ND attends hearing today in sex discrimination case

by Mark Rust
News Editor

A U.S. District Court judge will rule this afternoon on motions made by the University which would place temporary restraining orders on the plaintiffs in the Notre Dame sex discrimination case, scheduled to come to trial this fall.

The hearings today may bring to the surface tensions which have smoldered since the November filing of class action suits by women faculty members charging the University with sex discrimination.

In the hearings today, the plaintiffs have been soliciting clients from the eligible class members of the case-meaning all tenured and non-tenured faculty women-and giving misleading advice at meetings of those class members.

The restraining orders asked for by the University would essentially be "gag" rulings prohibiting attorneys for Delores Frese and Josephine Ford-the two women named as principals in separate class action suits-from holding meetings and otherwise communicating with other potential members of the class action suit.

The University will today enter as their principle evidence a letter sent by Bridgit Arimond, a member of the staff for the legal firm of Davis, Miner and Barnhill-representing the plaintiffs- to Elizabeth Gilbert, a University professor and chairperson of Committee W. Committee W is a women's group which includes all women faculty members and is a sub-committee of the American Association of University Professors (AAUP).

According to Gilbert, the group has been "trying to inform people in and out of the case. We will monitor the case for all people involved." The letter which the University plans to enter as evidence of "misleading information" is, according to Gilbert, an example of an attempt to inform those faculty potentially involved in the suit.

University counsel Phil Faccenda was unavailable for comment last night.

Two class action suits have been filed by women faculty members. One suit, Theology Professor Josephine Ford's, will include all six of Notre Dame's tenured women. The second suit, filed by former English Professor Delores Frese, will include all non-tenured women at the University. The suits were filed and certified on Nov. 19 and 20, 1979, respectively.

The Frese suit will include all non-tenured faculty women unless an individual specifically asks to be exempted. Thus every non-tenured woman faculty member will have to decide whether she will take a passive role in the case and remain on the plaintiff's side or choose to exempt herself and, perhaps, testify for the defense.

Tensions mount

Three non-tenured faculty women, who plan to remain in the class action suit and prefer to remain anonymous at this point, say that tensions are building as the deadline nears

Olympic Committee backs Carter

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP)-The United State Olympic Committee, after agreeing to support President Carter's demands on the Olympics, laid the groundwork yesterday for games of its own if there is a boycott of the Summer Games in Moscow.

The USOC Executive Board voted to continue training an Olympic team even if a decision is later made that no American athletes should be sent to Moscow because of the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan. Those athletes could then participate in a sports festival sometime this year if they did not go to the Olympics this summer.

Sources said the Americans would also consider inviting athletes from any country that boycotted Moscow to attend the alternative festival, a suggestion that was made by Carter.

The USOC Executive Board voted unanimously Saturday to support Carter's request to seek a transfer, postponement, or cancellation of the Moscow games unless the Soviets withdraw their troops from Afghanistan by Feb. 20.

If the International Olympic Committee, which has sole responsibility for the games, refuses the request - an action USOC President Robert J. Kane has said he considers likely - the USOC will meet to decide if American athletes will enter the competition.

The executive board vote - 68 of the board's 86 members were present - came after a 2 1/2 - hour plea from the Carter administration. Carter's request has been backed by some U.S. allies, including Canada.

Carter, returning to the White House last night from Camp David, Md., where he spent the weekend, was asked if he were pleased by the executive board's action backing his demands on the Olympics. "Yes, very much so," he replied.

Don Miller, USOC executive director, said yesterday he believed a sports festival would be feasible but would not specify particular dates the event could be held. He did say the event might be staged at the same time as the Olympics were going on in Moscow.

Faculty promotions

ND establishes appeals procedure

by Janet Rigaux
Senior Staff Reporter

Over 85 percent of the faculty at Notre Dame believe the University should develop an appeals procedure for professors denied tenure or promotions, according to a survey conducted last semester. As a result, the Faculty Senate is drawing up a procedure, Senate President Kenneth Goodpaster said yesterday.

"Right now there is no appeals procedure and the faculty deems this an important problem that needs to be remedied between the faculty and the administration," Goodpaster said.

The survey also revealed that faculty members are concerned with the way the University determines their teaching quality. Seventy percent say they are dissatisfied with the administration's use of student evaluation as the primary source of deciding teaching effectiveness.

Steve Barill, chairman of the student affairs committee, agreed with the professors' dissatisfaction. "The present student evaluation form is outdated," he said. "These evaluations are important, but they should not be the sole criterion for teaching assessment."

SBP/SBVP

Meeting turns up candidates

by Michael Onufrak
Senior Copy Editor

Though no one is officially in the race yet, eleven students showed up at the first organizational meeting for those "considering to run" for Student Body President and Student Body Vice President last night in the student government offices.

At the meeting, potential candidates were given a list of campaign rules, and were told that they may begin forming campaign committees today. The SBP/SBVP election will be held February 25, with a runoff, if necessary, scheduled for February 27.

Senior Class Secretary Bob Carey and Junior Class President Tom Behney headed the list of those who were in attendance at the meeting. Carey, an architecture major, will return for a fifth year of study next year.

Also attending last night's meeting were former Sophomore Class President Jim Veraldi, Keenan Hall President Paul Riehle, and student government liaison to the CLC and HPC Frank Guilfoyle.

Among the others who are considering a run for SBP or SBVP were Ed Bylina, Torsten Marshall, Jim "Slatts" Slattery, "Uncle" Keith Cooper, Jim White, Randy McNally, and another student who wished to remain unidentified.

Islamic representatives meet to denounce Russia

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) - The Soviet Military intervention in Afghanistan threatens world peace and the security of small nations everywhere, Pakistan's president warned yesterday at the start of an emergency three-day meeting of Islamic foreign ministers. Afghanistan boycotted the session. "We view this development with the utmost apprehension because unless the trend to subjugate small countries through the use of force is arrested in time, world peace and the independent existence of small countries would be endangered," said Gen. Mohammed Zia ul-Haq, the Pakistani president. He also told the Kremlin the only way it "can effectively restore trust and cooperation (with) the Islamic world" is to pull its troops from Afghanistan.

Secretary of Army favors registering women for draft

WASHINGTON (AP) - Secretary of the Army Clifford L. Alexander Jr. said Sunday he favors registering women for the draft, though he stressed he was against resuming the draft itself at this point. Alexander also said he was opposed to stationing U.S. soldiers in Pakistan - one suggestion for stabilizing Southwest Asia - but felt it would "be useful" for the American military to have bases available somewhere in the Persian Gulf area.

Reagan considers blockade to hinder Russian transpo

NEW YORK (AP) - Republican presidential hopeful Ronald Reagan said Sunday if he were president he would consider a blockade of Cuba in retaliation for the Soviet armed intervention in Afghanistan. "I'm suggesting that we might blockade Cuba and stop the transportation back and forth of Russian arms, Soviet military, their submarines are based there," Reagan told interviewer Dan Rather on CBS's "60 Minutes." Reagan's remarks were part of a criticism he made of President Carter's foreign policy and what Reagan, a candidate for the Republican presidential nomination, said was a failure to send the "proper signals" to the Soviet Union.

No site for the sports festival was named although Colorado Springs, which was host of two previous summer events and is the home of an Olympic training center, was the strongest possibility. It was also understood that Montreal, scene of the 1976 Olympic Games would also be considered as well as a Philadelphia.

A national sports festival would not require any sanction from the IOC, however, if athletes from other countries were to participate in it or if it was held outside the United States, there would be a requirement for approval from an international governing body.

A member of the executive board said yesterday that Carter will press Congress for a bill to underwrite expenses of an alternate site for U. S. athletes to compete if the country boycotts the Moscow games.

In a telephone interview with the Cincinnati Enquirer from Colorado Springs, USOC executive board member Rolly Schwartz said the committee has been assured of Carter's support for alternate site funding by White House General Council Lloyd Cutler.

"He assured us that the president would underwrite any type of bill that would assure us revenue so that the athletes can compete," Schwartz said.

Kane said Saturday that the Executive Board was "buying more time" by approving the resolution because the USOC has until May 24 to decide whether to enter a U.S. team in the Summer Games.

"We'll deal with it when we have to," he said. "Circumstances will change, we hope for the better, but we're not clairvoyant, so we don't know."

He said he did not fault Carter for pressing the Olympics issue.

"If I were president I would use every weapon I could, so I don't personally blame him for using this," Kane said. "I think it is more symbolism than effectiveness, but it is a weapon even if it is only a psychological one."

He added: "I don't think we're surprised that the American public is outraged by this (the Soviet intervention.) The question is whether the Olympic movement and the U.S. Olympic athletes are the kind of weapon to use to whip the Big Bear. The weapon is made of flesh and blood, the flesh and blood of our athletes."

Kane indicated the most viable option would be to seek a postponement of the games. USOC representatives will meet with IOC President Lord Killanin on Feb. 9 in Lake Placid, N.Y., four days before the formal opening of the Winter Olympics there.

There has been no official White House comment on the USOC action. But Joseph Onek, a White House attorney, said the committee acted exactly as the president requested.

"The president did not ask them to go that further step (boycott the Games) at this time," he said. "I can well understand the reluctance of the USOC to prejudice what the international committee is going to do. There is no point in prejudging it. The USOC is going to vigorously and sincerely press the case."

Kane said the USOC would make a "personal presentation in a faithful, sincere way" to the IOC. But he said the USOC would not try to win the support of other nations because to do so would violate international Olympic rules.

He said he did not think any city in the world except Moscow has the facilities to house and feed the estimated 12,000 athletes, 15,000 sports personnel and more than 100,000 visitors. Lloyd Cutler, the White House general counsel who spoke to the committee, said: "The issue is not competing against Soviet athletes, but whether the whole world will troop to Moscow this summer and allow the Soviets this enormous propaganda festival."

He said some 30 nations, including the United Kingdom, Australia and New Zealand, have told the Carter administration they will recommend withdrawal of their teams from the Moscow Games if the United States drops out. He declined to name the other countries.

ABC inspects Senior Bar

by Tom Koegel
Staff Reporter

Agents of the state Alcoholic Beverages Commission (ABC) have made two surprise visits to the senior bar this semester, but have not discovered any violation of state law.

Tom McGrath, Senior Bar manager, said that ABC agents made "two visits last semester during football season to see if we were preventing people from taking their beers outside the area of the bar." This semester's checks have centered on the age of those present in the bar, rather than other state regulations, McGrath indicated.

"Once they (ABC agents) came with a guy who had a fake ID. Our bouncer turned him away at the door," McGrath said.

McGrath noted that the Bar has a reputation for being difficult to get into with a fake ID.

"The second time they came, they came as a crew of five," McGrath said. "They walked around and 'played the graduate.' They would walk up to people and say 'Is it as easy to get in here now as it was when I was a sophomore?' Because of our reputation, most people would just tell them that they were crazy."

