Fr. Ayo lectures on the education of the mind

By MIKE LEPRE
News Staff

The contribution that knowledge makes to the ability of an individual to love his fellow man is the backbone of education, according to Fr. Nicholas Ayo.

In his lecture "Martha and Mary, The Sisterhood of Man," Fr. Ayo emphasized that although "one can defend knowledge for its own sake," intelligence is important in the attempt toward being a moral person. Fr. Ayo noted that as Christians we are called to "love God with our heart, soul, and mind."

Ayo feels that the education of a person's mind is part of one's "whole self" proves the fact that to love God with our minds is a big part of our faith. Ayo sees that education of mind is often overlooked as an avenue to greater faith, and he concedes that "you can bring the horse to the water of truth, yet you can not make it drink."

Knowledge and virtue are closely related, noted Ayo, stressing that as long as students never forget "That God is," there will always be reason for hope. In the second part of his lecture, Ayo, who earned his masters degree in English at the University of Notre Dame, pointed to the educational practices of medieval monks as the beginning of the interaction between the worlds of education and religion.

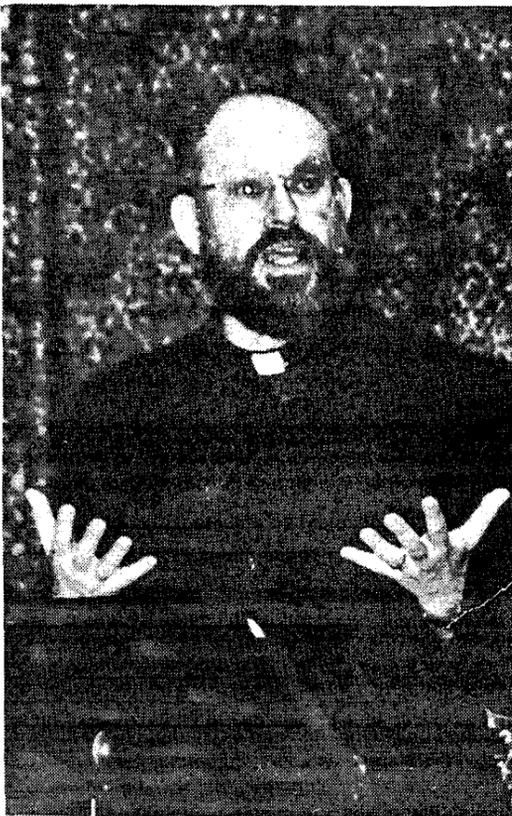

Ayo feels that a university in general should guide all of its educational activity toward "our one end, which is God." Pointing to various writers and theologians as examples, Fr. Ayo said that common sense tells us that "we think with our entire soul — not just with our minds."

Fr. Ayo strongly noted that our present "places of education should be God's instruments," and that students are "well-served when teachers give meaning to virtue."

Singling out Jesus as a teacher through his use of parables, Fr. Ayo commented that in reality all of man is essentially taught through God's intervention in our minds.

Fr. Ayo also noted that the education of a person extends beyond the classroom situation. He spoke of education through personal experience, alluding to the fact that a Christian atmosphere can create positive experiences.

Prior to a concluding reading from a proverb dealing with wisdom, Fr. Ayo reflected upon Notre Dame's mural of Jesus' resurrection, Grotto to Our Lady, statue of Mary atop the Dome, and Sacred Heart Church as symbols of how truth and love are sisters, as were the biblical characters of Martha and Mary.

Woman rebels against dental establishment

By JILL LAWRENCE
Associated Press Writer

A purple, plant-filled house in northeastern Pennsylvania has become headquarters for a one-woman battle against the state and national dental establishments.

The rebel is Susan Edwards, a dental hygienist who believes she should be allowed to practice independently instead of having to work under a dentist's supervision.

"What I'm doing here is pure hygiene. There's no dentistry involved," says Ms. Edwards, 36, sitting amid a clutter of antiques and Oriental rugs in what serves as her waiting room.

Although her license was revoked last year by the state Dental Council and Examining Board, Ms. Edwards continues to clean teeth and perform other tasks in a mall office in her home.

When the board took away her license, she taped a red "X" through the "R" that stands for "Registered" on the sign outside her door and conducted business as usual.

"When they pulled my license, it really increased business" says Edwards, whose clients include a dozen doctors but no dentists.

For Ms. Edwards, freedom from dental supervision means a chance to earn more than $55 a day (her highest salary under a dentist) and to use time-consuming preventive techniques that avoid drilling and tooth pulling. It means cheaper and more intensive treatment, she said.

"I'm a public health educator," said Ms. Edwards, who received an associate degree in dental hygiene from Temple University 16 years ago. "What I know can help anybody."

But Dr. Arthur McFeaters, Jr., president of the Pennsylvania Dental Association, insists on the need for supervision.

"These girls are trained to work with us. Independent practice, where they're off making their own decisions, could be detrimental or disastrous to those seeking their

Tax increase possible

Reagan postpones budget

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan postponed final decisions on his 1983 budget plan after having "second thoughts" about higher excise taxes to narrow a burgeoning deficit, administration sources said yesterday.

Several officials, asking not to be named, said the president tentatively had agreed Wednesday to seek higher excise taxes on cigarettes, whiskey, wine and "luxury" items as part of a plan to raise some $15 billion in new federal revenues in 1983.

On Thursday, however, the president was described by a White House official as the "lone holdout" in the face of a unanimous recommendation by his economic advisers that he approve the budget plan, including the new taxes.

"The president is reluctant to give a final sign-off" on boosting excise taxes "and probably will be mulling it over the weekend," said the official.

"He's having second thoughts," the official added.

The president plans to disclose the major elements in his budget next Tuesday, when he delivers his State of the Union message to Congress.

Reagan's reluctance is said to stem from his concern that any move to seek higher taxes would indicate a lack of confidence in his economic program.

In addition, House Republican leaders warned that raising excise taxes on consumer goods as alcohol and gasoline would be a mistake for the GOP.

In a recent letter to Budget Director David A. Stockman, House GOP Whip Trent Lott of Mississippi, and Rep. Jack Kemp of New York (one of the earliest advocates of tax cuts), complained that higher excise taxes will hurt the "little guy" and risk defeat for Republicans.

Administration sources previously said the president had settled on a plan to seek higher excise taxes and narrow several tax "loopholes" to keep the projected deficit to about $75 billion, the largest deficit a president has ever proposed to Congress.

The deficit for fiscal 1982, which began last Oct. 1, is now projected to approach $100 billion, more than twice what Reagan initially projected. Without some tax increases in 1983, a similar economic situation is possible in 1983, his economic advisers say.

The sources said the revenue from the federal excise taxes would be turned over to the states to finance some 40 federal programs in health, education, and other social areas which the administration wants to shift to state control.

In addition, the sources said, Reagan plans to propose transferring the Aid to Families with Dependent Children (AFDC) welfare program and the food stamp program to the states in exchange for a total federal takeover of the Medicaid program, which provides health care to the poor and aged.

Earlier yesterday, sources said the president had rejected a proposal to seek a higher excise tax on beer, as some advisers suggested, and still had not decided whether to call for higher taxes on gasoline.

The sources added that the president was still undecided about what items to include under the "luxury" category.

Spokesman David Gergen told reporters yesterday that "The president made it clear to his staff this morning that it would be unwise to engage in additional speculation."

Current excise taxes are 8 cents on a package of cigarettes, $10.50 per gallon of 100 proof whiskey, $9 per barrel of beer, 17 cents per gallon of wine and 4 cents per gallon of gasoline.

Alumni Board offers student job placement

By KELLI FLINT
Executive News Editor

Alumni Board representatives offered summer job placement and discussed issues such as campus crime, Senior Bar, and social space with students last night during their annual hall visitations.

The halls hosting representatives included Morrissey, Howard, Walsh, Breen-Phillips, and Zahm, each reporting a "good-sized" crowd. A maximum of 50 students per dorm attended last year's sessions, according to Alumni Board representative Paul Kruse, who noted over 100 students in Breen-Phillips. "The publicity was much better this year, centering on the topic of greatest interest to students — summer jobs," he said.

Kruse added that the Alumni Board of Directors stands "solidly" behind the need for summer job placement programs at the local club level. He emphasized the momentum of the placement program, currently in its second year. "We expect it to increase in strength, and encourage all students to apply for the program," he said.

Walter Nashert, one of two Alumni Board Representatives on the Priorities and Commitments for Excellence (PACE) Committee, discussed the Board's position regarding campus crime. "It is inconceivable to us that the sons and daughters of Notre Dame have to walk the campus in fear," he said. "We have expressed our concern and the need to tighten campus security and minimize campus crime, and have been assured that the necessary steps will be taken to improve the situation. We have every reason to believe that this will happen."

