Irish eager to overcome Spartans

Team morale high despite two losses

By KELLY SULLIVAN
Sports Writer

Notre Dame football is a virtual stranger to failure. And Gerry Faust is certainly not accustomed to losing. So the capacity crowd on hand for Saturday's 1:30 kick-off against Michigan State will be anxious to see how the 1-2 Irish pick up the pieces and rebuild.

"I've told our players they have two choices," says their coach Gerry Faust. "They can either give up after those two losses and settle for an average season, or they can get up off the ground and keep fighting. They can be the comeback team of the year."

How the Irish respond to events of the past two weeks will tell Faust a lot about the character of his team, as both he and the players have come under some sharp criticism this week in papers across the country, including The Observer, after dropping two games in a row.

"You have to expect that after you lose," says junior co-captain Phil Carter. "But the team's attitude is very positive. We just want to go out and stop all the talk, just get a win under our belt."

Any loss is tough, but last Saturday's 15-14 heartbreaker was especially devastating because Faust feels the team made big strides from the Michigan contest.

"The Purdue game was a tough, tough loss," he confesses. "But one good thing we did was regain the intensity we didn't have against Michigan."

And that intensity is a must to beat a team like the Spartans, Notre Dame's third straight Big Ten foe. "They're quick, they're physical and they're well-coached. They always play well against the best teams, and they always get up for Notre Dame."

A key to stopping the Spartans tomorrow will be containing quarterback John Leister. The junior threw for 204 yards against the Irish a year ago in his college debut. Leister boasts 553 yards in the air this season with flanker Otis Grant and split ends Daryl Turner and Ted Jones his targets.

"He's a lot like Purdue's Scott Campbell," says Faust. "He can make the big play by either throwing on the run or running himself."

While the defense must do their part by preventing the big play, Faust says his offense has to start putting more points on the board. He promises the Irish will start to show more flare, once they've established a solid running game.

"We ran different things at LSU because we felt we could surprise them," he explains. "But against Michigan, there were certain things we felt we had to do. And at Purdue, there were certain things their defense did that limited us."

"We'll open things up, but you've got to have the basics down before you do the tricky stuff."

Faust will put the running game back in the hands of tailback Carter. He turned in a spec-

Oliver and Anderson are playing for kicks

By SKIP DESJARDIN
Assistant Sports Editor

Slowly but surely, Harry Oliver is closing in on most of Notre Dame's kicking records. His name has been mentioned prominently on various all-American lists.

Less slowly, but no less surely, Morton Anderson is becoming the most feared kicker in college football. He is on the verge of owning all the Michigan State kicking marks, and a team of NFL scouts, assembled by The Sporting News, called him the nation's top place kicker.

This week, the two will match up in Notre Dame Stadium, as the Irish take on the Spartans.

Oliver and Anderson have gone head-to-head before, with the 5-11 Irish kicker coming out on top. His 4-4 performance last season in East Lansing was one of the only bright spots in a lackluster Notre Dame victory. Anderson's only attempt of the game, a 29-yarder, was good, but he really didn't get a chance to show off his talents. Nonetheless, Irish coaches are well-aware of his ability.

"That guy is a real threat," admits head coach Gerry Faust. "He adds another dimension to their offense."

Spartan coach Frank "Muddy" Waters is well-aware of the abilities of the Struer, Denmark native. You can't argue with the facts, and history has proven that Anderson possesses deadly accuracy.

"Morten is a threat to score for us every time we pass midfield," Waters says. "He has been simply sensational in all aspects of the game."

Sensational may not be strong enough a word. Two weeks ago, in a game against Ohio State, Anderson got his name in the Big Ten record books by kicking a 63-yarder. The boot was just four yards shy of the all-time NCAA record.

Over the course of his career, Anderson, who attended Indianapolis' Ben Davis High School on an exchange program, has hit 102 of the 105 extra points he has attempted. Still, he is far from satisfied.

"I must become more consistent on field goals," he says. "That's 85 percent of my game."

Actually, if he were to check his figures, it's more like half. As a matter of fact, it's exactly half. Anderson has kicked 34 field goals, for 102 points. That, along with his 102 points after touchdowns, gives him a career scoring mark of 204 points, just 26 points shy of the MSU record held by fellow Dane Hans Nielsen.

Every Notre Dame fan has heard, by now the legend of Harry Oliver, and the way his 51-yard kick into the win boosted Notre Dame to a miracle win over Michigan last season. Fewer know about the success enjoyed by Anderson in his only appearance to date in Notre Dame Stadium.

With no time on the clock at the end of the first half, the Spartan placekicker booted a 53-

'66 classic

"Game of the Century"

By CHRIS NEEDLES
Sports Writer

"The game of a generation" — New York Sunday News.

"The most nerve-racking game that could possibly be played... a classic in the true sense of the word" — Detroit Free Press.

"Why didn't you pass, Ara?" — Chicago Tribune, and others.

The day was November 19, 1966, a little less than 15 years ago. In that year, there were two No. 1 teams — Notre Dame and Michigan State, depending on which wire service poll one preferred.

And, on a cold, dreary South Bend-like day, the two giants squared off in Spartan Stadium in East Lansing to decide who had rightful claim to the beanstalk.

Never before had a regular-season college football game captured the attention of an entire nation like this one did. 15 years later, it still remains the "game of the century."

Spartan Stadium's capacity is 76,000, but a record 80,011 were squeezed in on this day. The media had it far worse, though; in a press box that was built for 210 reporters, 735 were packed in. On TV, 33 million people watched it on ABC (that, too, was a record). And in Plainville, Conn., Our Lady of Mercy Roman Catholic Church even changed its normal Saturday confession time so as not to conflict with the end of the game.

It was that big.

The Irish, under then-third-year coach Ara Parseghian, were listed as four-point favorites, despite being the visiting team and being plagued by numerous injuries to key players. Starting quarterback Terry Hanratty had a separated shoulder, and star tailback Nick Eddy was also sidelined and unable to play.