McGrath indicated that the Bar would continue to check IDs at all times. "We do get checked out periodically, and we have to 'Card' or we could lose our license. We catch quite a few people with fake IDs and maybe a few get in, but most are turned away."

The Senior Bar is run by four managers who are selected by Dean of Students James Roemer. Next year's managers will be selected soon. All profits of the Bar are directed into a fund for building a new facility for the bar. Roemer asked for profits of $15,000 to $25,000 dollars per year, and McGrath anticipates profits somewhere in between those figures.

"The facility we have now is really not a bar: it is a house. While some of our money goes for maintenance of the current facility, most goes into the fund for a new facility," McGrath said.

McGrath noted that it is the managers' objective to make the Bar "more than just a place to drink." In hopes of fulfilling that objective, live music has been scheduled for Wednesday nights, and various special events such as "Grateful Dead" Night and a Spring music contest have been planned.

Election in Iran signals encouraging situation

(AP) - Abolhassan Bani-Sadr, whose apparent victory in Iran's first presidential election has been taken as an encouraging sign for the American hostages in Tehran, said yesterday a solution to the crisis "becomes attainable" if the United States does not meddle in Iranian affairs.

At a news conference at his campaign headquarters in Tehran, the Iranian finance minister, a close associate of Iranian leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, also said foreign reporters should be allowed unrestricted access to Iran even if false and distorted reports are sent to the rest of the world.

"False reports are better than no reports or reports from a long distance," he said - an apparent reference to the expulsion of U.S. journalists from Iran on Jan. 18.

Unofficial returns reported Bani Sadr had received a whopping 75 percent of votes as Iran's first presidential election. Official returns were expected today. Iran has 22 million eligible voters.

"It has been asked how we are to resolve the U.S. Embassy crisis," Tehran radio quoted Bani Sadr as telling the journalists in a broadcast monitored in London.

"The solution to the crisis is not wholly up to us, only a part of it concerns the Iranian government." A solution will come, he continued, when the U.S. government tells Americans and other world citizens that it will "desist from expansionist policy and domination over other nations and when it concedes the right to our people to pursue criminals anywhere in the world." He did not elaborate.

During his talk with reporters, Bani Sadr did not mention by name deposed Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi. Islamic militants holding the Americans hostage for 12 weeks have demanded the shah, living in Panama, be returned to face trial before the Americans are released.

In another development, the son of Iranian leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini said his father would be transferred from an intensive care unit to an ordinary hospital ward if he continued to be listed in satisfactory condition, Tehran radio reported.

"There is no cause for worry, and the Imam (spiritual leader) is feeling very well," Ahmad Khomeini said in the radio broadcast, monitored in London. He said his father had been examined by doctors Sunday morning and that his pulse and blood pressure was normal.

The ayatollah was taken to a Tehran hospital's cardiology department from his home in the holy city of Qom Wednesday for what his doctors described as a minor heart ailment.

Evans' fund begins operation

The Joseph Evans Memorial Fund is now in full operation, according to one of its co-founders, Barb Budde, a graduate theology student. "We were all so shocked to hear about Joe's death last year," she said, referring to the late philosophy professor who passed away in late August. "That's why Tom and I decided to start the fund."

According to Tom Hamel, a senior psychology major, the purpose of the fund is to raise enough money to put up a monument or plaque in Evans's memory. "Actually, I can't take full credit for starting the fund; it was originally suggested to me by my rector, Fr. Matthew Miceli, that maybe the University might be interested in putting up a memorial for him over by the crossroads." (The crossroads refers to the brick paths which converge on the fountain in front of Nieuwland Science Hall.) "It was one of Joe's favorite places on campus, one which he often mentioned in his writings," added Budde.

Hamel approached the administration with his idea, which received some support. "I was told that we could go ahead and put up a monument, but they (the administration) were concerned about the problem of establishing a precedent, so they declined to finance the project."

"It's too bad about the money," noted Budde. "Fr. Hesburgh wrote us, telling us that he liked the idea, and he gave us permission to rename the area, the Joseph Evans Memorial Crossroads, but now we have to turn to Joe's former students and the alumni to help us out."

Any questions concerning the fund can be directed to either Budde or Hamel by calling 1420 or 7672. Donations can be mailed directly to the Joseph Evans Memorial Fund, Box 443, Notre Dame, IN 46556.

Elkhart hotel fire kills five, injures six

by Michael Lewis
Executive News Editor

ELKHART Fire sent smoke through a downtown hotel early yesterday, killing five people and injuring six others, authorities said. Some hotel residents jumped from the building's third floor to escape.

The cause of the blaze is still under investigation.

Eight firefighting units and two medics responded to the alarm, and firefighters fought the blaze for four hours, the Elkhart Fire Department said last night.

Elkhart firefighter Robert Wilson was overcome by smoke inhalation, but was treated and released from Elkhart General Hospital yesterday. Two others were treated and released, while three remained hospitalized in fair condition last night.

Several people jumped from the building's third floor to avoid the fire. Steve Bibbler, reporter for The Elkhart Truth, said last night that the three people who remained in the hospital sustained hip injuries when they jumped from the third floor.

The cause of the 3:30 a.m. blaze at the Swiss Inn has yet to be determined. The State Fire Marshall's Office, the Elkhart Fire Department and the Elkhart Police Department will investigate the fire's origin.

Don Stacker, Elkhart's first assistant fire chief, told the Associated Press last night, "It was chaos out there."

"When we got there, people who had already jumped were laying on the ground and there were still people hanging from the windows," he said.

The dead were identified as Terry Bowlan, 29 and his wife, Judith, 23; Thomas Cunningham, 27; Eugene Simon, 70, and his wife Jeanette, 65. Officials told the AP that the Bowlans and Simons apparently lived in the hotel, and Cunningham was visiting.

Three of the bodies were found about 10 feet from a fire escape. Two other victims were found in their separate rooms, officials said.

In addition to Wilson, Kathy Chapman, 23, and Rick Snider, 45, were treated and released from Elkhart General.

Still hospitalized in fair condition are Larry Eagen, 28; Emmett Gooden, 58; and Pat Pettit, 16.

SMC Student Assembly prepares for Women's Opportunity Week

by Pam Degnan
Senior Staff Reporter

Final plans for Women's Opportunity Week were discussed at the Saint Mary's Student Assembly meeting last night.

Women's Opportunity Week, scheduled for March 10-13, will focus on the social, political and economic achievements of the American woman. Guest speakers will include Jacqueline Means, a newly-ordained Episcopalian minister, and the highly-acclaimed poet Gwendolyn Brooks. Marathon swimmer Diana Nyad will lecture on her recent attempt to swim from Florida to Cuba.

The Assembly also discussed continuing last semester's successful Cambodia relief program. The program would aid the Saint Mary's Holy Cross nuns who are working with the underprivileged Cambodian children.

"It would be wonderful if every student could pledge a dollar a month to help the Cambodian effort. We must become aware of social injustice in the world," said Spiritual Counselor Mary Ryan.

Pia Trigiani, student body president, described the Board of governance's plans to attend the Catholic University and College's seminar from Feb.

8-10. The seminar will conduct various workshops dealing with the problems of student leadership and administrative procedures.

Earthquake rocks California

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) - The ninth sizable earthquake in four days rattled the Livermore Valley of Northern California yesterday, but there was no new damage or injuries, authorities said.

Scientists warned more quakes can be expected in the area, about 30 miles east of San Francisco.

'All 40 lanes, 400 pins, went down at once'

Yesterday's tremor registered only 4.0 on the Richter scale, not so violent as the 5.6 quake that shook the area at 6:33 p.m. Saturday.

Mike Browne of the state Office of Emergency Services said damage from Saturday's quake was widespread, but minor, and no injuries were reported.

"There was a lot of broken glass, objects knocked off shelves, minor cracks at the Greenville Overpass on Interstate 580, but they were not bad enough to close the highway," Browne reported after Saturday's shaker.

Kay Thomas, who lives near the area of Saturday's quake, said, "My refrigerator flew open and everything flew out. The refrigerator moved a foot out from the wall."

At a bowling alley in Dublin, nature rolled a gigantic bowling strike. "All 40 lanes, 400 pins, went down at once," said Joe Kreins, an employee.

"It felt like a truck ran into the house," Julie Gaudinski of San Geronimo, about 30 miles north of San Francisco, said Saturday night. "I felt the one the other day, but it was nothing like this. This is a lot bigger."

The latest quake, which struck at 2:58 a.m. yesterday, was the ninth since Thursday to register at least 4.0-including six aftershocks that occurred between Thursday afternoon and Friday morning. In addition, there have been about 100 minor jolts.

Laurence Wells, who was working in a railroad tower in Fremont at the time, said the Sunday shaker "was quite a bit different."

"The one Saturday was a big jolt and then shaking," he said. "The Sunday morning one was just a rapid shaking from start to end and a lot shorter than the other one. It definitely made me jump."

Some chemical bottles were smashed and library books were again thrown from their shelves Saturday at the Lawrence Livermore Laboratory, a super-secret nuclear weapons research facility where extensive damage, some injuries and a leak of radioactive water were reported in the first quake Thursday.

"We've had a bit of damage, but not nearly as much as Thursday," said Jeff Garberson, information officer for the lab. "We've had spillage and breakage of glassware, including several bottles of nonradioactive chemicals."

"One laboratory library had just been picked up and hundreds and hundreds of volumes neatly placed on the shelves, and I don't have to tell you what happened."

Students gather for Urban Plunge

by Maribeth Moran
Staff Reporter

Over two hundred and forty students gathered last night in the library auditorium for the seventh Urban Plunge follow-up session. After a short general meeting led by Plunge co-ordinator Reg Weissart, students adjourned to the homes of faculty and administration members to discuss their experience.

The Urban Plunge is a one credit course offered jointly by the Notre Dame Theology Department and the Institute for Religious Studies. It is organized through the Center for Experiential Learning, whose director, the Msgr. Jack Egan, is a veteran of Catholic Urban ministry for the past twenty years.

Any student interested in making an Urban Plunge must first file an application, attend the orientation workshop, make the Plunge itself into the particular city, and then attend a follow up discussion group.

This year some 240 students journeyed to 42 different cities to view both the Church's and the government's role in pursuing social justice. These figures represent a 20 percent increase in the number of students enrolled in the program.

All participants toured both social and Catholic relief agencies in their attempt to understand the implications of inner-city poverty.

"What impressed me most was what the Catholic Church was doing. Social involvement was remarkable. My own suburban parish does considerably less. Evangelism and social service was mixed," said a junior from Fort-Wayne Indiana who made the Plunge in Indianapolis.

In a discussion group at the home of Dean of Students James Roemer and his wife Mary Anne, several students discussed their reaction to the Plunge. Chris Block, Mark Reddaway, Eva Marie Cekaitis, Jane Ryan, Tom Hawley and Kelly Gaffney made the trip to six different cities.

While their experience varied widely, the general consensus was that the Church was an active leader in the parishes they visited in the pursuit of social justice.

