N.D. warns of 'Rely' tampons

by Mary Fran Callahan
Senior Staff Reporter

University officials have launched a campaign in the residence halls to warn women of the risk of Rely tampons, since the tampons were mass distributed to female students.

Female undergrads received samples of the tampons, enclosed in the complimentary "care packages" the Housing Department annually furnishes students at the fall semester's onset.

Researchers have drawn a parallel between the use of the Rely tampon and the incidence of toxic shock syndrome, but Proctor & Gamble, the company that manufactures the Rely product, has questioned the correlation.

A company spokesman yesterday commented, "Switching brands is not going to help. The studies indicate that tampons in general pose a danger to women." Nevertheless, the company began a massive Advertising campaign last week to recall their product.

According to one physician, some element in the tampon is causing the normal bacteria on the skin to release toxin. Death can occur within hours. There is no known cure.

Jim McDonnell, director of Student Activities, said yesterday he assumed the warning that links the Rely tampon to toxic shock syndrome was a "consumer information thing." When told that the University's care packages contained the tampons, he replied, "I was not aware of that. That would change my opinion."

McDonnell explained that University administrators simply order the complimentary packages annually and are not aware of their contents from year to year.

"The packages have been around for 15 or 20 years. I don't think anybody has been scrutinizing them," McDonnell commented. He added that the Housing Department is responsible for distributing the care packages to the residence halls. McDonnell then called Fr. Michael Heppen, director of housing, to explain the situation.

Heppen, who was aware of Rely's mass distribution on campus, began a warning campaign by notifying hall rectors of dangerous nature of the product. Resident assistants in most women's dorms have taped notices and newspaper articles regarding Rely's recall on bulletin boards and bathroom walls.

A spokesman for the Bookstore said yesterday that the tampons have been taken off the shelf and are no longer being sold.

Timothy McDevitt, general counsel for the University, explained yesterday exactly who is liable in a situation like Rely's.

"Proctor & Gamble (the manufacturer) is responsible, but the case is now being litigated. They are saying there is absolutely no way they could have known that their product caused the syndrome," McDevitt added, however, that lawsuits have been filed against the corporation on grounds that the manufacturer did not adequately test the tampon before marketing it. "They say they did, so that's why the case is now being litigated," McDevitt explained.

He further commented that "a university or a supermarket or Hooke's drugstore" would never be liable for a recalled product if sued. "They would just call Proctor & Gamble to let them argue the case," he said.

Women desiring a refund are asked to send the tampons along with the box to: Rely Product Refund, P.O. Box 500, Maple Plain, Minn., 55348.

At present, spokesmen for the Infirmary, St. Joseph's and Memorial hospitals all say they have no patients undergoing treatment for toxic shock syndrome.

Mock debate highlights issues

by Earl Rix

Students representing the three major presidential candidates debated the campaign issues before a small crowd last night at Carroll Hall at Saint Mary's.

The candidates' positions on major policy issues were articulated by Frank Tyghe, Mark Lynch, and Jim Murphy, who represented Anderson, Reagan and Carter respectively.

Substantive policy differences emerged on the questions of energy, taxation, the Equal Rights Amendment, and abortion.

Frank Tyghe, Anderson's representative and campus coordinator for the Anderson campaign, said that "we cannot produce our way out of the energy crisis. The oil industry can increase production by only one or two million barrels per day by 1990. We import 8 million barrels per day now."

The way to conserve, said Tyghe, is to adopt Anderson's 50-cent per gallon gasoline tax, and funnel that money back to the public through a 50 percent decrease in the social security tax.

In addition some environmental concerns "must be sacrificed... as in the use of unleaded gasoline, and encouragement of coal production." Tyghe said "the commitment to nuclear

Of the 93 percent of students who expressed a preference, 62 percent of all Notre Dame-Saint Mary's students would not consent to an abortion for themselves or their partner under any circumstances, yet 65 percent do not agree with the Catholic Church's stand on contraception, according to a poll conducted last week by the McNally Research Group for The Observer.

The poll also found that 60 percent of ND-SMC women feel they are currently discriminated against here, but only 23 percent of the men surveyed agreed, while 60 percent said women are not discriminated against. Similarly, 58 percent of ND-SMC women feel that the University should provide proportionately equal funds to women's athletic teams, but 61 percent of ND men do not agree.

The survey canvassed 120 students from both campuses, selected scientifically, and has a possible error margin of four percent.

Are there any circumstances under which you could imagine consenting to an abortion for your partner or yourself?

The Roman Catholic Church does not favor the use of contraceptive devices.

Do you agree with the Church on this issue?

Do you feel women are currently discriminated against at Notre Dame?

Do you think Notre Dame should provide proportionately equal funds to women's athletic teams as it does to men's teams?

United Way

Director terms drive a success

By David Sarphie

The annual United Way drive among Notre Dame students end this week and was, according to student chairman Mike Sexton, extremely successful, with 70% of students participating and a total of $8100 collected by United Way workers as of last evening.

Sexton was especially pleased with the attitude of the students. "Because this was the first year that we had asked two dollars of every student, I was a bit worried about their reaction," he remarked. "I heard few complaints, however."

Sexton said that the success of the campaign was due, in part, to the work of his assistants, Sean Digan, Joe Orie, and Jay Traverse. "I put in a lot of time, as did Brother Joe McTaggart, who helped direct the drive," Sexton noted. "I don't think the campaign would have been nearly as successful without their efforts."

Dillon Hall and Villa Angela had outstanding participation in the program, with contributions from one hundred percent of the residents. "I think most of the halls did very well," Sexton said.

Sexton admitted that the approximate seventy percent participation was down slightly from the seventy-five percent participation last year. "Last year was just a phenomenal year," Sexton pointed out. "I didn't expect to reach that goal two years in a row."

The drive was also successful as a learning experience for the Notre Dame students. "I think everybody learned a little about what actually goes on in their community," Sexton stated.

The charity drive involving faculty will continue through October. Ted Crovella, chairman of the faculty United Way campaign, reported that the $43,000 his staff had collected was about two-thirds of their goal.