Despite being the underdogs, Michigan State jumped out to a 10-0 lead in the second quarter following a scoreless first period. A 42-yard pass completion from Spartan quarterback Jimmy Raye to split end Gene Washington set up a 4-yard touchdown plunge by fullback Regis Cavender to put MSU up, 7-0. Later in the quarter, Raye's 30-yard gallop around end paved the way for a 47-yard field goal by the barefooted Dick Kenney, and State was up 10-0.

Notre Dame struck back before halftime, thanks to the work of a pair of backups. Halfback Bob Gladieux, who replaced Eddy, caught a 34-yard TD pass from quarterback Coley O'Brien, who was Hanratty's understudy, to pull the Irish within 10-7.

In the second half, the defense took control. Notre Dame's defense, led by all-Americans Jim Lynch and Alan Page, stopped Michigan State on every possession of the second half, while the Spartan defensive corps, keyed by 283-pound defensive end Bubba Smith, were nearly equal to the task. In all, the two teams combined for 16 punts on the afternoon.

On the opening play of the fourth quarter, ND's Joe Azzaro booted a 28-yard field goal to tie the game at 10-10. In the late stages of the contest, Azzaro's bid for glory, a 41-yard field goal attempt with 4:41 left, sailed wide to the right, and the game remained deadlocked.

The trouble is, all of the above has now been forgotten by most, if not all, who witnessed the game. Unfortunately, all that is remembered of the "game of the century" are seven insignificant running plays in the last minute-and-a-half.

With 1:28 to go, and the score still tied at 10, Notre Dame took over, following MSU's eighth punt, at their own 30 yard line. The Spartans put in seven defensive backs, as they fully expected the Irish to pass in order to get into field goal range to pull out the victory. 33,080,744 other witnesses expected the same.

Instead, Parseghian ran seven straight running plays, which gained a grand total of 11 yards and one first down, but were enough to waste Michigan State's three remaining timeouts and the remaining 1:28. "We didn't play for any tie," Parseghian said after the game. "Nobody likes ties. But we weren't going to give Michigan State a chance of winning in the final minute."

As the final gun sounded, many boos and calls of "chicken" rained down upon the Irish. "We started yelling at them, things like 'come on, sissies,'" said Bubba Smith, no sissy himself.

But it was Notre Dame who, in the end, had the last laugh. Besieged by criticism for a full week after their Michigan State "cop-out," the Irish took it out on Southern California the next Saturday, 51-0, and eventually were crowned National Champions in both polls.

Today, though, it is the "game of the century" that is remembered most about the 1966 season. It was a game that featured stellar defensive performances, media hysteria, and controversy, the likes of which have not been seen in the 15 years hence.

But, except for the controversy, the memory has all but faded away.

MSU: mixed memories for Carter

By TIM PRISTER
Sports Writer

Last year's game against Michigan State is one which Phil Carter would like to remember — and forget. The junior co-captain broke Vegas Ferguson's single game rushing record on his 39th carry. However, it was Carter's 40th carry that not only cost him the record, but also some very valuable playing time.

"I didn't even realize I had carried the ball that much let alone rushed for that many yards," said Carter. "They announced that I had broken the record while I was on sidelines after I had injured my leg."

What Carter didn't realize was that the announcement was actually incorrect since he had lost two yards on his final carry.

"I wouldn't be telling the truth if I said I wouldn't like to break a few records, but I prefer to win. A lot of guys like to set goals for themselves, which is fine. But it doesn't make any sense to rush for all those yards and lose. In a case like that a record would be meaningless."

A 1000-yard season would have been virtually automatic had it not been for the debilitating injury against the Spartans. Diagnosed as a bruise, the extent of the injury was considerably more severe than the simple word "bruise" indicates.

"It was really strange because I walked off the field after the game," said Carter. "But when I woke up the next day, I couldn't move my leg. The swelling started up around the thigh and progressed down my leg to my ankle. It was three weeks before I could walk again."

After missing the next four games, Carter appeared briefly against Georgia Tech and then resumed his heavy workload carrying 60 times in the next two games.

"I like to carry the ball a lot," said Carter. "If the coach wanted me to carry the ball 50 times a game I would love it. But Coach Faust's offensive philosophy is different from last year. This year our offense is not based around one particular aspect. Teams have to be better prepared to defense us because we show them more sets and formations. Consequently, it's my job to be prepared when they call on me, since my role won't be as extensive.

"Last year we didn't do anything fancy, we just ran right at our opponent. They knew our strength and it was simply up to the opposition to stop us."

"Coach Faust is really an incredible person," continued Carter. "He's so enthusiastic and involved in the offense that sometime's he scares you. You wonder how long his enthusiasm can last, but it never stops. He knows the game and has a great awareness of what to call in certain situations. There's always going to be second-guessing by the press but the team has confidence in him. The only second-guessing going on now is the second-guessing of ourselves, the team."

Part of that varied offensive philosophy is the plan to use the services of Greg Bell as well as freshman Chris Smith at tailback, thus keeping fresh, quick backs in at all times.

"Greg proved himself when I was recovering from a pulled hamstring earlier in the year. He had a great spring and it wouldn't have been fair to throw me in ahead of him when I recovered."

Bell broke away from relative anonymity when he rushed for 50 yards against Navy, including a 27-yard touchdown romp. According to Carter, though, he knew Bell's capabilities.

"Greg is a tremendous all-around athlete. He has great speed, he's a good basketball player and could probably be tough on a baseball diamond. We went fishing at the beginning of the year and he even caught more fish than I did," joked Carter.

"Chris is really going to be a good college tailback. His combination of speed and strength makes him doubly effective. Last week he literally ran over two veteran defenders on one play."

Carter attracted some attention of his own, rushing for nearly 2500 yards as a tailback at Woodrow Wilson High School in Tacoma, Washington. He was recruited heavily by several California schools and especially by the University of Washington and the University of Oregon. Yet it was Notre Dame's assistant head coach Brian Boulac who helped sway his final decision.

"All the schools out west had me spoiled," said Carter. "They were constantly calling me and making these extravagant promises like telling me I would start as a freshman."

