Student Senate plans to provide laundry service option for women

By SUSAN SAKER
News Staff

One of the last bastions of a male-dominated campus will soon disappear when St. Michael's Laundry opens its doors to Notre Dame women.

In response to recent complaints regarding the University's male-only laundry service, the Student Senate is working on a plan that would give all women on campus regular access to St. Michael's laundry. The new system would extend laundry service to women on a purely optional basis.

Currently, a small number of women bring their laundry to St. Michael's and pay the exact amount either by cash or by charging the bill to their account. Rob Bertino, student senator in charge of the plan, said that if enough interest is shown in the next two weeks, a more permanent system will be extended to all women.

"This will all be done on a trial basis and although the service is optional, we need to see a substantial interest by women for the service," said Bertino. If over the next few weeks enough women use St. Michael's laundry service, then laundry bags will be issued to those women who want the service and laundry pick-up schedules will be set up for women's dorm as in men's dorms.

Women customers will be billed according to the amount of laundry serviced and will be able to pay by cash, check, or charge the bill to their accounts. No initial fee will be charged, as is done with the men's laundry service.

To inform women of this plan,

Bertino is sending letters to all women on campus explaining the option of laundry service from St. Michael's. This letter stresses that the service is strictly optional, but that enough interest must be shown in the next few weeks for the program to be implemented. Bertino also plans to publicize the option of women's laundry service by posting signs in the women's dorms.

Response to the proposed plan is difficult to predict. Dorothy Ann David, president of Badin Hall believes that women may appreciate the service, but that the plan must be approached properly if a women's laundry service is to begin.

Bertino hopes that successful implementation of his proposal will alleviate the complaints of "sexism" that have risen in recent years among the women of the University.

Cease-fire agreement announced by Syrians in Lebanese civil war

Associated Press

BEIRUT, Lebanon — A cease-fire agreement aimed at halting the Lebanese civil war took effect Monday morning, and authorities reported that gunfire halted in observance of the truce.

The agreement had been announced Sunday night by Saudi and Syrian officials, hours after a renewed attack near U.S. Marine positions at Beirut Airport. Four Marines were wounded during the day.

The cease-fire accord, which took effect at 6 a.m. today (11 p.m. yesterday), was announced in Damascus, where Syrian Foreign Minister Abdul-Halim Khaddam told a news conference, "An agreement has been reached for a cease-fire in Lebanon, ending the war and starting a national dialogue. What was achieved is great."

"We appeal to all our Lebanese brothers to go beyond the bloodshed and the hatred in order to start the building of Lebanon," he said.

Druse leader Walid Jumblatt, who attended talks with Khaddam and others, said he had ordered his militiamen to stop firing at 6 a.m. Monday.

Khaddam said, "We appeal to all our Lebanese brothers to go beyond the bloodshed and the hatred in order to restart the building of Lebanon."

Lebanon's latest civil war began Sept. 4 with the withdrawal of Israeli troops from the mountains overlooking Beirut to a new defense line further to the south. Syrian-backed Druse, reportedly aided by Palestinian guerrillas, battled fiercely with Christian militiamen and Lebanese army troops in the mountains and on the capital's outskirts.

Khaddam and Saudi Prince Bandar Bin Sultan refused to provide details of the agreement at the Damascus news conference, saying they would be disclosed later by Lebanese President Amin Gemayel in Beirut.

Bandar said, "This is the beginning of the road for Arab solidarity and for freeing Lebanon from Israeli occupation." He called the pact "a historic achievement that guarantees the establishment of a balanced rule in Lebanon."

Christian neighborhoods in east Beirut came under heavy shelling yesterday from the Druse and Syrian-controlled mountains overlooking the capital, the state radio said.

Marine spokesman Maj. Robert Jordan said mortar rounds and rocket-propelled grenades hit the perimeter of the Marine base in west Beirut about 45 minutes after the truce was supposed to have taken hold at 7:30 p.m. — 12:30 p.m. South Bend time.

Another Marine spokesman, Warrant Officer Charles Rowe, said one Marine was slightly wounded in the nighttime barrage as he and the other men again went on their high state alert, diving into bunkers and foxholes.

As the shells fell, the battleship New Jersey patrolled offshore in a show of U.S. naval might.

State radio said U.S. presidential envoy Robert C. McFarlane told Lebanese President Amin Gemayel earlier that all parties had agreed to a truce, and President Reagan's national security adviser, William Clark, told reporters in New York that an agreement would be announced in Damascus.

Reports of an accord to end hostilities between the Lebanese army and Syrian-backed militias have persisted in Beirut for days. But Syria reportedly had blocked a cease-fire by making new demands on the Lebanese government.

One of the Marines wounded around noon Sunday was shot in the arm by a sniper east of Beirut airport, Jordan said. The terminal adjoins the southern slums where the Shiite Amal militia has been fighting the Lebanese army for three days.

Irish terrorists escape from prison

Associated Press

BELFAST, Northern Ireland — Thirty-eight IRA guerrillas armed with smuggled weapons shot their way out of top-security Maze prison yesterday in the biggest jailbreak in British history. They killed one guard and wounded six others, authorities said.

Army helicopters and scores of policemen with tracker dogs swarmed around the countryside, recapturing 11 prisoners within hours. But 27 were still at large late yesterday, police said, and were believed headed for the Irish border or the safety of West Belfast's nationalist enclaves.

Prisoners stopped motorists and hijacked cars "all over the place" to make their getaway, an officer said.

He said the escape created "total bedlam" at the 900-inmate jail outside Belfast, site of the 1981 Irish Republican Army hunger strike and home to some of Northern Ireland's most-hardened convicted bombers and killers.

All roads leading from the prison were blocked, and police sealed off the M1 motorway, a major four-lane turnpike near the Maze, creating huge traffic jams in both directions.

A spokesman for the Northern Ireland Office said the escapees — all convicted Provisional Irish Republican Army guerrillas from a segregated cellblock — produced handguns, overpowered guards and seized a food truck for a getaway.

The prisoners, some wearing guard's uniforms and others wearing just underpants, jumped in the back of the truck. The prisoners had handguns and other weapons apparently smuggled into the jail, and a later search turned up 20 rounds of ammunition.

As the truck sped off through the acres of prison grounds, a guard noticed a bogus guard at the wheel and swung his car in front of the main gate, said the government spokesman.

Inmates clashed with prison officers at the blocked gate, but managed to flee on foot. Many stopped motorists out for a Sunday drive on the quiet country lanes around the prison, hijacked the cars and kept going.

Some of the escapees were recaptured within hours in the open countryside and others while trying to swim a river to safety.