Skies cleared

yesterday in the Gulf of Alaska, giving firefighters hope of boarding the listing, fire-ravaged cruise ship Prinsendam. The Coast Guard sought help from a civilian expert on ship fires, and said the flames might be fought while the vessel was under tow. All 533 passengers and crew were rescued after fire broke out Saturday, and the passengers were on the last legs of their journeys home yesterday. They were flown to Seattle overnight after an ordeal that included up to 20 hours in lifeboats, and transfers by tanker and aircraft. Some passengers complained lifeboats were ill-equipped and lacked crew and provisions, charges denied yesterday by a spokesman for the ship's owner, Holland America Cruises. "There was an officer and crew in every lifeboat and every lifeboat was fully equipped with ration provisions and with flares and flashlights," said the spokesman, Joseph Scott of Manning, Selvage and Lee, the lines' public relations adviser. He said lifeboats "were lowered quite expertly" into the sea, "a difficult task... without any injury whatsoever." "Every one of those lifeboats was provisioned," he said, "There's a big protein ration, like biscuits and water. After you eat a couple of ounces of this biscuit, you feel like you've had a full meal." — AP yesterday intensified air attacks on each other's oil centers — the Iranian port of Abadan and the Iraqi city of Kirkut. The United States and Britain reportedly warned Jordan that military aid to Iraq would invite Iran to retaliate and widen the war between the Persian Gulf neighbors. In a break in Arab ranks, Syria accused the president of Iraq of being an "imperialist agent" who launched the war at the behest of the United States to divert attention from the Arab struggle against Israel. Although both Iraq and Iran are Moslem nations, Iraq is Arab and Iran is non-Arab Persian. — AP

Iraq and Iran

The government's decision to dump thousands of barrels of radioactive waste into the sea off both coasts has formed a "radioactive dumping ring" around the United States, Rep. John Burton, D-Calif., told a congressional subcommittee that met yesterday in San Francisco. Burton, first in a series of witnesses, criticized the government's failure to keep adequate records on the dumping, which began in 1946 and continued until the early 1970s. "Various scientific groups are disputing the seriousness of the problem," he said, "and the federal agencies have added to the problem by not keeping complete records on the location and ingredients of the dumping." The largest dump is about 150 miles off the Delaware coast, but the site that has caused the most furor is near the Farallon Islands, several inhospitable chunks of rock about 25 miles west of San Francisco. Some 45,000 barrels were dumped there until the government outlawed the practice in 1972. About 100,000 barrels were dumped at about 50 sites, government records show. Some environmentalists, led by Dr. W. Jackson Davis of the University of California at Santa Cruz, say radioactive material from the dump site off the Farallons has entered edible fish and poses a "measurable health hazard." That is disputed by a number of scientists and other environmentalists who say the wastes present no hazard. All, however, advocate continued monitoring. Pressure from San Francisco Supervisor Quentin Kopp and supervisors from other California counties led the House subcommittee on environment, energy and natural resources, chaired by Rep. Toby Moffett, D-Conn., to hold the hearing. Its purpose is to determine the extent of the dumping and its effect on the environment. — AP

William Dunbar, R-Terre Haute, said the committee will meet later this month to work on the bills before recommending them for the 1981 Indiana General Assembly. — AP

Second in a series

Reporter joins police on duty

This article is the second part of a series on police protection written for The Observer.

By Rich Fischer

We were the first car to 10-20 (reach the scene of a complaint). An elderly lady was found lying in the gravel of a driveway, her head cradled in the lap of a neighbor. Blood dripped from a gash on her forehead, across her face, and was smeared on the shirt of the man holding her.

Someone had run out of the shadows, twisting her to the ground and grabbing her purse all in one motion. Her hip hurt — probably broken — as did her arm. She had no idea who hit her.

An ambulance and an additional squad car made the scene soon after us, and we left the woman in their care to find the snatcher. We didn't, of course. Although our response time was three minutes, it takes a snatcher only 30 seconds to run half a block, search the purse, keep the money, throw the purse into the weeds, and disappear into the night.

We took the next dispatch that came over — a prowler was reported in a nearby neighborhood. We responded 'silent' until we were half a mile out, then took the rest of the distance without lights. As we rolled to a stop, Corbett growled "It's not easy to sneak up on someone when your — damn car squeaks."

I got out of the car with him, as I had been doing all evening. I guess I was taking this call lightly because of the comic relief of the moment before, but I came back to reality with the soft, sharp 'flap' of Corbett drawing his .38. While he searched the area, I never left his side.

The midnight shift (10:30 p.m.-6:30 a.m.) had a distinctly more relaxed character than the first one. By now the rain had stopped, and it was turning colder. The incidents handled by the night shift were more community than crime related — a loud party, two stalled cars, and running a moped registration check.

Between calls, Corporal Trenerry, my new 'partner', explained his approach to police work. "If it's a crook, I'd rather catch him in the act than prevent him," he said.

During our regular patrol, four youths were spotted sitting on a fence outside a town park. When the squad car approached them, they fled along the perimeter of the park.

We followed them across the field in the black-and-white, and Officer Trenerry finally had to give chase on foot through some backyards. He caught one of the guys, and a back-up car apprehended a second fellow as he tried to drive away in a station wagon.

When the station wagon was examined, it was found to contain $350 worth of public street signs — STOP, YIELD, etc. In addition, a search of the youth apprehended by Corporal Trenerry yielded a wrench and a pair of pliers. Examination of the fence showed that the sign on it was in the process of being removed when we arrived.

A third car on patrol some distance away apprehended another suspect jogging towards the campus. When it was found that all three youths were ND students, they were taken downtown, and eventually released into the custody of Notre Dame security.

Corporal Trenerry later explained to me exactly how close the boys came to being arrested. "Possession of stolen property is a felony," he said.