"But I liked the challenge that Notre Dame

Reagan outlines strategic defense

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, outlining a $180.3 billion design for shouldering America's strategic power "well into the next century," called Friday for deployment of 100 MX missiles, production of the once-scrapped B-1 bomber and development of a super-elusive Stealth aircraft.

The president rejected the option of shuttling the yet-undeveloped MX among hundreds of "soft" shelters in Utah and Nevada. Instead, he decided upon placing many of the new ICBMs in silos now occupied by the aging Minuteman and Titan II missiles, located in the Midwest and West.

The plan calls for making the MX and an updated version of the B-1 operational by 1986. Reagan asked for production of 100 B-1s, the bomber which former President Carter regarded unnecessary.

The Stealth, a radar-evading bomber not yet off the drawing boards, would be developed for production in the 1990s.

The president said the program would "revitalize our strategic forces and maintain America's ability to keep the peace well into the next century."

Reagan, in a nationally televised announcement, said it would deter any Soviet actions "directed against the American people or our allies," while giving the United States the ability to respond to further Soviet military growth.

At the same time, he said it would "signal our resolve to maintain the strategic balance ... the keystone to any genuine arms reduction agreement with the Soviets."

"This is a strategic program that America can afford," Reagan said, calling it "a plan that will meet our vital security needs and strengthen our hopes for peace."

Reagan said any elements of his new program would be on the bargaining table in future arms talks with the Soviet Union.

Administration officials set the price tag for "the whole thing, spare parts, bumpers" at $180.3 billion over the next six years, starting with the fiscal year which began Thursday.

Reagan said he hoped the program would "prevent our adversaries from making the mistake others have made and deeply regretted in the past — the mistake of underestimating the resolve and the will of the American people to keep their freedom and protect their homeland and their allies."

Reagan called also for beefing up several other areas of the nation's strategic force, including improvements in the B-52 fleet and continued production of at least one Trident nuclear submarine per year.

Secretary of Defense Caspar W. Weinberger, who accompanied Reagan to the announcement, said that with the new systems, "if we go on with a continually degrading system...then we would be subjected to a nuclear blackmail or a kind of situation in which people would throw up their hands and say we have no hope" and the president would not tolerate such a condition.

"We are not seeking nuclear or military superiority," Weinberger said. "We are seeking a degree of strength that will deter attack."

The first batch of approximately 36 MX missiles would be placed in Titan and Minuteman missile silos that would be strengthened to resist destruction by improved Soviet missiles. The president did not spell out precise locations, but there are Minuteman sites in North Dakota, Wyoming and Montana, whereas the Titan is located in Kansas, Arkansas and Arizona.

The Titan II, a liquid-fueled missile nearly two decades old, would be phased out. The first MXs, solid-fueled missiles capable of carrying up to 10 warheads apiece and purportedly faster and more accurate than either the Titan or Minuteman, would likely be stationed at Titan sites in Arizona.

Reagan flatly dismissed the plan for the "shell-game" approach to MX deployment.

The president said that basing the missiles in holes in the western desert would leave them "just as vulnerable" as placing them in existing silos that have not been hardened to withstand nuclear attack.

Representatives evade immigration policy

MARK BOENNIGHAUSEN
News Staff

The Thomas and Alberta White Center for Study of Law and Public Policy sponsored a question and answer session at the Law Building on the Reagan Administration policy on immigration yesterday.

Michael Posner, a representative from the Director Lawyers Committee on International Human Rights and Diana Morris, a representative from the State Department, answered questions from faculty and students of the Law School.

Posner began the session by presenting his view of the present United States immigration policy.

Calling the new policy a "dramatic change", Posner went on to describe the new program as a "step backward" in United States immigration policy.

Posner declared that political and strategic concerns are replacing those of human rights.

His main point of disagreement centered on the implementation of the new policy of "Interdiction."

With Interdiction, the State Department will have U.S. Coast Guard vessels intercept Haitian refugee boats of the Haitian coast.

Posner explained that the program works under an agreement between the Haitian and U.S. Government.

Ms. Morris countered Posner's objection to the new policy by stating that the new program met all of the United States international obligations.

She added that aliens on the high seas have no due process rights and if a refugee does have an acceptable reason for immigration to the U.S. he can explain it to the Immigration and Naturalization Service official who is present on all Coast Guard ships stopping Haitian vessels.

When questioned on what qualified a refugee for immigration to the U.S., Ms. Morris explained that a refugee must fear political persecution if he returns to his country in order to be granted asylum in the U.S.

She noted that a distinction is made on types of refugees; they are classified as either political or economic.

An economic refugee is one who flees due to economic hardship and these people are not granted asylum, Ms. Morris commented.

Posner explained that a lawsuit is being filed on behalf of the Haitian refugees, noting that the suit will be hard to get into court, as it lacks a specific plaintiff.

He added that a Human Rights complaint is being filed by his committee with the United Nations and the Organization of American States.

Posner went on to criticize the

Iran elects new president under tight security

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Millions of Iranians, heeding Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's command to exercise their "divine duty," voted yesterday in an election to install a fiery clergyman as president.

Results were expected late next week, but Ali Khamenei was considered a shoo-in against three other Khomeini loyalists to succeed Mohammad Ali Rajai, who was assassinated in an Aug. 30 fire-bombing 37 days after taking office.

Revolutionary Guards of the fundamentalist Moslem regime and zealots from the "Party of God" were called up to protect the voters. At one Tehran mosque, officials said voters were being bodily searched before entering to cast ballots.

Tehran residents and officials contacted by telephone from Beirut reported the Iranian capital calm despite recent street violence blamed on leftist opponents of the clergy-led government.

At least 300 Khomeini supporters have died in a wave of bombings and assassinations since secular-minded President Abolhasan Bani-Sadr was ousted June 22.

The regime blames the attacks on the Mujahedeen Khalq, and accused the Islamic-Marxist guerrilla group of launching a pre-election terror campaign in an attempt to scare away voters.