Travelers stranded by a sudden grounding of Continental Airlines swamped other airlines yesterday while officials of the Texas-based carrier worked out plans to get some of the planes back in the air. Continental, which has lost $109 million so far this year — $400 million over the last four years — and is $650 million in debt, announced Saturday it is filing for reorganization under Chapter 11 of the federal bankruptcy laws. Formerly the nation's eighth-largest airline, Continental is the second major airline to go to bankruptcy court. Braniff International, also based in Texas, shut down last year. — AP

Tommy Lee Jones of "The Executioner's Song" was the best lead actor in this category. SCTV Network won an award for the best writing in a variety or music program. The other awards won by "Hill Street Blues" were for directing, writing, and film sound mixing. "Cheers" also won for directing and writing. — AP

One of the best kept secrets on the Notre Dame campus is the Student Government Information Bureau, otherwise known as Ombudsman. Says director Andy Tucker, "We have all the information on file that could pertain to an N.D. student." Ombudsman can be contacted at 239-OBUD for information concerning movie times, bus schedules, ticket information, and any other activities happening on campus. In the past, Ombudsman has been located on the second floor of LaFortune, but it is now in the process of transferring its headquarters to the first floor, next to the Student Activities Office. Although the move was delayed when a newly-ordered information booth had to be returned because of poor construction, Tucker said, "As of today, we're supposed to be downstairs." — The Observer

Outside the gates of paradise

War is at best barbarism . . . Its glory is all moonshine. It is only those who have neither fired a shot nor heard the shrieks and groans of the wounded who cry aloud for blood, more vengeance, more desolation. War is hell.

Attributed to a graduation address at the Michigan Military Academy (June 1, 1879)

Notre Dame students are often accused of being isolated from the world's realities and existing in a sort of mecca of their own.

Consider South Bend's location; the Midwest long has had the reputation of being behind the rest of the country. There aren't any fast lanes in South Bend; things seem to happen here long after they have happened in the rest of the country. More than one newcomer has found the conservative way of life hard to adjust to.

Notre Dame students are, by choice, even more "protected" from the outside. We live in dorms with regulated hours of visitation by the opposite sex, DETEXes to make sure unwanted people don't invade our privacy, maids to clean our rooms and empty our trash. One can hardly call this common or typical.

There is nothing wrong with this. I don't mind the extra protection, but I do believe that all this security can make us a bit insensitive to the realities of the world.

Violence is one thing most of us have been spared from in our lives. Most of us are lucky enough to be able to live in neighborhoods where violent crimes are infrequent. None of us, however, experience the day-to-day violence the citizens of many nations experience, and because of this, comprehending the violence which does occur in these nations is difficult.

Time and distance are reasons it is difficult for Americans to feel the full impact of violence in the world. The last war fought on American soil was the Civil War which ended more than 118 years ago. More recent wars involving the United States — World Wars I and II, the Korean War and the Vietnam War — were all fought outside of the United States. The fighting that is happening in countries like Lebanon and Chile is too far away for us to feel its impact; Lebanon is on the other side of the world but it may as well be another galaxy. Not one of us has been alive to see a war fought in our own country. Think about this.

Inside Monday

It's been almost a decade since the Vietnam War ended. Hardly a long time, but it's rather surprising how the horrible memories have been wiped out of the minds of so many Americans. Most of us were too young to feel the impact of the violence in Vietnam; we only remember the grim newscasts and the magazine covers with pictures of dead or wounded children.

Volatile situations throughout the world have precipitated U.S. intervention and there is a real fear that one of these disturbances could eventually drag the U.S. into another war. We can't pick up a newspaper these days without reading something about U.S. involvement in another country. Several Marines have been killed and more have been wounded in Beirut. And what is going on in Chad?

Central America has been a growing hot spot in the last five years and has appeared ready to explode like a powder keg many times.

The American soldiers who have been fighting a strong battle against Salvadoran guerillas have not forgotten Vietnam. Geographically, El Salvador is much different than Vietnam, but the lessons learned in the rice paddies of Nam apply here.

"We're going to do it right this time," said a senior U.S. military leader in El Salvador.

The thought that someone so high up is drawing an analogy like that scares the hell out of me. Yet, President Reagan has repeatedly denied that there is a similarity between the two countries.

What does this all mean and how do we fit in? There is nothing we can do individually, but the story shouldn't end here. But that doesn't mean we have nothing to think about, because we do. We can't take for granted the peace that we enjoy, peace that has been denied to others.

Notre Dame students have always shown great awareness for social concern issues; we aren't always so sure about details, but we do have a sense of justice in the world that many people lack. Let us not become so secure within our little paradises that we forget what is happening outside of the gates.

Filipino protesters demanding the resignation of President Ferdinand Marcos show their support for the goals of Benigno Aquino, who was assassinated last month. The military later dispersed this demonstration with the use of tear gas. The banner reads, "I'm a Filipino, not a quitter."

Filipino demonstrators threatened by Marcos

Associated Press

MANILA, Philippines — President Ferdinand E. Marcos yesterday ordered his riot troops to crush all unauthorized demonstrations, and warned protesting businessmen they had been videotaped and would be tracked down and arrested.

He rejected a proposal by Cardinal Jaime L. Sin to share power with an advisory council and accused priests and nuns of teaching schoolchildren to hate him.

Sin, the archbishop of Manila and leader of the Philippine Catholic church, denied the charge and accused Marcos of casting "a terrible darkness" over the land and forcing Filipinos to choose the path of "violent confrontation."

He said the president was using "threats and other acts of intimidation" instead of eliminating the cause of people's "unrest and disaffection."

Sin also rejected the charge that priests and nuns were preaching "hatred against Marcos and the government," saying schoolchildren were only being taught "the real situation of the country."

Marcos, in his "Report to the Nation," said his orders to the military were that demonstrations without government permits "will be immediately dispersed" with the use of non-lethal weapons, such as tear gas.

"But if the military and police are met with force, they will be compelled to use force," he said. Marcos last week agreed to re-arm his riot troops and ordered them to use these arms in self-defense.

Opposition leaders say permits for their rallies are rarely granted. But former Sen. Jose W. Diokno, a Marcos critic, said the opposition will go ahead with demonstrations even without permits.

Eleven people, including four policemen, were killed and about 200 were injured in rioting near the presidential palace last week. Fifteen more were injured in three protest actions Friday.

Demonstrators numbering thousands have called for the resignation of Marcos, accusing his regime of complicity in the Aug. 21 assassination of opposition leader Benigno Aquino.

Marcos, in his TV appearance yesterday, called the demonstrators "drug-addicts, drunkards, gangsters, communists and radicals."

Alumni group to offer career day

By BARBARA STEVENS
News Staff

A career orientation day is being offered for juniors and seniors on Thursday, Nov. 10.

Thirty-five Notre Dame juniors and seniors will travel to Indianapolis to spend a day with alumni in their fields of career interest. The Student Alumni Relations Group (SARG) is sponsoring this career orientation day to give students an inside look at exactly what people in their prospective fields do. "We want to help give students a better sense of direction in choosing careers and help them better take advantage of active alumni in the area," said SARG Chairman John Fisher.

All juniors and seniors will receive applications in the mail this week. Interested students should fill out the application and return it, along with a $10 fee, to the Alumni office by Saturday, Oct. 1.