The Urban Plunge does not end at the conclusion of last night's discussion group. Follow-up programs include working in centers during the summer, and CILA workshops.

The Urban Plunge is made possible by the volunteer work of the Urban Plunge Task Force who work many hours to make the Plunge a reality.

Along with administrative personnel Fr. Don McNeill, Reg Weissart, and Mark Van Wassenhove, several students coordinated this year's Plunge. Leo Latz, Louis Reifschneider, Mark Carney, Mary Monroe, Kay Tepas, Kelly McCauley, John Pinter, Alicia Puente, and Mary Cohan were responsible for organizing the course.

Saint Mary's College sponsors 'Artist in Residence Program'

by Mary Kay Leydon

Saint Mary's College, under the direction of Carol Ann Carter, assistant professor of art, is sponsoring an "Artist in Residence Program" to bring professional artists and their works to the attention of the community.

New York artist Elena Borstein spent last week at Saint Mary's giving demonstrations and lectures to the students and faculty. Borstein is currently on sabbatical from York College of the University of New York, where she is an assistant professor of art. She received a bachelor's degree from Skidmore College and a bachelor's and a master's from University of Pennsylvania.

Ten years ago, Borstein had some of her works shown at the "Women's Co-Operative Gallery" in New York. This led to her first show at the Andre Zarre Gallery, New York, in 1978. She has subsequently had another exhibition there as well as other galleries in New York and Washington D.C. Some of her works are also on display in permanent collections at the Museum of Modern Art, New York.

for women to decide "whose side they are on."

Reflections of this tension are numerous. According to two sources on the faculty, rumors have circulated which insinuate that members of the class action suit may jeopardize their promotions and appointments in the future. The letter from Arimond to Gilbert reported that a "number of questions about the possibility of retaliation by Notre Dame" were raised by participants in the December 11 meeting.

In one example of the current state of tensions between faculty and administrators, Gilbert related an incident involving a phone conversation between herself and one administrator in which Gilbert intended to ask a question unrelated to the suit. According to Gilbert, "He asked, 'Are you taping me,' and he would not continue our conversation until I swore up and down that I was not, even though the matter I wanted to speak with him about had nothing to do with the suit."

"The issue in these hearings is informed consent," Gilbert said yesterday.

"The women faculty members did not institute this suit. We became involved in it at the end of November. When someone involves you in a case like this it is important that you know what is happening. That is why we had the meeting with (Arimond)."

According to the participants, Arimond was requested to summarize the meeting in the form of a letter for those class members who were not able to attend the early afternoon meeting of Dec. 11, 1979. The letter Arimond sent, dated Dec. 28, described the nature of class action suits and sexual discrimination suits in general, and recorded the history of the two Notre Dame suits in particular.

The letter explained that class action suits generally proceed in two stages. First, the lawyers in the Ford and Frese cases will try to prove that patterns of discrimination against women exist. If the lawyers can prove this point, according to the letter, "There will very likely be a second proceeding in which individual class members present their claims for what they are owed."

The deadline for women faculty members to exempt themselves from the class action suit has been set for Friday, though sources close to the case say that the deadline may be moved back as far as two weeks at the hearing today.

Phil Crane backers to meet

There will be an organizational meeting for those interested in helping Phil Crane win the Mock Republican Presidential nomination tomorrow night at 7 p.m. in 2-C LaFortune Student Center. The meeting will be short and all students are invited to attend.

Borstein, using paints and pastels, concentrates on architectural spaces. The paintings are usually contemporary narratives using buildings as symbols rather than structures. Borstein commented, "My paintings are to be universal, there is no specific time or place, the painting is its own world."

The structures she paints are Mediterranean type, adapted from photographs taken of buildings while traveling in Greece. She has made four such trips.

The SMC art department hosted an artists reception last Friday night for two exhibits. In addition to Borstein's work, a two man show featuring sculpture by Lie Sido and paintings by Greg Huebner were also highlighted. Both exhibitions will be on display until February at Moreau Gallery, SMC. Gallery hours are 9-11 a.m. and 12:30-3:00 p.m. Tuesday through Friday. Saturday and Sunday hours are 12:30-4:00 p.m.

Alumni mass to honor St. Thomas

A Mass in honor of the feast of St. Thomas Aquinas will be celebrated today at 5 p.m. in Alumni Hall Chapel. Marvin O'Connell, chairman of the history department, will be the principal celebrant and preach the homily.

The Call to Apostasy

Chris Stewart

"Who ever knew the truth bested in free and open encounter?"

-- John Milton

I used to be a good Catholic boy. I grew up believing all the things the nuns and priests told me about God, saints, L-I-M-B-O, and my need to attend 9am Mass every Sunday. I dutifully went to Confession every Saturday afternoon. In those days, Confession was so popular that there were actually lines to all four confessionals. The point was to get there early, beat the rush, quickly state the weekly shopping list of sin and hedonism, and get back to playing baseball.

But that's all changed now. I learned how to think for myself. I started asking questions to which no one had any glib answers. My asking the unaskable wasn't nearly as disconcerting to me as it was to the authority figure I asked.

That was a long time ago. But it seems that things haven't changed at all. Authority in the Catholic Church still cringes whenever someone asks the unmentionable, the forbidden, the unthinkable, the new.

Two recent events--the transference of William Callahan, SJ, from his post as head of Priests for Equality, and the decredentializing of Hans Kung as Catholic theologian--seem to indicate that the Church has greatly erred. Unless it recognizes its error, it will lose enormous credibility and symbolically forfeit its assumed role as representative of the "truth" (ie: Christ) on earth.

Callahan's dismissal from his post came after his repeated challenges to the Vatican's stance forbidding women from being considered worthy candidates for the Catholic priesthood. The superior general of the Jesuits, Pedro Arrupe, was directly informed by John Paul II to "shape up discipline and loyalty among Jesuits" (Time, 12/24/79) This included Callahan, whose demotion has landed him in the winter wonderland of Chicago's Cardinal Cody, who doesn't want the dissident Jesuit in his archdiocese.

But the question is: why this phobic emphasis on loyalty? Cannot the Vatican take internal criticism? If its views on the place of women in the church are antediluvian, sexist, and scripturally unsupportable, why not admit it?

Why not say: WE'RE WRONG. WE'RE SORRY. WOMEN, MUCH TO OUR COLLECTIVE CHAGRIN, ARE HUMAN AFTER ALL. AMAZING! THEY DESERVE A ROLE IN THE CHURCH EQUAL TO MEN, BECAUSE OUR LORD, JESUS CHRIST, STOOD FOR LOVE, FREEDOM, AND JUSTICE AMONG ALL PEOPLE.

Not on your life.

The U.S. Bishops Conference recently had the golden opportunity to show their pastoral concern for the important issue of sexist language in the liturgy. Chaired by the inimitable Bishop John Quinn of San Francisco, the conference refused to make any adjustments in offensive language.

They sure showed us how tough, cool, calm and collected they really are. One thing's for sure: if I were a conscious female, it would be a cold day in hell before I ever went to Mass again.

Now to the Kung affair. John Paul is a shrewdie in my book. He waited until after his spectacular media success from his worldwide travels before he lowered the boom on the church's most maverick thinker. It was also a wonderful Xmas present to all members of the flock who, while aspiring to the intellectual life, disagree with the orthodox curmudgeons that the Council of Chalcedon is the acme point in the theological history of homo sapiens.

One of Kung's accusers in the Holy Office, Jean Galot, SJ, has by all standards of democratic principle and justice disqualified himself as a candidate to sit in judgment of Kung. Why? Because on three separate occasions prior to the Holy Office's Dec. 15 decision to end Kung's career as a Catholic theologian, Galot denounced Kung to be in error from Church doctrine. He did this in a book he authored, The Controverted Christ. He also harangued Kung over Vatican Radio and excoriated him in a front page editorial of an Italian newspaper. All before the "inquiry", mind you.

But the larger question is this: why has the pope, supposedly an intellectual himself, allowed this mockery to come to its sordid conclusion? Why does Hans Kung strike terror in the hearts of the Vatican? Is it because, like all totalitarian regimes and "governments", it cannot tolerate criticism, diversity, and evolving human consciousness?

If the scholars in Rome had read and learned the Vatican II Council's constitution on the Church in the Modern World a bit more studiously, they might bristle at the teeming words of wisdom to be found in it.

"The faithful, both clerical and lay, should be accorded a lawful freedom of inquiry, of thought, and of expression, tempered by humility and courage in whatever branch of study they have specialized." The Church, for too many centuries including our own, has pioneered its unique brand of intellectual castration. If this trend is not immediately halted, apostasy will be the only courageous choice left for believers whose fount of tolerance for stupidity and cowardice has finally run dry.

In Response to Liberalism

Joseph Bosco and John Murphy

Prof. Norling's scathing attack, "The Poverty of Liberalism" (The Observer, Jan. 18), poses several rhetorical questions. Although Prof. Norling is speaking from a completely different paradigm from that of those he loathes, we will attempt to address his questions which are of crucial importance in light of our current national problems.

Prof. Norling displays an excessive fear of communism reminiscent of the McCarthyism of the 1950s. In his concern over the purported "Ceaseless struggle of the Free World to escape the toils of communist thralldom," he loses sight of the meaning of "free world."

Freedom involves not only unrestricted entrepreneurial opportunities, but also the freedom to correct major social problems. If a society sees extreme inequity of income distribution as an injustice and a hindrance to further development, would Prof. Norling not grant the members of that society the self-determination necessary to bring about change?

Donald Duncan, a veteran of fifteen years in the U.S. Army, including eighteen months as a Green Beret in Vietnam, observed after rejecting a field commission in 1967:

"Every time a people decides to fight for self-determination, we blame it on the communists; by continually giving the communists credit for all social changes in areas where the maintenance of the status quo is suicide, we build their prestige. Corrupt and dictatorial governments responsible for the conditions which breed revolts yell 'Communists!' and on the theory that anything is better than communism, we rush to their aid. As a result, fewer look to our government for guidance and more turn to the communists as their only source of help - and our propaganda once again becomes fact." [The New Legions, p. 251]

In short, this overwhelming fear of communism has so blinded us to necessary social change that once-friendly nations have repeatedly exploded in anti-American revolution.

The United States as a nation is held responsible abroad for the behavior of transnational corporations (TNC), in large part because our government actively pursues the TNCs interests. The U.S. government, however, should represent the interests of our country as a whole. While TNCs naturally seek to maximize profits (an activity we don't begrudge), U.S. interests are more long-range (i.e. to continue trade and maintain good relations with the people and government of the country). This is the enlightened self-interest of the U.S. While it may not yield such high profits in the short run, long-term benefits outweigh this cost for the U.S. if it allows for long-term trade. Changes must be allowed to occur, and indeed should be encouraged if serious discontent arises. TNCs will (and do) resist all changes, but our national interest demands that we be open to the kind of change which assures long-term friendship and trade. The pursuit of national interest would assure recognition of the peoples' right to self-determination.

