Rapist sighted?

Area crime runs rampant

By MARY FRAN CALLAHAN
Senior Copy Editor

Incidents marred the past two days as a Notre Dame student almost had her purse snatched, two Saint Mary's students were frightened by "someone or something" on Saint Mary's Road, a man similar to the description of last week's rape suspect was spotted on U.S. 31, and a local youth allegedly posed as a Dillon Hall janitor in an attempt to burglarize rooms, according to Information Service's Richard Conklin.

In the first incident, Conklin said a Notre Dame student was walking to Pasquerilla Hall from the library when "a youth" attempted to snatch her purse. Details of the Sunday evening confrontation remain sketchy, but the woman prevented the theft and escaped unscathed.

Shortly after 10 p.m. Sunday, two Saint Mary's girls reported to Security that they had been "frightened," according to Conklin, by "something or someone in the graveyard." The cemetery is adjacent to the road on which the girls were walking.

Conklin said, however, that Security officials could not determine whether or not a person, a shadow or "perhaps some trees moving in the wind" had frightened the women.

A man wearing an orange ski mask — the same type last week's rape suspect allegedly wore — was also spotted Sunday night, walking south on U.S. 31. After notified of the man, however, security officials could not locate him.

The Office of Information Services also reported yesterday that police were questioning a "17-year-old South Bend youth" who allegedly posed as a janitor in Dillon Hall and used the guise to burglarize students' rooms.

A Dillon Hall resident said the burglar was first spotted shortly after 6 a.m. yesterday morning.

The resident added that the burglar was "mostly after clothes." The student explained that dorm residents put their laundry bags outside the hall's chutes since they are usually overloaded.

Upon noticing the thief, residents called Security, and officials apprehended the youth upon arrival.

Scholars to study Holy City

By MIKE O'BRIEN
Staff Reporter

Throughout history and during the more modern times of the 20th century, the world's spotlights have focused in on the drama concerning the fate of the ancient city of Jerusalem. Notre Dame will share in the glow and heat of these spotlights next week when the North American members of the Jerusalem Committee gather here to discuss the political future of the Holy City.

Twenty-six prominent scholars and professionals will participate in tomorrow's and Thursday's sessions, hosted by University President Fr. Theodore Hesburgh and Jerusalem Mayor Teddy Kollek, who founded the group in 1969.

Noteworthy among the participants are Dr. Ursula Niebuhr, wife of the late Reinhold Niebuhr, a well known theologian, scientist-inventor Buckminster Fuller, and representatives of the Yale and Harvard Divinity Schools.

ND Director of Information Services Richard Conklin said yesterday that this week's session of the committee is the first to discuss the politics of Jerusalem. Conklin related that Kollek initially convened the group to deal with cultural and educational issues stemming from the city's reunification, which occurred in 1969 after Israel's victory over Jordan in the Six-Day War.

Jerusalem was divided some 40 years ago when the United Nations set up the state of Israel. This action was highly controversial, since Jerusalem is considered a holy city by the religions of the two opposing forces in the Middle East, Judaism and Islam, as well as by Christianity, all three who feared the loss of access to the city's shrines.

The heated controversy was fueled last summer when the Israeli Parliament, the Knesset, passed a resolution declaring a unified Jerusalem the capital of Israel. Kollek, mayor of the city, had opposed

Hostages feted at service

WEST POINT, N.Y. (AP) — The liberated hostages offered prayers of gratitude in a chapel service at West Point yesterday and sang the psalms that kept their faith alive during their long ordeal in Iran.

In Washington, President Reagan received a briefing from Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig with the disquieting news that about a dozen of the 52 freed Americans are suffering "severe damage," mostly psychological.

White House Press Secretary James Brady said, "People were talked about by name, what specific problems were, and all that." He said the briefing left Reagan "a little watery-eyed." But Brady did not identify the hostages involved.

Brady said the former hostages' over-riding concerns were their jobs and futures. "They want to get back on the career path," he said.

Reagan issued a proclamation declaring Thursday a national day of thanksgiving and made arrangements to welcome the freed Americans to the capital yesterday.

New York City made tentative plans to hold a traditional ticker-tape parade down Broadway on Friday, even though Haig had counseled against one.

An Associated Press-NBC News poll said that 6 Americans out of 10 think the deal former President Jimmy Carter struck with Iran to free the captive Americans was the best possible under the circumstances.

Moorhead C. Kennedy Jr., the third-ranking official in the embassy when it was seized, said Monday that the United States should honor the deal because "it's important that we maintain our moral leadership."

One by one, throughout their second day back in America, the hostages voluntarily breached the seclusion the government had solicitously arranged for them at the U.S. Military Academy. They went to reporters to say they were overwhelmed at the welcome they had been accorded and to ask for time to adjust.

"Give me time, please, to sort of come into this gradually, give me a chance to cope," pleaded Richard Morefield, 51, of San Diego. Morefield was U.S. consul-general in Tehran when the embassy was overrun and seized by Iranian militants.

At services in their honor yesterday, the ex-hostages pleaded for a chance to adjust.

"Give me time, please, to sort of come into this gradually, give me a chance to cope," pleaded Richard Morefield, 51, of San Diego. Morefield was U.S. consul-general in Tehran when the embassy was overrun and seized by Iranian militants.

"It's important for me to share with you what has happened," he added. The prayer service was held in West Point's non-denominational chapel for cadets, on a hilltop overlooking the academy.

"The service looked like it had been designed by us," said Kathryn

Koob, 43, of Fairfax, Va. "The hymns that were sung, the anthems that were sung, were all things very meaningful to us and ones we sang in captivity right down to the same number of songs and the number of hymns."

Last Christmas, Miss Koob used the time given to her by the Iranian captors to send a television message home by singing the carol, "Away in a Manger."

In yesterday's service, the hostages sang "The Battle Hymn of the Republic," "How Lovely Are Thy Dwellings," "Our God, Our Help in Ages Past," and "Now Thank We All Our God."

"It was incredible," said Miss Koob.

Elizabeth Ann Swift, 39, approached reporters arm in arm with Miss Koob, who had been her roommate during part of their captivity. "We just want to thank everyone for giving us this little time to get ourselves together," she said, adding with a shout: "We're so happy to be back. We're so happy to be back. It's simply marvelous."

In their talks with reporters, the former captives and their families offered a wide range of reaction, somber and joyful:

— Army Master Sgt. Regis Ragan, who rushed to the bedside of his mother immediately upon landing in New York state Sunday, returned to the hostage group and said: "tell

Rep. Kelly convicted in Abscam scandal

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former Rep. Richard Kelly, the only Republican member of Congress charged in the FBI's Abscam undercover operation, was convicted yesterday, with two co-defendants, of taking part in a $250,000 bribery conspiracy.

The jury of seven women and five men deliberated for just over 6 1/2 hours before finding the trio guilty on three charges that carried maximum prison terms of 25 years for each defendant.

