Disputes, runoff in Salvadoran vote

Associated Press

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador — Unofficial returns yesterday showed moderate Jose Napoleon Duarte leading in El Salvador's first presidential election in seven years, but he appeared likely to face a runoff with right-wing candidate Roberto d'Aubuisson.

The results, counted by Duarte's own Christian Democratic Party, were similar to estimates given by U.S. observers who said they were based on unofficial data from the Central Election Council.

The official count, stalled in a dispute at the election computer center, resumed yesterday and the council promised first results last night. Final results may not be known until later this week.

"Seventy-five percent of the people voted against d'Aubuisson, against the death squads, against the violence of the extreme right and the extreme left and against the guerrillas," Duarte said.

D'Aubuisson denies any link to the death squads blamed for many of the killings in El Salvador's 4 years of civil war. He favors crushing the guerrillas militarily; Duarte favors negotiations. The leftists call the elections a "farce" and did not participate.

Julio Adolfo Rey Prendes, the Christian Democrats' secretary-general said, "We still have hopes for a first-round victory but I personally think we will get just over 48 percent of the vote."

If neither gets more than half, there will be a runoff between the top two. Some express concern that a contest between the bitter rivals Duarte and d'Aubuisson could further promote instability.

Duarte said his party estimates 30 to 35 percent of the people who tried to vote could not because of irregularities, mainly bureaucratic bungling.

President Reagan called the election "another victory for freedom over tyranny . . . Those valiant people braved guerrilla violence and sabotage to do what we take for granted — casting their vote . . ."

Most disruptions were in the province of San Salvador and may have kept the party from passing the 50 percent mark, Duarte said. The party is strong in the province, which has about 25 percent of the country's eligible voters.

Christian Democrats' figures showed them with 47.3 percent of the vote, with about half the country's precincts reporting.

D'Aubuisson's Republican Nationalist Alliance had 28.7 percent and Francisco Jose Guerrero's National Conciliation Party, 16.4 percent.

The official tabulation was suspended Sunday night in a dispute between the Christian Democrat on the elections council, Roberto Meza Delgado, and the head technician at the tabulation center, Morgan Bojorquez, whom Meza accused of favoring d'Aubuisson.

Meza ordered Bojorquez out of the computation center, a spokesman said, and put in two armed guards to keep him out. The other technicians also left, shutting the center. Counting resumed yesterday.

U.S. observers projected a total vote of 1.3 million out of 1.8 million eligible Salvadorans, or about a 70 percent turnout.

Hart expected to take Connecticut

Associated Press

On the eve of the Connecticut primary, Gary Hart accused Walter Mondale yesterday of having a Central American policy that would lead to U.S. bloodshed in the area. The Rev. Jesse Jackson promised to end poverty in America in three years by diverting funds for weapons.

Democratic presidential candidates spent yesterday last-minute campaigning in Connecticut, with 52 delegates at stake in today's voting.

Virginia Democrats, meanwhile, were set last night to complete caucuses that began Saturday.

Jackson surprised Democratic leaders there with his slim lead in the popular vote in weekend voting, although Mondale held a slight delegate edge. The caucuses allocate 68 of 78 delegates.

In Connecticut, polls put Hart in a strong position to win the state and thus make a clean sweep of New England.

In New York yesterday, Hart lumped Mondale's Central American policies with those of President Reagan: "If the Mondale policy or the Reagan policies are followed, not only will this country light a fuse or continue to ignite a fuse leading toward an explosion in that region, I am absolutely convinced in this decade we will see the loss, the rather large loss, of American lives in that region."

He cited what he called Mondale's late call for withdrawal from Southeast Asia in the 1970s, saying Mondale's view of Central America is "part of a pattern stretching back to Vietnam, a willingness to wait for consensus to form and then moving out in front of it."

Mondale, in Manhattan, said the United States should let Central Americans make their own choices. "Forces of all the big powers should get out of there. I'm not going to pick sides."

Hart wants U.S. troops out of the area. Mondale says they should be reduced, but a U.S. military presence helps in talks with Nicaragua.

References to John Kennedy cropped up again, but now it was Mondale who invoked his name. Hart has been accused of imitating JFK's style.

Mondale said he would follow Kennedy's lead in working for new weapons testing treaties: "John Kennedy did something unilaterally temporarily" in halting tests of nuclear weapons in the atmosphere. "It worked. Within two months we had a test-ban treaty."

Can the United States trust the Soviet Union?