SARG will categorize the applications according to field interest and send them to the Alumni Club in Indianapolis, which will match 35 of the students with alumni. SARG will refund the $10 fee to all students not chosen to participate.

The 35 successful applicants must attend one of two preliminary meetings at which they will be briefed on who their alumni hosts will be, what they will do, and what they should wear.

The orientation day itself will consist of a student-alumni lunch, visits to the host's places of employment, and opportunities to question and talk with the alumni hosts. The day will conclude with a dinner for all 35 students and their hosts.

SARG, which consists of five seniors, five juniors, and two freshmen representing as much of the campus and country as possible, serves as a liaison between students and alumni.

The idea of a career orientation day began when a SARG member spoke to several alumni in her home area and discovered how helpful they were in investigating job opportunities.

The Nov. 10 trip will be Notre Dame's first career orientation day. If it is successful, SARG plans to run another one this spring. This second orientation day will include more students and offer trips to Chicago and Detroit as well as Indianapolis.

The success of the first career day trip depends largely on the students. "The students have to be enthusiastic and well-prepared to get the most out of this trip," stressed Fisher.

Sino-American cooperation desired

Associated Press

PEKING — Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger said yesterday that China and the United States should revive their strategic dialogue and cooperate militarily to safeguard world peace.

Weinberger did not mention the Soviet Union, but his remarks were considered a clear call for resurrection of a U.S.-China dialogue to counter what Washington and Peking both call Soviet expansionism.

In his first visit to the China, Weinberger also said President Reagan's new policy allowing the Chinese to import sophisticated technology will help them modernize their 4.2 million-member army.

China has been seeking access to U.S. technology described as dual-use — for military and non-military projects. Weinberger is expected to tell the Chinese exactly what types of technology they can now buy under the new guidelines.

"Close U.S.-China relations and cooperation in the strategic area serve both our national interests and also the interest of world peace and stability," Weinberger said at a banquet after his arrival from Tokyo.

He said he hoped his visit would "strengthen the defense component of our relationship and provide a basis for the further development of exchanges and cooperation between our two armed forces."

A Chinese-U.S. strategic dialogue marked the early days of resumed diplomatic relations in January 1979. But the discussions later lapsed, mainly because of China's anger over U.S. support for the Chinese Nationalist regime on Taiwan. Peking considers the island a renegade province.

Tavern owner agrees to parking arrangement

By MARGARET FOSMOE
Managing Editor

The owner of Bridget McGuire's Filling Station has signed a parking agreement with Ben Schwartz, owner of the neighboring Pandora's Books property.

State Rep. B. Patrick Bauer, partial owner of Bridget's, hopes the agreement will convince the city Board of Zoning Appeals (BZA) to allow Bridget's controversial addition to remain standing.

According to the agreement, patrons of the tavern will have access to 13 parking spaces on the Pandora property, 937 South Bend Ave.

The lease agreement is on a monthly basis, according to Bauer, and holds the tavern operators responsible for cleanup and snow removal of the lot. The agreement is valid through August 1985 at a cost of $75 a month.

Bauer says the agreement was signed with Ben Schwartz, of Maumelle, Ark., "sometime last week," prior to the Thursday afternoon meeting of the BZA. Schwartz is a partner in Saben, Inc., owner of the bookstore property.

At last week's BZA meeting, a decision regarding the fate of the addition was postponed until Oct. 27.

Bauer's attorney asked for the delay because Bauer was hospitalized for treatment of hyperglycemia. He has since been released.

Bridget's formerly had a similar agreement with the operator of the bookstore, according to Bauer. That agreement was cancelled a few months ago when it was learned the operator's lease with Saben was on a monthly basis.

"We contacted the owners after the city prematurely ordered a stop-work on the addition and prematurely ordered its destruction," said Bauer.

According to Bauer, the owner was contacted by Harold Rowley, owner of the neighboring Corby's tavern, shortly after the addition controversy heated up in July. Rowley apparently offered to purchase the bookstore property at that time.

"Last Monday he (the owner of the bookstore property) came into town and found he (Rowley) wasn't interested," said Bauer.

The agreement refers to a possible sale of the property and gives Saben the right to cancel the agreement if the bookstore property is sold. Bauer also has the right to cancel the agreement if the tavern is not allowed to maintain the addition.

War Powers Act compromise fails to relieve tensions in Washington

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The war powers compromise that moves onto the floor of the House and Senate this week may answer some of the questions hanging over the U.S. Marines in Lebanon, but it is unlikely to ease the tension between Congress and the administration over their powers to send troops into battle zones.

When Secretary of State George Shultz testified before congressional committees last week, he made it clear repeatedly that President Reagan, in his words, "has no intention of turning over to Congress his constitutional authority as commander in chief."

Neither, for that matter, have other chief executives. President Richard Nixon, for instance, opposed the 1973 War Powers Act, which underlies the current controversy, saying it "attempts to take away authorities which the president has properly exercised under the Constitution for almost 200 years."

The act, passed by Congress over Nixon's veto in the waning days of the Vietnam War, requires the president to notify Congress within 48 hours whenever he sends troops equipped for combat abroad. If they are in a zone of hostilities he is required to bring them home in 60 days unless Congress authorizes a further stay or he decides an additional 30 days is needed to get them out safely.

Neither Nixon nor any of his successors — Gerald Ford, Jimmy Carter and Reagan — ever acknowledged that Congress has that authority.

When Reagan sent Marines to take part in a peacekeeping force in Lebanon last year, he said he was acting consistently with the War Powers Act. But he made no mention of a timetable, even though congressional leaders in both parties urged him to do so.

When Congress reassembled this month after a five-week recess during which four of the Marines had been killed and more than two dozen wounded, the lawmakers stepped up their demands for more of a say about what was going on.

Sen. Charles Mathias, R-Md., introduced a resolution that declared the war powers clock had begun to run when the first Marines were killed Aug. 29, but the resolution proposed extending the authority for their presence in Beirut.

Alaska Republican defends Watt

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A top Senate Republican, saying James Watt is a "God-fearing man," not a bigot, promised yesterday to block a Senate resolution urging his resignation. But another GOP senator predicted Watt will not last another week as Secretary of the Interior.

Assistant Majority Leader Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, said Watt made a mistake last week in referring to five advisers as "a black, a woman, two Jews and a cripple." But he said Watt shouldn't be driven from office for the blunder.

"He's not a bigot. Jim Watt is a God-fearing man who is really quite a Christian gentleman," Stevens told reporters after an appearance on CBS-TV's "Face the Nation," where he defended Watt.

The Senate is scheduled to take up debate Wednesday of a Democratic-sponsored resolution calling for Watt's resignation for conduct "totally unbecoming a senior Cabinet member."

Stevens said the resolution will not come to a vote "as far as I am concerned." He told reporters he would try to prevent the Senate from voting on the resolution, but he did not elaborate.

