Judicial Council discusses student activity fee, parietals at meeting

By MIKE MILLEN
News Staff

The status of both the parietals and Du Lac reports was discussed at last night's Judicial Council meeting.

According to Joe Roveda, member of the Du Lac subcommittee, any changes would be clarifications only.

"We just need to start writing it up," he said, noting that "it should be ready before Easter."

"The parietals study is near completion," said Bob Gleason, judicial coordinator. He said, "We have reached a consensus on the issues. We will present it at the same time as the Du Lac report, but it will focus completely on parietals." Gleason could not reveal the details or the contents of the report at the meeting, but promised to make the findings public as soon as they are ready.

The Judicial Council's position on the proposed $10 student activities fee increase was discussed. Gleason, who possesses one vote in the forthcoming student senate vote on the proposal, voiced opposition to the resolution.

Plans for a meeting between rectors and Judicial Council members was addressed. The informal get-to-be scheduled sometime in the near future.

New additions and changes to the Judicial Council's bylaws were reported complete, and Gleason noted that the proposals will be put to a vote at the next council meeting. Gleason stressed that a new attendance policy will be part of the plan.

Nineteen inmates killed in Peruvian prison uprising

Associated Press

LIMA, Peru — Prison inmates armed with dynamite and pistols held 14 hostages for 12 hours before guards attacked with gas and bullets to end the uprising. Prison officials said today that 19 prisoners were killed.

The Directorate of Peruvian Prisons said four hostages and four inmates were injured at El Sexto prison in downtown Lima. There were no reports of any hostages being killed.

Luis Arancibia, a prison official who reported the 19 deaths, said the standoff began Tuesday when six prisoners seized nine prison employees and five fellow inmates as hostages during an escape attempt.

The siege ended Tuesday night when penitentiary guards stormed the inmate-held administrative section and warden's office, using paralyzing gas and tear gas to rescue the hostages, police said. Crowds gathered outside and screamed for police to kill the inmates.

Early reports conflicted on the number of dead. A justice Ministry spokesman said eight inmates were killed, and authorities at the prison at first said only one person was killed, the ringleader of the rebellion.

Inmates doused one hostage with kerosene and set the victim on fire when authorities refused to meet their demands for two vans in which to make an escape. Another hostage was knifed repeatedly, reports said.

A guard said inmates cut out the tongue of one of the hostages after she gave a telephone interview to reporters from the warden's office. She was identified as Carmen Montes, a secretary.

Hart, Mondale tangle over issues, images during televised debate

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Walter Mondale and Gary Hart debated in heated and personal terms yesterday night about the charges they had been leveling at one another in the ever intense Democratic presidential campaign.

Debating six days before the New York primary, the two presidential candidates lost little time going after each other in the nationally televised debate broadcast from Columbia University.

Mondale demanded that Hart act "this night" to withdraw television advertisements "that suggest I'm trying to kill kids."

Retorted Hart: "why do you question my commitment to arms control and civil rights?"

The third candidate, the Rev. Jesse Jackson, said, "Tomorrow the issue will be this rat-a-tat (between Hart and Mondale) without giving a direction. The fact is, the reason they are having this kind of a kinship struggle is because there are such similarities in policy. It's a matter both running in the same direction just a little slower."

Votes on the windfall profits tax and the Chrysler bailout legislation were among the topics as Mondale, Hart and Jackson sat around a table with moderator Dan Rather of CBS news. The network sponsored the debate.

Hart and Mondale tangled over energy policy with the former vice president saying Hart voted with "big oil" and the Colorado senator retorting, "He knows better than that."

Hart, saying Mondale was willing to "sacrifice American lives" in a war for Persian Gulf oil, added, "I don't think we ought to lose American lives fighting for someone else's oil."

"Don't worry about Walter Mondale and American lives," said the former vice president. "I'll stand strong there."

He defended his stance in Central America, saying he would "not pull the plug" on American forces stationed in the region.

Hart has attacked Mondale recently for not calling for immediate withdrawal of American forces from Central America, and said the former vice president's policies could lead to the "rather large loss" of American lives.

"Why do you run those ads that suggest I'm trying to kill kids, when you know better," Mondale said. "I'm for peace."

A few moments later the former vice president said, "I think you ought to pull those ads down this night."

Hart, whom Mondale has attacked for several weeks on civil rights and arms control, said: "why would you question my commitment to arms control and civil rights when you know I have just as strong a commitment as you do."

The debate came less than a week before the biggest prize so far in the Democratic nomination fight — the New York primary and 252 delegates to the Democratic National Convention.

Mondale lambasted Hart for moving too slowly in supporting a

Jesse Jackson is a legitimate candidate for the presidency.

Four months ago this statement would have been laughed at by the Democratic political establishment. It is a statement that only Jackson and his small group of loyal supporters would have believed.

Since his original declaration of candidacy in November, much of the skepticism has vanished. His strong showing in recent primaries has assured him of continued federal matching funds. This, coupled with the thinning of the Democratic field from eight to three, has placed Jackson's candidacy in a new light.

Although Hart and Mondale are seen as the front-runners, it is a foolish person who ignores the role Jackson has played and will continue to play in this campaign, say his supporters.

Jesse Jackson was born in Greenville, S.C. in 1942. He attended the University of Illinois on a football scholarship for one year and then transferred to North Carolina Agricultural and Technical College.

