ND Food Services earns Ivy Award

By BOB VONDERHEIDE
News Editor

It may be fish-on-a-bun day in the dining halls today, but it has been filet mignon day all week in the office of Food Service Director William Hickey.

The coveted Ivy Award, the nation's top honor for institutional food, has been given this year to the Notre Dame Food Service for innovation and quality in dining pleasure.

"It's the Academy Award for food services," said Liz Adams, award program director for Restaurants and Institutions, the leading magazine in the industry and sponsor of the award.

But not just any Academy Award. Notre Dame Food Service has taken home the award for best picture.

"I am really proud of it and so is my staff," Hickey said yesterday. "The profession has recognized that good things are happening at Notre Dame."

The magazine receives nominations for the annual award during the summer, and readers select the recipients by mailing in a ballot published in a fall edition. To be placed on the ballot, a food service must receive at least four nominations from previous winners. Notre Dame's competition was Bowling Green University, Chemical Bank of New York, Continental Illinois Bank of Chicago, and Motorola Food Services of Schaumburg, Ill.

Restaurants and Institutions also gives an Ivy Award to the best hotel food service and restaurant.

Hickey said receiving the Ivy Award confirms that Notre Dame Food Service is fast becoming one of the best in American colleges. University of Illinois and Purdue University have also won an Ivy in the award's 14-year history.

But Purdue doesn't even serve carbonated beverages, Hickey said with a laugh yesterday. Coke is a once-a-year treat for the Boiler-makers.

"We think our institution is just as good as the Ivy League's," said Hickey, who ranks Yale and Cornell food services as industry models. "We go through a lot of extra effort. That's the difference; that's why we got the Ivy (over other schools)."

Cap'n Crunch Week didn't hurt. Although sponsored by the sophomore class, Hickey and his staff set up many of details for the fall fest, including the logistics for the eating contest.

Theme Nights at the dining halls and the Taste Of Notre Dame — an outdoor showing off of new food from national distributors — are other examples of Hickey's "extra effort."

"You can't just put up a Mexican poster and serve tacos and call that Mexican Night," Hickey said. "We go through a lot of hard work to create the right ambience."

In his 18 months as food service director, Hickey — who is a leading contender for the Silver Spoon award given by the International Food Manufacturers Association — has opened up the dining halls for dances.

He has revamped menu schedules and researched new ways of preparing food. One example is if you avoid quickly heating up a frozen breast of chicken, it will be much more tender.

Snow damages car during break

By ERIK HICKEY
News Staff

When sophomore Trent Rock went home for Christmas break, he left his '82 Camaro sitting peacefully in the D-2 parking lot. When he returned, the only sign of his car was a few inches of antenna protruding from a snow drift.

Rock, like a number of Notre Dame students, chose to leave his car in a University lot over break but was one of the unfortunate few to have his car damaged.

He contends that the weight of the snow piled on his car by a University snowplow caused considerable damage, although the car was not actually hit by a plow. The damage amounted to about $1300, said Rock, and included a dented hood and roof, broken louvers, windshield, and taillights; two blown right tires, and suspension and alignment problems.

University grounds crew official William Thistlethwaite disputes Rock's claim, saying only 10-15 percent of the snow resulted from plowing. Thistlethwaite said the corner of D-2 where Rock's car was parked normally collects a lot of drifting snow.

Rock said the grounds crew was unable to answer his questions as to the unusual drift pattern of snow in D-2. He claims that at least 70 percent of the snow on his car was due to snowplowing. When asked of the possibility of a lawsuit, Rock replied, "I probably won't sue. Hopefully it won't go that far. They've been really good about it."

Rock has discussed his case with both Campus Security and University insurance representatives. He claims Security furnished shovels, but not shovelers, and that he and his friends spent three days digging the car out.

A 'dream comes true' for faculty as Decio Hall nears completion

By FRANK LIPO
News Staff

The Decio Faculty Hall, for more than 20 years a dream for the College of Arts and Letters, is now nearing completion. Its construction is right on schedule and it will be a "very, very effective office building," said Physical Plant Director Don Dedrick.

The $6.2 million facility is the gift of Arthur J. Decio, president of Skyline Corporation and a University trustee. It was designed by Ellerbe and Ellerbe, and Carl J. Reinke and Sons is the general contractor. Located behind O'Shaughnessy Hall on the Southeast Quad, it consists of three four-story sections, encompassing 75,000 square feet.

According to Dedrick, the north section of the building will be completed first and is scheduled to be furnished Feb. 7 or 8. The south section will be ready for furnishing March 1, while the central section is to be furnished April 1. While the cold wave affected the rest of us, Dedrick said it had "little effect" on the construction because "95-98 percent of the building was weatherproof" before the cold struck. The permanent heating units are operating in the north and south sections while there is a temporary unit operating in the central section.

Roger Skurski, associate dean of the College of Arts and Letters, was also enthusiastic about the building. All of the college's faculty, except the Art, Music, and Psychology Departments, which have their own buildings, will occupy the 250 offices. Skurski hopes the social space will allow the faculty of the different departments to mix.

There are also several seminar rooms, a conference room, a computer terminal room and lounges, and the Helen Kellogg Institute for International Studies will be housed in the building. "The space that is there is effectively used," said Skurski.

All of the department chairmen of the College of Arts and Letters were invited to an official inspection tour last Tuesday. Skurski reports a very favorable faculty response to the tour.

When the Memorial Library was built in 1963, the basement office space was viewed as temporary. Now that permanent offices are a reality, the faculty may find many of their special features worth waiting for.

Both Dedrick and Skurski spoke proudly of the many features of the individual offices. Each has a large picture window and a smaller window that can be opened, as well as a controllable heating unit, a large built-in bookcase, carpeting, a corkboard strip and a built-in worktable by the window. A new desk, a filing cabinet and two chairs will also be provided.

For allocation of offices, Skurski asked each department chairman whether he would prefer the offices of his department in one block or scattered throughout the building. He also asked if they preferred a particular section or floor. After making a general chart for office allocation, he left the individual office assignments to the department chairpersons.

After the central section is completed, Skurski hopes to occupy the building as soon as possible. He said he "won't be able to move everyone simultaneously, but we'd like to move everyone in before graduation."

What about the vacated basement of the library? Dean Skurski said the administration is still evaluating this space to determine its future use. He said the library will need some of the

ND/SMC pro-lifers join DC protest march

By BUD LUEPKE

Notre Dame and Saint Mary's Pro-Lifers joined an estimated crowd of 70,000 in the nation's capitol Monday to protest the Supreme Court's 1973 decision to legalize abortions.

The Pro-Life Club of Saint Mary's and Notre Dame, headed by John May and Dan Harrington, took a busload of over 50 people to Washington D.C. to participate in the demonstration. Support was not a problem as limited bus space prevented many more students from going. Terry Donovan, a club member who made the trip, said "people were calling from Chicago to go, and John (May) got a lot of requests from other students around campus. There's much more support than people realize." Donovan said students from Valparaiso University also went on the Notre Dame trip.

Support was again evident in Washington D.C. The protesters flooded Constitution Avenue during the march from the Washington Monument to the steps of the Supreme Court. "I've never seen so many people," said Cecilia Smith, another club member. Donovan said that the crowd, which has always been large, was slightly larger this year, and noted that support for the pro-life movement is as strong now as it was 11 years ago. In Donovan's words, "It was phenomenal."