Kelly immediately vowed to appeal the verdict, saying, "The war goes on."

Five other members of Congress, all Democrats, have also been convicted on Abscam charges. Only one, Rep. Raymond Lederer of Pennsylvania, is still serving in the House.

Kelly's co-defendants were Gino Cuzio, 49, a businessman from Longwood, Fla., and Stanley Weisz, 54, an accountant from Smithtown, N.Y. The government said they were middlemen in a $250,000 bribery scheme in which Kelly was to receive $75,000 in addition to the $25,000 he got Jan. 8, 1980.

Weisz was shown on videotape taking a $50,000 payoff from an "aide" the fictitious Arab sheik on Feb. 2, 1980, in a hotel at Kennedy Airport in New York. Weisz testified he regarded the money as a legal finder's fee for introducing Kelly to the supposed Arab sheik's representatives.

Cuzio said he took part in the deal because he regarded the supposed sheik's aides as "conmen" whom he was trying to outwit.

Kelly was convicted of bribery and Weisz and Cuzio were convicted of aiding and abetting bribery, punishable by up to 15 years in prison.

An indecent phone call conviction based on the use of vulgarly abusive language was allowed to stand yesterday on a 7-2 vote of the U.S. Supreme Court. The two justices voting to hear the appeal of Don Hott of Huntington, Ind., were William J. Brennan Jr. and Thurgood Marshall. However, four votes are needed to grant such a review. Hott was sentenced to 180 days in jail and fined $1,000 for cursing at two law enforcement officers on the telephone. He asked the high court to rule that his language, offensive as it may have been, was not legally "obscene" — that is, not sexy. Hott, who had a grievance against a deputy police sergeant, telephoned the Huntington chief of police at 11 p.m. on Dec. 21, 1976, and asked him to arrest the officer. The chief refused. "Thereupon," as the Huntington County Court phrased it, "defendant called him names in vile gutter language, impugning canine ancestry with tendencies en fellatio." "Minutes later," the court related, "the defendant called the prosecuting attorney at his home, also awakening him from his sleep. This conversation was similar... but here, the words used simply impugned canine ancestry." "In our Huntington County, Indiana, case," the appeal said, "the chief of police was upset and angered but was not sexually aroused. The prosecutor was angered and upset but was not sexually aroused." — AP

Leaders of the Moslem world yesterday took up a resolution aimed at forcing Israel to end its occupation of Arab territory and to beef up the military and strengthen the Palestine Liberation Organization. A draft copy of the resolution by Islamic foreign ministers presented on the second day of the summit was obtained by The Associated Press. The resolution's strategy was to pressure Israel's friends into forcing the Jewish state to give up Arab land occupied during the 1967 Mideast War. It spoke of "freezing" Israeli membership in the United Nations, but did not elaborate on what measures might be tried short of attempting to expel Israel from the world body — an action that would face a U.S. veto. "Islamic states would use all their military, political, economic and natural resources — including oil — as an effective means for upholding the natural, inalienable rights of the Palestinian people," said the document. If approved by the 28 heads of state and top-level representatives from nine other Arab, African and Asian nations, the Islamic states would pledge to give "military expertise and equipment" to Yasser Arafat's PLO. — AP

Thousands of students were reported yesterday to have occupied a building at the University of Lodz to demand abolition of compulsory classes in Marxism, raising new tensions in Communist Poland. The sit-in by over 2,000 students, reported by student sources, came as farmers in southern Poland warned of new strikes if an "authorized" government team failed to appear Tuesday to discuss demands for a rural version of Solidarity, the independent union. Meanwhile, the state-run press launched what appeared to be a campaign against Solidarity, the movement born when strikes flared last summer over a steep rise in meat prices and now claiming 10 million members. The Communist Party daily Trybuna Ludu and the army's Zolnierz Wolnosci printed readers' letters attacking last week's scattered strikes and nationwide work boycott Saturday by millions of Poles backing Solidarity demands for a 40-hour, five-day workweek. — AP

States are free to allow radio, television and still-photography coverage of criminal trials even when defendants object, a unanimous Supreme Court ruled yesterday. The court said such broadcast and photographic coverage does not automatically interfere with a defendant's right to a fair trial. "An absolute constitutional ban on broadcast coverage of trials cannot be justified simply because there is a danger that, in some cases, prejudicial broadcast accounts of pretrial and trial events may impair the ability of jurors to decide the issue of guilt or innocence uninfluenced by extraneous matter," Chief Justice Warren E. Burger said. The decision, while a momentous victory for the news media, did not extend any new "right of access." Instead, Burger's opinion emphasized that "states must be free to experiment" with photo and broadcast coverage. More than half the states have decided, on either a permanent or an experimental basis, to allow some camera and microphone coverage of court proceedings. Not all these states, however, have allowed coverage of criminal trials over a defendant's objection. — AP

No greased pig chase will be held during this year's Mountaineer Week at West Virginia University, after complaints that the event subjects the pursued porkers to "stress, terror and possible injury." The local Humane Society says it received several such complaints after the pig chase during last October's Mountaineer Week. The objections have prompted the program committee for the annual football season festival to drop the chase from this year's schedule according to Sylvia Bluhm of the humane society. "Greasing a pig, setting him loose to be chased down and captured by a crowd of people, with the resultant stress, terror and possible injury or death to the pig, clearly violates the state law," Ms. Bluhm said. She said that during last year's chase, the pig "was not only terrorized, but crushed by big people falling on him." Ms. Bluhm said the society was "grateful to the compassionate people who called this dreadful animal abuse to our attention." — AP

Howard Johnson's original roadside restaurant, the first to bear the vivid orange-tile roof that became a trademark of the chain, was in ashes yesterday in Boston. The two-story building was gutted by fire Sunday night, shortly after a half-dozen diners and four employees fled. There were no serious injuries. The establishment, opened in 1935, was the model for a chain that grew to 867 restaurants and 521 motor lodges in the U.S., Canada, Puerto Rico and the Bahamas. The company was sold last year to Imperial Group Ltd. of Great Britain. Howard Johnson first went into business in 1924 with an ice cream stand on Wollaston Beach in Quincy, about two miles from the site of the fire. — AP

Aborted Morality

Notre Dame's president, Fr. Theodore Hesburgh, recently expressed shock that not only had the Supreme Court permitted legal abortion on request, but that his "valiant companions-in-arms during two decades of struggles for social justice...generally agreed with the Justices."

"The judgment," Hesburgh continued, "seemed contrary to the moral instincts, not to mention convictions, of most Americans." The full text of Hesburgh's comments were published in Visitor magazine, a national Catholic family magazine.

Well, perhaps it is time for Catholics to open their eyes. It is easy to argue, as Hesburgh did, that abortion is immoral and unjust. But no one is listening.