Sen. Robert Packwood, R-Oregon, said party leaders were concerned that without heavy lobbying from the White House the vote would be "very decisive" against Watt. Packwood is one of eight GOP senators who have called on Watt to resign. Three others — Robert Dole and Nancy Kassebaum of Kansas and Pete V. Domenici of New Mexico — have stopped just short of calling for Watt's resignation.

The resolution would have no legal impact on Watt, but would prove embarrassing to the administration if it showed large-scale Republican opposition to a member of the President's Cabinet.

Packwood predicted that Watt would not last the week, but he later told reporters that Watt may hang on a little longer "so that it appears he goes out with grace rather than under pressure."

President Reagan, who has accepted a written apology from Watt, remained mum yesterday on whether he would keep him on.

Packwood called Watt a liability to the White House and the GOP.

But Watt was defended on the telecast by Republican National Committee Chairman Frank J. Fahrenkopf and Richard Viguerie, a leader of the New Right and key Republican fundraiser.

"What Jim Watt did is inexcusable, but to say that the error applies against President Reagan is unfair," Fahrenkopf said. He said Watt is not bigoted and has been honored in the past by Jewish and handicapped groups for his policies in the Interior Department.

Viguerie said conservatives are watching Reagan to see whether "he keeps one of the few conservatives left in the administration."

He said Watt's comment was "not made in malice but at the frustration of bureaucrats who force quotas on the American people."

The comment drawing fire was made by Watt during a speech Wednesday to the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, where he described a commission he has appointed to review his coal-leasing program as having "every kind of mix you can have. I have a black, I have a woman, two Jews and a cripple. And we have talent."

Conference to explore secular role in society

Special to the Observer

Sixty Catholic lay people from diverse professional, geographical and cultural backgrounds will meet October 23-25 at Notre Dame's Center for Continuing Education to explore with a committee of American Catholic bishops the role of the Catholic lay person in contemporary American society.

"Work and Faith in Society: Catholic Perspectives" is the title of the conference, sponsored by the National Conference of Catholic Bishops' Committee on the Laity in cooperation with Notre Dame's Institute for Pastoral and Social Ministry.

One purpose of the conference, which has been planned for two years, is "to highlight the Christian value of secular life: in the professions, in families, in areas of civic and social concern, in leisure pursuits. Six speakers, chosen from among the participants, will give major presentations. They are Kenneth Woodward, senior writer for Newsweek magazine; Sally Cunneen, assistant professor of English at State University of New York and associate editor of Cross Currents; Ralph Graham Neas, executive director of the Leadership Conference on Civil Rights; Doris Donnelly, associate professor of theology at St. John's University and president of the Ecumenical Institute of Spirituality; Father John Coleman, associate professor of religion and society at the Jesuit School of Theology in Berkeley; and Father James Bacik, theologian, author, and campus minister in the diocese of Toledo.

Other conference participants include Richard "Digger" Phelps, head basketball coach at Notre Dame;

Paul Conrad, editorial cartoonist for the Los Angeles Times; Jim Douglas, peace activist and co-founder of the Ground Zero Center for Nonviolent Action; Karen Lee Hodgson, actress,

The Max Lerner Column

Consider the goodies the ex-senator and (in 1972) ex-Democratic presidential nominee offers us. As president he would increase federal social spending and hence taxes, too, cancel the MX and B-1, reverse Ronald Reagan's defense build-up, clear out of El Salvador, smile benignly on Nicaragua, envelop Fidel Castro in a diplomatic embrace, and make a "significant cut" in aid to Israel if it fails to meet his requirements for "negotiation in good faith" with its Arab enemies.

Another goodie is a turnabout in policies toward the Soviet Union and its global expansionism. Judging from his positions, McGovern would be an easy mark for the Soviets in the Geneva arms talks. He would no longer interfere in the revolutionary currents of smaller nations, which is an interesting way of phrasing an isolationist inaction toward Soviet global designs. There isn't an unhackneyed idea nor a workable one in the whole melange.

As for the Korean plane shootdown, "it only under-scores the folly of the present cold war tensions." How this is distinguished from the present Soviet position toward their murderous act and toward the American protests he doesn't say.

Perhaps I take George McGovern's pronouncements more seriously than they deserve. Shift 35 years back to 1948, shift from South Dakota to Iowa, from George McGovern to Henry Wallace, from Nicaragua and El Salvador to Yugoslavia and Eastern Europe, and you get one of those startling parallels that makes the course of history seem to run in circles.

I recall attending the 1948 convention of Wallace's Progressive Party with H.L. Mencken. We listened to the Resolutions Committee report and to Wallace's responses to questions about the Soviets. Mencken was delighted with the entire performance - its ultra-liberal civic virtue, its political innocence and extravagance together, its ignorance of the realities of political life. I think of poor, sincere, deluded Henry Wallace when I try to make some sense of George McGovern.

Unlike Wallace, who thought he could win, McGovern agrees that he is a "long-shot" candidate. But I read his confident declaration - "I am ready now as at no previous time in my life to lead this nation toward justice, honor and peace" - and I think of Harold Stassen's unexpungeable belief in the nation's need of his leadership, and I can't help asking what has happened to the "observing ego" that keeps most men who at some point have had a brush with the White House from making infernal fools of themselves.

Now there are seven presidential candidates. We may be grateful that McGovern, as the seventh, has offered a guideline of sorts for judging the positions of the other six, on spending and taxes, on defense, on Israel and the Arabs, on Castro, on the Russians.

McGovern has gone well beyond Walter Mondale, Alan Cranston and Gary Hart. He has blurted out the political credo that the liberal Left of the Democratic Party believes. It isn't credible. It is a Never-Never Land of political fantasy. But it is there, and the pathos of McGovern's unending quest for the prize that has eluded him shouldn't blind us to that fact.

Japan program

Dear Editor:

As a member of the Asian Committee, I have always supported the introduction of Chinese studies at the University - it would be a definite plus for our Japanese majors program. So I recommend by all means the general point that Francis James made in his recent column (Why Notre Dame should offer Chinese, Sept. 22).

But I greatly regret his characterization of the Japan program: "For years it was languishing with very few students, but suddenly blossomed into a full scale language program..." For your guest columnist's information, the program started with 13 students who went to Tokyo in 1967. The next year the number soared to 24 and since then it has numbered between 8 and 15. In 1968, Japanese classes were begun with 16 students in First Year Japanese. Since that time, it has developed into a four year program. When a second teacher was brought into the Japanese section in 1975, we were able to develop majors program.

Many students with no intention of participating in the Year-in-Japan Program have enrolled in these classes - and this, long before Toyotas and Datsuns began to invade the land. Five of our students have won the Ministry of Education Scholarship Award to study at Japanese Universities. Furthermore, aside from the three major languages in our department, Japanese has had the largest number of majors. The thrust of our classes is to teach the language, literature, and culture of Japan - we make no attempt to touch upon things like Theory Z. The Japan Club has been functioning since 1976 not only with members of the Japanese classes, but also with other students from Japan or interested in Japan. It has always had many members. All this would hardly give any hint of "languishing."

