically better I feel now," he said. "I haven't felt so good in five years. My life is very much nicer."

He does worry that some of the programs he worked on at the White House - like world hunger and national health insurance - have lost some momentum since he left. But, he said, "I plan to stay involved," making speeches, writing and lobbying for legislation.

"The president knows I am very committed to these issues and that is the understanding that we have."

Bourne said he talks to people in the White House several times a day, and that he and his wife have maintained contact with the Carters. "Our relations with them are good," he said.

Bourne reported he has had several job offers from corporations and universities, including Harvard, but that he had no plans to accept a full-time position until next year.

One subject he plans to speak about around the country is the danger of drug abuse.

"There's a real problem in the gravitation to the use of drugs, including alcohol. I'm very concerned about the very high use of marijuana by young people of this country - 45 million people have tried it, 11 million are regular users. One out of 10 high school students smokes marijuana every day."

Bourne supports Carter's policy of decriminalizing, but not legalizing, use of marijuana.

"But if it comes to a question of are you for or against marijuana, one must be against," he said. "Not using drugs is clearly vastly better than using drugs."

Program to begin

by Robbie Moore

About 100 Notre Dame students participated last Sunday in a bus tour of the South Bend-Mishawaka area. The tour was a pilot of a project of the "Horizons" program sponsored by the Center for Experiential Learning.

Tom Schlereth, American Studies department chairman, began last weekend's program with a 45-minute slide presentation on the historical background of South Bend and Mishawaka. South Bend Congressman John Brademas was also on hand to supply additional information.

The tour itself got underway around 3 p.m. as students from Grace, Flanner and Breen-Phillips boarded three busses manned by husband/wife teams from the University faculty. Acting as commentators, they cited various points of interest along the route, including the Studebaker mansion, the Farmers' Market, and two Frank Lloyd Wright homes.

The tour route roughly followed the St. Joe River, with stops at the Century Center, where students meandered through a Hungarian Art Exhibit and the Discovery Hall Museum, at the Justice and Peace Center, and at the 100 Center.

The last stop was the highlight of the day, according to Mary Anne Tighe, one of the participants. All students were given free soda in the Beer Gardens, discount coupons good at many of the shops and a free movie pass to the Boiler House Flix. Afterwards, participants gathered for a cookout at Grace Hall.

"Horizons" is a new program offered by the Center for Experiential Learning. "The Unseen City," a team-taught class offered last year by Fr. Don McNeil, John Roos, associate professor of government, and Tom Swartz, professor economics.

The syllabus of "The Unseen City" presented "an economic, political and theological overview of the city," Patty Dwyer, one of the class members, explained.

One of the requirements of the class was the presentation of a student project concerning the theme of the "unseen city."

Dwyer said she and two other students, Tracey Enright and Steve Thomas, collaborated on an audio visual presentation to "try and dispel the stereotypes of South Bend as a social and cultural void. We wanted to show the viewers some of the things there are to do and see in South Bend."

"Horizons" was formed as an offshoot of Dwyer's presentation. She explained it is aimed primarily at freshmen and sophomores, and seeks to give them a chance to explore the community beyond the campus and become acquainted with other students.

The Center for Experiential Learning provides a variety of similar programs which serve to orient the student with the urban environment. The Center is directed by Mary Ann Roemer and Fr. Don McNeil.

Logan to sponsor Bikathon

Logan Center is sponsoring a "Bikathon for the Retarded" on Sunday. The bikathon is the most important fund raising event of the year, with money being contributed to the St. Joseph County Council for the Retarded as well as other state and local councils.

Volunteers are needed to help with registration (beginning at 12:30 p.m.), serving refreshments, and clean-up (beginning at 5:30 p.m.).

Sponsors and riders can still sign-up by calling Mike at 1371 or Sue at 4832. A dance, featuring the band "Pages," will be held from 3 to 5:30 p.m. for all riders, sponsors, and workers.

attempt to make the students aware of the issues, it will have a major impact," he said.

McKenna said that it was "appropriate" to take the matter to the Board for two reasons. "First, we are giving reflections to the body that created the CLC a year ago—a progress report. Second, the proposal for student rights deals directly with the role of the CLC," he explained.

"What is necessary," McKenna said, "is a system of checks and balances."