A two-year survey of abortion patients at clinics in Boston revealed that most of them were single Catholic women. In fact, a staggering 66 percent of the patrons were Catholic, out of an overall Catholic population of 35 percent. And an equally-staggering 54 percent never used birth control.

The awesome fact here is that many of these women actually said that they thought it preferable to sin once through abortion rather than to sin repeatedly by using birth control. With publicity like that, the Catholic Church looks downright foolish as it tenaciously holds to its traditional doctrine. If, as Hesburgh says, abortion goes against the grain of the American moral psyche, then why is it such a popular alternative to preventive birth control?

The Catholic Church can only debase itself further if it continues to dabble in the political consequences of the abortion issue. Pro-life marches are fine, since they express the opinion of the marchers themselves. But blanket statements by the clergy condemning the Supreme Court's decision merely serve to pit the Church against the government — forcing citizens to "pick sides" and creating a no-win situation.

The abortion issue was blown even further out of proportion just prior to last year's elections. Barney Frank, a candidate for a Massachusetts House of Representatives berth, came out in support of legalized abortion. In retaliation, Cardinal Humberto Medeiros, archbishop of Boston, urged Catholics to vote against Frank because of this stance. Interestingly enough, Frank was contesting for a post vacated by a Catholic priest who was forced to step down after a Vatican ruling stated that priesthood and politics did not mesh. And, even more interesting is the fact that this priest had supported federal funding for abortion.

All this is very complicated, and it must certainly transmit a confused and confusing message to Catholics who are sincerely trying to follow their consciences.

Hesburgh's complaints — that he has "tried hard to understand how what was so obvious" to him, i.e., the immorality of abortion, was so "unconvincing" to those "valiant" cohorts of his — are slightly pompous. Maybe he should take a look at how the Church and its executives have presented the issue to us lay plebeians. Those women who underwent an abortion, believing that it was really less sinful than repeated birth control, have equalized these two violations of Church dogma to the point where they apparently allow for a one-to-one trade-off: one pill for one abortion. Yet the two are clearly not equal.

Why, then, does the Catholic Church continue to close its eyes and plug its ears while handing down its dictates? The clergy persists in viewing problems with the same black-and-white absolutism as that in which they are garbed. Real concern for the people who interpret these directives literally, such as the women who suffered through the psychological trauma of abortion, is apparently absent. In fact, the Church ensured that the trauma would be made greater by its strong anti-abortion stance. Very few people have not seen the Right-to-Life pamphlets depicting bloodied fetuses.

The fact that the Church takes such a stand is wonderful, especially in the face of such adversity, but why must it continue to claim that this stance is the popular one, when numerically it is not? And even many of those who do oppose the principle of abortion are repelled by the holier-than-thou, my-way-or-else attitude of many abortion opponents.

This is probably the biggest weakness of the Church: its absolute refusal to admit that there is a grey area here. I have no argument with any statement made by pro-lifers, but I do object to their irrationality on the subject, their absolute unwillingness to listen to, and take into account, mitigating circumstances.

Abortion aside, it only makes sense that the Church should at long last legalize birth control, if for no other reason than it may possibly alleviate the number of abortions by Catholic women. Sexual mores have changed, for better or for worse, and the Church should be enough in tune with its constituents that it is able to recognize the fact. But this is not the case.

I deeply regret that my church is rapidly becoming somewhat of a laughingstock, as the chasm between the hierarchy and the laymen widens. The number of Catholics practicing birth control, or who are at least in favor of it, has topped 80 percent, according to a recent survey of young, married, Catholic couples. Why, then, does the church refuse to alter its stance, even the slightest bit?

It would be wrong to advocate that the Church bend to the whims of society, and that is not my intention. It does seem that the Church should maintain an "ear to the ground" policy, to try to take today's society into account when it preaches absolute rights and wrongs. Teenagers are almost constantly bombarded with sexual propaganda and peer pressure, and all the church has to offer is a strict "NO." It isn't fair that Catholic dogma should actually encourage abortion, as in the Boston survey, but it seems as though that's what's happening. And that's sick.

Social events dominate Saint Mary's schedule

By CONNIE COONEY

The new semester brings with it new activities sponsored by the different classes at Saint Mary's.

Senior Class President Teri Hill said her class has scheduled many activities for the remainder of the year. "We have happy hours planned, which are co-sponsored by Notre Dame. Each happy hour will be held at different locations every week. In this way, everyone involved will be able to meet new people," Miss Hill said.

Feb. 14 is the date of the senior class and Augusta Hall Formal, to be held at Erskine's Country club. A "Bahama's Suitcase" party is scheduled for Feb. 25, followed by a retreat later in the month. The retreat is co-sponsored by the Campus Ministry departments of both Notre Dame and Saint Mary's. March comes in with the annual Senior Formal, being held in Chicago on the 27 and 28th.

April not only yields spring showers, but the annual Senior Variety Show and the National Alumnus/Senior Class Mass and brunch on April 4.

May 6-15 has been designated as "Senior Week" with picnics, horseback riding, a barbecue outing in Michigan and a Dunes Trip. The long-awaited Commencement tops of the week and will be held on May 16.

The junior class is sponsoring a ski trip to Boyne Mountain in Michigan, which is co-sponsored with the junior class at Notre Dame. "We have planned a roller skating party, and a spring Mass at the Grotto," said Mary Joan O'Keefe, junior class president. Also planned in the month of April is the Junior Class Formal.

Sophomore Class President Erin Flood reported that her class is co-sponsoring a Tubing Party along with the Sophomore Class at Notre Dame. The party will be held at Bendix Woods on Feb. 6. The annual Sophomore Parents Weekend will be held Feb. 27 through March 1.

"We are also sponsoring three or four speakers — members of the faculty and administration — who will be speaking on different topics. One topic will be discussed every three weeks or so," said Miss Flood.

The sophomores are also planning a retreat to be held sometime in late March.

According to Kathleen "Murph" Murphy, president of the freshman class, many semi-formals are planned for later on in the semester. "We had a good turnout at our Semi-formal last weekend.

Committee organizing "best An Tostal yet"

Mitch Feikes, the 1981 An Tostal chairman, announced the executive staff for this year's Spring Festival. The 18 member committee runs some of the major events and helps organize the smaller ones.

Feikes said, "Every member can be characterized as having extensive activities either with An Tostal or in the Notre Dame community. These individuals have the ability to make this the best An Tostal yet."

Several seniors are returning from last year. Mark Razzano is moving from comptroller to vice-chairman. Tom Phillis, who functioned as Thursday chairman, will be assistant chairman. Susie Eckelkamp and Donna Shannon will be co-chairmen for Thursday, while Kathy Maher will fill that position for Saturday. Tim Coughlin is returning again to run night events. Bob Moore, who was an assistant to last year's personnel director, will head that department this year. Bill Hogan will organize mobilization while publicity will be handled by Veronica Crosson.