Alumnus John Short assured a Morrissey group of over 160 that the board representatives will stress the importance of not tearing down Senior Bar before building a new

The Reagan administration announced yesterday an enforcement crackdown aimed at ending cheating over oil production on federal lands. Because of the cheating, the government loses $500 million annually. Interior Secretary James Watt pledged to move aggressively to implement 60 recommendations made by a special five-member commission. After a six-month investigation, the committee found that the government's royalty collection program has been in "disarray" for over 20 years. President Reagan, receiving the commission's report yesterday, said, "It's unconscionable that this could have been going on all these years." The major problem, the commission found, was that the government is trying to operate a $5-billion program on the honor system, essentially trusting the word of oil companies on how much oil and natural gas they are taking from federal lands. — AP

March 22 is the scheduled date for the third flight of the space shuttle Columbia. The two astronauts scheduled to fly the mission held a new conference yesterday at the Johnson Space Center in Houston. They stated that a major objective of their flight is to determine how well the vehicle's systems withstand the extreme heat and cold of space. "Although NASA has not yet set an official launch date, we're working toward March 22," said Marine Col. Jack Lousma, the mission commander. "We hope to have a firm date soon." Lousma, who spent 56 days in space in 1973 aboard the Skylab Space Station, said the flight is planned for 7 days — more than twice the length of either of Columbia's first 2 tests. "We're going to have a very busy week up there," said Air Force Col. Gordon Fullerton, who will be making his first space trip. Lousma said Columbia will be subjected to slightly higher dynamic pressures during both launch and landing to gain additional knowledge about its flight characteristics and limits. — AP

Informed union sources said yesterday that Solidarity militants launched an underground movement. Poland's hardline army daily newspaper accused the activists of using working people "as a ramrod to smash their way to their target." Solidarity sources said workers in at least one major factory, the Huta Warszawa steel mill, started a movement called the Workers' Committee for Social Self-Defense and an underground paper. The sources said the martial law regime told plant managers to watch for the posting of slogans or union banners. Poland's army newspaper, Zolnierz Wolnosci, said that "angry" counter-revolutionary elements from Solidarity had not conceded defeat after the union was suspended and martial law declared Dec. 13 following 16 months of labor upheaval. The paper has previously said Solidarity aimed at undermining Communist rule in Poland. — AP

A 106-pound boxer is punching at red tape and tradition in an effort to participate in the Golden Gloves tournament in Lansing, MI. Sponsors of the match (which began Wednesday) are worried that Jill Lafler, a 19-year-old who took up boxing in community college, will get wiped out because she's a woman. "I do not want to preside over the first girl in the state of Michigan, or in the world, dropping dead in the ring," said Virginia Zeeb, deputy director of the Michigan Department of Licensing and Regulation. The department says amateur boxing rules prohibit male-female matches. Ms. Lafler has hired lawyer Paul Rosenbaum to battle the rules. "Here's a person who wants to fight, knows how to fight, and the only reason she can't is because she's a woman," he said. "If she gets knocked out, that's her problem. If she knocks a guy out, that's his problem." Ms. Lafler won her only amateur match in a three-round decision against a male opponent. "I don't have much of a punch, but I'm pretty quick and I've got endurance," she said. — AP

Swartz voices optimism for future urban renewal

By TIM PETTERS
News Staff

Our cities will revitalize themselves, according to Dr. Tom Swartz of the Notre Dame Economics Department, speaking to a small audience in the Library Auditorium last evening. He was optimistic about future urban renewal, despite past trends.

"No amount of federal, state, or local money will make it happen. It may take 30 years, but eventually, lower prices will make the cities more attractive to invest in."

Swartz optimism was offset by the possible problem he foresaw. "There would be a real tragedy if this regrowth forced the poor into the suburbs," he said.

"The more affluent people in the suburbs have transportation to offset the disadvantages of living so far out. If the poor move out there, they will have new problems because of the decentralized location," added Swartz.

Swartz began his talk by discussing the reasons that the affluent people began leaving the cities. "The affluent have always been able to pick up and leave if they did not like where they were. Once people began to leave, either no new people came, or the ones who did were not as well off as the ones who left. This seriously cut into city revenues.

"Add to this the recent tax decreases, starting with 'Proposition 13' in California, and continuing until now with Reagan's programs. The net effect has been to reduce city incomes dramatically. The situation is becoming desperate.

"Market influences will bring the cities back. Since 1975, there has been a return of young professional people to the cities. So far, the numbers are small, but the impact has been great. This return is necessary if the cities are to remain economically viable."

Swartz approved of President Reagan's economic policies, but discounted their importance. "The current administration does not have enough time, and will have to bow to political pressure and soften the program. When this happens, the program will be crippled." He also implied that the very poor would not receive much of the benefits from the Reagan program.

Throughout the lecture, Swartz expressed his optimism and affection for the cities. "Cities are the hub of our culture. What we have to overcome is the tendency to think of cities as dirty, nasty, and ugly."

Most Americans oppose abortion ban

NEW YORK (AP) — Nine years after the U.S. Supreme Court legalized abortion, 3 of 4 Americans oppose a constitutional amendment which would allow Congress to ban abortions, according to the latest Associated Press-NBC News poll.

The nationwide telephone poll of 1,597 adults involved scientific random sampling on Monday and Tuesday. The poll taker asked, "Do you favor or oppose an amendment to the Constitution which would give Congress the authority to prohibit abortions?"

Seventy-five percent said they oppose a constitutional amendment; 19 percent said they favored a constitutional amendment, and 6 percent were not sure.

There was also strong support among respondents for two positions espoused by abortion rights groups.

Fifty-seven percent said they agree with the statement, "Every woman who wants to have an abortion should be able to have one."

Seventy-seven percent said they agree with the statement, "The decision to have an abortion should be left to the woman and her physician." The 77 percent included 59 percent who said they "strongly" support that position and 18 percent who "mildly" favor it.

It was on Jan. 22, 1973 that the Supreme Court handed down its landmark decision legalizing abortion nationwide.

The 7-2 decision in the case filed by a Texas woman said the decision to have an abortion was up to a woman and her doctor during the first three months of pregnancy, and said government could not restrict abortion during the first trimester.

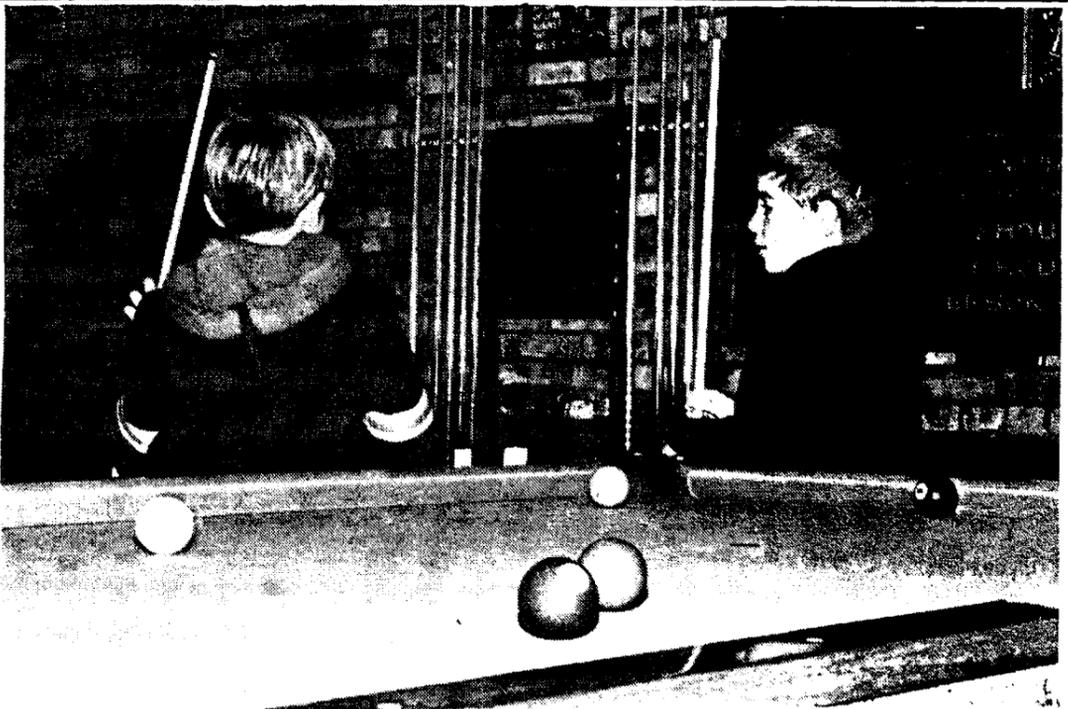

The decision said abortion was also legal during the second three months of pregnancy, but there could be medical restrictions to protect the woman's an's health. During the last three months of pregnancy, the court said, government could impose restrictions on abortion to protect the fetus as well as the mother.

Escort service evaluated

Notre Dame Student Government announced yesterday that from Jan. 24 to Feb. 4 the student escort service will be evaluated on its performance.

The evaluation seeks to determine the viability and effectiveness of the service.

The service is available from the Memorial Library Lobby from 10 to 11:45 p.m., Sunday through Thursday.

help," he said. According to the American Dental Association, no states allow the independent practice of dental hygiene. Hygienists have challenged this policy in Michigan and Georgia, and lost both times.

Ms. Edwards is appealing her license revocation to the state's Commonwealth Court. Criminal charges against her have been dropped pending the court's decision.

Joseph Castellino, Ms. Edwards' attorney, says dental hygienists must take certain courses and examinations to qualify for licenses; the state then considers them competent in their field.

"The additional requirement of dental supervision does nothing to advance or to insure the competency of dental hygienists... It has no rational or logical relationship to the patient's needs or the competency of the hygienist," Castellino said in a brief filed with the court. He asked that the requirement be found unconstitutional.

John Flynn, an attorney for the state dental board, said he will argue that "it is within the state's police powers" to regulate hygienists.

Ms. Edwards' grandfather, a dentist, saw patients in the same office she now uses. He tried to set up an independent practice for her mother, a dental hygienist, in that office — but ran into trouble with the authorities.

Says Ms. Edwards, whose sister is also a hygienist: "We've been trying this since 1933."

The tall, black-haired woman accuses dentists of ignoring new techniques.

structure at a meeting today with Student Affairs Vice-President Fr. John Van Wolvlear, according to Junior Ken Golonka.

