'Moose' retires

by Paul Mullaney
Editor-in-Chief

Edward W. (Moose) Krause yesterday announced his resignation as Notre Dame's athletic director, effective January 1.

Announcing his decision after yesterday's Quarterback Club luncheon at the ACC, Krause said that Executive Vice-President Fr. Edmund P. Joyce "has appointed me Athletic Director Emeritus. I will act as Athletic Director until January 1, and after that I will be Emeritus."

Krause, 67 years old and Notre Dame athletic director for 31 years, indicated that there was no specific reason for making the announcement at this time.

"I've been thinking about this for over three years now," Krause said. "There's nothing unusual about the timing."

The Observer learned yesterday, however, that the announcement was prompted by news leaks naming current Virginia Athletic Director Gene Corrigan as Krause's replacement.

Joyce, who will appoint the new athletic director, was unavailable for comment yesterday.

Corrigan, reached yesterday in his Charlottesville, Va., office, refused comment on the situation.

The Observer learned that Corrigan visited Notre Dame Tuesday of this past week. He also was in attendance at Notre Dame's season-opening victory over Purdue.

Corrigan, a 53-year-old graduate of Duke University, has served as Virginia's athletic director since 1971.

Krause indicated that "at this time I have no idea who the new man will be. The advice I would have is that he better be a business man. In the sports world at the collegiate level, they're going to have to think about ways to bring in revenue to support expanding programs. Many schools are in financial trouble right now."

Rumors regarding Krause's retirement have been circulating for a number of years. "I really wanted to retire three years ago," Krause said. "I've been here as athletic director since 1949. It's been a long career, and I felt it was time for me to step out and let a younger fellow step in to take my job."

"I've been worried about my wife (Elizabeth) and her health. That's something I've been worried about for a long time. Now I feel I'll be able to do more things for my lady — have a little time for her."

Krause indicated that he will remain somewhat active as athletic director emeritus.

"I think I'll be a consultant of sorts," he said. "In other words, I'm not leaving entirely. I won't just start fishing or playing golf all the time, although I will take time for those sports that I'm interested in."

"In fact, right now we're talk-

Reaches $167 million

Campaign surges past goal

By Laura Larimore
Senior Staff Reporter

The Campaign for Notre Dame, the University's most recent development program, has already raised $167,500,000, well over the original projection of $130,000,000. The campaign will continue through the month of December.

The program, whose initial stages began in January, 1976, was primarily an effort to increase Notre Dame's endowment. All facets of the University, however, were included in a list of campaign priorities which was drawn from the recommendations of the Committee on University Priorities, reported in 1973.

According to James W. Frick, vice-president for public relations and development, donors selected areas that had particular appeal to them from these guidelines. The area most popular with the donors was that of student financial assistance, he added.

Each gift is payable over a five-year period and each includes a "back-out" clause to provide for "unexpected economic circumstances." Frick noted that the loss incurred through this clause averages about 2.9 percent.

The Campaign, chaired by Trustees John T. Ryan of Pittsburgh and Ernestine Carmichael Raclin of South Bend, is divided into four segments: leadership, corporations and foundations, special gifts, and the national campaign.

The leadership division aimed its appeal at people with a gift potential of over $100,000. In a series of 20 weekends over an 18-month period, 102 couples were flown to the campus for an intensive exposure to the Notre Dame community. Most of the couples had some affiliation with the University as trustees, parents, alumni, etc. A University representative followed up the campus weekend by a personal visit to their homes.

"People give to institutions that they perceive as reinforcing their own values," Frick said. He added that $50 million was received from the 96 couples who accepted the donation invitation.

The second phase of the Campaign was directed toward national corporations and foundations, primarily to obtain support for academic programs. The John and Helen Kellogg Foundation of Chicago, for example, donated $10 million earmarked for government and political science.

The special gifts program, third segment of the Campaign, was held in 80 to 85 cities nationwide.

The Campaign is now in the fourth and final stage, the national campaign, which is aimed at alumni and parents. A network of 4,000 volunteers organized in every major U.S. city to visit fellow alumni to solicit donations. Of the living

SATURDAY FOCUS

Notre Dame alumni, (excluding religious and foreign alumni) 84.8 percent have made gifts and commitments totalling $65 million. The average alumni gift is $1998.

"Especially remarkable is the fact that, of these alumni, 80 percent have degrees that were signed by Fr. Hesburgh," Frick remarked.

As a comparison, alumni gifts in previous ND fundraising efforts have been significantly less. In the 1960-1963 Challenge I Campaign, the average donation was $345. This increased to $431 for the 1963-1966 Challenge II and then to $1036 for the 1966-1972 Summa campaign.