Juniors working on An Tostal include Nancy Delamater as Keeper of the Zoo, Kevin Crawneen running Friday, and Tom Drouillard, Irish Wake. Junior Rob Simari calls running bookstore basketball "the toughest job I've ever loved." Marylou Nusser will be the Secretary and accounting major Eric Bononi is comptroller. Beth Lochtefeld will handle the job of publishing the An Tostal booklet.

Two sophomores hold important positions; Carrie Koplin has the job of handling special events and Jeannie McCarthy will be in charge of hall chairmen as she assumes the position of Head Lion Tamer.

"Even though we have filled the executive staff positions," Feikes emphasized that, "we need many more workers in important positions to make An Tostal '81 a success. The purpose of An Tostal is to have fun, whether it be working on the executive staff, on the committee, or participating in the events."

The first An Tostal meeting will be held on Sunday, March 1, at 7 p.m. in the LaFortune Little Theater.

Geis receives prize

By KERRY O'ROURKE

Kathleen Geis has received the Ernst-Whinney award, an annual honor bestowed upon the best all-around senior accounting student at Saint Mary's.

The $500 cash award, is sponsored by the South Bend office of the Ernst-Whinney accounting firm.

Ernst-Whinney is a national accounting firm which presents the award each year at selected schools across the nation. Each school, however, selects its winner. A committee composed of SMC faculty members in the accounting department and Jack Campbell, manager of Ernst-Whinney's South Bend office, selected Miss Geis.

According to Claude Renshaw, Chairman of the Business Department at SMC, the award is given to the student "most likely to succeed in public accounting."

Miss Geis received the award at a special dinner held at SMC in November. In attendance were all senior accounting students, selected faculty members and people from the Ernst-Whinney South Bend office.

The Ernst-Whinney award has been presented at both Saint Mary's and Notre Dame for the past six years.

'Not bitter'

Marines' survivors rejoice

By JANE SEE WHITE
Associated Press Writer

Yes, it renewed their sorrow to watch 52 Americans fly at last into the arms of their loved ones, but the families of eight men who died last April in a failed rescue mission are not bitter.

"It would almost be sacrilegious to be bitter," said George Holmes, of Pine Bluff, Ark., whose 22-year-old son, Marine Cpl. George Holmes, Jr., died in the Central Iran salt desert.

"I feel a real sense of pride that his death and the loss of the others in some way brought back the hostages, even if the rescue didn't succeed," Holmes added yesterday.

Diane Johnson, 31-year-old widow of Marine Staff Sgt. Dewey Johnson, described her thoughts when she visited her husband's grave in Dublin, Ga., last Friday:

"I just stood there, quiet like, in the cold, and I said to myself, 'Well, Dewey, you can finally rest in peace. They're coming home on Sunday and you did your job.'"

As joyful Americans flung their yellow ribbons to the winds exulting in the former hostages' return, thousands paused to remember eight who died.

President Reagan, signing a resolution designating Thursday as a day of thanksgiving for the hostages' return, commented yesterday that the resolution "recognizes the devotion and bravery of professional soldiers, the memories of those eight men in the long line who have given everything to preserve everything.

"It reminds us that greater glory has no man than he lays down his life for another," he said.

Within hours of her husband's release last week, Anita Schaefer commented that she wanted him to meet, as she has, the women who were widowed when their husbands tried to rescue him.

The caravan that bore the former hostages and their families to a West Point retreat passed eight flagpoles with colors flying at half staff.

In Roanoke, Va., the father of Marine Sgt. John D. Harvey, 21, said the family was "just so happy" for the former hostages and their families. "It's just wonderful having them back in this country."

Chris McIntosh of Valdosta, Ga., whose 34-year-old son, Air Force Capt. Lyn McIntosh, died in the mission, said: "We are just as happy as we can be for those people and their families. We are glad with the rest of the world that their ordeal is over."

At the home of Air Force Capt. Richard Bakke, a woman who answered a telephone query about the hostages' return said: "The family is just too emotionally drained to talk about it today."

Iranians defend settlements

(AP) — Iran's prime minister yesterday defended the U.S.-Iran hostage settlement against criticism by President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr. Another leader, denying reports the hostages had been mistreated, said the militants who imprisoned them for 14 1/2 months were incapable of hurting anyone.

Prime Minister Mohammad Ali Rajai told the Majlis, or parliament, that Iran's problems result from the upheaval of revolution, and were not caused by allowing the U.S. Embassy staff to be held hostage for more than a year, as Bani-Sadr has charged.

The president, a longtime critic of the clergy-dominated government, has been particularly harsh in the last few days, apparently in an attempt to create a climate in which to expand his own influence.

Bani-Sadr has claimed Iran could have reached a much more favorable agreement earlier, according to a Yugoslav news agency report from Tehran, quoting an interview in Mizan newspaper.

Reacting to hostages' reports they were mistreated, Speaker of Parliament Hashemi Rafsanjani told his weekly news conference he is certain no torture took place.

The complex financial settlement that freed the 52 Americans taken captive by Iranian militants Nov. 4, 1979, was mediated by an Algerian delegation. The ex-hostages returned to the United States on Sunday after four and a half days of "decompression" at a U.S. military hospital in Wiesbaden, West Germany.

Court convicts Mao's widow

PEKING (AP) — China's Communist Party yesterday praised the conviction and sentences of Chairman Mao Tse-tung's widow and her nine co-defendants but warned that their followers must also be suppressed.

"Pouring out the waters of the Yangtze River could not wash away their crimes," said the Communist Party newspaper, the People's Daily. "Without punishing them according to law, there is no way to uphold justice and assuage the people's indignation."

The most publicized trial in China's history ended Sunday with the sentencing of Mao's 67-year-old widow, Jiang Qing, and former Vice Premier Zhang Chunqiao to death sentences that were suspended for two years and the other eight defendants to terms ranging from 16 years to life. There was no right of appeal from the verdicts or the sentences.

The People's Daily said remnants of the factions responsible for the 1966-76 Cultural Revolution "still have not been dealt with as they should be, and the poison...still has not been thoroughly eliminated."

One document introduced during the trial listed 60 other persons who were implicated, and trials of these lesser figures and others are expected to start soon.

Jiang Qing and Zhang were the only two defendants who did not plead guilty, and that apparently was why they got the death sentences. But Deng Xiaoping, the leader of the new regime, and others reportedly argued against executing them. The court said if they "repented" during their next two years of confinement, their sentences would be commuted to life imprisonment.

Jiang Qing was as defiant as ever at the final trial session Sunday. In a replay of her performance at previous sessions, she shouted when she heard the word "death" in her sentence: "Down with the revisionists led by Deng Xiaoping! Making revolution is no crime, it is right to rebel!"

A television broadcast showed her struggling with two women bailiffs who snapped handcuffs on her and marched her out of the courtroom as 800 invited spectators applauded.