In Brief

Almost 200 Circle K-ers from more than ten states will be on campus this weekend to participate in the annual Midwest Leadership Training Conference at the Center for Continuing Education. Sessions will be conducted all day Saturday and will be led by Tim Clipson from the Texas-Oklahoma District of Circle K. Speakers will include Dr. Kathleen Turner from Notre Dame's Department of Communications and Susan Prieto from Counseling and Psychological Services. Other events during the weekend include a party tonight and an excursion to Bendix Woods tomorrow. Information on the weekend may be obtained from Wes Gainey, president of Notre Dame's Circle K. — The Observer

To restore quiet to the library University of Wisconsin-Madison officials designated five study halls as quiet areas with only one left for talking. Smoking areas were reduced, and access to the building will be more carefully monitored. In recent years, student socializing and an influx of "street people" have destroyed the proper research atmosphere. — The Observer

The Annual Keenan Revue will take place February 1, 3, and 4 in the O'Laughlin Auditorium at St. Mary's. Two tickets per person will be distributed this Sunday at 4 p.m. at the Student Union Record Store and the box office at O'Laughlin Auditorium. The dorm voted 80 percent to 20 percent for three shows this year, according to director Randy Fahs. Nearly 250 of the dorm's 300 members are involved in the show in some respect. Since tickets are free, other means are used to try to break even on production costs. If Fahs succeeds in covering all costs, it will be the first time in the eight year history of the Revue. Fahs said that Student Activities donates $1000, and the Keenan Revue Raffle raises approximately $900. The rest of the $3500 needed comes from donations, T-shirt sales, and advertising in the program. — The Observer

An American woman traveling with her family along the Pan-American Highway in eastern El Salvador was shot to death yesterday, said a Roman Catholic priest who administered the last rites. The priest, who asked not to be named, said people believed to be leftist guerrillas fired on the vehicle carrying the woman, her husband and several children between El Divisadero and Santa Rosa de Lima, about 127 miles east of San Salvador. The priest said the other members of the family did not appear to be injured. He said the woman was an American, but her name was not available immediately. — AP

Justin Dart, a multimillionaire industrialist and a one-time member of President Reagan's "kitchen cabinet," died yesterday of heart failure at age 76. Dart joined United Rexall Drugs in Boston at age 34 and the following year became its president. He moved the company to Los Angeles and turned it into Dart Industries. In 1980, he merged Dart Industries with Kraft Inc., producer of foodstuffs. Chicago-based Dart & Kraft Inc. is the nation's 27th largest industrial firm. — AP

Harold B. Minor, 81, the U.S. Ambassador to Lebanon in the early 1950s, died Wednesday of an apparent heart attack. Minor served as ambassador in Beirut from 1952 to 1953. Political passions past?

President Reagan is expected to announce his plans for re-election Sunday night. While this is no surprise to anyone, it officially signals the beginning of the 1984 presidential race.

But there will be something missing in this election, something that was also noticeably absent in the 1980 election. It seems as though there is a definite lack of interest in the issues relevant to the campaigns on the part of voters. Nowhere is this lack of concern more evident than in the once exciting and striving political groups on the campuses of the nation's universities.

And Notre Dame could be the definitive campus in this saddening turn of events.

This year's candidates will have to succumb to playing off of each other's faults rather than taking strong sides on controversial issues. This will most likely confuse rather than assist the voter in his or her choice since the issues will never honestly be confronted until after the first Tuesday in November.

But it wasn't always this way. Some may remember back to 1976 when the no-name challenger, Jimmy Carter, took on the staid and somewhat boring incumbent administration of Gerald Ford. But in this election the drama of an all-out presidential race was again not completely at its peak.

To get the full force of how powerful this tradition of American government can be, and what kind of effect it can have on the average voter we have to go back twelve years.

In the 1972 race to the White House, the two candidates, President Richard Nixon and Sen. George McGovern, D-S.D., embroiled the nation in two of the most exciting and written-about campaigns in American history. Interest in the issues was relevant then. They were so relevant, in fact, that both campaigns involved people who were emotionally-driven and often militant in their attempts to get their man in the White House.

In 1972, American troops were still fighting Communists in the jungles of Vietnam, members of the Committee to Re-Elect the President (CREEP) were being tied to the burglarly and attempted bugging of Democratic national headquarters in the Watergate hotel, and the nation was still recoiling from the turbulence of the 1960's.

Emotions ran deep in '72. Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., visited the campus to rally support for the Democrats, as did Sargeant Shriver. And an English professor named Donald P. Costello (now chairman of the American Studies department) submitted an article

Dan McCullough

Assistant News Editor

Inside Friday

to The Observer titled "Why I'm for George McGovern." In it, Costello wrote:

"If we weren't all academic intellectuals who live in the world of symbol, perhaps we wouldn't be tempted to connect Nixon with the fact that America has acquired a plastic soul. . . . Listen to the President's words sometime. He speaks of peace 'with honor.' He means saving face instead of saving lives. He means keeping an eye on history instead of on human suffering."

It is obvious that this type of emotion which played a vital role in the 1972 presidential election is as extinct as the dinosaurs.

Today, Costello describes himself as "more cautious" in expressing his political position. "The issues don't have the same type of passion causing responses," he says. "I don't think I'd phrase (plastic souls) that way anymore."

Rather, in 1984 Costello sees the student as not particularly politically active because the issues don't directly affect them the way they did in '72. "Troops sitting in Lebanon is not anything like the emotional issue of kill or being killed. An awful lot of the passion in that article was caused by my friends who were over there (Vietnam) killing. And if they didn't, they'd go to jail. Be killed, kill, or go to jail."

As Costello said, "I look forward to the time when I can write a letter of reference for a student and tell the company that the student was an activist, and it will be taken as a compliment."

Perhaps someday soon the pendulum will swing back toward the left a little and campus activism will gain renewed popularity. Hopefully, students will not feel so confined by the scrutiny of their peers and by the fear of projecting a negative image towards potential employers.

Until then, however, we'll just have to look toward the past for example rather than to the present for action.

Mexico program offers cultural experience

By PAT SAIN
Senior Staff Reporter

Are you tired of battling snow on your way to the library to study? Does South Bend's dazzling social and cultural life leave you yawning?

Notre Dame's Mexico Program may be the answer to your problems. The program, offered with the International Center at Iberoamericana, has two options, a sophomore year-long program and a junior one-semester program.

There will be an information meeting for those considering the one-semester option on Monday, January 30, at 6:30 p.m., in the coffee house at the Center for Social Concerns.

The program is offered during both the fall and spring semesters, and takes place on the campus of the Universidad Iberoamericana, a private university just outside Mexico City.

Courses are chosen to take advantage of local offerings and staff and to fulfill as many as possible of the requirements of the Notre Dame curriculum.

The normal course load is 15 credits, earned in special courses recommended for Notre Dame students and in electives available from additional offerings of the International Center, and appropriate courses from the curriculum of Universidad Iberoamericana.

A unique aspect of the curriculum at Iberoamericana is the Social Analysis Seminar on the economic, social, and political problems of Mexico. The course is a requirement for the one-semester program and emphasizes personal contact with people living and working in poor areas.

Students live with families chosen by the International Center, since residential universities are rare in Mexico. Because they live in the city, students will have frequent contact with local people.

Mexico City offers rich cultural opportunities. Mexican folklore, dance and music is world-reknown, and the countryside shows the evidence of former great cultures. Mexico City also has the museums, opera, theater, and libraries of any other nation's capital.

The cost of the program, including transportation to and from Mexico City is the same as that paid by the average student living on the Notre Dame campus. Most financial aid scholarships continue as at Notre Dame, although students must pay for books, snacks, and incidentals.

Both Notre Dame and Saint Mary's students are eligible for the program, although intermediate-level Spanish is required. All candidates must have a strong overall average and at least a B in Spanish.

Interested students should contact Dr. Isabel Charles in the Foreign Study Office, or Marcia LeMay, coordinator of Latin America Programs.

French fighter jet downed in Chad

Associated Press

PARIS — The downing of a French jet in Chad and an attack on a government post have reopened the civil war that has been stalemated since the French intervention last summer.

France blamed Libya for the loss of the plane and pilot in Wednesday's attack. But Libya, which supports the rebels of former Chad President Goukouni Oueddei, said the attack was carried out by Goukouni's forces and warned against any intervention by "foreign parties."

An armored column from northern rebel-held territory crossed into government-held territory Wednesday, shot down a French Jaguar fighter-jet and its pilot, and hit a Mirage F1 fighter, the French government says. The pilot was the first French fatality since French forces entered on the government side Aug. 9.

In N'Djamena, Chad's Information Minister Mahamat Soumalia said the attack on the government garrison at Zigueye was carried out by a "large Libyan column."

The French intervention force, sent to halt a rebel drive, stopped the rebels and an estimated 3,500 Libyans, but never attempted to drive the intruders back into Libya.

Since that time, an unwritten truce has been in effect, with French forces deployed along the 15th parallel across the middle of Chad. The rebels and their Libyan backers remained north of the line, and the government troops of President Hissene Habre — supported by France and the United States, remained south.

Restaurants and Institutions will be on campus in three weeks to do a feature on Hickey and his staff. The trade magazine with a circulation of 127,000 will hold an awards banquet on May 20.

Self-help sessions on how to cope with the tensions and aggravations of college life, slated to begin Jan. 31, will be sponsored by the Counseling and Psychological Services Center — not the Student Health Center as reported in yesterday's Observer.

The groups will be led by professional staff members of the center and doctoral students in the counseling and psychology program, according to Luis Valdes, counselor and coordinator of Outreach.

Three programs will be offered. The first, focusing on building self-esteem, will begin Jan. 31. On Feb. 5, a stress management session will start, and on March 26 an assertiveness training course will begin. The first two dates were reported incorrectly yesterday.