I know Mr. James did not intend to slur our program, but as part of the it, I feel compelled to reply on behalf of its teachers and students.

Actually, all this has been a blessing in disguise: It has given us the splendid opportunity to inform your readers about our program. Unbelievably, freshmen still come to us at the end of the semester totally unaware of the program.

George Minamiki, S.J.

Yes, I would turn someone in. If I decided to take the responsibilities of being an RA I would go through with the commitment. Rules would never be followed if they were not enforced.

No, I wouldn't. Although I understand the need to have restrictions, I would just give a warning. The penalties are too severe.

Yes. You have an obligation to turn them in. But I don't want that kind of responsibility.

It depends on how much money they would be willing to offer me.

I would have to say no. Even though rules are very important, I think every person deserves a second chance. If I caught someone twice, I'd seriously consider turning them in.

Chatauqua's masterpieces

by Doug Murphy
features staff writer

The familiar faces of the Beatles, Jimi Hendrix, Janis Joplin, and Jim Morrison loom large on the walls of Chatauqua on the second floor of LaFortune. Starkly rendered in black and white, these imposing icons manage to dominate the room while evoking the romance commonly associated with the 60s and the rock stars of that era.

Tim Murphy, the artist and an '81 Notre Dame graduate, finished the murals only last year after having started them two years ago. Sometime in 1981 when the ballroom was undergoing one of its periodic identity crises, Murphy approached the manager of Chatauqua with a proposal to heighten the room's musical atmosphere with a series of wall murals. His idea was approved and Murphy was soon working diligently, donating time, talent, and materials to the project. By the time commencement rolled around, Tim had completed fully the portrait of Morrison and partially the one of Hendrix.

The remainder of the project, which included a portrait of Janis Joplin, two Beatles murals, along with the unfinished Morrison portrait, remained unfinished until last year. While the rest of us were enduring finals, Murphy took a vacation from his job on the East Coast, travelled to South Bend and completed the project, surrounded by workmen who were then completing the renovation of LaFortune.

Dave Drouillard, director of the Student Union, commented that Murphy decided to do the entire project on his own, as his contribution to the University. "I remember coming up here during exams last year, and Tim would be working all the time on the murals," said Drouillard.

Janis Joplin

Dr. James McDonnell, Director of Student Activities, spoke of the murals within the context of the history of Chatauqua itself. The old ballroom, as Chatauqua was originally envisioned, was to have been a center for musical entertainment on campus. Live acts, lectures, poetry readings, and workshops were to have rounded out its activities. In the context of decorating the room for such a varied theme, Dr. McDonnell and Fr. John Van Wolvlear, Director of Student Affairs, decided to solicit student suggestions. Murphy's idea for the murals was one of those accepted.

Dr. McDonnell has nothing but praise for Murphy's actions and his donations of time and talent to the University. "Tim agreed to do the murals even without a guarantee that they would remain, as a result of our renovations."

Currently, as proposals are being developed to transform Chatauqua into an undergraduate club, with a portable bar and booths, the possibility exists that the murals will be painted over. McDonnell foresees the eventual development of a committee of students, perhaps working out of student government, to provide some input on the future of Chatauqua and its murals, as plans are finally agreed upon.

For now, however, the portraits will remain, staring down at the dancers and moviegoers of Chatauqua. People's responses to the murals have been mixed and of both extremes; it is a love or hate thing. Whatever their fate, the murals are the special gifts of a very talented alumnus. Whether they remain or not, they certainly merit the appreciation and gratitude of the student body of Notre Dame.

The perils of organization

by Chris Fraser
features staff writer

Being organized is one of those things in life that's perpetually overrated. Like drinking in the morning and singing in the rain, the true value of personal organization never quite matches its lofty reputation.

Everyone thinks they want to be organized and yet no one likes the superficially organized person. Perhaps this is because his hair is always in place and his clothes are never wrinkled. Why do organized people have to be so neat? These are the sort of people who write down everything in those nifty little assignment and appointment books. Now we all have bought these at one time or another and with the best of intentions. But these little moneymakers for stationary companies are meant to be lost in the shuffle of our desks or buried in the bottom of our napkins. We're not supposed to write everything down. That's what secretaries are for.

Organized people, however, have their whole semester, if not their whole life, planned out. They write down when their next test is, what time bedtime is, and even when they will go to the bathroom.

Personally, I don't want to know when my next test is. And I like to go to bed when I'm tired even if that means I won't get precisely eight hours. The same logic applies to my bowel movements.

Anyway, most of us like to think of ourselves as having a kind of inner organization. For instance, we pride ourselves on knowing where every last gum wrapper is on our hopelessly cluttered desks. And we don't need to write down all of our appointments because we're smart enough to remember anything we'd really want to go to.

Take that you organized wimps. "Order is Heaven's first law" said Alexander Pope, succinctly stating the theological case for the organized person. But what about earth's law? And who exactly was this Alexander Pope character anyway? An eighteenth century philosophical poet? Definitely overrated.

Organization, like consistency, is the refuge of the mediocre. Unfortunately, disorganization suggests undesirable clutter and tardiness. Indeed that is an unfair connotation for such a prevalent condition. However, looked at more closely, disorganization implies activity, spontaneity, even importance. Kind of like you have better things to do than carefully hang your coat in the closet when the chair is right there. Or why should you dig out the personalized stationary you got last Christmas to write a letter when there are piles of paper in your handy notebooks.

The books of your average (disorganized) person are worn and rabbit-eared and never shelved according to size or subject. Disorganized people write notes on napkins, keep stuff under their bed, and never have enough quarters to do the laundry.

Organized people have balanced checkbooks.

Disorganization means you wash the dishes later, borrow pens during tests, and keep old phone numbers on crumpled paper in your wallet.

Organization means you always have an umbrella when it rains.

Organization doesn't sound so bad? Don't jump to conclusions until you consider a few more marks of the genre.

Does anybody really know what time it is? Well organized people do and they give it to you in digital terms. You know, they say 5:32 instead of 5:30 and 8:46 instead of quarter to 9. Only astronauts and bosses really care about the time that much. Or how about this: at some point in time, everyone plans to awake before the rest of civilization and get lots of important business done at 6:00 or 7:00 AM. Organized people actually follow through. I mean they really get up when their alarm clocks go off and everything. Really.

For some closing words of wisdom on the subject, let's hear from Mark Twain. I have this great quote from him somewhere (writer shuffles through a diffuse assortment of papers on his somewhat scattered desk)...ah yes, here it is. "Have a place for everything" said Twain, "and keep it somewhere else. This is not advice, it is merely custom."