As a felony, it required that the youths stay in jail until Monday morning, when they would have been arraigned in court. The police were able, due to the circumstances of the case, to reduce the charge to conversion. Conversion is the appropriation of another's property for one's own use, and is only a misdemeanor. Whether any further legal action is taken depends on the prosecutor's office, which will review the preliminary report and respond with anything from issuing a warrant for arrest, to notifying Dean Roemer of the incident, to doing nothing at all.

United States continues health research with Soviet Union

by Marc Rosenwasser
Associated Press Writer

Moscow (AP) — The United States is pushing ahead on heart research with the Soviet Union, despite cutbacks in other joint scientific programs following the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan.

Focus

Washington has almost completely cut off collaboration with Moscow on agricultural and energy development, including atomic energy. And cooperative work in such areas as ocean study, transportation and housing planning has slowed significantly because of American displeasure over the presence of Soviet forces in Afghanistan.

But health programs — heart and cancer research among them — have been maintained, apparently because of their humanitarian value. A group of about 30 American heart specialists participated at the meeting in Moscow last week of the International Society for Heart Research. Three other smaller teams of American cardiologists are due in the Soviet capital before the end of October.

Morgan, who heads one working group, said during a recent interview: "We've gotten the cooperation of a number of Soviet scientists, making good headway in their fields, to collaborate in joint research programs of benefit to both sides."

Dr. Robert Jennings, chairman of the pathology department at Duke University and president of the heart conference that met here, added: "there's an awful lot we don't know. The agreements mean more people are working on these diseases together."

Critics of the exchanges say the United States has given a lot more than it has received.

Morgan, who supports the cooperation, acknowledges, "At the beginning, the Soviets were at the starting point in basic heart research. But they got contacts in the West that allowed them to identify areas of research that were important and they were able to decide better where to spend their money."

energy must be to the same degree as the safeguards, and nuclear energy cannot be increased until that time."

Carter representative Jim Murphy, president of the Young Democrats, accused Anderson of catering to special interest groups, and of being "one of the most articulate supporters of the nuclear industry in Congress."

Murphy claimed that Carter has reduced oil imports by 20 percent since 1977, and cited the windfall profits tax as a major accomplishment of Carter's energy policy. Also mentioned were Carter's syn-fuel programs, his desire for safer nuclear power, and his administration's dedication to conservation.

Mark Lynch, Reagan's representative, and spokesman for the college republican campaign, countered the Anderson and Carter energy programs by saying "We have to produce our way out of the energy crisis."

A less substantive discussion took place on the topics of abortion and the ERA.

For the record, Reagan is in favor of a constitutional amendment to ban abortion.

Anderson's representative, voiced his opinion by saying "a church can forbid it (abortion). A state should not force a woman to bear a child."

Carter's representative avoided the moral aspect of the issue, and explained his candidate's position. "Carter is opposed to federal funding of abortion, and is also opposed to a constitutional amendment to ban abortion," said Murphy.

Murphy pointed out what he considered to be inconsistencies in Reagan's position. "Reagan signed a liberal California abortion law, although he now says he regrets it. His rhetoric does not always match his performance." Murphy then questioned why the Republicans guarded the rights of an unborn fetus but did not favor the ERA.

Rep. Jenrette

Congressman guilty in ABSCAM

WASHINGTON (AP) -- Rep. John W. Jenrette was convicted Tuesday night of accepting a bribe from an FBI undercover agent, who said he represented two wealthy Arabs needing special immigration legislation.

The jury also convicted John R. Stowe, a Richmond, Va. businessman, who was charged with aiding and abetting Jenrette in the bribery scheme.

The jury of eight women and four men returned their verdicts in U.S. District Court after some four hours of deliberations that began just after lunch. The verdict was announced at 6:15 p.m. EDT.

After the jury foreman, Sylvia Parker, announced the verdicts, Jenrette, sitting at the defense table, bowed his head and sobbed with his hands covering his face. Stowe sat impassively as he had during most of the five week trial.

Jenrette's wife, Rita, displayed no emotion, staring at the jurors from her seat in the first row of the courtroom.

Defense attorneys asked that the jury be polled on the verdicts, and each juror responded, "guilty," on each charge. Jenrette was convicted of one count of conspiracy to commit bribery and two counts of bribery. Stowe was convicted of one count of conspiracy and two counts of aiding and abetting bribery.

Each man could face a maximum 35 years in prison and thousands of dollars in fines. Sentencing will be scheduled later.

Jenrette was the second member of Congress convicted as a result of the Abscam investigation, in which FBI agents posed as representatives of bogus rich Arabs needing immigration bills.

Rep. Michael Myers was convicted August 30 in the first Abscam trial and on Oct. 2, he was expelled from the House by a vote of 376/30.

Before the jurors began deliberating, U.S. District Judge John Garrett Penn instructed them on the laws of conspiracy and bribery and on the legal defense of entrapment.

Jenrette and Stowe claimed they were victims of entrapment, in which law enforcement officials induce or persuade persons to commit unlawful acts.

Penn told the jury such inducement "may take many forms... including persuasion, fraudulent representations, threats, coercive tactics, harassment, promises of reward, or pleas based on need, sympathy, or friendship."

The jury spent more than a month listening to witnesses and watching FBI videotapes, as the government tried to show that Jenrette and Stowe split a $50,000 payoff from an undercover agent posing as a representative of wealthy Arabs.

Jenrette testified last week, denying he accepted the bribe, which was offered in return for his promise to introduce special immigration legislation for the fictional Arabs.

He admits holding bribery discussions with the agents--discussions captured on video and audio tape. But he contends the FBI has persecuted him for six years and lured him into the talks at a time he suffered from a severe drinking problem.

Jenrette was also accused of soliciting a $125,000 bribe from the undercover agent in return for Jenrette's promise to have Sen. Strom Thurmond, R/S.C., introduce immigration legislation in the Senate.

Jenrette admits taking part in that videotaped discussion, but says he was only buying time because he believed the agents were mobsters who would kill him.

Stowe did not testify. His lawyer, Murray Janus, admitted Stowe picked up the bribe money last Dec. 6, but claimed Stowe was a delivery boy for Jenrette.