He was an honor student and was elected student body president. He met his wife Jacqueline there with whom he has five children. He graduated in 1964.

He began civil rights involvement while in school, leading student sit-ins at segregated public places. He also was an organizer of the Young Democrats club. After graduating, he decided to study for the ministry. He was ordained a Baptist minister in 1968 from Chicago Theological Seminary.

He met Martin Luther King in Alabama in 1965 and joined his Southern Christian Leadership Conference. Jackson became one of his key aides when King expanded his civil rights activities to Chicago. Jackson became the director of Operation Breadbasket, the SCLC's Chicago based economic arm. He was with King when he was assassinated in 1968.

After King's death, he consolidated his position as head of Operation Breadbasket. He was successful in pressuring white businesses with boycotts if they didn't hire more blacks and do more business in the black community.

In 1971 he broke with the SCLC and formed Operation PUSH (People United to Save Humanity.) As director of PUSH he has used the pressure of economic boycotts to convince companies such as Coca-Cola, 7-Up and Burger King to deal fairly with the black community.

He has been active in Chicago politics as a supporter of various candidates and politicians. Though never holding a public office, he has used these political ties to influence Chicago politics.

His recent nationwide voter registration drive and his diplomatic coup of securing the release of captured navy pilot Robert Goodman Jr. have catapulted him onto the

More than $1,000 worth of stereo equipment was taken from an eleventh floor room of Flanner Hall during Spring break, according to security officials. Entry was gained by drilling a small hole in the door and opening the lock. Lost were 200 record albums, a watch, calculator, sheets, pillows and blankets. All residence halls were patrolled during Spring break, but the burglary apparently went unnoticed, officials said, because of the minor damage to the door. — The Observer

Anthropology in the Middle East will be the subject of a mini-course being offered beginning Tuesday, April 3 and ending Thursday, May 3. The course will examine social, cultural, and political themes in novels, short stories and poems of the Middle East. The class will be taught by visiting Fulbright Professor K. Kasmich, from the University of Damascus, and Professor E. Early of the Anthropology dept. Students may sign up at the Anthropology office, 346 O'Shaughnessy. — The Observer

Cheating outcry misdirected

The Observer is irresponsible. The Observer doesn't cover stories fairly. The Observer is about as unprofessional as a newspaper can be.

These are common complaints towards Notre Dame's only daily newspaper. They are being heard more often in recent days because of a March 15 article this paper published concerning cheating within the University. Many students have written letters complaining that the article was partial and said they were offended by the statistics reported, especially those about the Chemistry 115-116 course taught by Prof. Emil T. Hofman.

John Neblo's article states, "The course cited most often (for cheating) is Chemistry 115-116, where students speculate that the vast majority of the class has cheated at least once and some students have virtually passed the course by cheating."

In reacting to this article, Hofman told his class, which is mostly freshmen, that he "felt betrayed" by students who cheated on the quizzes, and walked out on the class.

"One couldn't help but feel moved by what he said. A lot of people thought he might have overreacted. His overreaction is understandable, however, since the article did make some rather hasty generalizations," said Mike Millen, a freshman who was present at the class Hofman left.

That Hofman was disappointed with alleged cheating is obvious, but the question remains as to whether The Observer was wrong to make such a broad statement based upon the opinions of a few students. Did the paper jump the gun on this story in order to make it more readable and interesting?

Nearly everybody has heard of some kind of cheating in Hofman's chemistry class at one time or another. Whether it is the discreet glance at the next person's paper or a review session the night before with a hijacked quiz, the majority of students who don't cheat at least know somebody who has cheated. Cheating is a problem in every class, not just Hofman's. It's a temptation to anybody who has the opportunity, and occasionally we sacrifice our principles for a better quiz or test grade.

But it's not up to The Observer to moralize for the student body. We in the news department try daily to objectively report the events going on around campus, from the lectures and concerts to the uses and abuses of power. This is no easy task. With no journalism school to train our writers and editors, we learn from our mistakes and gain from our successes.

Once in a while we make a blunder so major that we must print a retraction. Once in a while an inaccuracy slips by and we must correct it the next day. Sometimes we slip out of our objectivity and either accidentally or purposely let our true colors fly in our news story.

But there will be no retraction of John Neblo's cheating story. The information we received was accurate, as we understood it.

The letters published in the viewpoint section this past week from some of the freshmen in Hofman's course complain that the reporter was unfair in making the statement that there is cheating in that class. Following Hofman's berating of the class, some students were so moved that they felt it necessary to publicly voice their complaint in The Observer.

Wrote freshman Stephen O'Neil, "The Observer ... unfairly tarnished the reputations that honest students are just beginning to build for themselves ... Instead of commending Dr.

Hofman for the work he has done by promoting honesty and Christian morality through his example to students, it unfairly damaged reputation he has built over thirty years."

Since The Observer is only trying to objectively report on cheating by what we have been told by students who take the course, perhaps it is not the newspaper that is irresponsible but the students themselves. Maybe their consciences bothered them so much after Hofman's tirade that they thought they had to pass the blame to the newspaper.

Maybe it's time the freshmen in Hofman's class realized that in the real world the news isn't always good, even if it's about themselves. We all make mistakes, but when we do we shouldn't try to blame somebody else for them.