The embattled defenders of the America's Cup decided yesterday to make no further changes on the already lightened Liberty for today's deciding race against speedier Australia II. The Australians, pleased there would be no alterations in the U.S. yacht's weight and sail configuration beyond those made Friday, said they would reconsider their vow to protest the final race from the start. Warren Jones, executive director of the Aussie syndicate, said that decision would be made this morning. But just as the winds of controversy appeared to the dying, so did the winds on Rhode Island Sound, raising the possibility that the closest series in Cup history will not be finished until Tuesday or later. Johan Valentijn, Liberty's designer, said the Americans decided to forgo more ballast changes after receiving the latest weather report, calling for eight-knot southeasterly winds for today's scheduled 12:10 p.m. EDT start. And Jones added, "We'll be lucky to get a race." The forecast was for winds to shift to the south-southwest and build to 10-12 knots by 3 p.m. but then die to 5-7 knots by 5 p.m. "We're quite concerned about the winds being real shifty and light and not being able to get a race in," said Mike Neilsen, meteorologist with the Newport Weather Center, a private forecasting service used by both Liberty and Australia II. "If they start at 2, we may never see a finish." And "not much difference" is expected tomorrow, he said. — AP

Orioles clinch AL East

MILWAUKEE (AP) — The Baltimore Orioles, behind the combined six-hit pitching of Storm Davis and Tippy Martinez and home runs by Jim Dwyer and Joe Nolan, clinched the American League East title yesterday with a 5-1 victory over the Milwaukee Brewers.

The Orioles began the day needing either one victory or a loss by second-place Detroit to clinch the division. Detroit beat Boston 3-2 yesterday.

Baltimore, which last won the division in 1979, will face the AL West champion Chicago White Sox for the league championship. The best-of-five series starts Oct. 5 in Baltimore. Chicago is making its first-ever appearance in the AL championship series.

Davis, 13-6, gave up one run on three hits over six innings before being relieved by Martinez, who earned his 19th save.

Cowboys nip Saints on safety

Associated Press

Linebacker Anthony Dickerson sacked New Orleans quarterback Kenny Stabler for a safety with 1:58 remaining in the game yesterday to give the unbeaten Dallas Cowboys a bizarre 21-20 National Football League victory.

Outplayed the entire game, Dallas, 4-0, appeared to have lost the game when New Orleans linebacker Dennis Winston intercepted a Danny White pass in the end zone and ran it out to the 4-yard line. But the Saints, trying to catch the Dallas secondary napping, decided to throw the ball.

Dickerson, who wasn't fooled by Stabler's play-action fake, blitzed and caught Stabler in the end zone for the winning two points.

Rookie Raul Allegre kicked a 33-yard field goal after 4:51 of overtime to boost the Baltimore Colts to a 22-19 victory over the Chicago Bears. Allegre had missed a 45-yard field goal attempt with three seconds remaining in regulation. The Bears lost a chance to win in regulation when Bob Thomas was wide with his extra point attempt following Chicago's first touchdown of the game.

Veteran quarterback Jim Hart connected with Roy Green on a 26-yard touchdown pass with 29 seconds remaining as the St. Louis Cardinals won their first game of the season, 14-11 over Philadelphia.

Joe Cribbs rushed for 166 yards, bettering his previous single-game best, to lead Buffalo over Houston 30-13. Earl Campbell had 142 yards in 30 carries for the Oilers.

Quarterback Steve Grogan and rookie Stephan Starring hooked up on a 76-yard pass play with 3:59 remaining and the defense picked off three Pittsburgh passes as New England rallied to upset the Steelers 28-23. Pittsburgh's Franco Harris gained 106 yards on 25 carries, giving him a career total of 11,309 yards, second only to Jim Brown. He surpassed O.J. Simpson's career yardage total in the loss.

The San Francisco 49ers ended a six-game home losing streak by beating Atlanta 24-20 as Joe Montana passed for three touchdowns.

Joe Theismann's three touchdown passes lifted Washington over Seattle, 27-17, while Miami, behind David Woodley's TD pass to rookie tight end Dan Johnson, survived a mistake-marred first half to edge Kansas City 14-6.

Ken Riley sprinted 34 yards with an interception for a touchdown and Robert Jackson ended a threat with another interception as Cincinnati won its first game of the season by stopping winless Tampa Bay 23-17.

Benny Ricardo kicked his second field goal of the game midway through the final period and Minnesota held on to nip Detroit 20-17.

Two touchdown passes from Jim Plunkett to Cliff Branch helped Los Angeles raise its record to 4-0 as the Raiders downed Denver 22-7, while quarterback Brian Sipe hit tight end Harry Holt with a 48-yard touchdown just 1:53 into overtime to lift Cleveland over San Diego 30-24.

Pat Leahy's 26-yard field goal 8:22 into overtime boosted the New York Jets to a 27-24 victory over the Los Angeles Rams.

"We kept him in there because he's been a starter for us," Faust explained. "He's a senior and a captain and he was moving the ball."

After the second interception, it was back to Beuerlein, and beginning to seem like a plague of quarterback yo-yos.

"I think it was the logical thing to do," Kiel said. "Steve did a great job and deserved to be in there."

A very frustrated Kiel took personal responsibility for the loss.

"I had two interceptions," he said. "Everytime I had a turnover, they scored."

Enough gloating on the obvious mistakes. Notre Dame also had chances to score and never reaped the benefits of those opportunities.

On Beuerlein's first series in the second quarter, he skillfully maneuvered the team into Miami territory. Smith and Allen Pinkett, terrorizing the right side of Miami's defensive line, tallied 18 and 21 yards rushing on the drive. The team was unable to penetrate the goal line, however, and Faust went to Mike Johnston to attempt a 27-yard field goal. Out of nowhere, an untouched Reggie Sutton sprung forward blocking the kick.

Beuerlein's next series had similar results. He marched Notre Dame from his own 33-yard line to Miami's 23. Once again Johnston got the call. After a faked kick was called back due to a delay of game penalty, Johnston was short with his 46-yard attempt.

In the third quarter, Kiel, who ended up 9 for 21 passing with 88 yards, also experienced the feeling. After the rushing talents of Pinkett and a 16-yard reception by Milt Jackson brought the Irish down to Miami's seven-yard line, the Hurricanes held tight. Johnston's 24-yard attempt was once again blocked by a blazing Sutton.

"Reggie's been blocking them against us all week in practice," Hurricane Head Coach Howard Schnellenberger said. "He's a quick kid. If you don't get the ball off quick, you're in trouble."

Finally, the Irish spent the last six minutes of the game under Beuerlein's direction marching down field only to have the quarterback sacked at the three-yard line. Its hopes of scoring thwarted, Notre Dame suffered its first shutout since a 3-0 loss to Missouri in 1978.

Beuerlein ended the game with 13 completions in 23 attempts and 145 total passing yards.

Examining the stats, the game looked pretty even — maybe even leaning toward Notre Dame. The Irish had 22 first downs, picked up 335 total offensive yards, and controlled the ball for 29 minutes. Miami had only 19 first downs, 296 offensive yards, while controlling the ball for 31 minutes. The decisive numbers are Notre Dame's four turnovers to Miami's two, and Notre Dame's lack of points to Miami's 20.