Student social space was discussed in the Flanner session, with alumni indicating that there is support from the Alumni Board for a new student center, Junior Tom Koegel noted. Koegel added that the representatives said a new center is one of the top concerns of the Trustees, and is becoming a more legitimate issue because of Student Government and Student Body President Don Murday's presentations.

Thomas Maus asked Breen-Phillips students how they perceive alumni activities in the field, emphasizing the need for younger members on the Alumni Board. "There are 18 board positions, and indicative of need, the Alumni (Board) recently created 3 'at large' posts to represent the younger people in the Association," he said.

The sessions were beneficial because they provided another avenue through which students could obtain summer jobs, according to Junior Denise Smith. Senior Kevin Madosky noted that the evening was interesting because it brought students together with alumni. "I was able to see how they operate," he said.

On campus housing fulfills all requests

By CHUCK ZAMMIT
News Staff

Fr. Michael J. Heppen, director of student residences, said yesterday that no one remains on the waiting list for rooms on campus.

Fr. Heppen stated that only 90 percent of available rooms in Pasquerilla East are filled and that with a few exceptions, those people requesting single rooms, have received on campus housing.

He stressed that all room contracts for the spring semester must be returned by Feb. 2.

He noted that students who are not planning to reside on campus this fall should mark "O.C." on their contracts. This will facilitate a quick return of the $50.00 room deposit. Those students who sign and return the contract and subsequently decide to move off campus will forfeit $150.00 for failure to fulfill the contract.

Heppen stated in a letter that all contracts must be returned personally, and no contracts will be accepted from on campus students if they are mailed.

The only exception is contracts from students currently studying in Notre Dame or St. Mary's foreign programs. Room reservations will take place in each hall on April 28, 29, and 30.

Despite official disapproval U.S. firms arm Libya

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite U.S. disapproval of Libya's radical government, American firms have supplied its military with $53 million in weapons and materials — with some sales coming as late as last year, government documents show.

The American-made equipment, exported to Libya since Moammar Khadafy seized power in 1969, ranges from military cargo planes to weapon-sighting devices and guided missile components, according to documents obtained by the Associated Press.

U.S. firms also sold Libya's government artillery parts, ammunition, heavy trucks, uniforms, and jet engines, the documents say.

Administration officials said they have found no evidence that the exports to Libya were illegal, although they note that the documents used to compile the export figures are destroyed every three years.

The documents show that military-related shipments continued last year, as President Reagan expelled Libyan diplomats from the United States when U.S. jets shot down two Libyan warplanes in the Gulf of Sidra near the oil-rich Arab nation. Reagan accused Khadafy of being a key supporter of global terrorism.

The Census Bureau, which tabulates all U.S. exports and imports, counted $2.3 billion in military-related supplies to Libya in the first 11 months of 1981, according to the latest figures.

The Reagan administration cited "national security" concerns yesterday in refusing to say what the 1981 shipments were, though government sources indicate they were primarily military uniforms.

Commerce Department spokesmen declined to explain what "national security" interests were involved in keeping secret the types of items sold Libya in the last five years. A breakdown of earlier exports was released to the AP after an appeal was filed under the Freedom of Information Act.

Rep. Millicent Fenwick, R-N.J., who sponsored a 1979 law aimed at discouraging U.S. military sales of over $7 million to countries that foment terrorism, said military exports of even modest amounts were "absolutely intolerable."

The New York Times reported yesterday that 400 heavy-duty U.S.-made trucks sold to Libya four years ago, ostensibly for farming, have been converted for hauling Soviet tanks. The NYT said the conversion illustrates the problem of enforcing government bans on the export of military equipment to unfriendly states.

In 1980, the federal government indicted two former CIA agents — Edwin P. Wilson and Francis E. Terpil — for allegedly shipping explosives to Libya in 1976-77 and providing experts to train potential terrorists in their use.

While some American officials portray the Wilson-Terpil case as an unusual circumvention of U.S. export controls, the documents show that U.S. firms have routinely supplied Khadafy with weapons and other military equipment through normal commercial channels.

The exports occurred despite a long-standing U.S. policy dating to the 1970s which rules against supplying Khadafy with military hardware, said a State Department official who asked not to be identified.

Divers pull six more bodies from wreckage

WASHINGTON (AP) — Divers pulled six more bodies from the icy Potomac River on yesterday, leaving only one not yet recovered from the crash of an Air Florida jetliner that killed 78 people.

Police spokesmen said the remaining body was that of an infant.

Federal investigators, meanwhile, concentrated on reviewing the critical cockpit voice recorder they hope will shed some light on why the Boeing 737 failed to gain altitude on takeoff during a snowstorm Jan. 13, clipping a busy commuter bridge and crashing beneath the ice.

Four motorists on the bridge were among those killed. A stewardess and four passengers were rescued.

James L. Luke, chief medical examiner for the District of Columbia, said 70 of the 73 bodies recovered from the aircraft have been identified. All but one of those 70 apparently died from severe trauma, indicating they perished as a result of the crash impact and not from drowning.

The medical findings again raised questions about the identity of a middle-aged man who sacrificed his own life by repeatedly handing a life ring from a hovering helicopter to others awaiting rescue. The man disappeared beneath the water before the helicopter could return for a final trip.

Of the 70 identified, Arland Williams, 46, of Atlanta, a bank examiner for the Federal Reserve Board, died of exposure and drowning, instead of the crash itself, Luke said earlier. But the medical examiner still would not say that Williams might be the man who helped the other survivors.

Regarding the tape, the Orlando Sentinel in Florida reported that the last thing heard on the voice recorder recovered Wednesday was one of the crew members exclaiming, "Get the nose down ... we're going to go in."

The report was attributed to an unidentified "source."

Ira Furman, spokesman for the National Transportation Safety Board, said when asked to comment, "At this time, we'll neither confirm nor deny any reports about what's on that tape."

Earlier, Francis McAdams, who is overseeing the investigation for the NTSB, said the cockpit tape showed nothing of crew members' voices that indicated a particular cause for the crash.

"There are several things we are going to have to look at in quite greater depth... but at this time there isn't anything we're going to focus on to the exclusion of some other factors," McAdams said.

In other developments, the Pentagon said it had recovered "all known classified documents" carried by two Army officers aboard the planes.

The documents, none classified higher than "secret," were in briefcases fished out of the river, said Col. Ron Duchin.

It is against the law to carry documents with a higher classification aboard commercial transportation.

Young farmers face financial crises

The 7,000 farmers who attended the annual American Farm Bureau convention last week didn't seem oppressed. Between a videotaped greeting from President Reagan and a personal appearance by Interior Secretary James Watt, most of the delegates spent their time here sunning — not griping.

But the mood changed after dark, when many of the successful, predominantly middle-aged farmers would huddle around hotel bars and admit that the deck was stacked against their children.

Fears of another Soviet grain embargo dominated jawboning, and there were plenty of complaints about high interest rates and low farm prices. The farmers, however, were most grateful that they weren't entering the business today. And, of course, less-well-off farmers who couldn't attend the convention agreed only more adamantly.

"I inherited my place from my daddy," said Richard Christianson, 61, who raises hogs and cattle on a medium-sized farm near Maxwell, Neb. "It's been in the family for three generations. My boys were going to take it over, but with conditions like they are, they've had to get work elsewhere."

Indeed, the old farming adage that, "You either marry it or inherit it," has gone with the wind. Instead of "taking over" the family spread, today's young farmers work as hired hands from five to 10 years before moving up to the position of farm manager for someone else. The opportunity to buy or rent a farm on one's own by age 30 is no longer possible for most.

The reason is prices: nearly everyone here says 1981 and 1982 could go down as the worst two years in recent farming history. Wholesale prices for Great Plains agricultural products, for example, have dropped between 35 and 40 percent since last year while over head — farm equipment, seed, fertilizers, energy and land — has skyrocketed. "I haven't seen anything like this since the Depression," remarked Park Rinard, administrative assistant to Rep. Neal Smith (D-Iowa).

When a tractor retails for $50,000, eats up to $350 in fuel on a harvest or planting day, and represents only a fraction of a farmer's incredible investment, it's easy to see why young farmers are — more than ever — a dying breed.

To make matters worse, the Farm Home Administration (FmHA), which has traditionally offered affordable start-up loans to young farmers, has told thousands of those who are in trouble by letter recently to consider folding while they still have some equity left. Obviously this move has chilled relations with the younger generation.

"The young farmers that I've been meeting during state farm forums this month are furious," said Rep. Byron Dorgan (D-N.D.). "They feel abandoned by the Farm Home Administration. Last year that agency encouraged them to expand their operations, and now it's telling them to get out of farming."

Any farmer who got his start in the last 50 years will tell you that the FmHA has always been willing to go the extra mile for farmers and grant reprieves before foreclosing. Yet the agency's budget this year is a third of what it was in 1981. In North Dakota alone, 300 farmers have already received the FmHA letter.

Rep. Dorgan and groups such as the Iowa Farmers Union have asked FmHA to impose a one-year moratorium on foreclosures "in instances where management has been responsible but low prices and high interest rates have combined into a nearly impossible situation." Yet the Department of Agriculture has done little to help struggling farmers.

Downplaying farmers' complaints, officials in Washington point to a new 10-state, 81 county project known as "The New Full-Time Family Farmer and Rancher Development Program," which they say will help rescue young farmers from their plight.

According to the new plan, the USDA intends to encourage informal partnerships between young and retired farmers in an effort to make the former more attractive as loan prospects in the private sector. Presumably, the advice of old pros will make their proteges better agribusiness.

