American delegation departs for Cairo

WASHINGTON (AP) — With three former presidents at his side yesterday, President Reagan said the American people stand together with the people of Egypt in mourning Anwar Sadat and in "rededicating ourselves to the cause for which he gave his life."

In a brief ceremony at the south side of the White House, Reagan bade farewell to the American delegation to Sadat's funeral tomorrow — a delegation that included former Presidents Jimmy Carter, Gerald Ford and Richard Nixon.

Directing remarks at those who rejoiced at the Egyptian president's death, Reagan said, "In life you feared Anwar Sadat, but in death you must fear him more."

Hours before the American delegation left for Cairo, Reagan invited the slain Egyptian leader's successor, Hosni Mubarak, on a state visit early next year.

Reagan issued the invitation through Ashraf Ghorbal, the Egyptian ambassador here, when the envoy visited the Oval Office yesterday to receive Reagan's condolences on the assassination.

The president, in a voice barely audible to reporters, told the ambassador that since Sadat's death Tuesday, "depression settles on me. You get busy doing something, and then it comes back again. It's a tragedy. How useless, how senseless."

In a meeting also attended by Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. and Richard V. Allen, the president's national security adviser, Reagan also stressed that the United States' relationship with Egypt "is from nation to nation," an indication that it would not be affected by Sadat's death.

Haig was the ranking administration official in the U.S. delegation to Sadat's funeral.

The three former presidents met with Reagan at the White House and then flew by helicopter from the South Lawn to Andrews Air Force Base, where they boarded a presidential jetliner and left about 7:50 p.m. EDT for the flight to Egypt.

It was the first time in recent memory that a current president and three predecessors had gathered at the same place.

Carter, on his way from the South Lawn to the helicopter, shook hands with several reporters and said "this is a sad occasion." Nixon, looking tanned, and Ford headed straight for the helicopter.

Reagan also had invited the top four congressional leaders to join the delegation but they decided against attending the funeral, as did Reagan and Vice President Bush, whose aides cited security fears as the reason.

The Reagan administration stood by Haig's statement Wednesday that he was encouraged by the continuity of Egypt's policies.

"There is every indication the Egyptian government is moving forward in its constitutional process," said David R. Gergen, Reagan's assistant for communications.

"He was very kind to reminisce over the recent visit of President and

Prof. Rice discusses abortion

By SUSAN FLECK
News Staff

The Thomas More Society sponsored Prof. Charles E. Rice from the Notre Dame Law School in a talk concerning the legal ramifications of abortion. To an attentive audience in O'Shaughnessy Hall, he spoke for an hour and answered questions.

The professor presented his views on why abortion is objectively wrong, based on his work on the Human Life Amendment as well as his writings.

Rice presented the legal reasons that justify abortion. He spoke to the audience of the Supreme Court's decisions which declare that a mother has the right to reproductive privacy, under the Fourteenth Amendment, and that the unborn child is not considered a legal person. Since a human being in this case is a non-person, he has no rights, and is therefore not protected under any laws. Similar situations have occurred in the past, such as the Dred Scott decision and Nazi treatment of the Jews, according to Rice.

He further explained the Supreme Court's pro-abortion ruling by indicating three social trends which affect the Court's decision-making. Legal positivism, a theory that no one is capable of determining right and wrong in society, states that force wins and that man must follow the rules set forth by that force.

Secondly, the secularism of our present day government has promoted the neutrality of the Court in moral issues, making it impossible to determine a case concerning theism, since it does not take into account the aspect of non-theism. The professor pointed out that although the U.S. was initially founded on a belief in God, it is now the state which forms the highest law. Today's children do not recognize right or wrong in society.

The third trend considered was the contraceptive mentality. Seventy-five percent of married couples today use contraceptives. As early as 1965, married couples were allowed the privacy to make their own decision in this matter.

Egypt tightens security

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Egypt assured foreign dignitaries Wednesday they will be adequately protected during President Anwar Sadat's state funeral. Officials also said "some" policemen and one Moslem extremist were killed during clashes in the southern city of Assiut.

"They will be protected," Egypt's undersecretary for foreign affairs, Ossama el-Baz, said of the world leaders who are due here for tomorrow's services. "The fact an incident (Tuesday's assassination) took place does not mean the country is unsafe."

The original funeral plans and route have been simplified to facilitate security.

El-Baz also told a news conference that "we understand the reason why President Reagan is not coming." The White House said Reagan would not attend the funeral because of security considerations.

He also said police repulsed an effort by "a few young men" to storm two police stations in Assiut, a city 240 miles south of Cairo on the Nile River and known for its Islamic fundamentalism.

The official Middle East News Agency said one Moslem was killed and "some" police were killed and wounded in the attack. Security sources in Cairo said at least two officers and 10 other people were killed in attacks.

MENA said three of the Moslems were captured and others were being sought by police.

Security sources had earlier said anti-riot police fired on Moslems who gathered after dawn prayers in violation of a ban on meetings imposed during the one-year state of emergency decreed after Sadat's assassination.

Fundamentalists have frequently clashed with police and with members of Egypt's minority Coptic Christian community in Assiut over the last two years. Egyptian officials have linked Islamic fundamentalist to the assassination of Sadat, who ordered several Moslem and Coptic leaders arrested last month to quell sectarian violence.

A presidential spokesman said the funeral tomorrow will be confined to Nasr Stadium and the adjacent parade grounds where Sadat was killed Tuesday. The stadium and parade area are in Nasr City, a northeastern suburb about three miles from the center of Cairo.

The change of plans was to protect dignitaries at the funeral. They include Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr., former Presidents Jimmy Carter, Gerald R. Ford and Richard M. Nixon, Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin, French President Francois Mitterrand and Britain's Prince Charles.

The spokesman said prayer services for Sadat will be in a mosque on the grounds of Maadi military hospital in southern Cairo where Sadat died. Surrounded by concrete walls and iron fences, the hospital grounds are heavily

Farmers employ Jamaicans

By STEVEN MORRISON
Associated Press Writer

AUBURN, Maine — The business is apples and the aim is money, but in the 10 years Jamaicans have picked apples for Eugene and Lois Wallingford in southern Maine, the profits have extended beyond the ledger.

In addition to dedicated work and easy-going friendliness, the Jamaicans have brought the Wallingfords a new understanding of another culture to Maine.

Walter Walker first came to the Wallingfords' 115-acre orchard atop picturesque Perkins Ridge in 1971. For six weeks each fall, the 45-year-old Jamaican farmer does what few Americans want to do.

He's in the orchard by 8, up and down a 22-foot ladder lugging 30 pounds of apples in a tin and canvas bag again to his chest, in temperatures 40 degrees cooler than it ever gets in St. Elizabeth, Jamaica.

But that's OK with Walker and the other Jamaicans, because they earn more in a week, $175, than they do working at home for a month.

And it's fine for the Wallingfords, because a Jamaican will pick eight times as many apples as the occasional American who gives it a serious shot.

FRIDAY FOCUS

For the past 10 years, Maine's 24 largest apple producers have hired about 450 Jamaicans for each fall's apple harvest. More than 6,000 work throughout the Northeast apple region, picking for the basic wage of $3.44 an hour, but working fast enough to earn up to $50 a day on the additional piecework pay.

The New England Apple Council arranges work for the Jamaicans through a Kingston-based organization called the British West Indies Central Labor Group.

Americans and Canadians used to do the job, but Americans got lazy and Canadians have turned to more profitable industrial jobs, said Eugene Wallingford, a slight, wry, 50-year-old Maine farmer who grows apples where his father grew them since the 1920s.

"The Jamaican is the best picker I've ever seen," Wallingford said.

Edward M. Gaffney, associate director of the Center for Constitutional Studies at Notre Dame since 1977, has been appointed director by University Provost Timothy O'Meara. The provost also announced that the center's previous director, Philip R. Moots, would assume the position of chairman of the center's advisory council, which O'Meara himself has occupied since 1979. Gaffney holds a J.D. from Catholic University and an LL.M. from Harvard Law School. The new leader of Egypt, Vice President Hosni Mubarak, pledged in his first American television interview to adhere to the Camp David peace accords with Israel. "We are committed to what we have already signed," Mubarak said in the interview with CBS correspondent Walter Cronkite broadcast last night. The interview was filmed in Mubarak's home. Mubarak appeared with a bandaged left hand, which he said was hurt when he was pushed down in the confusion that surrounded the shooting of President Anwar Sadat on Tuesday. Asked if he had any ideas on new approaches to foreign or domestic affairs, Mubarak said, "We have to follow the same procedure and the same line." Reminded that he won a reputation as a strict disciplinarian as head of the Egyptian Air Force, Mubarak replied, "Correct. I like discipline." Asked what he feared, Mubarak replied, "I fear nothing." — AP

CBS News special correspondent Walter Cronkite has quit the board of directors of Pan American World Airways rather than restrict his reporting on the U.S. space program. His resignation was announced yesterday by Pan Am. Cronkite was in Egypt covering the assassination and funeral of President Anwar Sadat, and was not available for comment. The former "CBS Evening News" anchorman, in a letter of resignation released by Pan Am, said CBS news had removed him from coverage of the space program before the first space shuttle flight in April because of the airline's relationship with the National Aeronautics and Space Administration. Cronkite joined the Pan Am board March 9, just after he had stepped down as "Evening News" anchorman. — AP