Sign ups for Outreach will take place during registration for Free University, Jan. 30 from 7 to 10 p.m. in the LaFortune Ballroom. Those interested may also sign up by contacting the Counseling and Psychological Services Center directly.

Paper pulls 'Far Side,' citing violent humor

Associated Press

FORT WAYNE, Ind. — The cartoon feature, "The Far Side," was pulled from the Fort Wayne News-Sentinel after the newspaper's managing editor complained it showed "the humor of violence."

But after readers complained, the editor started a contest asking "Far Side" fans to participate in an effort to see if the strip should be reinstated.

The strip was pulled from its slot on the front page on Dec. 5. Managing Editor Joe Weiler said he felt the cartoon "too frequently played to the humor of violence."

In a December edition, Weiler asked readers whether the comic should return to the News-Sentinel.

"Let us know in a Far Side-esque manner whether you want the cartoon back," Weiler wrote.

The reader who submitted the best and the most Far Side-like plea by noon Dec. 22 received an original drawing by Gary Larson, the 33-year old Seattle artist who draws the comic.

"Too frequently I just didn't understand it," Executive Editor Steward Spencer explained. "It baffled me."

"That's just because he's quite normal," said Larson, in a telephone interview from his Seattle home.

"I don't understand all these things myself," said the cartoonist, who will be speaking Tuesday night at Notre Dame. "That's a healthy outlook."

Larson added, "The cartoon is directed at an adult readership, and I think most people can sense there's no malice underneath it. It's a healthy bent, just like slapstick comedy when someone gets a pie thrown in his face. Saturday morning cartoon shows are far more violent than The Far Side."

Since the cartoon's disappearance, the newspaper reported receiving calls and letters asking that it be restored.

"That's the only reason I subscribed to the paper," one caller complained.

The last view readers in Fort Wayne got of the cartoon was of a grinning clown sandwiched between two frowning guards.

The caption: "I don't think I'll be able to tell the kids about this one," says one of the guards as they lead the clown to an electric chair.

Larson, whose 3-year old cartoon appears in more than 110 daily newspapers, said he didn't even know it was running on the front page in Fort Wayne.

"I certainly would have been proud of that," he added.

Soviet Union expands Cuban navy; delivers new submarine and frigate

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Soviet Union has increased the size of Cuba's navy and MiG-23 fighter force for the first time in several years, U.S. intelligence sources said yesterday.

A 2,300-ton Soviet-built frigate and a 2,100-ton diesel-powered submarine were delivered in recent days in Havana, said the sources who spoke only on condition they remain anonymous.

In addition, the sources said crates believed to contain fuselages of three new MiG-23 Flogger jet fighters were seen early this month at an airfield southwest of Havana.

These planes are the first of their type sent by the Soviets to Cuba since 1982 and will bring to about 35 the number of these modern fighters in the Cuban air force, the sources said.

The Koni-class frigate is the second such warship provided by the Soviet Union for Cuba's growing navy. The first Koni frigate joined the Cuba fleet in August, 1981.

The additional Foxtrot submarine is the third vessel of that class provided by the Soviet Union to Cuba. The two earlier attack subs arrived in Cuba in 1979 and 1980.

The Cuban navy totals about 125 ships, mostly missile-armed attack boats, torpedo boats and patrol ships.

Although the Cuban navy is tiny when compared with that of the United States, it is the largest of any owned by nations in the Caribbean area. A number of small Caribbean island states have expressed concern about expanding Cuban naval and air power.

The Cuban navy, trained by Soviet naval advisers, has joined from time to time in exercises with visiting Soviet warships in the Gulf of Mexico.

The United States is sensitive to any hostile naval presence in the Caribbean and Gulf of Mexico because, senior naval officers have said, significant U.S. ship lanes run through those waters.

Among other things the U.S. Navy has called attention to flights by Soviet Bear reconnaissance bombers from Cuba out over waters where U.S. Navy vessels operate. Last March, it was reported that the Soviet Union had deployed to Cuba two bombers equipped for anti-submarine warfare. Deployments of such planes from the Soviet Union occur periodically.

In another intelligence report bearing on the Caribbean and Central America, sources said Soviet tankers recently delivered about 10,000 barrels of aviation fuel and 15,000 barrels of kerosene to the Nicaraguan port of Corinto.

There were reports also that Soviet tankers were expected to unload about 240,000 barrels of crude oil at Puerto Sandino, Nicaragua.

These shipments were taken by U.S. intelligence specialists as fresh evidence of Soviet support for the Sandinista government of Nicaragua, which has been plagued by rebels who have attacked and destroyed coastal oil facilities among their targets.

Cranston tries for third place in iowa primary

Associated Press

CARROLL, Iowa — Television lights flooded the stage of the Holy Spirit School gymnasium and reporters crowded the bleachers as former Vice President Walter F. Mondale spoke at the annual dinner of Carroll County Democrats.

When Mondale finished, Sen. Alan Cranston rose to speak.

With a loud clatter, the television crews packed their equipment and the reporters stampeded for a waiting press bus to accompany Mondale to his next stop.

That left the Carroll County Democrats and exactly two reporters — no floodlights, no crowded press section.

The California senator insists such incidents don't discourage him, but they do throw into sharp relief the state of his campaign for the Democratic presidential nomination.

Front-runner Mondale, with his silver-streaked shock of hair, his Secret Service agents and his ever-present press entourage, projects an aura of success.

The lanky Cranston, with his jokes about his baldness, his meager retinue and his earnest warnings about the arms race, comes across as a man trying for third place.

That, in fact, is exactly what he says he is doing. Over and over, on his most recent tour of Iowa, he told audiences that his objective is to win a "clear" third in the state's Feb. 20 precinct caucuses and in New Hampshire's presidential primary on Feb. 28.

That, he argues, would put him in a better position to overtake the more conservative Glenn in later primaries and then go head-to-head with his fellow liberal Mondale.

Sergio Bendixen, Cranston's campaign manager, concedes "it will be difficult in Iowa . . . and even more difficult in New Hampshire" for Cranston to emerge in a "clear fashion" as the winner among the second-tier candidates.

"In spite of the organization, Cranston is still an unknown quantity here," says Chuck Gifford, political director of the United Auto Workers, which supports Mondale. "That is awfully hard to overcome on a personal basis."

Yet Cranston soldiers on, slogging through his third Iowa winter since announcing in December 1981 that he was considering a race for the White House.

On a flight from Des Moines to Council Bluffs, he tells a reporter he is not disturbed by the relative lack of press attention. Of the Carroll County meeting, he says, "I was there for the Iowans."

He says he chose to pass up Secret Service protection, at least for now, because, "It keeps you from the people," and would interfere with the small, informal meetings he likes to hold.

Yes, he says later, he will make "major efforts to make significant cuts in aspects of military spending."

No, he says, he does not see "evidence of any significant progress in dealing with the underlying problems of the economy."

Official leaks confidential data

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — An Interior Department official passed confidential data to a coal company lawyer more than a month before the federal agency auctioned more than 1 billion tons of federally owned coal, The Washington Post said in today's editions.

The Post said Interior official David Russell told the lawyer, Brent Kunz of Cheyenne, Wyo., the minimum amount the agency would accept as a bid from his company, Texas Energy Services Inc. of Cheyenne, on a large coal tract being put up for auction. The newspaper quoted what it said were sworn statements in a report by the Interior Department's inspector general.

The inspector general referred his report to the Justice Department, which concluded in November that the case did not warrant criminal prosecution, the newspaper said.

Interior Secretary William P. Clark removed Russell from his job last month as director of the Minerals Management Service. Russell's removal was part of a departmental shake-up of former top deputies to ex-Secretary James Watt.

The Post said Russell is quoted in the report as denying that he passed the information to Kunz and that Russell says he has "no idea" why Kunz claims Russell did so.

The newspaper report says Russell volunteered the information on a tract sought by Texas Energy and two others, without mentioning that it was confidential, the Post said. The tract in the Powder River Basin of Wyoming was put on the auction block in April 1982.

Interior Department spokesman Tom DeRocco said he was unfamiliar with the agency report.

Pendley also was removed from his post in last month's shake-up.

Initially Rock met with Dean Roemer, who turned the case over to an insurance representative.

The University's Fort Wayne insurance claims manager, according to Rock, first assured him that he would receive a check by the end of January, but now argues that there is some question as to the University's liability in the case.

There was no warning that such an event might occur, according to Rock. He said that prior to Christmas break, "I went to ask the security department if it would be possible to park in front of Stepan Center. They told me to park in D-2. I asked where and was just told 'anywhere.'"

