Provost names two valedictorians

By CAROL CAMP
Staff Reporter

According to Assistant Provost, Sr. John Miriam Jones, the 1982 graduating class will have two women valedictorians.

Recently, Jackie Bollas and Ann Weber were named co-valedictorians of this year's senior class by the provost's office. Instead of choosing between the two as had been done in previous years, Jones has decided that Bollas and Weber will be recognized as co-valedictorians. Due to the fact that there are two aspects to the traditional valedictory address, each of the girls will speak at commencement.

Both valedictorians have compiled a perfect 4.0 average during their four years at Notre Dame. Weber is a chemistry major from Oshkosh, Wisconsin, and Bollas is a psychology major and a Louisville, Ohio native. An interesting note is that Bollas' twin sister Bernadette is the second highest ranking person in the College of Arts and Letters.

In addition to their valedictory duties, Weber and Bollas, as well as the three top ranking individuals in each of the University's four colleges will serve as flag bearers during the baccalaureate mass. Each year, the graduating seniors present the University with a flag which is blessed during the Mass and is then flown each day of the following academic year. This year, six men and six women will participate in the ceremony as flag-bearers.

Commenting upon the fact that this year's graduating class has two women valedictorians, Jones observed: "I think it's very interesting that, in the tenth year of coeducation at Notre Dame, our co-valedictorians are women, and that half of our highest-ranking students are women as well."

Secretary Regan predicts rampant unemployment

WASHINGTON (AP)— Unemployment figures to be released today could show the nation's jobless rate "just slightly higher" than 9 percent, Treasury Secretary Donald Regan said last night.

If so, that would be the highest unemployment rate recorded since World War II and the second-highest since the Bureau of Labor Statistics began compiling the figures more than 40 years ago.

The unemployment rate for February was 8.8 percent, tying the record set in December of last year. The rate dipped in January to 8.5 percent.

Regan, interviewed on public television's "MacNeil-Lehrer Report," said he was "positive they're (the unemployment figures) not going to break 10 (percent)."

An increase in unemployment would not mean that the administration's forecast of an economic recovery this summer was wrong, Regan said, because hiring does not pick until business is firmly on the upswing.

The secretary said the administration had no criticism of Sen. Pete Domenici, R-N.M., chairman of the Senate Budget Committee, for starting to work up a budget independently of what President Reagan submitted.

Congress has by and large rejected the administration's budget and economic forecasts and called on the administration to compromise.

'...the highest unemployment rate recorded since World War II...'

Congressional sources said Thursday night that administration negotiators were discussing with congressional counterparts from both parties a proposed oil import fee and cutback in scheduled Social Security increases to close a projected budget deficit estimated by the administration at about $96.5 billion and by the Congressional Budget Office at $121 billion.

The BLS figures show the average unemployment rate for 1940, the first year the figures were gathered, at 14.6 percent. The rate fell to 9.9 percent in 1941 under the influence of government defense production orders and has never been that high since. Some estimates say that the rate was 25 percent in the worst of the Great Depression in the early 1930s.

City approves shoot to kill policy

TERRE HAUTE, Ind. (AP) - In the year since Terre Haute Police Chief Gerald Loudermilk adopted a "shoot to kill" policy, the city's crime rate has dropped more than 12 percent — without a single shot fired by a police officer.

"We hope we never have to use our guns, but if there's ever a need we want the criminals to know we won't hesitate," Loudermilk said in a recent interview.

all drop in crime of 12.6 percent, with a 49 percent decrease in robberies and an 18 percent drop in burglaries. But five people were murdered in 1981, up from four the previous year.

Speaking from his city hall office, where a miniature electric chair sits on his desk, Loudermilk said the policy had two purposes: to threaten criminals and to give the 125-member force more confidence to use their guns.

"To me it just clarified things," said Sgt. Larry Akers, a 15-year veteran with the department. "Before, you had a doubt whether you had a right to use deadly force or whether you didn't..."

"Since this policy went into effect, no officer has fired a gun. You could pack 10 guns, but if the criminal knows you're not going to use them, that's nothing," Akers said.

"There is no uniqueness about any of it," said Mayor Pete Chalos. "Every police officer across the country has the same policy. I think we just verbalized ours."

In New York, for example, Police Commissioner Robert McGuire said last year that a "shoot first and shoot to kill" order for policemen who believed their lives were in danger has been in effect since 1972.

Patrolman Harold Seifers, who has been with the Terre Haute force for six years, says the policy is especially useful during robberies in progress. "Criminals don't like it, but normal people do," Seifers said.

Loudermilk has a cabinet full of letters from around the country who like the policy.

"I'll bet if we had that here, we wouldn't have one-tenth of the crime we do now," wrote Bob Mielowski of Chicago. "Also if you ever want to run for office in Chicago, you have my vote and I'm sure many others."

Chalos says the shoot-to-kill policy is not solely responsible for the drop in crime.

"I'm not going to give all the credit to our deadly force policy," the mayor said. "We're doing good police investigative work. We want them doing the basics the best to apprehend as many criminals as they can."

Still, many local citizens like the policy.

One Terre Haute resident, Gretta Clendenen, wrote to Loudermilk, "The statement you made to the policemen about using guns if necessary should be made by every police chief in the United States."

She added that her 8-year-old daughter was learning to shoot and "that guns are to be respected, not played with."

"Local response has been generally positive because he draws the line," said Ed Grosskopf, a professor of criminology at Indiana State University who served as a Chicago policeman for 10 years.

"It's an emotional issue. The idea is that you don't train people to shoot, just to wing people. The question is, is there a well-defined policy on the use of deadly force?" Grosskopf said.

Not everyone agrees with the policy, however.

"I sympathize with the situation and remedies are not easy," said Sylvia Brehm, a microbiologist who serves on the board of the West Central Indiana Civil Liberties Union. But she opposes the policy. "I don't think the police should be judge and jury all in one, all on the spur of the moment."

Pauley to present history of 'Today' show

By MARGARET FOSMOE
Saint Mary's News Editor

NBC News "Today" correspondent Jane Pauley will discuss the history of the morning news show, "A 'Today' Retrospective: From J. Fred Muggs to Me," tonight at 8 p.m. in the Center for Continuing Education.

Pauley will speak as the fourth lecturer in Notre Dame's "Distinguished American Women" series, celebrating a decade of co-education at the University.

A native of Indianapolis, Pauley is a graduate of Indiana University. She worked in state politics before breaking into television as a reporter for WISH-TV in Indianapolis. In 1975 she became a co-anchor with WMAQ-TV in Chicago, and a year later joined the NBC "Today" staff in New York.

Pauley currently co-anchors the morning news show with Brian Gumble and Chris Wallace.

Sr. John Miriam Jones, coordinator of the "Distinguished American Women" lecture series said the eight women speakers are "a fitting way to celebrate the 10-year anniversary of co-education at Notre Dame. I hope some of the more widely-known women speaking in the series will help draw national publicity to the success of co-education at the University."

The next speaker in the series will be Barbara Bush, wife of Vice-President George Bush. Mrs. Bush will speak April 6 at 4 p.m. in the Annenberg Auditorium of the Sinite Museum of Art.

FRIDAY FOCUS

In the 1950s, Terre Haute was known as Sin City, a border town where a tangle of truck routes brought a large transient population easy access to vice.

In 1979, comedian Steve Martin dubbed it "the most nowhere place in America," a place where fast food franchises were considered haute cuisine and even the mayor drove a used car.

Last year this city of 80,000 gained another image, cultivated by Loudermilk and reinforced by police: a tough town for criminals.

Loudermilk is quick to point out that the policy merely underlines Indiana law, which provides for police use of deadly force.

"Indiana state law says a police officer can shoot a fleeing felon," he said. "We didn't want them to wonder if the department would back them up if they did it."

Terre Haute received national media attention after the policy went into effect in January 1981. Department crime statistics for the first year of the policy show an over-

PRESIDENT REAGAN UNDERWENT HOSPITAL TESTS yesterday for a previous inflammation of the urinary tract but told reporters afterwards, "Everything is perfectly normal." he said no medication was prescribed for him and that he did not expect to have to return to the hospital. Reagan said he experienced discomfort in his urinary tract for several days after a "fly around the country trip" a few weeks ago. Deputy WhiteHouse press secretary Larry Speakes said when the pain began it was presumed to be an inflammation and was treated with antibiotics. The discomfort dissappeared within a few days, but it was felt the matter should be checked out just in case something was wrong, Speakes said.--AP

JOHN CHANCELLOR, who resisted the tide toward celebrity journalism with a calm, thoughtful style, steps down from the "NBC Nightly News" after tonight's program with none of the fanfare that accompanied a similar change at CBS a year ago. In fact, Chancellor is not leaving "nightly News." He will provide commentary and analysis three or four times a week, and NBC has taken pains to include him in print and broadcast ads promoting the transition to an anchor team of Tom Brokaw and Roger Mudd. "I regard it as the best job in journalism, certainly television journalism," Chancellor said yesterday. "I get to travel, choose the stories I want to do, and control my material, within the normal standards of good journalism." Mudd was at least indirectly involved in the hoopla that surrounded Dan Rather's appointment as successor to Walter Cronkite as "CBS Evening News anchorman last March. Mudd, a veteran Washington correspondent once considered a candidate to replace Cronkite, jumped to NBC in the wake of the switch at CBS.--AP

GASOLINE PRICES HAVE DROPPED under $1 in some places in the Chicago area for the first time since late 1979, a Chicago Motor Club survey showed Thursday. During the last two weeks, 74 percent of stations surveyed in Illinois and northern Indiana lowered some or all of their pump prices, according to the survey. Since the start of 1982, average full-serve pumps have fallen nearly 13 cents. In the northern Illinois suburb of Lincolnwood, station owner Mickey Cohen lowered his regular gasoline to 99.9 cents per gallon. "I just got tired of playing with the prices," said Cohen, whose sales have been cut in half in the last year. "I just decided if you do it, do it right. I think we're going to see 80 to 90 cents per gallon, and I think the price will stay down." Average full-serve prices have dropped 9 cents a gallon, and average full-serve pumps have fallen nearly 13 cents. Average full-serve regular in the Chicago area was 1.32, down 2.6 cents in the last two weeks and 14.9 cents lower than a year ago, according to the motor club survey.--AP

A NON-EXISTANT CLIMBER scaled the walls of a 38-story building under construction today as a radio station broadcast its version of an April Fool's joke. "We disclaimed it adequately," said Jed Duval, program director at WIBC radio. "People only hear what they want to hear." The April Fool's tale began at 6:30 a.m. when an announcer describing traffic conditions said he spotted someone on the American United Life Insurance building in Downtown Indianapolis. The telephone switchboards lit up as announcers unfolded the tale of a daring man using suction cups to work his way skyward. At least two television stations dispatched cameras to the scene. Aides said Mayor William Hudnut was initially taken in by the report, drove around the building, and when he realized no one was there, telephoned WIBC to join in the joke.--AP

A POLISH PLANE WAS HIJACKED from Krakow to Vienna yesterday, touching treetops along the way to evade Communist radar, police said. The hijackers were thought to be soldiers and the plane a military aircraft. Witnesses said the plane, traveling at an altitude of only 200 feet, flew along the Danube and the Danube Canal before touching down at the Vienna airport. "In order to evade radar detection in Czechoslovakia the plane was flying so low it touched tree tops. Parts of branches can still be seen on the damaged wings," a police spokesman said. "It appears that the plane was hijacked by two Polish soldiers, but we have initial language problems and are looking for an interpreter." Ten passengers from two families were said to have been aboard the plane, reportedly a Soviet-made Antonov-2 military aircraft.--AP

A lesson well-learned

It seems rather strange how people can always find something good in the worst of situations. The recent flooding disaster in Fort Wayne, Indiana is a good example of such a phenomenon. Though flood waters did cause a great deal of damage to several sections of the city, the citizens of Fort Wayne taught a big lesson about people to the rest of the country.