Overall, the Campaign received more than 30 gifts, each in excess of $1 million. Some of the largest single contributors included Frank Pasquerilla of Johnstown, Penn., who gave $7 million to be used in new dormitory construction, and Henry Knott of

Pope stirs feminists' anger

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II has whipped up a storm by bidding men not to look lustfully at women, not even their wives.

Italian feminists and writers are calling him a male chauvinist because of his latest declaration on sex.

"Every day he (the pope) is taking a step backward to the Dark Ages," author Lucia Druli Dembi told the Rome daily Il Messaggero. "This pope is turning the Catholic faith into a punitive faith," said another writer, Edith Bruck.

At his weekly general audience Wednesday, the Polish-born pontiff offered a sweeping analysis of Christ's words on adultery, "lustful desires and adultery committed in one's heart."

He said: "adultery in your heart is committed not only when you look with concupiscence (strong or excessive sexual desire) at a woman who is not your wife, but also if you look in the same manner at your wife."

"The husband must not use his wife, her femininity, to fulfill his instinctive desire," the pope said. "Concupiscence... diminishes the richness of the perennial attraction of persons for interpersonal communion. Through such a reduction, the other person becomes the mere object for satisfying a sexual need and touches the dignity of the person (wife)."

Anna Eminente, a spokeswoman for a feminist group called "Universal Womanhood," said John Paul's remarks confirm the pope is a "male chauvinist." "He talks about looking at women with lustful desires but not a word about women doing the same," she said.

Many Italian newspapers on Friday carried critical analyses of the papal statement under such headlines as "The Sin of Looking" and "Do Not Desire Your Wife."

Marco Politi, an Il Messaggero's religion writer, said the pontiff is pushing "a medieval point of view which we thought had disappeared after the Second Vatican Council (1962/65)."

But a Vatican-based U.S. prelate defended John Paul's view, calling it "a legitimate interpretation which can be justified in the sense that you shouldn't treat a person as an object."

"If anything, his statement should be seen as his support for women's rights," said the prelate, who asked not to be identified. "The pope did not say the wives should wear chastity belts or anything like that."

Pia Candidas, a feminist, said the pope emphasizes the negative over the positive "all the time."

"He's against the ordination of women as priests, against abortion, against contraception and now he says he is for woman's dignity. I assure you we can take care of ourselves on this one," she said.

For nearly a year, Pope John Paul has used the Wednesday audiences to deliver mini-sermons on the virtues of marital fidelity, fruitful love and other problems related to marriage.

Iranian jets pounded three Iraqi cities Friday in apparent retaliation for Iraq's use of missiles and Libya became the first Arab country to support non-Arab Iran in the war. Iranian jets hit Kirkuk, Mosul and Suleimanieh in northern Iraq and there were three air raid alerts in the Iraqi capital of Baghdad, but no planes were sighted. Iran claimed that Iraqi planes bombed Iran's Red Crescent headquarters in Abadan. Red Crescent is the Moslem equivalent of the Red Cross. With many diplomatic observers viewing the war as a political and military stalemate, Libyan leader Col. Moammar Khadafy declared support for Iran and said it was an "Islamic duty" for other Arab countries to do the same. There were reports that Libya had organized an airlift to supply Iran with arms and ammunition. Khadafy's move was seen as part of his effort to foster revolution wherever he can, including helping Iran at the expense of other Arab states in the Mideast. Although Iran is Moslem, Iranians are Persians and not Arabs. Libya's official news agency JANA quoted Khadafy as adopting the Iranian thesis that the United States was behind Iraq's invasion of Iran. "We have resolved to confront America in the Arab world," he was quoted as saying. — AP

State Department officials have been in telephone contact in recent days with L. Bruce Laingen, one of the 52 American hostages in Iran. Department spokesman John Trattner said the latest contact occurred earlier this week but he refused further comment. Laingen, the U.S. deputy chief of mission in Iran, was in the Iranian Foreign Ministry last November when the American embassy was overrun by Iranian militants. Trattner declined to say yesterday whether Laingen is still at the Foreign Ministry or whether the department has been in regular contact with him. — AP

An earthquake devastated

the city of Al Asnam and its surrounding rural areas yesterday and the government reported "thousands of victims." The first tremor was far stronger than a quake that killed 1,657 people in the same city 26 years ago. The quake struck the city, 150 miles west of Algiers, at 8:30 a.m. EDT and was followed by a second tremor two hours later lasting more than a minute. Al Asnam has 125,000 inhabitants. The government mobilized army, air force, police and civil defense units for an emergency rescue operation to help the injured and homeless and to search for bodies in ruined buildings. The government gave no precise number of killed and injured, but reported whole apartment buildings had collapsed. Old and prefabricated buildings on the outskirts of the city also shattered and fell, causing more casualties, the officials said. — AP