In the central Iranian city of Shiraz, six Mujahedeen Khalq guerrillas were killed yesterday in three clashes with Revolutionary Guards, Tehran Radio said.

The Interior Ministry ordered polls across the country to stay open an extra three hours or longer to accommodate what one ministry official called "an exceptional turnout."

The government estimated 20 million people out of the country's total population of 36 million would vote. The voting age was lowered from 16 to 15.

Tehran observers said the other three men were nominated as stand-ins in case Khamenei, who survived a June assassination attempt, was killed before he could take office. His challengers received scarce mention in the government-controlled media in the days preceding the voting.

Excavations at the site of a medieval church have uncovered a number of ancient treasures, including manuscripts and gold artifacts, authorities reported yesterday. Archaeologists said most of the artifacts have come from tombs. One of the most valuable finds at the nearby town of Pratola Serrà is a large gold crucifix inscribed in Latin, the authorities said. While the findings indicate a 7th century construction technique, the archaeologists said they have also come across many brick formations of Roman style. The site is near that of a 2,000-year-old Roman aqueduct. — AP

A 12-hour strike by air controllers halted all traffic over Italian air space yesterday, stranding thousands of passengers in major cities. Air controllers were seeking pay increases and other benefits including civil status for military personnel. They announced similar strikes for tomorrow, Tuesday and Thursday. International traffic, mainly to and from the United States, will be disrupted throughout today at Milan's Malpensa International Airport because of another strike by ground personnel protesting dismissal of a colleague, unions reported. — AP

Federal officials say they've dropped a probe of two University of Massachusetts students who sought a "hit squad" to send President Reagan to the "big ranch in the sky." The students, whose names Asst. U.S. Atty. George Kelly refused to release, bought a classified ad in the Nov. 7, 1980, edition of the Daily Collegian, the student newspaper. It read: "help send Ronald Reagan to the big ranch in the sky. Give him a permanent role in Death Valley Days. Applications now being accepted for Reagan hit squad. Experience with automatic weapon and explosives a plus. The wet head is dead or should be. Apply after January 20." — AP

Police say a curly-haired boy, who could be as young as 10, pulled a .38-caliber pistol at a Kentucky Fried Chicken outlet and robbed the place. Maria Shabol, an employee, told Dade County investigators that the blond youth, wearing a green T-shirt and blue jeans, entered the restaurant late Thursday. She said he ordered a five-piece chicken dinner, then pulled the gun and ordered cash. Police said another witness saw the youth run outside and climb into a waiting red van, which then sped away. No arrests have been made in the robbery, which netted less than $100, police said. — AP

Record-high unemployment among blacks sent the nation's jobless rate to 7.5 percent in September while more people than ever before accepted part-time work, the Labor Department said yesterday. Nearly 8 million people were out of work last month — some 309,000 more than the month before — as overall unemployment jumped by three-tenths of a percent, the Bureau of Labor Statistics said. The proportion of the total U.S. population holding jobs fell to 58.1 percent, the lowest level since December 1980. The number of "discouraged workers" — those who have abandoned their job searches — jumped by 1.1 million in the third quarter. The unemployment rate in August was 7.2 percent of the work force, following a decline to 7 percent the month before. This year's highest rate — 7.6 percent in May — was attributed by government analysts to a statistical fluke resulting from earlier-than-expected school closings. The last time unemployment reached 7.5 percent was November 1980. — AP

Americans are using credit cards more frequently than they were earlier this year. But the caution that followed the controls of 1980 still lingers, prompted partly by new fees and higher interest rates. "We're coming back," said Jim Matthews of Continental Illinois National Bank and Trust Co. in Chicago. He said the bank's Visa and MasterCard holders made four percent fewer purchases in the first eight months of 1981 than in the corresponding period a year earlier. In January, the number of transactions was almost 22 percent below 1980 levels. Dollar volume has increased — up 2.4 percent for the first eight months of the year, but Matthews said, "How much of that is due to inflation, I don't know." Like many other banks, Continental now imposes a fee for the once-free cards. The annual charge of $15 caused people to be more selective, Matthews said. "They quit carrying multiple cards." — AP

At least ten married women from Long Island say a telephone caller posing as their husbands' psychiatrist talked them into having intimate relations with strangers in order to help alleviate sex problems the caller said their husbands had. The women duped into the strange game say they went out on the street, picked up men and returned home with them to await "sex therapy" instructions from the mystery caller. Police publicized the scam on Thursday after four women came forward with their bizarre stories saying they had sex with the strangers. Since then, more than 100 women on Long Island and in New York City called to say they too had been targets of the sexual con man and six more said they had gone through with the scheme. — AP

Defies Pope

Priest celebrates outlawed mass

By JERRY HARKAVY
Associated Press Writer

LEWISTON, Maine — Six years after he was expelled from his Montreal parish, a Roman Catholic priest is traveling the continent, a circuit rider leading his farflung flocks in a forbidden Mass.

The Rev. Yves Normandin, whose territory extends from British Columbia to Nova Scotia, celebrates the Tridentine Mass, the traditional Latin Mass outlawed by the reforms of Vatican Council II.

The Mass, dating back to 1570, still has its adherents, 22 of whom came to a cinderblock hall in a tenement district of Lewiston last week to pray in the old way.

For Normandin's visit, the rented hall was transformed into a church. A 60-year-old crucifix was hung on a paneled wall, a cloth-covered table became an altar and metal folding chairs took the place of pews.

Some worshippers came from 40 or 50 miles away, from Waterville, Rumford and Falmouth, seeking the kind of religious sustenance they say they cannot find in their own parishes.

After reciting the rosary and hearing confessions, Normandin celebrated Mass in Latin instead of English, using the prayer book which Pope Paul VI supplanted with a simplified and modernized version just over a decade ago.

There were other differences: Normandin faced the altar and kept his back to the congregation, the worshippers took no part in the prayer readings and there was no "Kiss of Peace" at the close.

In rejecting the new liturgy, Normandin said: "it's no longer a real Catholic Mass. It's an ecumenical Mass," which can even be celebrated with non-Catholics.