Rock said the plow avoided a similar car parked nearby. He parked near the back fence, but said there were also 30 to 40 cars in the middle portion of the lot.

Rock suggested that certain lots be set aside in the future for parking over break, and forms of some type filed with security in order to prevent the same kind of mishap. He also agreed that hauling the snow might be another alternative.

Two Cuban soldiers bargain for clothing at a bazaar in Dire Dawa, Ethiopia, recently. There is no sign yet that the Cuban army force around this 80-year-old railway town, where several units are based, is breaking camp, but in Addis Ababa, the capital, Western diplomats predict a withdrawal of as much as half the Cuban presence.

Assassins cannot kill memory of Kerr

Editor's note: This is the second in a two-part series on the assassination of Malcolm Kerr, president of the American University in Beirut.

Patrick Gaffney

Guest column

Regardless of the timing for the withdrawal from Lebanon, and the eventual face-saving excuse which will justify it, Beirut is more than a passing headache. For many, it is, has been and hopefully will continue to be a home.

Malcolm Kerr, a highly respected teacher, scholar and extremely popular administrator belonged to this group. For this reason his murderers, as time will tell, got the wrong man.

It was their failure to recognize the depth of his personal devotion and the quality of his proven commitment to the welfare of Lebanon that was their most serious structure mistake.

The real tribute to Kerr is not simply to abandon what is now clearly an impossible program and a distasteful entanglement but to learn to live in and to deeply appreciate a world of wonderful differences, even if they are far away from headlines.

Long after Lebanon has been relegated to the journalistic oblivion of Iran, Afghanistan and Chad, the memory of Malcolm Kerr will summon people to seek wisdom.

Kerr's most widely known book, a veritable best seller of its genre, is entitled The Arab Cold War. It is being used this semester in a course taught in our anthropology department.

In the preface of that marvelous book, there is a casual, but revealing analogy that includes an explicit local allusion:

Since June, 1967, Arab politics have ceased to be fun. In the good old days most Arabs refused to take themselves very seriously, and this made it easier to take a relaxed view of the few who possessed intimation of some immortal mission. It was like watching Princeton play Columbia on a muddy afternoon.

The June war was like a disastrous game against Notre Dame which Princeton impulsively added to its schedule, leaving several players crippled for life and the others so embittered that they took to fighting viciously among themselves instead of scrimmaging happily as before.

This may be instructive for the student of politics, but as one who all his life has had friendships and memories among the Arabs to cherish, I have found no relish in describing it.

The first time I met Malcolm Kerr, in Cairo, several years ago, I happened to remind him of this remark and I told him that it had stuck in my memory because Notre Dame was my school. He shared my small delight at finding an unexpected mention of my alma mater.

But then there followed a more distracted air as though the real meaning conveyed by this simile returned to him. He replied with only half a smile, "And I'm from Princeton."

Finally, let me give Malcolm himself the last word. His commendation of Albert Hourani, another great scholar of Near Eastern society and culture, applies to himself: "The effort to comprehend an alien culture is surely a worthy tradition in itself; the important thing is to do it with receptivity and imagination, as well as with skill."

Father Patrick D. Gaffney is a professor in the Department of Anthropology at Notre Dame.

The real threat of 1984 at Notre Dame

Although the year is only 27 days old, many people are tired of George Orwell's 1984.

The book, embossed with a commemorative seal, has climbed to number one on several bestseller lists around the country. And businessmen have been more than happy to join the fun, hawking posters and T-shirts with Star-Wars-like abandon.

Keith Picher

Profundity's demise

At Notre Dame and Saint Mary's, as on any campus, mentioning 1984 has become the "in thing." The latest fad is 1984 parties where students wear drab clothes or the garb of their favorite University official.

While students are quick to equate administrators with the Junior Anti-Sex League, Big Brother or the Thought Police, the comparisons are often shallow. In fact, the most lucid example of Orwell's world went, for the most part, unnoticed in yesterday's issue of The Observer.

It seems Student Activities wants each club president to submit a roster with the names and I.D.'s of all members so the University can have "concrete data to make statements about student involvement at Notre Dame."

James McDonnell, director of Student Activities, says such data "could assist in planning programs and activities while allowing us to come to an understanding of where we are at Notre Dame."

His motives sound pure enough. Admissions wants information to impress high school seniors with, and student activities wants to promote programs whose appeal is weak in particular colleges and classes.

For instance, if students in business didn't put in as much volunteer work as those in other colleges, the University would take special steps to promote such activities for that group. Not even the Party kept such close tabs on Winston Smith's volunteer activities.

It's not obvious that the University has any business collecting such data, much less asking club presidents to provide it. Unless the data is analyzed for hundreds of factors apart from class and college, the conclusions will be unscientific.

The real problem is that the University cannot collect information for groups without collecting that of individuals. If James McDonnell wants to know what senior philosophy majors do, he'll have to know exactly what I do.

Of course there's no reason to be threatened, right? Most students really wouldn't care if the entire world knew the clubs they belonged to.

Unfortunately, the University is planning to use similar tactics to find out more about us.

"New identification cards with all kinds of uses" will hit the campus next semester, McDonnell notes. Some of us aren't quite as ecstatic as he seems to be. The cards will enable the University to determine how many and which students attend concerts, dances, lectures and similar events.

Students really don't want to be bothered with more detex machines, especially when going to events like concerts, lectures and dances. But forget the inconvenience — how much personal information should we let the University stick its nose into?

The University certainly has no evil intentions, and probably would never use the information they collect on individual students for anything. What is not clear is whether they should even have access to such data.

Once again the administration is asking us to trust them. As long as everyone who works for the University is perfect, we have nothing to worry about. Some of us, however, are tired of having to trust administrators who obviously don't trust us.

Welcome to 1984.

Food marathon

Dear Editor:

In response to the recent articles in The Observer concerning the 10,000 calorie marathon, the Law School Administration and Student Bar Association would like to make clear that this was in no way a Law School sponsored or encouraged activity.

It was unfortunate that this coincided with the World Hunger Coalition's campaign. As president of the Bar Association I would like to state publicly that the Law School, the students and the administration support the goals and applauds the achievements of the campus World Hunger Coalition.

Lebanese government reinstates servicemen

Associated Press

BEIRUT, Lebanon — President Amin Gemayel's administration on yesterday bowed to demands by Druse leader Walid Jumblatt that the army reinstate Druse soldiers who refused to fight in civil warfare in September.

The reinstatement is designed to help revive a Saudi-sponsored security plan stalled by demands from Jumblatt, said Prime Minister Shafik Wazzan.

An estimated 500 to 800 Druse servicemen had refused to fight in the three weeks of fierce battling that pitted the army and Christian rightist militias against leftist Druse militiamen. The Druse sect's creed is based on Islam.

The Druse soldiers were relieved from active duty with the army, but will be reinstated by the army high command within 48 hours, Wazzan announced.

Promotions for the Druse soldiers — another demand by Jumblatt — will then be considered, Wazzan said following a conference with Gemayel and Foreign Minister Eli Salem at the presidential palace in suburban Baabda.

The prime minister said the action was taken in response to an appeal by Saudi Arabia's King Fahd.

The Lebanese government, backed by Saudi Arabia, is pushing a pacification plan designed to set up buffer zones that would separate the country's warring factions.

The deadlock over the plan and the lack of any progress toward a Moslem-Christian reconciliation have fueled fears among Western diplomats, Lebanese officials and citizens that a new round of civil war could break out any time.

A U.S. Embassy official denied rumors that the embassy was quietly advising Americans to leave Beirut for a while. But the official, who asked for anonymity, said that people who ask for embassy advice on security are advised to "reconsider their reasons for being here."

"They have to decide for themselves whether they really need to be in Beirut now," he said.

Meanwhile, Druse militiamen and government troops traded sporadic artillery and mortar fire yesterday under heavy rains in the hills above the U.S. Marine base southeast of Beirut. Police said no casualties were reported.

Deserted streets

Streets were again deserted in Beirut's Shiite Moslem southern suburbs yesterday, after fighting erupted between Shiite militiamen and the Lebanese Army in the area. This street is along Beirut's famous "Green Line" which separates the city's predominantly Moslem and Christian sectors.

After a prayer, the South Bend delegation heard Indiana Republican Sens. Richard Lugar and Dan Quayle speak. Both senators reiterated their support of the pro-life movement. Donovan said, "The senators are very pro-life. I think it's important for us to reinforce and encourage them to keep voting against abortion to show that their constituents are supporting them."