President Reagan picked up more Senate support yesterday for his sale of AWACS radar planes to Saudi Arabia but an Associated Press count shows the lineup still against him, 57 to 30. Republican Nancy Kassebaum of Kansas met with Reagan and then became the eighth senator in two days to speak out in behalf of the $8.5 billion package. "I think the assassination of President Sadat makes it crucial that we reach out to all moderate governments" in the region, the senator said. She said the United States should make the sale and "take a gamble that it will be productive" in enlisting Saudi support for the U.S. Middle East peace initiative. But the AP count now shows 50 senators committed against the sale and another seven others leaning against it. It shows 21 senators firmly in favor of the sale and another nine leaning that way. The remaining 13 senators say they are uncommitted. — AP

The United States spent millions over the past four administrations in an attempt to help ensure the safety of Egyptian President Anwar Sadat, slain Tuesday as he reviewed a military parade in Cairo. The assistance, including the loan of AWACS radar planes to protect Sadat on some of his travels, was confirmed Thursday by past and present administration officials. "We provided training and assistance over various times over the past few years," said Dean Fischer, the State Department spokesman. A high-ranking official of the Carter administration said the United States helped train Sadat's bodyguards, recommended and perhaps provided sensor and other intruder detection devices at Sadat's homes, and made available a highly sensitive and secret communications system that guaranteed intercept-free conversations. — AP

With jury selection complete, defense attorneys prepared motions to be heard Monday in the trial of Vickie Daniel, accused of murdering her estranged husband, former Texas House Speaker Price Daniel Jr. Almost three days of selection ended as an eight-man, four-woman panel was seated Wednesday. Testimony was expected to begin next Wednesday. Prosecutors allege Mrs. Daniel killed her husband with a .22-caliber rifle during a bitter quarrel over an impending divorce at their ranch near Liberty, Texas. Mrs. Daniel, 34, pleaded innocent to the murder charge. — AP

North Korean Ambassador Jong Myong Su on Thursday indicated the son of the current North Korean president would succeed his father. He said at a press conference to mark the 36th anniversary of the founding of the Korean Communist Party: "Comrade Kim Jong Il, the sole successor to the revolutionary cause of the great leader... the brilliant sun of the communist future, the wise leader of our party and our people presented a lot of new theories and lines in order to complete the revolutionary cause to the end which great comrade (President) Kim Il Sung started." It had long been believed the North Korean president was grooming his son to take over, but it had never been officially confirmed. — AP

The student center blues

It's been one week now since a group of our student leaders faced the executive board of the Notre Dame Alumni Association. The Student Body President and Vice-President were there. The Student Union Director and the chairman of the Hall Presidents' Council were also in attendance. In all, eight of us were asked to stand before the highly distinguished group in a conference room at the CCE and give an account of the state of student affairs on campus.

Each student detailed his or her duties and goals as the leader of a particular student organization, and each of the alumni were duly impressed with the presentations.

But when all was said and done, the subject which drew the most attention was the continuing dilemma over a modern and functional student center for the Notre Dame campus.

Bill Lawler, Student Union director, first raised the sticky subject when he outlined the dismal performance of Chautauqua or, as the floundering entity is now known, The LaFortune Club.

Many of the alumni reacted with dismay when Lawler reported that, in spite of the $10,000 already coughed up by the University this semester, the big room on the second floor of LaFortune continues to draw only meager crowds.

Lawler explained that Chautauqua wasn't in the business of generating profit. It is in the business of entertaining the largest possible number of students per dollar, however. And as far as meeting that objective is concerned, Chautauqua has been an unmitigated disaster.

On nights when bands have been booked, the Student Union had expected Chautauqua to be drawing somewhere around 300 patrons. The actual attendance figure has on occasion dipped to 30.

"Why the poor turnout?" the perplexed alumni asked. The commitment has been made in terms of seed money from the University, and a stage and sound system have been installed — but still, students are staying away by the hundreds. And LaFortune is located right at the pedestrian center of the campus.

Essentially, the answer to the problem, as many now realize, is not to continue pouring good money after bad into the Chautauqua White Elephant. Unless the Placement Bureau plans to relocate its center for conducting corporate job interviews, the ballroom of LaFortune will continue to be a half-hearted attempt at an entertainment facility. There are also fundamental questions involving poor acoustics and seating arrangements that seem very difficult to overcome without radically altering the aging LaFortune structure itself.

The consensus among the students and alumni present at last Friday's meeting was clear: Notre Dame needs an up-to-date student center to serve the growing needs of our student body.

John McGrath
Editor in Chief

In particular, members of the Alumni Association's Student Affairs Committee, including John Short, Patty Dondanville, Paul Kruse, and the legendary Nurdy Hoffman, strongly backed up the student view presented by Lawler and Murday. Their support is quite an encouraging sign — a sign that points to some important backing by some of the most influential people connected with Notre Dame.

Although the success in enlisting alumni support can be considered a major milestone in the seemingly endless quest of the elusive student center, one obstacle among many still remains. In fact, there probably is no more fundamental obstacle to the actual groundbreaking.

That basic barrier is simply a lack of consensus over the nature of the proposed student center.

We all agree that something must be done to improve the amount and quality of the social space on campus — especially given the recent influx of 500 additional women. That is where all agreement seems to end.

Some feel that LaFortune can be adapted to fit any future needs. Others suggest that a new center be built in a central location on the campus, perhaps on the site of the old fieldhouse once its scheduled demolition takes place. Still others propose the construction of a student "mall" in the near section of Green Field to contain not only a student center, but also shops and perhaps an alumni visitors center. There is even one proposal that envisions a student center located along Saint Mary's Road near U.S. 31 to serve both Notre Dame and Saint Mary's.

Each of these proposals, and probably several more not listed here, command a close look and present unique opportunities of improving social life here. It goes without mentioning that each step forward in this area is another move ahead in the battle with alcohol abuse and depression among Notre Dame and Saint Mary's students.

Not all of the schemes can be implemented, however. In fact we're lucky if one of the proposals will see the light of day. It is essential, therefore, that the administration take steps immediately, not to forward any one proposal, but to conduct a serious audit of student, faculty, and alumni preferences in regard to the nature of facilities to be offered in any potential student center.

OCC, J-council serve ND

By GREG O'MEARA
Student Government

Editor's note: The following installment is part of a series of weekly updates on Student Government organizations.

This year Commissioner Kathy Jurado and her Off-Campus Commission are working to better communication among Notre Dame's off-campus community.

The Off-Campus Commission oversees the off-campus newsletter, Off the Record, and the off-campus bulletin board located in the lobby of LaFortune Student Center.

In addition, the commission works with Saint Mary's Off-Campus Council to sponsor social activities and masses. Mass is celebrated every Sunday night at 7:30 p.m. at Bulla Shed and also at 11 p.m. at Campus View Apartments.

Not only does the Commission focus on serving off-campus students, it functions as liaison between the University and its surrounding neighborhoods. Together with Campus Life Council, Ms. Jurado appointed a subcommittee to work on the Northeast neighborhood's problems and needs.

The off-campus commission is also involved in Neighborhood Roots, a program designed to introduce students to the South Bend community through meetings with their neighbors and neighborhood projects.

When asked about the crime situation, off-campus student Ray Helfer commented "It's a jungle out there." Ms. Jurado stresses the importance of taking precautions to secure off-campus homes and of relying on neighbors, "who are probably the best protection students have."

Students working this year with Commissioner Jurado are: Gerry Millman, assistant commissioner; Bill Christopher, crime prevention; Gus Hinojosa, off-campus newsletter; Lee Manfred, off-campus sports; and Jenny Doran, off-campus mass.

While the Off-Campus Commission centers around students who live in the surrounding area, Carol Silva's Judicial Council aims at assessing the system of disciplinary action that affects all members of the Notre Dame community. This evaluation begins with hall chairmen and judicial boards.

Relationships with rectors and revisions of hall constitutions are the main emphases at the hall level.

Every month, Hall J-Board chairmen meet to discuss cases and concerns of students. Hall chairman and Commissioner Silva also serve as judicial counsellors for students accused of University violations. Because members of the J-Board have more familiarity with the University regulations than the average student does, they maintain a better position to evaluate situations concerning students' rights.

Silva stresses the importance of student awareness of University regulations.

Recently the Judicial Council sent flyers to all students outlining the appeals system.

Ms. Silva said that this year's Judicial Council will be strengthened by the coordinated efforts of the Administration, hall staff and students.

Fed budget cuts affect SMC financial aid

By MARK ROLFES
News Staff

Saint Mary's College students will be hard hit by upcoming federal budget cuts in student assistance programs, according to SMC Financial Aid Director Judy Casey.

Hardest hit will most likely be the Guaranteed Student Loan (GSL) program, the most utilized program among Saint Mary's students. This program features a guaranteed loan of $2500 to all students, regardless of family income. This loan is interest free until graduation, a very attractive feature in times of 20 percent interest rates.

Reagan has proposed substantial reductions in GSL, as well as Basic Educational Opportunity Grants (BEOG) and National Direct Student Loans (NDSL). The new appropriations have yet to pass through Congress, but are expected to do so in the next week. Casey fears Congress may cut more than Reagan has asked for, which leaves the full effect of the Reagan cuts in doubt.

Casey said that Saint Mary's students received a total of $2.5 million in government assistance last year with an additional $500,000 in Saint Mary's scholarships, loans and grants. The Financial Aid Office is asking the college to raise the second figure next year to help cushion the effect of the federal cuts.

Sixty percent of Saint Mary's students receive some assistance from federal programs, and Casey estimates that between thirty and forty percent of them will have problems due to the cuts. The Reagan proposal dictates that students from families with incomes of over $30,000 must prove need.