Preservation hall Jazz Band plays at SMC as part of concert series

By DIANNE MCBRIEN
News Staff

Saint Mary's continues its Performing Arts Series tomorrow night with the Preservation Hall Jazz Band Festival, beginning at 8 in O'Laughlin Auditorium.

Tickets, which may be reserved by calling the Moreau Box Office at 284-4626, are $5 for general admission and $2 for students and senior citizens. Admission is free for Saint Mary's students.

Selected for the series by a committee of Saint Mary's faculty, staff, and students, the New Orleans-based Preservation Hall Jazz Band represents the best of an American tradition — blues and gospel-influenced New Orleans jazz.

The group was formed in the mid-1950's, a poor period for New Orleans jazz when few of its musicians were active. Some of them claimed Preservation Hall, an old building in the city's French quarter, as their coffeehouse — a casual place where musicians could perform. Soon the 200 year-old building became a popular spot for bands and jazz lovers alike.

The Preservation Hall Jazz Band is the most famous of the groups performing at the Hall. A seven-piece band, it has undergone several personnel changes in its nearly 30 years. The present touring group includes Frank Demond, trombone; Percy G. Humphrey, trumpet; William Humphrey, Jr., clarinet; Alan Jaffe, bass horn; Marvin Henry Kimball, banjo; James Edward Sing Miller, piano; and Frank Parker, drums.

Concerts on tour recreate the relaxed, spontaneous atmosphere of Preservation Hall jam sessions. There is no listed program; the musicians decide what to play by the audience's reactions. People feel free to sway and dance to the music, especially when musicians lead members of the audience on stage during their rendition of When the Saints Go Marching In.

Remaining tickets are for folding chairs and standing room only.

Senate expects El Salvador aid bill to pass while Shultz has objections

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A democratic leader yesterday predicted Senate approval of a compromise $61.7 million military aid package for El Salvador, but Secretary of State George Shultz said he would resist any move to cut off the aid if the government now being chosen is overthrown in a military coup.

"I think it is not necessary and is inappropriate to seem to be predicting that possibility," Shultz said. "The military in El Salvador has gone to great lengths to depoliticize themselves. I don't see any evidence of anything to the contrary."

Shultz made his remarks to the Senate Appropriations subcommittee that oversees the State Department budget.

Sen. Dale Bumpers, D-Ark., said he had heard speculation about a possible coup if centrist presidential candidate Jose Napoleon Duarte, who led in Sunday's first round of voting in El Salvador, is elected in a runoff expected to be held in May.

He asked Shultz if he would support an amendment to cut off aid in that event. "No, sir," Shultz said.

The Senate is expected to vote this week on a bill that would provide $61.7 million in emergency military aid to El Salvador in the current fiscal year. The Appropriations Committee approved $93 million in aid by a close vote earlier this month, but the Reagan administration compromised on the lower figure after Senate Democrats threatened to delay action.

Congress has already approved $64.8 million in military aid for the Central American nation in this fiscal year, but ordered that $20 million of it could not be spent until there is a trial and verdict in the case of four American churchwomen murdered in El Salvador in December, 1980.

Sen. Daniel K. Inouye, D-Hawaii, the sponsor of the compromise measure, told reporters, "It's going to pass." Inouye is chairman of a Democratic task force on Central America and senior Democrat on the appropriations subcommittee that handles foreign spending.

Inouye said Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., indicated in a meeting of the task force that he plans to offer an amendment to provide only enough money to last through May, withholding further installments until after the runoff when the makeup of the new government is known.

Meanwhile, Rep. Clarence Long, D-Md., chairman of the House Appropriations subcommittee on foreign operations, said, "I am concerned that we need them (the Salvadoran regime) more than they need us, and we are going to continue to give them arms no matter how atrocious their behavior is."

Long spoke at a subcommittee hearing at which Aryeh Neier, chairman of the Americas Watch Committee, testified, "In recent months, the U.S. Embassy in San Salvador, with the intermittent support of the Reagan administration, has conducted a campaign against killings and disappearances of civilian non-combatants" by death squads.

"This campaign has had an impact, reducing the number to about a dozen each week," Neier said. Nevertheless, he said, the human rights group opposes all military aid to El Salvador because of consistent "violations of internationally recognized human rights."

Girl Scout drive tainted by objects

Associated Press

More than 100 people have taken advantage of a Crawfordsville hospital's offer to X-ray Girl Scout cookies after a Crawfordsville man found a needle in a mint cookie.

Meanwhile, Girl Scouts in Evansville ended their annual cookie sale four days early, and Fort Wayne officials awaited word on whether Girl Scout cookies would be distributed, after national reports of cookies containing needles and other small objects.

In Crawfordsville, where a sewing needle was found in a Girl Scout cookie Monday, Culver Union Hospital offered X-ray service Tuesday through tonight. Michael J. Kidwell, radiology assistant, said yesterday that no foreign objects were found so far.

Kidwell said about 110 people came in Tuesday night to have more than 70 cases of cookies checked.

"Tonight we've had about 15 cases," brought in in the first half hour, Kidwell said. The service is being offered from 5 p.m. to 9 p.m.

Shirley Gooding of Crawfordsville found a needle Monday when she determined a thin mint cookie "didn't look right" and broke it open. She had not bitten into the cookie and was not hurt.

Police said it appeared to have been baked into the cookie and not inserted through a tampered box.