Donovan reported some senators said that a change of the Supreme Court decision is 10 years off. Progress is being made, as the movement has maintained the prevention of federal funding of abortions, and the present administration has shown promising signs. But, as both Smith and Donovan said, progress is slow.

When the weather beomes warm enough, the road and sidewalks will be laid in. The general consensus seems to be, as Dedrick said, that the faculty "will be very happy when moved in there."

Take Charge At 22.

In most jobs, at 22 you're near the bottom of the ladder.

In the Navy, at 22 you can be a leader. After just 16 weeks of leadership training, you're an officer. You'll have the kind of job your education and training prepared you for, and the decision-making authority you need to make the most of it.

As a college graduate and officer candidate, your Navy training is geared to making you a leader. There is no boot camp. Instead, you receive professional training to help you build the technical and management skills you'll need as a Navy officer.

This training is designed to instill confidence by first-hand experience. You learn by doing. On your first sea tour, you're responsible for managing the work of up to 30 men and the care of sophisticated equipment worth millions of dollars.

It's a bigger challenge and a lot more responsibility than most corporations give you at 22. The rewards are bigger, too. There's a comprehensive package of benefits, including special duty pay. The starting salary is $17,000—more than most companies would pay you right out of college. After four years, with regular promotions and pay increases, your salary will have increased to as much as $31,000.

As a Navy officer, you grow, through new challenges, new tests of your skills, and new opportunities to advance your education, including the possibility of attending graduate school while you're in the Navy.

Don't just take a job. Become a Navy officer, and take charge. Even at 22.

Letters to a Lonely God

A Catholic father

by Rev. Robert Griffin
features columnist

He was a middle-aged Catholic father brought up in an old-fashioned tradition. He and his wife had worried and sacrificed all their adult life to raise a large family, teaching them the Christian decencies and educating them through college and graduate school; loving each child and being patient with him or her; giving the family every advantage which would not spoil them. The couple had lived through rough times when money was short and when the father of the brood suffered heart attacks from the effects of tension and overwork.

Now, the oldest boy, six years out of Notre Dame, was living with a young woman without benefit of clergy. The father, knowing the ways of the world, wants to be patient and compassionate with his first-born. "I've been quiet for a year," he told me, "though I haven't liked the arrangement. My wife and I are fond of the young lady, and we've been hoping for a wedding. The time has come, I think, when I should tell my son he is living in an occasion of sin." His voice broke, as though he was close to tears.

I'm the family priest trying to be of help. Here was a middle-aged layman who has lived through the changes in the Catholic Church. He with his wife could have had a smaller family if they had compromised their Catholic consciences by practicing birth control. He had seen his own brother dispensed of his vows as a priest and married in a sacramental union blessed by the Church. Here he was, in this naughty and permissive world, this decade of collapsed traditions, declaring his faith in an old-fashioned morality, with its quaint, dated idiom, "living in an occasion of sin." I could have worshipped him for the graces he lives by. The fundamental decencies were never updated by Vatican II so far as I know. It was inspiring to hear this father willing to challenge his son's conscience with the absolutes of the Ten Commandments.

"He's driving me crazy," the father said. "He should marry the girl, or break off the relationship. I'm going to take him aside and tell him he's living in sin, though his mother and I would be happy to welcome his girlfriend as a member of the family."

He was hoping, I suspect, that I could lend him courage for the confrontation. He was also testing my approval and hoping for advice. "As a father," I said, "you can give your children any advice that you want to; you have earned that right. I would be careful, if I were you, of telling him he is living in sin. He may reject that. He may feel, in fact, that he's doing the best he can, being faithful to one woman at a time."

The young man, though he loves and respects his parents, was capable of laughing at his father. He enjoys dramatics enough so that he would remember as a highlight the time his father said: "You are living in sin." He might feel he had joined the great Irish tradition of lapsed sons like James Joyce or Eugene O'Neill who quarreled with their families over religion, and authors who have made a literary genre out of their disenchantments with the ancient faith that limits freedom. I could hear it being told as an anecdote: "The old man slipped me the word: 'You are living in sin.'" Such an episode is unlimited in the emotional mileage it offers. A Catholic son could cry himself to sleep for months remembering his mother's heart is broken because her baby has grown up to live in sin.

This traditional father blinked at me as though I were the new voice of tolerance in his reformed Church. "Don't you think he is living in sin?"

"Objectively, according to the old rules, his living arrangement is sinful," I said, because I don't know a more modern way of putting it. "In his conscience, where guilt lives, he may be very comfortable, not caring what the Catholic Church teaches."

"Should I go on saying nothing?" the father asked, "Not even pointing out that he's a bad example to his sisters and brothers?"

He is so great as a father. He must know better than any priest could tell him how to deal with his son, letting the young man know that he's into a lifestyle that is disappointing, compromising the values of the home and family in which he was raised. A grown man should be able to make his boy feel the paternal sadness because the boy is negligent of his own fulfillment as a husband and father, in company with a woman fulfilled in becoming a wife and mother. Parents, seriously Catholic, get into accusatory showdowns with their offspring, where kids feel that they are being nailed to the wall with denominational definitions. The tradition that underlies all definitions begins with a few verses at the beginning of "Genesis." A man leaves his father and mother in obedience to the mandate of God supporting creation.

The news of the sweetness of being parents should be passed on by the men and women who have been there. A Catholic father blessed with eight children should be wise enough to know that love is best when it is fruitful. He should be grieved if he has raised a son who lets himself be cheated of the joy of becoming a father himself, as though having children weren't an unrivalled benefit.

"You needn't quarrel with your son on behalf of the Church," I told him. I don't want the discussion between them to be as narrow as whether the boy is living in sin. The boy has other lessons than the Catholic one to learn from his parents.

In the limelight De Mornay returns to screen

Rebecca De Mornay has been signed to co-star with Michael O'Keefe in Neil Simon's "The Slugger's Wife," it was announced by Ray Stark, producer.

De Mornay most recently received much acclaim for her role in the hit, "Risky Business," in which she co-starred with Tom Cruise. She also appeared in Lynne Littman's film about nuclear holocaust, "Testament."

Keir Dullea and Douglas Rain will reprise their respective roles as Astronaut David Bowman and the voice of the H.A.L. 9000 computer in MGM's "2010," it was announced by Freddie Fields, head of worldwide theatrical production for MGM/UA Entertainment Co.

Roy Scheider, John Lithgow and Bob Balaban will portray American scientists who hope to learn the fate of Bowman, H.A.L. and the missing American interplanetary spacecraft, "Discovery."

MGM's "2010" is currently scheduled for a Christmas, 1984 release by MGM/UA Entertainment Co.

"In the limelight" is the most recent addition to Showcase. It will contain briefs about celebrities, movies, television and anyone or thing in the limelight.

"Sophie's Choice," starring Meryl Streep, will be shown tonight in the Engineering Auditorium. The film depicts the tragic story of Sophie, a survivor of a Nazi concentration camp, who struggles with the devastating secrets of her past. The trauma mounts as she must also confront the schizophrenic tendencies of her lover. Showings are at 7 and 9 p.m. and admission is $1.

The Friday Night Film Series presents the 1982 French film "Coup de Torchon" at 7:30 and 9:40 tonight in the Annenbun. Set in a dilapidated, colonial African village, "Coup" is the suspenseful story of the attempts of the town's ineffectual police officer to eliminate his enemies via murder. Admission is $2.

The intense thriller "Fail Safe" starring Henry Fonda will be shown tonight at The Center for Social Concerns at 7 and 9. Admission is free.

•NAZZ

Tonight John Kennedy and Joe Dolan will present a Nazz favorite — "Songs and Stories from the Pubs of Ireland," beginning at 9.

Par 3 will be performing Saturday night at 10. The band includes Rob Bayne, J.P. Keyes, Tim Keyes, and Scott O'Grady.

Chicago Ensemble to appear this Sunday

Special to The Observer

The University of Notre Dame Department of Music and University Artists Series will present the Chicago Ensemble in concert on Sunday, January 29 at 4 p.m. in the Annenbun Auditorium of the Snite Museum. The ensemble will perform the Prokofiev "Sonata in D Major" for Flute and Piano, the Brahms "Piano Quartet in C minor," and George Crumb's "Voice of the Whale." Also included on the program will be the Boccherini "Quintet in C Major" with violinist Laura Klugherz and cellist Karen Buranskas, both professors of Music at Notre Dame. General admission is $2, and $1 for students.