Whatever the government's intentions, grandfatherly advice isn't what young farmers need. Those we spoke with here have grown up on farms and live and breathe farming methods. They have taken vocational agriculture courses since they were 15, know what to plant, when to plant and how to buy and sell.

What young farmers need is financial aid, and the government seems reluctant to meet their needs. The implications of Uncle Sam's weak response should be clear to even the most rarefied urbanite: Unless opportunities for aspiring farmers increase, small family farms will continue to be gobbled up by larger agribusinesses. Corporate control of our nation's bread basket would inevitably lead to less competition and

and Cody Shearer

higher prices.

No one should doubt which party deserves government support more. Young farmers comprise one of our nation's most vital resources and are a worthy investment.

"I don't know if I'm going to make it," admitted Doug Schwartz, 21, of Whinton, Kansas, who's in debt $300,000. "But I'm young and I got years to work and that's my biggest asset."

Communism needs terror to survive

In Time magazine's "Man of the Year" issue, dated January 4, 1982, there is an extraordinary nine-page essay titled, "Communism: The Spector and the Struggle." The first sentence leaves the reader with no doubt as to its direction: "Poland in the past year and a half has taught the world a lesson that is both stark and undeniable: as a means of organizing an economy and providing for the well-being of a citizenry, Communism is a failure." The essay is as concise and readable a critique of the failing of Marxist theory and Soviet-style Communism as I have ever seen. It is extraordinary because it appears in a popular magazine which has been considered by many in the past to be a bastion of Eastern Establishment liberalism. I would expect to see it in National Review, not Time.

My only disappointment with the essay is that it took such a long time to appear. Lessons about Communism in theory and practice have been piling up for 64 years since the Soviet Union was born. Tens of millions have died at the hands of the Soviet secret police and their pupils around the world. Hundreds of millions have been enslaved by Marxist social engineers. The record of Marxist economics is abysmal. The Polish collapse and military coup are everyday events in Marxist history.

As in all Marxist dictatorships, the key to the Polish regime's lockgrip over the Poles has been the use of legalized terror. The primary arm of terror has been the 20,000 to 25,000 troops known as ZOMO. During the crackdown, it was ZOMO units that broke up most of the demonstrations that erupted after the imposition of martial law. It was ZOMO that was responsible for the deaths of eight miners in Katowice. ZOMO troops are selected on the basis of their disdain for their fellow Poles. Some are convicted felons whose record is forgiven in exchange for service with ZOMO.

That ZOMO units should be so effective should not be surprising. There is over sixty years of experience with terror within the Soviet Union. Lenin emphasized the use of terror to subjugate the masses early in his reign. "The energy and mass nature of terror must be encouraged... The courts must not ban terror... but must formulate the motives underlying it, legalize it as a principle, plainly, without make-believe or embellishment. It is necessary to formulate it as widely as possible." Lenin's handpicked director of the Cheka (The predecessor of the KGB), Felix Dzerzhinsky, was equally outspoken. "We stand for organized terror." Although the names of the Soviet secret police have been changed from the Cheka to the NKVD to the KGB, the structure and function have not.

Lenin declared in 1920, "The scientific concept of dictatorship means neither more nor less than unlimited power resting directly on force, not limited by anything, nor restrained by any laws or any absolute rules. Nothing else but that." Lenin's followers in the Soviet Union and other countries have adhered strictly to his definition. Estimates of deaths by brutal force in the Soviet Union range from 20 to 60 million. The KGB has been active in training terrorist groups throughout the world for the past fifteen years. The Westhermen Underground and the Black Liberation Army in the U.S., the IRA, the PLO, the Italian Red Brigade, the Polisario in the Western Sahara, the SWAPO group in Angola, Nicaragua's Sandanistas, and the Baader-Meinhof Gang in West Germany are terrorist groups which have been trained, armed and funded by the KGB, either directly or through puppet regimes in Cuba, East Germany, Libya and South Yemen. We can now add to this infamous list ZOMO of Poland.

majors are demanding a new "space" to hold their classroom "happenings" and threaten to destroy Campus Ministry's now priceless collection of New Yorker cartoons unless their demands are met.

Or...In November of '87 the entire Electrical Engineering Department storms O'Shaughnessy Hall and holds Philosophy Department Chairman, Dr. Andy Rooney hostage. Their demand: Elimination of the philosophy graduation requirement.

In 1982 the battle is fought with innuendo and sarcasm.

The opposing sides are not easily identified. For the most part the battle is fought between the Professionals and the Academics. Professionals wish to be in school so they can get a good job; Academics wish to be in school so they can be in school.

This basic division, which I make without any intention of identifying the good guys or the bad guys, is not apparent to the passive observer.

The Academics know what the enemy is like. Professionals are an amoral lot, caught up in a relentless pursuit of the almighty dollar. They have no interest in improving society — only their place in it — and will trample anyone or anything to get to their spot at the top of the heap. (The jargon is familiar, no?)

They will undoubtedly hate their job, adore their paycheck and try to buy their happiness with big cars, summer homes and lots of Bourbon.

Professionals are not bothered by this bleeding-heart jibberish. Academics, they know, are vagabond idealists whose "search for truth and meaning" is a coverup. They are scaredy-cats who can't face reality, lazies who cringe at the word "responsibility."

Academics want to stay at school forever because they don't want to work. They can't sort out their own lives so they pretend to try and solve the world's problems — hunger, war, the whole works.

The silence of this war is sometime broken by small skirmishes. An engineering professor talks of the oppositions technical stupidity: "The people over there in the other building...you know the ones who won't get jobs."

A sophomore English major is accosted in a dark alley. "What are you going to do with that?" the gang asks. He tries to defend himself. "Live," he answers with a slight grin. They laugh.

Of course this is "all in good fun." Jokes such as this are easy to make and give us a chance to fill the gaps in dinner conversations. But in every joke there is something more than just a chuckle.

The worst part of a career, a friend once told me, is that it is an identity. After you graduate you are what you do — engineer, teacher, accountant. People rarely let you describe yourself further; they find out what you are and let their imaginations take it from there.

We are comfortable with our stereotypes of others and are careful not to step too far out of our own categories. Even curiosity, as powerful as it may be, is not enough to displace us from the comfort of our misunderstanding.

It's unfortunate that we sometimes consider certain things "useless to know," especially when others value them so highly. There is as much wonder and creative energy in a smooth running assembly line as there is in a good poem. It is just a matter of learning to appreciate it.

History testifies that a middle-

There is quiet but vicious battle raging here. It is much like the Civil war, but not really; it is like the Cold war; almost. But unless some catastrophic incident catapults it into importance it will never appear in a history book.

Paul Kosidowski

Second Thoughts

I can vaguely imagine such an incident...In 1988 A group of Art majors barricade themselves and an arsenal of homemade explosives inside the library. They are protesting the University's scheduling of all their classes in Elkhart. The administration's reasons? "There was just not enough room for all the Engineering students." The Art ground between the ideal and the real does exist. Societies would stagnate without it. The exploration of this territory demands Engineers and Business leaders who know the ideas and dreams of great thinkers. It needs philosophers who have studied the concept of justice and know how this justice can be turned into economic and industrial reality.

I was truly moved at last year's commencement by the valedictory. It called for great things from a great class, a lot of "world-shakin'." It was idealistic. It was realistic. Thousands of people were listening and afterward they all stood up and applauded. Kurt Waldheim applauded; Pat O'Brien applauded. Great men from every faction of society applauded. And I applauded. Well think of that.

'Absence of Malice' leaves absent meaning

Even before I went to see Sydney Pollack's Absence of Malice, I knew that I could not be satisfied unless the film was something more than an extended episode of Lou Grant. Not that I've got anything against Lou Grant. It's a great show, but three dollars and seventy-five cents excites the basic human propensity that the movies should go beyond the limited (albeit well done) themes of a television show.

Dennis Chalifour

In many ways, Absence of Malice does satisfy the prerequisites I've laid down here. Pollack gets off to a good start. Under the titles we see a blurred group of newspaper people dissipate into the cold and hard type on the screen of a computer terminal. The mechanical business of news takes over through a press montage and the literal power of the pen becomes apparent. There are certainly many points that arise here about the ethics of mass communications.

Kurt Leudtke's taut storyline reinforces the theme. Megan Carter (Sally Field) is a newspaper dupe for the D.A.'s office which leaks information in an effort to apply pressure upon Michael Gallagher (Paul Newman). The pressure is effective, but Gallagher is innocent, and in turn his life is ruined. Paul Newman presents Gallagher at the film's beginning as an ordinary beer-drinking guy next door. He's a guy unlike anyone you could imagine Paul Newman associating with, let alone making a film about. But take that same man, push him to the limit and you've got a character born for the movies. The street smart Newman arises like a Phoenix from the broken Gallagher and, in perfect Hollywood style, the underdog has the last laugh.

Unfortunately, when it came to handing out brains, Sally Field's Megan Carter seems to have fallen asleep in the cute line. Reflected off the complex Gallagher, Megan is pathetically naive and remains so for the entire motion picture. For a 34 year old news reporter about to be promoted to editor, Carter makes too many mistakes. In fact she makes the same mistake three times and then is ready to write off the whole movie like a visit to summer camp.

What is most annoying about Megan is her refusal to learn her lesson. Whenever a major character is chased up a tree in a motion picture, I expect that they'll get her down in better shape than she started a result of the hundred and twenty minutes she spent up there. This is my major gripe with Absence of Malice. The same feisty yet cute little pussy cat that climbs the tree at the beginning merrily skips away in the end, totally unchanged.

While Newman gets a chance to exercise his talent, Field is stifled by the one-dimensionality of Meg Carter and reverts to some of the tricks she learned on The Flying Nun. Yet Carter remains the only substantial hole in the film. The supporting cast is top-notch with Bob Balaban leading the pack as Elliot Rosen, the justice department investigator who sets everything in motion.