Pins, needles, and paper clips were first discovered two weeks ago in Missouri cookies sold by St. Louis Girl Scouts. Since then, reports of contamination have come from Colorado, Kentucky, Nebraska, Georgia, Indiana, Maine, Illinois, Ohio, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Minnesota, although some of the reports turned out to be hoaxes.

At Terre Haute, Terre Haute Regional Hospital also offered to examine cookies with a flouroscope for foreign objects.

Dr. Benjamin Ko, director of radiology, said yesterday that the service that began a day earlier will continue "as long as people are scared enough."

"I can't do it in my rush hours in the morning but in the slow hours in the afternoon (from 3 p.m. to 5 p.m.) anyone who wants to can bring the cookies in," he said.

Ko said that two boxes of cookies were brought in Tuesday but no harmful objects were found. Late yesterday, no one had brought in cookies, he said. Ko joked that he was happy to offer the service "as long as people give me one" cookie.

Ko compared the cookie scare to the scare that results when objects are found in Halloween treats.

In Fort Wayne, officials of the area's Lumberlost Girl Scout Council, which administers scout programs in Adams, Allen, DeKalb, Huntington, Steuben and Wells Counties, were awaiting word from national Girl Scout officials on what to do about cookie sales. Delivery had been scheduled for April 9 through April 30, with store sales scheduled for April 18, 21, 25 and 28.

Wayne McDowell, Lumberlost executive director, said the sale of 366,500 boxes of cookies was expected to net $350,000 for the area council.

Jan Davies, a spokeswoman for Evansville scouts, said sales at four cookie stores were suspended Tuesday. "We were staffing those stores with volunteers, and people were concerned and not buying cookies, so we closed the stores," she said.

Mrs. Davis said there have been no reports of foreign objects in any of the 384,000 boxes of cookies sold by the local scout organization.

At Lafayette, Sycamore Council spokeswoman Audrey Dirksen said the Crawfordsville situation appeared to be an isolated incident.

Lava flows within miles of city as Hawaii prepares for eruption

Associated Press

HILLO, Hawaii — A mile-wide lava flow from Mauna Loa slowed but continued to move within seven miles of Hawaii's second-largest city yesterday, while residents living in its path made plans to leave if the molten rock threatened their homes.

"I'll jump in one car and my wife will jump in another car and we'll grab what we can," said Victor Souza, 34, whose home is among those nearest the flow.

The main lava flow slowed during the night, advancing to within seven miles of homes in Hilo's upper Kaumana section, said Reggie Okamura of the U.S. Geological Survey's Hawaiian Volcano Observatory.

There was no immediate danger to populated areas on the island of Hawaii, he said. The main flow reached a fairly flat area and its advance slowed to about 400 feet per hour, Okamura said.

The flat area is a mile wide, he said, but he could not estimate how long the lava would build up before tumbling downhill again.

The front of the flow widened to just under a mile wide, he said.

The flow earlier had been moving at 1,000 feet per hour, and at that rate it could have reached homes in the city of 48,000 today.

Civil defense officials made no move to evacuate residents and Mayor Herbert Matayoshi said it was too early to declare an emergency.

Some residents of the Kaumana area made tentative plans to move belongings, but most said they weren't worried yet.

"I'll leave if the flow comes within two miles," said Souza, a resident of the new Kaumana City subdivision closest to the flow.

"I don't want to fool around with nature," he said. "I'm not going to stay around to try to divert the lava in order to save the house," said Souza, 34, who moved into the subdivision with his wife Linda and their two daughters last October.

A fountain of lava spraying up to 100 feet high was feeding the main flow and several smaller flows, Okamura said.

One of the smaller flows had threatened the 72-inmate Kulani Prison, but stopped about three miles above the minimum-security facility. None of the smaller flows posed any threat, although one had cut a secondary power line serving a television relay station.

State and county officials on Tuesday rejected a proposal to build giant earthen walls to deflect the lava. The barriers were not feasible and could divert the flow from one residential area to another, Gov. George Ariyoshi said.

Officials also rejected a proposal to bomb the flow and other large-scale efforts to divert it.

Scientists also were keeping a close watch on Kilauea Volcano, which has been erupting intermittently about 20 miles away since Jan. 3, 1983. Scientists have said another outburst at Kilauea is imminent. A simultaneous eruption would be the first since 1868.

Bishop Jan Mazur announced in Garwolin, Poland on Tuesday he is going on a bread and water fast after communist authorities toughened their position in Poland's "crucifix crusade."

Polish 'Crucifix Cusade' continues

Associated Press

MIETNE, Poland — Communist authorities have ordered defiant teen-agers to obey a ban on crucifixes in classrooms or quit school, an official confirmed yesterday. Many students said they'd leave.

Bishop Jan Mazur, meanwhile, entered the second day of a bread-and-water fast to protest the government's position in the three-week-old conflict between church and state.

Ryszard Domanski, administrator of the agricultural high school where the "war of the crosses" began, confirmed that the school's 600-plus students would be barred from class unless they or their parents signed a declaration agreeing to abide by school regulations.

The declaration, recognizing the separation of church and state, indirectly endorses the removal of crosses ordered by the government.

The crosses have been a fixture in classrooms and other public buildings for decades in this devoutly Roman Catholic country.