Jiang Qing, the other three radical leaders of the party who with her were dubbed the "Gang of Four" and Mao's former secretary, Chen Boda, were convicted of persecuting 700,000 people and causing the deaths of 34,000 during the Cultural Revolution and plotting to take over the government after Mao's death.

The other five defendants, all former generals, were convicted of plotting with former Defense Minister Lin Biao to assassinate Mao and take over the government.

Kupke won't exploit hostage kin

JEFFERSONVILLE, Ind. (AP) — This is the story of a third cousin to a new national hero.

Not that Art Kupke and Fred Kupke ever teamed up for a sack race at a family union.

Actually, they don't even exchange Christmas cards.

Art Kupke can't offer one word of insight about cousin Rick, the Francesville man freed from Iran with 51 other American hostages.

But then again, Art Kupke never claimed he could. These Kupkes are strangers.

Art Kupke, you see, abhors name droppers. Anybody who would be impressed by knowing the third cousin of a former hostage is not somebody Art Kupke wants to impress.

"I've seen it too much, instant friends and all," Kupke, 47, of Jeffersonville, said recently. "It's phony, it's fake."

"It's just an accident of birth. There's no reason to be proud of it for any reason."

The only people who even knew the remote connection were those few friends who associated the last names and asked. A reporter found out only because Kupke's 7-year-old stepson told his second grade teacher who told her principal who is related to the reporter.

"It's just an accident of birth..."

Art Kupke didn't even know there was a Rick Kupke, much less that he was kin, until after Rick had been captured by Iranian militants Nov. 4, 1979.

"Somebody brought it to my attention; they had read it in the paper," Art Kupke said. And after seeing where Rick was from, "I knew we were somekind of relation."

Art and Rick's grandfathers were first cousins, if you want specifics.

"My father died just before I was 10, so I never got that well acquainted with the Kupkes."

Even when Art Kupke and his family lived in Kewanee, close enough to Francesville for them to be listed in the same phone book, their paths didn't cross.

But Art almost introduced himself to Fred's folks shortly after the hostages were taken.

"A couple of times I thought about giving them a call. But there really wasn't anything to say."

"And then the other night, when I saw him getting off the plane, I had an inclination to call his parents. But I figured they were getting lots of calls."

"Maybe after he's been home a week or two, I might give him a call. It might be strained, to have Art Kupke call."

"That's his dad's name, too."

Mardi Gras 'News' will entertain, aid charity

By TIM PETTERS
News Staff

Construction of booths will begin this Saturday in the Stepan Center for the last Mardi Gras permitting gambling.

Residence halls and campus organizations construct the booths in order to raise money for charity, while also competing for various awards. All booths must be designed around this year's theme of "In the News."

The Mardi Gras Committee requires any person who wishes to be a card dealer to attend training sessions. Upon completion of these sessions the participant will receive certification from the committee.

Training sessions will be held in each dormitory and at the Stepan Center.

In addition to operating booths, the Mardi Gras raises money through the sale of raffle tickets. Currently, ticket sales are higher than last year at this time, but are below the desired amount. The grand prize for the 1981 Mardi Gras is a new Oldsmobile Cutlass that will be displayed at the remaining home basketball games. The '81 Mardi Gras will offer a wide variety of entertainment. Students will perform musical and comedy acts throughout the week. WSND will broadcast live from Stepan Center, sponsor dance contests, and giveaway albums and T-shirts.

Gambling threatened

Petitions circulate to save bingo

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — Petitions asking leaders of the Fort Wayne-South Bend Catholic Diocese to permit the continuation of bingo, fun fairs and raffles as fund-raising activities began circulating yesterday.

However, Bishop William A. McManus says the petitions will not alter his stand against gambling. Current state law prohibits gambling, including bingo, and McManus said the problem lies with the state, not his office.

"They have the wrong man, the wrong address," says Bishop McManus. "I didn't stop bingo; Indiana stopped bingo. They should address it (the petitions) to Indianapolis."

The petitions say bingo is not immoral and that unless such activities continue, parochial schools and church-funded projects will be threatened.

Meanwhile, Prosecutor Michael Barnes of St. Joseph County says that although bingo is a technical violation of the law, he will not prosecute as long as the funds are for non-profit charitable groups.

He said bingo games are not limited only to the Catholic Church, but are run by other non-profit charitable groups as well.

"We're all in a bind," said McManus. "I'm in a bind with the priests. We are bound by an archaic, out-moded and foolish state law. However, as long as we have a law, the church...must obey the law. Even if the money raised goes for a good cause, that is no justification for breaking the law."

The pro-bingo group, originally about 16 persons, formed about two weeks ago in South Bend. The petition drive came after McManus told some priests that the activities are to be discontinued by Ash Wednesday, March 4, according to Ed Stepien of South Bend, a member of the group circulating the petitions.

McManus said he had not issued a directive concerning the fund raising, but had discussed the Ash Wednesday time frame with a couple of the priests.

Stepien said parishioners began handing out petitions last week and will continue to do so for at least two more weeks.

The bishop said he was told of the petitions both in a telephone conversation and a visit from Stepien.

Stepien said copies of the petition had been sent to presidents of parish councils in each of the Catholic parishes in the diocese. He said that in some instances parish priests were refusing to allow the petitions to be circulated on church premises.

All three were convicted of conspiracy, which carries a maximum term of five years. And each was convicted of a separate count of traveling across state lines to further an illegal activity, a crime punishable by up to five years imprisonment.

The trial began on Dec. 4 and took nearly seven weeks to complete, including a recess over the Christmas-New Year's holiday.

Lawyers for the defendants have said they would appeal on grounds of alleged government misconduct.

Seven other Abscam defendants are seeking to have their convictions overturned by a federal court in New York on similar grounds. That hearing has been recessed until next week.

The remaining member of Congress indicted in the Abscam investigation is Sen. Harrison A. Williams Jr., D-N.J. His trial is scheduled to begin March 30.

P.O. Box Q

McDonnell responds on cheerleaders

Dear Editor:

I do not wish to engage the student press in a running battle regarding cheerleaders, but at this time I feel obligated to clear up several items. On Nov. 6, Jan. 20, and Jan. 22 a letter, a story, and a sports column, respectively, appeared in The Observer. All presented varying degrees of misinformation, which if perpetuated will only cause more problems.

The most serious error appeared in the Jan. 22 issue. When I expressed my dissatisfaction with some of the things I had read on Nov. 6 and Jan. 20, somehow I was presented as calling former cheerleader co-captain Paul Broughton a liar. I objected to the "stuff in the paper," not Paul Broughton. I have much respect for Paul, a student who devoted two-and-a-half years to the squad. He worked very hard, spending countless hours representing our University. He is a fine young man with whom I enjoyed working.

Now, what are the things to which I referred? Let me list them.