TNCs can provide useful and necessary services to developing countries, but their activities have often run counter to our national interests. As the U.S. government has decreased its aid to Chile in protest of repression and Pinochet's refusal to extradite agents accused of killing Orlando Letelier and Ronnie Moffet in Washington, the Chase Manhattan Bank has filled the void with massive loans, undercutting the effect of our government's foreign policy. TNCs, in their quest for "stable" governments and high profits often support repressive regimes and thus aggravate the discontent of the population, assisting in the government's downfall to the detriment of our national interests. If Chilean discontent erupts into an anti-american revolution, it will be due in part to Chase's actions. While TNCs ideally consider these ramifications of their activity, their profit considerations outweigh long-term goals.

Few would disagree with Prof. Norling's statement that there are brutal regimes on the right and left of the political spectrum. Only marxists of the extreme left (such as Angela Davis) support the regimes of Eastern Europe or the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan. It is Russian expansionism (which Prof. Norling certainly must know predates the communist revolution) which must be checked, but not at the expense of self-determination for the "free" world. Despite Prof. Norling's implication, we have not heard any "liberals" support Pol Pot, Idi Amin, or Nguema Macias; most, in fact, join in the chorus of outrage. No one says Iran is better off under Khomeini, but Prof. Norling can't deny that the Ayatollah's regime is a political backlash against the Shah and the U.S. Complaints arise against the excesses of the "friends" of the U.S. for several reasons.

Why should the U.S. support these repressive regimes Prof. Norling calls our "friends"? It is not in our self-interest since they will not last -- as we have seen in countless cases, from Batista's Cuba to Iran and Nicaragua.

Furthermore, why does Prof. Norling include the Philippines of Marcos and Pinochet's Chile as part of the free world? Describing these countries as free is as preposterous as calling Poland a free nation.

As citizens opposed to government or business support of these repressive regimes, we have a responsibility to protest.

Editor's Note: Peter Walshe, professor of Government, and Prof. Bernard Norling of the History Department will face each other in a debate on world affairs at 8 p.m. tonight in the Grace Hall Pit. The two professors will discuss "The Role of the U.S. and U.S. Corporations in World Affairs -- Exploitative or Constructive?" The debate will address issues which have been the topic of several editorial columns and letters appearing on The Observer's Editorial page the past two weeks in response to Prof. Walshe's initial editorial [Dec. 4].

Nosferatu the Vampyre
Directed by Werner Herzog

Starring Klaus Kinski,
Isabelle Adjani,
Bruno Ganz

As long as he has box office appeal, the Count of Transylvania is eternally doomed to chomp on the necks of the unlucky and/or unwary for the benefit of the movie-going public. Recent films, outstanding only in their mediocrity, have not done him much justice. Happily, German director Werner Herzog has restored elegance and terror to the celluloid Dracula with his latest film "Nosferatu the Vampyre."

Herzog, whose previous films include such critically acclaimed works as "Signs of Life", "Aguirre, the Wrath of God", and "Stroszek" is deeply indebted to F. W. MURNAU and his 1923 classic "Nosferatu: Symphony of Horrors". Murnau's Nosferatu was no urbane Hungarian nobleman, but rather a spectre of the totalitarian threat menacing the Germany of the Weimar Republic, a gruesome creature with bat-like ears, over-sized incisors, and a death-pale, emaciated face. Herzog retains the gruesome physique (including the five-inch fingernails), but his Nosferatu is a pathetic, impotent victim of his own immortality, trapped and frustrated by his inability to die.

To create his plot, Herzog (who also wrote the screenplay) weaves together strands of the Bram Stoker novel, the Murnau film and Teutonic legend. Real estate agent Jonathan Harker is assigned the thankless task of travelling to Transylvania to deliver the deed to a run-down mansion on the outskirts of his native city to a certain Count Dracula. Ignoring the fearful premonitions of his beautiful wife Lucy, Jonathan journeys to Transylvania where once again he is warned against the Count, this time by the local innkeeper. But ever faithful to his commission, he braves all obstacles, arrives at the Count's castle, sells the very macabre nobleman the mansion, and for his trouble, becomes the Count's first victim.

Nosferatu, meanwhile, has conceived a blood-lust for Harker's wife Lucy ("What a lovely throat she has", he exclaims upon seeing the miniature Jonathan carries with him). He embarks upon a ship bound for Harker's native city (located somewhere in German-speaking Europe) taking with him plague-infested rats that spread disease and death among the city's inhabitants. Lucy Harker, who has read her husband's journal and knows the cause of the havoc that surrounds her, must fight a lonely battle against the phantom of the night.

Outstanding performances by an excellent cast revitalize this by now rather clichéd story. German actor Klaus Kinski, whose mobile face conveys more emotion in a single glance than most actors can express in a page of dialogue, evokes pity, disgust, revulsion, and yes, even lust with his fiercely intelligent portrayal of the pitiful Nosferatu.

The performance of the twenty-three year old French actress Isabelle Adjani as Lucy Harker is no less remarkable. So understated is her portrayal that we scarcely recognize the evolution that takes place in Lucy's character: a shy, fearful girl at the beginning of the film, adversity transforms her into a woman of immense courage and strength (it's not everybody who is willing to go to bed with a vampire to save humanity). Bruno Ganz rounds out the cast as the hapless Jonathan Harker, a conscientious, decent clod who only wanted to earn some extra money to buy his wife a new house, and who instead becomes the real victim of Nosferatu's legacy of darkness.

Supporting the cast is an equally talented crew of technicians. Particularly outstanding is the cinematography of Jorg Schmidt-Reiwein whose gentle blend of earth colors (browns, beiges, forest greens) and soft, almost hazy lighting creates a visually beautiful film. The sets and costume design prove the maxim that less is definitely more: the simple designs and colors complement the subtle camera work. Finally, very effective incidental music (Wagner's "Rheingold" and Gounod's "Sanctus" did much to underscore the theme of innocence being menaced by evil. There is also symbolism galore for those who like to search for hidden meanings; frankly, this critic was enjoying being scared out of her wits too much to be bothered with it.

In "Nosferatu the Vampyre", Herzog once again demonstrates his genius both as an existential intellectual and as an entertainer. "Nosferatu" is a film that can be appreciated on any level, and whether it is approached as a "serious statement" or a popcorn thriller, it engages both the mind and the heart

I TAPPA KEGGA:ND's Own Animal House

Christopher A. Stewart

"I think, therefore, I drink."
--motto, ITK

As I was quietly strolling back to my humble abode last Friday evening on the South Quad, I was intercepted behind Badin by a motley crew of ski-masked thugs. One of them put a loaded bottle of Heineken to my head while another blindfolded me.

"Hey fellas, there's been some mistake."

"Quiet, you knave. We know who you are. Our Minister of Propaganda says if we are to make a significant impact, we have to kidnap you for publicity purposes. You're Stewart, right?"

"Yeah, but I ain't no Iranian either."

"Shut up, and follow us."

And I did, much to my delight and subsequent enlightenment. John Belushi, watch out. Notre Dame's version of a Catholic Animal House has finally arrived on the South Quad. Happy days are here again.

What ensued was one of the wackiest nights, and incontestably the best damn partying in my two years at du Lac. Despite popular administrative doubletalk to the contrary, fraternity is alive and kicking. Notre Dame's onliest, I Tappa Kegga, is kicking up a storm in one of the more reputable halls on campus. Due to their notorious reputation, the result of innumerable orgiastic parties and midnight sallies into the local South Bend community, I am sworn to secrecy as to the exact location of this group of ribald, raunchy hedonists.

Besides, if I slander their hall, these hearty revellers persuasively convinced me of my certain demise upon publication.

Hey, I enjoy life. Not to mention the fact that I Tappa Kegga is sponsoring its biggest bash of the year this Friday. And I'm invited. I wouldn't miss it for the world.

Their dramatic kidnapping brought me to their inner sanctum, where a worship service soon commenced. A candle was lit, and placed upon the holy of holies, the KEG. And what a beautiful silver, cool KEG it was! All 25 members of ITK knelt in adoration on one knee, then piously recited the Prayer of Inebriation:

"Our KEG, who art in thy Frathouse,
Hallowed by they head.
Thy foam will come
Thy will be done
On the floor, as it is while standing.
Give us this day our daily buzz
And forgive us our wuffs
As we forgive those who wuffed against us
Lead us not into delirium
But deliver us from sobriety
Amen."

The party began at 1:45 am, lasting till after 5. Rank exhibitionism was the order of the evening, as twelve members did a live jam session of Boston's More Than A Feeling.

ITK's rendition was more exciting than Boston's show last March at the ACC.

Then the fun began. Brother Hop-a-long proved his divinity by consuming a large mug of beer while standing on his head. During this feat, I noticed his ankle was in a cast. Someone informed me it was broken. For an encore, Brother Hop bit a full can of beer in half, and sucked down the contents with the ease of Jean Claude Killy skiing the slopes of Aspen. He never wasted a drop. That's conservation!

ITK was the brainchild of Brother Puno, who conceived the idea over the summer during a drunken stupor that landed him in the gutter of NY's Bowery district. He brought his Messianic message of salvation via inebriation to the socially deprived of du Lac. Although the rector considers him a prophet of perdition, his followers believe him to be an apostle of assininity and therefore worthy of deification.

The leaders of ITK say that unity of the section's members has been a primary benefit of forming the fraternity. Once the boys approved, shirts were ordered, saying "ITK--Notre Dame's Only Real Frat." But the real reason for their overwhelming success is because the frat has fun. ITK already has done more to eradicate boredom at du Lac than any group on campus, with the possible exception of the Chess Club.

Recently, the leaders ordered a pleasure lobotomy on the most boring member of the section. The one time pre-med abandoned his studies, converted to Islam and led a raid on nearby Bethel College, where the President's sign was ceremoniously abducted. Now it is a cherished momento of ITK.

In addition, an Iranian Task Force was established, which intends to free the hostages by dropping frozen kegs on the students in Tehran.

Halloween saw an ITK strike force liberate 25 well-lit pumpkins throughout the South Bend community. The attack was strangely similar to the Israeli Entebbe raid of '76.

One massive assault was registered in Azar's Restaurant, where a clandestine ITK operation deployed 2 megaton pancakes, a host of sugar packets and soggy eggs against the dour forces of perfidy (the management).

One brooding Brother, with a 3.7 cum, has a bizarre penchant for indiscriminately assaulting innocent, unsuspecting water fountains. Legend has it that the Campaign for Notre Dame, well over its original goal of $130 million, is raising the extra moola to compensate for the occasional excess of frustrated members of ITK. This frustration is rooted in the social, sexual and academic ambience of ND, according to high ranking officials of ITK.

To remedy this situation, ITK is sponsoring upcoming trips to nearby universities in Ohio and Michigan which have more appealing female populations. The radical fringe of ITK is encouraging sister sororities to form. To date, sororities are planned in Badin, Lewis, McCandless, Regina and Lyons. In men's dorms, Morrissey's left wing is initiating its own frat. Its Name? I FELTA THIGH.