This and other questions on how to survive in a world with nuclear weapons were raised last night at a town meeting on nuclear non-proliferation at the Center for Continuing Education.

"How to live with nuclear weapons over centuries, not just years is one of man's greatest problems, which is why we must be concerned about nuclear non-proliferation," said Dr. Lewis A. Dunn, assistant director for Nuclear and Weapons Control of the United States' Arms Control and Disarmament Agency. Dunn was the key speaker at the meeting which was sponsored by the South Bend League of Women Voters.

Dunn said he believes nuclear arms control is more than just arms limitation agreements between the U.S. and the Soviets; nuclear non-proliferation is also an essential element of nuclear arms control. "It is important that non-proliferation doesn't become a less important part of arms control," he said.

Dunn said the greatest threat of nuclear weapons stems from the possible spread of these weapons into conflict areas in the world. He cited the current war between Iran and Iraq as an example of a conflict that could escalate dangerously if either nation acquires nuclear weapons. He added, however, "I believe that it is very unlikely that either Iran or Iraq could get nuclear weapons."

A panel representing the Michiana community responded to Dunn's statements and fielded questions from the audience. The panel consisted of former Governor of Ohio John Gilligan, Dr. Paul Kenney, a Professor of High Energy Physics at Notre Dame, and Dr. John Lewis, a professor of Political Science at Indiana University. Walton Collins, editor of Notre Dame Magazine, moderated the program.

Dunn said we must remember we are imperfect creatures living in an imperfect world, which is why nuclear non-proliferation is so important. He said, "There is always the possibility that a crazy or unstable person or government could acquire a nuclear weapon and use it; however we are working to make that chance more remote."

Dunn commented on President Reagan's current concern about strategic defense systems, such as the Anti-Ballistic Missile system and the so-called Star Wars laser systems, after the meeting. He said Reagan is concerned about the ability of the United States to survive a nuclear attack because he knows that we know have to live with nuclear weapons for centuries.

Wilkins named editor of Dome for next year

By MARK WORSCHER
Managing Editor

Mike Wilkins, a junior from Fort Wayne, Ind., has been chosen editor of the Dome for 1984-85.

Mike Wilkins

Wilkins, editor of the sports section this year, succeeds Jane Bennett.

In making the selection, Bennett cited Wilkins' experience on the yearbook staff and "overall, the feeling that he's responsible enough to handle it."

Wilkins says his first priority will be finding a staff. "Right now we only have one other returning section editor, leaving almost 10 spots to fill," he says.

A book "that has a lot of impact" is the goal Wilkins has set to accomplish next year. Big pictures and "lots of faces that jump out at you" he says will be a major part of the Dome.

Wilkins is most impressed with the professionalism of the staff. "For such a big project and with so few people, it's very professional. It's one of the best around," he says.

An American Studies major, Wilkins served the Dome as editor of the academics section last year. In addition, he worked for The Observer as an assistant news editor and a senior staff reporter in 1982.

Forty cases of AIDS in 10 cities have been traced through sexual contacts to a homosexual man who may have been a carrier of the disease, spreading it across the country without knowing he had it. The man had sex with eight victims of acquired immune deficiency syndrome — four in Los Angeles and four in New York, according to an investigation by the Centers for Disease Control. Those eight in turn had contact with others, and the chain of contact ultimately spread to San Francisco, Florida, Georgia, Texas, Pennsylvania and New Jersey — 10 cities in all. Identification of the AIDS cluster is further evidence for the belief AIDS is caused by an infectious agent, said William Darrow, the head of the CDC team that tracked down the cases. — AP

A fresh report of possible quality-control trouble at the Diablo Canyon atomic power plant forced postponement yesterday of a Nuclear Regulatory Commission vote on starting the oft-delayed California reactor. Quality control problems with the hundreds of miles of pipes in the plant may be worse than thought, Isa Yin, a Chicago-based NRC inspector, told a startled commission, prompting the NRC to delay a vote whether to allow a low-power startup at one of the Diablo Canyon reactors near San Luis Obispo, Calif. — AP

Middle-aged men who are heavy smokers will suffer an average of $59,000 each in extra medical bills and lost earnings during their lifetimes, according to a study of the hidden costs of cigarettes. Making up this loss for all smokers would require an additional tax of $3 on every pack of cigarettes, the researchers concluded. "We likened every smoker to a gambler," said Gerry Oster, a medical economist. "And we wanted to estimate the likely amount of money every smoker should expect to lose in the lottery that he or she is playing with his or her life." The study conducted at Policy Analysis Inc., a Brookline, Mass. firm that researches health cost issues, was released yesterday at a meeting of the American College of Cardiology in Dallas. — AP

'Belles' of Saint Mary's sound out of tune to some Belle (bel) n. a pretty woman or girl.