Two Americans

and a Frenchman won the 1980 Nobel Prize in Medicine yesterday for discoveries that have led to a better understanding of the way the human body accepts organ transplants and combats cancer and other diseases. The Royal Caroline Institute of Medicine cited 76-year-old George D. Snell of Bar Harbor, Maine; 59-year-old Harvard professor Baruj Benacerraf and 63-year-old French blood specialist Jean Dausset, for their work on genetically determined structures on the cell surface which regulate immunological reactions. The three scientists, who worked independently but had close and friendly exchanges on their research, share the $212,000 prize money equally. — AP

Almost seven of every ten students attending the University of Notre Dame last year received some form of financial assistance. More than $22 million was divided among some 6,000 students in scholarships, grants-in-aids, loans, jobs, fellowships and assistantships, according to the campus office of financial aid. The report prepared by Joseph A. Russo noted a 30 percent increase in dollars administered over 1978-1979 and a 33 percent increase in number of awards. Half of the $16 million awarded to 4,800 undergraduates was in the form of a gift — scholarship or grant — while 40 percent was in loans and 10 percent in part-time work. The average award was $3,400 per student. The remaining $6 million was divided among 1,250 advanced students for an average award of approximately $5,000. — The Observer

Iran, seeking to broaden its international support in the Persian Gulf war, has decided to take its case against Iraq to the U.N. Security Council, an Iranian special envoy disclosed yesterday. Ali Shams Ardakani said he would initiate Iran's complaint of aggression against Iraq, but expected to be reinforced by a delegation from Tehran. "Iran will definitely go to the Security Council," Ardakani told The Associated Press as he prepared to address the 35th session of the U.N. General Assembly. Jamal Shemirani, Iran's acting chief delegate to the United Nations, forecast Thursday that Iran would insist on restricting any Security Council debate to his country's conflict with Iraq and would refuse to discuss the 52 American hostages held by militants in Iran since Nov. 4. Iran has ignored council appeals to free the hostages. — AP

A bold proposal...

There's a problem at Notre Dame with social life.

Yea, Yea, you've heard that so many times before you're sick of it. So am I — mostly because there's lots of complaining, but not much action. Well, here's an idea that's been brewing in my head for two years — and it might just turn out to be a workable solution to the nagging social problem.

The most ironic thing about my idea is this: It's already in place, it's implementation would be cost-efficient, and the structure itself already has a long history of student use.

I'm talking about the conversion of the Old Fieldhouse into a first-class student center.

I admit it's a bold proposal, and at first it seemed improbable to me, too, but after taking a serious and critical look at the structure itself and the needs of the student body, I think the Old Fieldhouse might be just the answer.

Looking out the third floor window here at The Observer office down at the Fieldhouse, three things immediately come to mind — it's enormous size, its central location on campus, and its rich tradition. The first two factors would be ingredients of a good student center; the third would make for a great one.

With the help of Notre Dame architecture major Deirdre Murphy, I've come up with some rough ideas about the possible uses of the building and a set of very tentative floor plan possibilities.

Let me preface any discussion with a few points: First, the Fieldhouse appears, despite its outside condition, to still be structurally sound. Second, I'd like to stress that these plans aren't the wild dreams of a wide-eyed innocent — I have a good knowledge of architecture, and a critical eye for costs. Third, recycling of old buildings is becoming more popular each day because of the skyrocketing costs of building new structures from the ground up.

Now let's talk business. A look at the drawing to the right will reveal some of the uses I have in mind. Basically the Fieldhouse could accommodate all the activities now housed in the LaFortune Student Center — plus much more, including bowling alleys, a 350-500 seat movie theatre, a full-size nightclub/coffeehouse, and space for basketball, volleyball, or tennis courts.

A pipe dream? No. To my way of thinking, this scheme could be brought off for a ballpark figure of $2.5 million — a pricetag no student center built from the ground up could ever hope to match. (By comparison, each of the new dorms will cost over $3 million when finished.) The key is to retain as much of the integrity of the Old Fieldhouse as possible. For example two sections of the old bleachers would be preserved — one for the movie theatre, and one for atmosphere adjacent to the multi-purpose area. The nightclub/coffeehouse would be located in the labyrinthine passageways and rooms under the north bleachers, and retain the subterranean character for atmosphere.

Approximately 3,000 square feet are available for a Huddle-style restaurant in the front of the structure, and above that, an equal space in the old boxing arena could house a large study lounge.

Five or six bowling lanes could be placed in the area now occupied by the old south bleachers. A large gameroom would also be located there.