The revolution, mes freres et soeurs, is here. Long live I TAPPA KEGGA, Notre Dame's first frat. See you, Friday.

In a Style to Which We are Not Accustomed

Fr. Bill Toobey

Recently, during a trip south of where I'm working, I was escorted down the "richest street in the world" -- North Rodeo Drive, Beverly Hills -- with its parade of super-exclusive shops: Gucci, Giorgio, Saint Laurent, Bihan ("By appointment only"), Vidal Sassoon, Elizabeth Arden, Van Cleef & Arpels. I couldn't help but wonder for how many students this street would epitomize the meaning of success. For how many, I asked myself, does this world of Mercedes and minks represent the life style for which they will strive?

Perhaps you've heard the story of the man who is having trouble getting through the gate of heaven. It seems he is hard pressed to come up with evidence of a single good deed he did during his whole life. Finally, he recalls with jubilation that he once gave to a collection for the poor. The angel at the gate leaves to seek consultation, then returns to say, "That is correct; we found the record of your contribution, but we decided to give you your nickel back and tell you to go to hell!"

On the other hand, I wondered, how many will make a decision for a much more simple life style, in accordance with their sense of solidarity with poor of the world? It is, of course, a decision for life or death.

There might be a legitimate objection to this story, since even a cup of cold water is promised a reward; still, this doesn't lessen the shattering impact of God's teaching about riches. Jesus is so vehement in His pronouncement against wealth that He claims it is morally impossible for a rich person to be saved. So impossible is it, as a matter of fact, that "a camel could more easily squeeze through the eye of a needle than a rich man get into the kingdom of God."

For years people have tried to escape the obvious meaning of Jesus' words. But, as Chesterton once put it, we can commission our most ingenious manufacturer to produce the world's largest needle and our explorers to search out the smallest camel, and still it will not help very much our effort to escape from the full import of Jesus' declaration about the impossibility of a rich person achieving salvation. "How miserable for you who are rich, for you have had all your comforts" (Luke 6,24).

Living under the mythology of that time, which held that riches and wealth were signs of God's favor, the disciples were startled to hear Jesus say that not only are riches and wealth not a sign of the Father's pleasure but a serious obstacle to entering the kingdom.

The disciples said to Jesus, "If this is so, then who can possibly be saved?" Jesus looked them straight in the eye and replied, "Humanly speaking, it is impossible, but with God anything is possible." We have often misinterpreted Jesus' statement, proposing that He meant that by a miracle it would be possible for a rich man to remain rich and still enter heaven. But Jesus isn't saying this at all. When He refers to the impossible becoming possible through God's help, He means that though it is so extremely difficult for us to free ourselves from the wealth and riches to which we are so attached, we can, with God's strengthening Spirit, do what otherwise would be out of the question.

God's comments on wealth and riches as an obstacle to salvation confront us with a very clear and hard and highly unpopular teaching. Anyone who has tried to preach this aspect of the Gospel in a university setting can tell you about the cold reception it frequently gets from college students, many of whom (let's face it) come from very well-to-do families and do not easily tolerate any deviations while away at college from the "good" life to which they are accustomed. One of our priests was nery enough at a recent dorm liturgy to mention in his homily: "You've heard it said that there are no atheists in fox-holes; it may also be true that there are no Christians in Cadillacs." The sizzling stares he got from several in the congregation could have melted rocks.

Why does Jesus say what He does? Is it because He is trying to promote poverty (when we've got a war against it!) for its own sake, or because He is trying to suggest distrust and contempt for the goods of this world and material possessions in general? None of these. Jesus presents a very positive Gospel; and says what He does about riches because it follows necessarily from the commandment of love. It has to be impossible for a rich person to enter heaven, for if one is to gain eternal life she must love her neighbor; and when you do that, you don't have riches left over--not the way things are in today's world, anyway.

Being without riches and wealth becomes an unavoidable consequence. The whole thrust is outward, directed toward the need of others. A person who does this inevitably finds that it just so happens that when you try to be a Christian, you don't end up with riches. The Gospel is a call to gratuitously share with others, in the name of Jesus, the material goods we have--sharing them especially with those who most need them.

Even should we see this, however, and want to do something, our response may not come out at a radical enough level. For example,

I've only lately discovered the real difference between real giving and a mere distribution of surplus. A careful study of Jesus' story about the widow who put her last two coins into the treasury reveals that the offering that comes from superfluity, and does not actually deprive the giver of a part of himself, is of little account.

It makes you wonder how many times in your whole life you've actually given, in the sense that it has truly meant a sacrifice. I was reflecting on this the last time I returned from having contributed some clothing to the Thanksgiving drive. I realized to my horror that I had gone through my wardrobe with a selection process limited to two convenient categories. First of all, there was the obvious category of things I no longer used and really didn't want. Then there was the category that cost me a tiny bit--the clothes I might have worn on a future occasion but wouldn't actually miss all that much. But I never got around to a third category. I never gave anything that I sincerely wanted to keep. I came back from this exercise in "giving" only to realize that I hadn't truly given at all! I merely dispensed with my surplus.

"To whom will all this piled-up wealth of yours go?" God asked the rich man who had hoarded his goods in barns. The man was lost, for in turning away from others in need, he had turned away from the God of salvation. "This is the way it works with the person who grows rich for himself instead of growing rich in the sight of God" (Luke 12,21). A sobering message for our times.

Kramer vs. Kramer: The Challenge To Be

Christopher A. Stewart

There are moments in film when a viewer realizes that what is being witnessed is an epochal event, a breathtakingly momentous experience. Such artistic power, beauty and realism has rarely been captured in a more convincing manner than in the movie "Kramer vs. Kramer."

For a full 20 minutes after the film's electrifying climax, I was speechless, utterly transfixed by the sheer force of a film whose theme--divorce, and the ensuing court battle over a child--is so common as to be uninspiring.

Not so "Kramer vs. Kramer." Here we witness the comic/tragic aspects of people, marriage, parenting, the Madison Ave. rat race, friendship, and the crushing paradoxes and ironies inherent in life. We see with vivid clarity the awesome price people will pay for freedom and love, and how they will stop at nothing to achieve their ends, in this case custody of a child.

Ted Kramer (Dustin Hoffman) is the advertising executive on the up and up. While he's out making a living, he's completely forfeited his commitment to his wife Joanna (Meryl Streep) and son Billy (Justin Henry). Describing Ted as a workaholic is an understatement, since he realizes his job is a "25 hour a day, eight days a week" endeavor.

However, Joanna is not your typical "grin and bear it" wife. Realizing the marriage she's in to be hopeless, she abandons her family in a search for self, heading for the West Coast where she'll undergo analysis and stay for the next 15 months. Before leaving, she relinquishes her American Express and Bloomingdale's credit cards to Ted, so the audience knows this woman is serious. Life without the accoutrements of Bloomingdale's can be a bitch.

Ted is shocked into becoming daddy to a child he barely knows. This development is poignantly captured in the schoolyard scene the morning after mommy left home. Just before dumping the child with a school monitor, Ted inquires, "What grade are you in?" Nice going, Ted.

For the next hour, Ted dominated the action, trying to combine the dual role of mommy/daddy while pleasing the heartless corporate business establishment. His hard-nosed, uncompromising boss had earlier suggested to Ted that he send the boy to live with relatives. Ted refused, a decision which added to the movie's frequently riveting scenes, but ultimately cost him his job.

The development of the relationship and love between father and son is nothing short of masterful. Combined with this energetically directed plot is a brilliant and vigorously endearing sequence of scenes. Beginning with the hilarious breakfast scene in which Ted gamely attempts to make mashed French toast, the scenes evoke all the anxiety and joy that go with being a parent.

Too numerous to do justice to in this brief synopsis, some of the highlights include: the traumatic park scene, when Billy is injured and Ted races him to a crosstown hospital disregarding his own safety as he bolts out into Fifth and Park Avenue traffic; the dinner confrontation over chocolate chip ice cream; Billy meeting Phylis, Ted's lover, at the bathroom door, naked, and asked her "Do you like fried chicken?"; Ted's relentless search for a new job, particularly the confrontational moment with his boss-to-be in which Ted demands an immediate response to his job inquiry. He got it.

It was confrontational film at its sizzling, realistic best. It's moments like these when all the pretentious airs and establishmentarian etiquette is judiciously discarded because of some overriding concern, in this case Ted's child. His desperation was chilling; it needed attention and resolution then and there in that office, not later.

The court scenes were shattering, depicting the demise of a relationship once thought to be viable and fruitful. But there were some touching moments: Ted's lawyer (Howard Duff) hounding Joanna into confessing her failure as a mother, while Ted shakes his head at her rilling; he is not, Ted being grilled about his firing and inconstancy at work. It was then that Joanna began to see that Ted, too, has sweated and suffered for Billy with a passion not unlike her own.

The court's decision is crushing to Ted and Billy. The park scene, when Billy is told the result, is simply devastating ("Daddy, if you get lonesome, you call me up, OK?"). If tears don't come to your eyes by then, you're either a closet sadist or emotionally dead. From the park, the film catapults back to the apartment for the final breakfast scene, a subdued affair in striking contrast to the original fiasco. This one is controlled, almost perfect. Father and son together, in unison. Soon to be ended by a grim twist of fate.

The denouement is as fitting as it is tragic, a vindication to the spirits of all involved. It manifests and accentuates the human spirit in all its vulnerability, strength, and ambiguity. It is an ending worthy of life, for it ennobles rather than demeans. It uplifts while it remains humble.

Dustin Hoffman is magnificent. He renders a penetrating, superb performance. If he doesn't win the Oscar, I'll stop drinking Perrier. Meryl Streep is marvelously affecting, especially in her courtroom scenes, and likewise deserves kudos of the highest order. Justin Henry is the guileless punkv child who is sure to win your hearts. Jane Alexander played Margaret, friend to both Ted and Joanna, probably the most underrated role of the film, and did quite a splendid job.

The painstaking adjustments to the modern world, by parent and child, is captured in "Kramer vs. Kramer." We learn that women aren't the only ones being liberated in this film; so are men. Men like Ted, freed from his obsessive preoccupation with advancement and success to see his need to love others, and be loved by them in return. And Billy, symbol of children everywhere: captives of warring parents suffering the indignities of emotional and psychological ping-pong which ultimately determines the beauty of ugliness of their future lives.

Fortunately, in "Kramer vs. Kramer" the ugliness was transcended by love in the end. Everyone didn't live happily ever after, but a child's life was salvaged from the ravages of 2 adults whose lives passed them by like 2 ships in the night.

To teach in France

ND seniors receive awards

by Jane Barber

Two Notre Dame seniors, Maria Connelly and Ciana Carnavale have been awarded employment for one year in France as teachers of English by The Institute of International Education based in New York. They will receive a salary of eight hundred dollars a month working eight to twelve hours a week teaching English to French children. Included in the award are free classes of the student's choice in a French university while they are abroad.