He said Stowe met with the agents in hopes of getting the fictional Arabs to finance his purchase of a failing munitions plant in Jenrette's district. The agents kept hammering at Stowe to introduce them to his friend, Jenrette, and he finally did so, Janus said.

The government based much of its case on the video and audio tapes, which show Jenrette and Stowe discussing the bribe Dec. 4, Stowe picking up the $50,000 in a paper bag Dec. 6, and Jenrette and Stowe discussing the $125,000 bribe in the Thurmond matter Jan. 7.

Bishops debate Church's stance on use of contraceptives

Vatican City (AP) — Roman Catholic bishops discussing family issues here are sharply divided over the need for a reappraisal of the church's stand on birth control, posing a potential dilemma for Pope John Paul II.

Some cardinals and bishops from Western and Third World countries have asked Pope John Paul's first synod to examine the problem of the Catholic who do not accept the church ban on contraception.

In most cases, the bishops made it clear that they are not pressing for any specific change in the church doctrine and that they accept Pope Paul VI's 1968 encyclical "Humanae Vitae" which reiterated the church's opposition to all forms of birth control except the rhythm method of sexual abstinence.

But they are pressing for greater "pastoral concern" and a more sympathetic approach by the Church to couples using banned birth control methods. As one Vatican analyst put it, the bishops want the Church to consider the use of contraceptives as "a minor, pardonable offense and not a major crime."

Archbishop John R. Quinn, calling for "a completely honest examination" of the issue, cited studies showing 76.5 percent of American Catholic women are using birth control and that 29 percent of American Catholic priests believe contraception is immoral.

The prelates favoring a reappraisal, described by Pakistani Cardinal Joseph Cordeiro as being a minority in the more than 200 bishops, have run into a strong opposition led by conservative Italian cardinals in the Curia, or the Vatican's central administration.

After Quinn spoke, Italian Cardinal Pericle Felici, prefect of the Vatican's Supreme Tribunal, told the bishops: "there is no need of rediscussing it, no need to pay attention to statistics because statistics don't signify anything. The encyclical is closed."

The sharp division poses a difficult choice for the Polish-born pontiff who has criticized contraception, but has not addressed himself to the need of finding pastoral guidelines for dealing with Catholics who ignore the church ban, said a Vatican-based prelate who asked that his name not be used.

"It's going to be a hard one for the pope because Quinn and his supporters are taking a cue from Pope Paul himself who had spoken of the need to review his encyclical at a later time, and that was 12 years ago," the prelate said.

"They are asking for a review because the doctrine has not taken hold," he said. "The encyclical is authoritative but it's not one of those infallible doctrines and theoretically it could even be changed."

He said the best result the bishops seeking a reappraisal could hope for is a church admission of a "schism between the doctrine and the reality" and a call for a more sympathetic pastoral program.

...Poll

as they did over the local sex discrimination issue. Only 29 percent of the men questioned, and 33 percent of the women, could conceive of any circumstances under which an abortion would be allowable. However, only 27 percent of the men and 28 percent of the women surveyed agreed with the Roman Catholic Church's ban on contraceptives, with an unusually large 11 percent of the women listed as undecided.

On the issue of proportionate funding of women's athletic teams, an issue magnified by the recent enforcement of HEW's Title IX, only 32 percent of the males polled believe that Notre Dame should provide equal funds, while 61 percent do not concur.

The poll also asked whether students felt the University has taken a "responsible role in helping to alleviate the crime problem" off campus, and an overwhelming 77 percent of the students surveyed replied that it did not. It was easily the biggest margin of any of the responses in the poll, with only 16 percent supporting the University and eight percent undecided.

Additionally, only 50 percent of students surveyed believe the boycott of Nestle's, Campbell's and Libby's products should be continued. Thirty-seven percent now oppose the boycotts, and 14 percent are undecided.

Approval ratings were also obtained from students on four different student government branches at ND — the Campus Life Council, the Student Union, the Student Government, and the Board of Commissioners. On both the CLC and the Board, more than 40 percent of students questioned said they were not familiar with these bodies. The Student Union received the most favorable ratings, with 10 percent giving it a mark of "excellent," 63 percent "good" and 22 percent "fair."

The Observer was not excluded from this evaluation — 30 percent of those surveyed feel the student paper does not adequately meet the needs of the ND-SMC student body. Sixty-four percent are satisfied with The Observer, and seven percent are undecided.

Students were also polled as to their preferences for the successor to Dan Devine as head football coach. Miami Dolphins coach Don Shula led the balloting with 29 percent, with retired Dallas Cowboys quarterback Roger Staubach finishing second with 16 percent. Arkansas coach Lou Holtz was third with 14 percent, followed by unemployed pro coaches Hank Stram and John Madden, then college coaches Terry Donahue, Joe Restic, Lee Corso, George Welsh and Joe Yonto.

Music Department introduces orchestra concert program

The University of Notre Dame Department of Music Concert Series will open Sunday with an "Introduction to the Orchestra" Concert program presented by the Notre Dame Orchestra. The Orchestra, under the direction of Adrian Bryttan, will present a 1 p.m. Children's Concert and a 7 p.m. Campus Concert in the O'Laughlin Auditorium on the Saint Mary's College campus. This location has been changed from Notre Dame's Washington Hall, where the concert was previously scheduled.

Sunday's program, which will be narrated by Father Robert Griffin, will feature Prokofiev's "Peter and the Wolf", the 2nd and 3rd movements of Tchaikovsky's Symphony no. 4, and Mussorgsky's "Night on Bald Mountain".

Both concerts are open to the public without charge.

Amnesty International

Amnesty International Group 43 will sponsor a movie and hold a general meeting this Wednesday, Oct. 8, in LaFortune Center at 4:30 p.m. The movie is entitled "Human Rights in South Korea" and will be shown at 4:30. After the movie Prof. Gil Loescher will make a few short comments and will answer questions. Following this will be a very brief general meeting of current members and anyone wishing to become a member. The general public is invited to attend the movie.