The "checks and balances" proposal calls for the CLC to legislate or rescind all University regulations. The proposals of the council would then be approved or vetoed by the Vice-President of Student Affairs, who would appear before the council to explain his action. The CLC, under the proposal, would then have the power to appeal his decision to the provost or—if necessary—to the University President.

McKenna will meet Wednesday with Student Body Vice-President Michael Roohan to plan further strategy for passage of the reform, McKenna said.

African films to run

Sunday, Monday

Two film documentaries on Africa will be shown Sunday and Monday evenings in the Engineering Auditorium. "Nuer", a detailed anthropological study of community life among the Nuer tribe, will be shown Sunday and Monday at 6:30 and 9:30 p.m. The film is about 75 minutes long.

"Last Grave at Dimbaza", to be shown Sunday and Monday at 7:50 and 10:50 p.m., is a hard-hitting documentary on South Africa's policy of Apartheid. The film was photographed clandestinely and smuggled out of the country and focuses on inequities in housing, education, wages, and health care to which blacks and other officially designated "colored peoples" are subjected.

Palmer accepts award

Frank LaGrotta

David K. Palmer, a Notre Dame senior, received a special award from the St. Joseph County Blood Program yesterday for his work in volunteer blood donor recruitment at the University.

Palmer, a native of Salina, Kansas, was honored at a special ceremony held yesterday at the local American Red Cross Chapter building in South Bend. He has been in charge of student blood donations at Notre Dame since 1976.

Palmer is a member of Alpha Phi Omega, a national service fraternity. As a sophomore he helped establish a blood drawing station at the Student Health Center in conjunction with the local Red Cross chapter.

Palmer, who relinquished control of the program last year when he was elected president of Omega's national chapter, is in charge again this year. He said his responsibilities include getting information to the hall representatives when their hall is scheduled to give blood.

The blood drawing center operates on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of various weeks throughout the year. The students in each hall are scheduled to donate on specific days.

"The response has been excellent," Palmer pointed out. "Halls like Dillon, Alumni, Breen-Phillips and Howard always respond well. Notre Dame is a great place for a program of this nature because most of the students here are young, healthy and able to contribute blood.

"The facilities at Notre Dame are really excellent. I'm very pleased with the way things turned out."

"David has done an excellent job," commented Donna Goss, who serves as Director of Donor Recruitment at the South Bend chapter of the Red Cross. "He's done a lot of work to make this program a permanent thing at Notre Dame."

"In the two full years that David has been involved with the program, the blood donated at Notre Dame has increased 25 percent. That's very good for a campus the size of Notre Dame," she added.

Palmer cites the work and involvement of the Notre Dame community as the reason for the program's success.

"I felt like I accepted the award for the entire campus," Palmer said. "They've really made the program work."

Senior trip registration resumes

Registration for the senior class trip will be held tonight between 6 and 7 p.m. the times for registering will resume their normal 6 to 8:30 scheduling this Monday through Wednesday.

Prosecutor Consentino needs no outside help in Pinto case

ELKHART, IN [AP] - Elkhart County Prosecutor Michael A. Consentino says he doesn't need any outside help in his case against Ford Motor Co. on criminal charges stemming from the deaths of three teenage women in a fiery Pinto automobile crash.

"I have my plan already arranged," Consentino said, adding that he has turned down several offers of technical and legal assistance in prosecuting the case. He said he will use some law school professors in the trial.

Since the unprecedented indictments were handed down by an Elkhart Superior Court grand jury last week, Consentino said he has received more than a dozen letters and several telephone calls, mostly applauding the action.

The grand jury indicted Ford on three counts of reckless homicide, a felony, and one count of criminal recklessness, a misdemeanor. It said the nation's second-largest auto maker knew the Pinto fuel tanks were likely to burst into flames in rear-end collision but did nothing to alter the design to make the cars safer.

A Ford attorney, Edward Kalamaros of South Bend, appeared before Elkhart Superior Court Judge Charles Hughes in a five-minute hearing yesterday as arraignment was set for Oct. 12.

Ford is expected to challenge the indictments, but Kalamaros refused to comment on the auto maker's plans.

Consentino said he has received letters from attorneys as far away as San Antonio, TX, and Clayton, MO, seeking information on the case to help with similar suits in which they are involved. Most of the letters, however, are from private individuals who tell of their own fights with big corporations.