Notre Dame Fulbright Advisor, Dr. Roedig, of the Fulbright-Hayes office contacted the two girls about applying for the competition. Connelly and Carnavale then fulfilled the requirements of two written essays, a bilingual interview and written recommendations. Connelly, a French major who will also receive a teaching degree in June from St. Mary's college and Carnavale, double-major in French and Government, had already completed the necessary requirement of mastering a second language.

The Institute of International Education awards the teaching position to only twenty male and twenty female graduates each year.

Both Connelly and Carnavale are excited about the honor and are anxiously anticipating their year abroad. "I want to encourage other students to take advantage of the many great opportunities for study abroad. More people should be made aware of them as I luckily was," Carnavale said.

... Procedure

The student affairs committee plans to modernize the present teacher and course evaluations.

"We also want to make students aware of how important these evaluations are, not only in deciding if a professor will receive tenure but also in changing the way a course is taught," Batill explained.

An area of confusion for faculty members is the relative importance of research and publication versus teaching in receiving tenure.

Seventy-six percent of the faculty said that teaching quality should be rewarded on a par with publication, while 73 percent said Notre Dame would not change for the better if publication was stressed above teaching and differentially rewarded.

Goodpaster noted that the Faculty Senate cannot do much about this, but that they will investigate the issue and try to develop better rapport between professors and the administration so that professors can know where they stand.

Two other issues of concern are salaries and retirement. Most of the faculty are discontent with their present salaries and do not feel they are keeping up with inflation, Goodpaster said.

The survey showed that 67 percent of faculty members think retirement should not be confined to age. Goodpaster explained, "Right now the retirement age is 65. In 1982, it will be 70. Most professors think retirement should come when the teacher is no longer an asset at the University." He added that this would be difficult to determine.

Goodpaster noted that questions dealing with the Catholic character of the University netted a surprising result. Sixty percent disagreed with the statement that the Catholic character of the University is eroding. Eighty percent said a professor's Catholicism should not be a factor in tenure, and 61 percent said Catholicism should play no part in hiring practices.

"I don't know what to make of these results except that there is confusion among the faculty about the Catholic nature of Notre Dame," Goodpaster said.

"More faculty than most realize are not concerned about the Catholic character and this is a Catholic school."

The question that received the highest positive consensus dealt with making the senior year more serious. Ninety percent of the faculty agreed with that statement.

Batill explained, "This question was stacked to be answered yes." Therefore, he said, it was an irrelevant question and the Senate Faculty will not act on it. Batill did note, however, that the senior death march was not the kind of thing that you want to see young men and women doing a few months before they go out in the real world."

The reason for the faculty survey, Goodpaster explained, was to focus the Senate on the issues of the faculty at large. The Senate has been criticized in the past as not being representative of the faculty.

"Part of my leadership is to make this false," Goodpaster said.

HOW TO SAVE YOUR LIFE AND THE ONE NEXT TO YOU

OVERCOMING YOUR PSYCHOLOGICAL RESISTANCE TO SEAT BELTS MAY BE THE KEY.

The facts are startling. Experts estimate that about half of all automobile occupant fatalities last year might have been avoided if the people had been wearing seat belts. That's because injuries occur when the car stops abruptly and the occupants are thrown against the car's interior. Belts prevent this.

Many people say they know the facts, but they still don't wear belts. Their reasons range all over the lot: seat belts are troublesome to put on, they are uncomfortable, or they wrinkle your clothes. Some people even think getting hurt or killed in a car accident is a question of fate; and therefore, seat belts don't matter.

If you're one of those people who don't use belts for one reason or another, please think carefully about your motivations. Are your objections to seat belts based on the facts or on rationalizations?

Here are a few of the common rationalizations. Many people say they are afraid of being trapped in a car by a seat belt. In fact, in the vast majority of cases, seat belts protect passengers from severe injuries, allowing them to escape more quickly. Another popular rationalization: you'll be saved by being thrown clear of the car. Here again, research has proved that to be untrue—you are almost always safer inside the car.

Some people use seat belts for highway driving, but rationalize it's not worth the trouble to buckle up for short trips. The numbers tell a different story: 80% of all automobile accidents causing injury or death involve cars traveling under 40 miles per hour. And three quarters of all collisions happen less than 25 miles from the driver's home.

When you're the driver, you have the psychological authority to convince all of the passengers that they should wear seat belts. It has been shown that in a car, the driver is considered to be an authority figure. A simple reminder from you may help save someone's life. And please remember children can be severely injured in automobile accidents, too. Make sure Child Restraint Systems are used for children who aren't old enough to use regular seat belts.

Because so many people still don't use their seat belts, the government has directed that some form of passive restraint—one that doesn't require any action by the occupant—be built into every car by the 1984 model year. GM is offering one such restraint—a new type of automatic belt—as an option on the 1980 Chevette to gain insight into its public acceptance.

By the 1982 model year, we must begin putting passive restraints in all full-size cars and, eventually, into the entire fleet. But until you purchase one of these cars of the future, you can protect yourself and others by using seat belts and urging your family and friends to follow your example.

At GM, we're very concerned about safety. So please fasten your seat belt, because even the best driver in the world can't predict what another driver will do.

Saint Mary's sponsors 'Couples' workshop

by Mary Leavitt
Staff Reporter

Saint Mary's Counseling and Career Development Center is sponsoring a workshop entitled "Couples" starting Feb. 5.

Couples steadily dating with a possible eye towards marriage, couples who are engaged, couples who are living together and couples who are married are the types of commitments the workshop is geared to explore.

The group will meet once a week for eight weeks. Each session will last approximately two hours. All those who are enrolled in the workshop will be given 1 credit hour in renumeration for participating.

Because of the nature of the group, a maximum of five couples will be allowed to participate. The couples will be screened before being admitted into the program.

The goals of this workshop are in keeping with the rationale for having such a workshop, according to Tony Campbell, assistant director of the Center.

These goals are: 1) to become more in touch with one's own needs and values; 2) to find out what each person's expectations of marriage are; 3) to explore these expectations with each participant's mate; 4) to develop life skills such as assertiveness and centering; 5) to explore the decision making process between each couple; and 6) to develop and discuss a marriage contract.

The workshop will meet from 6-8 p.m. on Tuesday nights starting February 5. Interested couples should sign up for the program by Wednesday in the Counseling and Career Development Center, SMC.

Junior Parents Weekend

Numerous activities promise success

by Maryellen Bradley

The 28th Annual Junior Parents' Weekend is expected to be as successful as it was last year in terms of attendance and activities. "We are ahead of schedule in comparison to last year," said Weekend Chairman Jim Riedman.

Despite an incomplete computer listing which omitted the names of 50-75 juniors, approximately 1800 returns from parents have come in. Students whose parents have not received packets may pick them up in the Student Activities Office.

Most of the original problems have been resolved. The committee hopes to surpass last year's attendance record of 2100. Finance Chairman Steve Burgoon is contacting students who forgot to sign checks or wrote in the wrong amount. Burgoon reminds students that refunds are available for those who have paid, but can no longer attend the activities. He urges these students to notify the committee at least one week before the Weekend, Feb. 22-24.

Registration Chairman Keith Melaragno assures juniors whose parents will be arriving late that they can register at the Cocktail Dance Friday evening or Saturday afternoon at LaFortune.

A landscape company will decorate Stepan Center for the Cocktail Dance in a garden-party motif. Collegiate Workshops will be held within each college Saturday morning. The Junior Class Mass Saturday at 6:30 p.m. will be celebrated by Fr. Theodore Hesburgh, with Fr. John VanWolvear presenting the homily with the Chapel Choir and guitarists providing music.

Fr. Hesburgh will speak at the President's Dinner at 8:00 p.m. Saturday. Juniors may offer their parents a taste of dorm life at each dorm's informal reception following the Dinner.

Junior Tim Koegel plans to expose his parents to other aspects of a student's life, "I'd like to take my parents out to the bars."

The last event of the weekend will be the Closing Breakfast at 9:30 a.m. Sunday. Elizabeth Christman, assistant professor of American Studies, will address the parents and students.

Bernard Rostker heads Selective Service

WASHINGTON (AP) - The man charged with carrying out President Carter's mandate to reinstate draft registration was an Army officer during the Vietnam war with a desk job in Washington.

Bernard Rostker, 35, the new director of the Selective Service System, was trained to be a tank commander but was assigned to work in the office of an assistant secretary of defense in the Pentagon during his two years of active duty between 1968 and 1970.

Asked in a telephone interview why he didn't serve in Vietnam, Rostker said, "I don't know. I was a graduate student finishing up my Ph.D. in economics. I'm sure that had an impact. They (at the Pentagon) were interested in bright young fellows."

Did he consider volunteering for Vietnam duty?

"I was in the service," Rostker said, his voice rising. "I went where I was told to go. I served. I did not go to Vietnam. I would have gone wherever they sent me."

Rostker, who grew up in the Bronx, was a member of the Reserve Officer Training Corps (ROTC) as a student at New York University and was commissioned a lieutenant upon graduation. During his military service and in the decade since then, he has specialized in military manpower problems.

Last fall, at a time when Carter was saying he had no plans to register anyone, Rostker took over as head of the Selective Service, an agency with only 98 employees - tiny by Washington standards - and a budget of $7 million.

Carter plans to get the agency an immediate $10 million to carry out his new plan, and the agency anticipates seeking as much as $22 million for the fiscal year that begins Oct. 1.

Since last November, Rostker said, he has spent his time rebuilding an emergency-preparedness system for draft registration, just in case it became necessary.

It wasn't until late Wednesday afternoon that Rostker learned for sure that his sleepy little agency would be tossed a political hot potato.

Rostker said he had hints last week that Carter was considering reinstating the draft. But he didn't get the final word until a few hours before Carter used his State of the Union address to inform the rest of the nation of his plan.

Rostker said he has not met with Carter or anyone from the White House to discuss the complexities of starting up draft registration.

Instead, he said, he has worked with the task force preparing a report for Congress, due Feb. 9, on various aspects of the Selective Service System.

By law, all males aged 18 to 26 are eligible for the draft - and they number about 16 million.

The president has legal authority to order a draft registration, but he would need congressional approval to authorize registering women.

chased an icing call on the Huskies into the right corner of the Irish zone. DeNat dealt Lucia a vicious check just as the whistle sounded, and the force of Lucia's helmet hitting the plexiglas shattered the pane of glass. Despite what many felt was obvious evidence littered on the ice, referee Larry Thomas, who was on top of the play, called nothing and that left Smith fuming.

The referees decided to hold the intermission while the plexiglass was being replaced, and the remaining 4:19 was added on to the second period.

"We could have quit right there," said Smith, "but we decided to turn things around and play all the harder. I was pleased to see us turn like that."

Meredith and Jeff Perry scored within six seconds of each other in the final two minutes to make it 3-3 after the first period. Heavy hitting abounded, as the memory of DeNat's check lingered, and referees Thomas and Tom O'Brien almost let the game get out of hand. But when the score was evened, both teams concentrated on scoring.