P.O. Box Q

ND not a 'no holds barred university'

Dear Editor,
May I offer a few thoughts concerning the "when is the university going to treat us like grown-ups" debate, referred to in Mr. Anthony Walton's editorial (Sept. 23).
First of all, it occurs to me that the truth of the situation is that "grown-up" is not something that happens to you over the night of your 18th birthday, or 21st either. It is a "becoming" and it takes time, experience, and is best accomplished with some wise guidance. When you are 30, I think you will look back and realize just how much you lacked at 18, 19 or 21.

One must also keep in mind that rules are made for whole groups of people. If it were otherwise, those few who truly are more mature and adult could expect more individual freedoms which would then be prudently used. However, in dealing with large numbers, various needs and stages of development must be taken into consideration. In the end, some may find it too binding, still for others it may be more than they can prudently handle. But one is expected to bend to the good of the community, be it family, school, etc.

One other point — Walton seems outraged that the university should assume its jurisdiction reaches to wherever the location of the Notre Dame formal dance happens to be. I propose that it is reasonable to assume that where its name and reputation are presented, the university has obligations not only to you as a student, but to us, the tuition-paying parents. Would this not come under Ann Landers' standard advice that so long as one is under "the roof and responsibility," one must abide by that establishment's rules made according to good conscience and values.
Frankly, I doubt that most of the student body would want a "no holds barred" university. Perhaps you incorrectly assume their lack of defiance is apathy.

Allow me to close with a quote from one wiser than I: "At the time it is administered, all discipline seems a cause for grief and not for joy, but later it brings forth the fruit of peace and justice..." (Heb. 12:11)
The truth is that rules are not fetters to freedom but rather guides to Liberty and Happiness.

Soccer coach replies

Dear Editor,
To the student writer who so adequately passed on his or her comments regarding my bench and sideline conduct.
I shall sincerely try to conform my behavior to more acceptable bounds. I appreciate your views, concur in your observations, and will, of course, endeavor to better represent our university and our team.
I also hope you will come back to our game on Friday, October 10. Perhaps you will be surprised to see a more mature and responsible coach. Your comments caused me to think much and to strive to be a more fitting example of the best athletic traditions of our school.

Job lovers are valuable

Colman McCarthy

WASHINGTON — People who love their jobs — really love them and think of their paychecks as the least of the rewards — are as rare as they are valuable.
But the other afternoon, when I was visiting Long Island for some reunions with old friends and haunts, I had two of them before me. They were teachers — my teachers, when I was in grammar school some 30 years before.
At first, talking with Edna Ashley, now 80 and retired and who was my first-grade teacher, and Marye Picone, who taught me in the third, fourth, seventh, and eighth grades, was like looking out of a bay window into the past. A panorama of three decades spread out before us.
We hadn't seen each other all these years, though I have remembered both women in the enduring images I formed of them as a child.
At the front of the class, Mrs. Ashley was a maternal presence. She has children of her own — she told us on the opening day of school — and I remember feeling good about that. She would be as much a mother as a teacher, with the roles not being much different.
She believed that each child had gifts of the mind and spirit waiting to be discovered in the schoolhouse. It was her calling to help this discovery happen.
Mrs. Picone shared this view, though 33 years ago, when I was in the first class she taught, she was not much more than a schoolgirl herself. She was out of college only a few months.
Her idea of an exciting Saturday afternoon was to marshal her bouncing energies and gather about five or six neighborhood children to go into New York City to a museum in the morning and an afternoon at Madison Square Garden for a Knick game. She was telling us, like Mentor urging on Telemachus, that a world was out there: Learn to tie your shoelaces and leap into it.
After a sharing of stories and updates the other day, we began talking about the art of teaching. As one who believes that teachers are among the earth's most undervalued and overextended citizens, I tried to learn from both Mrs. Ashley and Mrs. Picone how they had avoided teacher burnout all this time.
It was a topical question. Every September — and no exception this year — when teachers take to the picket lines in one city after another, I find myself wondering how they can absorb the foul treatment heaped on them. Instead of honoring teachers and freeing them from school board hassling about salaries, curriculums and paperwork, we seem driven to give them as little support as possible — and then wonder why our children aren't learning.

Mrs. Picone, who currently teaches in a junior high school, confessed that teaching was becoming harder lately. A few times, she has come close to burning out. She couldn't point to one lone pressure and say that everything came from that.
Perhaps it isn't even pressures at all, she seemed to be saying, but rather evaporations. She would try to touch a student's mind, only to find less and less to grip.
The formlessness means that students show little interest not only about the traditional subjects like history and English, but even in learning about their own culture. Some of this, Mrs. Picone believed, was merely a reflection of the children's coming from homes where books and learning aren't valued.
Except that that has always been the case: What's alarming now is that large numbers of the young are confident that they can wing it. They think they can forget learning how to tie their shoelaces. Just leap, the world can be bluffed.
It was too pleasant and breezy a summer day to get into the heaviness of student passivity. Besides, burnout was the question.
Mrs. Picone's method of resistance was to keep her spirit of independence intact. A couple of days a year, when the bell of the last period rings, she bolts for the door and tells everyone that the workday is over; no afternoon faculty conferences, no meetings with the principal, no cleaning out her desk. It's time now to go to a museum or see how the Knicks are doing.
Mrs. Ashley never burned out because she was too busy being fascinated by children. "I have always been an advocate of the individualized approach to learning," she told me, "both in the classroom and at home. I tried to have each child read to me alone for a few minutes each day, just as I spent a little part of the day with each of my own children at home."
As the current teacher strikes plague the country and as teachers find themselves out of jobs because of budget cutbacks, the life and times of women like Edna Ashley and Marye Picone may seem too peaceful to be real. But if we looked closely, we would find that every school has two or three teachers like them — exceptional educators whose kindly ways with the young are making all the difference.