If you're looking for a newspaper hero story, stay away from this one. It's more complex than an episode of Lou Grant but Sally Field's Mister Rogers protagonist keeps this movie from ever taking off. Still, Absence of Malice remains a flawed but provocative look at newspaper ethics.

Sydney Pollack directs Paul Newman and Sally Field in "Absence of Malice," now appearing at the Forum Cinema.

How do you lose an albatross?

Friendship, like the weather, has its seasons, and the first change comes and passes away almost before you notice it, like a wisp of cloud that floats across the face of the sun. Instruments pick up signs of a coming storm very early. Some people don't even realize it's raining until they read the weather report in the evening news. But there are always warning signs. The problem is, we don't want to imagine that rain drops are falling on our heads. We're afraid of seeming paranoid in feeling that a friend is treating us with a detachment we're not used to. We also do not want to be caught off guard by a tornado that tears apart a friendship we have depended on.

Friendships come in an infinite variety. Some friendships, such as courtship and marriage, are very intimate. Some friendships are professional, and involve a great deal of sharing in trade secrets. If you are wise, you will never embarrass a professional friend by asking advice about your personal affairs. "I really think you should discuss that with someone who knows you really well, Jack." When Jack finds himself being pushed away with such long-distanced words, he knows he has made a serious mistake in trying to borrow money at the office.

There are friendships that are neither emotionally intimate nor professionally exuberant. Someone you know has become like a part of yourself. You share thoughts, time, money, and whatever else is precious, and the favors are reciprocated. One day both of you become self-consciously aware of the quality of the personal exchange. Pleased and happy about what is happening, you acknowledge it to be very good, and you may formally declare yourselves best friends. Such special closeness deserves a celebration of the communion of souls, with drinks poured and fatted calves slaughtered for the promotion of mirth.

Becoming friends with someone — some precious person you want to marry, or be engaged to, or have as a buddy to drink with, is not the problem. It is honest fun to be a friend, and to have a friend. The pain comes for you when the party is over, or at least, you think, the party is ending. Someone you cherish has become bored, disinterested, disenchanted. They don't say it; they won't admit it; they may not even realize they are in the process of asking you to move over because they feel crowded by your company and they need the space that you are using. Nevertheless, their graciousness begins to fail. Courtesies, which you never asked for, but were grateful for anyway, are gradually withdrawn. You sense an anger you never deserved. The anger begins in a source outside of you. Your friend is thinking: I have tamed him/her as the Little Prince tamed the fox, and now I am burdened as though I were carrying an albatross around my neck. How do you get rid of an albatross? Resentment begins with an unwanted bird.

"You have become responsible for me," the fox said to the Little Prince. Sometimes we can remind a friend that the friend is responsible for us, but more often than not, it's a cheap shot. Friendship is on uneasy ground when we begin to insist that our friends feel sorry for us, or avoid hurting us.

Friends can drift apart as mutually as they drifted together. "Au revoir and no hard feelings. It was fun while it lasted. Maybe someday, we can do it again." Some of the best friendships can be merely temporary; this is the way of the world. No rituals, after all, were signed in blood. "Heads up, and cheerio."

Letters to a Lonely God

"I like you so much I want the best thing for you, even if the best thing is letting go." This is the Rod McKuen approach. Then there are the shades of Hemingway: no whimpering, no being messy, no being a bloody bore; stiff upper lip all the way home. "May there be no moaning of the bar when I put out to sea."

Or we can try to maintain a relationship by manipulating our friend with guilt. "Notice me," we shout in our words and actions. "Damn you, pay attention to me. You made me what I am." I'm a fool, and I know it/ You are cruel, I agree...I'm wild again/ beguiled again/ a whimpering, simpering child again, AND IT'S ALL YOUR FAULT. Among folks who know, this counts as the classic behavior of a wimp or a nerd.

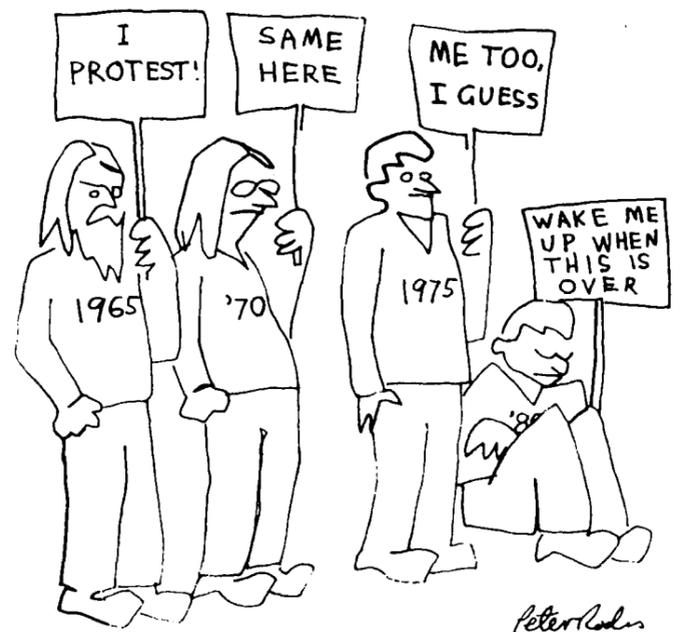

One can, as the phrase goes, fight like hell. It may work. Marriages are renewed, it is said, when mates find new or original ways to be tender, loving, careful, generous, sexy, considerate. In relations where no promises were made, the mutual pain is increased from trying too hard. You may find yourself playing before an indifferent audience. The next time you look, the house may be empty.

My own advice is: in the event of a crisis, MAINTAIN GRACE UNDER PRESSURE. Keep calm, and do nothing. Your friend wants to diminish the intensity of the bond. Don't consent to it, and don't make it easy. Don't say: I knew it was coming, or I saw the distress signals. Let your friend, in breaking the bad news, do all the talking. It is more dignified simply to sit and stare, sweet, but not treachery. Your friend may be taking advantage, and you have your pride to think of. You can make your friend seem neurotic, if you know how to play your cards. Your friend can make a neurotic out of you, if you demand a settlement in justice or mercy.

Learn an example from the silence of God, who never answers in ways we can clearly identify. All the time His love is there, spreading a carpet of grace beneath our feet. He never argues. He just keeps his arms around us.

Let us keep our arms around the ones who leave us. Hugging, as a private act of devotion in the depth of the soul, never lost us a friend, and maybe it can help us keep on. Grace under pressure is not only courage; it is also wisdom. No love is stronger than the love that chooses to be loyal to someone who values the freedom of having no loyalties. It is a counterpart to the shepherd loving the lost sheep most. After a while the shepherd and the sheep find their way home together.

There is a lot of bad weather in an Indiana winter. Even on the most pleasant evenings, you should be warned the weather may be bad before morning.

Peter Rodas

Students take life more seriously in the '80s

Students are more serious about their work than they've been in years. That's what colleges are reporting. Administrators say they even see a difference in attitude between this year's freshmen over the seniors. The freshmen are partying less, talking politics in bull sessions less and spending more time at the library than at the local pub drinking beer.

"There clearly is a much greater respect for authority among freshmen," one professor was quoted as saying in The New York Times.

Why is that? What has suddenly caused young people to become more conservative? This kind of a report from the colleges would warm the hearts of many Americans who were sick and tired of the revolutionaries of the 1960s and the early 1970s.

I have mixed feelings about it. The protesters — it didn't much matter what they were protesting — irritated me, but if I'd been their age, I probably would have been one of them. They were such well-meaning, bright, idealistic idiots. I knew a lot of them.

When the protest-children of the 1960s were 10, they began to be embarrassed with their parents because they said all their parents were interested in was money. When they were 12, they turned against their teachers because they didn't want that narrow kind of education. The following year they started smoking marijuana and listening to loud music that drowned out any thought that might enter their heads. By 15, these young people had bought the Playboy philosophy that the traditional rules about sex were confining, artificial and anti-social.

That's the way it went, and by the time they were 20, a lot of the brightest young people were uneducated pot-smokers, sleeping around with a lot of different partners, growing their hair longer than was comfortable as a badge of their age and protesting the war in Vietnam. They ate naturally grown, organic food for their health, but didn't wash very often. The conventions of their revolution were more formal than the conventions of the society against which they were protesting.

Why this happened and why many young people today would support President Reagan and maybe even a war in Vietnam is a mystery to me. There's no sense in an adult trying to understand young people because they don't want to be understood. Parents and educators who say they understand them are kidding themselves and older people who try to be one of them by joining them and going where they go or dressing as they dress are laughed at in private by the kids. It's a strange thing that everyone old has been young and no one young has ever been old and yet the young seem to understand the old better than the old understand the young.

It's too bad that moderation, open-mindedness and the middle-ground of any issue is so dull to us. It's only exciting if we're radically this or radically that. The excitement is out at the extreme ends of a position. I'd like to see this new breed of college student study hard, drink less beer and find out all they can about nuclear energy and devote some intelligent attention to bringing about a national policy in regard to it. With the exception of a few protesters left over from 10 years ago, young people don't care about issues like that one way or the other.

Most of the activists of the 1960s are gone now, they're approaching middle age and they're tired of their own rebellion. They've joined the rest of society and taken a job with the insurance company. The only vestige of their rebellion is the solar panel on their roof, if they were lucky enough to be able to pull themselves together so they have a roof.

Isn't there something acceptable for kids in between radical conservatism and radical liberalism? Does the pendulum of the philosophic clock have to swing to such extremes?