Young Demos meet

The Notre Dame-Saint Mary's Young Democrats held their first meeting and elected officers Wednesday night. Speeches were given by Frank Sullivan, campaign manager of Congressman John Brademas(D-IN); State Senator Bob Kovach; Mike Barnes, candidate for County Prosecutor; and Bill Richardson, a representative of County commissioner Richard Larrison.

Sullivan encouraged student involvement in the campaign of Brademas, who is currently House Majority Whip.

Kovach discussed his work with members of the Logan Center to obtain additional funds for the handicapped, and his work on a new statue concerning landlord-tenant relationships. He also reiterated his stand in favor of lowering the drinking age to 18.

Barnes stressed his experience as Deputy County Prosecutor and the importance of the County Prosecutor's office to Notre Dame students.

Richardson said that County Commissioner Larrison's office, part of the county's administrative branch, affects Notre Dame students in matters such as regulation of traffic on football weekends and snow removal.

The club officers for 1978-79 are President Joe Slovinec, Vice-President Kevin Gallagher, Secretary Tricia Garcia, and Treasurer Don Cleary.

Court rules against Times reporter

Amendment allows a reporter to shield notes and confidential sources.

Two dissenting judges, however, criticized the majority for upholding the contempt citations before a full hearing had been held on whether the subpoena for Farber's notes was specific enough.

The majority found that a state law protecting reporters from having to reveal confidential information did not apply because both the federal and state constitutions guarantee people accused of crimes the right to "compulsory process" for witnesses in their defense—in other words, to subpoena testimony that helps them. If a law and the Constitution clash, the Constitution rules, the court said.

The ruling noted, however, that reporters "are by no means without First Amendment protections," including the privilege "to refrain from revealing sources except upon legitimate demand."

Farber, who was jailed 27 days in August before being freed pending the high court action, was ordered back to Bergen County Jail at 4 p.m. Tuesday if he continues to withhold his notes from trial Judge William J. Arnold.

Farber refused comment. Times Attorney Floyd Abrams said the Supreme Court ruling was "a sad disservice to First Amendment privileges."

The murder case being tried in Superior Court involves a series of patient deaths at Riverdell Hospital in Oradell 12 years ago.

Dr. Mario Jascalevich, 50, of Englewood Cliffs, a Riverdell surgeon at the time, was indicted in 1976 after Farber wrote a series of investigative stories for the Times about the mysterious deaths.

HEWLETT-PACKARD INTRODUCES PROFESSIONAL SCIENTIFIC CALCULATORS FOR A STUDENT'S BUDGET.

THE PRICE OF EXCELLENCE NOW STARTS AT $60*

Now you can get the same quality, durability and many of the features found in Hewlett-Packard's professional calculators—at a price you can afford. Introducing Series E for science.

DESIGNED FOR STUDENTS.

Easy-to-read displays. Larger, brighter LED display with commas to separate thousands, easier on the eyes during those long hours of study.

Built-in diagnostic systems.

You'll now be working on many new challenging problems—that's why Series E has diagnostic systems that tell you:

1) when you've performed an incorrect operation; 2) why it was incorrect; 3) if the calculator isn't working properly. Accuracy. Improved algorithms give you confidence that your answers are more precise and complete.

FROM BASIC SCIENCE

TO ADVANCED PROGRAMMABLE.

The HP-31E—Scientific. $60* Trigonometric, exponential and math functions. Metric conversion. Fixed and scientific display modes. Full 10-digit display. 4 separate user memories.

The HP-32E—Advanced Scientific with Statistics. $80* All HP-31E functions plus hyperbolic and comprehensive statistics. More math and metric capabilities. Decimal degree conversions. ENG, SCI and FIX display modes. 15 user memories.

The HP-33E—Programmable Scientific. $100* Scientific, math and statistics with programmability. Editing, control and conditional keys. 49 lines of fully merged key codes. 8 user memories.

HEWLETT-PACKARD IS WITHOUT EQUAL.

All Series E calculators use RPN logic exclusively.

If you've never tried it, you're in for a big surprise. It lets you solve problems the way you naturally do in your mind. Straightforward.

Logical. No worrying about complicated hierarchies or parentheses. RPN is the shortest possible distance between the question and the answer.

SEE FOR YOURSELF.