1) I sent notification on my office stationery to The Observer on Jan. 16 announcing the cheerleading changes. No reasons were stated. This was done purposely to protect the privacy of the students involved. Nonetheless, a story appeared on Jan. 20 which delved into the many reasons "for which five cheerleaders quit." Never did The Observer approach my office for clarification. I think journalistic courtesy and professionalism demands approaching the source of the news item.

2) The article on Jan. 20 contained the following errors:

- incorrect headline
- incorrect caption
- incorrect listing of numerical order of finishes
- incorrect spelling of a name
- incorrect figure on my budget allocation to cheerleaders —incorrect use of the term "bump" to describe the unavailability of seats on a plane

—misquoting and quoting out of context co-captain

—incorrect information regarding all money which goes into cheerleading.

The overall impression of the headlines and content lead one to believe that a mini protest-rebellion has taken place.

3) The letter on Nov. 6 contained the following errors:

—incorrect statement that cheerleaders are forced to pay for transportation costs, make their own hotel reservations, and that the University does not help out in any way.

4) And now, the column of Jan. 22:

—incorrect assumption, based on Jan. 20 article, that cheerleaders are not happy —the slighting of a good person based on a story written by another person that failed to distinguish clearly between reasons (given in paragraph 1) and certain problematic issues connected with cheerleading.

Let me now attempt to provide some factual information.

Cheerleading falls under the Student Activities Office at Notre Dame. Many universities follow this same system, while others place cheerleading under Athletics. The designations are worked out within each institution.

The cheerleading budget consists of a $5,500 allocation from my office, a $840 contribution from Saint Mary's (varies yearly depending upon how many cheerleaders are from SMC), money raised by cheerleaders in conducting clinics and selling pompoms, stickers and patches, and assistance from the Athletic Department in providing seats on planes when there is enough room, paying for hotel expenses at some games, and paying for the entire costs of bowl trips and tournament games.

The largest expenses of the cheerleaders are, in order, travel, supplies for selling, uniforms, and miscellaneous (orientation meals, ads, phone calls, cost of tryouts, banquet). The largest sources of funds, or valued assistance, in order, are the Athletic Department, Student Activities, souvenir sales (revenue minus expenses).

Cheerleaders are part of Student Activities, but are obviously most noticeable at athletic events. They make commitments for our teams, our students, our alumni, our loyal fans. They appear for various functions. They are all volunteers; none receives any financial aid or scholarship assistance for doing this. They do receive a lot of publicity and popularity, but they also give many, many hours of their lives.

Cheerleaders are not expected to pay for travel expenses. In fact, their flights, rented vehicles, gas, tolls, rooms, uniforms, and a modest meal allowance are provided on trips from the various sources of the budget.

We try our best to get the cheerleaders to all away football games, but money or unforeseen circumstances sometimes prevent it. In good faith, Mr. O'Brien (with Coach Devine's OK) agreed to have the cheerleaders fly to all distant away games with the team, provided seats were available. Because of equipment changes by United Airlines, which reduced the size of the airplane, the number of passengers had to be reduced. That left room only for the team and official party.

We had agreed to pay for each trip at a very low price. Believe me, this was a real bargain with the cost of airfare and rooms. All flights except the Southern California flight were effected. Having allocated $6,000 for travel, we then faced commercial air fares totaling nearly $15,000.

Certainly, we did not have the money, nor did we expect Athletics to produce it. So, five flew to Arizona, all flew to Alabama, and all drove to Navy and Georgia Tech. The cheerleaders sold more items this year than ever before to help meet these high costs. They worked very hard to get to the games. And, Mr. O'Brien helped where he could, taking care of rooms in Atlanta, Birmingham, and Los Angeles, and taking care of the flights to Southern California. All cheerleaders, including Paul Broughton, are appreciative of this help.

Like everything else in life, no situation is perfect. Cheerleading is not all glamour — it takes hard work, time, talent, etc. Our cheerleaders, though, are happy and dedicated (two of them even drove to Arizona — names withheld). But please, don't crucify good Notre Dame people for asking questions which are reasonable.

1) Would the cheerleaders fare better under the Athletic Department? Or should they remain a Student Activity?

2) Is the present monogram policy in line with what happens at other schools? (Paul Broughton did not quit over this issue. He received a monogram last year under the two-year policy.)

3) How much time can cheerleaders put into raising funds, cheering, practicing, and studying?

4) How far is too far to drive for official representatives of the University, or what is a reasonable and safe distance and reasonable time allotment for volunteers to spend in travel to away games?

I would like to assure all readers that no serious problems exist within the cheerleading ranks. They are not calling the Athletic Department officials mean ogres. Nobody left the squad because of the problems or questions enumerated. The changes on the squad occurred because academic and personal family matters are more important than cheerleading. Graduating with pride, rather than cheering, is the first order of business.

James McDonnell
Director of Student Activities

More on cheerleaders

Dear Editor:

Along with Dr. McDonnell's comments, I would like to add a few of my own. Cheerleading is a time-consuming job. We return to school one week early to work out and continue to practice and cheer for games until the Blue-

Gold game in May. This is why we feel we deserve Monogram jackets.

Being a Student Activity group, we have to obey University rules and codes, but we also please the Athletic Department by participating in a proper manner at games. Our job is to travel to as many games as possible and this is paid for, along with all our other expenditures, through our own budget. The Athletic Department is not obligated to save room for us on flights, but in recent years have found extra room to accommodate us at a discounted rate. This year this room couldn't be arranged for.

Some of our problems with traveling and budget expenses, monograms, tutors, etc., could be alleviated if the cheerleaders were part of the Athletic Department, but that is a different subject. The Athletic Department did pay, without recompense, for rooms and even a flight to one game. Mr. O'Brien tried his best to help us, but even some reporters, who are regulars on flights with the team, had to find their own way to the games due to lack of flight seating. Mr. O'Brien, Dr. McDonnell, Fr. Van Wolvear and I all get along. The problem arises from time put in to cheerleading. We have to make it, pretty much on our own. Especially, with the number and spacings between the distant away games.

Yes, Craig, I do realize that Ms. Dregalla's article, and yours too, may make people regret what was said. You must also realize that everything looks a little "different" on the other side of the fence. We (the cheerleaders) try to please everyone possible, but you know how the saying goes, "You can't please all of the people all of the time, only some of the people some of the time."

To summarize the situation, we know we have received some help in the past, and we appreciate it, but we feel we deserve the same treatment as the players on the teams we cheer for (i.e. tutors, monograms, and any other help possible).

Paul J. Broughton

Controversial play?

Dear Sirs:

Is the billing of A Country Wife as "A Bawdy, Colorful, Outrageous COMEDY" in the January 16 number of The Observer a conspiracy planned by the ND/SMC Theatre and carried out by The Observer to prevent the Administration from learning that Wycherley's play is in fact "A Bawdy, etc.," and therefore immoral and unacceptable for viewing by student audiences?

