Purdue game caravan to provide free transit to 7,000 by bus, train

By MARK WORSCHER
News Editor

Look out Kokomo! The citizens of Plymouth and Peru, Ind., better keep an eye out, too. The biggest thing to roll through the state since the Indy 500 will hit these cities Sept. 8 as more than 150 buses — and maybe a train — cruise down U.S. 31 on the way to the Notre Dame-Purdue football game in Indianapolis.

Negotiations are underway between the Student Activities Office and several bus companies to provide transportation for any Notre Dame or Saint Mary's student who wishes to attend the game. There would be no cost.

"Right now we have several bus companies and transportation companies from Indianapolis trying to locate equipment," said James McDonnell, director of Student Activities, who estimated that 7,000 persons might make the trip.

Not only would it be a fun trip, said McDonnell, but it could be a record-breaking one as well. "A guy from United Limo (a local bus company) contacted the Federal Transportation office, and the guy there could remember a 71-bus trip, but we'd more than double that," McDonnell said.

"There's supposed to be 160 feet between each bus, and if all of them left at the same time, this guy estimates our motorcade could be 5 1/2 miles long."

McDonnell also said he is looking into the possibility of getting a train to carry up to 1,000 students to Indianapolis. "We're checking to see if there are the proper connections," he said, adding that the train might be able to leave from the tracks along Douglas Road, near the Credit Union.

The man in charge of getting that train is Kelly Flynn, a 1973 Notre Dame graduate and a member of the Board of Trustees of the Indiana Transportation Museum in Indianapolis. "It looks like it has great possibilities," Flynn said yesterday. "We (the museum) own four diesel locomotives which we used during a 10-day stretch for the Indiana State Fair."

Flynn said the tracks are in good shape. "A train could load up, make the full trip and unload in about three hours," he said. "I can't imagine anyone who wouldn't go to that game. I can't think of anything more fun."

Train travel is "the most cost-efficient way," said Flynn, who suggested that multiple trips could be made, leaving early in the morning or even the night before.

The inaugural game of the 61,200-seat Hoosier Dome was the choice of Indianapolis businessman Bob Welsh, who approached Father Edmund Joyce, executive vice president of the University, with the idea in November 1982.

The plans were finalized in January 1983, said Welsh, but during negotiations it was pointed out that the game really would not be a home game for the University.

"Why don't we bring the students down then?" I said to them," said Welsh, who formed Football Promotions Company, Inc. to manage and promote the game. Welsh also is involved in trying to bring an National Football League team to Indianapolis.

Gene Corrigan, director of athletics for Notre Dame, agreed that transportation was "part of the bargain which we struck with them."

Two conditions were placed on moving the game from Notre Dame to Indianapolis, said Corrigan. First, the prices for the student tickets would remain the same, and second, students would be able to get free transportation down and back.

McDonnell envisions having buses assigned to each dorm, and dorms will be able to join with other dorms on campus, such as Grace with Pasquerilla East or Stanford with Breen-Phillips.

"The same thing applies to Saint Mary's students. If those halls want to combine that will be fine," he said.

MBA, Law School and other graduate students also would be eligible.

Hit-and-run defense says evidence against driver is coincidental

By BILL KRAIS
News Staff

Sixteen months after Notre Dame students Kerry Mannion and Beth McInerney, allegedly were struck by a vehicle driven by Russell Micinski of South Bend, the case has come before Superior Court Judge Beamer.

Yesterday, in the second day of hearings, defense attorney Patrick McCallaghan held that the evidence is circumstantial and posed the question, "Did the vehicle cause the accident, or was the accident caused by the two being in the roadway, dressed in dark clothing, on a foggy night?"

Micinski is charged with driving while intoxicated, causing serious bodily injury, and leaving the scene of an accident. The defendant has pleaded not guilty to each of these charges.

The incident occurred in the early hours of Sept. 26, 1982, near Campus View Apartments. Mannion testified he was "headed back to either the party (which he had left earlier from Campus View) or back to the (Mannion's) house with Beth McInerney."

McCallaghan said the evidence is circumstantial and the findings of the F.B.I. investigation are inconclusive. He added that even if his client were responsible for the accident, the question of intoxication is still unanswered.

Micinski's own admission "I may have had a few too many" is the only evidence concerning intoxication brought to court thus far. No chemical test or any other evidence of intoxication has been presented.

Mannion said he had little recollection of events leading up to the accident, however he added that he had had "six or seven beers at a party at Campus View, before leaving with Beth McInerney."

McInerney could not answer many questions posed to her by Assistant Prosecutor Sanford Brook or by McCallaghan. She attributed her inability to answer questions concerning events up to two weeks before and four weeks after the accident to her severe case of amnesia.

Mannion testified he had sustained injuries including a "broken left ankle, broken right tibia and fibula, a fractured fourth vertebrae, a concussion and torn ligaments in both knees." He was hospitalized in South Bend for three weeks before being moved to a hospital in Syracuse, N.Y. When cross-examined by McCallaghan, Mannion said his injuries were "getting better" but still bothered him.