Webster's definition may be generally accepted, but it doesn't tell the whole story. Unfortunately the word belle not only describes a pretty girl or woman, but also the name of Saint Mary's athletic teams.

Both Notre Dame and Saint Mary's can be accused of clinging to archaic ideas and stereotypes, most of which students are well aware of. Saint Mary's, however, perpetuates traditional prejudices by hanging on to the nickname, "belle." Yet few have commented on this nickname, surely one of the most obsolete customs at Saint Mary's or Notre Dame.

The word belle has absolutely nothing to do with athletics or Saint Mary's College in general. For most people the word belle conjures up images of Scarlett O'Hara lookalikes from down South. Since this happens to be the heart of the Midwest, not Atlanta, Georgia, that description does not make much sense.

One could try to be cute, as many do, and refer to the old Bing Crosby movie, "The Bells of Saint Mary's." However, this is 1984, Bing Crosby has nothing to do with Saint Mary's and never did. In fact, many poor, misguided souls around here have never heard of the movie.

So, why not a name change for Saint Mary's teams? Such a change could cause Saint Mary's athletes to breathe a collective sigh of relief.

It is difficult to be taken seriously when one is playing as a "belle." Come on, how intimidating can an athlete with the name "belle" be to other teams?

Just imagine the other teams in their locker rooms: "Boy, those belles look tough tonight!" or "Hey, remember to watch out for belle number 12."

Saint Mary's has long suffered from its stereotype as a college for husband-hunting females. Administrators and students deny this, and few put much stock in this worn prejudice. Most Saint Mary's women would be very upset, and with just cause, if accused of being mainly concerned with how they appear to males.

Yet this school promoting professional, practical and superior education for women, calls its athletic teams a group of "pretty women or girls."

Assuming Saint Mary's athletic teams don't consider themselves better-looking than other teams, why does their name convey that? It comes across as a bit pretentious. Why should our teams be saddled with a name that seems to promote them as the best-looking team?

Inside Tuesday

What kind of image does this present to other schools, and to Saint Mary's students themselves? They are consistently told they are the women leaders of tomorrow, future heads of business and industry. Somehow pretty women or girls as a lone description does not convey this idea.

Saint Mary's is not the only team suffering with a name which has nothing to do with the team or school itself. How about the Purdue Boilermakers, Old Dominion's Monarchs, or the Akron Zips? The name

"Fighting Irish" can be called unusual or interesting if nothing else.

But what if the Irish were called the "Fighting Beaus." You laugh, but beau happens to be the male equivalent of belle.

The biggest problem with the name Saint Mary's Belles is the lack of respect it commands. Saint Mary's athletes work hard, and they certainly deserve respect, especially since the Saint Mary's community generally gives them little attention. A name change will probably not prompt a change in students' attitudes, but it can only help.

Saint Mary's athletes and non-athletes alike should band together to choose and demand a suitable new name. There are many possibilities: name contests, prizes.

The name belle is one archaic tradition that deserves to die a quick, painless death.

Four immigrants sentenced despite protest as barroom rape trial ends

Associated Press

FALL RIVER, Mass. — Four men convicted of gang-raping a woman on a barroom pool table were sentenced yesterday to 6-12 years in prison by a judge who said they "brutalized a defenseless young woman and sought to degrade and destroy her human, individual dignity."

The victim's lawyer said afterward that the 22-year-old mother of two feared for her safety and had moved permanently from the area.

"There were five sentences in this case — one of them exile," said her lawyer, Scott Charnas.

Superior Court Judge William Young imposed terms of 9 to 12 years on Daniel Silva, 27, Victor Raposo, 23, and John Cordeiro, 24. Young sentenced Joseph Vieira, 28, to 6 to 8 years. Bristol County District Attorney Ronald Pina sought a lesser sentence for Vieira, saying he had no prior record and that the woman's testimony that he was directly involved in the rape was not corroborated.

The maximum penalty for aggravated rape is life imprisonment.

Several hundred stood quietly outside the century-old courthouse. The silence erupted into shouts of "Let them go!" The defendants, all Portuguese immigrants, are backed by many in their community who feel they were treated unfairly because of their national origin.