"The foundation of the Mass, the whole substance has been changed," agreed worshipper Joseph Gallant of Mexico, Maine, who furnished the crucifix for the service. "The new Mass doesn't give the same solace, the consolation, as the old one."

Normandin is a follower of French Archbishop Marcel Lefebvre, the Switzerland-based rebel who heads a traditionalist movement claiming adherents worldwide. It's a movement that opposes changes in Catholic liturgy as well as the church's trend toward ecumenism.

Clarence McKay, a spokesman for the Diocese of Portland, would not comment specifically on Normandin's services but pointed out that all Catholics are obliged by papal decree to follow the new order.

Union chairman

Solidarity endorses Walesa

GDANSK, Poland (AP) — The Solidarity congress elected Lech Walesa chairman of the 9.5 million-member union yesterday in a strong endorsement of his policy of compromising with the Polish government instead of confronting it head on.

Walesa immediately promised to "try to break down factions" among the rank and file that have divided the year-old free union's first convention. He attributed his victory to his record during his unofficial leadership of Solidarity.

"Thanks for your support," the 38-year-old electrician told the cheering unionists packed inside the Olivia Sports Arena.

"I'm sorry that some of you backed talk more than action."

Walesa easily defeated three other candidates. Solidarity announced he received 462 of the votes cast, or 55.2 percent.

Radical Jan Rulewski, whose fiery campaign speeches calling for the union to stand up to the Soviets and Polish authorities had drawn cheering applause, got just 6 percent of the vote.

Marian Jurczyk, who heads the Solidarity chapter at the Szczecin shipyards near the East German border, got 24 percent of the vote and Andrzej Gwiazda, a longtime free trade union organizer and theoretician for Solidarity, got nearly 9 percent of the vote. The other votes apparently were cast for write-ins or left blank.

Walesa, who had come under bitter attack by militants, praised the secret ballot process and promised he would seek the advice of the rank and file in running the union.

"Let's follow the road to victory with a new tradition of bringing a chairman in a sack as opposed to a briefcase," he said. His allusion was to the old Communist Party system of the hierarchy naming party congress delegates and members of the Central Committee without grassroots input. Solidarity members who belong to the party this year got the authorities to allow selection of delegates at the local level by secret ballot.

"The more difficult it gets, the more advice I'll ask of you," Walesa said. "We can overcome every enemy, even if highly developed."

Earlier this week, militant delegates won passage of a resolution criticizing Walesa and other leaders who had compromised with the Parliament on a bill granting workers some say in p ment. The first session of the congress, which ended Sept. 16, voted to demand full say in choosing managers and threatened to boycott anything less. When the congress reconvened, militants said the delegates' will had been ignored.

Walesa on Thursday got mild applause in his speech warning that the authorities "have the strength to beat us" and threatening to leave the 9.5 million-member union if he is ousted from the chairmanship.

Delegates generally regard Walesa as realistic although somewhat dictatorial and the heavy applause given tough-talker Rulewski was seen more as a reflection of the delegates' mood rather than voting intentions.

The unionists voted earlier yesterday on the union "platform" and said they hoped a final draft would be ready for a vote today.

... Refugee

Administration's refugee quota policy, stating that it didn't reflect "reality", or operate within the "spirit of the law."

Posner concluded that the Interdiction policy may cause problems for the Administration.

He suggested that the biggest problem about the entire immigration system is the fact that it is to politicized, commenting that the State Department shouldn't be in the "refugee business."

Ms. Morris explained that there is a plan where an overall refugee coordinator will work outside the State Department, although the plan has not been approved.

There is pressure in Congress for a the coordinator to be connected directly to the White House, so the refugee policy cannot be used as an instrument of foreign policy and it can be more responsive to domestic issues, Ms. Morris concluded.

The Notre Dame soccer team defeated Michigan State 4-1 on Cartier Field yesterday afternoon. Freshman Rich Herdegen scored three goals in the first 15 minutes of the game to pace the Irish, who are 8-0-2 on the season. Herdegen now shares the team goal-scoring lead with Sami Kahale and Mario Manta with eight goals apiece. Junior Mike Sullivan scored the other Irish goal four minutes into the second half. Kahale and Manta each had two assists. Kahale's ten assists leads the team. Michigan State's Henry Ndukwu ruined John Milligan's shut-out bid with a goal at the 66:38 mark. The next game for the Irish is tomorrow at 2:00 on Alumni Field against the University of Chicago. — The Observer

Big Ten football race heats up

By JOE MOOSHIL
Associated Press

The very young Big Ten football race resumes today, but already defending champion Michigan and Purdue, the team that has had the best overall record in the conference the last three seasons, have their backs against the wall.

"If we lose again we're out of it," said Michigan Coach Bo Schembechler. "That is a great deal of pressure to play under each and every week but we have nobody to blame but ourselves."

The reason is Michigan's earlier loss to Wisconsin. Purdue finds itself in the same fix because of an unexpected loss to Minnesota.

Both teams will have the added burden of being on the road this week. Michigan is at Indiana and Purdue goes to Wisconsin to play a game which will be televised regionally.

Two other conference games are on the agenda with Minnesota at Illinois and giant-killer Iowa at Northwestern. Ohio State takes on Florida State and Michigan State is at Notre Dame to clean up nonconference action where Big Ten teams already have a lopsided 13-7 record against intersectional foes.

Because of this success against outside foes which includes Iowa victories over Nebraska and UCLA, a pair of triumphs over Notre Dame and two more over Stanford, some observers feel there will be a real race in the Big Ten instead of the usual showdown between Michigan and Ohio State.

As a result there will be special interest in the Minnesota at Illinois and Purdue at Wisconsin games where Illinois and Purdue are very slight favorites.

And if the situation comes down to going for a tie or a possible win-loss, Purdue Coach Jim Young indicated he might go for a tie instead of the two points which lifted Purdue past Notre Dame 15-14 last week.