Sincerely,
Richard Houghton

"The next day, John was at the river again with two of his disciples. As he watched Jesus walk by, he said, 'Look, There is the Lamb of God!' The two disciples heard what he said, and followed Jesus. When Jesus turned around and noticed them following him, he asked them, 'What are you looking for?' They said to him, 'Rabbi, where do you stay?'"

"COME AND SEE,"

he answered. So they went to see where he was lodged, and stayed with him that day."

ND swimmers win pair

By TIM LARKIN
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame men's swimming team is off to a good start after sweeping two meets this past weekend against Wayne State and Illinois State and raising its record to 3-0. In Friday afternoon's meet with Wayne State the Irish swimmers edged out a victory in the final event, 60-53 and on the following day, held on to defeat the Redbirds, 62-51.

The relay team of Michael Shepardon, Thomas Krutsch, Al Harding and John Komora paced the Irish in the 400-yard freestyle relay in 3:16.5 to win the final event and the meet against Wayne State. The victory came after the Tartars had evened the score at 53-53 by finishing one-two in the 3-meter diving competition.

Coach Dennis Stark was very pleased with Notre Dame's first outing of the semester and was not disappointed in any phase of his team. "The flu had hurt some of the swimmers' performances," said Stark, "but the others helped out. The Wayne State meet was a good win.

They finished seventh last year in the Division II championship and also beat us in the process."

Pat LaPlatney set a meet record in the 200-yard backstroke event with a time of 2:02.6. It was one of seven events in which the Irish were winners, and in four of those, the Notre Dame swimmers finished one-two.

For the second straight day, the relay teams were the difference in victory. In the Illinois State meet, as in the meet with Wayne State, Notre Dame won both the medley relay and the freestyle relay. The Shepardon, Krutsch, Harding and Komora team beat its time of Friday night with a 3:15.1 clocking, and once again nailed down a victory for the Irish. In all, 17 Irish swimmers improved their times of Saturday over Friday afternoon.

Stark is very positive about this year's team. "The team is determined and is working very hard," Stark pointed out. For the remainder of the season Stark finds it hard to evaluate his competition. "The St. Bonaventure and Marshall meets will be tough and we haven't beaten Bradley in a few years", he says. Concerning the Midwest Invitational in March at Illinois State, he mentioned the Kentucky schools as the ones to beat.

Most of last year's 7-5 team is back this year, including 16 monogram winners. Despite the large number of returnees, only five members of the team will be graduating in the Spring. Stark says his freshmen are slowly merging, but it is hard for them to get into the lineup. The Irish could develop as a strong team as the season progresses but Stark says it's too early to really know.

Asked whether he can compare this year's team to his team of 1974-75 which posted an 11-1 record, the best of Stark's 23 teams at Notre Dame, he says, "This team has the makings of that team. It is starting to gel as a team. However, you must be pessimistic with the flu and injuries like Michael Hilger's shoulder."

Notre Dame will go on its first road trip of the season as the Irish travel to Canada for a meet with Western Ontario on Thursday night. Stark doesn't know about his team's chances up north.

Cameron has tried to give back to Notre Dame, providing much excitement for Irish hockey fans. Although not a great scorer as he himself will point out, Cameron is a hustling backliner who will recklessly hurl himself into the path of an opponent's slapshot, exhibiting total disregard for his body.

At 6-2, 205 pounds, he is a very physical defenseman, whose bone-jarring bodychecks have left many an opponent in a crumpled heap on the ice. Cameron doesn't play cheap but he does work to intimidate the enemy.

"To me, being a goon is not playing hockey. Intimidation, though, is a part of my game, because if a player is intimidated by me he may not be thinking of what he'll do with the puck, which gives us an advantage."

As far as next year is concerned, Cameron has the opportunity to continue playing hockey. He was a 10th round selection of the New York Islanders in the 1978 National Hockey League draft. The prospect of playing in the NHL definitely interests him.

"Right now I'm trying to find out if the Islanders, or any other team, is really interested in me. I'd like to play hockey, after all I've played it all my life, and I've come this far, so why not. I am also interviewing with business firms in case hockey does not become an option."

Hopefully, Scott Cameron will get his chance to prove himself in the NHL. But more important right now is that Scott Cameron and his teammates prove to the rest of the WCHA that they belong in the playoffs.

Saying Boston "cannot go it alone," a key city official called yesterday on the state to back $40 million to $50 million in bonds for a new Boston Garden to keep the Bruins from fleeing to New Hampshire. Bob Ryan, director of the Boston Redevelopment Authority, also accused Delaware North Corp., which owns the Garden and the National Hockey League team, of wanting to build the sports complex primarily for dog racing, with the Bruins as the "sweetener." Bruins President Paul Mooney denied that. He also said Delaware North is committed to moving to Salem, N.H., if that town's residents approve a dog track, and the New Hampshire Legislature provides a tax break and guarantees bonds for construction of a new sports complex. At a news conference, Ryan discussed a plan for a new Garden on city-owned land behind the current structure. He said it would be owned by a private developer with the Bruins and Celtics of the National Basketball Association as tenants. But he said state help was required, in part because of tax limitations imposed by Proposition 2 1/2, which requires property tax cuts. Ryan noted that the state has turned down similar city requests for financial support twice. But, he said, "the serious threat" of the Bruins' departure requires another look.

Martin takes 'Triple Crown'

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — "When you win three games in a row, it's called a Triple Crown, in honor of John Matuszak's favorite drink. I had two Triple Crowns and that's hard to do. So Ted Hendricks told me, 'You've been doing it all week, why not today,'" said Oakland linebacker Rod Martin.

Martin took the advice and his Super Bowl Triple Crown became a record three interceptions in the Raiders' 27-10 victory over Philadelphia.

Not bad for a guy who had been a washout on both sides of the San Francisco Bay.

Martin had been drafted in the 12th round by the Raiders in 1977 but was released during training camp.

"It hurt me to get cut," he said. "I really wanted to be an Oakland Raider."

There was a two-week look see by San Francisco and then the waiver list. Then, late in the 1977 season, the Raiders brought him back and he's been there ever since.

"I studied and studied all week," he said. "I sat in my bed after curfew and looked at film. They were trying to hit the short flat area and that's my area."

The first interception came on Ron Jaworski's first pass of the game and set up Oakland's first touchdown. The second one halted an Eagle drive as Philadelphia tried to battle back from a 21-3 deficit. The third one just about finished off the Eagles.

Afterward, Martin was a media star in the Oakland dressing room.

"Somebody wants to talk to me," he exulted. "You're kidding!"

That's what a Super Bowl Triple Crown will do for a guy.

Irish face Big Red

By MIKE OLENIK
Sports Writer

Fresh from an impressive win over Atlantic Coast Conference power Maryland, Notre Dame is lying in ambush for the six teams that will visit the ACC in the next two weeks. The homestand begins tonight at 8 p.m. when the Big Red of Cornell face the Irish in the first meeting between the two schools since the 1938-39 season.