Another source of aid to college students is the College Work Study (CWS) program. This funding should not be cut too heavily, but Casey said that the funding from this program has always been deficient. Saint Mary's students have a hard time finding jobs to help out with school costs, according to Casey.

The cuts in student assistance programs are another part of Reagan's overall budget cuts. He has long claimed that private education is "a privilege and not a right".

A fresh approach to good food. Low Prices.

At last, South Bend has a restaurant where you can eat real nice and not beef about the price. Barclay's Meat & Produce. Where good food is an everyday affair.

guarded and anti-riot police are posted at the gate.

From the hospital the coffin will be flown by helicopter to Nasr Stadium, then placed on a horse-drawn caisson at 11 a.m. (5 a.m. EDT). The funeral procession is to proceed about a half-mile to the parade grounds, the spokesman said. There are no high buildings or residential houses in the open area.

At the parade grounds, Sadat is to be buried temporarily in the tomb of the unknown soldier. Originally, the funeral was to be held at the Raba' elAdaweya mosque in Nasr City's main square, about 11 miles from the parade grounds. But this was changed because the mosque area is heavily populated.

Sadat's final resting place, a mausoleum and mosque, is now being built on the site of the reviewing stand where the president was watching a military parade when the assassins broke ranks in the parade and charged Sadat, throwing grenades and firing rifles.

Egyptian officials, including the new leader, Vice President Hosni Mubarak, have said the attack on Sadat was mounted by four assailants led by a Moslem fanatic. Sadat rounded up more than 1,500 foes last month on suspicion of fomenting Moslem-Christian strife.

The newspaper Al-Akbar quoted Defense Minister Abdel Halim Abu Ghazala as saying two of Sadat's assailants were civilians masquerading as soldiers, and a third was a retired reserve officer. The fourth was identified as a major and Moslem fundamentalist whose brother was executed by the government in connection with a Moslem attack on the Cairo military academy in 1974.

Egyptian officials have been quoted as saying that Sadat stood up Tuesday to salute the men charging the reviewing stand, thinking they wanted to present arms. But Deputy Prime Minister Fuad Mohieddin said after Sadat realized what was happening he continued standing, "defying and confronting" the attackers.

Witnesses gave different versions, however.

Military attaches and diplomats who attended the parade told The Associated Press that Sadat's security forces failed to react. They also questioned the government version that the murder team was limited to four men, three of whom masqueraded as soldiers and sneaked onto the truck.

Photographers at the scene said that as soon as the gunfire started, security officers turned their weapons on the cameramen and announced, "no pictures."

News film taken from a tower at one side of the reviewing stand showed Sadat's attackers were able to charge right up to the edge of the chest-high barrier in front of him and repeatedly fire their automatic rifles at point-black range, without anyone apparently returning fire.

There were a few frames that showed security guards apparently running away or simply standing nearby without drawing their weapons. But in a TV film, one security guard could be seen firing his pistol at three fleeing attackers — without hitting them.

At least three Western military attaches who saw the attack at close range said there was no effective return fire.

Wallingford said he was the second grower in Maine to employ Jamaicans. Two men from the 1971 crew come back year after year because of the bond they have with the Wallingfords.

Lois Wallingford is a robust, 47-year-old woman with sparkling blue eyes. The Jamaicans call her "Mum." While her husband talks about the Jamaicans' value as hard workers, she speaks of the cultural impact they have made on her family and her community.

"They'll come into work in the morning so cheerful, that they just cheer me right up," Mrs. Wallingford said. "It's been great for our kids, more than anyone else. The Jamaicans saw the kids playing kick-ball one time, and showed them soccer. It's given the kids the opportunity to learn about another culture."

But the mer presence of the Jamaican apple pickers has created some uneasiness, she admitted. "I'll be walking through a store with the Jamaicans and I'll see someone I know, who'll pretend she doesn't know me," she said. "I haven't lost any friends, but some aren't as close as they used to be."

Supreme Court's ruling on abortion, Rice brought up the subject of personhood. He contested that an unborn child, as well as an elderly person, has the right to be recognized as a legal entity.

Rice described a case in which the doctor literally strangled the infant in the womb. The doctor was not tried for homicide, but on the question of whether or not the abortion was completed. In considering the case of a newborn infant strangled by a doctor just after birth, the action would definitely be a crime, according to Rice.

This brings the law into question as in how it decides the point of true personhood.

As the decision of the Supreme Court rests now, abortion during the first trimester of pregnancy cannot be subject to any state law. During the second trimester until viability a state is able to regulate but not prohibit abortion. From viability to birth the state can both regulate and prohibit abortion. By saying that there is a certain time at which an unborn child is capable "of meaningful life outside the mother's womb", the definition of viability, the Court takes an ambiguous stand, Rice explained.

When does life begin? When does personhood begin? According to Prof. Rice, life begins at conception in the form of a human being. This human being is also a person, with all the rights to be protected by the state. It appears that in the legal decisions, the right to privacy overshadows the right to personhood. Prof. Rice refutes that, following his definition of personhood, this privacy infringes on a right to life for the unborn child involved.

Mrs. Sadat," Ghorbal said outside the White House after the meeting. "He assured me that the relationship (between the United States and Egypt) solid as it is ... will continue to grow."

He said the relationship "is the cornerstone of all our efforts to bring peace and stability" to the Middle East.

Ghorbal confirmed Reagan's invitation to Mubarak but offered no immediate reply.

In addition to Haig and the three former presidents, the delegation included Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger, former Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, U.N. Ambassador Jeane Kirkpatrick, Army Chief of Staff Gen. Edward C. Meyer.

The group also included Stevie Wonder, the entertainer, and Sam Brown, a 14-year-old from Liberty, S.C., who spent a week in Egypt in 1979 after a letter he wrote to Sadat caught the Egyptian leader's attention.

Today's 'Sammy' clue

Here is today's clue to this year's Homecoming Search, "Sammy Seminole Could Be Hiding Anywhere": The Seminole has been hiding since June, 1976 in weCanSTOp StaTe.

Correction regarding yesterday's clue: It should have read "Torrez," not "Perez."

When you find the answer to these clues, come to the Student Union office, second floor, LaFortune Student Center. The winner will receive dinner for two at a local restaurant.

“Imagine all the people living life in peace...”

A dark and pervasive silence settled early Tuesday morning throughout the newsroom of the South Bend Tribune, and by the time the dreadful news was finalized, the shock had been absorbed by everyone. Likely the reaction was the same at news gathering operations across the country, or around the world for that matter. It was not a silence of fear or confusion, but a silence of anger, frustration and loss. Anwar el-Sadat, president of the land where civilization began, was dead, the victim of an act of ultimate uncivility.

If journalists realized the implications behind this inane act, it is now their task to bring that home to every person concerned with peaceful coexistence on this planet. I hope they succeed, if only because of the many people who wondered aloud on Tuesday why all this attention was being accorded to another one of those hokey Arab leaders. Clearly, Anwar Sadat stood well above the rest.

Anwar Sadat possessed many admirable qualities: courage, perseverance, patience, understanding, etc. But the most virtuous of these virtues was the fact that he had common sense. He recognized the complete insanity of the political situation in the Middle East, and he alone set out to do something about it. That anyone would even attempt to right such a massive, long-standing wrong is highly laudable. That Anwar Sadat got things on the road to success is creditable to his utter brilliance.

Americans do not often recognize what all this means to them, and certainly the turbulence of that region is of high importance. But Americans cannot comprehend the supreme hatred which Arabs of nearly all nations hold toward the Jews, and vice versa. It is a hatred based in the Koran, the Bible, and thousands of years of bitter physical and ideological war. For one man to stand up in the face of all that, and scream “HOLD IT,” takes courage almost beyond our understanding. Anwar Sadat did just that.

It is true that Sadat initiated the 1973 Yom Kippur war, the anniversary of which was being commemorated when Sadat was massacred. But many feel he did so as a first step toward peace. He then was able to approach Israel as a conciliator, a mediator. It was the first step down a narrow, mine-strewn alley to peace. He almost made it out.

But no one man can make peace. It is a team game, and Sadat still faced two imposing opponents: Menachem Begin, and the rest of the Arab world. That Sadat got Begin to agree on anything is a testament to his enormous patience, for to call Menachem Begin uncommonly stubborn is to be complimentary. Begin was and is unbending and uncompromising, irritatingly so in fact. But Anwar Sadat was so incredibly dedicated to peace that in the quiet backwoods of Maryland, he convinced even Menachem Begin to sign an initial peace agreement. A more moderate Jewish leader — Shimon Peres, perhaps — would have made a better teammate, but Sadat succeeded nonetheless.

The alley was being navigated. Yet the Arab world was revolted by the thought of peace with Israel, and that is the most sickening thought of all. Sadat was ostracized by his ideological and theological allies, because they refused to accept the concept of not driving the Jews into the sea. Again, Sadat must be credited with seeing through this nonsense. For this, the Arabs wanted him dead.

They have succeeded. Whether it was Egyptians involved in a domestic quarrel, or Libyans sent on a mission from the Desert Madman, matters not. Anwar Sadat is dead. He wanted peace. He wanted the killing to stop. Though other Arab nations may not have agreed, he still had phenomenal support from his own countrymen, 11 years after he took office (a recent referendum gave him 99 percent backing). How can anyone be opposed to his goals?

In our lifetime, Anwar Sadat was one of the greatest men we will ever see. Hopefully, those who did not realize this before will realize it now, if only for the things he represented, regardless of what he accomplished. For what ideal can be more important to mankind than lasting peace on earth?