Domanski told Western reporters that 34 students had quit the Stanislaw Staszic Agricultural School in Mietne, a rural village 40 miles south of Warsaw, rather than sign the declaration.

He refused to say how many of the students, ranging in age from 15 to 20, had signed the declaration. Student accounts varied, putting the number who had signed at 100 to 150 parents and 17 to 90 students.

Domanski said that the number attending classes had been "fluid" since the school reopened Tuesday for the first time since a 12-hour sit-in by 400 students on March 7. He would not elaborate.

The Mietne sit-in led to other protests in following days at high schools in neighboring Garwolin.

More than a dozen students interviewed on the almost deserted campus yesterday afternoon said no more than 50 pupils had attended class that morning. They spoke on condition their names not be used.

They said the majority had quit or intended to do so as soon as they found new schools. Several students were spotted carting their belongings from the dormitories.

"My pride won't let me stay," said a young girl lugging a box filled with books and a tattered teddy bear.

Dorm residents who did not sign the declaration but remained on campus while their transcripts were being processed "are being refused meals," according to two 16-year-old girls.

Waitress/archeologist seeks dishes

Associated Press

KOKOMO, Ind. — An archeology enthusiast who is a student and a waitress will travel more than 7,000 miles this summer to dust off some old dishes.

Karen Julius will be an assistant at the archeological excavation of Tel Batash, a site about 20 miles west of Jerusalem.

Tel Batash is a hill containing a number of cities built on the remains of previous cities that were destroyed through the centuries. She will be investigating Timnah, a city mentioned in the Bible as the home of Samson's wife.

The city's age is estimated at 3,500 years.

This summer will be Ms. Julius' second trip to Tel Batash.

Uncovering evidence of the past is a painstaking process that involves moving tons of dirt. The "dig" begins by breaking the ground with a pick and trowel, which resembles a large hoe. The pieces of earth are further broken with hammers and trowels. That step is followed with hand-sifting of the dirt, which is hauled away as the site is cleared.

The fine work of removing dirt from around artifacts is done with ice picks and paint brushes.

Patience is required, but the work has rewards, says Ms. Julius, whose first find was a bronze spearhead that took three days to unearth.

"When that spearhead was unearthed, the past and present came together," she said. "I was actually experiencing and holding something used thousands of years ago. It was like bringing two time periods together."

The digs begin at 4 a.m. daily so workers can avoid the extreme heat that comes later in the day. To avoid dehydration, workers are required to drink water every half hour.

The team also had to be on the watch for black scorpions and the poisonous Palestinian viper.

Although the project directors are trained archeologists, the workers are volunteers who learn on the job.

The expedition is sponsored by the Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary in cooperation with the Hebrew University of Jerusalem.

Ms. Julius used the experience for college credit.

nuclear freeze, prompting Hart to respond. "He knows he is no more committed to arms control than I am." After hearing Mondale declare that his experience would help bring an arms accord, Hart said, "the vice president had four years to achieve an arms control agreement," during the Carter administration.

Hart charged that Reagan administration officials "torpedoed" an arms accord with the Soviets in 1982.

From the beginning, it was Mondale on the offensive.

He blasted Hart's vote against the Chrysler bailout, then worked over energy and nuclear freeze policies.

Hart defended himself and chided Mondale, saying he "doesn't always characterize the record accurately."

Jackson said he supported the effort to save the 600,000 jobs at stake when Chrysler was threatened with bankruptcy, but he added, "jobs are not enough ... in slavery everyone had a job."

Mondale said that during the Carter administration Hart was one of only eight Senate Democrats who voted against a windfall profits tax he said would have taken a quarter of a trillion dollars in excess profits from major oil companies.

"The issue we are talking about is why you voted to give a quarter of a trillion dollars to big oil," Mondale said to Hart.

"I did not," snapped Hart.

"Oh yes, you did," said Mondale.

"I didn't vote," Hart began to reply, interrupted by Mondale who then said, "Somehow then the Congressional Record is wrong because you're recorded as one of eight Democrats to transfer a quarter of a trillion dollars ..."

"That was not the vote and you know it wasn't," retorted Hart.

Hart said he favored a different, tougher plan.

Mondale said it was characteristic of Hart to support something broader but withhold an important vote when the vote was needed.

All three candidates criticized the Reagan administration's record on arms control.

50 dead or wounded in Beirut

Associated Press

BEIRUT, Lebanon - Artillery shelling erupted in Beirut's Moslem and Christian neighborhoods today, and security sources reported at least 50 people were killed or wounded in Moslem areas.

There was no immediate casualty report from Christian east Beirut. The security sources did not give a breakdown on the number of dead or injured.

Also today, a bomb exploded at an American University of Beirut classroom 10 minutes before students were to arrive for class. No one was injured.

One witness, who declined to be identified, said he heard five shells hit the Sanaye neighborhood in Moslem west Beirut. Security sources said shells also fell in several other Moslem neighborhoods and in the Palestinian refugee camps of Sabra and Chatilla.

national scene. But how does he stand on some of the issues?

Abdul Nur, South Bend Coordinator of Jackson's campaign, spoke of the "more progressive course" of Jackson. He said that Jackson feels that the political establishment is not "sensitive to the needs" of many Americans. Therefore a large part of the Jackson campaign is "voters rights laws must be enforced and upheld." Nur felt that this would have a "profound effect on the politics of the U.S." Jackson feels that it is time for all Americans to have a voice on the important issues of American life.