Up to three floors of office space could be installed in the area between the rear of the proposed theatre and the site of the old basketball

John
McGrath
Production Manager

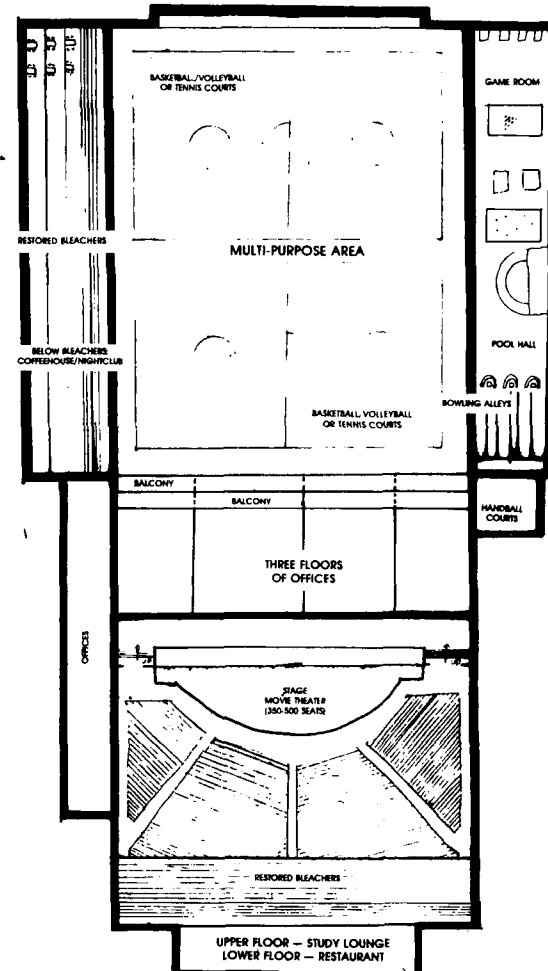

floor. These offices would feature balconies overlooking the east end of the Fieldhouse and would house student activities and publications.

On the site of the old basketball court itself, all-purpose flooring would be installed to provide for a large area big enough to accommodate basketball, volleyball or tennis courts interchangeably.

What about LaFortune? Well, it too could be economically converted to serve a new purpose. Plans are being considered for a new faculty office building on campus. Why not use LaFortune for that purpose? Like the Fieldhouse, it is convenient to the heart of the campus, and a prime candidate for conversion.

Well, there it is — finally a feasible, concrete response to the social dilemma. For an entirely reasonable cost, the University could provide one of the nation's best student centers, and at the same time avoid the destruction of a historic campus landmark. The potential of the Old Fieldhouse to dramatically improve the social situation on campus is there. Let's not let it slip away with the wrecker's ball.

SMC Alumnae Board revises group bylaws

by Mary J. Beckman and
Margie Brassil

The Saint Mary's Alumnae Board met this weekend and approved a revision of their bylaws. They also discussed the development of an Alumni Placement Service and the possibilities for raising funds for the college.

The board consists of twelve members who meet twice a year and are elected by the Alumnae Association at large for three year terms. With the revision of the by-laws the board will be increased to 18 to allow for a larger representation as the number of alumnae grow.

The purpose of the board is to coordinate alumnae throughout the country. "Each board member is a liaison to a club. We have sixty-some clubs throughout the U.S.," explained president of the board Maryjeanne Ryan Burke.

"Alumnae are the largest support system of the college," she said. "They are trying to work on all levels to support the college, from sending students to the school, clubs sending scholarship money to the school, continuing education from the college to the alumnae, for instance."

"The Alumnae Board has no control over the workings of the college," said Burke, "but the president of the Alumnae Association is on the Board of Regents and since the Regents are the governing board of the college, we do have some input."

The board will also take a more active role in recruitment for Saint Mary's. They will encourage their club members to attend college nights sponsored by their local high schools in order to represent Saint Mary's.

The revisions made on the by-laws must still be approved by The Board of Regents this fall, but Mary Cucchi Depman, vice president of the board, seemed confident that they would gain approval.

Members of the board include: President Maryeane Ryan ('56) Vice-president Mary Cucchi Depman ('50), Paula Lawton Bevington ('58), Marybeth McGowan Crossin ('60), Carol Senda Damaso ('66), Donna Decrane Panzica ('76), Carol Wangberg Haines ('73), Betty Coston Ling ('39), Sister Florentine Pearson, C.S.C. ('28), Judith Ravernhorst Mahoney ('79), Alana Moynahan Rosshirt ('55), and Elizabeth Kiley Wilson ('54).

Lawyer discusses ABSCAM role

by Eileen Murphy

William Geoghehan, former Chief Counsel to the House Ethics Committee, shared his insights into the legal and political intricacies of congressional ethics with an attentive audience Friday at the Notre Dame Law School.

Geoghehan cited several examples to illustrate situations where Congress has asserted its constitutional power to punish violation of ethics by its members, including the investigations concerning Adam Clayton Powell, Bob Sikes and Charles Diggs. The counselor pointed out, "Human imperfection in that body is nothing new;" sanctions for ethics violations can be found as early as the beginning of the 1800s.