Government fraud is uncovered by people, not media

WASHINGTON — With thousands of reporters on the prowl here, you'd think that the American people would know what's going on in Washington. But that's not always the case.

We were reminded of this the other day with the help of investigative reporter Seymour Hersh. In The New York Times he disclosed a previously unreleased White House tape that showed President Richard Nixon ding that thugs might be able to harm the protestors “and smash some noses.”

Of course, agents of the White House took no action against the demonstrators. And since Nixon has long been pardoned, Hersh's story will make little historical difference. But it's still important.

For one, the tape proves that, months before the Watergate break-in, the president knew about an internal program of “dirty tricks,” impossible for citizens to know what was going on in the inner sanctum of the federal government. Only because citizens close to the president eventually broke down and exposed their superiors were the excesses of the Nixon administration uncovered.

To encourage such disclosures by bureaucrats, Congress passed the 1978 Civil Service Reform Act, with provisions protecting whistle-blowers from the perils of turning in one's boss.

Yet, according to Ernie Fitzgerald, who “blew the whistle” on the Pentagon about C-5A air transport cost overruns, few bureaucrats are taking advantage of the 1978 act's protective clauses.

“No one goes to review with anything heavy,” Fitzgerald told us.

A survey this past spring by the Merit System Review Board found that a majority of government employees know of corruption, waste and fraud but don't report it for fear of retribution. People don't seem any less afraid under President Reagan than under previous administrations.

The solution, according to such whistle-blowers as Fitzgerald, would probably make Richard Nixon's skin crawl.

“Tell people who tell embarrassing truths aren't the problem,” said Fitzgerald. “It's those officials who lie and cover up. We don't need to single out people that do their job and tell the truth. We need to single out the crooks and go after them.”

Under current law those who commit perjury about waste, fraud and abuse can be prosecuted. But it takes a real commitment from the president on down to make this system work.

No one, in retrospect, expected H.R. Haldeman to “blow the whistle” on Nixon during that morning in May 10 years ago. He was too wrapped up in secret White House schemes. And many old Washington bureaucrats would be quick to add that Haldeman paid the price for taking a political appointment.

Unfortunately, it's the responsibility of every citizen, whether civil servant, political appointee or erratic voter, to expose government wrongdoing. Otherwise the entire nation is sure to pay the price.

Unless we create an atmosphere in which government employees aren't penalized for being honest, no number of reporters will be able to tell the American people what's going on in Washington.

once entertained the thought of using “thugs” from the International Brotherhood of Teamsters to beat up anti-war protestors in Washington.

In an Oval Office conversation on the morning of May 5, 1971, Nixon acknowledged to chief of staff H.R. Haldeman that Teamsters could “go in and knock (the anti-war demonstrators') heads off.”

An excited Haldeman agreed, ad-something he refuses to admit today.

Moreover, Nixon was saying one thing in public and quite another in private. Four days before the “thug” remark was immortalized on tape, he told reporters, “We are going to see to it that anybody who comes to Washington to demonstrate peacefully is protected...”

The Nixon years were difficult ones for the American people. It was

Irish square off with Seminoles

Faust says offense, defense back on track

By KELLY SULLIVAN
Sports Writer

Bobby Bowden and Gerry Faust both got their "must wins" last Saturday, but this Saturday's meeting between their two schools will mark the end of the comeback trail for one team.

Florida State bounced back from an early season defeat to upset Ohio State a week ago. "That was a game we needed to have," admits Seminole Head Coach Bowden. "A loss at that point could have really crippled us with the schedule we've got ahead."

And Notre Dame crawled back up to the .500 mark after two straight losses on the road. "I felt like the Michigan State game turned things around for us," offers Faust. "We've still got a long way to go, but we're going in the right direction again."

But 19th ranked FSU and the unranked Irish are on a collision course that could spell long-term disaster for the loser of this contest. As far as the players are concerned, the balance of the season hangs on the 1:30 p.m. confrontation.

"This game is pivotal — it could show the path of our season," believes Seminole wide receiver Dennis McKinnon. "It will show how much togetherness we have as a team and how much we've matured."

"It's a big, pivotal game for us," echoes Irish tri-captain Tony Belden. "The players feel good that we've won two games, but Florida State is a better quality team than the ones we've beaten. A win over someone like them could be the start of a great year for us."

A win for the Seminoles, however, would add another stronghold to an already solid football program. "Playing Notre Dame is a tremendous benefit for us," Bowden confirms. "Our program has now reached the level where it's recognized on a national scale, but a win against Notre Dame would really put us on the map."

Quarterback Rick Stockstill puts the Seminoles in the endzone. He shares his coach's sentiments about the game. "Notre Dame knows we have a good team after we defeated Ohio State, and they'll be ready for us. I look at this as a chance to move up in the polls and a chance to beat another established powerhouse."

The 6-1, 185-pound senior enjoyed the best day of his career against the Buckeyes, throwing for 299 yards and two touchdowns. He's a smart player who possesses the ability to audible at the line of scrimmage and attack a defense's weakness.

"Stockstill picked Ohio State apart with the short passes," Faust acknowledges. "He really makes the linebackers work because he

Kiel faces All-American Stark in duel

By SKIP DESJARDIN
Assistant Sports Editor

Last week in Columbus, Ohio, the Florida State Seminoles were in trouble. Coming off a 34-14 thrashing by Nebraska, they were trailing Ohio State, 7-3, with 2:53 remaining in the second quarter.

It was at that precise moment that things turned around for them. Linebacker Ron Hester blocked a Buckeye punt and returned it for a touchdown. Suddenly the Seminoles were ahead, and gathering momentum.

Quietly, Blair Kiel has been establishing himself as a first-rate kicker. He has the ability to drive the ball more than 60 yards at any given time, his accuracy has been attested to many times by virtue of his ability to drop a punt out of bounds deep in an opponent's territory. Most importantly, however, he has developed kicks that stay in the air long enough for his teammates to prevent run-backs.

But for all Kiel's ability, he will be hard pressed to match up with Florida State's Rohn Stark.

"Dadgum thank goodness he's around," FSU coach Bobby Bowden says of Stark. "He is a very valuable tool for us. When we've been in trouble we've been able to count on Rohn to get us out."

Stark is, without much question, the finest punter in college football. He was named to first-team All-America squads by UPI, the Football Writers of America, The Sporting News and Kodak prior to this season, and is an Academic All-American as well.

He is the leader of the team. One of five co-captains, Stark nevertheless is the man whom the Seminoles look to for guidance.

"I'm not the rah-rah type," he says. "I try to lead by doing. The schedule this year has to be the toughest ever. For me, that means the kicking game will be that much more important."

The importance of Stark and his talented foot has not gone unnoticed by Bowden.

"Against Louisville, we're backed up to our one-yard line," the coach recalls, "and he booms a punt 61 yards to get us out of trouble. That had to demoralize Louisville. It may have been the play of the game."

Stark is used to making the big plays. He averaged 51.1 yards per kick three weeks ago at Nebraska, breaking a school record. His 45.1 yard average over the course of last season established another Florida State standard. As a freshman, he booted one 72 yards against Miami. Last year he kicked one 67 yards against Pittsburgh. The list goes on and on.

Kiel will be facing a fearsome rush from the Seminole defensive linemen and linebackers, a situation he is used to. The Irish punter has yet to have a kick blocked. In fact, he took advantage of an awesome rush at Arizona last season and loped around the left end for an 80-yard touchdown run.

Stark will face the rush of Irish defenders the likes of Bob Crable and Mark Zavagnin, who have a few blocked kicks of their own. But that probably does not worry him.

"I really believe he does better under pressure, when the other team has a couple of people bearing down on him," Bowden says. "He just gets the ball off so quickly. If he had all day, I don't know that he would be successful."

In light of that, the Irish might do well to lay off the kicker just a little. If he has a weakness, it is that he over-kicks the coverage. Teams have had some success at running kicks back.

"It caused some problems in the Nebraska game," Bowden admits. "They broke one for a touchdown and came close to getting another. Leading up to last week's game, we worked

Autry makes transition

By MARK HANNUKSELA
Sports Writer

"Everybody asks me about the switch," says Jon Autry in his quiet, unassuming voice. "It really isn't that big of a change. The only difference is that now, I have to pass rush."

There's a little more to it than that, no matter how much Autry tries to convince you otherwise. At its most basic, Autry's new defensive end position requires him to line up two or three yards closer to the ball than he would when playing at the inside linebacker spot he used to occupy.

Also, his new assignment does not require immediate pursuit — he is forced to hold his position until the ball crosses the line of scrimmage, despite the fact that the instincts which come from six-plus years of playing linebacker tell him otherwise.

Autry now has to freeze an opposing blocker, holding him in place long enough to allow the three Irish linebackers time to react to the play and make the stop. In this sense, he is like an offensive lineman — he does the dirty work in the trenches, so that the other guys can get all the credit.

Clearly, then, there is a distinction between the position Autry has played since his freshman year at Fort Wayne's Snyder High School, and the one he now occupies. To hear him describe it though, one would think the difference to be almost negligible.

"Football is football," he says. "No matter what position you play, it still boils down to blocking, tackling and running. The only change really is in your assignments and responsibilities."

According to Autry's coach, Bill Meyers, the 6-2, 230-pound sophomore is having little trouble adjusting to those changes in assignments and responsibilities.

"Jon has obviously adjusted real well to the change — he's starting," says Meyers. "He has accepted the change, and I think he really enjoys it. He's doing very, very well."

Autry would probably experience that enjoyment regardless of where he plays, whether it be defensive end or specialty team psycho, so long as the position is somewhere on the playing field.