McInerney could not testify as to the extent of her injuries. She did, however, say she still suffers from severe memory lapses.

Both Mannion and McInerney are back at Notre Dame, but both will graduate two semesters later than originally planned. Mannion expects to graduate in December 1984, while McInerney hopes to graduate in August or December 1985. Because of her amnesia, McInerney was forced to switch her major from Latin to Economics.

Brook used Micinski's own admission and a doctor's testimony to establish the case of intoxication. Brook said he believes the F.B.I. findings provide enough evidence to convict the defendant.

The jury of four men and three women will begin deliberations this morning, after final arguments have been heard. If Micinski is found guilty, both McInerney and Mannion plan to sue the defendant in civil court.

"The Peaceable Kingdom," a book by Stanley Hauerwas, professor of theology at Notre Dame, recently has been published by the University of Notre Dame Press. While the book is intended to be an introduction to Christian ethics, Hauerwas writes in a preface that he hopes, "and deeply so, that the reader might come to appreciate, if not agree with, the stress on the centrality of nonviolence as the hallmark of the Christian moral life." Nicholas Lash, professor of theology at Cambridge University, says the book's arguments "combine to a degree quite unusual in contemporary theology clarity, frankness, firmness and compassion. The Peaceable Kingdom establishes Hauerwas beyond doubt as a major voice in English-speaking theology." — The Observer

'Dry campus' would dry out more than student social life

And why behold the splinter in your brother's eye, but not consider the beam in your own eye?
Matthew 7:3

Talk of a dry campus began with the release of the Priorities and Commitments to Excellence report.

It has become the hottest campus topic since University President Theodore M. Hesburgh grew a beard.

University officials are rightly concerned about alcoholism on campus. After all, one need not be a physician to know many Notre Dame persons drink too much.

Go to any section party or hall dance — everyone gathers around the keg, er, bar. Hello beer, goodbye pain.

Take a walk to any tavern at Five Points — once again, the message is clear: drink until you feel drunk or till your money runs out.

Let's be realistic. Dry campus laws would be as unenforceable as prohibition was in the 1920s and 1930s.

Students would turn dormitory rooms into speak easies while one student acted as sentry to guard against an unplanned rector's entrance.

Such conditions would turn most every Notre Dame student into a liar or conspirator.

At Mormon-administered Brigham Young University, many drugs are successfully banned, including alcohol and caffeine. But to ever seriously believe Notre Dame could imitate B.Y.U. is to believe there will be coeducational dormitories while Hesburgh is president.

But supposing alcohol could be banned from the campus. What would some conscientious person advise? Who would be affected?

A dry campus for everyone, that's what.

Alcohol's primary purpose is to make one feel better.

Without liquor many men and women would never have met each other. Tense, worried about making fools of themselves, persons are often hesitant about starting a conversation without a crutch. And for many, the cheapest and most socially acceptable crutch is alcohol.

Yet alcohol does not stop always at opening relationships. Too often, it follows a lonely individual into his or her apartment, room or home.

Sadly, it is easier to lie to a bottle of bourbon than to an inquisitive member of the opposite sex.

These are the persons about whom the PACE report

Paul McGinn

Executive Editor

Inside Thursday

writers were worried.

The only problem is, not all of these persons are students.

Ever attend a Notre Dame Alumni Club meeting where no liquor was served?

Ever attend a faculty reception where there was no wine or beer?

Ever attend an administration-sponsored event where there was no alcohol?

Even Holy Cross priests are affected. The Order of Holy Cross, much as every other religious order of men, carries its share of alcoholics.

For better or worse, few Notre Dame persons know how to have fun without drinks in their hands.

Instead of only trying to convince University administrators that students can drink responsibly, Student Body President Brian Callaghan should be telling Hesburgh's assistant, Father William Beauchamp, to clean up Notre Dame's role models before the University tries to save students from themselves.

It is admirable to discourage minors from abusing a drug through rules forbidding its use. It is quite another matter, however, to sell alcohol at alumni club parties, the Morris Inn or University Club and expect students to abstain from liquor.

If Notre Dame is to be a dry campus, so should it be — for everyone, not only students.

Some rectors ignore hall J-Boards says survey by Judicial Council

By JOSEPH MURPHY
Staff Reporter

Rectors of six dormitories do not use hall judicial boards to solve disciplinary problems, according to a survey make public at last night's Judicial Council meeting.

Of the 16 board members who responded to the survey, six said their rectors did not use the hall judicial boards to settle disciplinary problems. Six others said their halls had not encountered any disciplinary problems or the issues brought to the boards were not of a disciplinary nature.

Four judicial board chairmen said their boards were being used. The average number of cases brought before them as of November was two.

Judicial Coordinator Bob Gleason, however, saw some "very encouraging signs." Thirteen judicial board chairmen said they had good or excellent rapport with their rectors.

"What we've got to do is take our case to the rectors and stress the importance of using the boards,"

Gleason said, adding, the boards "must open the lines of communication."

The Judicial Council also discussed its role in the upcoming campus-wide elections.

"We all have our biases," said Gleason, "but we have to administer the elections fairly."