SPEAKING OUT

The Department of Economics is sponsoring a Developmental Workshop entitled Systems Production, Economic Interests, in Governmental Support in Southern Africa, by Dr. Ron Libby, visiting professor in Government and International Studies at 3:30 p.m. today in Room 900 of the Memorial Library. The lecture will undoubtedly cover related topics of the racial and social systems of this most turbulent area and may extend into controversial topics.

TRIPPING THE LIGHT FANTASTIC

ND/SMC Council for the Retarded is sponsoring a dance at the Logan Center tonight from 7:30 to 10:00 p.m. With music provided by a local disc jockey, the dance promises to be a truly festive occasion for volunteers and patients alike. Present and past volunteers as well as any interested persons are cordially invited to attend this free event.

Saturday there will be music and dancing at Chautauqua LaFortune Ballroom with a live disc jockey beginning at 8:30 p.m. Cost is $1 per person for singles or bring a date and get in two-for-one. Boogie to what your heart yearns for during those long winter nights when books and lamp oil seem your only friends. Get out and let loose!

THE SPORTING LIFE

The Fighting Irish skaters battle Bowling Green tonight and tomorrow at 7:30 p.m. at the ACC. Witness a stunning upset of the CCHA leading and third-ranked Falcons.

The women's basketball team is in action this weekend: Saturday the lady Irish face St Ambrose at 4:00 p.m. Sunday at 2:00 p.m. they face the Michigan Wolverines. Both games are at the ACC. Come out to support Notre Dame's winning hoopsters.

The men's basketball squad takes on Lefty Driessell and the Maryland Terrapins at 8:00 p.m. in the ACC. Join in and be a part of the famed sixth man.

AT THE MOVIES

Chapter Two — Tonight at 7, 9:15, 11:30 p.m., Engineering Auditorium. Marsha Mason stars in her husband Neil Simon's semi-autobiographical account of their meeting. All in the family and all for one buck.

The Gospel according to St. Matthew 7:30 p.m., Annenberg Auditorium. A fine adaptation of the Synoptic, the movie is well worth the "extra" walk to the basement of Snite.

handle. "As well as Bowling Green has been playing, I have to say that we've been playing very good hockey as well. Our team has shown me a lot of character in the past month, so it should be just a super hockey series."

The 12-10-2 Irish are also riding high due to an offensive resurgence, with the primary factor being the play of Dave Poulin. In his last 10 games, the senior has tallied 14 goals and 4 assists to place him in seventh place for the league scoring title.

Poulin receives much help from linemates Bill Rothstein and Jeff Logan, each of whom had impressive performances last week against the Wolverines. Logan's appearance on this line is due to the absence of Jeff Perry, who is sitting out a few weeks in order to recover from a sprained knee he received in the Chicago-Circle series two weeks ago.

Jim Brown is coming off a record-setting effort last Friday at Michigan in which he scored the first hat trick ever for a Notre Dame defenseman. John Schmidt and Joe Bowie team up for Smith's second blue-line tandem, and the two have enjoyed productive seasons thus far with 41 points between them in 23 games.

The cornerstone of the team remains to be Dave Laurion. Laurion, 3-0-1 in his last four starts, has lowered his g.a.a. to a very respectable 3.70 — sixth best in the league.

BUT MACOR HAS BOTH THE APPEARANCE AND PERSONALITY OF A SKUNK THAT HAS BEEN HIT BY A CAR. But since the purpose of this contest is not only to determine the cockroach of the campus, but also to raise money for charity, we hope to advance this cause with the following proposal: IF YOUR CANDIDATE, JOE MUSUMECI IS VOTED UGLIER THAN JOHN MACOR, WE WILL PAY FOR THE CORRECTIVE SURGERY NECESSARY TO MAKE JOE OF SOCIALLY ACCEPTABLE APPEARANCE. IF OUR CANDIDATE WINS, YOU MUST PAY FOR ATTEMPTING SIMILAR CORRECTIONS ON MACOR (WHICH WOULD HAVE TO INCLUDE PERSONALITY RECONSTRUCTION). IF YOU ACCEPT THIS CHALLENGE, THE FEAR OF LOSING BY EITHER OF OUR GROUPS WILL STIMULATE SUCH SUPPORT THAT THIS WILL BE THE MOST PROFITABLE UMOC CAMPAIGN EVER. WINDSURFER WINDSURFER WINDSURFER WINDSURFER WINDSURFER WINDSURFER OH WELL WINDSURFER!!

The kid: The man to beat

KANSAS CITY — He looked out of place in the lobby of the exclusive hotel. In his jeans, tennis shoes and Rolling Stones 1981 Tour T-shirt, he looked like the kind of person the doorman would be in a hurry to throw out — some kid off the street.

At 22, he's not much more than a kid. But after four years on the pro tennis circuit, John McEnroe has become the man to beat. With his Wimbledon and U.S. Open wins over Bjorn Borg, McEnroe established himself as one of the greatest players, if not the most well-liked, in the game's history. But as his ability won him matches, his temper lost him fans. Now, it seems, McEnroe has begun to be concerned about his image, that of the game, and his responsibility to tennis as a whole.

Skip Desjardin
Sports Editor

"Hell, no," he says. Then why the sudden change? Why hasn't McEnroe taken on the responsibility of cleaning up his act before now?

"I never felt ready to before," he explains. "But recently I've started to feel it might be just that — my responsibility. I care about the game. Deep down I think the majority of the players feel a sense of responsibility to the game."

'I don't want people asking me when I'm 30 why I was so mad all the time instead of what they should be asking me.'

"I don't want people asking me when I'm 30 why I was so mad all the time instead of what they should be asking me," he says of his celebrated antics.

That's one of the reasons he was in the midst of a five-city tour of the Midwest when our paths crossed here Wednesday. The series of exhibition matches against Guillermo Vilas, the world's sixth-ranked pro, was an effort to get out and meet the fans. McEnroe was on his best behavior, whether at autograph sessions or in hotel lobby bars.

"To get through the rest of my career, I'm going to have to change," he admits. "I just have to."

"I don't know if I'll be able to do it — to let things slide," he says honestly. "But that's the kind of attitude I'm going to have to take more often if I'm going to get people off my back. "I don't want people to look back and say I was bad for the game."

Does he enjoy the 'Superbrat' image?

Officiating is still his biggest gripe.

"There's no doubt it's gotten worse since I became a pro four years ago," he says. He thinks maybe umpires and line judges should be paid more, to insure that competent officials have some incentive to work.

But there are other problems with pro tennis as well, he says.

"The game is becoming so spread out — so thin. Everybody's playing in a different place. While Borg's in Europe, Lendl's in Australia, I'm here. You can't tell which tournaments are the important ones anymore. The players can't, so I know the public can't."

"Tournaments should always be more important than the players involved."

That statement, coming from a man whose court presence demands that he be the center of attention, could be the tip-off.

Maybe, just maybe, John McEnroe is growing up.

Phelps thanks all for support

By DAVE DZIEDZIC
Sports Writer

As he prepared his team for the upcoming contest against Maryland (tomorrow at 8 p.m. at the ACC), Digger Phelps took time out to express his thanks to the student body for their recent support. "The crowd has been super," Phelps said. "I think the students realize that we need them a lot."

Considering Notre Dame's sluggish start, the student body has definitely supported the team well. "Their support was very evident at the Northern Illinois game before Christmas vacation," Phelps said. "They knew we were down and they tried to help us up."

The students didn't forget about the Irish over vacation, either. Despite the horrible weather conditions, almost all of the students showed up at the ACC for the Davidson game last Saturday.

When the Irish trailed 15-5 in the first half, the students again rallied to the team's side. After Phelps was called for two technical fouls, the students went wild. The Irish proceeded to go on a scoring spree and eventually whip the Wildcats, 59-45.

The crowd was once again a factor Tuesday night as the Irish nearly upset 12th-ranked Villanova. "Even though we lost, it was a good feeling," Phelps said. "The fans helped us out again."

Phelps claims the student support is definitely necessary. "College games are very demanding on the players and coaches. We need whatever home-court edge we can get."

Has the students' support had an effect on this year's squad? "It most certainly has," Phelps responds. "While we've been at home the past week, we've improved 90 percent. That extra 10 percent of improvement may come soon. We need a tie ballgame with the ball at the end of the game. When that time comes, the students will be a big part of it."

Besides hoping for a Notre Dame victory over Maryland, Phelps says the students should be rooting for Idaho (Notre Dame's Monday-night opponent). "If Idaho defeats Montana and Montana State, then the Vandals will be 17-0 when they come here," he says. "That will definitely be the student's game. The chant will be '17 and 1!'"

Both Lefty Smith's hockey team and Mary DiStanislao's women's basketball team are hosting big games this weekend, and Phelps emphasizes the necessity of student support for these teams as well. "Lefty has been working toward a weekend like this for a long time," Phelps said, referring to Notre Dame's two-game series against third-ranked Bowling Green. "It would be great to see all of the students out there to support them."

"And Mary and her team deserve support as well," he continues. "They've done an excellent job this season."

After being reminded that three Notre Dame graduates will be playing in this Sunday's Super Bowl, Phelps said, "This should be a very exciting weekend here on campus."

"I just wish we could play 1812 for them."

... Terps

Phelps. "We're still playing a couple of people out of position because of our lack of personnel. We have to hit the boards hard in every contest."

Driesell is currently ranked second in winning percentage among college basketball coaches. Phelps enjoys coaching against him. "It's always a challenge," he says. "Lefty is one of the most colorful guys in college basketball. He's great for the sport."