ROTC no monopoly on patriotism

Dear Editor,
Does Mary Fran Callahan wish to make the claim that those who serve in the armed forces are patriotic and those who disagree with governmental policies are unpatriotic? Indeed, in the article, "One of Ten Domers Belongs to ROTC," she makes the incredible statement that "at present, gone are anti-war sentiments conjured during the sixties, for patriotism is indeed fashionable again."
On the contrary, those people who had the courage to protest the government's war policies often displayed a genuine concern for our nation. Moreover, those in the ROTC program are not necessarily motivated solely by patriotism but rather, as Ms. Callahan points out, are often attracted by financial considerations.
Surely it is a mistake to assume that statements which challenge governmental policy cannot arise from love or devotion to one's country.

Editor's note: When I discovered that 10 per cent of the campus was affiliated with the armed services, I set out to offer some objective reasons as to why their was such a surge in support since the Viet Nam years. It is not my feeling that one must join ROTC to demonstrate his or her patriotism, nor did I mean to intimate that all of those in the programs are necessarily patriotic.

Holmes bout hospitalizes Ali

LOS ANGELES (AP) —

Muhammad Ali, soundly beaten last week in his attempt to regain the heavyweight boxing title, was admitted to UCLA Medical Center for "diagnostic studies," officials said yesterday.

Nursing supervisor Barbara Stone said Ali, 38, was admitted to the hospital Monday and was in "satisfactory" condition. Hospital officials would not disclose the reason for the diagnostic studies.

A spokesman said Ali was released from the hospital on an overnight pass but was scheduled to return today.

Ali, three-time heavyweight champion, was beaten by Larry Holmes in their match in Las Vegas on Thursday night. Ali was unable to come out for the 11th round.

His longtime manager, Herbert Muhammad, said he has been telling the former champion to retire for the past six years. During the fight, Muhammad, sitting at ringside, signaled to trainer Angelo Dundee that Ali shouldn't be allowed to continue.

"He was defenseless," Muhammad said. "I stopped the fight strictly because he was defenseless. I think he lost too much weight. He was dried out. He didn't sweat."

Muhammad said Ali, who dropped from 254 pounds to 217 pounds for the bout, "reduced too fast because of his vanity. He wanted to look good, so he didn't drink enough water and didn't take his salt tablets."

Rape prevention at CCE

by Kelli Flint
Senior Staff Reporter

The Department of Psychological Services, in cooperation with the office of Student Affairs, will present the program "Working Against Rape" tomorrow night at 7 p.m. in the Center for Continuing Education Auditorium.

The program follows the chronological sequence of events following a sexual assault, according to Dan Rybicki, Psychologist with the Department of Psychological Services.

Dean Roemer, Security Director Terry, and St. Joseph County Sheriff Jerry Rutkowski are among those scheduled to speak at the program.

An ad hoc women's committee gave a similar presentation last year after two rapes occurred on campus, according to Pat Crosson, director of Psychological Services. "Few students attended the presentation," Crosson said.

"As a result of the rapes, Dean of Students James Roemer published a paper on the procedures to be followed when a rape occurs. Roemer also promised that this year a public program on rape would be presented, followed by video films which would be made available to the dorms to stimulate discussion.

"Roemer asked us to develop a public rape awareness program and carry it through to the dorms," Crosson said. "We would like to sponsor small group discussions in the residence halls about relationship problems. The topics could run the gamut from dating difficulties to rape.

"Our culture has recently become very violent, and the overly 'macho' image of masculinity has disturbed the delicate balance of what is permissible in personal relationships."

Rybicki, who coordinated the presentation, noted that he believes that Thursday's program will spur student interest in the rape issue. "We're hoping for a good turnout of girls, hall staffs, and concerned males. After the program, pamphlets will be delivered to all female students."

Crosson noted the importance of the rector's role following a sexual assault. "It is assumed that following an attack the girl will tell her rector and the rector would contact security and accompany the girl to the hospital as a part of the rector's pastoral concern," Crosson said. "After leaving the hospital the girl would return home and discuss with the rector whether she desires to share the incident with any other hall residents. The rector would also counsel the girl to seek follow-up care with Psychological Services."

"We're hoping that several hundred students attend the presentation," Crosson said. "We can't realistically estimate how many will attend. Students typically ignore the rape issue because they think that it can't happen to them. Whatever the turnout, we will have met our obligation to inform."

Belles prepare for St. Francis

by Skip Desjardin
Sports Writer

Coach Erin Murphy's St. Mary's volleyball team has a timely break this week. "We've finally got a chance to get in four straight days of practice before a tournament," said Murphy. "We will need it, too, because this tournament is going to be a tough one."

The stiff competition that the coach and her team are preparing for gets underway Friday afternoon at the College of St. Francis in Joliet, Illinois. The Belles will go against four tough Division II clubs, Elmhurst, Illinois Central, Chicago State, and Notre Dame.

The going will be rough, but Murphy sees some definite advantages for her team.

I like playing in tournament situations. It gives me a chance to vary my line-up, and gives my players some game experience at new positions. Playing Division II teams won't be easy, but it will get us into good shape for the state tournament that's coming up in a couple of weeks."

There was good news and bad news for the team last weekend as they played host to Indiana State and Hanover College at the Angela Athletic Facility. The Indiana State team displayed some great shots and a deft touch to defeat St. Mary's 15-5 and 15-6.

The Belles rebounded, however, against Hanover. Earlier in the day, Hanover had beaten Indiana State, but they had no such luck against the Belles.

"Our co-captain, Terri Walters, was terrific from behind the serving line for us," said Murphy. "She continually found the opponents weak spots, and rolled up a lot of points for us."

Walters had a lot of help up front in those games, as the Belles won 15-6 and 15-5. Offensively, Ellen Hoyer dominated the net. "She hit a very high percentage of her spike shots, which made the Hanover girls a little wary of going up to the net against her," said Murphy.

St. Mary's Rosie Whalen had none of those fears herself, blocking several Hanover spike attempts, and turning in a fine defensive performance.

"We have a couple of weeks, and a few tough tournaments coming up before the state tourney starts," Murphy said. "I'm very confident that by that time we will be playing the best ball that we are capable of. I think that we are going to peak at just the right time."

A good indication of just what the Belles' capabilities are will be their play in the big tournament Friday in Joliet. "We play Division III, but I think that the game experience against the big Division II schools will help us. I also think that we are going to surprise a few people with how well we play."