In their sixth season together, the Chicago Ensemble has delighted critics and audiences alike. Gerald Rizzer, pianist and Artistic Director, received his B.A. in Music from the University of Chicago, was a Ditson Fellowship winner at Yale University where he received his master's degree, and was a postgraduate student at the Juilliard School of Music. Susan Levitin, flutist, is a graduate of the Eastman School of Music. In 1981 Mrs. Levitin was a soloist with the Chicago String Ensemble and has appeared on the Dame Myra Hess Concert Series at the Chicago Cultural Center. Michael Masters, cellist, first prize winner of the Portuguese "Costa del Sol" Cello Competition, principal cellist at the Spoleto (Italy) Festival and recording artist on Elektra-Asylum records, has earned international stature. He is on the faculty at the University of Wisconsin, Parkside, and The Wisconsin Conservatory of Music.

Notre Dame hockey co-captain Brent Chapman, here scoring one of his 19 goals so far this season, will lead the Irish into Ames, Ia., this weekend as they face the Cyclones off Iowa State. For more on the weekend series, see Scott Bicha's story below.

Hockey team travels to Iowa State

By SCOTT BICHA
Sports Writer

After a non-league encounter on Wednesday night with Lake Forest, which saw the Notre Dame hockey team's record fall to 15-1-0, the icers are on the road again. This weekend the Irish are in Ames, Ia. to take on the Iowa State Cyclones in two Central States Collegiate Hockey League contests.

In Wednesday night's game with the Foresters, the Irish lead 6-5 after two periods but Lake Forest stormed back with four goals in the third for a 9-6 win.

Although no updated league standings are available, Iowa State is expected to provide one of the biggest challenges on the Notre Dame league schedule.

The Iowa State program is just 12 years old, but in the past four years it has won two CSCHL titles to its credit.

"Iowa State has had a fine program over the years," says Notre Dame coach Lefty Smith. "They're one of the better club teams around. We'll have our work cut out for us."

The series will mark the first meeting ever between the two schools.

Still out of action for the Irish will be left wing Steve Ely. Ely has two more games remaining on his suspension which came as a result of fights during last weekend's encounter with St. Norbert. Joe Bowie, who scored two of the six goals in Wednesday's 9-6 loss to Lake Forest, moves up from left defense to replace Ely at left wing.

A lot of scoring punch will come in handy this weekend. And, as has been the case through most of the season, co-captain Brent Chapman is the leader in this department. He has accumulated 45 points on 19 goals and 26 assists. Mike Metzler is next with 17 goals and 17 assists. Third in scoring is Adam Parsons, who has 13 goals and 20 assists for 33 points.

The goaltending duties will rest with Tim Lukenda tonight. He has an impressive 2.22 goals against average. Smith still is unsure as to who will guard the nets tomorrow night.

As the Irish skate out on to the ice tonight and Saturday, the only thing that will be on their minds is improving their already impressive 9-0-0 CSCHL slate.

SMC swimmers open by breaking records

By KATHLEEN NICHOLSON
Sports Writer

Since his arrival at Saint Mary's College in the fall of 1982, coach Scott Trees, a Notre Dame graduate student, has worked hard to build a strong swimming program for the Belles. The seventeen member team, composed of only four upperclassmen, is now by far the largest team on the Saint Mary's campus.

Trees has six of his all-Americans returning this year, as well as last year's Moose Krause Award winner for the Notre Dame/Saint Mary's athlete of the year, senior captain Gail Casey, so prospects are bright.

On Dec. 10, Casey showed her talent against Valparaiso by winning the 50 and 100-yard breaststrokes, while being out-touched in the 100-yard individual medley. Sophomore Amy Studer managed to set a new varsity record against Valpo with her first place finish in the 200-yard individual medley.

Freshman Kathleen Kennedy chalked up even more points for the Belles in the meet, finishing first in the 50-yard breaststroke. Still, Saint Mary's fell six points short, losing 73-67.

The Belles bounced back against Albion College on Dec. 14, winning 78-57. Studer lead the team with three personal firsts — in the 100-yard backstroke, and in the 50 and 100-yard fly, the last of which was in record-breaking time.

Casey added two more firsts, in the 50-yard breaststroke and 100-yard individual medley, while teammates Rosie Whalen and Ellen Byrne copped firsts in the 50-yard backstroke and 100-yard freestyle, respectively.

Freshman standout Jennifer Hirschfeld took first in both the diving events, setting a new varsity record on the three-meter board. The 200-yard freestyle relay composed of Casey, Studer, Byrne, and freshman Barb Dorini also set a new varsity record to conclude a smashing meet for the women.

Christmas break has no vacation for the Belles, as they headed south to Ft. Lauderdale for two weeks of intense training.

"They're an amazing team, very self-motivated and always giving their best," comments Trees on his team. "We're considerably better than we were last year."

Heading north on Jan. 15, the girls splashed back into action on the 21st in a dual meet against Adrian and Calvin. Three varsity records were broken and seven first places were captured.

Casey was a triple winner, taking the 50-yard breaststroke, 50-yard fly, and 100-yard individual medley. Studer, swimming a total of 106 laps in the meet, won the 1650-yard freestyle and the 400-yard individual medley in record time, as well as the 500-yard freestyle.

Whalen took another first in the 100-yard backstroke and freshman Michelle Mannion was the last one to break a record in the meet, winning the 200-yard breaststroke.

Saint Mary's went on to defeat Adrian, 115-20, while losing to Calvin, 83-65.

Tomorrow the Belles meet DePauw University for what should prove to be yet another record smashing meet.

form before the season started," he admits.

The mere fact that Sluby has done so well this year — he is averaging 16.1 points on 56-percent shooting prior to tomorrow's game with Maryland — is not all that surprising to Phelps, though.

"When Tommy plays with that intensity and aggressiveness," says Phelps, "there's not too many people who can stop him. Tommy knows that and it's getting him into a groove."

It's games like tomorrow's when Notre Dame needs Sluby the most. The senior is expected by almost everyone, including Phelps, to take charge and produce when needed.

"Sluby's got to come through for us," Phelps says. "He's got to get 20, 24 points in a big game for us. He just has to. That's our offense. We call plays for him, we want him with the ball, and we don't think people can stop him when he's in the groove.

"He's got to become the leader in (important) situations. I've forced him to be the star, so to speak."

Don't think Sluby doesn't realize this, either.

"Sometimes when he wants me to get the ball I can kind of sense it," Sluby remarks. "Still, I don't go out there thinking about pressure. I just want to relax and have some fun."

So far this season, but especially since Notre Dame's four-game road trip began on Jan. 4, Sluby has met Phelps' challenge to be the star. He has already scored 30 more points this season than he did in his entire sophomore and junior seasons combined, and needs only 56 more points to surpass the combined point total of his three previous seasons.

Yet, despite the way he has come on as a player this year, Sluby has no preconceptions that he can one day play in the NBA. Presently the senior in the College of Arts and Letters is planning other possible options. He has applied for a scholarship at MBA school and is taking part in some job interviews.

"I wouldn't mind playing but I'm not sure what will happen," says Sluby. "I'm just going to sit back and wait."

And waiting is something that Sluby has has to do a lot in his career at Notre Dame.

IRISH SEA COMES IN

The Observer/Paul Cifarelli

Notre Dame basketball coach Digger Phelps is hoping that there's lots of noise as well as an "Irish Sea" in the ACC tomorrow afternoon when Notre Dame squares off with Maryland. For more on Phelps' expectations, see Mike Sullivan's column on page 16.

Irish women to face Evansville

The Notre Dame women's basketball team will try to end its four-game losing streak when North Star Conference opponent Evansville visits the ACC tonight at 7:30.

Coach Mary DiStanislao will be looking for the right combination of players to get her squad back to the level of performance that it showed briefly during the early part of the year.

In order to get things rolling, however, the Irish must get past the Aces from Evansville. Early in the year, this game appeared to be a breather, but with Notre Dame standing at 6-10, the game has become extremely important. Tougher opponents like DePaul, which beat the Irish by 16 last week, lie just around the corner.

The key to the game will be Notre Dame's ability to control Evansville's two excellent guards. Shelly Brand, a 5-9 junior, and Barb Dykstra, a 5-7 sophomore, average a combined 33 points a game to account for a large chunk of the Evansville offense.

Giving the guards help inside will be a front line that has only one player over 5-9. Jenny Schulz, who at 5-9 is easily the smallest center the Irish have gone up against, will try to use her quickness to outmaneuver the taller Irish players. She will get some help from 6-0 freshman Karen Baney.

Likewise, the Evansville forwards will have to try to outmaneuver their much taller counterparts. Freshmen Lisa Martin and Bobbi Jo Lovell, junior Denise Spear, and senior Marty Niehaus will fill out the front line.