"Two losses and you're out of the Big Ten race," said Young. "One loss and a tie would keep us in the race."

Young also was concerned about Wisconsin's defense led by nose guard Tim Krumrie.

Wisconsin Coach Dave McClain called Purdue "An excellent football team. I think we're equally matched and the breaks should determine the game."

Illinois rested last week. The Illini opened the season with a loss at fourth-ranked Pitt before knocking off Michigan State and Syracuse. In Minnesota, the Illini will be facing the only Big Ten team other than Ohio State that is undefeated.

Michigan and Iowa are heavily favored but Iowa coach Hayden Fry is bothered by the rash of injuries suffered in the UCLA triumph. Nevertheless, the Hawkeyes should hand Northwestern its 24th straight defeat which would be four shy of the NCAA record of 28 shared by Kansas State and Virginia.

Fry also is aware that Northwestern coach Dennis Green went to Iowa and said "I'm sure Coach Green would enjoy nothing more than beating his alma mater."

... Surprise

Junior Kathy Ray also continues to get better, according to Galen. Ray leads the team in scoring and says of the season so far, "I'm really excited by all this. It's our best start ever in my three years here and it's just great. We also have the most skill ever and the most enthusiasm."

"On top of this season's success so far," Ray continues, "we have no seniors on the squad so next season looks even better." Other strong players include sophomores Clare Henry and Karen Korowicki, along with junior Deborah Raehl, who never played field hockey before she came to Notre Dame.

Galen is pleased with the freshmen she has, but is most impressed with Mary Urn, Katherine Wagner and Michele Rooney. "Urn is showing a lot of promise," Galen says. "Wagner is an excellent player, and Rooney is as well, with two sisters playing here before her."

With ten more matches, including one tomorrow against Indiana at 11 a.m. on Cartier Field, Galen seems confident that her team will do well. Since there are only three Division II field hockey teams in Indiana, the Irish already have an automatic berth into the regional tournament.

If they are successful there, they will advance to the national finals the weekend of November 22. Galen feels an October 18 match at Colgate will provide a good gauge of how successful the team will be on the national level, since Colgate was second in the nation last season in Division II.

"I think we'll do real well," Galen comments. "We have a much improved team from last year and a tremendous amount of talent."

Notre Dame wingback Tony Hunter has not only found a new position, but also a new religion. Over the summer, Hunter converted to Catholicism. See Mike Monk's story at right. (photo by John Macor)

Hunter converts on, off field

By MIKE MONK
Sports Writer

It is a rare occasion when that elusive concept of the "perfect" football player is truly realized. In the past, such legends as Frank Gifford and George Connor have displayed their incomparable talents on playing fields of old, but those days are long gone.

The contemporary version of the game relies heavily on platooning and "specialty" players, having phased out the "all-around" athlete who played both offense and defense.

But now it appears that a distant relative of this forsaken player has been successfully resurrected and is alive and well at Notre Dame. The position is wingback, and under Gerry Faust's complex multiple offense the wingback does everything from receiving, running and passing to leading the marching band out on to the field at half-time.

Naturally, such a demanding position would require the talents of the most versatile of athletes. Faust did not have to look very hard before selecting former split-end and Moeller alumnus Tony Hunter for that difficult job.

The choice was, to say the least, anti-climactic. Hunter has been recognized by his coaches and the press as the best athlete under the Golden Dome; and claiming that he is perhaps the most talented athlete playing collegiate football today would not constitute an exaggeration of any kind.

The abilities of such a skilled craftsman should be utilized to their utmost potential. Often times, though, players become unhappy when forced to move from their normal position to a new one. But in the case of Hunter, no such evidence supports this theory.

"I really like the position and feel very comfortable at it," explains Hunter. "I like the many things it requires me to do and I really enjoy being involved in the game the way I am. There's no way I would ever want to go back to split-end after playing wingback."

The transition to wingback is only one of several changes and events which have occurred in Hunter's life the past several months. Over the summer Tony joined six other college football players, most notably Art Schlichter of Ohio State, in a nationwide college football media tour sponsored by ABC Television and the NCAA. The group traveled to the "seven major football cities," giving massive press conferences in each one, the purpose being to promote college football. Although the tour lasted only ten days, it brought about lasting memories for Hunter.

"It was a great time," he exclaims. "We traveled all over the country and met a lot of interesting people...Roone Arledge, Keith Jackson. It was a great experience."

While attending summer school at Notre Dame last summer, Hunter was befallen with an entirely different experience. It was during this time, after years of deliberation, that he decided to convert to Catholicism.

"I've been thinking about converting ever since I was a freshman in high school," he confides. "I've been debating whether to do it and I kept putting it off and putting it off. Finally, I just decided to do it while I was up here at summer school. I feel it was the most important decision in my life and I feel really good about it."

Many people who have learned of Hunter's conversion have often missed out to thinking that he suddenly, mysteriously "got" religion. But those close to him know that Hunter's deep faith in God has always been an integral part of his life, and his conversion has acted to solidify that faith.

"I have a better personal relationship with God now than I did before," confesses Hunter. "When times get hard, I can turn to Him and see the good of those hard times. I didn't do that very well before."

There were several reasons why he decided to convert, he says, but none more important than the fact that he possessed a great desire to better himself as a person and as a Christian.

"I feel that the different religions really don't make a difference," Hunter says. "I feel that becoming the best Christian you can possibly become, that's the difference. And I feel being in this Catholic environment here at Notre Dame could help me become the best Christian that I could become. And I thought I could become a better Christian by being a Catholic."

Although his internal debate whether to convert covered a span of six years, Hunter has had a deep faith in God for as long as he remembers. Tony attributes this to his mother, who always seemed to come up with the silver lining for every gray cloud.

"My mother has always stressed to me that sometimes the Good Lord won't always come to you when you want Him," recalls Hunter. "But somehow He always comes. He is always there and He's going to do what's best for you."

Hunter has managed to successfully incorporate his strong faith in God with another major aspect of his life, football.