Tim Andree will be out of action for the Notre Dame basketball team approximately six to eight weeks. The sophomore center suffers from a torn tendon in his left ankle. Joe Kliene, a 6-8 freshman, will fill-in for the injured Andree. [photo by John Macor]. -

SMC hockey team faces N.D. Friday with 'shuttle offense'

by Brian Beglane
Sports Writer

Out with the old and in with the new. That's the attitude the St. Mary's field hockey team takes into this Friday's "Shuttle Series" matchup against arch-rival Notre Dame, held on Cartier Field at 5:30 p.m.

The Belles bring a 2-5 record into the contest against the Irish, and that has led coach Marcee Wiese to inaugurate some changes for this game.

"We have changed our whole strategy both offensively and defensively," explained Wiese. "The girls have been working very hard this week and we hope for it to pay off."

Wiese declined to say exactly where the changes will take place — that's for Notre Dame to find out this weekend.

"The girls are obviously very excited about this game," continued Wiese. "Yet it's also quite a change. St. Mary's students normally root for Notre Dame in every sport, but now the feeling is one of competition. It can be hard to have to change your loyalties in such an instance — it's definitely a unique experience."

St. Mary's dropped its record last Saturday with a 3-0 loss at Marion College. The Belles were still fighting a series of injuries at the time, but that situation has cleared up. Now it's a question of finding some consistency on offense.

"We had intermittent control of the game against Marion," said Wiese. "We went into the game cold and their first two goals came in a flurry (all three came in the first half). That was unsettling."

"Now we are back to normal with no injuries. That certainly has to help."

Senior captain Beth Welsh leads the Belles offense into the contest against the 7-2 Irish. Back from the ranks of the injured, however, are freshman forward Karen Korowicki and halfback Nancy Lorenzini. Goalie Monique Fedor, who missed Saturday's game at Marion, also should be back in action.

last three Houston batters in order after walking leadoff man Luis Pujols in the ninth.

Carlton, carrying Cy Young credentials that include 24 regular-season victories and a major league-leading 286 strike-outs, was shaky early in the game.

Houston left two runners on base in each of the first two innings and then nicked Carlton for a run in the third.

With one out, Jose Cruz lined a single off Carlton's glove. The ball was hit so hard it rolled almost all the way to first base. Cesar Cedeño followed with a single to center, moving Cruz to second.

After Art Howe flied out, Gary Woods drilled a 2-2 pitch off second baseman Manny Trillo's glove, scoring Cruz. It was the second hit of the game for Woods, who spent the 1980 season in the Pacific Coast League and had played just 18 games for the Astros after being purchased from Tucson on Aug. 30.

Armed with the lead, Forsch was brilliant. He allowed a lead-off single to Pete Rose in the third, but catcher Pujols called for a pitchout on the next pitch and gunned Rose out on an attempted steal.

The next eight Philadelphia hitters went down in order as Forsch used the entire strike zone. He pitched in, out, up and down and had the Phillies clearly off balance.

Phillies blast Astros, 3-1

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Greg Luzinski, battling a near season-long slump, hammered a two-run homer that carried the Philadelphia Phillies to a 3-1 victory over Houston in Tuesday night's opening game of the 1980 National League Championship series.

Luzinski's sixth-inning shot off Ken Forsch erased a 1-0 Astro lead and set off fireworks over Veterans' Stadium as a playoff record crowd of 65,277 howled.

The second game in the best-of-five series will be played Wednesday night in Philadelphia.

Forsch had been locked in a tight duel with Steve Carlton, ace of the Phillies' staff, but after Luzinski's homer gave Philadelphia the lead, it fell to relief ace Tug McGraw to nail down the victory.

Carlton struggled through the Astros' seventh, allowing two hits. A neat pickoff throw by catcher Bob Boone short-circuted the Houston rally and then, in the bottom of the seventh Phillies Manager Dallas Green lifted his top starter for a pinch-hitter.

It was a bold move that paid off when Greg Gross stroked an RBI single to left, giving Philadelphia a 3-1 lead.

The rest was up to McGraw, and the veteran left-hander preserved the victory, retiring the

by Bill Marquard

BORN TO RUN — Sophomore speedster Phil Carter sprinted to second place in national rushing rankings following his 254-yard outburst vs. Michigan State. Carter's 166.3-yard average per game is only .2 yards short of Nebraska running back Jarvis Redwine.

Having become only the fourth player in Notre Dame history to gain 100 or more yards in three straight games, Carter will be gunning for the unprecedented Irish feat of gaining over 100 yards in four straight affairs when the Irish tackle Miami on Saturday.

HEADIN' STRAIGHT INTO THE STORM — Carter may have more than just his work cut out for him when he and his Irish teammates face the Hurricanes this weekend. Miami boasts the stingiest rushing defense in the land, allowing a total of 62 yards on the ground in four games thus far for a 15.5 yards-per-game mean. The miserly Hurricane defense set a school record three weeks ago, holding Florida A&M to minus 40 yards rushing.

The Irish will also be matching their 24th-rated scoring offense (28.7 ppg) against Miami's sixth-ranked scoring defense (6.5 ppg), a defense which has allowed an average of only 176.7 yards per battle on the ground and in the air.

GETTING HIS KICKS — Notre Dame's resident hero-laureate, Harry Oliver, sits atop the national heap of field goal kickers. Oliver is tied for first in the NCAA with 2.0 field goals per game. Since his company at the top is Clemson's Obed Ariri and Ohio State's Vlade Janakiebski, Oliver is indisputably the top American.

Likewise, the junior kicker is ranked 18th among the nation's Division IA scorers with an 8.7 ppg mark.

MEGA-MILESTONES — Notre Dame's potent offensive display against Michigan State was one of their most productive in recent years. Their 71 rushing attempts were the highest for an Irish squad in 67 games since Notre Dame carried the ball 83 times en route to a 48-0 win over Army in 1974. Notre Dame's 405 yards on the ground were the most since the Irish ground out 545 in that same Army game.