Holding a 2-1 series edge, Notre Dame will be out to improve on a 12-3 slate that boasts wins over such contenders as Kentucky, Indiana, San Francisco and, of course, Maryland.

Tom Miller, a former assistant coach under Bobby Knight, will lead his Ivy League representative onto Notre Dame's home floor hoping to improve upon a 4-9 record. After winning three straight games before last Friday's loss to Columbia, Cornell has gained some confidence and will be looking to blemish Notre Dame's perfect home record this season. Such a thought has crossed the mind of Irish coach Digger Phelps as he recognizes the possibility of taking Cornell too lightly.

"Although Cornell doesn't have an impressive record, Tom Miller is an excellent coach and he'll make the most of the talent he has."

At Miller's disposal is a relatively short, yet consistent front line that includes 6-9 center Alex Reynolds (12.3 ppg, 6.8 rpg.) and 6-7 Mike Lucas (10.8 ppg, 3.9 rpg.), alongside 6-3 Mike Allen (10.7 ppg.) at the forwards. In the backcourt, Miller will go with two freshmen, 6-1 Ron Tryon and 6-2 George Hall, both of whom are improving as the season progresses.

With the well-timed return of Tracy Jackson last Saturday, the Irish will be countering with the same five that began the season although Tim Andree's inspired play of late has turned many heads. Flanking Digger's choice at center will be two senior forwards who are coming off eye-opening performances in Saturday's nationally televised game. Kelly Tripucka led all scorers with 25 points against the highly-rated Terrapins, while Orlando Woolridge contributed key baskets and cleared the boards consistently in the relatively few minutes he played. John Paxson continues to command the Irish on the floor, and will combine with Jackson to give Notre Dame a formidable backcourt duo.

Phelps realizes the importance of putting together a winning form as the NCAA's approach, and he wants to start with this prolonged stop at home.

"The game will be an important one for us for a number of reasons," says Phelps. "We're coming off an emotional game at Maryland, and we'll be opening an important home series."

IRISH ITEMS — Gilbert Salinas could be out for the season with the knee injury he suffered two weeks ago during the game at San Francisco...Notre Dame continues its homestand next Saturday when the South Carolina Gamecocks visit the ACC...tipoff for the game with the Cocks is listed on tickets as 1:30 p.m. It has been moved to 8 p.m.

Scholarships attract stellar women cagers

By EDWARD KONRADY
Sports Writer

For Notre Dame's women's basketball team to prosper, quality players from high schools around the country must be recruited. This summer, for the first time in Notre Dame's history, women were given scholarships to play basketball for the Irish.

One of two girls selected was Jenny Klauke, a 5-10 swingman from Marillac High School in Glenview, Illinois. At Marillac, Klauke averaged 18 points, 10 rebounds, three assists and three steals per game, receiving all-state honors as a senior.

Klauke's college coach, Mary DiStanislao, says "Jenny still has a great deal of talent that has yet to be directed. She is a hard worker who is still learning a great deal about the game. I saw Jenny play while I was at Northwestern, but she didn't fit in our plans."

However, when DiStanislao arrived in South Bend and discovered that Klauke wanted to go to Notre Dame, she signed her because "you can't beat the combination of a recruit who wants to play and also wants to come to your school."

"Our recruits must be able to lead and stand out as an example to the people who come in the future," says DiStanislao. "Jenny is this type of girl, and we expect her to be an integral part of the team for the four years she is here."

Klauke's strength is her brilliant shooting. "Jenny can roll out of bed in the morning and hit an 18-foot jumper," says Assistant Coach Patrick Knapp.

Recently, Klauke scored 16 points against Illinois-Chicago Circle and 14 points against Miami (Ohio) in losing efforts.

With the loss of Jan Crowe, Klauke has taken over at forward. "I'm more comfortable at forward, because that was my position in high school," says Klauke, "but I also like to play guard because I like handling the ball. I just want to play my best wherever she wants me to play."

It is this attitude of Klauke's — "I just want to contribute" — that made her so attractive as a recruit. DiStanislao says Klauke "feels responsibility, which is fine. I tell my recruits that a scholarship is a reward in advance for effort."

Does the idea of being one of Notre Dame's initial woman scholarship recruits affect an 18-year-old from Glenview? "I used to worry about it a lot," admits Klauke. "I was worried about pulling my weight. But now I don't worry about it, because it doesn't help. I just try to be a good example to everyone by playing hard."

Because of a stress fracture in her right foot, Klauke missed the pre-season conditioning and some of the early practices. In her eagerness to adapt to the new style, Klauke started to press, and as Knapp described it, "started playing too hurried. Jenny didn't know when to use her speed and when not to, which resulted in a lot of turnovers. With more experience and court maturity, Jenny will become a fine basketball player."

Like her teammates, Klauke emphasizes the team. "We're all just trying to build a program," says Klauke. "Some people think we're going to fizzle, but there's no way.

Cameron looks to playoffs

By MICHAEL McMANUS
Sports Writer

It hasn't been the happiest or most successful of seasons for Scott Cameron and the Notre Dame hockey team. The bright pre-season hopes of October are all but forgotten as the team has struggled all year, and now faces a tough uphill battle just to make the playoffs. The Irish are five points behind Colorado College in the battle for the eighth and legiate Hockey Association.

And while many players and fans can reassure themselves that there is always next year, Scott Cameron can't and doesn't look at it that way. He's a senior, which means that this is his last season skating under the North dome of the ACC, and he'd like to make a final appearance in the WCHA playoffs.

"I feel we can come back and make the playoffs. We've had a lot of problems this year, for example, we only received two scholarships. We have also had a lot of injuries. But I feel that criticism can't go beyond yourself. We have to realize that we haven't done the job and that we have to start doing it, because this team is too talented to be where it is," said Cameron.

Cameron himself has been hit by the injury bug this year. He currently has a separated shoulder that forced him to miss last weekend's Denver series and his absence was a notable one. Just ask goalie Bob McNamara, who faced 91 shots over the two game series in what must have seemed like a nightmare. A healthy Scott Cameron on defense probably would have cut down on that total somewhat.

Cameron hails from Toronto, Ontario, which is a veritable hotbed for junior hockey talent. Even so, Scott came to Notre Dame mostly through his own efforts rather than those of Coach Lefty Smith.

"I was recruited by some schools back east such as the University of Vermont and the University of Massachusetts, but I actually wrote a letter to Notre Dame. Greg Meredith and Alex Pirus were good friends of mine, so I asked them for advice when I was considering schools. They recommended Notre Dame very highly. So I wrote a letter to Lefty, and here I am."

That decision, Cameron believes, has turned out to be a wise one. "Besides the chance to play collegiate hockey, Notre Dame has given me an excellent education, which will benefit me for the rest of my life. In addition, I met my wife here, and although I am not Catholic, I think Notre Dame has given me some religious background and insights that have really helped me."