During the Abscam scandal, one of the major topics discussed in the lecture, Geoghehan served an important role in the case against Charles Diggs — who is now serving sentence in a federal penitentiary after resigning from his position in the House.

He spoke about the expulsion of Ozzie Myers, another Abscam victim who is the first member of the House to be expelled since the time of the Civil War, and projected that since it is "quite possible that he will be re-elected", it is also possible that he will be re-expelled when he tries to claim his seat on November 12.

With respect to the integrity of the 96th Congress, Geoghehan said that it was a "rather sad Congress with a large percentage of people with troubles," referring to problems with Abscam and alcoholism.

And, citing the case of Senator Joseph McCarthy as an example, Geoghehan attempted to underline the grave nature of any expulsion proceeding and described it as "a very severe penalty for any member to undergo which more often than not terminates his career and may endanger his health as well."

Geoghehan is well at home in the political arena. In 1961, he worked with Attorney General Robert Kennedy and was also involved in civil rights legislation.

Since resigning his post, he has been called back to public service on numerous occasions, most notably for congressional investigations.

The White Center for Law and Public Policy sponsored the lunch-time lecture and will continue its series next week with speaker Mark Shields, a graduate of Notre Dame and one of the foremost political strategists in the nation who also writes a daily column for The Washington Post.

All three presidential candidates line up in support of Social Security system

by the Associated Press

Jimmy Carter, Ronald Reagan and John B. Anderson took turns Friday boasting who could do most to protect the monthly Social Security check relied on by millions of elderly Americans.

While the three candidates discussed the same issue on the same day, apparently by coincidence, Carter also appeared to break his own promise to avoid personal attacks on Reagan. The GOP's candidate's election "would be a bad thing for our country," the president declared in Florida.

On retirement benefits, Carter said in a state with millions of retirees, "We have kept Social Security sound and it's going to stay sound as long as you have a Democrat in the White House."

Reagan, working the same state, declared, "It is Mr. Carter who has endangered the economic security of senior citizens."

And Anderson, in New York, said the Social Security retirement age should be raised gradually from 65 to 68 to safeguard the stability of the system. He advocated changes to reduce the cost of living adjustment applied to benefits to retirees.

Later, in a television interview, he said Reagan's opposition to the SALT II arms treaty with the Soviet Union and other positions "indicate to me that he would not be a good president or a good man to trust with the affairs of this nation in the future."

Carter said that on at least four occasions in the past, Reagan has advocated making Social Security voluntary, a step that he said would "cripple and destroy" the system.

But Reagan, who says he never advocated a voluntary federal pension system, criticized Carter for a 1979 advisory commission that advocated making Social Security benefits subject to taxation. "I would veto any attempt to tax Social Security benefits," he said.

Carter administration officials disavowed that 1979 commission report, and its recommendations were never implemented.

Reagan proposed elimination of the current $5,000 annual earnings limitation on those receiving Social Security benefits. He said the limitation "forces retirees to give up one dollar in benefits for every two dollars they earn above $5,000."

'...Reagan's election would be a bad thing for our country...'

If the changes aren't made, he said, the Social Security system will face worsening financial pressure as the size of the work force decreases in relation to the number of retirees receiving benefits.

The president gave a demonstration in the powers of incumbency, using his Florida campaign stop to sign legislation distributing $100 million to that state and others for money it spent on Cuban refugees.

...Campaign

Baltimore, Md., who donated $4 million.

The largest segment of the endowment portion of the Campaign, $32 million, has been designated for chaired professorships. Only 14 chairs are filled at present; the Campaign funds provide for 38 to 40 individual chairs in departments throughout the University.

Other parts of the endowment contributions will be used to upgrade the Memorial Library collections and for student financial aid, campus ministry and a variety of other programs.

The permanent endowment of the University will stand at $250-300 million after the Campaign, placing it 13th to 15th in the nation.

At present, Notre Dame ranks 18th nationally in amount of permanent endowment. It is behind Harvard, Yale, Columbia, Cornell, Rice, Northwestern and Princeton, to name a few.

The physical facilities component of the Campaign funds has been used for the Fitzpatrick Hall of Engineering, the Stepan Chemical Research Building, the Snite Art Gallery, the O'Hara-Grace graduate residence and the two new women's residence halls. In addition, all residence halls, the Administration Building and Washington Hall are slated for extensive renovations.

A new classroom-faculty office building is also being planned, Frick said. It would most probably be located north of the stadium and south of the library.

After 31 long years, Krause calls it quits

ing about a big drive for the Monogram men to get them more involved with the University. Speaking engagements will certainly be something that I'll consider."

A native of Chicago's Back of the Yards neighborhood, Krause played tackle on Notre Dame football teams of 1931, '32 and '33, and played in the first College All-Star football game.

He was equally known for his accomplishments as center on the Irish basketball squad. It has been said that the three-second lane was conceived as a way to control him. He was inducted into the National Basketball Hall of Fame in April of 1976.