Notre Dame's 91 total offensive plays were the most since the Irish snapped the ball 93 times vs. Air Force in 1978, and their 30 first downs matched the stick-advancing total in the same Air Force clash.

A win against Miami would mark the best start for any Irish football team since the 1973 National Champions went undefeated.

JUSTICE PREVAILS — Coach Rich Hunter and his Irish soccer team had the last laugh in Friday's game at Michigan State. Hunter lodged a formal protest of the Spartans 4-1 victory after it seemed obvious to him and the rest of the team that the officials were anything but objective. The stats backed up Hunter's contention (along with most observers), as the Irish were awarded eight yellow cards and two red cards while MSU did not receive one. The Spartans were also granted two penalty kicks for Notre Dame's "questionable" behavior.

Yet the really questionable behavior belonged to the officiating crew, and they have finally been tagged with a few yellow cards of their own. Since last Friday's game was the game of the week in this region of the NCAA, an official observer was present in the stands. Acknowledging the outrageously one-sided officiating of the referees, the NCAA upheld Hunter's protest at the recommendation of their official observer and that loss has been wiped off the Irish slate, leaving their record at 9-2 heading into this afternoon's contest against Bethel.

Having that loss stricken from the record is especially important for Notre Dame's playoff hopes, since the Irish were seventh-ranked and the Spartans eighth in the region heading into the contest. Now that the loss has been erased, the Irish stand in good shape of receiving a berth in the NCAA playoffs, pending the outcome of their games with six-rated Miami and ninth-ranked Bowling Green within the week.

Incidentally, the NCAA had had three previous protests concerning that same officiating squad at Michigan State, but this was the first instance where an NCAA observer was present.

It's enough to restore your faith in the flag, Mom, apple pie and Bruce Springsteen.

IT'S THAT TIME OF YEAR — As if the snow in East Lansing last weekend were not enough, there is another reminder that winter is just around the corner. Varsity basketball practice for both men and women officially opens next Wednesday, October 15th, with media picture day slated for Tuesday. Digger Phelps' squad has already been finalized and Mary DiStanislao's team will be ready as of that date.

The Irish men's team will be without the services of Tim Andree for the next six to eight weeks. The sophomore center partially tore tendons in his left ankle jogging around the lakes last week and should be in a cast for the better part of two months.

That should give Irish fans a chance to see highly-touted rookie center Joe Kleine, a 6-11 behemoth from Slater, Mo.

Hosinski energizes St. Mary's

by Maureen Heraty
Sports Writer

According to the physics department, energy equals MC squared.

According to the St. Mary's athletic department, energy equals Mary Beth Hosinski, a junior on the Belle volleyball team.

Hosinski, an accounting major, manages to squeeze classes, studying, practice, and matches, not to mention sleep and meals, into the 168 hours allotted to each week. Subtracting the hours spent on the basic activities which make up St. Mary's student life leaves a limited amount of time for other activities. By cutting a couple of minutes here and there, keeping more than a few late nights, and never stopping to take a breath, Hosinski manages to fit volleyball into her schedule.

Why submit oneself to such a hectic life?

"I just love it," says Hosinski.

A true sports junkie, Hosinski boasts a long history of athletic involvement. She started playing softball at age eight or nine and has committed herself to some kind of sport each year ever since.

Hosinski played volleyball for four years in her high school, Mishawaka Marion. She admits, however, that she never became hooked until she started playing for St. Mary's.

"I found that it is a good source of learning how to get along with others, a way to travel and a way to meet people," she explains.

Last year Hosinski earned the Most Valuable Player Award for St. Mary's softball team. This summer she played on a semi-pro softball team while competing at the same time on a Junior Olympics volleyball squad.

"I saw how men play, which is a different style than women's volleyball," says Hosinski when reflecting on her summer experiences, "and I played with the best area players. I got used to playing at a high caliber and I built up my endurance."

Endurance?

Hosinski plays either softball or volleyball year-round. From September until January she plays on the Belle varsity volleyball team and from January to May she participates in club volleyball with the Blue Wave.

"Everybody is so positive," says Hosinski of this year's Belle volleyball squad. "The team is one of the few teams I've been on that is so open in its attitude. They'll be the first to say you did well, but nobody is afraid to criticize anybody else either."

In Hosinski's opinion, the team owes its enthusiasm, closeness and overall skill to the efforts of its coach of two years, Erin Murphy. Murphy also serves as Saint Mary's assistant athletic director.

"Erin loves playing and she can teach us a lot," says Hosinski. "Only a few years ago, she was in college, too, playing on a nationally competitive team."

"She has had so many honors in volleyball, I can't remember them all."

Just as Hosinski seems to be Murphy's number-one fan, Murphy admires her junior superstar.

"She is one of our key setters and a consistent player, very dependable," says Murphy. "We worked on setting all summer so that by September Mary Beth was ready to step into the job and she has proved herself overwhelmingly capable."

"I'm a perfectionist," declares Hosinski. "I'll pout, if I think I've let myself down. Maybe I should be a little cockier."

Though she herself may not appreciate her talent, other team members recognize it, according to Murphy. "I see some of the other girls asking her advice and 'did I do right?' quite often."

Although St. Mary's volleyball team holds a current record of 4-4, Hosinski believes the standings do not reflect the team's capabilities.

"We are a young team, but a strong team. Our freshmen add a lot to the team. We complement each other pretty well."

"Give us two weeks and we'll blow everyone away!"

Despite the time she devotes to volleyball, Hosinski does not foresee volleyball as a large part of her life after college.

"Volleyball is not my life," she stresses. "My first priority is to become a CPA. Whether I can play volleyball or softball depends on whether I can fit them into my work and my home life."

Hosinski will undoubtedly find a way to play. You can't talk about Mary Beth Hosinski without saying that she is a competitor.

In sports you need someone willing to fight, someone willing to give 100 percent all the time — Mary Beth Hosinski is that type of person.

And she will fight with every ounce of energy she can muster. Energy is her middle name.