To help you select the calculator that's right for you, we've prepared a booklet entitled, "The Student's Choice... the Logical Choice." Movement meets at Howard

by Rob Powers

"The Charismatic Movement simply involves people who take the Holy Spirit seriously," Father Ed O'Connor, Associate Professor of Theology told a Charismatic Forum last night. "When you begin to take him seriously he begins to act in your life with power. O'Connor, a widely recognized author and specialist on Charismatic Renewal, addressed the Forum in the Howard Hall Chapel. "The Charismatic Movement is a rediscovery of the Holy Spirit," he said. In light of Pentecost he added. "The Holy Spirit began the Church. The Church is the framework which grew up around it."

O'Connor traced the origin of "charisms" or "gifts of God" to St. Paul, who speaks of "tongues," prophesies, and supernatural gifts in his Letters. "The church of Jesus was a charismatic church," he said. "These signs accompanied those who believed." O'Connor stressed that the Holy Spirit has become a kind of "meaningless entity" among Christians, "mentioned only when we bless ourselves." "There are a lot more miracles in the Church today than we generally recognize," Father O'Connor said. He pointed to some contemporary miracle accounts which have not been reported or investigated by the Catholic press.

Four other people related their experiences with the Charismatic Movement during the Forum.

Brother John Levelle described the Charismatic prayer meeting. "A prayer meeting has no prayer book to go by; prayers come out of our hearts, sometimes extemporaneously, and sometimes almost scaring us." The meeting begins with the reading and discussion of Scripture passages, followed by a period of prayer, which may include prophesy and "speaking in tongues." It is followed by a Mass. Mike Cunesh, a freshman, discussed his involvement in the healing of cancer and other incurable diseases during his two years in the Movement.

Betty Jean Valdez, a graduate student, said the Movement taught her how to pray prayers of praise, in addition to prayers of petition and thanksgiving.

Andy and Linda Knapp, a South Bend couple, described their experiences with the Movement. Andy, who had taken drugs in high school, was working to form a commune when he saw the relevance of Christianity to his goal. Eventually he became active in Charismatic prayer groups.

When questioned after the Forum about the theological implications of the movement, O'Connor said. "There is no new doctrine involved in this: it is a revival of the old doctrine."

"Charismatics believe very strongly that Scripture is the Word of God," O'Connor said. He added, however, that they do not debate the point of taking the Bible literally, leaving that question for scholars. He pointed to the fact that some prominent Biblical scholars are in the movement.

About fifty students attend the weekly prayer meeting in the Log Chapel, according to O'Connor. The movement is not highly structured, he said, and there are other Charismatic groups similar to O'Connor's on campus.

Although the Charismatic Movement was founded at Duquesne University in 1966, Notre Dame has played a prominent role in publicizing the movement. Every summer since 1967, between twenty and twenty-five thousand Charismatics have met at Notre Dame for their three-day convention.

For Irish harriers

Welch anticipates successful season

by Gregory Solman
Sports Writer

With the biggest meet so far this year slated this afternoon at East Lansing, one might think that the strategy of the past week for the Irish has been to train as hard and get as "mentally up" as is humanly possible.

But according to Irish cross-country co-captain Steve Welch, his duties of late have been quite the opposite.

"This is certainly our first big dual meet," confirmed the senior from Hanibal, Missouri. "But right now we're just trying to keep things low key. It's too early in the season to be running all-out. We have to realize that there is a long season ahead."

And if recent team performance is any indication, intimated Welch, Michigan State should fall prey to the tough Irish team without much problem, even if every runner doesn't run his utmost best.

"The first year I came here, in 1975, we hadn't defeated Michigan State for over ten years," recalls Welch. "Since that time, we've beaten them twice and lost to them only once."

"Incidentally," the veteran Welch noted, "That was the first year we were coached by Joe Piane, which should give you some idea of what he's done with the program - it's gone nothing but up."

"So we're training 'consistently,'" related the harrier captain, "as opposed to 'very hard'. We're just trying to keep a lid on things."

"Keeping a lid on things" is not as easy as it might sound. Especially when the team holds within its grasp the first viable chance it has had to make the Nationals in Madison, Wisconsin.

Last year, the team faced tough odds against some of the nations best cross-country teams in the District IV qualifiers. Despite a good showing by the Irish, against powerful teams from the Big Ten, the Mid-American Conference, and the big independents, the Irish were unable to rate as one of the four teams selected from the division.

But this year will be different - or so says Welch.

"Our whole team is prepared to go this year," stressed a determined Welch. "We are a better team than we were last year; I'd say that this is the best team that we've ever had here."