Fort Wayne is a typical, medium-sized midwestern city located about eighty-five miles southeast of Notre Dame. Three rivers run throughout the city, meeting just north of the downtown area. In the spring, the rivers can be counted on to produce some flooding, but never to the point of last month's high water levels.

This spring, the rivers which give Fort Wayne a great deal of its character, turned on the city with devastating effects. Rain, combined with heavy amounts of melting snow brought an early spring to Fort Wayne and caused the rivers to flood virtually overnight. The rivers continued to swell for several days, forcing the eventual evacuation of 10,000 people from their homes, and at one point, threatening to divide the city into six isolated sections.

Thousands of people heeded the calls for volunteers, donating many long, exhausting hours piling sandbags along the swollen rivers. At one point so many volunteers showed up to help that some of them had to be turned away because there was not enough work to be done. By the time the volunteers were no longer needed, more than one million sandbags had been filled and placed along the riverbanks.

The volunteers ranged in age from the very old to the very young. One four year old girl spent an afternoon holding sandbags open while her mother filled each of them with fifty pounds of sand. thousands of high school students

Thousands of high school students were released from school for two days so they could donate their time to fighting the high water. by the time the waters had begun to recede, the high school students turned out to be the real heroes in Fort Wayne's struggle to save itself from disaster.

Some people who could not volunteer by working with sandbags, helped by serving as staff workers at emergency disaster shelters set up by the Red Cross or the Salvation Army for victims who had been evacuated from their homes. Other people contributed to the disaster aid plan by donating food, bedding, or clothing to flood victims, by opening up their homes to evacuees, or by caring for exhausted volunteers. some businesses assisted in the effort by matching the donations coming in from the private sector. Other businesses donated materials or machinery to assist workers in the flood-stricken areas, or offered services to flood victims at greatly reduced prices. One car dealer even offered a section of his lot to a competitor who had been forced to leave his building due to high water.

All of the kindness exhibited by the people of Fort Wayne was given voluntarily and without complaint. Nothing was said as worker's bodies began to ache after unloading fifty pound sandbags for stretches that went as long as thirty-seven hours straight. Even motorists, one of Fort Wayne's worst complainers, remained abnormally calm as their cars slowly crept through what remained of Fort Wayne's street system.

This revelation of character during times of trouble served as a good lesson to people across the country. As national news focused its attention on Fort Wayne's struggle to stay dry, millions of people watched total strangers reach their physical limits while helping each other. In a time when it seems that few people can be relied upon to look out for their neighbors, the people of Fort Wayne proved that most people still hold a deep feeling of care not only for their neighbors, but for everyone around them.

During the disaster, thousands of people donated long stretches of time, often at a furious pace, to save the homes of people they didn't even know, or perhaps even feared. The volunteers came from all walks of life, all occupations, or no occupation at all. People who spent a great deal of time and energy helping others may have been the people accused of being cold and uncaring under normal circumstances.

Virtually every person in the city made some kind of donation during the flood, either through time, goods, or money. It made no difference that most of the people who made donations probably did not know the people they were helping out. Donations of money to a local radio station's disaster relief fund came from as far away as Boston and Ontario, a sure sign that Fort Wayne residents are not the only ones who still care about people.

Though Fort Wayne serves as a good example of how much people really do care, it is just an example. The lesson learned from the Fort Wayne flooding has nothing to do with the flood itself. The lesson reaches much farther than the still-wet disaster area, or even the city limits. As people watched Fort Wayne's struggle, they learned not only that the people of Fort Wayne still care about each other, but that all people still care about each other. Though it took a disaster to prove it, it's nice to know that people still care.

Social Concerns to get old WNDU building

By Vic Sciulli
Night News Editor

It was formally announced yesterday that the present WNDU building will become the Center for Social Concerns after it is evacuated by its present occupants.

The decision is the culmination of a proposal which began in 1979 when a group of students, faculty, and staff made presentations concerning the use of WNDU to University President Fr. Hesburgh and the Student Affairs Committee of the Board of Trustees.

The planning process continued through discussions with Fr. Van Wolvlear and Thomas Mason, Vice-President of Student Affairs while studies concerning the use of the building were developed. Fr. David Tyson, Executive Assistant to Fr. Hesburgh, interviewing the persons related to the proposal early in January.

The new center will be under the control of the Center of Pastoral and social Ministry. The current Vounteer Services Office and the Center For Experiential Learning will be merged in the Center.

Fr. Tyson believes the new building "will provide a high degree of visibility of Notre Dame's concern for social justice and will be unique in a higher education Catholic University." The center will also provide a central location which will allow for increased communication between other concern groups, both on and off campus.

Organizers of the center have as a goal "the implementation of the social/learning and social awareness goals of the Center through the integration of competent academic expertise in the classroom with a reflective and compassionate concern for the personal and societal needs of humankind."

This goal could be accomplished through ideas like audio/visual resource center which could allow for presentations in large scale multipurpose room. Conference and committee rooms would add to the working and teaching space.

One special feature of the new center will be a large lecture room which can accomodate 150 people. The room could also provide valuable class room space in its off hours.

Tyson explained that University alumni have taken a great interest in the building and have for a long time considered it a priority for the University. The new center could provide a meeting place for the social concern coordinators of alumni clubs to enhance the continuing education of alumni in the area of social concern.

Tyson strongly suspects that no money will come out of the University's operating budget to pay for renovation expenses. donations from alumni and other sources will most likely fund the project.

Msgr. John Egan, Director of the Center for Pastoral and Social Ministry will decide what will happen to the space left by the former offices of Volunteer Services and the Center for Experiential Learning.

Three die in California avalanche

SQUAW Valley, Calif. (AP) Rescue workers on skis searched snow drifts and debris at a ski resort yesterday for up to seven people reported missing after two avalanches that killed three people.

Four people were rescued after 12 feet of new snow triggered the avalanches Wednesday. One of those rescued, John Riley, 74, said avalanches "had come down many times in the past, but not as bad as this."

After early morning dynamite blasts shook down loose snow that could cause more avalanches, 75 rescuers headed for the Alpine Meadows ski resort aboard snow tractors.

They were forced off the slopes Wednesday night by blizzard conditions and the threat of more avalanches, but skies were clear and sunny yesterday morning. Lifts were running at nearby ski resorts, and Squaw Valley USA, site of the 1960 Winter Olympics, prepared for a weekend ski championship.

The Alpine Meadows resort, about three miles south of Squaw Valley at 7,000 feet in the Sierra, was closed by heavy snow Wednesday. But up to 13 employees, and possibly some vacationers, were there when disaster struck shortly after 4 p.m., officials said.

One hissing wall of snow shot down a forested hillside, leveling a 20-foot-wide swath of trees and burying the parking lot.

The other slide, 15 to 20-feet high on its edge, slammed into a two-story A-frame ski patrol building, pushing it into the main lodge. The A-frame splintered and collapsed, and one wall of the 70,000-square-foot wood and glass lodge was smashed.

"It was just total devastation at the bottom of the hill," said Tom Anderson, a member of Wednesday's rescue team. "Snow cats turned upside down, building blown apart. It was just a mess."

Snow cats are large tractors used to groom slopes.

A minor avalanche blocked

California 89, forcing the first wave of rescuers on skis and dogsleds to make a long detour to reach the resort.

Slides and snowdrifts blocked mountain passes throughout the Lake Tahoe basin, trapping thousands of motorists, engulfing two homes near the Squaw Valley ski resort and prompted evacuations from 100 mountain cabins endangered by potential avalanches. Five people were rescued from buried homes.

Very near future Social Security to cut benefits

WASHINGTON (AP) — Social Security will be unable to pay retirees' and survivors' benefits on time starting in July 1983 unless Congress takes corrective action "in the very near future," the system's trustees said Thursday.

But the trustees, all members of President Reagan's Cabinet, made no recommendations for bolstering the system's sagging Old Age and Survivors Insurance Trust Fund. They said they are waiting for Reagan's National Commission on Social Security Reform to complete a report due by the end of this year.

The trustees forecast that beneficiaries will get a 7.6 percent benefit increase this July based on the consumer price index. Reagan has opposed congressional calls to reduce the size of that increase.

Despite benefit cuts enacted in 1981, "the short-range financial status is significantly worse than was estimated last year," the trustees said in their annual report to Congress.

"A series of economic downturns more severe than anticipated have led to the current financial crisis," trustees — treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan, Labor Secretary Raymond J. Donovan and Health and Human Services Secretary Richard S. Schweiker.

Congress passed a stopgap measure last year to tide the old age fund over through 1982 by allowing it to borrow from the healthier disability reserve. Reagan set up the commission after withdrawing his own controversial proposals for cutting early retirement and other benefits.

For the seventh straight year, the combined old age and disability trust funds paid out more than they took in calendar 1981, the trustees said. Those two funds dropped by $1.9 billion to $24.5 billion — enough to pay benefits for only two months — at the end of last year, they said.

But the hospital, or Medicare, trust fund rose by $5 billion. Consequently, the three combined funds finished the year in the black, taking in $178.2 billion in payroll taxes while paying out $175.1 billion in benefits and medical bills for 36 million people.

Social Security operates on a pay-as-you-go basis with the trust funds serving as a buffer or contingency reserve during periods when outgo exceeds income. If the old age fund were depleted, there would be delays in the system's ability to send out checks on the third of each month, the trustees said.