All the sentences will be served at the maximum-security Walpole State Prison. Under state law Vieira must serve at least four years; the others face at least six years before being eligible for parole.

"These individuals stand convicted of most serious crimes: crimes of extreme violence that brutalized a defenseless young woman and sought to degrade and destroy her human, individual dignity," the judge said in a memorandum accompanying the sentences. "Such crimes warrant a significant sanction."

Earlier, the elections council put the number of eligible voters at 2.5 million and predicted a turnout of 1.8 million. The difference of 700,000 eligible voters was not immediately explained.

The United States, chief backer of El Salvador against the rebels, gave $10 million to help pay for the computer and make registration lists. The 30 U.S. observers were among 28 foreign delegations here.

House Majority Leader Rep. Jim Wright, D-Texas, a co-chairman of the U.S. delegation, said a 70 percent turnout would be "highly acceptable . . . higher than we have seen in the United States."

Voting is mandatory here and those who fail to vote can be fined as much as $20, a significant sum in a country where the average annual income is $475.

NIT Roundup

B.C.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. — For the first time in the tournament, Notre Dame had to play away from home — something which the team had not done very well this season. The game at the "neutral" site of Springfield Coliseum matched the Irish and their "beef," Tim Kempton, against a troubled Boston College squad, whose tri-captain, forward Martin Clark, had recently quit the team.

The Eagles, led by the high-scoring duo of forward Jay Murphy and guard Michael Adams, had been ranked as high as sixth in the nation this season and entered the game as slight favorites. However, Boston College coach Gary Williams and his team were not ready for the two latest additions to the Notre Dame attack, a healthy Kempton and incredible accuracy from the foul line. Kempton scored 20 points in just 27 minutes of playing time, while the Irish, who had been averaging a weak 65 percent from the charity stripe, nailed 34 of their 39 attempts.

"We tried to pound the ball inside, which Tim Kempton did," said Irish coach Digger Phelps after the game. "With Kempton, we're 16-5. Without him, we're 3-6. That's all I can say about how important he is to the team."

"They come in here shooting 65 percent from the line and make 85 percent tonight," said a frustrated Williams after the game. "It's just so disappointing to outscore them from the field and lose."

Not only did Boston College score more points (38-32) from the field than Notre Dame did, but also the Irish scored more points from the foul line (34) than they did from the field (32).

The key point of the game was the middle of the second half. Notre Dame had fallen behind by seven, 39-32, and seemed to be floundering. However, Kempton and Tom Sluby quickly put the Irish in front by scoring 11 of the next 17 points of the game. The Eagles grabbed their final lead, 51-50, with 3:05 left, but Notre Dame hit 12 of its last 15 foul shots to blow away the cold-shooting (32 percent) Eagles.

Pitt

PITTSBURGH — Digger Phelps did not have to ask, "Where's the Beef?" after his squad slowly pounded its way past Pittsburgh and into the NIT Final Four. Using a 37-23 rebounding advantage, with Tim Kempton and Jim Dolan combining for 16 rebounds, the Irish pulled away from their hosts in the final minutes and silenced the sellout crowd at Pitt's tiny Fitzgerald Fieldhouse.

The key to the victory was Notre Dame's ability to shut down the Panther offense, which likes a fast-paced transition game. By dominating both the offensive and defensive boards, the Irish were able to keep Pitt from beating the defense down the court. A tightly-packed defense also forced the Panthers to shoot just 46 percent from the field.

"The real key to the game was the fact that we couldn't get our running game going in the second half," said Pitt coach Roy Chipman. "Having to come down and get into a half-court game isn't our style."

"Notre Dame just kept its poise and we couldn't get them to turn it over late in the game when we were trying to get back into it."

Once again, it was Tom Sluby and Kempton who led the Irish offense. Sluby scored a team-high 18 points, while Kempton scored 13. However, it was the performance of point guard Joe Howard that provided the biggest boost, as he scored 15 points, most of them late in the game.

The Panthers moved out to a big 16-7 lead early in the game and held a 31-28 lead at halftime, largely on the scoring of Clyde Vaughan and George Allen, who had 24 first-half points between them. However, the Irish quickly turned the game around in the second half by outscoring Pitt, 10-1, in the first four minutes of the half.

Lettuce hear from you...

Come to Paradise, come to Notre Dame

In a world of changing values, few things remain the same. Notre Dame is the Catholics' constant. The same problems that exist throughout the world exist at Notre Dame, but they have not marred her golden character.