Logan and DeNat exchanged second period goals to make it 4-4, but the Irish exploded for three unanswered tallies in the third to put the game out of reach. Logan scored at 4:23, Michalek beat MTU's Frank Kriber at 12:34 and Logan notched his third career hat trick - his sixth goal of the series - at 14:16 to make it 7-4.

Irish goalie Dave Laurion and Kriber made 26 saves each.

ed senior co-captain Jane Politiski into the Irish line-up, and the team began to click. A basket by Politiski, and two by Matvey tied the game, and then two free throws by Politiski gave the Irish a lead it would never relinquish, 53-51, with 9:56 remaining. Petro's troops continually widened their margin until with 2:10 left in the game, Molly Cashman's two free throws gave them their biggest spread, 75-63.

"You can't give up 76 points and say you played a good defensive ballgame," stated Irish assistant Bob Scott after the contest.

As for Matvey, she was pleased with her performance, but agreed with her coaches about the over-all team play.

"I just seemed to have the right touch yesterday," said Matvey. "My shots were just going in. But I did make some mistakes on defense-we all did-that's what really hurt us.

Tankers split weekend pair

by Michael Ortman
Sports Writer

You win some, you lose some, and some get rained out.

The Irish swimmers encountered developments on all three fronts this weekend as they dumped Northern Illinois on Friday afternoon, 62-49, lost to midwest power Bradley on Saturday, 69-44, and announced that this coming Friday's dual meet with visiting Texas A&M has been cancelled because of travel complications on the part of the Aggies.

The Huskies arrived Friday with an 18 man roster, almost four times as many as competed against the Irish last winter in Dekalb. Coach Orrville Kersten, who had a paltry five swimmers at the close of the 1978-79 season because of internal problems, brought along a strong diving corp but little else as the Irish took every swimming event they competed in.

The Northern Illinois meet marked the return of sophomore Mike Shepardson to the Irish lineup. The Ft. Lauderdale, Fla. native was thought to be out for the season with severe bursitis in his shoulders. Yet Shepardson surprised everyone, swimming the freestyle leg on the winning 400-yard medley relay team and finishing first in the 100-yard freestyle in a respectable :50.3 seconds.

The atmosphere at the Rockne Memorial Pool quickly changed, however, as Notre Dame returned to the water less than 20 hours later to face the always tough Bradley Braves.

With memories of last year's 78-35 humiliation at Bradley still fresh in their minds, the determined Irish set out to win the meet-opening 400-yard medley relay, hoping to take a quick 7-0 advantage. The top Irish team of Glenn Battle, Gary Severyn, Don Casey and Shepardson clocked a time of 3:43.7, the fastest by an Irish medley team in two years, yet not worth a single point as the Bradley unit touched just :00.3 seconds ahead.

The first bright spark for Notre Dame came in the meet's forth event, the 50-yard freestyle, where juniors John Komora and Tom Krutsch finished one-two (:22.6 and :22.9 respectively) to give the Irish a much needed shot in the arm. Freshman Gary Severyn answered with a win in the 200-yard individual medley to pull the Irish to within three, 23-20. But that was as close as the Irish could come as the Braves took first place in each of the remaining eight events and the Irish taking both the second and third places in six of the final eight.

With the season now half over and their record even at 3-3, the Irish have a full week to prepare for Saturday afternoon's home finale against visiting St. Bonaventure. The final five dual meets are all on the road.

jumped up and put both hands in the air, making sure that I was far enough away that I didn't get a foul. He kind of cocked back his right arm, and I felt like we had it then cause he was throwing it at the hoop instead of shooting it."

King's heave bounced off the right side of the backboard, and Phelps had the 200th win of his collegiate coaching career.

Notre Dame played without the services of Kelly Tripucka, who was hospitalized on Friday with what is believed to be back spasms.

"When that was a team, we just rained out and did the things we had to do," Phelps said. With Tripucka out, Orlando Woolridge moved to forward with Gilbert Salinas at center. Woolridge responded with one of his best games of the year, tying Jackson for the team scoring lead with 15 points and also grabbing a game-high nine rebounds.

"If anything, Tripucka's loss is to Notre Dame's advantage," said Maryland coach Lefty Driesel. "I think that any time a player is out that is an advantage to the other team. I think it was a big psychological advantage to Notre Dame."

The victory upped Notre Dame's record to 13-2, while the Terrapins, leaders in the Atlantic Coast Conference, fell to 14-3. Notre Dame travels to Philadelphia to face LaSalle Wednesday night, beginning at 9 p.m. in the Palestra.

Muncie leads NFC in Pro Bowl

HONOLULU (AP) - Chuck Muncie of New Orleans ran for two touchdowns and threw a 25-yard halfback option pass to Dallas' Tony Hill for another score Sunday to lead the National Conference to a 37-27 victory over the American Conference in the Pro Bowl.

The victory was the third in a row for the NFC and gave it a 6-4 edge over the AFC in this game, which comes one week after the Super Bowl and officially closes the National Football League season.

Muncie, selected the most valuable player in the game, had gained 1,198 yards for the Saints this season, broke a 3-3 tie on a 1-yard run with 1:41 gone in the second period, then swept in from 11 yards out with 5:14 gone in the fourth quarter for the NFC's final touchdown.

The AFC tied it 10-10 barely four minutes after Muncie's first score on a 1-yard pass from Pittsburgh's Terry Bradshaw to Cleveland's Mike Pruitt. That play came right after Dallas' Cliff Harris was penalized 25 yards for pass interference in the end zone against wide receiver Stanley Morgan of New England.

The Saints' Archie Manning put the NFC ahead again 16-10 by capping a 12-play, 80-yard drive with a 13-yard scoring pass to Detroit's David Hill.

With 1:50 to go in the half, three plays after linebacker Harry Carson of the New York Giants intercepted a Bradshaw pass, Muncie took a Manning pitchout, rolled to his right and lofted his 25-yard scoring strike to Tony Hill, who caught the ball in the right corner of the end zone. Another interception of a Bradshaw pass, this one New Orleans' safety Tom Myers, preceded Muncie's 11-yard scoring run.

Philadelphia's Wally Henry electrified the Aloha Stadium crowd of 48,060 with an 86-yard punt return for a 30-10 NFC lead early in the third period. Houston's Earl Campbell scored the AFC's final two touchdowns on runs of 2 and 1 yards.

Molarity

Michael Molinelli Ransey rallies Buckeyes

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) - Kelvin Ransey hit eight points in less than one minute Sunday, rallying fourth-ranked Ohio State to a 70-65 victory over No. 17 Virginia in a nationally televised college basketball game Sunday afternoon.

Ransey, a senior guard scoring in double figures for the 80th straight game, sank a field goal and six straight free throws to give the Buckeyes a 66-59 lead with less than two minutes left. Ransey, voted the game's most valuable player, wound up with 18 points while his running mate at guard, Carter Scott, had 21.

Ohio State pushed its record to 14-3 less than 24 hours after it was upset by Big Ten foe Wisconsin 72-71.

Virginia, led by 7-4 freshman center Ralph Sampson's 14 points, fell to a 16-4 mark.

The Cavaliers built a 41-34 lead in the first six minutes of the second half before Ohio State rallied behind the play of its guards. Scott had 15 points and Ransey 14 in the second half.

Sampson and Ohio State's 6-10 junior center Herb Williams battled to a virtual standstill, with Sampson outscoring his more experienced rival by a point.

Ransey's basket gave Ohio State the lead for good at 59-57 with 2:40 remaining.

Griffith leads Louisville

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) - Darrell Griffith scored 27 points to lead seventh-ranked Louisville to a 79-73 win over Florida State Sunday in a foul-plagued Metro Conference basketball game.

A total of 47 fouls were whistled in the game, with all 10 starters having at least three fouls apiece and three players, including Griffith, fouling out.

After Louisville pulled ahead by nine late in the first half, Florida State rallied to trail only 39-36 at halftime. Louisville then scored the first six points of the second half to again go on top by nine, but the Seminoles came back to outscore the Cardinals 11-2 to tie the game at 47.

Louisville, 16-2 on the year, then built its largest lead at 64-52 with 9:21 left. However, Florida State ran off eight straight points, six of them by leading scorer Mickey Dillard, to trim the Louisville margin to four.

But that was as close as the Seminoles could get as the Louisville margin stayed between six and eight points for the rest of the game.

Wiley Brown, with 13 points, and Rodney McCray, with 11, supported Griffith for Louisville while Dillard had 22, Elvis Rolle 19 and Bobby Parks 17 for Florida State.

"No, that's alright. They're gonna fight about how much Tripucka's absence has hurt Notre Dame and...wait a minute! What's Digger calling timeout for? That's not in the script!"

"I'm not sure chief. I guess he just wants a fresh play. No, no he just wants some fresh makeup."

"Just tell him to stick to the script. Ok, it's halftime. Lets all take a break."

(later...)
"Ok everybody, we got seven minutes left and Notre Dame is up by three. That's just where we want to be."

"Hey Chief! Hanzlik just drove the lane for a layup to put the Irish up by five. That's not in the script. What the ... they just stole the ball! Hanzlik hit another one! Notre Dame's up by

'There's nothing more exciting than an unpredictable, anything can happen college basketball game.'

"Chief! Chief! What's happening out there? New York's on the line and they say people are changing channels in Des Moines!"

"Ok, ok, everyone relax. Floor, this is the director. Make sure Hanzlik doesn't make this free throw...What? I don't know. Try moving the camera in real close so he'll remember he's on national television and get nervous or something."

(Hanzlik, a 75-percent free throw shooter misses the three-point play.)

"Ok, good job. Now lets stick with the script and not lose our cool. Hey remember, we're professionals. We do this every week!"

"Chief, Lefty wants to know if it's time for the comeback-attempt that comes close but fails?"

"What's the time? Three minutes? Ok, let's go. And make sure King's uniform is sweaty and his hair is messed up."

"Ah, chief?"

"Yeah?"

"How do you mess up an Afro?"

Enberg: (exaggerated emotion) "And King hits a jumper to make it 62-61 Notre Dame!"

"Ok, now make sure Hanzlik really heaves this inbounds pass. And tell Branning not to do anything stupid like make a great play and catch it."

Enberg: (more exaggerated emotion than before) "And King steals the inbounds pass and lays it in to put Maryland on top 63-62 with 15 seconds left!"

"Get some powder for Tracy Jackson. He knows what to do, right? Ok, lets go."

Enberg: (crazy) Here's Jackson coming up the court. He's gonna take it all the way to the basket and score! Oh my!!

"Ok, make sure the ball gets to King."

"Ah chief. Do you want him to make the shot close or what?"

"Yeah, make it hit the backboard but tell him to make sure it doesn't go in."

Enberg: "Here's King with a desperation shot at the buzzer. It's off the backboard and no good and the Irish come away with a spectacular one-point win!"