"I don't really have a preference for one position or the other," says Autry, who is enrolled in the College of Business Administration. "I just like to play."

Thus far, the Howard Hall resident has been fortunate enough to play in all but one game in his Notre Dame career, missing only the season-opening win over Purdue in 1980. He earned a monogram for his performance, which included a three-tackle game against Navy in a back-up role, and a five-minute stint against the Georgia Bulldogs in the 1981 Sugar Bowl.

Like the rest of the Irish squad, Autry has experienced some disappointment over the past few weeks with the slow start of Gerry Faust's first Notre Dame team. He also has heard the rumors that this is a team that still feels unbeatable, despite its two losses. He offers a simple explanation.

"A player and a team have to have a certain amount of confidence," he says. "Without that, you might as well not even suit up. That confidence comes out at different levels in

Florida State runs in the family for Kissner

By DAVE IRWIN
Sports Writer

Senior offensive guard Larry Kissner has a remedy for the less than spectacular performance by the Notre Dame offensive unit this fall.

"Actions speak louder than words," says the 6-4, 255-pounder. "You can't talk about it, you've got to do it."

And for the Del Ray Beach, Fla., native there will be a lot of incentive to do it this week. Besides hailing from the Sunshine State, Kissner's older brother Michael played for this week's opponent — Florida State.

"That's all I ever heard as a kid. It was F-L-O-R-I-D-A S-T-A-T-E," remembers Kissner.

Both Kissners had several offers to pick from after high school. Michael, however, wanted to stay close to home while Larry decided to head for the winter wonderlands under the Dome.

"He wanted to stay in Florida. I didn't," the former Coach and Athlete all-American says. "I went to the best school, or at least what I thought was the best school."

Meanwhile, things didn't go too well for Michael at Florida State.

"He had some bad times. They went through three coaches in four years," brother Larry says of Michael's career at Florida State. "It was a mixed up program . . . Now (Bobby) Bowden has turned that program around."

Kissner isn't exaggerating. The Seminoles are 3-1 after upending Ohio State last Saturday and have won 23 of their last 26 regular season games.

Even with the prospect of playing another nationally ranked club (Florida State is ranked 20th in the latest Associated Press Poll), this game will have yet another attraction.

"It will be the first Notre Dame home game my parents have ever seen me play," Kissner says. "My brother is really pro Florida State. It's a brotherly thing, but he's been giving me plenty of stuff."

Things didn't look like they were going too well for Larry Kissner when he arrived at Notre Dame. He was recruited as a tackle but the Irish already had people like Rob Martinovich and Tim Foley (an all-American in 1979 and now a member of the Baltimore Colts) at that position. The coaching staff then decided to try Kissner at center where he had to contend with all-Americans Dave Huffman and John Scully.

After spring drills of 1980, Kissner received the Hering Award as the most improved offensive player, and with Scully's graduation last May, it looked like the job was all Kisner's. But then Gerry Faust was named head coach, and his offensive style needed a different type of player at center than what Kissner's attributes were suited for. An injury further compounded the problem, and Kissner's name began to be heard less and less.

But things started to fall into place. Kissner practiced at both guard positions and center this fall, waiting for a chance. When Randy Ellis injured his knee at Michigan, Kissner was ready.

"There are a lot of great players here. I just wanted to put my best foot forward," Kissner says. "I've got a chance. I just got to try to take advantage of it."

The Irish didn't take advantage of opportunities in the Purdue game, losing 15-14, as Purdue staged its own "miracle finish." But Kissner was part of the offensive unit that racked up season highs of 300 yards rushing and 394 yards total offense in downing Michigan State, 20-7, last Saturday.

"As Coach Faust says, 'When we do break it, we're going to break it big,'" Kissner says. "We're starting to click. We're getting better and better every day. A team can feel that."

The Irish will have to feel at the top of their game this week. The Seminoles surrendered just 38 yards on the ground in 31 carries to Ohio State, a team notorious for its "three yards and a cloud of dust" style of football.

As for Kissner, when Ellis' knee is ready for action, he is prepared for whatever happens. "You can't look ahead. The coaches will play the best people," Kissner says. "I consider myself a team player."

Florida State should see plenty of "action" from Larry Kissner and his teammates Phil Pozderac, Tom Thayer, Mike Shiner and Mark Fischer along the offensive line.

. . . Kiel-Stark

on Rohn getting less distance from his kicks, but better hang time. That way our guys can cover better and prevent the long runbacks."

Blair Kiel was one of the most highly respected high school quarterbacks in the country. Since the time he was a young boy, however, he also worked on his kicking. His father would snap the ball, and his mother would hold for field goal attempts. The all-American family, one might say.

Stark, on the other hand, grew up running. He will admit freely that his first love is not football, but track and field. He finished 8th in the NCAA's decathlon competition, and earned all-America honors in that sport as well. Then he passed up on the Metro Conference track championships to participate in the NCAA-Fiesta Bowl Drug Prevention Program in Phoenix. The all-American boy, one might say.

Saturday they will match up against each other. The meeting will not be face to face, as most football matchups are, but it will be no less important. The success or failure of each man's team could "hang" in the balance.

Behind the scenes Trainers keep watchful eye

By BRIAN REIMER
Sports Writer

The average Notre Dame sports fan finds no difficulty following action on the field, but behind-the-scenes work often goes unnoticed. Associated with the university's athletic teams stands a crew of trainers that bears the heavy responsibility of tending to the daily physical needs of all varsity athletes.

Football coach Gerry Faust calls the trainers "the backbone of our organization." From two in the afternoon until seven at night, they spend their time in a variety of activities associated with their responsibilities.

After classes are over, they head to the training room to tape up the football players for practice. "I tape about 40 ankles a day," claims junior Steve Power, "at first the burden was overwhelming, but I'm at the stage now where I could do it in my sleep."

After the taping is finished, the trainers accompany the players to practice. Their job at that time is not routine. From time to time, exhausted players come to them for water. Fortunately, the cooler weather of October makes that aspect of training less burdensome. Freshman Vince Hockett recalls a summer day when the players consumed enough water to fill six coolers.

The brunt of the managers' tasks on the practice field, however, concerns monitoring. When the players finish their warm-up exercises and break into individual groups, the eight student trainers also split up. "You have to keep a mental list" according to junior Jane Trusela, "of which players have which injuries. If you know that someone has had trouble with his neck in the past, then you watch that player to see signs of more neck problems."

"The situation at Notre Dame is entirely different than my high school training experience. Players here don't sit out injuries for a long time and show off their letter jackets. They want to play. They're not always willing to tell us about minor injuries, so we have to watch them."

"Big John" Whitmer, the head of the training staff, has to hire the students. "We look for people with a high school background and an interest in working with us. We correspond with those incoming freshmen who express a desire to be a Notre Dame trainer, asking them to interview with us after they're accepted at the university. Even though our staff can not afford to attend every varsity sports practice session, we still handle all the athletes. We have some good kids on our staff; they make the program go."

The overall goal of the training staff is prevention of injuries, treatment of those that occur, and rehabilitation. John "Doc" Doherty, in his fifth year, is the head student trainer. He carries a schedule of the day's activities, one that all the trainers must know, for certain drills entail a greater risk of injury than others. According to Doherty, the job is tough at first, "but you get better with experience." In addition to Powers, Trusella, Hockett and Doherty, trainers include junior Rich Bontrager, sophomores Paul Kollman and Laura Curliss, and freshman Dan Egan.

Kollman worked with Gerry Faust for four years at Moeller High School. "It's great to have him back. There's a big difference, though, between the two schools. At Moeller I was a manager and trainer. Here, it's impossible to handle both tasks." More than thirty hours a week is enough for anybody.

Despite the hard and time consuming work, the job is satisfying. Doherty has got to love it. He intends to pursue training as a career.

FSU Frosh Rendina finds place in the sun

By SCOTT FIELDS

Florida Flambeau

TALAHASSEE, Fla. — Super Toe II? Maybe, if Mike Rendina, Florida State's freshman placekicker continues to boot the ball the way he has so far for the Seminoles.

Rendina, who has filled the shoes of the original Super Toe, Bill Capece, (now kicking for the Tampa Bay Bucs) was sought after by practically every major school in the country. More than 100 colleges and universities made scholarship offers to the high school all-American, but they were all a little too pushy, said Rendina.

"Michigan used to call four or five times a night, even up to 1:30 in the morning," said Rendina. "Other schools had people waiting for me in the parking lot after school. I even woke up one morning and found a Michigan coach sitting in my living room waiting for me."

Rendina almost accepted a scholarship to Notre Dame, but changed his mind when he arrived at the airport to have a look at the school last winter. It seems it was a typically frigid day and 20 steps off the plane, he slipped on a sheet of ice and fell flat on his back.

"That and coach Bowden were the two main reasons why I came to Florida State," said Rendina. "Turning down a scholarship to Notre Dame was one of the hardest things I ever did."

Notre Dame head coach Gerry Faust said Rendina had already signed a letter of intent for FSU before the Irish started recruiting him.

"I'm a firm believer when you sign a letter of intent, you've made a commitment," said Faust. "I told his (Rendina's) father that. We would have loved to have had him, but it was a decision he had to sit down and discuss with his family. He chose to stay with it."

But why was Mike Rendina so sought after in the first place? Well, he was the only placekicker on the Parade All-America team last year. While in high school in Pompano Beach, he averaged a hang time of 3.5 seconds on punts and sent 38 of 39 kickoffs sailing out of the end zone. One more thing, he set a Broward County field goal record with a 57-yard kick.