This, according to Welch, is due in large part to the outstanding recruiting of Piane, who wooed several "blue-chip" athletes this year in Ed Bolmber of Portland, Oregon, Tony Hatherly of Thunder Bay, Ontario, and Chris Lattig of Gresham, Oregon.

"As a captain, these freshmen have posed very little problems," added Welch. "These guys really knew the sport before they got here. They're doing very well."

Steve Welch even reserves a little time to worry about himself.

"I'm not into running as an aesthetic thing," relates Welch on his running philosophy. "I realize that some people talk about it this way and refer to a 'runner's high', but as for myself, and, I might add, for most of the other runners, cross-country is a chance to compete."

"I have to admit, though," says

Welch, "One does feel a certain unity between the body and the mind."

This has been a difficult fall to train. The weather has been hot, the air, humid and heavy; not at all ideal conditions for the training of long-distance runners. However, the cross-country team has managed to remain loose and interested.

"It doesn't get boring when you run with a group of guys," said Welch. "You can either goof around and let the miles go by, or you can seriously think about racing, about being ready when the time comes. . . ."

For the Irish cross-country team, Coach Joe Piane, and co-captain Steve Welch, the time may come November 20, in Madison, Wisconsin.

"It should be nice and cold up there," laughed Welch.

And that may be a welcome change in the weather for all of the Irish runners.

Trade Bait

Joe Washington

Trades are a part of life for any professional athlete. Players who remain on the same team for the duration of their career are few and far between. So one would expect that an athlete's performance shouldn't change drastically when a trade occurs. But this is rarely true.

A recent case involves the trade of Joe Washington from the San Diego Chargers to the Baltimore Colts. Washington, a running back, was dealt away along with an undisclosed draft choice for Lydell Mitchell. Mitchell was in the midst of a contract dispute with the Colts. The Colts unloaded him for what seemed to most observers to be a very deflated price. Mitchell had been the mainstay of the Colts' offense for the past three of four seasons. He was their top rusher and their top pass receiver.

Washington, meanwhile, had shown little in San Diego. He was a top draft pick out of Oklahoma three years ago and everyone expected him to be an instant smash in the professional league. His monicker at OU was silver wheels and he raced for over 5000 yards in his collegiate career. But he wrecked his knee early in the pre-season and had to undergo surgery. It was a lost season. Last year he came back but he did not at all resemble the player he had been in college. He was used sparingly and did little.

So, before the opening of the 1978 campaign he was traded to the Colts. Same player right? Wrong! Washington looked as though someone had breathed some life into him before last Monday night's game against the New England Patriots. Ole Silver Wheels carried the ball six times for 53 yards. Moreover, he looked like his old self, darting, leaping and slithering his way for every possible yard. Washington threw an option pass for a touchdown caught a pass from Bill Troup for another score, and then stunned everyone in Foxboro Stadium, not to mention that he won the game by returning a kickoff for a touchdown. Washington alone accounted for 18 of the Colts 34 points.

Why was Washington so effective Monday night for the Colts while he had never done for the Chargers? The Colts needed him. Mitchell's departure left a huge gap in the Colt offense. Coach Ted Marchibroda told Washington that it was up to him to fill that gap. It was a masterful psychological tactic by Marchibroda.

Washington has always been the big gun in the Sooner offense but when he went to San Diego he was just another running back, albeit a highly paid one. With the Colts he is back to his old situation, he will be the hub of the colt offense. When Bert Jones returns the Colt offense should be as good as ever. Washington should flourish in Baltimore, he should be able to realize some of the potential he exhibited in college. Trades can make a player. The Browns have been the surprise team of the season. They have beat the 49ers and the Bengals, not much surprise there, but they also beat the Falcons. Without the services of Greg Pruitt, the Browns scored 24 points against the once vaulted Atlanta defense.... Rick Upchurch continues to be one of the most exciting players in the game. His 75 yard punt return for a touchdown broke the game open for the Broncos last Sunday....The Cowboys did not look like champs as they lost to the Rams on Sunday, but one wonders whether they are just taking the early part of the schedule easy, fully expecting to make the playoffs....Jim Zorn continues to impress as the Seahawk quarterback. He may not be all that graceful but he puts points on the scoreboard....The Bears have yet to be tested by a top caliber club, but they seem to resemble the Vikings and Redskins teams of few years back, they do what they need to win....How long will Paul Brown keep Bill "Tiger" Johnson as head coach if the Bengals continue to flounder? The Bengals have the talent, but....How does Don Shula do it? Don Strock can't be as good as Bob Griese can he? Well, those Dolphins are winning, and if Griese comes back with them two or three games above .500, they'll be a good bet to win the AFC East.