"I used to get really down on myself when I didn't do something I thought I was able to do," he reflects. "But now that doesn't happen because I know I give it all I've got and that it just wasn't meant to be."

Tony's deep faith has helped him to better deal not only with individual setbacks, but also with the losses the Fighting Irish have suffered recently.

"We've had some pretty rough times this year," he understated, "and I don't know if I could have handled them last year or the year before."

In this day of the egocentric jock who has trouble placing a football helmet on his inflated head, it is truly refreshing to realize that there are still some Tony Hunters out there. He is a man who has both feet planted firmly on the ground. He understands his capabilities and limitations; he recognizes where he's come from and exactly where he's headed. But lest anyone be led to believe that Hunter walks around with a halo of spiritual perfection following him wherever he goes, let the man set the record straight himself.

"I know there are going to be times when I won't do things that I should do as a Christian," he says somberly. "But I know that I can always come back to my faith and that the Lord will always forgive me for it."

When it comes to living the life of the "perfect" Christian, Hunter may be just as lacking as the rest of us. But when it comes to attaining perfection on the football field, no one comes closer than number 85. All it takes is a little faith.

Field hockey Irish surprise all

By CHUCK GREENE
Sports Writer

Second-year field hockey coach Jan Galen has developed an excellent squad this season, having opened with a 7-4 record in its first three weeks of play.

Galen returned eight starters from last year's squad, and added to that group five on-campus recruits, three transfers, five freshmen, and one girl who had been abroad last year in Paris. "We have a young group with promising depth," says Galen, "and should produce a strong team. We learned a lot in camp, including a new system, and improved there as well. We have a fine front line, and an excellent defense."

Opening the season with such a flurry of victories did not surprise Coach Galen, but the margin of victory in the early matches did. "I knew we had improved from last season," she comments, "but until we beat Kalamazoo 9-0, I had no idea how substantial our improvements were, since we only beat them 1-0 last year."

This team abounds with outstanding individual players, such as junior co-captain Giana Marrone. Marrone leads the squad with two assists and has contributed to the team's excellent front line.

Galen says of Marrone, "She has displayed fine footwork and really needs no coaching. She works so hard, she even came to me at the end of last season and wanted her stick back to practice with in the off-season."

Other outstanding players include Jeanne Grasso, the team's Most Valuable Player last year. Galen says that Grasso's skills continue to improve and "she gives the whole team a sense of confidence when she's back there on defense."

Rebounding from Purdue; preparing for MSU

There's not much a coach can do or say to ease the pain after the heartbreaking loss we suffered at Purdue last Saturday. It was a game of emotional highs and lows for both teams and for us it ended on the lowest possible note.

What made the defeat so difficult to accept was that our players showed such great determination in driving 50 yards in only 57 seconds for the go-ahead touchdown only to be stunned minutes later by a series of great plays by Purdue and some last second heroics by Scott Campbell and Steve Bryant.

On our own drive it took Phil Carter, our fine tailback, just three plays to go half the length of the football field. His final 30 yards for the touchdown was an excellent display of his running ability. Unfortunately, Phil has seen limited action so far this year because of a pulled hamstring he suffered on the first day of fall practice.

Purdue, of course, must be given a world of credit for the way they were able to travel 80 yards in almost two-and-one half minutes, and to their quarterback Scott Campbell for coming up with the key plays that kept the drive alive. His final two passes, one for the touchdown and the other for the two-point conversion, were picture perfect. And when you consider all the pressure he was under in both situations, his performance becomes all the more remarkable.

As some can imagine, our lockerroom was a solemn place following the game. Everyone had that empty feeling that comes after losing a close, hard-fought game. It is a feeling that stays with you until you win again. It is also a feeling that should serve as extra motivation for the next game.

I felt in the second half we moved the ball rather consistently but we just couldn't get it into the end zone. Four times we had the ball inside Purdue's 35-yard line and didn't get any points, and we've got to do better than that. Defensively, we have to tighten up things and get a little more pressure on the quarterback. Our secondary didn't do a bad job of covering but we gave Campbell too much time and he often made the play good by either throwing on the run or running himself. Even so, we did some good things at times. We stopped Purdue three times on fourth down, and even when they got down to our one-yard line in the last minute of the game, we got great efforts on the first three downs, even pushing them back seven yards. But Campbell's fourth down pass play was the beginning of the end.

Gerry Faust

This week we will be playing Michigan State, our third Big Ten team in a row and the first of five consecutive home games in the next six weeks.

Michigan State's quarterback, John Leister, is much the same kind of player that Purdue's Campbell is, so our secondary and defensive line will again be severely tested. So far this season, Leister has completed 42 of 93 passes for 553 yards and he has some excellent receivers in Daryl Turner, Ted Jones and Otis Grant.

One of our big concerns, however, will be the health of our offensive unit since there are some starters still on the doubtful list because of injuries. Two of the players, linebacker Joe Rudzinski and defensive end Pat Kramer missed the Purdue game and may not be ready to play this week. Two others, defensive tackle Bob Clasby and cornerback John Krimm, may have to sit out our game against the Spartans. Offensively, we will be without the services of left guard Randy Ellis, who was unable to make the trip last week, and Dave Condenti, our split end who underwent surgery Sunday after sustaining a knee injury in last Saturday's game.

Because there are a number of doubtful performers we will in all likelihood move other players up from the junior varsity team. We were able to get a number of these players some playing time last Sunday when they played against the Purdue reserves. Playing a four or five game schedule gives the junior varsity actual playing experience, the kind of action they normally cannot get during practice week. Our coaches then have an opportunity to view the films and are able to check on the progress of each player, advancing those that demonstrate they are capable of helping out in positions that need added depth on the varsity. It also gives the players something to look forward to after putting in a lot of work helping to prepare the varsity for an upcoming game. The fun of playing in a game at any level is the reward for all the time spent on the practice field.

The game following a defeat becomes a double challenge for any team. Not only does it have to overcome the opponent, but there's the further challenge to prove to itself that it can overcome adversity. Good teams do both.