Gleason added, "We're going to have an election workshop to show what the process is." The workshop has been tentatively scheduled for Feb. 8.

Joe Roveda, chairman of the Du Lac Review Committee, announced that the council will hold "an open hearing so students can voice their views" on the student handbook.

Such a hearing will not be easy, said Roveda.

"It's never clear-cut. Du Lac never puts the punishments with the rules. We don't want the report we are preparing to be solely from us. We want it to come from the students."

The Du Lac hearing, according to Roveda, will be held within the next three weeks.

Gleason also said many students are not aware of the judicial process or how to defend themselves in disciplinary situations.

"I can help," said Gleason. "I can represent them. Dean (of Students James) Roemer can be very intimidating."

The council is planning an aggressive campaign to publicize this free service to students.

trip as well.

"There seems to be an understanding that when groups charter interstate buses, as opposed to a school bus, no restrictions on smoking or alcohol apply. Most groups that go on excursions have a nice time on the bus," said McDonnell.

Considering the early departure time — probably 8 a.m. — McDonnell hopes that the halls "have soft drinks, coffee and pastry available, but if they have other refreshments, they have other refreshments."

New budget to bring record deficit

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The $925.5 billion budget President Reagan sent to Congress yesterday mirrors his goals for the nation: to increase its military strength and to do it without raising taxes. But the plan is burdened with a projected $180.4 billion deficit.

It recognizes the reality that in an election year Congress would oppose cuts in domestic spending.

Absent from Reagan's package for the 1985 fiscal year that begins Oct. 1 is any comprehensive blueprint for significantly cutting the deficits within the next several years.

That is being left for bipartisan negotiations among members of Congress and White House officials. Reagan says those talks, expected to begin next week, should lead to a three-year, $100 billion "down payment" on the deficits.

But Democrats — sensing the big dose of red ink in Reagan's budget may be a potent campaign issue — said they would raise the ante and call what they claim is an election-year bluff by the president.

"We'll call you and raise you, and we'll be prepared to make some really big reductions in the deficit," said House Majority Leader Jim Wright, D-Texas.

He said Democrats now are searching for $200 billion in reductions. Much of that likely would come from tax increases and military spending cuts Reagan has ruled out.

At a news conference on the budget, key administration officials repeatedly made a pitch for Congress to begin work on the "down payment."

Budget Director David Stockman said the administration assumes measures would be taken in 1985 and 1986 to substantially reduce the deficits.

"It is not our intent that deficits of this magnitude of $180 billion in 1987 should actually unfold," he said.

Without deficit-paring actions, he said, the red ink could swell to more than $200 billion in 1985 and 1986. "That's what we're trying to avoid," he said.

On Capitol Hill, House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., sharply criticized the budget, complaining of its "ridiculous spending" on the military and the enormous deficits.

In a message included with the budget, the president said the nation's economic health is proof that his fiscal program over the past three years has been the right medicine.

In all, Reagan is asking for 1985 defense outlays of $264.4 billion, a 14.5 percent increase over current spending. Discounting for inflation, it is a 9.3 percent boost.

Hispanics oppose House bill

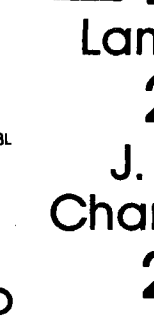

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Leaders of the nation's major Hispanic organizations announced last-ditch plans yesterday to enact their own proposal to substitute for a Reagan administration-backed bill awaiting House action.

With both political parties courting the Hispanic vote in the 1984 election, the leaders said they would press the White House and House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill to abandon a measure which has twice passed the Senate and is pending before the House Rules Committee.

"If the speaker fails to take our recommendation, we certainly want to put that leadership on notice that the Hispanic population, particularly in those crucial states of Florida, California and Texas, is going to remember that come the fall," Mario Obledo, president of the 110,000-member League of United Latin American Citizens, told a news conference.

The Hispanic leaders said there was unanimous concern at their two-day summit conference about the pending measure's provision imposing fines and criminal penalties on employers who knowingly hire illegal immigrants. The participants said employers would be leery of hiring anyone with a Hispanic surname.

AT&T mails wrong credit cards

Associated Press

BEDMINSTER, N.J. — AT&T officials said yesterday they have mailed an estimated 4,700 telephone credit cards to the wrong customers, and appealed to consumers to "be honest" and not use them fraudulently.

AT&T was in the process of mailing out 47 million credit cards when customers began calling to say they had received cards with the wrong name and telephone number, said Maureen Dvorak, spokeswoman at AT&T's Communications Division headquarters here.

AT&T spokesman Jerry Santos said the firm believes the problem is limited and that it would not be necessary to stop the mailing of those not yet sent.

He said the company estimated about 0.01 percent — or 4,700 — cards had been incorrectly mailed.

He said he did not know how that figure was determined.

"It's not really a large problem. It is only a small fraction that will cause problems, and we don't think fraud will be a big factor because the error rate is so low," he said.

Dvorak said the firm had set up a hotline for customers to report receiving the wrong card, but that it was too early to tell how many of those calls had come in.