Krause graduated cum laude with a degree in journalism in 1934. He then served in the capacities of basketball and football coaches at Saint Mary's College in Winona, Minn., and at Holy Cross.

He returned to Notre Dame in 1942 and served as an assistant on Frank Leahy's football staff and on George Keogan's basketball staff. A year later, he assumed the head basketball job due to Keogan's death. He served in that capacity for six seasons.

Krause was named assistant to athletic director Leahy in 1948, and was elevated to his current position a year later.

There's not quite anything like a good game of golf — even with a cigar in your mouth. Just ask Moose.

Krause was well known for his efforts on the basketball court and helped establish the three-second rule.

Above, Krause exits the ND charter in South Bend as the Irish return from beating Texas, 38-10, in the 1978 Cotton Bowl. Below, "Moose" chats with Bob Hope at halftime of a Notre Dame football game.

Is he really going to leave?

I've known since June that Moose Krause was planning to retire sometime before the end of this football season. It was no big secret. In fact, all you had to do was ask the right people and you could get a pretty straight answer. The only real questions were where, when, and how much will tickets for his testimonial be?

But yesterday, when the whole thing became "official" — when Moose himself spoke the magic words — it was no less shocking than it would have been had the story been kept under heavy wraps.

"I've made the decision to retire, effective January 1," he told a group of writers and photographers gathered in a conference room at the ACC.

"I've been thinking about this for over three years," he admitted. "I returned to Notre Dame in 1942 and I've been athletic director since '49. It's been a long career and I just feel it's time for me to step down and let a younger fellow take my job."

(We will now pause for a moment to let all of that sink in.)

Retire?

Step down??

Moose Krause??!!

Hold on a second. Moose Krause can't retire, or step down, or call it quits, or hang it up, or any such thing of the sort! I mean — he's part of the deal here, isn't he? You know... two lakes, the Golden Dome, football weekends and Moose Krause.

If you think Aunt Jemima's pancakes are bad without her syrup, try a Notre Dame halftime presentation without Moose Krause! After all, that's what this guy was made for.

Giving trophies (and getting them). Pep rallies and golf outings and all those alumni dinners where you're bound to hear a couple of his favorite stories — stories you've undoubtedly heard before. Stories you can't wait to hear again.

"Hey Moose! Tell the one about Timbuktu again! Please, Moose? Just one more time?"

And he'll wave his hand, shake his head, then tell the story one more time. Just like everyone knew he would. And everyone laughs. One more time. Maybe because it's funny...

Frank

Or maybe because it's Moose.

Hey, let's face it, the guy's a legend. A real, live, honest-to-goodness, living, breathing, cigar-smoking legend.

But don't tell him that.

"Oh, I don't think so," he laughed when, after reciting his personal personal list of Notre Dame legends — Rockne, Leahy, Parseghian — he was asked if Moose Krause just might not be the biggest legend of them all.

"It's just that a lot of people identify me with Notre Dame," he suggested. "Maybe it's because I've been here too damn long?"

Then again, maybe he's just being modest.

Or maybe he's just being Moose...

"Who retired?" asked the disinterested voice at ABC radio when I called to tell him the news.

"Notre Dame's athletic director? OK, thanks for — What?! Moose is retiring?!"

All of a sudden he was very interested. And he wanted all the details.

"So, he's gonna be athletic director emeritus, huh?" the guy asked me. "That means he'll be around a lot, right?"

"Right," I assured him.

"And he'll still go to football games and speak at banquets and stuff like that, right?"

"I guess so."

Then he paused.

"But it'll still be different," he said finally. "Moose Krause is retiring... somehow Notre Dame just won't be the same."

And as I hung up, I realized that, in these next few months, none of the words written or speeches given in his honor, will say it any better than that.

Moose Krause is retiring.

Somehow Notre Dame just won't be the same.

moment. But it could have only been a fleeting thought because in the next inning they seized the lead for good.

Tommy John retired the first two batters in the Royals' seventh but then Willie Wilson, who led the majors with 230 hits this season, rifled a double into the right field corner. Yankees Manager Dick Howser moved to the mound and motioned for Rich Gossage, whose 33 saves tied Quisenberry for the major league lead in games saved.

Gossage had not appeared in the first two games of the series, and he came in last night with a fastball clocked at 96 mph. Still, U.L. Washington hung in against the big right-hander and nudged an infield single behind second base. Wilson advanced to third on the hit that brought up Brett.

The Royals' slugger, who batted an amazing .390 this season and carried on a late-year flirtation with .400 that captivated the country, had been retired seven straight times by Yankee pitchers Thursday and last night after homering in the first game of this playoff series.