To those who see the educational system in the United States as faltering, the minds of the youth as wasted: Let them come to Notre Dame.

Joseph Murphy

Wishful thinking

To those who view today's youth as sexually active alcoholics with drug tendencies: Let them come to Notre Dame.

To those who witness the violence, hatred and prejudice that plague the world: Let them come to Notre Dame.

To those who say that the Catholic Church is an institution of the past, that Catholics are no longer different: Let them come to Notre Dame.

If anyone doubts the future of mankind,

Notre Dame can ease those fears. Most certainly, Notre Dame is an imperfect institution, but she remains a symbol of all that is ideal and catholic.

While striving for academic excellence, Notre Dame has continued her commitment to those denied a chance to enjoy life.

Notre Dame has maintained an awareness not just of the local South Bend community, but of the world. Her awareness programs have addressed the problem of hunger in the world. Some students even fast one day a week.

Leading the troops to battle has been Father Hesburgh, who has traveled the globe speaking about the plight of the hungry and the poor. His latest cause is nuclear disarmament. At a time when most people have retired, Father Hesburgh continues to set an example for his students.

Above all, one finds at Notre Dame students with a sense of social justice. Young men and women who believe they can make a difference. They have the Faith.

The doubters have spoken before, but they do not understand the nature of this place.

They complain of everything that is wrong with the University, everything that is lacking.

True, there are many things lacking at Notre Dame. Among them are: heavy drug use, long hair, expectant mothers and campus riots. The students do occasionally protest, but the protest usually concerns such outrageous demands as having Cap'n Crunch cereal in the dining halls. The students are not so much rebels these days, as comedians.

Campus politics follow a predictable cycle. The students complain, are ignored, and go to sleep. The cycle is based on the authority of the administration and on the desire of students to graduate.

Occasionally, an issue, usually related to parietals (sex) or alcohol, causes a hot flash on the campus. Such issues are infrequent but, when they arise, linger for months until replaced by new ones, such as who should count student ballots.

What is important in the debates of trivial pursuit over student rights is not the outcome, especially since students never win, but the fact that students learn they have rights. In learning to demand their rights, the students will one day be able to defend the rights of others. Hesburgh, perhaps, adheres to the philosophy that the man cannot walk until the child learns to crawl.

The doubters reply that it is hard to crawl when you are chained to the crib.

The doubters view all these squabbles occurring within the family as they might a serpent hiding in a bush.

What they do not realize is that whatever the impact of this place and its people, the intentions of Notre Dame are always altruistic.

The doubters are the complainers. They speak, but do not act. Whatever their notion of social justice, it remains locked in their heads. They may be concerned, but they are not committed.

To repeat, let those who are pessimistic about the future of Notre Dame come to Notre Dame and find hope. For this place is as close to paradise as anywhere in the civilized world.

To those who disagree with all of this, let them write to The Observer.

Joe Murphy is a freshman in Arts & Letters at Notre Dame and is the new Assistant Viewpoint Editor at The Observer.

Wrong information

Dear Editor:

The editorial by Bill Kraus which appeared March 16, titled N.D. forfeiting ideals for military contained some misleading information.

Kraus stated that Notre Dame holds investments in five companies which rely on Department of Defense contracts for over 50 percent of their revenue. Kraus' information was apparently drawn from an investment policy proposed to the Trustees by our group.

Because Notre Dame does not disclose information on its investment holdings, it is incorrect to say Notre Dame holds stock in the aforementioned companies. No one outside of the Board of Trustees and the officers of the University has access to this information, including Kraus.

Idealistic viewpoint

Dear Editor:

I am a senior in high school and will be attending Notre Dame as a freshman next fall. Because my brother is presently a senior there, we receive The Observer at our home in Cincinnati.

I was reading your paper when a particular article caught my eye. The article was by a guest columnist, Bill Kraus, and was entitled N.D. forfeiting ideals for military. It appeared in the March 16 issue. The article was the most absurd I have seen in The Observer since we began our subscription four years ago.

I certainly hope that my years at Notre Dame do not render me naive and idealistic like Kraus. He has an opinion lacking any of the sense of history or reality that every political columnist must have. Not only do I disagree entirely with the article, but he writes several very inaccurate things.

Kraus writes that "war never preserved democracy, never resulted in lasting peace, and never effectively guaranteed freedoms." Who is he kidding? Was World War II not a war? Was Hitler merely a preserver of peace? Was our American Revolution not a war?