"We're appealing to our customers to help us by reporting any error to us immediately," Dvorak said. "We're asking our customers to be honest."

AT&T officials said they do not know how much the errors will cost.

Dvorak said the company would not have a firm grip on the problem until the first round of bills comes due March 1 under the new system put into effect when AT&T was broken up Jan. 1.

The problem arose when some cards were placed in the wrong envelopes for mailing and when some customers moved and cards were sent to their old addresses, she said. One Massachusetts customer reportedly received two cards, neither of which belonged to him.

A wrong telephone number on the card would result in credit card calls being charged to someone else's telephone account.

Dvorak said one mitigating factor in the potential scope of the problem was that the credit cards were "not sent unsolicited."

"We only mailed cards to people who were already card holders. This was not a random mailing," she said.

Dvorak said using the toll-free service — 1-800-CALL-ATT8 — to report the credit card problems would not cost the company extra because it had set up that system nationwide before the first cards were mailed in order to answer questions about the AT&T breakup.

An operator who answered the toll-free number yesterday said customers who report receiving the wrong card are told to destroy the card immediately and that they will be issued a new card.

O'Neill endorses Mondale

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Echoing the Democratic campaign themes of fairness and the need to end the nuclear arms race, House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. yesterday endorsed former Vice President Walter F. Mondale for his party's presidential nomination.

"We desperately need a president who has the experience, the political skill and the character to be a tough negotiator at the peace table," O'Neill said.

The nation's highest-ranking elected Democrat, O'Neill broke personal precedent to support Mondale for the 1984 Democratic presidential nomination.

"I will do everything I can to make sure that Walter Mondale is elected president of the United States," he said.

"Walter Mondale will unite our country because he will represent all the people," he added.

Mondale, one of eight Democrats vying for their party's presidential nomination, is the choice of a majority of the Democratic members of Congress.

When asked whether Mondale had the Democratic nomination locked up, O'Neill replied, "I was with Muskie in '72 and I thought he had a lock on it."

Sen. Edmund Muskie of Maine was the odds-on favorite for the nomination in 1972 but dropped out of the race after disappointing showings in early primaries and caucuses.

Mondale visited the Capitol later in the day, met with O'Neill and said the support of the speaker and other House Democrats shows that "we now can offer to the country an administration that can get things done" by working with Congress.

The House Democratic Caucus has completed its selection of 164 delegates to the convention and 76, including O'Neill, are openly pledged to Mondale.

Sen. John Glenn of Ohio has the support of 17 House members; Sen. Alan Cranston of California is backed by 11, the Rev. Jesse Jackson by 7, Sen. Gary Hart of Colorado by 5, former Gov. Reubin Askew of Florida by 4, Sen. Ernest F. Hollings of South Carolina by 3.

Theories which explain Ronald Reagan's success

How should we account for Ronald Reagan's 56 percent "good job" poll rating, on the eve of his announcement about running, and his similar rating as the man responsible for the extraordinary 3.8 percent inflation rate for last year?

Max Lerner

The Max Lerner Column

I have been scouting the theories about him overhearing them in bars, on buses and planes, at cocktail and dinner parties — and of course reading them in the pronouncements of my media colleagues.

Here are a batch of them.

THE DUMB-BUT-LUCKY THEORY. Here I adhere to the Harry Truman view that luck tends to even out but what counts is what a public figure makes of it.

Note also the corollary of this theory: if Reagan is dumb then the voters are even dumber to embrace him as they do. Such a view of the voters is not one for Reagan's opponents to boast about.

THE CLEVER ACTOR THEORY. This is the opposite of the first. I find it in an Atlantic piece about Reagan on civil rights, by James Mason Miller, which has Reagan practicing "the manipulative techniques of Hollywood" with "an array of acting and script writing clichés," and a "mastery of story-telling techniques."

The trouble with the Reagan-as-actor theory is it explains too much. FDR was a better actor than Reagan, although never a professional one. But his acting skills dramatized his real achievements. Reagan has not convinced many about his civil rights record, or about what James Wright calls his "cruelly deranged" priorities. But he couldn't have survived politically until he had turned his economic record around in reality. Once that happened he had something to dramatize. THE "MEDIA MANIPULATOR" AND "GREAT CHARISMA" THEORY. Reagan knows how to use the media and he looks good on TV. It is accurate to say that he has been a more charismatic president than anyone since John Kennedy.

But teletronics and charisma didn't protect Reagan when things were going wrong and his "good job" polls fell through the floor. They have to have something to work with — namely, results.

THE ASTUTE POLITICIAN THEORY. This comes closer. He has ridden out storms about his appointees that made presidents like Carter flounder. Despite his shifts from the ideological to the pragmatic and back, he has maintained an image of steadiness of direction and decisiveness of action.

Right now in the coming campaign — with Bill Clark safely tucked away in Interior and Ed Meese moving into Justice, and with James Baker left in charge of Tactics — he is very much the pragmatist, and will run (as Eisenhower and Nixon did) on "Prosperity and Peace."