Why couldn't the Irish find the secret to crossing the goal line?

"I honestly don't know," Kiel said. "We didn't have the drive we needed to get in there."

Faust preferred to focus on the Miami defense and the performance of Kosar rather than the lack of Irish killer instinct.

"Miami is a good football team," he said. "You've got to give their defense credit for not letting us get into the endzone. And Kosar (22 for 33 and 215 yards) played just a heck of a game."

Of course new questions will arise from this Miami trouncing, some of which Faust can try to answer.

For instance, will Beuerlein start next week in Colorado?

"No, I don't think so," Faust said. "Steve did an excellent job for a freshman. He really hung in there. But, he hasn't had time to get to know the system yet."

Is Notre Dame really the team that was dominated by Michigan State and now Miami?

"You can call me an eternal optimist but we're still in real good shape," Faust said. "Our goal this season was to improve over last year. We can still do that."

Are all the questions answered? Time will tell.

Cornhuskers roll to another win

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
 Associated Press

Nebraska's Tom Osborne and Oklahoma's Barry Switzer began their head coaching careers in 1973 and their teams are traditional rivals, so it was only fitting that they should achieve their 100th victories on the same day.

There the similarities ended. Top-rated Nebraska overcame a 10-point deficit to defeat UCLA 42-10 Saturday, while eighth-ranked Oklahoma built a 28-0 halftime lead and held on for a 28-18 triumph over Tulsa, which scored three times in a five-minute span of the final quarter.

"I just hope I'm around here for another 50 games. That seems like a lot now," said Osborne, whose Cornhuskers lost four of their six first-half fumbles before rallying behind the running of Mike Rozier, who gained 159 yards and scored twice.

Switzer's 100th victory didn't mean he was happy with Oklahoma's sloppy performance in the field periods.

"This second half was the worst

30 minutes of football that has ever been played by a team I have coached," he said. "We threw interceptions, we didn't block anybody, we didn't run, and we didn't make anything happen. We are just making too many mistakes."

Switzer's record is 100-18-3 and Osborne's is 100-24-2.

Meanwhile, in a couple of Top Twenty showdowns, seventh-ranked Iowa defeated No. 3 Ohio State 20-14 and No. 12 West Virginia trimmed No. 19 Boston College 27-17.

Four other members of the Associated Press Top Twenty lost to unranked teams. LSU whipped ninth-ranked Washington 40-14, Kansas shocked No. 10 Southern California 26-20, Miami handed No. 13 Notre Dame its first shutout since the 1978 opener, 20-0, and Maryland, playing without quarterback Boomer Esiason, defeated No. 16 Pitt, 13-7.

Elsewhere, second-ranked Texas beat North Texas State 26-6, No. 4 Arizona trounced Fullerton State 31-10, No. 5 North Carolina walloped William & Mary, 51-20, and sixth-rated Alabama beat Vanderbilt 44-24.

In the Second Ten, it was No. 11 Auburn 37, Tennessee 14; No. 14 Georgia 31, South Carolina 13; No. 15 Florida 35, Mississippi State 12; No. 17 Michigan 38, Wisconsin 17, and No. 18 Southern Methodist 21, Texas Christian 17. Florida State, the No. 20 team, was not scheduled.

UCLA, off to its worst start since 1974 at 0-2-1, went ahead of Nebraska 10-0 on Frank Cephus' 1-yard touchdown run and John Lee's 37-yard field goal. But the Cornhuskers, who had outscored their first three opponents 184-39, rallied behind a 600-yard offensive display and scored two touchdowns in each of the last three periods. They also stretched the nation's longest major-college winning streak to 14 games.

"I think our first-team guys needed a game where they really had to go hard for three or four quarters," Osborne said. "Our defense played well (UCLA gained 292 yards) and I'm sure 90 percent of the teams in the country would love to have our defense."

Right there went the game. Doctor J. will miss a dunk before Indiana will miss a penalty kick. Shmid thanked the official for his generosity and promptly drilled it past Steranka for a two-goal cushion.

"This Indiana team uses a lot more finesse than did Hoosier teams of years past," noted Gorrity. "A couple of years ago we would try to use our speed to set up goals. We don't have any superstars, just a bunch of guys with a lot of individual skill."

After carrying a 2-0 lead into halftime, Indiana came out even sharper for the second half. With seven and a half minutes gone, Hoosier forward John Stollmeyer sent a bullet from point blank toward the Irish goal. But Steranka hung tough and made the save to keep the hosts within striking range.

Ken Harkenrider then took a pass in front of the Indiana net and just missed a goal when he fired wide left. At the 10-minute mark, Castro put the game on ice as he headed a cross past Steranka amidst much confusion in front of the goal.

After that Indiana put on a passing clinic, a give and go here, a cross there. At 29:05 Gorrity just missed making it 4-0 when his header hit the post. No matter. Shmid boomed one home minutes later and the rout was official.

The weekend was not a complete loss, however. Tom Daley, Snyder, Harkenrider, and Bill Beasley scored a goal apiece as the Irish dumped Kentucky 4-0 on Friday night. Harkenrider's goal enabled him to break Kevin Lovejoy's record of scoring in six consecutive games. The goal came on a penalty kick and gave the Irish a 2-0 lead at the time.

Thus, with a win on Friday and a loss yesterday, Notre Dame's record drops to 7-2 on the season.

Miami thrashes Irish in front of nation

By JANE HEALEY
Assistant Sports Editor

MIAMI — All week on Notre Dame's campus people were asking the question, "Which is the real Irish football team?" Unfortunately, a 20-0 thrashing by Miami Saturday night seemed an appropriate answer to the inquiry.

"We were ready for the game," a subdued Gerry Faust said afterward. "We just made errors and you can't do that."

The errors to which Faust is referring were both the tangible, recognizable ones — turnovers — and the intangible, mental ones — the inability of the Irish to muster any scoring momentum once they travelled into Hurricane territory.

Miami's first half 14-0 lead was the product of those tangible mistakes. With 3:10 left in the first quarter, and no score on the board, Notre Dame had the ball on their own 19-yard line facing first down and 20. Irish quarterback Blair Kiel rolled right with plenty of time to throw. When he got the pass off though, it ended up in the crook of defender Jay Brophy's arm.

The interception gave Miami possession on the Notre Dame 30-yard line. Eight plays later, Speedy Neal busted three yards up the middle for the first score of the game. Jeff Davis added the extra point.

In the second quarter, with the Irish once again deep in their own territory, Kiel and company faced third down and 10 yards to go. A misnap muffed Kiel's hand-off to fullback Chris Smith, and Miami's Winston Moss recovered the fumble on the 26-yard line.

Red-shirted freshman quarterback Bernie Kosar then expertly picked out receiver Stanley Shakespeare and tailback Keith Griffin for receptions of six and five yards, respectively. The Irish defense held tight though, forcing a third down and seven situation. The blitzing Irish sent everyone except cornerback Stacey Toran and Pat Ballage after Kosar. Reading the blitz, Kosar called an audible and a quick-release pass led wide receiver Ed Brown into the corner of the endzone with Ballage trailing behind.