IRISH ITEMS — Tomorrow's contest is slated for 8 p.m., not 1:30, as listed on the tickets. ... Maryland is the best free-throw shooting team in the ACC, shooting 75 percent from the line. ... The Irish, on the other hand, are shooting only 62 percent from the line. ... Notre Dame is 0-5 in games decided by five points or less. ... More woes: Junior walk-on Karl Love injured an ankle in yesterday's practice.

... Women

do a lot of things on offense because she was holding the ball high and not bringing it down where smaller people can get at it. She shot very well."

"From the standpoint of personal goals, though, we didn't do everything we should have," she added. "We turned the ball over far too many times (15, compared to Valparaiso's 30), and it wasn't on account of their defense. Steals and tipped balls can sometimes be considered forced errors, but traveling isn't a forced error, and probably half of our turnovers were travels."

Last night's win was Notre Dame's sixth straight, and 10th in 13 outings this season. It was also the first of three games that the Irish will play in a four day span.

Tomorrow at 4 p.m., the Queen Bees of St. Ambrose College will pay a visit to the ACC. Michigan will be here as well for a 2 p.m. start on Sunday.

The Irish have been successful in their only two starts against the Queen Bees. Last year, DiStanislao's club handed St. Ambrose one of its nine losses, 56-49 at the ACC.

Incidentally, that win, on Feb. 9, was the 99th of DiStanislao's career, and the last Mary D's team would gather in February 1981. Seven straight losses followed before the Irish coach finally got win number 100, in the opening round of the Northern Lights Tournament in Anchorage, Alaska.

This time around, Notre Dame finds itself in the midst of a six game winning streak, the second longest in the school's history. A win over St. Ambrose will tie the record set by the 1978-79 squad coached by Sharon Petro.

The Queen Bees of Coach Ken Buckles were 12-2 heading into last night's contest against Muscatine Community College. St. Ambrose will play at St. Joseph's of Rensselaer, Ind. tonight before heading to South Bend.

Michigan's Wolverines stand at 9-4 heading into tonight's game with Purdue. That, by the way, will be Michigan's first competition in nearly two weeks.

The Wolves of Coach Gloria Soluk have played three opponents who the Irish will meet later this season. Michigan dropped a 93-65 decision at Cincinnati, and won a pair of home tilts, 88-72 over DePaul, and 78-76 over Michigan State.

Sunday's game will be the fourth meeting between the Irish and Wolverines. Michigan has dominated the series, winning all three games. The closest Notre Dame ever came to beating a Michigan club was two seasons ago, when they forced them into overtime, before losing 66-60.

IRISH ITEMS — A year ago, it took Notre Dame literally an entire season to reach the 10-victory plateau. Win No. 10 came just two games from the conclusion of the '80-81 season. With 13 regular-season games remaining in this campaign, Notre Dame has a chance to post its second-ever 20-win season. ... Prior to Sunday's Notre Dame-Michigan clash, a pair of talented high school teams from the Baltimore area will clash in the ACC. Towson (Md.) Catholic, 21-1, will take on Martin Spalding High School of Baltimore in a game that will begin at noon. Towson is the two-time defending champion of the Baltimore Catholic League. Spalding is currently ranked 10th in the state by the Baltimore metro newspapers.

Despite injuries Irish grapplers split match

By BRIAN REIMER
Sports Writer

Prior to last night's triangular meet, members of the Notre Dame wrestling team had to be apprehensive about facing Bowling Green. The Irish were severely plagued by injuries, specifically a leg fracture to 167-pounder Phil Baty. The Falcons, on the other hand, had a healthy starting line-up. Boosted by three pins, the Mid-American Conference power Falcons handed the Irish a 43-2 shellacking. Only a 43-12 win over an undermanned Defiance squad salvaged the evening for Notre Dame.

In the words of Coach Joseph Bruno, "Bowling Green has some excellent leg wrestlers on their team. With our injuries, we've had a heck of a time just trying to fill the weight classes. We've lost starters at 167 and 177-pounds. Even though our freshmen have done a good job filling in, many of them are really too light for the weight classes they're wrestling at."

Freshmen have not been able to fill the empty slot at 118-lbs, where the Irish have had to forfeit six points in all their recent dual meets. Last night, 126-pounder Joe Andreotti lost a narrow 4-3 decision to Bowling Green's Mike Lehman. Against Defiance, Joe scored six team points the easy way — he received a forfeit.

Don Heintzelman, a 134-pounder, suffered a pin from the Falcon's Bob Colatruglio, but also received a forfeit against Defiance. Pete Agostino had the same fate, as he was pinned by Bowling Green's Greg Westoven and won by default against Defiance. Doug Skinner fell to Bowling Green's Mike Gerken in the 1 pound weight class, 3-0, but won a superior decision over Defiance's Eris Christman, 13-5.

Brian Erard had the team's best outing last night. After pounding Jerry Bowser of Defiance, 15-8, Brian scored Notre Dame's only points against the Falcons as he fought Dave Cozad to a 2-2 tie in the 158-pound division. Karl Dahlhauser, at 167 pounds, was not so fortunate. He fell to Bowling Green's Milo Sanda, 11-3, and was pinned by Defiance's Richard Rose at the 1:24 mark of the first period.

Jim O'Laughlin split his two matches, losing 12-5 to the Falcoln's Doug Randolph and pinning Mel Cruse of Defiance at 177-lbs. 190-pounder Shawn Moloney lost to Bowling Green's Terry Wiseman, 13-5, but won his other match by forfeit. Larry Kissner filled the previously vacant heavyweight slot. Even though he only lasted 33 seconds against Bowling Green's Jeff Powers, he scored six points at heavyweight via forfeit against Defiance.

Injuries have to affect a team's performance, even in an individual sport like wrestling. Inexperienced wrestlers have to meet veterans from other squads, and face final scores like 43-2. The triangular split leaves Notre Dame with a record of 7-2. This weekend, the Irish travel to Southwestern Michigan for the Chris Taylor Memorial Tournament, held in honor of the late American Olympic heavyweight medalist.

Next week, the home schedule resumes with a triangular meet against Eastern Michigan and DePauw at the ACC pit Tuesday at 7 p.m.

Senior Brian Erard, at 158-pounds, defeated Jerry Bowser of Defiance, 15-8. Erard also scored Notre Dame's only points against

NC State upset by Deacons

Chapel Hill, N.C. (AP) — Mike Helms' jumper from the top of the key with 2:11 left and Anthony Teachey's four free throws in the final 30 seconds led Wake Forest to a 55-48 upset over top-ranked and previously unbeaten North Carolina in Atlantic Coast Conference basketball last night.

The victory was Wake Forest's second consecutive on the Tar Heels' homecourt and snapped North Carolina's winning streak at 13.

Wake Forest found itself down 22-9 midway through the first half thanks to James Worthy's 13-point performance. But the Demon Deacons collapsed on Worthy and shut him down for the remainder of the period.

North Carolina was also hampered by the absence of sophomore center Sam Perkins, who came down with an intestinal virus at the pregame meal.

After a one-year stint with North Texas State (under current Iowa Coach Hayden Fry), Selmer was tabbed offensive coordinator for Kansas State before accepting last season's position with the Vancouver-based Lions.

The Notre Dame assistant won monograms as a tackle for both Minnesota and Wyoming.

Besides hiring Selmer, another staff change involves Assistant Coach Brian Boulac. Faust will reportedly move him from his defensive line post, and give Boulac a new assignment tutoring Irish receivers.

Boulac, who completed his 12th season at Notre Dame this past fall, worked with the offensive line every year prior to 1981.

49'ers not sure of Bengal game plan

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — There seems to be a difference of opinion on the San Francisco 49ers as to how the Cincinnati Bengals will attack them in Super Bowl XVI.

Coach Bill Walsh said Thursday that bruising fullback Pete Johnson could be the Bengals' primary weapon Sunday in the Silverdome.

All-Pro rookie cornerback Ronnie Lott, on the other hand, feels that quarterback Ken Anderson, the National Football League's Most Valuable Player, will be Cincinnati's main man.

"We're still reviewing certain defensive things we feel we have to do to stop Johnson, who I think could very well be the main weapon for Cincinnati and who could carry the ball upwards of 30 times," Walsh said.

Johnson, a 6-foot, 250-pound tank of a man, gained 86 yards on 12 carries when the 49ers defeated the Bengals 21-3 Dec. 6 in Cincinnati.

"He ran effectively against us the first time and there were people after the game thought that maybe Cincinnati could have used him more," said Walsh.

"He ripped through us two or three times. The only break we had was that we were ahead far enough that they probably could not have won the game by just giving the ball to him.

"But my suspicion is that he'll be their primary weapon."

Most people think the Bengals will rely more on Anderson's arm than on Johnson's feet. It's possible that Walsh is simply trying to psyche the Bengals like he did last time, when he suggested he might use his second stringers against them and went with starters instead.

Lott, for one, expects an aerial fireworks display from Anderson.

Walsh's concern about Anderson is obvious from his comments early in the week when he called the Bengals' quarterback "the greatest player in football."

Harriers ready for another close race

By EARL RIX
Sports Writer

The last two Notre Dame-Iowa track meets have been decided by a single point in the last event. This year's Irish dual-meet opener versus the Hawkeyes promises to be another close battle.

Last year the Hawkeyes beat the Irish at the wire by winning the mile relay by less than one-tenth of a second.

Two years ago Ahmad Kazini triple jumped the Irish to victory in the final event.

"Iowa says that they are keying for three meets this year: the dual meet with Notre Dame, the Cornhusker Invitational and the Big Ten Championships," says Irish Head Coach Joe Piane.