There remains THE COHESIVE CHARACTER THEORY, which I incline to. More than any president since Harry Truman, Reagan is all of a piece — a whole man, warts and all. He presents himself on his job as he acts in personal life. Hence his corny stories, his shaky facts, his government by anecdote.

He carries his official baggage lightly and sees his presidential office as an extension of himself, where Carter saw himself as an extension of his office. If he is an actor (and he is) he belongs to the school of actors who, in whatever role, always play themselves — and what comes through is his character.

Reagan doesn't — despite the Atlantic piece — "separate his character, in the public mind, from his actions as president." He puts them together, but what stays in people's minds is the character.

Abortion talk

Dear Editor:

Monday evening I attended a talk given by Lori Jo Nera, national president of WEBA (Women Exploited by Abortion). Her power fully drove home the tragedy of legalized abortion.

It isn't enough that 16 million innocent babies have been lost (South Bend contributing 960 just last year), but now the surviving mothers are uniting to combat the physical and emotional effects abortion has had on them: everything from sterility, miscarriages and perforated uteruses to suicidal tendencies, feeling dehumanized and child abuse.

I was touched when Ms. Nera spoke of her own heartache. Now sterile herself, she weeps every night because she cannot provide her two children with a brother or sister.

I write this letter to challenge the student body, peers and especially my friends, to raise their consciousness on this issue. Abortion is a travesty, and Nera's lecture shows that it not only affects the unborn, but society as a whole.

I make this challenge not because I think that there are huge numbers of students who disagree with me, but because for many of us, including myself, abortion has become a "non-issue." Even many of the students who involve themselves in other pro-life issues such as stopping the death squads in El Salvador, or ending the nuclear arms build-up, neglect this pressing issue.

Not that such causes don't need our attention, but one should also realize that 400 die a month in El Salvador, and no one has died in a nuclear explosion since Nagasaki, while 4000 die every day from abortions.

One of the frustrating things about becoming aware is the helplessness one feels: "What can I do?" For most issues, the least and most we can do is pray, but as far as this issue is concerned, there are ways to act also.

Last week many ND students partook in a memorial procession outside a local abortion clinic, and currently a student drive is taking place on campus to raise money for a Woman's Pregnancy Help Center in South Bend. Let us not look the other way, but pray and act together to end this evil.

Alcohol overkill

Dear Editor:

I'd like to take everyone back in time a few years, to the time we all decided that Notre Dame was the place for us to attend.

What are those final factors that influenced our decision: the atmosphere for the campus, the comfortable size, the rich tradition (not limited to athletics), the quality of residence hall life, or simply that Notre Dame is one of the finest "all around" universities in the country.

The admissions requirements help to insure that ND accepts people of outstanding character. With these premises in mind, I ask how one "relatively" unimportant facet of life here can so overwhelm us that we distort our entire image of the University — ALCOHOL?

Many people have threatened to "move off campus if we make the decision to 'conform to the law regarding alcohol.'" Is this an inference that alcohol is what keeps them on campus? This threat is almost an insult to our own creativity and admission of a problem.

Is the threat a statement that says we can't live creatively and enjoy life at Notre Dame without alcohol? The threat does seem to be an admission that we refuse to live without alcohol. Is that a symptom of the problem being addressed?

The PACE Report formed a committee to investigate the alcohol situation on campus and to make appropriate recommendations. The committee has done extensive research and has opened channels for student input (students have seats on the committee). The Board of Trustees (many former ND students) will make the decision.

The committee has been more than generous with their time in listening to student input. Father Beauchamp and other committee members have spent many hours and evenings in various halls listening to students. When the decision is made, let's accept it responsibly. And if we choose to criticize it, let's criticize it constructively.

To a baby, a pacifier often seems to be the most important thing in his world. Abruptly take away the pacifier and the child almost becomes unbearable.

Yet gradually the child's horizons expand and he sees a wide open world of possibilities of which the pacifier was an exaggerated part. By focusing so much attention on the pacifier, the child couldn't see all that the world around him had to offer.

If the committee decides that our campus should be without alcohol, let's pass up the crying stage. Let's open our eyes and see that life and excellence at Notre Dame and for its individuals is in no way dependent on alcohol for its essence.

Talent, abuse galore — Keenan does it again

by Margaret Fosmoe
features staff writer

The Keenan Revue opened last night with a lot of talent and applause, and a little less subtlety than last year's show.

A number of innovative acts allowed the Revue to depart from the realm of the traditional collegiate variety show. One of the most eagerly-awaited events of the Notre Dame/Saint Mary's entertainment calendar is, in its eighth year, experimenting with new forms that add a fresh dimension to the show.

A hand's-eye view of a dorm poker game, complete with appropriate player dialogue, was one of the more original performances of the evening.

A slightly-altered version of the fairytale "Cinderella" provided a

With Cap'n Crunch, The Observer bruhaha, the doubtful fate of the alcohol policy, the proposed revival of the exams policy and so many other things happening, it is surprising that the same time-worn formulas were relied upon in some cases. When your surroundings provide you with material that could be satire in itself, the opportunity should never be ignored.