I fail to see Kraus's logic. America has fought in at least four wars to preserve democracy and the freedoms we so dearly enjoy: the Revolution, the Civil War, World War I and World War II.

Does Kraus seriously suggest that we should not have used military force to stop Nazi Germany? If he does, then he expects national leaders to be as naive as he has shown himself to be.

Kraus assumes that Christ hated all war. Like many simple minded idealists, he supposes that Christ's statement, "he who lives by the sword, dies by the sword" denounces all violence.

However, Jesus never once says that all violence is wrong. In fact, St. Augustine (who was one of the greatest Christian theologians ever) spends several sections of City of God explaining a just war and why it sometimes may be necessary. Where Kraus gets his idea that "Jesus would not fight in any war, just or unjust..." is beyond me.

It should be obvious to anyone aware of twentieth century history that the Soviet Union is operating on an expansionist theory of foreign policy. How does Kraus propose that we deal with this growing empire?

Does he want us to rid ourselves of the military and allow our freedom to be lost, as he presumably feels we should have done with Hitler's Germany? The only way the Soviet Union will ever listen to any peace proposals is from a position of strength. Any other suggestion is irresponsible and naive.

Obviously Kraus feels we should lay down our arms and allow our freedom to diminish. The real world is much more complicated than that.

I challenge Kraus to be a more responsible Christian. Jesus did not say "allow yourselves to be walked on." Rather, he promoted personal freedom and liberties that only a well-defended nation can enjoy.

Hofman's standards

Dear Editor:

Last Friday morning, March 16, 1984, I walked confidently into the Engineering Auditorium knowing that another "Emil" ritually awaited me. This quiz was unlike all previous ones, though. Dr. Hofman was not there to constantly "keep an eye" on any possible cheaters, just in case any were to be found.

He was not present during the quiz because he was disgraced and deeply wounded after reading the article on academic dishonesty published in the March 15 issue of The Observer.

According to the article, cheating is more frequent in the Chemistry 115-116 courses than in any other course. The article also stated that the vast majority of students in these courses have cheated at least once, and some have virtually passed the courses by cheating.

As a member of Chemistry 116, I would like to know where the vast majority of these cheaters is.

During the last two weeks, on quiz days, Dr. Hofman has made every member of his classes aware of an honor policy. If a person could take the quiz honestly, without any cheating whatsoever, he was to sign his name on the quiz. On the other hand, if a person cheated on the quiz, he was to print his name.

The policy was instigated solely for the benefit of the quiz-takers, enabling them to truly prove or disprove their own honesty. I wonder if the author of the article on academic honesty counted the number of printed names before he assumed a vast majority of us were cheaters.

Dr. Hofman issues a multiple-choice quiz because he feels this to be one of the best ways to test our mastery of the material. The quiz also tests our responsibility and integrity as human beings. Although we receive no grades that will influence our G.P.A.'s, they will influence our entire lives.

Dr. Hofman is trying to show his students that a moral education goes hand in hand with a book education by giving us a free decision to cheat or not to cheat.

I do not believe the vast majority of Dr. Hofman's students would lower themselves to cheating, but obviously someone who writes for The Observer does believe this. Dr. Hofman was terribly disturbed by what he read.

I hate to think that the Dean of the Freshman Year has no faith left in the class of '87. Maybe those of you who do cheat should seriously consider how much you are hurting yourselves along with the rest of us.

Rampant cheating?

Dear Editor:

I am writing in response to The Observer's article on cheating which appeared on the front page of the March 15 issue. I feel that this article grossly exaggerated the amount of cheating which occurs in Dr. Hofman's Chemistry 115-116 class.

The survey of students done by Mr. Neblo must have been extremely incomplete to give the author the impression that a majority of the class has cheated at least once.

The article which appeared in The Observer was a public humiliation of Dr. Hofman, a man who has devoted his life to Notre Dame. I feel that Dr. Hofman deserves a public apology from not only the author of the article, but also the editorial staff, who allowed the article to be printed.

There will be a MANDATORY SAC meeting, TUESDAY, March 27 (Tonite) at 5:30 in the LaFortune Alcove Room. This will be a short meeting to discuss the SUITCASE PARTY.

IF YOU ARE JUST GRADUATING INTO DEBT, HERE'S HOW TO GET OUT.

If you've gone to college on National Direct Student Loan or a Guaranteed Student Loan or a Federally Insured Student Loan made after October 1, 1975, here's a great way to pay them off.

Get the Army to help you do it.