The meet will probably be decided by the performances of Greg Bell, Bernie Adell, and Phil Gilmore in the 60-yard dash, and the running of Mitch Van Eyken, Jacques Eady and Bernie Adell in the 600-yard run.

"The key to the meet is to beat them where they are strong — in the sprints," says Irish Sprint Coach Ed Kelly. "We also need some key performances in field events.

"I think our sprint crew is definitely improved. We brought in a great sprinter in Mitch Van Eyken. Bernie Adell and Phil Gilmore have also helped us," adds Piane. "Mitch could win the 300 and so could Jacques. If we go one-two in the 300, it will shock the hell out of them," says Piane. Last year the Hawkeyes went one-two in both the 300 and 600-yard events.

Kelly says that this year he has "the best group of athletes I've ever coached." He adds, however, that "on paper the Hawkeyes should beat us."

Matvey, Irish massacre Cavaliers

By MARK HANNUKSELA

VALPARAISO, Ind. — "They have to get right off the bus and play. Let's see how they handle that," said Notre Dame Assistant Coach Pat Knapp prior to last night's game.

Because of a mix-up in travel plans, Notre Dame's women's basketball team left South Bend more than half an hour late yesterday. They arrived here less than 90 minutes before the 7 p.m. starting time.

Knapp would have to admit today that his team handled the problem well. Notre Dame showed no ill effects from the hour-long bus ride, and put forth one of its better efforts both offensively and defensively, in drubbing Valparaiso 84-27.

Junior center Shari Matvey was dominant on both ends of the floor against the small Crusader club. In 21 minutes of playing time, Matvey scored 24 points on 12-of-15 shooting from the floor, pulled down 11 rebounds, seven of which resulted in field goals, and handed out one assist, a pretty feed to freshman Mary Beth Schueth.

Freshmen Carrie Bates, Ruth Kaiser and Laura Dougherty also scored in double figures for Coach Mary DiStanislao's club. Bates scored 15, Kaiser 13 and Dougherty 10.

Bates also collected nine rebounds.

Carol Radivan led the Crusaders with nine points. The sophomore guard connected on just 4-of-20 shots from the floor.

Overall, the Irish shot 53 percent from the floor to Valpo's 25 percent. The Crusaders hit 3-of-8 shots from the free throw line, while the Irish connected on 6-of-7.

The taller Irish doubled Valpo's rebounding total, pulling down 50 to Valpo's 25.

Four Notre Dame spurts determined the final margin of victory. The four spurts, added together, covered more than an entire half, and altogether, the Irish outscored their opponents 52-0 in the span.

"You can't disagree with a 50-point margin of victory," said DiStanislao afterward. "We just never lost much regardless of what combination we used. Shari played good defense tonight, and she was able to

Weekend series

Icers ready for third place Falcons

By MICHAEL OLENIK
Sports Writer

It should be one of those matchups that both fans and coaches dream about. Both teams have ample reason to win, and each has been proving that they are very capable of doing so.

The Notre Dame hockey team will face its sternest test of the season this weekend with a pair of games against CCHA leader and the third-ranked team in the nation, Bowling Green.

The Falcons, 15-8-1 on the season, have been virtually unbeatable in the last two months. After a 0-7-1 start, Jerry York's squad has ripped through its schedule with phenomenal success. In fact, the Falcons' only setback in the its last 16 contests came 10 games ago at the hands of Michigan State.

Credentials such as these are difficult to ignore, and Coach Lefty Smith is perfectly willing to acknowledge the task that lays before his seventh-place team.

"Bowling Green will come here ranked in the top three in the country, so it will be a heckuva test for us," mused Smith earlier in the week. "They started out sluggishly, but they have really come on in recent weeks and right now they are playing as well as any team in the nation."

Largely responsible for Bowling Green's streak has been the play of its top line that consists of George McPhee, Brian Hills and Peter Wilson. The trio accounted for 19 points in last week's 10-4 win over Ferris State — including seven assists by Hills and seven goals between McPhee and Wilson.

In his 17 conference games this year, Hills has knocked in 17 goals and added 24 assists to give him a league-leading 41 points. McPhee was named CCHA player of the week for his eight-point weekend against Ferris State and is closing in quickly on most of Bowling Green's all-time scoring records.

Surprisingly, Bowling Green's blueline corps is anchored by two freshman who are contributing on offense as well as defense. Garry Galley and Dan Kane have been pleasant surprises for York, as they rank fourth and fifth respectively in team scoring.

Mike David has compiled a 14-4-1 record in goal for the Falcons and is the eight ranked goaltender in the league with a 3.64 goals against mark.

For the Irish, improved play on both offense and defense has brought a more satisfied look to the face of Smith. In the Great Lakes Tourney, as well as last week's series at Michigan, Smith has been getting the type of puck movement that makes the Irish a tough team to Digger Phelps can certainly understand the problems that Maryland Coach Charles 'Lefty' Driesell has faced this season. "Their situation is very similar to what we've been through," says Phelps. "They've lost a lot of key people and they've had to struggle."

Indeed, the Terrapins have lost key people. Four of Driesell's starters from last year's 21-10 squad graduated, including current NBA players Albert King and Buck Williams. These four starters were also Maryland's four top scorers. Together these four (King, Williams, Ernest Graham, and Greg Manning) averaged 51.7 points a game, which was 68 percent of Maryland's 1980-81 scoring output.

The loss of such key personnel has made things tough for the Terrapins this season. The Terp's record (10-5) is not that bad, but they've been blown off the court by North Carolina State, UCLA (on national television), and North Carolina. They are currently struggling in the Atlantic Coast Conference with a 2-4 record.

Despite Maryland's record, Phelps believes that the Terrapins are playing well at this point. "They're not a 10-5 team," he says. "Lefty has got them playing well together. The younger players are coming around and beginning to form a unit. They did an excellent job in taking Virginia to overtime (the Cavaliers eventually won, 45-40). They are definitely on the way up."

One of the main reasons the Terps are on their way up is 6-8 freshman forward Adrian Branch. Branch is the latest All-American graduate from Maryland's DeMatha High School. Having started each of Maryland's 15 games, Branch is the Terps' leading scorer, averaging 14.6 points per contest.

"Branch is an excellent all-around player," says Irish assistant Coach Gary Brokaw. "He can beat the opposition inside or outside. He's a pressure player, and they go to him in the clutch."

Branch's teammates on the front line are no slouches, either. Both Charles Pittman, a 6-9 senior, and Herman Veal, a 6-6 sophomore, average 11.2 points a game. Brokaw is especially impressed with Pittman, the only returning starter.

"He's had two very good games against Clemson and Canisius (the Terps' last two contests)," Brokaw says. "He's a very aggressive, physical player. Pittman runs well for his size and he's a good shot blocker. He will definitely present a challenge to us."

While Maryland's strength is inside, the Terps' backcourt is formidable as well. Senior Dutch Morley and freshman Jeff Adkins start.

"Morley is their quarterback," says Phelps. "He runs the club. Adkins has a very nice outside shooting touch. He can score when they need him."

Brokaw echoes Phelps' comments on Morley. "Morley is a very heady player," he says. "They need him to run the offense. We must try to deny him the ball and let Adkins handle it."

The Terrapins will probably use a combination of defenses against the Irish. Even though Driesell favors a man-to-man defense, he will occasionally employ a zone and a press. "They might use a box-and-one to try to stop John Paxson's outside shooting," says Brokaw. "But we should be able to counteract that."

Rebounding is a key in many basketball games, and this contest should be no different. "Rebounding will be a question mark," says

Meyers set to join Packers

By KELLY SULLIVAN
Sports Writer

Former Irish assistant Bill Meyers, who coached the defensive line for Gerry Faust last fall, has accepted a job as offensive line coach with the Green Bay Packers.

Meyers, a Wisconsin native, was extremely enthused about the prospect of joining Coach Bart Starr and his staff. "My family and I are excited to become a part of that particular organization. We've heard nothing but good things about the Packers from Tim Huffman." Huffman, a former offensive lineman for Notre Dame under Meyers, was drafted by Green Bay last spring, but was plagued by injuries and played in only two games.

Meyers refuted earlier reports that he had left Notre Dame by force. "My parting with Coach Faust was never really a firing," he said. "I was thinking about leaving and he (Faust) said it would be fine with him. He thought it would be good for me and for his program, and that's basically the way we left it."

Meyers issued a statement to the University saying, "I love the place. That's the way I feel. My entire family has enjoyed our three years here. We're grateful for having experienced the thrilling football games, the loyal fans and the student body."

Former Irish Head Coach Dan Devine, who guided the Packers for four seasons before coming to Notre Dame, refused comment on any role he may have played in Meyers' move. Devine acknowledged, however, that Meyers "could have had that job two years ago, but opted to stay on at Notre Dame."

Meanwhile, Faust has hired a new offensive line coach to fill the void caused by the departure of Tom Backhus.

Carl Selmer, who tutored lineman for the British Columbia Lions in the Canadian Football League last season, will join the Irish staff this spring. Selmer is a 24-year veteran of college coaching.

The 56-year-old native of Minneapolis, Minn., first coached in the prep ranks at Worland High School in Wyoming, compiling a 80-14-2 mark in nine years. From there, he took a job at Wyoming University under Bob Devaney for the next five seasons.

Selmer followed Devaney to Nebraska in 1962, and spent eleven years with the Huskers as their offensive line coach. During that time, he worked with current Irish linebacker coach George Kelly. Nebraska captured two consecutive National Championships in '70 and '71.

Selmer became offensive coordinator for Miami (Fla.) in 1973 before assuming the head job there. His Hurricane teams finished 5-16 after two seasons.