One skit, "1984," brought George Orwell to the O'Laughlin stage to show the audience the Notre Dame version of his novel. The parallels between Orwell's totalitarian society and campus life — "Big Father," the Thought Police R.A.s, and "Father Machiavelli" — were greeted with cheers by the audience.

Some of the writing for this year's show seemed to lack the subtlety necessary to achieve excellent satire. The Revue ripped at the surface of certain of its targets when it should have had the smooth deep-cutting effect of a fresh razor blade.

One skit, "W.O.O.P.S.," poked ethnic fun at the Notre Dame lawn crew, among others. The act was greeted with a few laughs and a great many more hisses by the audience. While it was not totally devoid of humor, parts of the skit bordered on tasteless. The Revue would not be any less effective if that act were removed for the remaining two shows.

Several acts that were returnees from last year's Revue were happily welcomed by devoted fans. "An Evening with Theater K," the loveable Keenan Tumblers and still more from "Andy Looney" John Cerabino proved to be memorable parts of the evening.

One act, "Notre Dream," gave the audience a surreal glimpse into Notre Dame. It provides an unusual performance that must be observed very closely.

Other highlights were glimpses at a unionized Indian unbundling some familiar real estate on Father Sorin, urban guerillas kidnapping Billy Joel for forcing the Revue to open a night early and a group of hick Notre Dame alumni discussing the employment situation.

In one way, the Revue did not live up to last year's performance. The performers poked plenty of fun at their female counterparts this year, but only took potshots at the mighty Notre Dame male ego in a single musical number. The test of true parody is the ability not only poke fun at others, but also to mock oneself.

As always, the true highlight of the evening was the sheer amount of time and energy the residents of Keenan exerted to present a free show to their fellow students. In the Keenan Revue, that dorm has managed to reach a unity of achievement that no other hall comes close to matching. With few other formal means of campus satire to compete with it, the Keenan Revue has a monopoly on the humorous release of collegiate pressures.

This year's Revue, while lacking some of the familiar subtlety, is definitely worth catching. Any finagling of tickets to tomorrow's or Saturday's show would certainly be worth the effort.

hilarious bit of syllabic exercise for Lee Walsh.

And a game of Vibro-Football — utilizing human players — was a short production that received an immense laugh from the packed house.

While the traditional fat chicks wisecracks and illusions to the marital aspirations of Saint Mary's students have become a bit too predictable, the Revue managed to entertain as always.

A good number of serious musical acts, including a rock band, and a violin, piano and several vocal solos added a new aspect to the show. Keenan once again proved that it houses some very talented musicians. A polka band — complete with bubbles — giving a fair rendition of a certain famous fight song, was a nice addition to the evening.

The skits that relied purely on much-used stereotypes of forbidden kegs and women in jogging suits were tiring. "Stanford Food Sales," with its dancing roaches, is an example that other skits would have been wise to follow.

Considering 1983-84, this should be a bumper year for campus satire.

ND-SMC skiers win Ohio Governor's Cup

Special to The Observer

The Notre Dame men's and Saint Mary's ski teams captured the Ohio Governor's Cup in their divisions last weekend. The Notre Dame women's team finished third.

The Ohio Governor's Cup is a two-day event comprised of both slalom and giant slalom races. Also competing were Ohio State University, Bowling Green University, and Akron University.

Individual medalists included John O'Donovan (first in giant slalom, second in slalom), Julie Currie (third in slalom), Ruth Atanasoff (second in giant slalom), and Tony Jordan (third in giant slalom).

"Our team is an enthusiastic, exciting group — some people might even say crazy — with the potential to place racers in first, second, and third in any race," said Skier-Coach Mike Maas.

In the women's division, team captain Julie Currie earned her first medal with two consistently quick runs. Kay Healy, Kateri Gaffney, and Sabina Molchan also contributed to the overall team standing with excellent runs.

Notre Dame virtually owned the giant slalom course on Sunday as O'Donovan took first, Jordan placed third, and Maas finished fourth. The most exciting moment, though, was the spectacular crash by Dave "Kermit" Markert on his second run. Emerging unhurt from the snow cloud, major course repair was necessary before the next racer could start.

For the Saint Mary's team, Ruth Atanasoff clocked two fine times to secure second, and supporting runs by Colleen Dwyer, Heather Rapp, and Ann Ratlidge put the team firmly in first.

With a first place for the Notre Dame men and Saint Mary's women, and a third for the Notre Dame women, the team has a good start in the point standings for the season. The next race at Caberfre, Mich., will pit the team against some of the top ski teams in the Midwest, Northern Michigan, University of Michigan, and Michigan Tech.

Rozier took illegal money
at Nebraska

Associated Press

PITTSBURGH — Heisman Trophy winner Mike Rozier acknowledged in an interview published yesterday that he received financial help from alumni while he played for the University of Nebraska.

The All-American running back, who signed a $3.1 million contract with the Pittsburgh Maulers of the United States Football League, also said that he was encouraged by unnamed associates of his former representative, Mike Trope, and numerous other agents to violate NCAA rules and take money and gifts before completing his senior season at Nebraska.