The old age fund fell from nearly $37 billion in 1975 to $21.5 billion currently. Congress previously shifted revenues from the disability to the old age fund in 1980-81 to keep it from running dry then.

The disability fund stood at $3 billion at the end of 1981 and the hospital fund had a balance of $18.7 billion.

The old age fund is expected to lose $4.7 billion this year and $19.3 billion in 1983 under some of the trustees' intermediate assumptions.

ND grad discusses abortion

ByMARY SIEGER
News Staff

"The Supreme Court hoped that problems with pollution, poverty and population would be solved through abortion," said Notre Dame graduate Charles Donovan last night during his lecture "Governmental Policy on the Right To Life Issue in the Auditorium.

Donovan discussed the formulation and aftermath of the 1973 Supreme Court ruling that legalized abortions. The ruling made three important statements: that the unborn child is not a person, that the privacy of the mother was of primary importance and that the protection of life should not begin until birth or some time after.

The court's ruling has caused unanticipated problems. One major problem that the court has faced is an increase in abortions that has exceeded their expectations. In 1980, there were approximately 1.55 million abortions performed. "This figure exceeded government projections by 10-15/," stated Donovan.

Another unforeseen problem was the creation of "abortion on demand." Apparently, the court "thought that the medical profession would forestall abortions on demand," said Donovan. The medical profession has not done this, however, since the court legalized abortions.

At one point in the lecture, Donovan said that he believed that United States government might be moving toward a more "perfect" race, one without mentally or physically disabled individuals.

Apprehension rises in Mid-East oil states

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) - Recent Iranian military victories over Iraq are increasing apprehension in conservative Arab states about Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's promise to export his revolution.

The Khomeini regime on Thursday celebrated its third anniversary of proclaiming the former monarchy an Islamic republic and told neighbors in the Persian Gulf not to fear it.

But the oil-rich states, six of which have banded together in a Gulf Cooperation Council, answered Iran's warnings that the United States is the real enemy by saying they have adopted a detailed strategy to deal with any Iranian attempt to foment unrest inside their kingdoms.

Arab diplomats here, who did not wish to be identified, predicted serious developments in the Middle East region because of Iran's gains in its 18-month old war with Iraq.

Saudi Arabia's Riyadh radio quoted the kingdom's interior minister, Prince Naief, as saying the Gulf Cooperation Council has adopted "detailed contingency plans" against Iranian coup plots.

Bahrain, one of the six Persian Gulf states, has charged that Iran instigated a plot by 73 nationals of several neighboring states to overthrow the ruling royalty and establish an Islamic republic modeled after Iran. The alleged plotters are on trial.

Iranian Prime Minister Hossein Musavi said in an anniversary speech that Iran has "repeatedly told the smaller nations of the Persian Gulf there is no reason for you to fear us." He asserted Iran's neighbors should fear the United States. He said anybody who disagreed must be "non-Islamic" and American.

His remarks were seen as primarily directed against Saudi Arabia, the world's largest oil exporter which maintains close military cooperation with the United States. Since Khomeini took over in Iran, the Saudis have tightened security for the annual Moslem pilgrimages to guard against Iranians bringing in revolutionary propaganda.

Iran said it recaptured 700 square miles of previously Iraqi-occupied Khuzistan province, the center of Iranian crude oil production and refinery, since its offensive started two weeks ago.

Iraq's President Saddam Hussein conceded earlier in the week that his forces withdrew, but he said it was a tactical withdrawal.

A weakening of Iraq could set in motion new tensions apart from the threat of Iran's fervor to spread its revolution.

Pro-Soviet Syria, which has accused both Iraq and Jordan of encouraging the fanatical Moslem Brotherhood in its campaign of bombings and assassinations in Syria, might step up pressure on Jordan if Iraq has to deal with strong Iranian advances.

Syria and Jordan have periodically massed troops at their common frontier. They have also differed over support of Iran or Iraq.

Syria maintains Iraq was wrong to launch the territorial war because it diverts Arab resources from the real enemy, which it maintains is Israel. Jordan, on the other hand, has supported the Iraqis over the Iranians, the majority of whom are Persian rather than Arabs. —AP

More gives advice to future career women

By Kim Maloof
News Staff

Elizabeth Charlton Moore, an author, analyst and authority on solar energy offered four proposals that she believed are important for a woman to be successful in the career world last night in Stapleton Lounge in Le Mans Hall.

She called her four proposals "big decisions", "big skills", "big you", and "philosophical notations".

According to Moore, a woman faces "big decisions" when she must decide whether she wants to work and, if so, what career she wants to pursue.

Once she has established a career goal, a woman should "swim against the current," Moore said, by exploring areas in her vocation where women are not predominant. She noted that the technical and scientific professions offer a promising future for women.

Except for her career, the most important consideration a woman must make is whether to marry, according to Moore. A career-oriented woman must find a husband who is understanding and supportive of her professional interests. Moore stressed the importance of developing "big skills," including the ability to speak in public, write precise sentences, run a meeting and work with computers.

In her third topic, "big you", Moore offered personal considerations which are essential for productivity and energy. These include physical fitness, dressing with an air of authority, knowing to cry in private, maintaining a sense of humor and building a network of support through other women in the company.

Moore also emphasized the ability to accept criticism constructively.

She concluded her lecture with some personal philosophies. "Nothing you ever learn is ever wasted," she said, emphasizing the need to remain flexible with ever-present changes.

Reagan popularity down in recent poll

NEW YORK (AP) President Reagan's standing with the public, both for the job he is doing in the White House and for his personal appeal, has dropped to the lowest point of his presidency in the latest Associated Press-NBC news poll.

The nationwide telephone poll, of 1,603 adults in a scientific random sampling on Monday and Tuesday, found that 43 percent think Reagan is doing a good or excellent job as president — down from 47 percent in January and down 20 percentage points from last August.

Reagan's popularity in the poll has declined in the recession, with Americans showing less enthusiasm for his economic programs as high unemployment, federal budget deficits and interest rates persist.

Thirty-four percent said he is doing good or excellent on the economy, compared with 37 percent in January and 52 percent in August. A narrow plurality, 45 percent to 42 percent, agrees with Reagan's statements that the economic problems would be worse today if his economic plan had not been adopted. In January, 54 percent said they agreed with that position.

Twenty-five percent said their families are worse off financially today than a year ago, while 20 percent said their families are better off, 54 percent said their families are about as well off and 1 percent were not sure. Such divided sentiment is consistent with AP-NBC news poll results over the past four months.

Twenty-three percent in the latest poll, however, said they think their families will be better off financially during the next year, compared with 21 percent who said they would be worse off. The rest said either they were not sure or that their families would be about as well off during the next year.

As with all sample surveys, the results of AP-NBC news polls can vary from the opinions of all Americans because of chance variations in the sample.

For a poll based on about 1,600 interviews, the results are subject to an error margin of 3 percentage points either way because of chance variations. That is, if one could have talked this past week to all Americans with telephones, there is only 1 chance in 20 that the findings would vary by more than 3 percentage points.

Of course, the results could differ from other polls for a number of reasons. Differences in the exact wording of questions, differences in when the interviews were conducted and different methods of interviewing could also cause variations.

Civilians must leave

Nationalists block handover of Sinai to Egypt

YAMIT, Occupied Sinai (AP) - A boatload of Israeli nationalists landed on the beach and punched through a cordon of soldiers yesterday to join thousands of civilians who were hoping to block the handover of Sinai to Egypt by defying orders to leave.

The nationalists landed in rubber dinghies and about 25 broke through the line of unarmed soldiers, said Moshe Hager, the group's leader. Three others were arrested with six anti-withdrawal activists among the hundreds who thronged the shore to greet the invaders.

The scuffle on the palm-lined beach near the northern Sinai town of Yamit dramatized the last-ditch battle to halt the evacuation by nationalists who put no faith in the peace treaty with Egypt, in which Israel agreed to leave the Sinai by April 25.

The huge Israeli withdrawal operation has entailed the resettlement of some 5,000 civilians and the uprooting of more than a dozen Israeli settlements built in eastern Sinai over 12 years.

The government ordered all civilians to leave Sinai by yesterday and the military declared the occupied area an offlimits military zone at midnight Wednesday. But it made no effort to dislodge some 2,000 activists who had evaded roadblocks and squatted in abandoned homes over the last few months.

About 20 families of legitimate Yamit homeowners and businessmen have permission to stay until April 15 to clean up their affairs.

The newest arrivals were part of a 60-man expedition that sailed from Tel Aviv in five yachts and rendezvoused with a fishing vessel to complete the 94-mile voyage. About 30 people remained on the fishing vessel, guarded by two Israeli patrol boats.

The seaborne operation was one of several imaginative attempts by the anti-withdrawal movement to penetrate army barricades and patrols. It was designed to evoke the memory of Jewish immigrants who broke through British sea blockades in the 1940s before Israeli independence.

Many of the resisters are Orthodox Jews who have shaved off their beards and have hidden their skullcaps to fool the troops into believing they are Yamit residents.

The illegal squatters have used a number of other guises to slip past army roadblocks. One group dressed up as Bedouin nomads. Another 30 arrived in Yamit hidden in a furniture truck ostensibly on its way to pick up the household goods of departing settlers.

Architecture lecture cancelled

The University of Notre Dame "Visitors in Architecture" lecture originally scheduled for April 7 has been cancelled due to the death of the speaker, Dr. Fazlur R. Khan, partner and chief structural engineer of Skidmore, Owings and Merrill of Chicago. Dr. Khan suffered a heart attack while on business in Saudi Arabia.

Two British soldiers killed in IRA attack

LONDONDERRY, Northern Ireland (AP) — IRA guerrillas waiting in ambush in an apartment they seized shot and killed two British soldiers in civilian clothes riding in an unmarked van outside a Roman Catholic cathedral yesterday.

They were the fourth and fifth soldiers murdered from ambush in a week.

The Irish Republican Army claimed responsibility for the attack, calling the soldiers "plainclothes undercover agents." The IRA said it also was responsible for setting off a 600-pound bomb under a railroad bridge near Newry that closed the main Belfast-Dublin rail line yesterday morning.

The attacks came as British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's Cabinet approved a plan to set up a 78-member elected assembly in Northern Ireland this fall as a first step toward restoring partial self-rule.

On March 25, three British soldiers were shot and killed in a crowded West Belfast street by an IRA gang that took over a house, held a family hostage and waited for their prey.

The IRA also murdered police Sgt. Norman Duddy last Sunday as he left a Presbyterian church in Londonderry.

The wave of violence is apparent retaliation for last week's claim by Chief Constable Sir John Hermon that "the terrorists are reeling" from defections and nearly 200 arrests.