Besides superior size, the Irish have a big advantage being at home. The Aces, under Coach Linda Wambach, have not fared particularly well on the road this year, posting a 2-7 mark. On the other hand, Notre Dame has dropped two in a row at home.

Nevertheless, DiStanislao has promised some changes and, if they play well, the Irish could get back on the winning track by the time DePaul comes to the ACC on Monday.

$375,000 indoor tennis tournament

Lendl, McEnroe reach third round

Associated Press

Top seed Ivan Lendl and No. 2 seed and defending champion John McEnroe scored decisive third-round victories yesterday in the $375,000 U.S. Pro Indoor tennis tournament.

Lendl served 10 aces and allowed Tim Gullikson only 18 points in a 43-minute match that the Czech won 6-1, 6-2.

Wimbledon champion McEnroe beat 15th-seeded Scott Davis by an identical score in a match that took 20 minutes longer than Lendl's.

Third-seeded Yannick Noah and eight-seeded Eliot Teltscher also won matches last night.

Earlier yesterday, second-year pro Brad Gilbert upset ninth-seeded Johan Kreik. No. 4 seed Jimmy Arias, No. 11 seed Tomas Smid of Czechoslovakia and unseeded Wojtek Fibak of Poland were also victorious.

Gullikson, after winning the second game of the first set, lost the next five, taking only seven points in the set.

Lendl swept the first four games of the second set and four games later ended the contest with a service ace down the middle.

McEnroe broke Davis' service in the opening game of the second set and then held service for a 2-0 lead. After Davis took the third game, McEnroe surged ahead to 5-1.

Davis staved off four match points and forced McEnroe into errors in taking the seventh game.

Irish track team opens a busy weekend

By TOM ANTONINI
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame track team and Head Coach Joe Piane open up their busiest weekend of this young season tonight in the ACC. The weekend will be a hectic one because Irish runners will also be traveling to New York's Madison Square Garden and Chicago's Rosemont Horizon before Monday rolls around.

Coming off a narrow 68-63 loss at the hands of Iowa last Saturday, the Irish expect more tough competition again this weekend.

The weekend's action begins this evening with a meet at 6:30 p.m. under the ACC's North Dome, giving Notre Dame track fans their first look at this year's team. This year's Irish squad, which could emerge as Piane's best team in his nine years at Notre Dame, will welcome teams from Ball State, DePaul, Northwestern, Loyola, and Valparaiso.

However, four Notre Dame runners will be in New York rather than South Bend tonight. The four will be competing in the Millrose Games at Madison Garden.

The contingent going to New York will be runners from the two-mile relay team. Jim Moyer, a senior and a three-year letterman, leads off for the relay team. Freshman Jeff Van Wie and sophomore John McNelis follow Moyer before another sophomore, Mitch Van Eyken, runs the last leg.

On Sunday, some other members of the Notre Dame team will travel to Chicago for the annual Goodwill Games. The Irish will enter the distance-medley relays, long jump, and high hurdles, as well as the 60-yard dash and two-mile run.

Piane feels that the weekend will be as hard for the team as it sounds, beginning with tonight's meet.

"Since we're running four guys in New York and resting some for Sunday, it will be a heck of a meet (tonight)," assesses Piane.

Tonight's meet is the first of two home indoor meets for Notre Dame this season and will provide a good chance to see the Irish athletes in action.

Hoosiers defeat Wildcats

Associated Press

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. — Indiana's trademark over Coach Bob Knight's 13-year reign has been a relentless man-to-man defense, but the Hoosiers used an unexpected zone defense last night and came away with a satisfying 57-44 Big Ten Conference victory over Northwestern.

"This is the first time since I've been here that we've played zone," said Knight. "We were in a diamond-and-one a lot of the time. I'd say of every five Northwestern possessions, we were in a zone three times and man-to-man two times."

The Hoosier defense held Northwestern scoreless for more than six minutes late in the second half. Sophomore guard Stew Robinson, meanwhile, led Indiana's offense with a career-high 17 points.

"They were having some troubles on their end and I'd like to think that what we did defensively had something to do with their problems," said Knight. "Robinson played perhaps as well as at any point all year. He was a little freer with what he was able to do."

Northwestern coach Rich Falk said, "I was proud of our guys, we hung tough and were in the game early."

"We got out to a 6-0 lead and before you knew it Indiana was up 10-6. Any time you're within four or five at halftime at Indiana you have to feel real good. We took some ill-advised shots and allowed Indiana to get their 10 and 12-point lead."

Falk said the Hoosiers "did a super job defensively . . . We didn't do a good job of kicking the ball out to the open man. Robinson definitely hurt us, no question. We respect him on the drive, but he hit three or four shots from the perimeter."

Notre Dame's senior captain Tom Sluby has worked hard and waited a long time to play as well as he has of late. He is finally playing the star role that was predicted of him as a freshman. To learn more about Sluby's slow climb to stardom, see Jeff Blumb's story on page 16.

dishing off 62 (4.1 average per game). Adkins penetrates well, is a pretty good outside shooter (hitting 61 percent this year), and fits in well with the Terps' fast-breaking style. He has been chipping in an average of 11.0 points per game and has started every game for Maryland the last two years.

These five starters for Maryland are shooting a collective 57 percent from the field and Phelps is obviously impressed with that mark.

"Maryland is probably the best shooting team in the country," praises the Notre Dame coach. "Rebounding-wise, they're as strong as any team we've faced. We have to contain their outside shooting and do a job on the boards (in order to win)."

One of the first players off the bench for the Terps is 6-9, 220-pound senior forward Mark Fothergill. Fothergill is a career 53-percent shooter who has appeared in every Maryland game this year, always in a relief role.

Others who have a good chance of playing time for the Terps tomorrow are freshmen Keith Gatlin and Terry Long, as well as Driesell's son, Chuckie, and sophomore Terry Long, who is from the same high school as Notre Dame point guard Joe Howard.

For the Irish, tomorrow's game means another chance to beat a respectable team, something they haven't done too often this year, and Phelps fully realizes this fact.

"We're playing for credibility," says Phelps. "That's what this game is for us. If we beat Maryland, that puts us in a good position (for the NCAA Tournament)."

"This game means a lot for us team-wise," states captain Tom Sluby on the importance of the game with Maryland.

The Irish have been playing well of late but their weariness from playing three games in five days clearly showed Wednesday night against Davidson, especially in the rebounding department. The Wildcats were able to outrebound their much taller hosts. But, according to Phelps, Wednesday night's game was important in his eyes.

"Anytime a team can play this tired and still win, that's a good sign," commented Phelps after the game.

He is hoping for even more good signs tomorrow. In fact, he is counting on them.

"In my opinion, it's going to come down to the last minute," he says, "but Saturday's a Notre Dame moment. We have a history of rising to the occasion when we're an underdog."

Whether or not this Maryland game will go down in the books with past Notre Dame upsets of the UCLA's, DePaul's, and San Francisco's is a question which won't be answered until sometime late tomorrow afternoon. But even more than wanting to get another upset in the record book, the Irish would like to give Lefty Driesell a little birthday present tomorrow.

IRISH ITEMS — The series between these two teams is a very competitive one dating back to the 1974-75 season. The Irish have held the upper hand in recent years, winning three of the last four and five of the last seven, but the series is tied at five wins apiece Maryland is off to its best start at 13-2 since the Terps came to the ACC in the 1979-80 season with a 14-2 record, only to lose, 64-63, to the then 12-2 Irish.

Phelps looks to give Driesell a birthday gift as Irish face Terps

By JEFF BLUMB
Assistant Sports Editor

Notre Dame coach Digger Phelps thinks that tomorrow should be Lefty Driesell's birthday. Actually, Phelps doesn't care if it is or not — it isn't. What he really wants is for his team to blow out the candles on fifth-ranked Maryland's cake when his Irish meet Driesell's Terps tomorrow afternoon (1 p.m., NBC-TV) under the south dome of the ACC.

"Everyone ought to come out Saturday around 12:30 and sing 'Happy Birthday' to Lefty," says the Irish coach. "It may not be his birthday but he only gets here every other year so we might as well take care of all of this year for him."

But as the son of an undertaker, Phelps knows well that his proposed party for Driesell could easily become an Irish wake. Maryland is a veteran team whose great shooting and rebounding will be the death knell for Notre Dame tomorrow if the Irish don't hold the Terps in check.

Sophomore forward Len Bias, a starter in 21 consecutive games, has been Maryland's hottest player of late, making 10 of 12 attempts from the field in scoring 24 points against Old Dominion last Saturday. Bias' 24-point performance against North Carolina on Jan. 12 gives him the two highest individual performances for Maryland this season.