In the interview, which appeared in yesterday's Pittsburgh Press, Rozier said that during his college career, Nebraska alumni helped him meet his financial obligations. He did not name the alumni.

"Players at Nebraska get $206 a month," Rozier said. "I had to pay rent on my apartment, which is $260 a month. I live with my brother so that's $130 apiece. Then, there's the electric bill and the phone bill . . . It adds up. I had some people send me money. Some alumni helped out."

A Nebraska spokesman said that there was no one available to comment on Rozier's charges. The NCAA also had no immediate comment.

"Our policy simply is not to comment on whether we will look into matters concerning possible violations of NCAA regulations," David Berst, NCAA enforcement director, told The Associated Press. Berst said schools are allowed to provide monthly allowances for athletes who choose not to live on campus.

Irish thrash Fordham, 79-59, as boredom thrashes home crowd

By JEFF BLUMB
Assistant Sports Editor

A win's a win. Last night's 79-59 Notre Dame thrashing of an over-matched Fordham squad counts just the same as Saturday's upset of fifth-ranked Maryland in the win column.

Yet, there is no comparison between the two contests. While Saturday's game was an action-packed thriller that kept the crowd on the edge of their seats, last night's game gave the crowd about the same excitement they might get by watching paint dry.

Tom Sluby played his usual fine game for the Irish, scoring 21 points on 9 of 19 shooting.

But, for the first time since Notre Dame's Jan. 16 game with Lafayette, Sluby was not the leading scorer for the Irish. That honor went to forward Ken Barlow, who has come on of late to be a force both on the boards and in the scoring column.

Barlow paced the Irish attack with his 22 points and seven rebounds. More remarkable is the fact that, with his 8 of 10 performance from the field and six of eight shooting at the free throw line last night, Barlow now has shot an amazing 13 of 15 and 12 of 14 from the floor and line, respectively, in the last two games.

"Kenny is playing well," says Irish coach Digger Phelps. "He's in the groove now, and is playing with a lot of consistency and a lot of confidence."

Sophomore forward Don McCormick paced the Rams' scoring, tallying 19 points on seven of nine shooting. Tony McIntosh chipped 10 points of his own to help the losing cause.

Notre Dame was able to control the boards on both ends of the court, outrebounding the Rams by a 37-21 margin, in addition to preventing Fordham from establishing any type of lead where they could go into to their stall-type offense. Fordham was also hindered by early foul trouble.

The Rams somehow managed to pick up seven fouls in the game's first 5:41.

"They got out to the lead early and we couldn't seem to scratch back in," said Rams' coach Tom Penders afterward. "We were in foul trouble too early to play the defense we wanted to. They are a very difficult team to catch."

"It was important that we jumped out to an early lead," says Phelps. "Our domination early was the key."

The revenge factor was there last night since the Rams had beaten the Irish each of the last two years. Yet, there was also the chance that Notre Dame would get caught after upsetting Maryland and having to face a tough South Carolina team this Saturday in Columbia.

"Everybody thought we'd have a letdown after Maryland," commented Phelps. "but I wasn't going to let that happen."

"Before you play a team like Notre Dame, you wish that they would have forgotten the last two years," said Penders. "They certainly didn't take us lightly."

Notre Dame lead by as much as 14 in the first half, holding comfortable margins of 30-16 and 32-18, before ending up with a 34-22 difference at the intermission.

The second half was all but a repeat of the first half. The Irish continued their domination, extending their lead to 23 points at 75-52. The final margin was rather insignificant in that it was pretty obvious that Notre Dame was going to win this game from early on.

Near game's end, Phelps cleared his bench, sending in all of his reserves but one. That one, senior Cecil Rucker, was left in his chair by Phelps despite the many chants and boos echoing down from the student section.

Afterwards, a livid Phelps complained about the behavior of the crowd, saying, "I will decide when Cecil Rucker plays basketball. After see MEN, page 8

Ken Barlow led all scorers with 22 points as the Irish dominated the Fordham Rams in a 79-59 victory. Tom Sluby added 21 points, and Jim Dolan pulled down a team-high 9 rebounds and scored 12 points. — The Observer

NVA offers seminar on health and fitness

By ERIC SCHEUERMANN
Sports Writer

In the coming weeks, the Office of Non-Varsity Athletics will be offering a seminar on health and a fitness screening. Students, faculty, and staff are encouraged to attend.

The health seminar is sponsored by the Century Club, an organization developed by NVA to present seminars and sponsor activities that will be of interest to students.

The seminar on good health will consist of a three night program, beginning Sunday, Feb. 5 at 7 p.m. in the LaFortune Center Classroom on the 1st floor. Guest speaker Jeff Aaron, director of the Health and Lifestyle Center at Memorial Hospital, will discuss what good health is, and why it is important.

The second presentation will take place on Tuesday, Feb. 7, at the same time and place. The topic of this session will be personal diet, with guidelines for good nutrition being presented. Emphasis will be on salt, cholesterol, and fast food. Guest speaker will be Debra Duskin-Morris, health education coordinator at Saint Joseph's Medical Center.