Yesterday's killings brought to 350 the number of British troops slain in 13 years of sectarian strife. The overall death toll is 2,185 including 283 other members of Ulster's security forces.

The Irish Republican Army is fighting to unite the Protestant-majority North with the Catholic Irish Republic.

To restore a measure of self-rule to the 1.5 million people of Ulster, Mrs. Thatcher's cabinet approved a plan put forward by Northern Ireland Secretary James Prior for election of a 78-member assembly this fall.

Don't ignore the rights of the born

Most of you probably know that this week has been "Respect Life Week" at Notre Dame. What this consists of is a collection of films and guest speakers that are all basically saying the same thing — abortion is morally wrong, and there ought to be some law or a constitutional amendment against it — to an audience who basically believes the same thing.

Timothy Neely

My Turn

I am not going to argue for or against abortion. Most people here have made up their minds one way or the other, and no amount of lobbying and propagandizing from either the pro-lifers or the pro-choicers is going to change their minds. What I would like to offer is the following question: if this was supposed to be "Respect Life Week," what happened to the respect for those who are already here?

I know that this week's events were sponsored by the ND/SMC Right to Life group; that is why they were all about the abortion situation. However, by treating only the problems of the unborn, "Respect Life Week" becomes a misnomer. In actuality, this has been "Let's Ban Abortion Week." This seems to reflect a disturbing trend throughout the country.

One prominent Washingtonian describes Ronald Reagan's stance on abortion in comparison to his other policies by saying that he "believes that life begins at conception and ends at birth." From Reagan's record so far, I tend to believe that. There is much attention paid the "rights of the unborn" these days in Congress and throughout the nation; meanwhile, the rights of the born and already living to live are slowly being eroded. I wish to point out a few examples of this madness.

There are more people at or below the poverty level in this country than ever before. There are more people dying of starvation and malnutrition than ever before. What has been done to stem this tide? Nothing. In fact, current Washington policies have helped to make these problems what they are today. Cutbacks in such programs as food stamps, school lunches, and other help to the needy, while prices of basic necessities continue to go up (admittedly not as fast as they once did, but they are climbing nonetheless), certainly does not help keep those already living alive.

Around the world, starvation and malnutrition continues at high levels. (And it is not entirely the fault of poorly-administered infant formula.) Over the years, the U.S. has supplied much aid to the needy of other lands, however, there have been cutbacks in this kind of foreign aid, which can keep people alive; at the same time, increases in military-related aid to many of these same countries have occurred, which do not help the hungry and poverty-stricken — in fact, as in the case of many authoritarian-totalitarian nations, military aid actually denies people life quite directly.

More people are killed by handguns, guns with no other purpose except killing, in the U.S. than all other countries combined several times over. The odds of being killed by one are increasing all the time. There has been no sign of relief from this menace from Washington; instead, Ramblin' Ronnie continues as a card-carrying member of the National Rifle Association despite his near-murder at the mercy of a handgun. Fortunately, some enlightened towns like Morton Grove, Ill., are attempting to do something about the handgun problem by enacting very strict handgun-control legislation.

Earlier this year, Reagan announced his intention to continue a potential life-threatening situation for many male young adults in this country — draft registration. In the event of another war (and with young men already registered, that makes the possibility a little more thinkable), those who lack either connections or convictions will be sent off to war involuntarily, and many of them will never come back.

Along with draft registration comes the continued buildup of our nation's defense. Much of this increase is coming in the form of nuclear weapons. This, justifiably, has Western Europe in an uproar, and also has many people in this country up in arms. This is probably the greatest threat currently in existence to life as we know it. We have seen films of Hiroshima and Nagasaki and are aware of the incredible destruction these things can cause.

We also are becoming more aware of the insidious effects of radiation. And with nuclear proliferation continuing, it can only be a matter of time that either some crackpot gets his hands on one and uses it, or someone in the button room pushes the wrong button by mistake. Then the rights of the unborn will not matter anymore, because there will not be any "born" people left to bear them.

I find it rather ridiculous that many of the same people who are in favor of a constitutional amendment banning abortion are against aid to the needy here and abroad, handgun control, an end to draft registration, an end of nuclear proliferation and a freeze (or a decrease) in defense spending. If we are going to "respect life," as we purport to do this week in that lecture series, we ought to respect the life of the born as well.

Shuttle Shock: Where do we go from here?

The Space Age grew out of what is perhaps man's most fundamental desire. No, it isn't the desire to fly. It's the desire to drop as many high explosives as possible on an enemy from as far away as possible. German scientists did this fairly well in World War II but never quite good enough, so at the end of the war, half of them took jobs in Russia and the other half moved to the United States.

The Allies had decided that they now wanted to drop as many high explosives as possible on each other, from as far away as possible. We used to be allied with Russia and China. We were enemies with Germany and Japan. Now we're friends with Japan and enemies with Russia, China and only half of Germany.

Flash Gordon meets Manifest Destiny. We peaked when we went to the moon. Things have been generally quiet and scientific since then.

Until now. The idea of a reusable rocket is intriguing. It means true conquest of space. It's kind of like having a family car we can take out of the hangar and go for a few spins around the earth. Sort of.

It's a new idea with some glamor that has come at a time when we are starved for a little good news. Seems innocent enough. Columbia and Challenger and whatever follows will repair and launch satellites on future commercial missions.

The Air Force has also booked substantial space on future shuttle trips. No one is too upset except the Russians. They are upset about the shuttle's military potential but even more upset because they don't have one. Military men get funny when someone else has a new weapon. In true international maturity, if they can't have one, no one should.

The Russians want arms talks to include shuttles and their role. They are afraid that we could use the shuttles to grab communications satellites in an emergency such as a war and that isn't cricket yet. Now you and I know we would never do anything like that. They are probably just a little confused over some misunderstanding from the past.

But all of that is irrelevant. We must exercise caution in future use of the shuttles, especially by the military. The Administration has no concept of the difference between what we do and what we are perceived to be doing.

If the Russians feel a shuttle gap and begin to develop their own space weapons, we would then have to keep up and then we could have escalation similar to that of the Bomb Races at the end of World War II.

Right now there are only faint rumblings of trouble. That means now is the sensible time to set up controls of its use while everyone is still relatively lucid about the whole thing.

We do not want to make the space shuttle a new toy under Pentagon and Kremlin Christmas tree. You know how kids are, they can't wait to play with a new toy.

It would be nice to keep the shuttle purely scientific but it's been awhile since taking leaps for mankind was popular. The potential for snowballing combined with the brainless gits running the show on both sides of the Iron Curtain make this a dangerous time in the history of the shuttle.

Let's keep it clean, and maybe some generals will be disappointed at Christmas.

Dining halls ham it up

Dear Editor:

Not only did the S.A.G.A. food service leave the Notre Dame dining halls at the end of last year, their good food planning and meal originality left with it. What is this obsession the dining halls has had this year with ham? Mountain climbers (chopped ham sandwiched), grilled ham sandwiches, dinner ham slices, breakfast ham, ham snuck into submarine sandwiches, ham and cheese between biscuits, ham salad sandwiches — a ham by any other name would not taste as sweet! Ham for main courses, ham for brunch (green eggs and ham). How do I ham thee? Let me count the ways (from Ham-let?). They are really trying to ham-mer this into us. These meals aren't really fit for ham-sters, but I hope this letter doesn't ham-per our future relations with the dining halls. Believe me, I am not exaggerating when I speak about all of this — I would be the last person to ham it up.

Stepan use

Dear Editor:

We feel that it is time for the use of Stepan Center to be restricted to Notre Dame students only. There is currently only one person who sits at the door and lets anything and everything into the gym. From now on we insist that this person should check for N.D. student I.D.'s and let only N.D. students inside. Stepan Center is not a public playground.

These German scientists were very adaptable and very good. Soon we all had missiles. Then we discovered that the only thing better than missiles is having the Big One perched right up there on top of them.

So now it doesn't matter who our friends are; we can change friends as much as we want, point the missiles at any new enemies, and forget everyone else. This keeps everyone alert. Europe is now more alert than they've ever been because they aren't sure who their friends are.

Debates over rockets and where to put them causes confusion for Europeans and most of us. It was much simpler when we sent up humans. Handsome young presidents sent handsome young fighter pilots into space on glorious missions of conquest.

American technology was vindicated and we finally had a new fron-

Dancing is concerted effort to concert: v. to plan together; settle or adjust by conference or agreement.

The final presentation of the Notre Dame/Saint Mary's Dance Theatre, Our Spring Concert, is a collaborative effort of musicians, composers and choreographic artists who have produced three original dance works to be presented this weekend at O'Laughlin Auditorium.

Assistant Professor Debra Stahl, director of the Dance Theatre and choreographer, has joined efforts with Assistant Professor Thomas Leff in creating these pieces. Leff, who has worked extensively in Dance Theatre, wrote all the scenarios from which Stahl has designed the movement.

The cooperative effort begins with the choreographic and design dimensions and extends to the musical cal element of the concert. The Brady/Stalker String Duo will actively participate in the progression of the dances. Unlike most dance concerts, the dancing will revolve around the placement of the musicians on the stage. Aesthetically, the intermingling of the musicians and the dancers on stage establishes a clearer relationship between the dance and the music.

The Descent Beckons as the Ascent Beckoned is a piece inspired by the poem by William Carlos Williams entitled "The Ascent." Roger Briggs was enlisted to compose the original score which will be performed by the String Duo and pianist, Jeffrey Jacobs. The dance focuses on the sense of loss, out of which the process of renewal begins. The dramatic process which the dance incorporates is the movement from bondage to release and freedom.

History dictates the flavor of Prague Dumka. Set in 1890, this newly conceived work traces the events of one early autumn day in a garden park. Somewhat romantic, yet folkish, the dance reflects these in scenery and costuming. Clayton Henderson will join the Duo in playing the score, "Dumky", by Dvorak.

The final piece, Trois Dansues, differs from the other two pieces in that it is an abstract lyrical piece choreographed using the classical ballet vocabulary.

The collaborative effort in assembling these works and translating the visual and oral elements into movement does not end with the musicians, choreographer and the scenarist. The dancers involved have contributed their time, ideas and energy into making this concert a universal effort.

With only the senior comprehensive finals to come, attention should be called to Colleen Quinn who has established herself as a choreographer of boundless talent, having presented a major piece in the winter concert and contributed her talents to Student Players. She will be taking the stage at O'Laughlin as one whose talent has just begun to flourish.

Our Spring Concert is a creative experience which invites the attention of the Notre Dame/Saint Mary's campuses this weekend. This presentation embodies the essence of what Funk and Wagnalls meant when they defined the verb, "to concert."