"The interceptions — the turnovers — really hurt," Faust said. "It gave them good field position each time. That's what you can't do."

The Irish did do it again, though. Miami added a field goal on the first drive of the third quarter making the score 17-0. In the fourth quarter, the Irish began a drive on their own one yard line. Kiel's completions to Mark Bavaro and Alonzo Jefferson brought them up to the 39-yard line.

On second down and 10, Kiel dropped back again with a lot of time, and spotted Bavaro across the middle. Unfortunately, Miami's Ken Sisk also spotted the open Irish tight end, and before the ball got to him, Sisk grabbed it, returning the ball to the 38-yard line.

Kiel's second interception resulted in another Davis field goal, thus accounting for the 20-0 final score.

After the fumble in the second quarter, Faust had sent in freshman Steve Beuerlein in to replace Kiel.

"We wanted to try and get something started," Faust said. "We had planned to use more players and substitute anyway due to the humidity."

At the beginning of the third quarter, though, Kiel reappeared at the helm of the offense for reasons of experience.

Indiana shows muscle

Soccer team wins one, loses one

It was just another road stop for the Indiana soccer team. And so, with little fanfare or emotion, the Hoosiers defeated a very inspired Notre Dame team 4-0 yesterday at Alumni Field.

The Hoosiers are simply an awesome team. Notre Dame found that out yesterday as their opponents totally controlled the ball and did whatever they wanted to with it.

Joe Schmid scored 2 goals for the winners while Rodrigo Castro and Keith Meyer had one apiece. Manuel Gorrity picked up two assists and riddled the Irish defense with pinpoint passing.

"We've been showing a lot of teamwork lately," said Gorrity. "Today we got a chance to work on our passing and fundamentals."

The Hoosiers controlled the ball throughout the first half with Notre Dame only making brief forays into the Indiana side of the field. Rob Snyder and Mark Bidingier stirred the large home crowd with crosses through the Indiana crease, but neither resulted in Irish goals.

Then with just under 16 minutes left in the first half Schmid took a pass from Gorrity and beat Irish goalie Mark Steranka from 15 yards out. Three minutes later the Irish were whistled for a push in their own goal crease. Despite much protest from Irish coach Rich Hunter, the Hoosiers were awarded a penalty kick.

The thoughts of a disheartened fan

It's sad to say, but it appears that the real Irish football team stood up — or, rather, laid down — on Saturday.

Now, I will admit that, while I know football pretty well, I'm not an expert. But I do know what I, as well as millions of other people, saw on television Saturday night.

What I saw was a football team that embarrassed itself on national television, not only with its physical performance, but also with the character that it showed when met with a serious challenge.

I don't think I need to dwell too much on the physical mistakes. We've been seeing many of them for a few years now. The costly interceptions, the poor pass rush, the sight of linemen getting knocked on the seat of their pants by someone fifty pounds lighter. Probably most annoying was the lack of execution in the clutch (fumbled snaps and dumb penalties on third-and-one) and the inability to adjust (two blocked kicks by the same man coming from the same place untouched by the same blocker).

In short, Notre Dame was outcoached, outplayed, and outmatched. We were beaten by a team that was better than we were. More importantly, we were beaten by a team that wanted it more. Of course, in five of our last six games, we've been beaten by a team that wanted it more.

This is the thing that is most upsetting about the last few seasons. If we just weren't as talented as the teams that we've been losing to, I could understand and accept that, but this isn't the case. We've got so much talent we don't know what to do with it (at least that's what the so-called football experts say), but we still lose.

Most of the losses aren't flukes, either. We are getting beaten all over the field. But there is absolutely no reason why we should be losing games to teams like Air Force and Michigan State. And there should have been no reason for us to lose our biggest game of the year on Saturday.

The players and coaches all know that teams will be psyched up when they play us, so why aren't they prepared for this? They knew Miami was going to be ready, so we should have been ready for them. We weren't.

Who do you blame for the team not being mentally prepared? Obviously, a lot of blame belongs to the coaches.

All the coaches, but particularly the man in charge, are making the players think they are better than they are. I can understand that you have to give the players a boost from time to time, but reminding them after the Michigan State loss that the 1977 team also lost its second game is going a bit too far.

The players should have been angry after the MSU loss, but they weren't. They acted like it never happened. All they talked about was how they were still going to win the national championship.

One day, he is going to have to stop saying, "We're a good team and we're going to bounce back." We've been hearing that for three years and the team never really has bounced back. Not that it can't, just that it doesn't seem to have the desire to come back. That hunger for winning isn't there anymore.

It's not all the coaches' fault, though. The coaches don't mess up snaps and miss blocking assignments — the players do. They are going to have to start realizing that Notre Dame doesn't win because it's Notre Dame. It has always won because of hard work and a winning attitude. If you don't want to win, you won't. Don't tell me that Nebraska doesn't want to win more than any poor team they might play.

Let's stop for a second.

If it seems that I'm being too harsh on the team and the players, maybe I am. But I think I have the same reason as those people who are, for the first time, voicing their anger.

I have been very patient during the last few years, always waiting for us to explode. This year I thought was the year. Everything seemed to be going right.

Now I had questioned the desire of the team for my first couple of years, but I figured that it would work itself out when the Faust recruits began playing major roles.

Michigan State started to get me wondering again. When some of the players said that the Spartans wanted it more, I was really upset, but I decided to write it off as a bad day.

The national television performance convinced me, though, that I may have overestimated the players and the coaches. Not all of them (you could tell who wanted to win and who didn't just by watching the game), but enough of them to let Miami walk all over us.

The thing that I will probably never forget about Saturday is the sight of the classless Miami players taunting the Notre Dame players — and the Notre Dame players not being able to do anything about it. I know it was frustrating for me to watch it, but I sure hope it was more frustrating to the players. Here was Notre Dame, for years the big kid on the block, now playing the part of the little weakling who can't stand up to the bully.

I feel somehow betrayed even though I really have no right to. But, I'm sorry, I have been through this ever since I got here.

I don't have anything against the players or the coaches, although I don't think we are as talented as people say we are. I hope that I'm wrong about the players' attitudes. So far, there is really nothing to make me feel otherwise, though.

I'm not the only one that feels this way toward the team, though. I said last week that the students had been pushed to the edge. The performance against Miami pushed 95 percent of them over the edge — before the third quarter ended.

A couple of the team leaders may have said that the players were playing for themselves, but I don't think they thought that there words might come true.

The last eight games will show us if the players have got anything deep inside that hasn't come out yet. Beating Colorado won't prove anything. Beating USC won't prove anything. Only the results at the end of the season will mean anything.

Maybe, if the players see where this season has headed, they will show everyone the thing that they have failed to show so many times over the last few years — the desire to win.