Nur also said that Jackson advocates the cutting of the U.S. budget. The defense budget is a large cause of the deficit and he feels it must be trimmed.

In foreign policy, Nur said Jackson would "not continue U.S. support of despots." He said Jackson would determine which governments are sensitive to the needs of the people and support them if they prove their sensitivity to the people. He would especially pursue this policy in Latin America. Jackson feels that in these troubled areas, educational and food aid are more appropriate than military aid.

On the issue of nuclear arms, Nur said Jackson's main priority is negotiation. He said, "if we go to them in a militaristic manner, they will respond in like fashion. We must have a face-to-face dialogue." Nur said that Jackson's attitude is that the "Russians are people just like us." Communication is his highest priority.

Underlying Jackson's candidacy is his empathy to the needs of those who have been ignored. Whether these people are in our American cities or in underdeveloped countries, he feels that human rights are all important. These basic rights of employment, housing, food and clothing will allow peace to occur more easily. Nur said specific policies will be built on a firm base of human dignity.

Nur added that a voter registration drive in Indiana has been "tremendously successful" and Jackson is looking towards a strong Indiana finish. He was the first Democratic candidate to file in Indiana.

Nur said that Jackson has already had a strong impact on the race just by bringing these human rights issues to the forefront. He said even if Jackson does not enter the convention as the front-runner, he will make certain that the others are sensitive to the needs of the oppressed. Nun said, "when he goes into the convention, he will have an impact on the policies being formed."

Sonya Jones, campus campaign manager for Jesse Jackson, could not be reached for comment.

CANCER. NOT KNOWING THE RISKS IS YOUR GREATEST RISK.

A lot of people think cancer is unbeatable. That simply isn't true. In fact, over two million people have had cancer and survived to lead happy, normal lives. And not only can cancer be beaten, it can also be prevented. There are definite precautions that have been proven to decrease your risk of getting certain cancers. Ask your local American Cancer Society to send you a free booklet about cancer risks. Learn the facts about cancer. And make not knowing the risks, one less risk.

A tale of two magazines : one praiseworthy, one poor

If you have not read the latest issue of Notre Dame Magazine, scour the campus until you find a copy. If you have yet to find this month's Scholastic, don't bother looking.

The latest Notre Dame Magazine is a gem — the best many people at Notre Dame remember reading. Editor Walt Collins has worked miracles with an already excellent publication since taking over last year.

Keith Picher

Profundity's demise

The magazine features two articles on the modernization of South Bend, a piece on the kidnaping of a statue of Father Sorin, an article on the gilding of the dome, an article on the Observer/administration struggle, a piece on parents and adolescents, as well as articles by Eugene Kennedy, Robert Sam Anson and others.

By contrast, March's Scholastic probably is the worst issue seniors have seen in four years at Notre Dame. Though some of the articles are better than others, many students, faculty and administrators consider parts of the issue literary trash.

"The First Word" asks the cosmic questions, "Why can't my four-year-old nephew recite the Pledge of Allegiance or fold a flag?" and "Why is my brother Timmy's favorite song 'Eye of the Tiger' and not 'Yankee Doodle Dandy'?" A good question — when I was four, I was folding flags, and to this day Yankee Doodle Dandy is my favorite song.

The SMC Focus on page 7 is perhaps the worst article in Scholastic this year. The co-authors first tell why they are writing the article, and how there's nothing going on at Saint Mary's, and how they want to see their names in print, and how all kinds of SMC women are starting to panic because they are "unattached." The article concludes, "So there's our article. We didn't really have a topic, but we hope you liked it anyway."

I didn't. Page 10 sports a picture of a writer with the cut line, "John Dettling is a sophomore PLS/Philosophy major from Akron, Ohio, who doesn't worry anymore." Funny, huh?

"A Critique of Burtchae's Theology" appears on page 13, written by a professor emeritus of anthropology at Saint Mary's (no doubt a first-class expert on Vatican II theology.) Even a rather conservative friend of mine dubbed the piece "Pre-Vatican II trash." And to think, Paul McGinn dared to question the Scholastic/People of Praise link.

Skip over a few pages of the issue and you'll come across a fine article on the ski team written, of course, by a ski team member. Scholastic always has had a knack for objective reporting.

And finally is Jim Ganther's last "Last Word." The first part of his article is a response to Paul McGinn's Observer column which questioned Scholastic's purpose.

Ganther says, "as any child can see, our mission is not investigative reporting or muckraking. We've kept free from that for 117 years, and I don't envision a policy change any time soon. And it has never been the goal of Scholastic to spread discord or create controversies."

Au contraire, Jim — perhaps you need to brush up a bit on Scholastic history. Father Hesburgh once said of Scholastic in the 60s that it had "an excessively negative attitude that felt called upon to scorn everything under God and to pontificate far beyond the limits of its writers' modest wisdom" and made "rather crude and unkind personal criticisms." And so the University tore the printing plates from the presses one day, censoring the magazine because, of course, Scholastic had such a clean record over the previous 100 years.

Ganther deserves some praise — at least he wrote a column this time. It seems he was too busy to write one, or just couldn't think of anything worth writing about in February. For that issue, he rehashed an old paper from a book reviewing class he took during the summer — despite the fact that he hadn't written a column since early December.