From keyboard to satellite

Notre Dame is not generally thought of as being nationally renowned for education in music, but the students and faculty in the Music Department are working diligently to change that. One project that is expanding Notre Dame's reputation in this area is Professor William Cerny's "Explorations into Piano

To record a program, Cerny studies and plays a piece through, making notes and practicing various sections. When he has the composition "under his belt," he records it. Then he records the commentary: he introduces the program, identifies the piece and discusses the composer and his work, the composer's historical period, and then the piece itself, its form, and its variation.

Ellen Richiski

Literature." Cerny, an accomplished professional concert pianist who taught music for thirteen years at the University of Rochester's famed Eastman School of Music in New York, came to Notre Dame in 1972 to chair the Music Department for nine years. This year, Cerny has been on leave from the University to work on his project. "Explorations into Piano Literature" is a series of weekly half-hour radio programs in which Cerny plays and comments on classical piano compositions from the 18th century through the modern period.

Cerny began his "Explorations into Piano Literature" as a series of lecture-recitals in 1968, while he taught music at Eastman. Cerny decided to record some of the music he was playing for college and university audiences. One of Cerny's graduate students worked at a radio station which broadcast classical music, so the student put Cerny's recordings on the air. Then Cerny came to Notre Dame to chair the Music Department. He broadcast his series over WNSD for a short time, but didn't have enough recordings to continue the series. So this year Cerny has been working on leave from the University to expand his series.

Cerny records his music in a home studio in South Bend. His instrument is a 7-foot Steinway grand piano in superb condition. The programs include pieces from the standard piano repertoire and pieces not normally heard in concert programming. Cerny decides to include a composition in the series either because he has studied, played and taught the piece as part of his musical career, or because he decides that the piece is an important part of the composer's repertoire.

Cerny has completed enough tapes by now to keep his weekly series on the air for two years. WAUS in Berrien Springs, Michigan has broadcast Cerny's "Explorations" since July, 1980, and WVIK in Rock Island, Illinois has carried the program since November, 1980. Starting in July, Cerny's program will be broadcast by satellite over National Public Radio (NPR) stations, through the Public Radio Cooperative. NPR is a public service network which includes about 260 stations throughout the country. The federal government partially funds NPR stations to broadcast programs that interest and entertain, and have artistic or community value for the nation. NPR "uplinks" recordings to a satellite, then "downlinks," or beams the programs down from the satellite to every NPR receiver. Through NPR, Cerny's "Explorations" will reach a national audience.

In his "Explorations," Cerny offers fine, enjoyable musical performances and interesting, informative commentaries on classical piano literature. His programs reveal insight to composers and their art. Cerny's "Explorations" appeals especially to piano students and teachers, because Cerny demonstrates and explains a composition's "style ingredients," such as variety, mood, tone, rhythm, and pedal technique. That is, Cerny explains what pianists will learn from playing the composition.

Cerny has achieved two goals in his "Explorations": recording the classical piano compositions that he studies and plays, and finding a national audience for that music.

At Notre Dame and in the South Bend area, "Explorations into Piano Literature" can be heard at 90.7 fm on WAUS on Sunday nights, 7 p.m. (After April 7, WAUS will broadcast the program on Wednesday mornings, 11:30 a.m.). Listen, learn, enjoy.

Duo work with dance theatre

Steven Stalker, cello, and Janet Brady, violin, together form the Brady/Stalker String Duo, now in residence with the Notre Dame/Saint Mary's Dance Theater and the Saint Mary's Music Department. The Duo will perform for the Dance Theater's Spring Concert on April 2, 3 and 4, along with Saint Mary's faculty members Clayton Henderson and Jeffrey Jacobs.

Mary Francell

The Brady/Stalker Duo has been performing since 1978. Located in Earlville, New York, the Duo concertizes extensively in the Mid-Atlantic region. The Duo has also worked extensively in dance theater as members of "The Assembly: Music and Dance Theater" and as accompanists for the "Quinlan-Krichels Dance Ensemble" and "Dianne McPherson and Dancers" in concerts in New York City as well as upstate New York.

"Working with dancers is extremely rewarding," says Brady, "it gives you a different perspective on the art form. When dance is fused with live music, it creates a whole different kind of aesthetic."

Some musicians have difficulty working with dancers because of the need to coordinate the way in which dancers move with the way the musicians play the piece. Stalker maintains "often, the dancers have worked with another recording of the music for many months, so that when we begin practicing with them, time must be spent adjusting tempos, rhythms, etc. The best solution is to have them work with your own recording of the music, as they did with the (Roger) Brigg's piece ("Ascent")."

The scenarios for two of the dance works were written by Prof. Thomas Leff, Technical Director and Resident Scene Designer. The Brady/Stalker Duo had worked with Leff previously at Colgate University where Leff conceived and designed over a dozen danceworks, which are still actively performed. Leff likes to place the musicians right on stage with the dancers, often incorporating them into the action. "It's exciting to be in the midst of the dancing," says Brady, "One feels more involved in the work, much more so than in the traditional ballets, where the orchestra is hidden away in the pit."

Janet Brady, violin, is the concert master for the Utica Symphony and has appeared as a guest soloist with symphonic orchestras in Syracuse, Scranton, Oneota, Binghamton and Bowling Green where she received her Masters Degree. Before forming the Duo, Brady was a member of the Audobon Quartet, winners of the Evian International Competition in 1976 and the Villa-Lobos Competition, Rio de Janeiro, in 1977. She has taught on the music faculty at Marywood College and teaches in the string program at SUNY-Binghamton.

Stephen Stalker, cello, is the principle cellist for the Utica Symphony and an adjunct professor of music at Colgate University and SUNY-Binghamton. Stalker has played with the American Symphony of the Air and was member of the Madison Quartet before forming the Brady/Stalker String Duo. Prof. Stalker is a graduate of the Manhattan School of Music.

This marks the first time the Notre Dame/Saint Mary's Dance Theater has worked with live musicians. Choreographer Debra Stahl calls it "... a valuable and interesting experience, particularly for the dancers, most of whom have never done this before."

Is there life after Jeannie?

Jeannie, that old redhead of mine, is a much-married lady now; her first wedding anniversary was observed in March. For all I know, she comes to breakfast every morning with curlers in her hair and enough cold cream on her face to look like an uncooked meringue pie. She makes being a good wife seem like a happy way to live. Nickie, of course, is her one true love, her husband in the sight of God and man. Their home is too gracious and spacious to be described as a honeymooners' hideaway. They have a furnished guest room; every weekend, they seem to take in boarders — mostly old Domers, whom one or the other used to date. Jeannie's stuffed mushrooms in themselves are worth the trip from Chicago.

Rev. Robert Griffin

Letters to a Lonely God

So much for old loves. The question for me is: is there life after Jeannie? The poet Yeats has a line: "My heart lies there with Fergus in the grave." Jeannie, that impetuous flirt, is not Fergus, and my heart has not died and gone to a better place. Yeats could act like Fergus' widow, if he wanted; but I'm not some Heathcliff-figure that hangs broodingly around the newlyweds' apartment, like some old lover's ghost that you have lately met. Jeannie was my morale officer. On the day she got married, she demoted herself; in the words of the song from Gyps and Dolls, it was time for her to blow on some other guy's dice. Now I am a morale officer to her marriage. The question for me is: is there life after Jeannie?

Jeannie taught me that redheads are special, because they try harder. They have a special kind of tenderness, growing out of an experience of pain, because as children they were often greatly teased, and made to feel that they were ugly ducklings. It never helps a little girl, Jeannie says, when some mean boy calls her "Carrot-top," leaving her feeling unwanted, like a vegetable left on a plate that you couldn't eat because the taste would make you sick. It never seemed a compliment when strangers said: "Hey, red." You couldn't answer: "Hey, black," without sounding dumb. In children, dumbness is the unpardonable sin they can never forgive themselves.

As a redhead — redheads have told me — you can't wear certain colors, and you have to be careful about letting the sun take liberties with your face, if you don't want to move through the summer looking like a firebrand. Thoughtless people assume that if your hair is the color of flame, you must be Irish, and have a quick temper; or behind your back, they whisper that you look like a foxy one, and they consider you sly. If you try hard to be sweet, they search for signs of bitchiness under the charm.

Redheads get scars earlier in life than most of the rest of us. Their dolls are the Raggedy Anns that have mop hair and silly expressions like a circus clown. A mopet can see for herself what doll-makers think she looks like: dumpy, freckled-face, ugly; dressed in hand-me-downs, like a maid of all work. Why should maiden aunts feel that a child should be happy to be gifted with such an uninspiring toy? Why should a boy think he's funny, when he congratulates a girl on her orange hair?

Redheads, when you compare them, have a beauty that can break your heart. On the canvasses of Titian, Christ is painted as an auburn-headed lad, and His mother stands with angels crowned with fire. The moderations of red seem so suitable for the faces of divinity that other colors look like an ethnic prejudice. Tints that can be as dismal as the mark of Cain on the outlaw (Fagin and Uriah Heep were both redheads) can be richly glorious on a woman's head, making her a paradigm of beauty, against which other beauty is measured, as when Katherine Hepburn played Mary of Scotland.

Once you've let a redhead become important in your life, you feel that you've joined some great tradition, like scholars who have begun collecting first editions, or bon vivants who prefer Flemish wines. In a restaurant, you check the room for redheads. You stop strangers on the street if they've been crowned with glory, to compliment them on their beauty. If they're walking dogs and the dogs happen to be cocker spaniels, you also praise the beauty of their pets. You have a right to comment, because you belong to the tradition. It would be inexcusable, if you lacked the credentials of appreciation. Fortunately, I had a good teacher, and her name was Jeannie.

She told me what it was like to be a Jeannie. After looking at life for a little while through Jeannie's eyes, I saw beauty and goodness and pain in ways I never understood them before. One little redhead made quite a difference in an older person's life.

Is there life, for me, without Jeannie? Certainly there is, as long as there are young people around like her to help me see things I'd been color-blind to before. Maybe no one will ever stand so close to me again as Jeannie did, but I wish somebody would try.

I guess that's the wistful, yearning hope of all of us: that somebody will try to be a Jeannie in our lives.

All that collegiate jazz

The "joint will be jumpin'" this weekend as the Collegiate Jazz Festival descends on Stepan Center bringing some of the finest jazz in the country to Notre Dame.

Preview

Dr. Billy Taylor, critically acclaimed jazz pianist and scholar who has been "in residence" at Notre Dame this week, calls the festival "the finest college jazz festival in the country." Taylor has spent the week lecturing and performing to packed houses, and working closely with the Notre Dame Big Band. The ND Big Band will open the festival at 7:30 tonight.

Also performing at the festival will be sixteen of the finest college bands from across the country. These musicians will be competing for several awards which will honor the most outstanding performances of individual soloists and large ensembles.