Rendina attributes a lot of his success to his father.

"Dad used to make films of me when I kicked," said Rendina. "It's kind of hard now not to have his watchful eye around."

So far this season for the Seminoles, Rendina has done well, despite not having his father around to keep an eye on him. The young freshman, who has had to face the pressure of following in the footsteps of one of FSU's most successful placekickers, is three-for-four on field goals this season. His longest so far is a 52-yarder against Ohio State last week. He had a 24-yarder against Louisville in the opening game of the year and a 46-yarder against Nebraska. His lone miss came on a 37-yard attempt against Nebraska.

On point-after attempts, Rendina has hit on eight-of-nine, which, combined with his field goals, gives him the team lead in scoring with 17 points.

Rendina, a South Bend native, is looking forward to the Seminoles' game against Notre Dame. It will give him an opportunity to perform in front of several friends and relatives this Saturday.

"Things are really starting to come together," said Rendina. "It's really starting to gell."

throws underneath the coverage a lot."

Stockstill, who finished 10th among NCAA passers in 1980, utilizes his backs in FSU's passing game, evidenced by fullback Mike Whiting's nine receptions against Ohio State. He's second in team receptions behind flanker Dennis McKinnon.

"Florida State builds their whole attack on the passing game," explains Belden, who alternates at defensive end with Jon Autry. "We're stressing a lot of aggressiveness on defense for this game — we've got to get in there and put pressure on the quarterback."

Notre Dame's front four produced four quarterback sacks, three pass deflections and two fumble recoveries against Michigan State. Belden said that performance did a lot for their confidence. "Those sacks helped us realize that getting to the quarterback was not such an impossible thing," he confesses. "We're going to have to shut down their running game and make them throw. And we know we're capable of applying pressure to stop their passing attack."

Notre Dame's young secondary again takes the field without all-America candidate John Krimm. Sophomore Chris Brown replaces the senior cornerback, and is joined by another relative newcomer, Joe Johnson. The freshman earned his first start at free safety against Michigan State.

An injury riddled Irish offense, with top tailbacks Phil Carter and Greg Bell at less than full strength, will have to contend with a defense that accounted for a goal-line stand and a blocked punt returned for a touchdown against the Buckeyes. Tackle Garry Futch, end Jarvis Coursey (defensive MVP in the '81 Orange Bowl) and cornerback James Harris are the only regulars from last year's unit, but Faust is still impressed.

"I just feel that if they can keep a great passing team like Ohio State from making the big play while allowing them only 38 yards rushing, they've got a darn good unit on the field."

Another Seminole unit that concerns Faust is the kicking team. FSU's punter Rohn Stark is considered the college prospect since Ray Guy, now with the Oakland Raiders. Awarded all-America honors in 1980, the senior averaged 51.1 yards on eight punts against Nebraska earlier this season.

Florida State also will showcase freshman placekicker Mike Rendina, the only kicker ever named to Parade's All-America team. Rendina, an Indiana native, has connected on 52, 46 and 24-yard attempts.

"I can't wait to play Notre Dame," he admits. "Defeating them is the only thing that could top the Ohio State win. South Bend is people, because of the difference in personalities. Everybody has a certain way of getting ready for a game. But the stuff about our being overconfident or cocky is not true at all.

"As far as the disappointment goes," he adds, "we didn't play well against Michigan, so that made that loss especially painful for us. I didn't want to experience that pain any more, and I'm sure the rest of the team didn't either. The following week against Purdue, we played better, but we still lost. I think that that was just one of those games that we weren't meant to win. But that doesn't make the loss any less painful.

"We don't like losing. I don't like losing. I want to win, and I take it personally when we don't. I start thinking about what I might have done differently that might have made a difference. We came back a little against Michigan State, but I think this weekend is our true test. Florida State is one of the powerhouses, right up there with Michigan and Purdue. Now, it's time to see how well we've learned from our losses and mistakes."

A Fellowship of the Cross

In a religious community, members seldom mention the love that binds them together like the members of a family. I would be embarrassed if a priest or brother were to say: "I love you." They wouldn't think I meant it if I said the words to them. Love, when it's real, doesn't need to be talked about. The climate would be sticky with emotion, we feel, if we kept having to use such super-charged language. Ordinary, necessary criticisms would falter; pleasant raillery would fail. Love is not a word that serves well in the ordinary conversations of life.

Nevertheless, sometimes at meals with my Community, I realize how deeply I care about these men. I look at some priest I have been friends with for years. I think: "How gray he has become now, and how faithful he has been to Holy Cross. He is always in a place where I can find him. He is very beautiful in his concern for the Community." I talk to a Brother remarkable for his gentleness. He reminds me of all those other Brothers who lessened the austerities of the houses of formation by their life—styles of loving kindness. They met us when we were scared kids, and helped us become priests. After we were ordained, they continued to help us by their faith, when our own faith, by itself, might have failed. The Brothers, with their patience and humor and common sense, have always been my best teachers in the Community of the wholesome ways to be Christianly human.

I have been blessed with many fathers in Holy Cross; and as a priest now in his mid-fifties, I've met a number of young religious who are kind enough to acknowledge me as their elder in faith. Some mystery of faith that we call vocation has brought us together to share a religious tradition in which we are the family of Christ. Sometimes we behave as badly towards one another as the sons and brothers in the parables taught by Jesus; but, perhaps because of the indwelling presence of God's Spirit, we survive our sibling rivalries, and hatred has never been a Community problem. We are very good people, more or less gifted with grace. We are not strangers to virtue, and we are not embarrassed by holiness, committed as we are in the Community to ideals of poverty, chastity, and obedience, as servants of a ministering Lord. The flesh and blood of our humanity is not exempt from temptations that corrupt morals and manners. We hurt each other with selfishness, and strain the family bond. Bitterness can often be heard in the criticisms that we sometimes feel that we owe each other with a vengeance. When we hurt so much that we need to cry, we can always find someone who lends us a shoulder to cry on. One of the surprises in Community life is to discover, early or late, how many of us are carrying an identical cross along a road we thought we were travelling alone.

Love, when you enter the Community, is offered as an ideal, and you accept love as a duty you owe your brothers. But one day, when you are praying or eating or hearing a conversation, love overtakes you by surprise as the honest mood of your soul. You think of the people you live and work with, and it is as though God were singing a song inside you. With a rush of blood to the head, and a tug at the strings of the heart at seeing familiar faces, you realize: "These are my family members, and I love them dearly. How could I not love my brothers with whom I have shared so much of a lifetime?"

Politicians are tasteless enough to rant about love. Rock stars create dirges on love themes; cheap comedians use love as a buzz word. Priests and brothers keep the word to themselves when they discover the thrill of it in their Community experience. It is easier for them to speak of God than of love, though theologians say that the words are interchangeable, since God is love. Perhaps for some of us, oddly enough, it seems less personal to speak of God than

Fr. Robert Griffin

of the love we have found that gives worth to our lives.

Bill Toohey was a Holy Cross priest who died just a year ago. He lived gracefully, he preached gracefully; and when he died, his death was full of grace for the whole campus. As one who represented so many of us who work at Notre Dame, his anniversary will be remembered in a television program at 10:30 on Sunday evening, and at a memorial service on Tuesday, October 13, at 8:30 p.m. in Sacred Heart Church. With great pride Holy Cross shares with Notre Dame its memories of a great priest, one of the finest in our world-wide tradition, on these two occasions that have been asked for by Bill's friends, colleagues, and admirers.

War and Rumors of War

Paul Kosidowski

Second Thoughts

I don't like war. I don't think anybody does. And I feel uncomfortable when people start to talk about it again.

It's being talked about because Anwar Sadat is dead. He didn't like war, either, and he dedicated his life's energy to preventing it.

It's interesting that an incident that occurred so far away could have Americans talking about something they hate so much. We are talking even though what happened was strange, even unfathomable to some. Try to picture a group of commandos armed with explosives and machine guns ripping through a parade-watching crowd. I can't imagine what I would feel. I still am wary of an unfamiliar face walking down a neighborhood street. A stranger asking for change of a dollar upsets me.

Most of us watched without involvement. The story was reported like a World Series game. No one on the news said, "Oh my God, Sadat is dead." No one cried. The media simply stated, "He has been assassinated." It was up to us to do the shouting and crying.

We have our assassins, but they are lone gunmen. We say they are crazy and that we need more handgun controls and stiffer prison sentences. I don't know what the Egyptians can say now.

It does make us think, though. What happened was terrible. Sadat kept the Middle East peaceful, but now our thoughts turn to war.

In some respects, we have been thinking about war already. Many of our friends are now registered for the draft; some are in ROTC. I usually think about war in light of these facts. I speculate that one of my best friends may not graduate because he is fighting in "The Mideast Conflict of 1982," or whatever name the historians will give it.

Now, the political analysts will discuss, debate and predict: Will Russia intervene? Will Israel retaliate? Thoughts like that help us remain distant and detached from it all. War is usually fought by them not us. We see it via satellite. I can barely remember Vietnam — when it was us, when the horror was brought into our living rooms.

I don't remember because I didn't really watch. We've all seen so many people shot at — on television. It pacifies us. I once tried to imagine what it was like to be shot, to really imagine it — a bullet in my leg. I don't think I even came close.

I have said that I am a pacifist even a conscientious objector. But that was said without much thought. It was as easy as answering the question, "Do I want to die?"