Is it really asking too much for a literary magazine to be a bit more professional, especially when it comes out only once a month?

Ganther concludes that "the purpose of Scholastic is to provide an outlet for the writers of the Notre Dame/Saint Mary's family while informing, entertaining, and stimulating our readership."

If this truly is the goal of Scholastic, the magazine failed abysmally this year, particularly in the March issue. Let's hope Kathy McGarvey, the new editor, will learn a few lessons from Notre Dame Magazine. I, for one, would rather give my money to it than to Scholastic.

Ft. Lauderdale tragedy

It was a warm Tuesday night in Ft. Lauderdale. After a long day on the beach and in the bars, the Georgia Tech students unwinded on the Holiday Inn pool deck. The group began to tease one of its members. They tossed his hat around the deck, until it drifted over the rail onto the pavement below.

Diane Dirkers

Guest column

The student, in a spirit of play and inspired by alcohol, sprinted across the pool deck. Unfortunately he didn't stop at the rail. The impact catapulted him over the rail to land head-first in the street below.

Suddenly, the fun and games, and "let loose" attitude came to a sobering halt. The student died in the street as hundreds of vacationing students watched in horror.

This incident occurred while Notre Dame was on Spring Break. It was not a daredevil stunt, it was not suicide — it was a result of uncontrolled drinking. It could have happened to anyone and if the wild partying atmosphere of Ft. Lauderdale continues, it will happen again.

So who is responsible? Obviously the student, but who else? According to the law, much of the liability lies with the bartender and the hotel. Lawsuits will be filed and whoever is deemed liable will pay, but would it not have been better if the parties had taken responsibility before the fact — preventing an unnecessary death?

Notre Dame is in a situation quite similar to that of the Holiday Inn. If the same incident occurred on the 11th floor of Flanner, the University would be held responsible. This is precisely the reason it wishes to control and possibly eliminate drinking on the campus. But is a dry campus the answer?

If the campus goes dry next year, student drinking will not halt — it will just move off-campus. Off-campus drinking cannot be checked. Masses of students, with their first exposure to freedom, will have no one to oversee their drinking. Add to this the dangers of driving and of walking in an intoxicated state, and there you have it — the Ft. Lauderdale atmosphere.

Would action by the administration making Notre Dame a dry campus be an act of responsibility towards the students, or just a way to shift the liability to others who will be less responsible? Does the administration expect overcrowded local bars to cut off every single student who has had too much?

As an employee of one of those bars, I honestly say I could not do that. It isn't that I don't try or don't wish to — it's simply not feasible to monitor people and see where the drinks are going.

So what are the alternatives? Public intoxication laws exist in every state. It is not breach of student rights to punish those who become overly intoxicated, as they are a real threat to themselves as well as to others. On-campus parties are smaller and better controlled. The hall rectors, the hall staffs and the students in charge of the parties are in a much better position to monitor the drinking level than the bartenders at the Five Points or off-campus residents.

The administration should seriously consider the dry campus issue. Is it acting responsibly or merely shifting the responsibility elsewhere? If the well-being of the students is truly the issue here, the administration should take a closer look at instituting a "dry campus." It is the worst mistake the administration could ever make.

Diane Dirkers is a senior and a bartender at a local tavern.

P. O. Box Q

Student integrity

Dear Editor:

I am writing to you about the article concerning cheating which was printed in The Observer on March 15. I will never forget how deeply Dr. Hofman was hurt by such an exaggerated article. He has devoted his life to Notre Dame and he not only teaches students but also tries to make each freshman student have a better life at Notre Dame.

According to that article, a large number of students who have taken Chemistry 115-116 have cheated at least once. I doubt this is true.

As one of Dr. Hofman's students, I firmly believe that most students know that the quizzes not only test our mastery of general chemistry but also test our responsibility as human beings.

I wonder if those who do cheat know what a moral education is and know how to be an honest person. I also wonder how much information the writer gathered before writing that article.

Carolyn Yao
Lyons Hall

The reference to the course was based wholly on speculation by an undisclosed number of unidentified students. How, then, can Neblo make such a totally negative statement about the course? He emphasized that, "the vast majority of the class has cheated at least once and some students have virtually passed the course by cheating."

But the indefinite and specious nature of the comment was only recognized by the words, "students speculate." Either Neblo accidentally stumbled upon a majority of students who do think that cheating runs rampant in the course, or he chose to disregard the students who thought the contrary.

We are insulted at being called flagrant cheaters. We are also angered by the grief brought to Dr. Hofman by the article. Would not The Observer staff be angered and insulted if it were published that, because of Neblo's article and other articles which "students speculate" were printed, The Observer staff is, in general, biased and sensationalistic in their writing.

Freshman petition

Dear Editor:

In response to John Neblo's March 15 article on cheating, we are obliged to voice our vehement displeasure. Neblo's comment about cheating in Chemistry 115-116 is unfair and sensationalistic.

Fencers settle for 8th place

By KATHY MURPHY
Sports Writer

The Saint Mary's fencing team placed eighth out of an eleven-team field at the National Intercollegiate Women's Fencing Association National Championship competition, held March 17 at Hunter College of the City University of New York.

St. John's University captured first place in the 56th annual tournament, while the College of William and Mary finished second and the U.S. Naval Academy third.