The competition will be judged by Dr. Taylor and five other renowned jazz artists: Charley Haden, Frank Foster, Shelly Manne, Nat Adderly, and critic Dan Morgenstern. These musicians will perform Friday night in the traditional Judges Jam, which is always the highlight of the festival.

"These musicians will perform Friday night in the traditional Judge's Jam, which is always the highlight of the festival."

The judges represent a wide variety of jazz styles — from Shelly Manne who is a leader in the West Coast "cool" that originated in the early fifties, to Charlie Haden, who along with Ornette Coleman, is a leader in modern progressive jazz.

Fr. George Wiskirchen emphasized that while the Judges Jam is the highlight of the festival, it is not the only reason to attend. "The college musicians here are 'big names' of the future. The list of former CJF competitors who are now leaders in the field of jazz is too long to mention."

There are three music sessions in the festival — Friday, 7:30 to 1:00; Saturday 1:30 to 4:00 pm and 7:30 to 1:00. Ticket prices are $5.00 for Friday night, $2.50 for Saturday afternoon and $4.00 for Saturday night. An all session pass may be purchased for $8.50 or $7.50 for ND/SMC students and faculty.

What's happening...

This week I am proud to introduce to the Showcase pages a regular Friday feature, What's Happening... Weekend. I will make an attempt to list and describe (to the greatest extent of my abilities) what activities and events will be going on during the coming weekend. I apologize if I overlook anyone. Understand this is my first week. To insure that such an oversight is avoided in the future, let me know by phone, mail or carrier squirrel by 6 P.M. Wednesday what you are doing. Thanks.

•DANCE

Our Spring Concert finishes the Notre Dame/Saint Mary's Dance Theatre schedule with performances Friday and Saturday at 8 P.M. and Sunday at 2:30 P.M. in O'Laughlin Auditorium. Three pieces will be presented, the finale having been created by two of the department's professors, Thomas Leff and Debra Stahl. This concert, ranging from classical and modern ballet to modern dance, is highly recommended.

•MUSIC

Paul Kosidowski gives you an inside view on the Collegiate Jazz Festival which will get underway Friday at 7 P.M. and continue Saturday from 12:30 to 5 P.M. and finish with a final session at 6:30 P.M. Fifteen college bands will be competing before six top jazz people. If jazz is your beat, Stepan Center is where the sound is at.

•THEATRE

Washington Hall is the place to be for farce of the highest degree. St. Ed's will be performing Larry Gelbart's Sly Fox Friday and Saturday at 8 P.M. If you are among the many addicts of 5 and 7 P.M. reruns of M.A.S.H., see one of the most hysterical comical plays by this show's writer.

•ART

Five Saint Mary's art majors finish off their Senior Comprehensives at Hammes, Moreau and Little Theatre Galleries. Mary Beth O'Meara (painting), Twila Kitchin (painting and photography), Catherine Gunning (color photography), Jamie Dee Bock (ceramic sculpture) and Margaret Ellen Hackl (hand colored xerox) will be closing their shows this evening.

In the Isis Gallery in the Old Fieldhouse from April 2-8 Peter Lochtefeld (ceramics), Mike Russell (painting/drawing) and Bill Arzbaeher (painting/drawing) will display their works in the studio home of the Notre Dame art department. Take a detour through the Fieldhouse this weekend on your way to the "brar" and absorb the artistic atmosphere by osmosis. Maybe it will help you write that paper of yours.

•MOVIES

Both campuses will be sponsoring movies this weekend. Superman II, the continuing of saga of Lois Lane and Clark Kent takes the screen in the Engineering Auditorium at 7, 9:15 and 11:30. At Carroll Hall (SMC), The Story of Adele H will roll at 7 and 9 P.M.

•MISC

For an entirely foreign experience, attend the International Buffet Saturday night from 7 P.M. in LaFortune Ballroom and taste foods from the Far-East, Mid-East, Europe and Latin America. On Sunday at 7:30 P.M. in Washington Hall, the Festival will end with an evening of entertainment from around the world. Like mom keeps telling you, go get cultured!

As a part of the continuing Distinguished American Women Lecture Series, NBC News' "Today" anchor, Jane Pauley, will speak tonight at 8 P.M. in the Center for Continuing Education on the subject, "A Today Retrospective from J. Fred Muggs to Me." Pauley has been invited to help celebrate 10 years of coeducation at Notre Dame. How about male and female, two by two, attending the lecture?

•LOOKOUT

Even if you don't like liverwurst, you'll like a taste of Greg D'Alessandro and Anne Slowey's original production of Would You Care for Some Liverwurst? Once a semester you should swallow your apprehensions and try something new. Mark off April 6 and 7, hold your breath and enjoy.

Coming to the Band Organ Restaurant on April 19 at 7:30 P.M. Tom Wibbels will be paying tribute to the golden age of the mighty theatre organ with a sing-a-long and finishing off the evening in grand style by accompanying a Buster Keaton silent film. Tickets are $3.75 and can be purchased only by calling Trudy at Osceola, 679-4061 or by making checks payable to Impro International and mailing to P.O. Box 1072 Elkhart, Indiana 46515. Take it from one who has participated (unasked for, of course) in such an event, this may be the most pure fun you have for the rest of the semester.

That's it for this weekend. Hopefully, I'll be seeing you at some of these events. Remember, we have our spies.

THE 75TH ANNIVERSARY Rockne Memorial Mass and Breakfast will be held this Sunday at the South Dining Hall. The Mass will be at 8:15, with the Breakfast following. Gerry Faust will be the guest speaker. The special guests will be Phil Carter, Dave Duerson, and Mark Zavagnin, Tri-Captains of the 1982 Notre Dame football team. For additional information, contact Tom Kirschner at 234-3790. —The Observer

Don't play after a legend

PALM SPRINGS -- One of my favorite all-timestories concernsthe time Spencer Tracy was the king of the MGM movie lot and he was introduced to the young James Whitmore who was being billed as "the new Spencer Tracy." The old Spencer Tracy sized him up and then allowed, "They tell me you're the 'new' Spencer Tracy, well, let me give you a piece of advice. When they come to you with the idea of doing 'Dr. Jeckyll and Mr. Hyde,' don't."

Doug De Cincos could have used that same advice. Doug was the young infielder in the Baltimore Orioles organization who was being groomed as "the new Brooks Robinson." The old Brooks Robinson should have come to him and said, "They tell me you are the 'new' Brooks Robinson. Well, let me give you some advice: When they come to you to play in Baltimore, don't."

The public never forgives an icon-blaster. The public never forgives the guy who whips Dempsey, shoots Billy the Kid, takes Babe Ruth's place in the lineup, cones after Knute Rockne at Notre Dame. Even the guy who shot down the Red Baron got snubbed in history. Name him, can you? Recall the guy who took Ruth's place in right field for the Yankees? The heavyweight champions were John L. Sullivan, Jack Johnson, Jack Dempsey Joe Louis, and Ali, weren't they? Name all the others, can you?

Brooks Robinson was almost the only big league ballplayer Baltimore had for the first 10 years of its existence. And he was larger than life. He hit 20 or more home runs a year, he drove in runs with almost every hit he got, but, most of all, he almost made the ground rule and the double-down-the-line obsolete. Old-timers swear he leaped in the air to stab line drives six feet over his head that would have been home runs had they got by him. He smiled a lot, signed autographs, and he had the outlook on life of a Little Leaguer to the day he retired. He never heard a boo in his life, he was never injured, and only about a half-dozen major-leaguers played more than he did. A lot of people suddenly felt 20 years older the day Brooks Robinson retired.

Doug De Cincos walked into this haunted house like Snow White into the witch's castle. Squeamish observers couldn't bear to look.

Doug was a nice enough kid. He was good to his mother, he got to church on time, stood at attention for the Flag, and he signed autographs.

You would have thought he sold defense secrets the way Baltimore treated him. De Cincos' scalp still prickles at the recollection. "You could FEEL the hostility," he recalled the other day, still shuddering. Guys he didn't even know were glaring at him. "You ever walk into a room and everybody stops talking?" he asked. Well, here a whole city stopped talking.

At first, it was the little things. A bullet off a bat, a 130-mile-an-hour line drive went screaming by him, visible only to the camera eye. "Brooks woulda had it!" screams the fan in the upper deck. "Brooks woulda got two!" corrects the fan behind the dugout.

It got to where when the delegation approached Doug De Cincos, he would check to see which one had the rope. Pie Trayner couldn't have succeeded in that situation.

"It was a no-win situation," De Cincos recalled as he sat in the dugout at the Angel's camp here the other day. "If they just introduced my name in a lineup, they'd boo."

It wasn't as if De Cincos were a butcher. He had as much range as Brooks Robinson, and as much power. He just didn't have the smile. Nor did he have that eerie sixth sense Robinson seemed to have for where the ball was coming

Hockey banquet

Higgins, Doman named captains

By Michael Olenik
Sports Writer

The 1981-82 Notre Dame hockey team was honored fittingly last evening at the annual Blue Line Club Banquet held in the Monogram Room of the ACC. To say the least, the ceremony was colorful.

With Mike Collins at the microphone as the Master of Ceremonies, an assortment of distinguished and not-so-distinguished awards were presented to team members before a crowd that included parents, Blue Line Club members and the general public.

Irish co-captain and Hobey Baker finalist Dave Poulin left with the most prestigious hardware, as he gathered in the Most Valuable Player trophy and the Ed McGauley Memorial Award presented by Blue Line Club President Doug Daugherty. Poulin's gracious acceptance typified the manner in which the senior has carried himself throughout his four years here, and the crowd responded to his efforts by giving him a thunderous round of applause.

Others who came away with awards were: Sean Regan for rookie of the Year, Mark Doman for best defensive forward, John Schmidt for Best Defenseman, Joe Bowie for Most Improved, Brent Chapman for both the John Whitmer Award and the Garfield Award, and Jeff Perry for the Student-Athlete Award.

Chapman's awards were for the worst disposition and the heaviest athlete respectively, and although they were given tongue-in-cheek, Coach Lefty Smith surely got his message across to the freshman from Toronto.

A highlight of the evening was the announcement that Doman and John Higgins will serve as co-captains for the 1982-83 season while Kirt Bjork and Rex Bellomy have been chosen as alternates.

Smith was presented with a couple of awards that left the crowd in laughter, especially after Poulin, Schmidt, Bill Rothstein, Dave Laurion, and Jeff Logan read aloud a plaque that featured a collection of "Leftyisms" that were remembered through their four years.