Band celebrates anniversary

By ROBERT WALSH
Sports Writer

The Marching Band of the Fighting Irish is celebrating its 135th anniversary of continuous existence. The band has experienced a memorable and eventful past. The 1981 version looks forward to continuing that tradition with the sense of cohesiveness and enthusiasm that has long been typical of Notre Dame bands. The first documented evidence of the Notre Dame band dates back to commencement of 1846. The band has played at "the circle" at the entrance of the University for students leaving in every war since the Civil War. It played a benefit concert for the victims of the Chicago Fire in 1871 and the band was giving concerts for years before Theodore Thomas established the Chicago Symphony Orchestra.

In 1887 Notre Dame played its first football game and the band was on hand, and the group has not missed a home game since. The Notre Dame band was among the first in the United States to perform precision drills and picture formations during the pre-game and halftime festivities.

Saint Mary's girls were added to the membership in 1970 and the group expanded its coeducational policy when the University began admitting women in 1972. The band was declared a "Landmark of American Music" in 1976 by the National Music Council and the Indiana Music Educators Association. Thus it is easy to see how rich a tradition the organization has.

The present director is Dr. Robert O'Brien, who has been the man in charge since 1952. The faculty assistant director is Mr. James Phillips who received that appointment in 1965.

Senior Joe Wren is this year's president. He feels one of the most important factors of the Marching Band is unity. "The band here always has been a highly spirited group," When says, "and this is because of the unity of band members. This year we have 220 in the Marching Band, including 65 freshmen. We try to plan various functions among band members to try to promote togetherness."

Wren says the band will continue to strive for excellence while planning a few new things. "We've already played at Michigan, and of course we'll continue to play at all the home games and a possible bowl game if the Irish are selected. We're always expanding our program. In fact, during this week's game against Michigan State, we plan on using a new post-game formation."

This year's drum major is junior Toni Faini, the second woman in as many years to lead the band on the field. Last year, Saint Mary's senior Linda Batista was the first female drum major in the group's history.

Faini feels the cohesiveness and spirit of the band are very important. "We're together a lot, because we practice as a group from two to three hours a day, five days a week," she says. "We get to know each other really well and become the closest of friends. This is more than a band that marches on to a field."

If they dedicate so much time each day to band practice, how do band members still find time to socialize? "To me, this is a social group," responds Faini, "an outlet from yard field goal. Those were the only points his team would score in a 27-3 thrashing, but the kick was good enough to get Anderson in the record book as having tied the distance mark in a stadium. Only Dave Reeve's 53-yarder in a 31-10 Notre Dame loss to Pittsburgh had ever gone that distance.

Both left-footers, Oliver and Anderson are familiar with long field goal tries. In the regular season, Oliver was 2-2 from the other side of midfield, while Anderson has hit 6 of his 17 tries at 50 yards or more during his career. In fact, the Dane, a double major in German and communications at MSU, once tried to equal the NCAA record in a game against Ohio State. The 67-yard attempt fell just short, however.

"He really can do it all," Waters claims without hesitation. "In fact, he's only had one kick-off returned all year long, for just 11 yards. He's simply amazing."

Anderson hopes to take his amazing act on the road, and straight to the NFL, after graduation.

"I want to make the pros because I love to kick," he says. "And to earn money for something I enjoy so much."

There are those kickers who spend their time hoping the outcome of a game will come down to the accuracy of one of their kicks. Both these men are confident, but would rather see their team win than their own name in another record book. As Oliver says, "I hope we win every game by three touchdowns."

Should things work out differently, however, for either side, two of the nation's best placekickers will be on the sidelines, and ready to come in to insure victory at a moment's notice.

tacular performance in last season's 26-21 win over MSU, rushing one yard shy of Notre Dame's single-game mark of 255 yards. After missing most of the first two games with a hamstring pull this season, Carter returned to his all-American form against Purdue last Saturday with a 113 yard effort.

Quarterback Tim Koegel, fullback John Sweeney and wingback Tony Hunter all get the call again in the backfield Saturday, though freshmen runners Chris Smith and Mark Brooks looked good last week and should play. Both have moved up to second team on the depth chart.

The defense has been plagued by injuries, wreaking havoc with Faust's platooning on the line. They'll have a tough time keeping the Spartans from scoring, since MSU kicker Morten Anderson has connected on 16 of his last 20 field goals. Seven of those have been from 50 yards or more, including last week's 63-yard Big Ten record breaker against Ohio State.

Despite Notre Dame's slow start, Faust hasn't pushed any panic buttons yet. "We're a good football team. We simply have to stop eliminating the little mistakes. But we're getting there — one of these days, we're just going to explode."

Irish fans hope the fireworks begin Saturday.

IRISH ITEMS — Guard Randy Ellis and cornerback John Krimm will probably miss a few more games with knee sprains... Tackle Pat Kramer (shoulder), Bob Clasby (ankle) and linebacker Joe Rudzinski (shoulder) are doubtful for tomorrow's contest... Jeff Lueken returned to the line-up at right end behind Kevin Griffith versus Purdue, and should see action tomorrow... also returning is Tim Tripp, though he's been moved from wingback to split end due to the loss of Dave Condeni... Tackle Mike Liebenstein may be out for the year with a congenital back problem.

posed. They called a couple of times and made me feel like I was needed, but I would have to prove myself. I liked that because too many things were given to me out west. As a junior in high school I rushed for more than 1600 yards and proceeded to have a terrible senior year. I was still named to the all-State team and several all-American teams. It was really ridiculous. That's why I liked Notre Dame. I was tired of being spoiled."

Carter proved himself early, playing in all but two games as a freshman gaining 145 yards on 27 carries for a 5.4 yard average. His efforts earned him the Hop Award each of the last two springs as top offensive back in spring drills. His 822 yards last year is the 11th best season total in Notre Dame history.

Professional football is a definite possibility for Carter after graduation. However, majoring in communication, he is interested in business public relations, preferably in the state of Washington.

"I would definitely like to give pro football a shot, but I don't have to rely on it. I figure if something happens, God had a reason for it happening."