I know that my adolescent declarations cannot be repeated today. The thoughts are a chaotic jumble of morals and distortions that must be arranged rationally. Pacifism is easy today, at least in our environment. Social consciousness has overtaken patriotism in the "race of the virtues." There is much limited pacifism today. "I will fight for what I believe," we say. That soon changes to "I will fight for something if I believe in it enough." There are so many things to believe in and fight for, I can't imagine dividing them into the enough and the not enough.

The beliefs and the passions would probably be sparse in the next war, whenever it is. They will be swallowed up by the strategy and the politics and the science. It is not like it was when we felt we were a part of our wars. I've seen that passion in the faces of the soldiers on V-E Day.

Of course not everyone hates war. We have the Frank Burns's and the Capt. Kilgore's. They are here for us to laugh at them. We say they are absurd, because no one can love death and bloodshed. But some simply say, "I will travel far from home and fight for the things that my country stands for. I may kill and I may die." They are not absurd. They are Americans. And some may be you and I.

Cat in the Cradle

Andy Rooney

There are certain things writers don't say about themselves, even if they're relatively honest, because they feel there's no sense going out of their way to lose friends.

It is for this reason that I've never revealed that I don't love cats, and I wouldn't be telling you now except that last weekend I had an experience with a cat that I can't get out of my mind.

It is necessary to say that I only spend time in my woodworking shop on Saturdays and Sundays, and the shop is half barn and half garage. When I finish working, I have to move a lot of wood and tools to the back and sides to get my car in. Early Saturday morning I took the car out and started moving my tools into place when a full-grown gray cat scampered past me and out the door. It startled me, but there are mice in the rafters, so I assumed it had been back there trying to kill one. Cats kill things for fun.

As I started to work, I heard the barest suggestion of a meow from behind a pile of lumber. I stopped and stood absolutely still until I heard it again. I may not like cats but I'm not stupid about them, and I realized that the cat had not been back there killing mice but having kittens.

I carefully moved some lumber and uncovered a grocery store-sized box that I'd left old clothes in. For a minute in the shadow I saw nothing but an old wool jacket, but then something small and white moved. It was 4 inches long, pure white and had a cocoonlike look. It was a kitten a few minutes old.

I instantly forgot that I hated cats. I felt terrible. For an instant I froze as the whole terrible truth dawned on me. There was only one kitten: I had interrupted the mother in the process of having a litter. No one hates cats so much that they wouldn't feel bad under these circumstances.

My enthusiasm for woodworking was gone and I withdrew from the barn to think about what to do.

It was cold and obviously the kitten wouldn't survive without its mother. I left the door open and went down to the house to call a neighbor who is not really a farmer but lives as one. She's a kindly person, but she's been around animals a lot and I think it makes you less sentimental about them. She said the best thing to do was to put the kitten in a plastic bag with a rock tied to it and drop it in the lake down the road. She was only thinking of the kitten, she said. She didn't want it to suffer.

I guess you have to face things like that if you live on a farm, but I don't live on one and I don't have to. I knew that if I did, I'd never get it out of my mind as long as I lived.

For the next half hour I pattered around the house, with just an occasional glance up toward the barn, until my wife came home from the store. I told her I wanted to show her something and explained that I had a big problem without telling her what it was.

We tiptoed into the barn and crept up on the box. The kitten was gone!

The mother cat had gone somewhere else to have the rest of her litter and then sneaked back into the grocery box in the barn for the white one and carried it to safety.

I'm still not crazy about cats but I'm sure mighty grateful to that one, and if I ever see that little white kitten around and can get close to it, I'm going to tell it what a good mother it has.

Unser declared Indy 500 winner

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Bobby Unser illegally passed cars during a yellow caution period in last May's Indianapolis 500, but he was declared winner over Mario Andretti on Thursday after a special U.S. Auto Club appeal panel ruled a one-lap penalty was improperly assessed a day after the race.

The penalty against Unser "should have been called during the race. If any other conclusion were reached, the officiating of an event such as this would be nothing short of chaotic," panel chairman Edwin Renda wrote in a 23-page opinion released at USAC headquarters.

Unser beat Andretti across the finish line by eight seconds, but the penalty cost Unser one lap and dropped him to second place when the official standings were posted the morning after the May 24 race.

Unser protested the USAC decision, and the three-member panel conducted hearings on the appeal in June and July.

Unser, elk hunting in northern New Mexico when the panel's ruling was announced, told his car owner, Roger Penske, he was "extremely happy to become the sixth three-time winner of the world's greatest race. This has been a goal for me since I began competing at Indianapolis in 1963."

Andretti, reached at his office in Nazareth, Pa., said the reversal was "stunning" and that he was "just too sick to even think about it."

Andretti, who won the Indy race in 1969, said, "I'll never be able to swallow this. It's totally unjust, it really is."

Render, a University of Louisville law professor, and former USAC president Reynold MacDonald signed the majority opinion which made Unser the winner of the 500 for the third time and, at age 47, the oldest Indy champion in history.

Another panel member, former USAC president Charlie Brockman, dissented, saying if the penalty was imposed during the race, Chief Steward Tom Binford would have been "acting on incomplete and inconclusive information, an act that would seem irresponsible."

The majority opinion said, however, that responsible officials knew of the infraction when it was committed and failed to inform Binford.

"Even though the court believes that Mr. Binford did not personally have enough information to call the penalty at the time it occurred, we feel that the misconduct of the officials which occurred during the race make it unjust and unreasonable to impose the penalty after the race was over," Renda wrote in the opinion, which was dated Oct. 5.

The victory nevertheless will cost Unser some money. The panel ruled that by passing the line of eight cars as he left the pits on the 150th lap, he gained a significant competitive advantage "and should be fined ($40,000) for his violation."

The first-place prize of more than $262,000 and the second-place prize of $168,000 had been held in escrow by the Indianapolis Motor Speedway.

Unser was hunting with his brother, Al, also a three-time Indy winner, and with Pat Patrick, Andretti's car owner, when Thursday's announcement was made.

Marcia Unser, Bobby's wife, said he "was astounded and ecstatic. They're crazy up there now. Pat Patrick went out and shot a bull elk."

"We'll be doing something to celebrate tonight," Mrs. Unser said. "The last celebration the night of the race wasn't much. Bobby has been very bitter and miserable because of this. He justly deserves this decision. I know Bobby grew five feet taller when he heard."

Andretti said in a telephone interview the decision was "stunning, mainly because I never thought they would manipulate the rule book to suit the situation."

"I mean by that, they decided to change the penalty from one lap to a $40,000 fine only because he was the winner of the race. It shows if you're the winner, you're going to be treated differently if you commit an infraction in the race," Andretti continued. "That sets a terrible, unacceptable precedent."

"The fact is there is no way you can deny, or they can deny, or they can try to deny he committed an infraction that's clearly punishable by one or more laps. The panel chose to change the penalty."

"That's ludicrous," Andretti said. "That's the part I couldn't believe. They could have said anything else and I would have accepted it. But not this. I'll never be able to swallow this. It's totally unjust, it really is."

Andretti added he doesn't know yet what additional steps he might take. Unser previously said he would pursue the matter to civil court, if necessary, if the ruling went against him.

"I'm just too sick to even think about it," Andretti said. "I'm sick at the decision, the way it was carried out. I want to make that clear."

Johnny Rutherford, a three-time Indy winner who testified for Unser during the panel's hearings, said, "I'm surprised, but it's the right decision."

The panel also rejected a separate protest by Unser that Andretti illegally passed A.J. Foyt as the cars came around the fourth turn on the 150th lap.

"Fully Alive: The Story of Father Bill Toohey," a biographical treatment of the University of Notre Dame's director of campus ministry who died October 13, 1980, will be telecast Sunday, October 11, at 10:30 pm by WNDU-TV Channel 16.

Written and produced for the Diocese of Fort Wayne-South Bend by Sister Maureen Rodgers, O.P., the half-hour program includes reflections on the ministry of the Holy Cross priest by several friends and coworkers, including Head Basketball Coach Richard Phelps, Bishop William McManus of the Fort Wayne-South Bend Diocese, and Notre Dame's president, Rev. Theodore M. Hesburgh, C.S.C. The program was produced with the cooperation of WNDU-TV, William Siminsky, production manager at the station, and the University's Campus Ministry office.