In all, it was a night of good food, good fun, and a touch of emotion that wrapped up the most successful hockey season in the school's history in fine fashion, and it was the proper tribute to the best senior class that has ever donned a Notre Dame hockey jersey.

Golf team tops Olivet and Valpo

By Bob Castello
Sports Writer

Sparked by the performances of junior Stoney Ferlmann and sophomore Frank Leyes, the Notre Dame golf team downed Olivet yesterday afternoon at the Burke Memorial Golf Course. The Irish team total was 371 to Olivet's 408.

Ferlmann fired a one-under-par 70 to pace Notre Dame to its second straight dual match victory of the season. Leyes posted a score of 72.

The weather yesterday was much more pleasant than that of the previous day when the Irish defeated Valparaiso despite winds gusting up to 20 miles per hour. Notre Dame topped the Crusaders by 15 strokes - 391 to 406.

Senior Bob Horak led the Irish as he shot a 74. Ferlmann totaled 76 and sophomore Dave Pangrazz 77.

"For Bob Horak to shoot a 74 under these conditions is phenomenal," said coach Noel O'Sullivan, "and Stoney's 35 on the back nine is also super."

Tomorrow at noon, Notre Dame will take on the team from Tri-State University at the Burke Course. The trojans will provide formidable competition as they have lost only one letterman from their 1980-81 squad which finished with a 5-1 record and four first-place conference titles.

"The top seven golfers are experienced," said coach Bill San Giacomo of his seven returning lettermen. "They all score in the low to high 70's. We're balanced, talented and proven winners."

Cooz - Bob Keenahan and Paul Mazanec are the only remainders from the WEBB's teams that won the Interhall championship for Howard Hall for three straight years. Keenahan was Mr. Bookstore two years ago, when WEBB's went to the Final Four. This year Keenahan is again playing with his Howard teammates. You can be sure that these guys will play team basketball, with everyone handling the ball.

T.B. Express II - Freshman football players Joe Howard, Joe Johnson and Jay

Underwood highlight this team. Roommates Howard and Johnson have received a reputation among campus hoopsters as being tough combination to beat. The 5-10 Howard will amaze everyone with his leaping ability.

tie - James Brady and the Washington Bullets and John Belushi Takes the Pepsi Challenge - As is the tradition, the final ranking goes to the team with the best printable name. Believe me, there are some names that are hilarious, but I doubt that you'll read them in The Observer.

from next. Of course, neither did anyone else in the game. Sparky Anderson, from whom he stole the 1970 World Series, turning about a dozen doubles into double-plays, once swore an angel whispered in Brooks Robinson's ear before every pitch: "Get ready--move two feet to the left, and jump." There were people who couldn't recognize Brooks Robinson unless he were horizontal.

It all came to a head one day when 53,000 people crowded into Memorial Stadium in Baltimore. Oh, not for the pennant race, although this was close. It was "Brooks Robinson" They gave their favorite son a car, a boat, and waves of love. But the manager gave the glove to his successor. "They will kill me!" Doug De Cinces protested. "Listen!" Manager Earl Weaver told him. "We're in a pennant race, not a historical pageant!"

The record shows De Cinces hit a home run that day to help beat Boston and push them out of the pennant race. "I felt like 10,000 pounds of pressure were taken off me," he recalls

Packer, Bender almost spoil tourney

Settle down and enjoy yourselves, folks, it'll be at least eight months before you have to listen to Gery Bender and Billy Packer again.

When the NCAA basketball tournament came, mercifully, to a close Monday night, the first of several CBS Superhype seasons did the same. Bender and Packer managed to make the games a chore, reaching new lows with Monday night's broadcast.

There were bright spots in the network's coverage of college basketball this season, but they were mainly technical. CBS managed to provide the viewers with excellent special camera work. Time and again, players were isolated on important plays, and replays offered a unique view of the action.

Overall, the games "looked" good. The major problem was that they "sounded" awful.

Bender embarrassed play-by-play men everywhere. In an age where intelligence is often a trademark — Dick Enberg has a Ph.D. from Indiana — Bender sounded like a last-minute replacement. His lack of knowledge about the game was exceeded only by his penchant for overusing clichés.

How many times did we hear this exchange?

BENDER: Floyd and Worthy — the two men from Gastonia...

PACKER: These guys did not go to the same high school...

BENDER: But they did go to the same church...

PACKER: They grew up about two miles from each other...

BENDER: That's right. They're both from Gastonia...

The whole thing sounded like an ad for the Gastonia Chamber of Commerce.

Bender told us how Pat Ewing was "a tower of strength," that John Thompson was "a giant of a man," that the Hoyas displayed "street savvy," and that Smith was "always a bridesmaid, but never a bride." In the past, to be honest, he's been worse. And Monday night his horrible performance was overshadowed by the only real surprise of the night. Billy Packer was vehemently cheerleading — against an ACC team!

The whole country became accustomed to Packer's Tobacco Row bias when he worked with NBC, and expected more of that Monday. What a shock.

"Pat Ewing runs better than any big man in the country."

"Pat Ewing has a better follow-through on his shot than any big man in the country."

"Pat Ewing blocks shots better than any big man in the country."

"Pat Ewing comes out on defense better than any big man in the country."

"Pat Ewing ties his shoes faster than any big man in the country."

Spare us.

Skip Desjardin

Packer felt a need to analyze everything that happened in the game. I half expected to hear:

BENDER: We'll be back after this commercial.

PACKER: Yes, Gary, and here's why we're going to a commercial right now. See, in order for the network to profit from an adventure such as this, they have to sell commercial time. Sponsors agree to pay...

Apparently, it's going to take Billy awhile to get unwound, 100. Wednesday night he coached an all-star game in Cedar Rapids, Iowa. Near the end of the game, he came over to the table during a time-out and ranted and raved about an official's call. But he wasn't complaining to the officials, he grabbed a microphone away from Dick Enberg and was telling the viewers.

That's a true story, and one that prompted Bobby Knight, who was doing the color commentary, to say: "We ought to get Billy involved in professional wrestling — he sure yells good enough to make it big."

Typical of Packer's work was Saturday's criticism of Digger Phelps. He has as much right as anyone to object to Phelps's charges, but he should have checked his facts.

"It's an unfortunate situation," he said of Phelps's revelations. "Digger's timing was bad. It's unfortunate that he came in here, made all these allegations, and didn't even stay for the coaches' convention. This is the place to work out problems such as those, and Digger should have hung around to help the coaches come to a solution."

The truth is, Phelps was in New Orleans for the portion of the convention that dealt with recruiting, as well as with matters such as the shot-clock proposal. He left before the awards dinner — and then only to recruit Harold Pressley in Connecticut.

"Digger was telling the truth," said Howard Cosell in yesterday's Observer, "a process Billy Packer is somewhat unfamiliar with."

That may be a bit harsh, but Packer has no excuse in this case. He owes Phelps an apology.

Maybe a little humility wouldn't hurt all the way around. The jump to CBS, and the resulting big-buck contract, seem to have convinced Packer that no one knows as much about basketball as Packer himself — and that everyone is dying to share that knowledge.

It just isn't so. If anything, Packer distracted his listeners Monday night, and, along with Bender, was one of the very few flaws in a classic game.

Track team opens outdoor season

By EARL RIX
Sports Writer

This weekend's Texas Relays mark the opening of the outdoor track season, Van Percy's first varsity competition at Notre Dame, and the chance for the Irish to break another school record.

Steve Dziabis, Van Percy, Tim Cannon and Jim Moyar comprise the Irish Distance Medley team that will compete against 19 of the best distance medley teams in the country on Friday and Saturday. Among the teams competing will be the indoor national champions University of Texas-El Paso, SMU, Baylor, Drake, Minnesota, and Iowa State.

"Jim Moyar will be anchoring the mile against 9-time NCAA champion Sulaiman Nyambui," says Irish head coach Joe Piane. "It's a great meet and it has to be a plus for our recruiting. We definitely can go for the school record in the distance medley."

The Balance of the team will travel to USA Track and Field Association Regional Championships at Indiana State. Senior tri-captain Paul Doyle is out with a strained Achilles tendon and will be sorely missed. He injured the tendon in setting school records in the decathlon and pole-vault at the Domino Pizza relays two weeks ago.

"There will be as many as 20 schools there," says Piane, "most notably Indiana State, Illinois State and ourselves. We want to get some good early-season performances."

Some people to watch for will be Bill Ribera in the intermediate hurdles, John McCoughlan in the high hurdles, and Ed Juba in the steeplechase. Jim Tyler and Tim Macauley will run both the 1500 meters and half-mile. Ed Juba will run the steeplechase. Jacques Eady and Mitch Van Eyken will run the 400 meters. Greg Bell will compete in both the long jump and 100 meters.

Notre Dame's discus and javelin throwers will have their first chance to show what they can do. Frank Rieley, Mike Barrett, and Dan Falgstad will toss the discus. Gerge Petras and Pat Doyle will throw the javelin.

Irish pitching sweeps away Valpo Crusaders

by AL GNOZA
Sports Writer

Larry Gallo's Irish baseball squad went west yesterday for a doubleheader at Valparaiso and came away with a sweep of the "pesky" Crusaders.

We've had a week layoff and have had to rely on batting practice to keep our hitters sharp.'

Not only did the Irish take a pair to raise their spring record to 6-6, but they did it with 3-0 and 2-0 whitewashes. "Our pitching dominated," said Gallo. "Bryan Smith pitched an especially fine game."

Smith went the distance in the nightcap, giving up only 2 hits, striking out 8, and walking just one.

"Our big key right now is pitching," Gallo observed, citing the fact that the Irish have given up only one run in the last 28 innings. "Anytime you put together 28 innings like that you're doing pretty darn good," he said.

Notre Dame won the opener, 3-0, as Bill Matre and Bill Jaun combined on a four hitter. Matre gave up two of those hits in getting the win and improving his slate to 1-2. Jaun picked up the save, his first of the year.

Chuck Tasch spearheaded an eight hit Irish attack in that first game, as he went 3-for-4 with one RBI and one run scored. Tim Prister also collected a hit and 2 RBI's. Freshman John Deasey picked up a base hit in his first game of the year since trading in his hockey stick for a baseball bat.

In the second game, Tasch knocked in the only runs of the game, one on a sacrifice fly and one on a ground out.

The Irish offense was aided by 5 stolen bases on the day out of 7 attempts. Dan Szajko swiped three of those himself and banded out two hits as well.

"We're not hitting like we were in Oklahoma," Gallo noted, referring to the recent Irish road trip over spring break. "We've had a week layoff and have had to rely on batting practice to keep our hitters sharp. That's a lot different than facing the real thing."

Gallo, however, expects no prolonged offensive famine. "Our hitters will come around."