Instead of taking a long, long time paying back that student loan, you spend a short time in the Army learning a skill, and possibly even accumulating additional money for college (like a graduate degree) via Army College Fund.

If you qualify, each year you serve reduces your indebtedness by one-third, or $1,500, whichever amount is greater. A 3-year enlistment eliminates your debt.

It's worth looking into. See your Army Recruiter.

Irish reach NIT Championship game

Sluby leads team past SLU, 65-59

By JEFF BLUMB
Assistant Sports Editor

NEW YORK — It was a classic case of the familiar and the unfamiliar last night for the Notre Dame basketball team, as the Irish stopped Southwestern Louisiana, 65-59, in the semifinals of the NIT.

Notre Dame now faces Michigan, who edged Virginia Tech, 78-75, in the first half of last night's doubleheader, in the championship game on Wednesday (9 p.m. — USA Network).

Recognizably, it was the Notre Dame team playing which out-rebounds its opponents game after game. But this was not the same Notre Dame team shooting free throws last night.

While most fans will remember the poor foul shooting of the Irish earlier this season, it has been a different Notre Dame team at the line of late — and last night it really paid off.

The Irish made their first 15 attempts of the night, as they went on to 17-20 shooting from the line for an uncharacteristic 85 percent.

Again last night, Notre Dame dominated the boards, pulling down 38 rebounds to Southwestern Louisiana's 30. The domination of the Irish in the rebounding department was no more evident than in the offensive rebounding column. Notre Dame was able to grab 12 rebounds at the offensive end.

"Their offensive rebounds were a definite key," said Bobby Paschal, coach of the Ragin' Cajuns, afterward. "They were one of the better rebounding teams we played this year."

"But you can look at other things that made the difference in the game. We did not execute well at all on the offensive end, and we were impatient on offense. We also missed some key free throws, and they hit just about all of theirs at crucial times."

Neither team was able to do much in the first half, as the lead changed hands six times. The Irish were able to struggle out to a 24-19 halftime lead on their 40 percent shooting from the field in the initial period because the Cajuns could manage but 39 percent themselves.

The shots just didn't seem to be falling for either team. In the second half, though, that situation appeared to change.

"We just tried to get better shots," said Notre Dame captain Tom Sluby of the turnaround. "I had problems early. Maybe I was just a little nervous."

"I think I was rushing my shot. Coach (Digger Phelps) just sat me on the bench to see things more clearly, and I settled down," continued Sluby, who ended up with 26 points on the night.

From its 24-19 advantage at the half, Notre Dame was able to increase that margin to 32-21 to open the second half. The Irish then,

'I think that maybe we thought we could coast after we got up by 11, but we just regrouped out on the floor and then dug in again.' — Tom Sluby however, lost some of the aggressiveness they had displayed earlier in the game, and allowed Southwest Louisiana to crawl back into the game.

"I think that maybe we thought we could coast after we got up by 11," Sluby said of the letdown. "But we just regrouped out on the floor and then dug in again."

"Defensively, we played tentatively in that one spurt," Notre Dame coach Digger Phelps said afterward. "Southwest Louisiana is a streak-spurt team, and that's what worried me."

But after losing its lead at 49-48 and then falling behind, 53-50, on a back-door layup by George Almones, Notre Dame took a time out with 5:56 remaining in the game.

That timeout may have made all the difference in the world.

Instead of falling apart then, as it had many times this season, Notre

The return of Tim Kempton (shown here in the game against Boston College, in which he scored 20 points) to the Irish lineup has been a key factor in Notre Dame's success in the NIT. During break, Notre Dame defeated Boston College and Pittsburgh, and last night they beat Southwestern Louisiana to earn a spot in the finals Wednesday night. For more on the NIT, see the related stories on this page and on page 4.

Dame came back to take charge of the contest.

Joseph Price drove the lane for a short jumper right after the time out, Sluby popped twice from outside, and Tim Kempton ended the eight-point run with a layup off a Price feed with the Irish now in their high post (delay) offense.

With the score 58-53 in favor of them and the 45-second shot clock off because the time remaining was under four minutes, the Irish were able to control the game tempo the rest of the way.

Southwest Louisiana was forced to foul down the stretch, and, of course, Notre Dame had little trouble connecting from the gift line on the ensuing one-and-ones.

Notre Dame now returns to the finals of this 47-year-old tournament for the second time. The Irish lost to Virginia Tech, 92-91, in overtime for a second-place finish in the 1973 tournament.