The Irish junior varsity football team hopes to remain unbeaten as it travels to Tennessee to face the Tennessee Military Institute. Notre Dame possesses a 2-0 slate for the season after posting consecutive victories over Illinois and Purdue's junior varsity squad. — The Observer

"Skate with the Irish" on Sunday at the ACC. Following the Notre Dame hockey team's pre-season scrimmage against Illinois-Chicago Circle (2 p.m. faceoff), fans will be permitted to skate for free with the Irish players. The team will also be available for autographs afterwards. All fans will be admitted for free and receive a team picture. The Irish, who open their 1981-82 season next weekend at the ACC against York University of Toronto, will scrimmage Miami of Ohio in Columbus, Ind., tonight. — The Observer

The IIAW state tennis championships begin today in Indianapolis. The Notre Dame women's tennis team, the defending Indiana state champion, is favored to successfully defend its title in the tournament which ends tomorrow. Coach Sharon Petro's Irish enter competition today with a 9-1 record for the season. — The Observer

Coach Sandy VanSlager's Notre Dame volleyball team takes a 8-10 record into action this weekend, as the Irish participate in the St. Francis Tournament. Last night, the Irish defeated Oakland City College at the ACC, 16-14, 6-15, 15-4 and 15-8 in the best-of-five set match. — The Observer

Unbeaten in 14 games dating back to last season, the Notre Dame soccer team will be in action twice this weekend on Cartier Field. This afternoon at 4 o'clock, Coach Rich Hunter's Irish play host to Marquette, and on Sunday, they face Wisconsin in a 2 p.m. start. On the year, Notre Dame owns a fine 9-0-2 record. — The Observer

Florida State's cross country team will also be making the trip to South Bend this weekend, as they challenge the Notre Dame runners on Saturday morning, beginning at 10:30, on the Burke Memorial Golf Course. The Irish, coached by Joe Piane, are coming off an 11th place finish in last weekend's Notre Dame Invitational. — The Observer

Giana Marrone scored the lone goal as the Notre Dame field hockey team edged Goshen College, 1-0, yesterday on Alumni Field. Coach Jan Galen's Irish are now 8-6 and will resume action on Tuesday at Valparaiso. — The Observer

The fall season for the Notre Dame baseball team ends this weekend, as the Irish face Bradley University in a three-game series at Jake Kline Field. Tomorrow morning, the two teams square off in a single game, beginning at 9:30. On Sunday, Notre Dame's fall campaign draws to a close with a 1 p.m. doubleheader. Coach Larry Gallo's squad hopes to improve on its fine 7-2 record. — The Observer

Irish battle for NCAA berth

By RICK KRIST
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame soccer team continued its winning ways with victories over Michigan State and the University of Chicago last week by scores of 4-1 and 5-0, respectively. The team's record now stands at 10-0-2 and its next two games — Marquette tonight at 8 p.m. and Wisconsin Sunday at 2 p.m. — will be key ones in determining whether or not the Irish make it to the NCAA playoffs.

"The games against Marquette and Wisconsin are the most important games of the season right now, along with Western Michigan and Akron," points out Coach Rich Hunter. All four of these teams are in the Great Lakes region along with the Irish, making the games against these teams vital. The Irish will face Western Michigan next Saturday and Akron U. the following Thursday (Oct. 22), both on the road.

As of last week, Notre Dame was ranked eighth in the Great Lakes region. Sunday's opponent, Wisconsin, was ranked seventh. Atop the division were Indiana and Akron, ranked first and second, respectively.

Thus far, the Irish have lived up to Hunter's claim that this year's team would be more effective than past squads offensively, due to a more balanced scoring attack. The top four scorers — Sami Kahale, Mario Manta, Rob Snyder and Richard Herdegan — have each scored eight goals. Kahale leads in assists with 12 this season and has a career total of 27, making him the all-time assist leader for Notre Dame.

Tonight's opponent, Marquette, is 5-3 in 1981, and is coming off a 2-0 loss to the University of Virginia. However, the Warriors can not be taken lightly. As Hunter points out, "Marquette has always played us tough, as do most of our opponents." Last year, the Warriors beat the Irish, 4-2.

Wisconsin, like Notre Dame, is undefeated this season with an 8-0-1 record. The Badgers' strength lies in their defense, which has allowed just one goal this season. Wisconsin recently battled St. Louis University to a scoreless tie and has beaten the fourth-ranked team in the Great Lakes region, Wisconsin-Milwaukee. The Badgers' defense will certainly test the Irish scoring attack, which has produced 57 goals this season, for an average of 5.18 per game.

Needless to say, the Irish have been working hard in preparation for the upcoming games. "We've been working on variety in our shooting this week," says Hunter. "Basically, though, we won't change our game plan against Wisconsin or Marquette."

The key, according to Hunter, in beating Marquette and Wisconsin will be starting strongly. "I believe we have to establish our game early," he comments, "like we did against Michigan State." Richard Herdegan scored three goals in the first 15 minutes of play against Michigan State, en route to the 4-1 victory.

"We'll have to attack aggressively right from the start and play our game if we want to be successful," Hunter feels.

'Sportsmed Weekend' features Bill Rodgers

By BRIAN REIMER
Sports Writer

Notre Dame students spending the first weekend of October break in the South Bend area have the chance to participate in a major sporting event: a ten kilometer road race. The Sports Medicine Program and the Health Awareness Center of St. Joseph's Medical Center are co-sponsoring the event, which will feature four-time Boston Marathon champion Bill Rodgers.

Dean Reinke is the Director of Sports Medicine at the hospital. He hopes that the race, in conjunction with the "Sportsmed 10k Weekend" (running from the 16th to the 18th), will motivate people to take an active role in the sports world. "We live in a spectator town," he claims, "where people enjoy watching Notre Dame and Chicago teams in action. We tend to be passive, whereas people in towns like San Diego are active." Though the climate in South Bend may not encourage athletics, Reinke feels that there is ground for improvement.

"We have one of the most extensive clinics in the country. Our major components number three. Our walk-in clinic treats day-to-day injuries, along with providing trainers to Notre Dame. Our educational facet provides seasonal seminars and workshops for all people involved in the sports world, whether they be coaches, trainers or athletes of any age. Finally, our physical fitness program conducts classes in a variety of conditioning activities.

"Sports Medicine is a new concept. Our new clinic is a response to a growing need. Today, more than ever before, there is a demand for injured athletes to get back on the field quickly. The increase in the popularity of exercise has led to injuries of all sorts. We also have to confront a philosophical problem. There is a push for an apparently healthy athlete to go back on the field too soon. Sometimes we have to pull them, and it is tough to tell a runner that he has to take three to six weeks off when he feels healthy."

The "Sportsmed 10k Weekend" includes a free health and running fair from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Saturday, along with a Bill Rodgers running clinic from noon until 4 p.m. and a banquet at night. All events will be held in the Century Center.

On Sunday, there will be a one-and-one-half-mile "Fun Run" in addition to the ten kilometer race, scheduled for 1 p.m. The weekend coincides with the opening of the new Sports Medicine Program.

Reinke notes that "Bill Rodgers has been traveling around the country giving clinics. He has to be the most recognized runner in this country. The timing is great for an event like this, because it does not coincide with a football weekend." Noting that this event will become annual, he jokes, "I should ask (Notre Dame athletic director) Gene Corrigan to leave this weekend open all the time."

Bill Rodgers is a household name to most sports fans. In 28 attempts at the 26.2 mile marathon, he has come up victorious 18 times. After competing in the 1976 Montreal Olympics, Bill caught the public eye by beating silver medalist Frank Shorter in the New York City Marathon. His four victories at Boston include an American-record-breaking 2:09.27 in 1979. While he is not racing, he operates his own running centers in Boston.

There will be a pre-race clinic tonight at 7 p.m. at Recital Hall in Century Center, concerning running injuries. The list of speakers will include Dr. Leslie Bodner, orthopedic surgeon and medical director of the Sports Medicine Program; Gene Jouret, the program's athletic trainer and physical therapist; and Drs. Frederick Ferlic and David Bankoff, two orthopedic surgeons.

In mini-playoffs

Expos, Yanks take 2-0 leads

Expos 3, Phils 1

MONTREAL (AP) — Gary Carter's two-run homer in the third inning triggered the Montreal Expos to a 3-1 victory over the Philadelphia Phillies Thursday night and gave them a 2-0 lead in their best-of-five series for the National League East Division title.

The teams left this chilly city after the game for Philadelphia, where the defending World Series champions will send right-hander Larry Christenson against Ray Burris Friday in an effort to prevent elimination.

Right-hander Bill Gullickson blanked the Phillies on three hits through the first seven innings and was credited with the victory although he needed help the last two innings from reliever Jeff Reardon, who also saved Wednesday's opening triumph.

Trailing 3-0, the Phillies rallied with two outs in the eighth.

Lonnie Smith, who has at least one hit in 25 straight games, doubled into center field and came home on a single by Pete Rose.

Bake McBride, who had snapped an 0-for-20 slump with a first-inning single, then doubled into the right-field corner, with Smith stopping at third. At that point, Montreal Manager Jim Fanning brought in Reardon, who intentionally walked Mike Schmidt to load the bases.

Reardon, who had allowed four earned runs in his last 35 2/3 innings, worked a 3-2 count on Gary Matthews and then retired the outfielder on a foul pop behind first base to Warren Cromartie to end the inning.

The Expos took a 1-0 lead on an unearned run off Phillies starter Dick Ruthven in the second, to the delight of a crowd of 45,896 who turned out on a night in which the temperature dropped into the upper 30s.

The Phillies have now lost seven straight games at Montreal.

Yanks 3, Brewers 0

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Lou Piniella lined a fourth-inning homer and Reggie Jackson added a two-run blast in the ninth, leading New York to a 3-0 victory over the Milwaukee Brewers Thursday as the Yankees took a 2-0 lead in the American League East Division championship series.

The Yankees, the division's first-half champions during the unique split-season, can sweep the best-of-5 series by winning in New York Friday night.

Dave Righetti, a hard-throwing, 22-year-old rookie left-hander, earned the victory by allowing four hits and striking out 10 through the first six innings. Ron Davis started the seventh and loaded the bases before ace reliever Rich Gossage came in and got the final two outs in the inning.

Piniella's homer came off loser Mike Caldwell, named the Brewers' starting pitcher slightly more than an hour before game time. Pete Vuckovich, the scheduled starter and the Brewers' ace with a 14-4 record, came down with a 103-degree fever Thursday and was being treated for flu symptoms.

Caldwell, who entered the game with a 9-2 career record against the Yankees, gave up seven hits before Jim Slaton came on in the ninth following Jackson's homer into the right field bleachers. Dave Winfield had doubled before the homer.

Righetti and Caldwell were locked in a scoreless battle until Piniella, who hit five homers during the regular season, slammed a 1-0 pitch into the left field bleachers with two out in the fourth.