This weekend the Irish will take to the road once again. They must face the Hoosiers from Indiana in a Saturday doubleheader before taking on the Bulldogs from Butler in a single game on Sunday.

Taking the mound on Saturday for Notre Dame will be junior right handers Steve Whitmyer and Bill Stonikas. The next Irish home game will be April 10 against Purdue University.

a mandatory meeting will be held Tuesday, April 6th, for anyone interested in participating on next year's Class Advisory Councils on the Second floor in LaFortune.

Blache plans on arriving at four starters, and then going from there. "We want to have our four best players starting," he says. "The defensive line positions are similar enough that we can decide on positions later. Eventually we will do a lot of cross-training."

"I want to know that if one of the starters have to leave the game, that our fifth-best player can fill the spot whether it's one of the tackles or one of the ends."

Robertson echoes this idea. "The guys are not engaged in vertical competition," he says. "They're trying to prove that they are the best players."

Other than determining which players should play where, the coaches will work on some particular techniques. "The pass rush technique needs to be worked on," Blache says. "Also, there are many small points that we will concentrate on."

Notre Dame's first game is over five months away. But for Blache and Robertson, those five months will go very quickly. "We're a long way from being ready," Blache says. Thank goodness the first game is a long way off, also.

Blache, Robertson face tough job

By DAVE DZIEDZIC
Associate Sports Editor

Greg Blache, by his own admission, has his work cut out for him.

Blache, who coached the offensive backs in his first season at Notre Dame last year, has moved to the other side of the line of scrimmage for next season. His new job is to turn a much-maligned Irish defensive line into a respectable unit with a formidable pass rush.

"We definitely have a lot of work to do," Blache says. "It's difficult to be optimistic at this point. We're very far from where we need to be."

Luckily, Blache does not face this Herculean task alone. He is assisted by Jay Robertson, who spent the past two seasons as a receiver coach at the University of Wisconsin. Previously, he was the defensive coordinator at Northern Illinois.

Basically, Robertson will handle the interior linemen while Blache works with the defensive ends and outside linebackers.

Although the defensive line has been blamed for many of Notre Dame's overall defensive problems, Blache says that there will be no change in the general system.

"The system is not the problem," he says. "Our main task in the spring is to find out who our best players are and where they should be playing. Once we determine who our best players are, we can fashion our plans to what they do best."

Robertson expands on this idea. "A great deal of evaluation is involved," he says. "We must determine the skills and abilities of each player. This may result in switching some people around."

Some switching has already been done. In an attempt to utilize his quickness, junior-to-be Tim Marshall will be tried at nose tackle. Senior-to-be Bob Clasby, who played nose tackle last season, will move into Marshall's vacated contain tackle spot.

Spring Football '82

"Tim possesses great quickness and has a knack for making things happen," Blache says. "That quickness is of more use to us at the nose tackle. If it doesn't work out, we can always switch back."

Robertson explains the role of the nose tackle: "The nose tackle uses a different technique depending on the particular situation," he says. "He can either be an anchor, attempting to keep the linebacker free by clogging the middle of the offensive line, or he can be active by deviating from the middle."

Junior-to-be Jerry Weinle and sophomore-to-be Tony Leonard are listed as the back-ups at the nose tackle.

Sophomore-to-be Mike Gann, who saw considerable action toward the end of the 1981 campaign, is penciled in as the first string flip tackle. "I've been very impressed with Gann," Blache says. "He's a long way from being a very good tackle, but he tries to do exactly what we ask of him. That's 90 percent of the battle."

Behind Gann are junior-to-be Steve Keane and sophomore-to-be Otto Hilbert.

Clasby's backups at contain tackle are sophomore-to-be Jay Underwood and junior-to-be Chris Boerner, a converted tight end.

Kevin Griffith, who saw the most action of last year's defensive linemen, is being held out of contact in the spring drills. Griffith is currently a senior, but has a year of eligibility remaining. "If he were able to hit," Blache says of Griffith, "he would be at one of the tackle spots. But we'll have to wait until the end of spring workouts in order to evaluate where we need him."

Several players are in the running for the starting defensive end job. Junior-to-be John Autry started at the position last season. But classmate Mansel Carter and sophomore-to-be Mike Golic will put in their bids for the spot.

Carter received a lot of attention when he arrived in 1980, but has yet to make a big contribution to the defensive line. "The court is still out on Mansel," Blache says. "He has a lot of natural ability, and he is working very hard. He only played one year of high school football (basketball was his first sport), so he's still learning a lot of the techniques."

Golic saw considerable playing time in the interior line last season, but is being tried at the end spot this spring. "Golic started slowly, but had a good practice on Wednesday," Blache says. "He still does some crazy high school things, but nothing that a little discipline can't correct. His reactions are still those of a tackle. We'll see how well he responds to the change."

One change Blache intends to implement concerns the platoon system used on the defensive line last season. "Platooning is not a part of my philosophy," he says. "I want my four best players out there all the time."

"Of course, there are pros and cons for both (platooning and not platooning). I happen to believe that platooning is not the way to solve problems."

World's largest

Bookstore Basketball expands again

If he had only known.

Ten years ago, Fritz Hoefer, one of the organizers of An Tostal, decided that the spring festival needed a new event. He decided to start a campus basketball tournament to "feature the style of ball which is characteristic of games here."

Little did he know that the Bookstore Basketball Tournament, which began with 53 teams, would become the world's largest basketball tournament.

That's right, the world's largest. In its ten years of existence, Bookstore has grown by exactly 400 teams, and is now larger than Hoosier Hysteria.

with 453 teams participating, it is tough to choose a Top Ten at this early stage. Any number of teams could emerge from the pack to surprise even the most knowledgeable campus hoopsters. I've done my best to listen to the Grapevine in order to determine the favorites. Here's what I've come up with:

T.P.S. Again - Probably the most recognized Bookstore team on campus, T.P.S. Again returns all five players from last year's squad which lost to Re-Classified... in the finals, 22-20. Many people believed that the team would have emerged as the champions if Re-Classified had not picked up Kelly Tirpucka during the tournament. Sophomore football players Stacy Toran, Greg Bell and Mansel Carter join Duane Dickens and Tim Collins, last year's Mr. Bookstore (given to the best non-jock in the tournament). This squad is most unpopular with the maintenance crew, who must replace the bent rims and broken backboards that these guys cause.

Full House - A year ago, these guys called themselves T.B. Express. They lost in the quarterfinals to the eventual champions. This may be the fastest team in the tournament, featuring Greg Williamson, Dave Duerson and Tony Hunter. They have plenty of height, also. John Shaefer, the 6-7 center for the Interhall Champion Holy Cross Hogs, and 6-6 lacrosse player Bill Bonde will intimidate many people in the middle.

Eddie O'Rourke and the Travelling Stragglers - Notre Dame varsity player Mark Kelly, playing in his first Bookstore Tournament, has put together quite a team. The main attractin is assistant coach Jim Baron, who may well be the best player in the tourney. Baron was the captain of the St. Bonaventure team that won the 1977 N.I.T. As it that isn't enough, Kelly coerced Tim Koegel into playing. Kelly coached the champions last year, and may very well play on the top team this year.

Take This Ball and Shove It II - This team went to the Elite Eight last year, but lost to Head Over Heels. This season they are without first team all-Bookstore player Mike Frawley, who is playing with Tim Healy (of Head Over Heels). But Mike Mitchell should prove to be an adequate substitute for Frawley. Sophomore football player Mike Kelley (6-5, 250) adds strength inside.

Red Rummers - im Healy, former walk-on for Digger Phelps, returns for yet another tournament. Some people wonder if Healy, a second-year law student, has hung around just to play Bookstore. Last year, Healy's team lost to Re-Classified in the semi-finals. All-Bookstore selection Bill Copeland is gone, as well as 'Tab' Baldwin, but Healy picked up Frawley to help out.

Macri's MonkeyMen - Another varsity basketball player, Gary Grassey, leads this team. These guys are playing in their fourth tournament together. They reached the Sweet Sixteen each of their first two years. But Tim O'Connor, who Grassey says "may be the best non-varsity player on campus," played both of those years. O'Connor was forced to sit out last year and will have to watch from the sidelines again, as he is recovering from a broken back suffered while skiing.

Assassins - Probably no team in the tournament will be able to intimidate opponents as easily as this squad. Senior football players Dean Masztak and Bob Crable are joined by classmate Mike Boushka, who starred for Masters of Disaster in the Final four last year. But the real story on this team is senior Curt Bailey, an all-Bookstore selection last year. They've also added Scott Glaeser, a senior from Grace's interhall team.

Lacrosse team downs Michigan State by five

By MIKE SULLIVAN
Sports Writer

The Irish lacrosse team battled the wind and Michigan State on Wednesday and came away with a 9-4 victory over the Spartans at East Lansing in the team's Midwest Lacrosse Association opener.

The Irish, who normally fall behind early, scored the first two goals of the game this time and the Spartans never caught up as the teams struggled in the strong winds that blew down the field, making it very difficult for the offenses to get untracked.

Although the Spartans, who finished last in their division last year, never were really in the game, Irish coach Rich O'Leary complimented their efforts.

"They were very aggressive and very competitive," Hunter said. "They also were very good athletes. They played good defense, but they didn't have much offense."

Sophomore attackman Jerry Levesque led the charge for the Irish, who are now 1-0 in MLA league play, by scoring three goals. Steve Pearsall contributed four assists while Bill Bonde, Mike Lynch, Steve Linehan, Joe Hart, Dan Pace, and Mike Quinn each chipped in a goal. Freshman goalie Rob Simpson made 11 saves.

Levesque put the Irish on top quickly when he scored on a fastbreak. He made it 2-0 when Pearsall hit him cutting in front of the goal. Fittingly, he capped off the scoring with a breakaway goal with less than a minute to play in the game.

O'Leary singled out the play of freshman defenseman Justin Shay and senior defenseman and co-captain Dave Lewis. He also was pleased with the play of Levesque on attack.

Midwest lacrosse power Ohio Wesleyan is next on the schedule (Saturday) for the Irish. O'Leary is not sure his young team is ready to beat Ohio Wesleyan on the road this early in the year.

"It is too early," says O'Leary. "We have not yet matured. There will be two or three guys who stand out at times, but the rest of the team won't. We also need some more consistent scoring from the first line of midfielders."

STICK CHECKS - The Irish midfielder corps has been thinned out somewhat by injuries. Senior Mike Farino was injured last Sunday against the Chicago Lacrosse Club and sophomore Kevin Smith was injured last Saturday against Michigan. Their status for Saturday's game is not yet known... The game against Ashland College scheduled for April 19 has been changed to next Wednesday, April 7, at 3:30 p.m. on Cartier Field.