Notre Dame nemesis Marques Johnson will lead the Milwaukee Bucks in an NBA exhibition game against the Chicago Bulls Sunday at the ACC. Tip-off is set for 7:30 p.m.

Notre Dame downs Goshen

by Kathy Campanella
Sports Writer

On Wednesday, the women's field hockey team won the opener of their 1978 season by defeating Goshen College by a score of 3-2.

The game was a hard-fought one throughout both halves. With less than ten minutes gone in the first half, Goshen netted the first goal. Undaunted, the Notre Dame team rallied and at 11:23, senior Mary Clair Tollaksen scored, tying the game. Getting the assist was sophomore Pat Crowell. The remainder of the first half became a defensive battle as the score was still 1-1 when time ran out.

In the second half, the Notre Dame offense showed their aggressiveness by scoring with just over two minutes gone by. Putting the goal in was sophomore Carrie Rooney, assisted by Tollaksen. The tide of the game again turned, when at 5:38, Goshen tallied its second goal. Not to be defeated, the Notre Dame squad came back and at 18:44, scored the game's final and winning goal. The score came off a short corner play. Crowell hit the ball to Tollaksen who then passed it to Rooney who took the shot, getting her second goal of the game.

The Notre Dame defense played excellently. Senior goalie Mary

Hums totaled 18 saves, eleven of which were in the second half. Defensive leaders included Carrie Rooney, junior Susie McGlenn, and senior Donna Carini, but it was a team effort that helped the Irish prevail.

When asked about her team's performance, Coach Astrid Hotvedt seemed pleased. She commented that during the second half she told the girls, "Pull up your socks and get your sticks down!", and they did just that.

On Wednesday, September 27, the Irish will travel to Taylor College and attempt to up their record to 2-0.

SMC netters win 2, lose 1

The Saint Mary's tennis team finished the week with a slate of 3-1 by losing to DePauw on Tuesday, and defeating Indiana Central and Goshen College on Wednesday and Thursday respectively.

The sweltering heat in Greencastle, Indiana, along with the DePauw girls' tennis team, proved to be too much for the Saint Mary's tennis team this past Tuesday. The Belles came home with a 6-1 defeat.

For individual scores, Saint Mary's number one singles player, Cindy Schuster, was defeated by Nancy Gyorgyi, 6-1, 6-3. SMC's number two singles Anne Daniels lost in two sets to Anne Baur, both at 6-1. SMC's number three Nella Domenici was beaten by Karen Torman, 6-1, 6-0. In the only three sets match of the day, SMC's number four Karen Smith lost to Becky Hunter, 5-7, 6-4, 6-1. Number five singles for SMC, Mary Lloyd, was defeated by Lynn Williams, 6-4, 6-0. And for Saint Mary's only victory of the day, number six singles Carmelle Maenza defeated Lyn Faller, 7-6, 6-4.

In the only doubles match completed, SMC's Daniels and Schuster lost to Gyorgyi and Torman, 7-6, 6-1, in the number one doubles match. The number two match was called because of darkness. And in the number three doubles, Maenza and Domenici were tied with Williams and Faller at one set apiece, 6-4, 6-7, when the match was also called for darkness.

Despite having to forfeit a singles and a doubles match the Saint Mary's tennis team ended Thursday night by defeating Goshen College.

Maureen O'Brien won in three sets over Goshen's number one seed 6-4, 5-7, 6-4. Losing a tough match in the number two slot with scores of 6-2, 6-4 was SMC Ana Cusack. Victories by SMC Carmel Maenza and Nella Domenici were 6-1, 6-1, and 6-0, 6-3, respectively. SMC's number five singles player Mary Beth Hanavan losing 6-7, 6-2, 6-3 was Goshen's second and final victory of the evening. Both number one and two SMC doubles etams were successful with scores of 10-5, 10-5.

After the match yesterday, co-captain Maureen O'Brien said "The team is really looking forward to its match Monday against defending State Champions Valparaiso."