He wasted no time with Gossage, jumping on the first pitch, and sending it in a huge arc high and deep into the upper stands in right field. The three-run shot propelled Kansas City in front and emptied the Royals dugout to greet Brett as he finished his home run trot.

The Yankees didn't go down quietly, however. They mounted a major threat against Quisenberry in the eighth.

Bob Watson, who had three hits in the game, opened with a triple up the gap in left-center field. Then Jackson and Oscar Gamble drew walks from the submarining right-hander.

Now, with the bases loaded and none out, the Yankee Stadium crowd of 56,588 roared on every pitch as Quisenberry faced Rick Cerone. The Yankee catcher drilled a 1-1 pitch that seemed to be a sure base hit. But Washington, the Royals' shortstop, grabbed the liner and turned it into a rally-killing double play, trapping Jackson off second base.

Pinch-hitter Jim Spencer then rolled out, ending the inning.

us to see Blair handle himself out there. We won't decide who the starter will be until after we see what happens in practice this week."

The quarterback position is Miami's strong-suit as well. Sophomore Jim Kelly owns the respect of Irish secondary coach Jim Johnson as one of the top two quarterbacks on the Notre Dame schedule this year. That's pretty select company, considering number one is Purdue's Mark Herrmann.

Devine pinpoints a matchup in the trenches as a key one this afternoon. It will pit Notre Dame center John Scully against Miami's nose guard Jim Burt. "John will find out just how good he really is when he goes against Burt," said Devine. "The winner of that battle should be an all-American."

"John Scully will find out just how good he really is when he goes against Burt," said Devine.

Diamondmen nip Valpo, 2-1

Notre Dame's baseball team nipped Valparaiso University, 2-1, in the first game of a double-header and was tied, 3-3, in yesterday's second game before it was called for darkness on Valparaiso's field.

Sophomore Steve Whitmyer was the winning pitcher in the first game. The Irish had just three hits and committed two errors. Valparaiso also had three hits and two errors.

Notre Dame had banded out six hits in the second game before darkness had set in. Valparaiso had five hits. Both teams had committed two errors.

Kickers dump Purdue, 5-1

The Notre Dame soccer team improved its season record to 11-3 last night with an impressive 5-1 victory over intrastate rival Purdue on Cartier Field. The win was a crucial one for Coach Rich Hunter's squad, as it keeps its hopes alive for the fourth and final NCAA playoff spot from the Great Lakes Region. Rob Snyder and Ed O'Malley scored two goals apiece and Mario Manta added another to pace the Irish.

Irish hurting

Hurricanes bite into Oreo

by Michael Ortman
Associate Sports Editor

When the average Notre Dame football fan looked at the 1980 Irish schedule six weeks ago, the initial reaction was, "Hey, this looks like an Oreo cookie — two top-ten teams at the beginning and the end of the schedule and seven nobodies sandwiched in between."

Yet now it seems the completion of the schedule has changed somewhat as the 13th ranked Miami Hurricanes blow into South Bend this afternoon posing a serious threat to Notre Dame's unblemished 3-0 record.

Irish Coach Dan Devine can't understand why Miami of Florida isn't rated higher. "I can't understand it," Devine told the Chicago Football Writers on Tuesday. "They beat a good Florida State team, and Florida State beats Nebraska, but Miami is still ranked behind both of them."

This afternoon's battle promises to be one of the best of the five games scheduled for today around the country between two top-twenty teams. The seventh-ranked Irish, whose injury-depleted roster already looks like a hurricane blew through, will have to move the ball against the nation's best defense against the rush.

The stingy Hurricane defense has allowed just 15.7 yards per game on the ground in four games, and ranks third nationally in total defense (176.7 y.p.g.). "Our biggest single task (today) will be to nullify all the momentum Miami has built up the first month of the season," said Devine. "Their defense has been just tremendous so far, and they're off to a great start (4-0)."

"There's no question they'll be fired up this week, because they know a victory over Notre Dame is all they need to gain a little more national attention. We've got to do everything we can to prevent that from happening."

That will be no small order for the Irish, who will have six injured starters watching from the sidelines. Atop that list will be sophomore Phil Carter, the all-everything tailback after last week's brutal 254-yard, 40-carry performance at Michigan State. Carter sustained a severely bruised thigh in the fourth quarter of the victory over the Spartans.

Senior Jim Stone should start in his place, and junior Ty Barber will see action as the backup. Junior tailback Bernie Adell suffered a knee injury last Saturday and is questionable for this afternoon.

Tight end Dean Masztak, who suffered a serious ankle sprain last week, will be replaced by senior Nick Vehr. Sophomore Tom Thayer will definitely start in place of senior Tim Huffman at guard. Huffman could see some action but is still nursing the injured foot which has kept him out of action since August 16.

The injury list is long on the Irish defensive unit as well. Strong safety Steve Cichy has been ruled out for the remainder of the 1980 campaign because of a chipped vertebra in his upper back. Defensive tackle Don Kidd practiced only sparingly this week because of a knee injury.