McGuire: "Like I always say, Dick. There's nothing more exciting than an unpredictable, anything-can-happen college basketball game."

Enberg: "That's right, Al. And a reminder to our viewers to join Al, Billy and myself tomorrow afternoon for Ohio State versus Virginia."

Packer: "Boy that sounds like another great one, Dick. I wonder how it will turn out?"

McGuire: "What's the matter, Billy? Didn't you read your script?"

Fencers extend streak to 108

Notre Dame's fencing team extended its record winning string to 108 matches on Saturday, defeating Case-Western Reserve, 19-8, and Cleveland State, 18-9 in Detroit. Epeeists Kevin Tindell and Dick Detzner paced the Irish, now 3-0, with respective afternoons of 4-0 and 3-0.

Notre Dame's women's fencing team raised its season mark to 3-0 with wins over Case-Western, 6-3, and Cleveland State, 8-1. Saint Mary's team evened its record at 1-1 by beating Case-Western, 5-4.

This Saturday the Irish travel to Kenosha, Wis., to fence Wisconsin-Parkside, Tri-State College and Lawrence.

Watson wins playoff, $45,000

SAN DIEGO (AP) - Tom Watson's routine par - an anticlimax after a wild variety of adventures - on the first extra hole Sunday provided him with a sudden death playoff victory over D.A. Weibring and the title in the Andy Williams-San Diego Open Golf Tournament.

Weibring, 26, rapidly establishing himself as one of the game's most promising players, and Watson completed the regulation 72 holes with matching totals of 275, 13 shots under par on the cold, gloomy, windy South course at the Torrey Pines Golf Club.

Watson took home $45,000 from the total purse of $200,000. Weibring, whose only previous victory was in the 1979 Quad Cities Open, won $27,000.

Connors dumps McEnroe

PHILADELPHIA (AP) - Top-seeded Jimmy Connors, showing no evidence of the groin pull that plagued him all week, ousted second-seeded John McEnroe in five sets Sunday 6-3, 2-6, 6-3, 3-6, 6-4 to win an unprecedented third straight singles title in the U.S. Pro Indoor Tennis Tournament.

The 27-year-old Connors equaled Rod Laver's record in winning this tournament for the fourth time. He earned $40,000 for his second triumph of 1980.

Irish beat Terps It's Tracy... again

by Mark Perry
Sports Editor

As far as Tracy Jackson is concerned, he's had enough heroics for one season.

"I don't want to be put in a situation like that anymore," admitted Jackson, whose magic touch has beaten two teams in the last seconds this season. "I'd rather win it solid."

Still, Jackson's clutch driving lay-up came against a team he loves to beat, as the Irish edged Maryland, 64-63, in a nationally televised contest at the ACC on Saturday.

"I'm always ready to play against Maryland," Jackson said. "In this game, just like the first two against them, my adrenalin was flowing. I get personal satisfaction out of beating Maryland."

Tracy's score came at a desperate moment for the Irish, who had succeeded in blowing seven-point lead, thanks mainly to the efforts Maryland's Albert King, who scored ten of his game-high 21 points in a four minute stretch. With 23 seconds left, King scored on a jumper and then stole Notre Dame's inbound pass for a lay-up that gave the Terps a 63-62 lead.

With 15 seconds left, Irish coach Digger Phelps elected not to call timeout. "I looked at the clock and saw 15, and I knew we could get a transition score out of it," Phelps said.

That left it up to Jackson. "I knew there was only a few seconds left on the clock," Jackson recalled, "and when Billy (Hanzlik) threw the ball inbound, the first thing on my mind was to take it to them."

"I saw a few players turning their heads going downcourt, and I just wanted to go straight to the hoop," he added. Jackson drove the length of the floor, put a move on Greg Manning at the right baseline, and layed the ball in the basket.

Maryland called timeout with four seconds left to get the last shot, but Hanzlik made sure that King didn't get of a very good one.

"It looked like Albert really wanted the ball, so I wanted to force him up to get the ball," Hanzlik said. "He got it at about the free throw line, so I tried to turn him around once or twice to burn out the clock."

"When he came down I didn't want him to get in rhythm for a jumper, so I

Logan's two hat tricks pace sweep over Huskies

by Brian Beglane
Sports Writer

HOUGHTON, Mich. - The Notre Dame hockey team played the role of the spoiler this weekend, and the biggest spoiler of them all was sophomore Jeff Logan.

Logan, a native of Grosse Pointe Shores, Mich., collected two hat tricks and sparked the Irish to an 8-5, 7-5 sweep over Michigan Tech Friday and Saturday nights at the MTU Student Ice Arena. The two wins spoiled Huskies coach John MacInnes' bid for his 500th victory, but more importantly, skyrocketed Notre Dame from a tie for sixth to third place in the Western Collegiate Hockey Association. The Irish have won four games in a row and moved to 10-8 in the league (14-11 overall). Michigan Tech fell to 8-9-1 in the WCHA (14-11-1 overall).

The sweep also brought Notre Dame coach Lefty Smith to within one victory of his 200th win as coach of the Irish. Smith, in his 12th year at Notre Dame, will have the opportunity to gain No. 200 this weekend when the Irish host Wisconsin (1:30 p.m. faceoff both Saturday and Sunday afternoons at the ACC).

"I think the fact we had our whole lineup intact showed through," said Smith. "Having our top three lines healthy improved our offense immensely. Defensively, we've returned to the pairings we used last year and that helped. And it certainly was nice to see Jeff (Logan) do so well."

Logan broke a 3-3 tie Friday night with his first goal at 17:09 of the first period. Senior Greg Meredith, who totaled two goals for the series, made it 5-3 after the first period when he chased Husky starting goalie Darcy Way with his 21st goal of the year at 18:40. Rob Polmantuin replaced Way.

Logan extended the advantage to 6-3 at 4:24 of the second, but Tech's Al Micalich made it 6-4 with his second power play goal of the night at 7:26. Notre Dame co-captain Tom Michalek notched his fourth shorthanded goal of the year at 11:27 to make it 7-4, and Logan got his second career hat trick at 14:19 of the second.

Irish goalie Bob McNamara made 43 saves and collected his eighth win of the year. Way and Polmantuin combined for 31 stops.

"Sometimes things just go right," said Logan, "and I guess this was just one of those times, I was in the right place at the right time. I don't recall ever getting back to back hat tricks before."

Logan has a good chance at being named Player of the Week for his two hats. But getting it the second night was not as easy.

The Huskies came out flying Saturday night and jumped out to a 3-1 lead in the first 13 minutes. It then literally took "a good knock in the head" to get the Irish going.

With 4:19 remaining in the first period, Notre Dame's Don Lucia and Tech's Brent DeNat

Matvey sparks women's team

by Mark Hannuksela
Sports Writer

It was the Tracy and Shari show at the ACC.

Once again, Tracy Jackson saved the day for Digger Phelps and his Fighting Irish basketball team in a 64-63 win over Maryland. And once again, Shari Matvey paced coach Sharon Petro's women's basketball team to victory, in a 78-76 decision over Mount Saint Joseph's College of Cincinnati on Saturday.

While Jackson's heroics have been commonplace in the last two weeks, Matvey has been Petro's dominant force throughout this 1979-80 season. Saturday, the 6-1 freshman from Austintown, Ohio scored in double figures for the ninth straight game, and 12th out of 14 as a collegian. In the process she tied two of her own school records, set earlier this year against Chicago State, for most points (31) and most field goals made (14) in a single game. She also pulled down a game high 15 rebounds in leading the Irish to their tenth win of the season.

Matvey and her teammates will attempt to raise that victory total on Wednesday when coach Jerry Dallessio's Saint Mary's Belles visit the ACC at 7:30 p.m.

By halftime, Matvey had 14 points and six rebounds. Sophomore Tricia McManus added nine points to the Irish cause.

The second half started slowly for the Irish as Mount St. Joe's scored eight of the first ten points to take its biggest lead, 45-35, with 16:48 remaining. Notre Dame then answered with ten straight points in the next 2:44 to tie the game at 45-45, but three straight buckets by the Mounties put Petro's cagers in the hole again, 51-45.

At that point, Petro reinsert-

'Hey... they didn't read the script!'

I've come to the conclusion that all the last-second, win-or-lose, here-comes-Tracy Jackson-to save-the-day, basketball games we've been getting around here are not due simply to poor play on Notre Dame's part or even great play on the part of their opponents to take those leads away. These nail-biters have nothing to do with Digger versus Lefty or game plan versus game plan. No, my friends, finally the truth can, and in fact must be, told.

These games are fixed!!! No, not by the Mafia or the bookies down on Mishawaka Avenue. The final scores of these contests are determined by a force much more mighty and omnipresent. A power so strong that it can even influence what color uniforms a team will wear. (of course, green does look so much better than blue, doesn't it?)

It's television. Yes dear readers and wavers of dirty socks, the television people are the ones who decide when to play, what time to start the game, what time to end it and, of course, when to call all those unexplained timeouts en route. But everyone knows all that. What you aren't aware of are the other things that the NBC peacock has control over. Last Saturday I had the chance to wear a set of NBC headphones and listen to these decisions as they were made...

"OK, this is the director in the truck. We're two minutes from airtime. Everybody get in position and let's hope we have a good one."

"Hey chief, what do you mean hope we have a good one? Didn't you read the script? this is gonna be a one-pointer with two lead changes in the last 15 seconds."

"Yeah, I know. But a director has to say stuff like that in case someone from the NCAA is listening. OK, now give me a close-up of Digger. Wait a minute! Wait a minute! Tell him to fix his collar and straighten that tie. And his hair; someone get him a comb!"

"How about Lefty, chief? Is he OK?"
"Yeah, I suppose. See if you can get some powder for the glare."

Frank LaGrotta

Sports Writer

"You mean on his nose?"
"No, his head. Next year we're gonna make a rule that no teams with bald coaches can get on TV. OK we're ready to start. Did you give both coaches a copy of the script?"

"Yessir chief. But Lefty doesn't like the ending. He thinks Hanzlik should foul King and then have King go to the line and miss the free throw. Says it'll make him look like a smarter coach."

"Tell him sorry, but no way. We used that one two years ago in a Notre Dame-UCLA game right here. Remember how Wilkes missed the free throws and Notre Dame won. If Lefty has any more gripes just remind him about that one. Now lets get started."

"Gotcha chief-- Oh, by the way, who was responsible for getting Tripucka out of the game?"

"I'm no. sure but it'll sure give Al, Dick and Billy some great stuff to talk about during the game. You know, team loses star, team gets inspired, team goes on to win. Ah, those guys in publicity are really on the ball."

"Hey chief, isn't it a little early for Hanzlik to get his second foul?"

"Not at all. Remember yesterday at the meeting when we decided that getting Hanzlik on the bench early would be Maryland's excuse for keeping it close and even leading at halftime."

"Oh, yeah...hey, by the way chief, it's getting close to halftime. You wanna have someone get injured so Al and Billy can argue about whether or not he'll be back?"