Bias is presently averaging 14.5 points on 58-percent shooting after becoming a full-time starter this year. He averages 31 minutes of playing time each game, tying him with Ben Coleman for the team lead.

Yet, Notre Dame should show no "bias" in defending the well-balanced Maryland attack. There will be no slouches out on the court for the Terps tomorrow.

"You're going to see a pretty good basketball team," says Phelps of the Terps. "Maryland is one of the teams I personally feel can get to the Final Four, simply because nobody expects them to. They have the same dimension as an N.C. State last year."

One of the Terps who will have a lot to say as to whether Maryland can get as far in the NCAA Tournament as Phelps predicts is center Ben Coleman. Known as "Lefty's Horse," Coleman is averaging 14.1 points a game so far this season to go along with his team leading average of 8.1 rebounds.

The 6-9, 220-pound Coleman also leads Maryland in blocked shots and steals with 19 and 12, respectively, this year. Coleman's 19 points last year at College Park was a major factor in the Terps' 68-67 win over the Irish.

At the forward spot opposite Bias is 6-6 senior Herman Veal. He contributes 9.3 points a game and is the second-leading rebounder behind Coleman, pulling down an average of 7.5 rebounds.

"Veal is a very good shooter from the corner," assesses Phelps.

He also can play some defense and was voted the Terps' "Best Defensive Player" last year. Veal serves as a co-captain along with Coleman.

An old Notre Dame nemesis is 6-8 junior Adrian Branch, who will likely be at the off-guard spot for the Terps tomorrow. Branch has scored 16 and 18 points in the two years he has played against the Irish. Ranked 14th on Maryland's all-time scoring list, he is also an excellent ball handler who is a bonafide all-America candidate.

A fine player throughout his career at Maryland, Branch was voted the Terps MVP as a freshman and shared the same award with Coleman last year. Branch presently averages 12.6 points and 3.6 rebounds.

Assist leader Jeff Adkins is Maryland's point guard. The 6-5 junior led the team in assists last year with 121 and is well on his way to a similar mark this season, presently

see TERPS, page 14

An ND moment?

Well, here it is, the day before the basketball team takes on fifth-ranked Maryland and nobody is really getting too worked up about it.

Despite the fact that the Irish are 12-5, working on their longest winning streak (five) in three years, and playing their best basketball since the days of Tripucka, Woolridge and Jackson, you won't hear a great deal of talk about the game on campus tonight like you would before a football game.

While this is a little disappointing, it really isn't all that surprising. First of all, the basketball team's performance doesn't mean as much to the students as the football team's does. Notre Dame football tradition goes back to the early part of the century, while Notre Dame basketball tradition really didn't begin until the days of Austin Carr in the late '60's.

The fact is that there is nothing, and probably never will be anything, like a Notre Dame home football game. Football games are social events. On the other hand, basketball fans are at the ACC to watch a basketball game.

Also, two mediocre, if not poor years have robbed the student body of its enthusiasm for basketball. Expensive tickets and exciting opponents like the Engineers of Lehigh have been small deterrents, but, in general, the students, long spoiled by very successful teams, have turned their attention away from the athletic scene.

It is being unfair to say that everyone has been affected negatively. There is still a fairly strong core of students who attend games regularly. If it wasn't for this group, the ACC would be a morgue during the games. Its behavior exemplifies Notre Dame spirit and originality at its best. However, the general student support for the team is so weak that the pep rally that had been scheduled for tonight was canceled.

This lack of enthusiasm could prove dangerous in the long run. The basketball team needs the student support more than any other team at Notre Dame. Except for the football program, no other sport is expected to draw large, paying crowds. And football will always be able to get rid of as many tickets as it needs to.

If people cannot get excited about these next two weeks of basketball, they won't be able to get excited about basketball at all. The fifth-ranked and second-ranked teams in the nation will both be here on national television. Winning either one of those games would be an immense help in getting the Irish into the NCAA Tournament. Notre Dame is now on a two-game television roll (Liberty Bowl and Villanova) and it is important to keep this streak going.

This is also the chance for the Notre Dame students to win back the reputation for being the "sixth man." Back in 1977, the student body was voted the game's MVP by NBC Sports in Notre Dame's upset of No. 1 San Francisco. If this could happen again (the team has to do its part, too), people around the country would realize that Notre Dame students haven't given up on their teams just because they are losing.

Mike Sullivan

The nice thing is that both Maryland and DePaul are talented teams who are very capable of choking in the clutch. Not that Notre Dame is the greatest clutch team, but the Irish won't have people distracting them at the foul line and students yelling at them in tight situations.

Two years ago, when Maryland came to the ACC to face a Notre Dame team that would end up 10-17, the Terps lost their composure and the game. The Notre Dame-Maryland rivalry almost always guarantees a very close game and, historically, the team that wasn't supposed to win, did. Maryland, like Notre Dame, has a habit of playing down to its opponent's level, but the Irish can also play up to the level of their competition. So it should be a close game.

Likewise, DePaul could bring out the best in the Irish in Ray Meyer's last appearance as DePaul coach.

The crowd can play a very important role in the next couple of weeks. And, in basketball, more than in any other sport, the crowd can help out the home team. The fans sit right next to the court and right behind the bench. Arenas like the ACC keep the noise loud and continuous.

Digger Phelps knows this very well and likes to come up with new ideas to get an extra edge from the fans. Just this year, he has suggested that the students get up at halftime and move behind the opposite basket to make the opponent shoot into the student section for both halves. It was a good idea, but the townies who sit in those seats were not about to switch to the other side.

His latest idea he actually borrowed from Washington fans. It was called The Wave out there, but Digger wants to create "The Irish Sea." If you haven't ever seen The Wave in action, it involves the various sections standing up and sitting down in order. The motion gives a wave effect through the stands. People in Washington love The Wave, but it's hard to see South Benders doing anything but sit on their hands.

It might appear that Digger is spending too much time worrying about the fans, but he has called the Maryland game, "a typical Notre Dame moment."

In the past, that has usually meant a Notre Dame upset. It's been a while, but maybe we can get lightning to strike again.

Maryland's Adrian Branch, shown here against UCLA's Kenny Fields, is just one of five big guns that Notre Dame will have to stop tomorrow as the Irish face the Terps. For more on the game, see the related stories on this page.

Sluby's the star now but it's been long wait

By JEFF BLUMB
Assistant Sports Editor

Right now he's the star, the one who the Notre Dame basketball team looks to when it really needs a basket. But it hasn't always been that way for Irish captain Tom Sluby.

After appearing in 27 of 29 games off the bench as a freshman, during which time he averaged 3.2 points, Sluby opened his sophomore campaign as a starter at the small forward spot, averaging 7.8 points a game. That role lasted only 11 games, however, because he became academically ineligible at the end of the first semester.

Sluby was once again in a relief role when he returned to action the following season. A stress fracture of an ankle hobbled him throughout the month of December, however, holding him back and forcing the swingman to struggle to get back to a position where he could make a serious contribution to the team during the second half of the season.

Then came the North Carolina State game. Sluby came off the bench to go five-for-five from the floor in that game, contributing 11 points in Notre Dame's narrow 43-42 win over the eventual NCAA champion Wolfpack.

That game was the springboard for Sluby, as he went on to start the final eight games of the year for the Irish at the off guard spot, hitting double figures in six of those games. Still, Irish coach Digger Phelps was not sure who would be his captain the next season and delayed naming one at season's end.

But, by the end of May, there wasn't any question in Phelps' mind that Sluby would be his captain for this year. His performance during Notre Dame's summer trip to Yugoslavia left little doubt that he was the man for the job.

Sluby came off the bench to contribute 22 and 18 points as Notre Dame went on to win the Zadar Cup. In doing so, he was selected as the outstanding young player in Zadar Cup play.

For the native of Washington, D.C., a city that has produced such other Notre Dame greats as Austin Carr, Sid Catlett, Collis Jones, Bob Whitmore, Adrian Dantley, and Tracy Jackson, the Yugoslavia trip was a most valuable experience.

"I went over there wanting to get more playing experience and to work on some basic things like defense, rebounding, and shooting," reflects Sluby. "I was loose and playing well."

Yet, probably the most important thing the senior swingman gained from the trip is something that is hard to measure with stats.

"I came out with more self-confidence and gained the confidence of other people," Sluby says.

Still, his good play in Yugoslavia and his new position as captain was no guarantee that things would go well for Sluby this season, and he knew it.

"I didn't set any goals because I didn't really know how much playing time I'd get or how I'd per-