Virginia Tech fell just a little short last night in the night's other game at Madison Square Garden. The contest was an exciting, run-and-gun battle that see-sawed throughout.

Phelps, who will work his 21-11 troops for an hour-and-a half this afternoon at the Garden, address the problems which the 22-10 Wolverines pose at a 12:30 p.m. press conference today.

The Irish coach, however, did

Notre Dame football team begins spring practice

Notre Dame's three new defensive coaches got their first look at the 1984 Irish football squad — minus the incoming freshmen — as the spring practice season opened yesterday at Cartier Field.

Coach Gerry Faust, who enters his fourth season at the Irish helm, led his players through position drills with each of their respective coaches, and for three of those coaches, it was time to get acquainted with their troops.

The roster is missing a few notable players, including seven four-year monogram winners — quarterback Blair Kiel, offensive tackle Mike Shiner, kicker Mike Johnston, defensive tackle Jon Autry, linebacker Rick Naylor, cornerback Stacey Toran, and safety Chris Brown. Gone also is starting guard Neil Maune, and additional defensive backs Daane Spielmaker and John Mosely.

Although the task of finding replacements for graduating players is always a goal of spring workouts, the appearance of the three new defensive coaches took top billing this time.

Andy Christoff, the new defensive coordinator and coach of the defensive backs, has a throng of players trying to secure defensive backfield positions vacated by Toran and Brown.

Two starters — senior (to be) Joe Johnson and junior Pat Ballage — return in the secondary for next year, but this will be an admitted Irish weak spot.

In order to remedy this situation, many players will get a shot at the open secondary positions, as Christoff tries to fill the depth charts before the fall.

Junior Van Percy and sophomore Mike Haywood, former receivers, as well as junior Lester Flemmons and sophomore Trey Coleman, tailbacks last season, all went through practice on defense. Sophomores Troy Wilson and Steve Lawrence, who both saw action in the secondary in the fall, are expected to make contributions as well.

"We wanted to shore up our weak spots, and that's our biggest one," said Faust. "We'd like to go into the fall with the top two people established in every position."

Bishop Harris, a former assistant at LSU, is in charge of the outside linebackers and defensive ends. He will have a much easier time, as senior Mike Golic and junior Rick DiBernardo return. Although DiBernardo did not start in 1983, he did see considerable action. Providing backup will be senior Joe Bars and sophomore Robert Banks.

The defensive tackles will be under the tutelage of Rick Lantz, who came to Notre Dame via Georgia Tech. Senior Mike Gann, junior Greg Dingens and sophomore Mike Griffin have the top spots for now, with support coming from junior Eric Dorsey and senior Jerry Weinle.

George Kelly, the only returning defensive coach, may have the most luxuries at the inside linebacker slots. Junior Tony Furjanic, the top Irish tackler last season, and sophomore Mike Kovalski should benefit greatly from the return of speedy junior Mike Larkin, who sat out last season with a broken arm after being the second-leading tackler in 1982.

The offensive side of the coin is a brighter story, with ten starters returning.

The offensive line could rank as one of Notre Dame's biggest and best ever. Seniors Mike Kelley and Larry Williams will occupy the center and the strong guard positions, respectively. Junior Tim Scannell will be back in his quick guard slot, while fellow juniors Mike Perrino and Tom Doerger will be the tackles. Junior Ron Plantz and sophomore Jon Askin will provide depth up front.

To carry the ball, Notre Dame's entire backfield will be back. Junior Heisman Trophy candidate Allen Pinkett led the Irish in rushing and scoring last season and returns with visions of improving his impressive totals. His backup is flashy sophomore Hiawatha Francisco. Senior Chris Smith will remain as the top fullback, with help coming from classmate Mark Brooks.

Steve Beuerlein looks to go into his sophomore campaign as the Irish signal caller after an impressive freshman season. Scott Grooms will be back for his final season to provide assistance, as will sophomore Joe Felitsky.

Receiving Beuerlein's passes will be senior Joe Howard, who will have to wait for the NIT to end before starting football practice, along with junior Milt Jackson and sophomore Alvin Miller.

The kicking game is another thing that Faust would like to have settled, because replacements for both Kiel and Johnston are needed.

Faust was fairly pleased with what he saw in the first practice, although he admits that it is too early to make judgements.

With 17 returning starters, the Liberty Bowl triumph, and the improvement Faust has noted over his three years here, there is much reason for optimism for the 1984 season.

The spring practice session closes with the 54th annual Blue-Gold game, which is slated for Saturday, April 28.