The final session of the seminar will be the following night, Feb. 8, again at 7 at LaFortune. Luis Valdes, from the Counseling & Psychological Services Center here at Notre Dame, will speak on stress. Sally Derengoski, coordinator of Recreational Services at NVA, feels this session will inform students on "what each person can do in terms of dealing with individual stress."

Derengoski feels the three-night seminar is especially important to students because it will "create an awareness of the importance of lifetime attitudes toward good health." The cost for the seminar is three dollars, and interested persons must register in advance by calling 239-6100.

The Century Club will then sponsor a fitness screening on Thursday, Feb. 16. According to Derengoski, "After someone has been equipped with knowledge of health from the seminar, we want him to be able to have his health tested." The fitness screening will take place at Saint Joseph's Hospital, and the Century Club will provide free transportation there and back to anyone wishing to attend.

Dave Kinson, exercise physiologist at the hospital, will conduct the screening. It will include a cardiovascular stress test, a flexibility test, and an analysis of the body's percentage of fat. Blood pressure and muscular strength will also be tested. The screening should take about one hour, and a group feedback session will then take place at 7 p.m. Derengoski says this session "will take the scores from the screening and show how they are meaningful in relation to standard scores and personal goals."

The screening will cost fifteen dollars, and the deadline to register is Feb. 8. For information, call 239-6100. To register, however, you must apply in person at the Office of Non-Varsity Athletics in the ACC.

Marcus Dupree leaves So. Miss.

Associated Press

HATTIESBURG, Miss. — Marcus Dupree, once touted for the Heisman Trophy but now a two-time university dropout, wants to play college ball this year. But he's also listening to overtures from the professional ranks, a close friend said yesterday.

But it's not clear how interested the professionals are in Dupree, who still has college eligibility remaining.

Dupree, who left Oklahoma last fall and quit the University of Southern Mississippi on Tuesday, is blocked by NCAA rules from playing football at major colleges until 1985. He is considered a prime prospect, a sure No. 1 draft choice in both the National Football League and its new rival, the United States Football League.

But the NFL emphatically restated its policy on Tuesday against drafting undergraduates — in fact, Dupree won't be eligible for the NFL draft until 1987, the year after his class graduates.

The USFL, which signed Herschel Walker last year after his junior year in college, determined after the outcry from colleges that followed Walker's signing that it would abide by the same rules. The league had no comment on the Dupree situation except to note that a judge in Los Angeles had made a tentative ruling which may overthrow the USFL eligibility rule as a violation of antitrust law.

Cal Ripken Jr. signs contract with Orioles

Associated Press

BALTIMORE — Cal Ripken Jr. vowed yesterday to retain his enthusiasm for baseball and his desire to improve after signing a four-year contract with the Baltimore Orioles worth in excess of $4 million.

"No matter what the contract says, it's not going to affect me on the field," said the 23-year-old shortstop who was named the American League's Most Valuable Player in 1983. "I'm still hungry to succeed, and be better than I was before."

Ripken, who was eligible for arbitration, reached agreement through the 1987 season after hitting .318 for the world champion Orioles, with 27 home runs and 102 runs batted in. He led the league with 211 hits, 47 doubles and 121 runs scored.

"We are rewarding Cal's exceptional performance over the past two years with an exceptional contract," said General Manager Hank Peters. "He has certainly demonstrated that he is one of the top players in the major leagues today."

Attorney Ron Shapiro, who represents 20 of the players on Baltimore's 40-man roster, said Ripken would be paid $1 million next season. Yearly increments for the remainder of the guaranteed pact enable Ripken to bypass first baseman Eddie Murray as the highest paid Oriole.

"I want people to think of me as a ballplayer, someone who tries hard every game, not somebody who makes a lot of money," Ripken said. "Money is uncomfortable when you have to speak about it. I don't want to downplay the contract, but baseball is the main thing. I can't stress that enough."

The pro option was held out for Dupree by Kenneth Fairley, a Hattiesburg businessman who has emerged as the running back's chief spokesman and may be his next employer — Dupree told USA Today that he may take a job as a construction worker at a funeral home Fairley owns. But Fairley also said Dupree would play for a small-college team just to play football next fall.

"He's interested in an NAIA school or an NCAA division III school because he would be eligible to play next season," Fairley said. "The main thing is he wants to play football."

Fairley said a professional option played no role in Dupree's original decision but developments since have made it a major topic of discussion.

"He dropped out for personal reasons and his family's financial problems," Fairley said. "Professional football now may be the best way to make the money he needs."

Fairley, who would represent Dupree in any negotiations with professional teams, said, "Representatives of several (pro) teams had called and reminded us of pending court cases that might make Marcus eligible" for the NFL.

If Dupree can't play for a college this year, and decides against the pros, then he might return to Southern Mississippi to play in 1985, Fairley said.

He said Dupree, 20, would remain in Hattiesburg for the next few days but did not want to make a public statement until he made a decision on his future.

Dupree drew national attention his freshman year at Oklahoma, gaining 905 yards. He was heralded before the 1983 season as a leading candidate for the Heisman Trophy but walked away from Oklahoma after the Sooners' lost to Texas 28-16 on Oct. 8.