Freshman Tim Marshall will definitely start in his place.

Starting cornerback Dave Duerson still is not at full strength following a sprained ankle suffered in the Michigan miracle three weeks ago. Freshman Stacey Toran started in his place last week and Devine said yesterday that he will again this afternoon. That brings the total of starting freshmen to three, with Marshall, Toran and punter Blair Kiel... which raises another intriguing question. Might Kiel get the starting nod at quarterback?

"There might be some more freshmen starting tomorrow," Devine hinted yesterday, "but I can't tell you at what position."

The 6-1, 200-pound rookie from Columbus, Ind., entered the game last Saturday late in the first half with the Irish trailing 9-3. Kiel and Carter got the offense moving as the Irish pulled out the 26-21 decision. Two weeks earlier, Kiel came into the Michigan game late to engineer the final scoring drive, capped off with Harry Oliver's 51-yard field goal as time expired.

Senior signal caller Mike Courey, the man Kiel has replaced on both occasions, agreed with Devine's move in the Michigan contest. "I'd have done the same thing if I were coaching," Courey said after that game. "We needed a stronger arm than mine in that particular situation."

So one must speculate that Kiel would get the nod today, since the Hurricanes are so tough to run against. The Irish must establish a solid passing game, especially with their top ground gainer, Carter, out of the lineup.

"Mike Courey had done a good job, but we just felt we needed to make the switch," said Devine. "Our players and coaches have confidence in all our quarterbacks, so it wasn't any surprise to

Yankees ousted

Brett sparks KC into series

NEW YORK (AP) — George Brett wrote another chapter in his fairy tale season last night, hammering a monstrous three-run homer that carried the Kansas City Royals into their first World Series with a 4-2 victory that completed a three-game playoff sweep over the New York Yankees.

The Royals ended a string of three playoff frustrations against the Yankees and became only the second expansion team to qualify for a shot at baseball's world championship. They will meet the winner of the Houston-Philadelphia National League playoff in the World Series, beginning Tuesday night.

Brett had been a member of the Royal teams that lost to New York in 1976, 1977 and 1978. Twice those playoffs went down to the ninth inning of the fifth game before the Yankees won and left Kansas City with the bitter defeats.

This time, the Royals got the jump on New York by sweeping the first two games at home to leave the Yankees on the edge of elimination as they returned home. Owner George Steinbrenner angrily pledged that his team would reverse the trend and win three straight at home.

A feat that has not been accomplished in league Championship Series history.

But Brett and the Royals put a stop to that.

New York stirred for the first time when it erased an early 1-0 Kansas City lead with two runs in the sixth in a rally triggered by a Reggie Jackson double.

Most of the damage came against Kansas City bullpen ace Dan Quisenberry, who had relieved starter Paul Splittorff after Jackson's two-base hit.

If the Royals were thinking about Steinbrenner's pledge, that would have been the

Morgan, Astros nip Phillies

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston second baseman Joe Morgan, the inspirational leader throughout the season, tripled off the right field wall in the 11th-inning and Denny Walling delivered a sacrifice fly, giving the Astros a 1-0 victory over the Philadelphia Phillies yesterday afternoon in the third game of the National League playoffs.

The dramatic triumph gave Houston a 2-1 lead in the best-of-five series and put them within one game of being in the first World Series in the team's 19-year history.

Morgan, given credit for keeping the Astros together this season, led off the 11th inning with a triple off loser Tug McGraw. Morgan, hobbled by a knee injury, then gave way to pinch runner Rafael Landestoy,

The run completed the second straight extra-inning playoff game and set a National League record for the most scoreless innings in playoff competition.

Following Morgan's triple, Philadelphia Manager Dallas Green elected to intentionally walk Jose Cruz and pinch hitter Art Howe in order to face the left-handed hitting Walling.

Joe Niekro, the hero of Houston's division-clinching playoff victory over Los Angeles on Monday, kept the Phils at bay through most of the game, except for the third inning when the Phillies put runners on second and third with one out.

With Pete Rose at third base and Bake McBride at second, major league runs batted in leader Mike Schmidt bounced a hopper to Enos Cabell at third base and Cabell's throw caught Rose at the plate. Luzinski then flied out to deep left field, ending the threat.

Niekro, 20-12 during the regular season, allowed six hits during his 10 innings of work but suffered from the futile run production that has plagued the Astros all season. He was replaced in the 11th by Dave Smith.

Smith, one of Houston's top relief aces all season, responded to the challenge in the 11th inning when he struck out Luzinski to open the inning. Then, after Manny Trillo flied out, Maddox doubled and Larry Bowa was walked intentionally. Smith, the winning pitcher, ended the inning by fanning pinch hitter Del Unser.