"If we had only won another two bouts we would have placed fifth," said Coach Marc DeJong. "From fifth to eighth place it was very, very close."

Four Belle fencers competed in the tournament: juniors Mary Ann Castaneda and Kathleen Waters, and sophomores Mary Frances Wilkin and Ann Raney.

Team captain Castaneda fenced in the A division and managed only a disappointing 1-10 record.

"I was very disappointed because Mary Ann just had a bad day," said DeJong. "She got into a rut and it's hard to psyche yourself up when you're not fencing well."

Wilkin fenced in the C division and compiled a 5-5 record that earned fourth place in her division.

Raney competed in the B division and posted a 3-7 record while Waters earned a 5-5 mark in the D division.

The NIWFA Tournament marked the end of this season for the Belles but DeJong looks ahead to a promising season for next year.

"There will be good fencing next year," said DeJong. "All four fencers from the NIWFA Tournament will return plus five other fencers, so next season looks bright."

Earn 6-1 spring record

Women's tennis team aims high

By MARY SIEGER
 Sports Writer

This year's Notre Dame women's tennis team is talented, ambitious, unified, motivated and working harder than ever to reach its goal: bringing home the NCAA Division II National Championship.

Although the team lost its first game of the year, 7-2, to Michigan on Tuesday, the Irish have earned a 6-1 spring record after winning five consecutive matches during a trip to the West Coast over spring break. After the California trip, the team took one step closer to its goal and gained valuable experience within the division.

"We got some of our best Division

II competition there," said Notre Dame coach Sharon Petro. "We got some cross sectional play which we can't get around here."

"We got to see how we compared to Division II schools and see how well we'll do at Nationals," added Irish co-captain Lisa Lafratta. "Now we know we aren't dreaming for something impossible."

While competing in California, the Irish defeated Montana State 8-1, Cal Poly Pomona 8-1, the University of Northern Colorado 8-1, Loyola Marymount 6-3 and Cal State at Northridge 7-2. "The team represented the University well, competed well and I think they enjoyed it," said Petro.

During the California trip, several players managed to remain undefeated. Joanne Biafore at No. 5 singles, Pam Fischette at No. 4 singles, Susie Panther and Laura Lee at No. 2 doubles and Greta Roemer and Kathy Schnell in the third doubles all left the competition with 5-0 records.

"There's nothing like travelling together to get a team unified," said co-captain Roemer. "We know we're a good team and we support each other which makes a positive attitude."

Last year, the Irish took third place in the NCAA National Competition which was the result of hard work and steady progression in the program. "We think we can win the National Championship," said Petro. "We have a solid team of juniors and sophomores and we have a good future."

"We have to keep the Nationals in the back of our minds and concentrates on the day to day matches and do well if we want to go," said Lafratta. "We have to remember there is a lot between now and Nationals."

The key to success for this season has been team effort. There are no "superstars" on this squad meaning every player's contribution is equally important to the team. "We're a very team oriented group," Lafratta said. "We like to work and we're motivated, dedicated and committed to tennis and hopefully it will pay off in a National championship."

On Tuesday, the Irish ad their perfect record tarnished, losing to a tough Michigan squad. Although the 7-2 score appears discouraging, the games were much closer than past meetings between the two rivals. Since Michigan is a Division I team and not in direct competition with Notre Dame, the loss is not seen as a major setback for the team.

"They've always been above us, but now they're not that far above us," explained Roemer.

After Michigan had the match sewn up after the first round of doubles competition, players rallied for the remaining sets to give the Wolverines a run for their money. "I'm proud of them," said Petro. "My kids don't give up and somewhere down the road it will pay off."

Next Thursday, the Irish play host to the University of Hawaii. Petro expects Hawaii to furnish tough matches and strong players for her squad.

With the spring trip behind them, the Irish now get set for a Midwestern schedule. Today they face cross-town rival Bethel in a doubleheader, and travel to Indiana on Saturday for another twinbill. The home opener will be Sunday as the Irish face Dayton in a doubleheader at Jake Kline Field starting at 1 p.m.

compete."

"These guys have never really let up in trying to find out what they could be. We got an indication of that when it all came together for us at the end of the year."

Phelps, not making any alibis, mentioned the fact that his squad barely tired after spending much of the last week-and-a-half on the road. The Irish coach really had no complaints about what his team did in last night's game.

The Irish players, if nothing else, should leave New York today with a bundle more confidence than they began this season with.

"The young guys now realize what they can do," said Ken Barlow. "This (the NIT) does nothing but give us more confidence."

Notre Dame returns everyone but Sluby and Cecil Rucker next year, while bringing in five new recruits. Phelps, in fact, thinks this might be his best recruiting class ever.

IRISH ITEMS — Sluby and Barlow both were named to the All-Tournament Team along with Alonza Allen of Southwestern Louisiana, Roy Tarpley of Michigan, and Dell Curry of Virginia Tech... Virginia Tech beat Southwestern Louisiana, 71-70, in the consolation game. Southwestern Louisiana had a chance to win the game in the final seconds, but was called for travelling with six seconds remaining... Attendance at Madison Square Garden for last night's doubleheader was 13,123, much more than many had anticipated... Phelps picked up a technical in the first half for screaming something about an illegal screen to referee Larry Lembo, who thought the Irish coach had cursed at him. Lembo later admitted to Phelps that he had misheard him. Still, Phelps worked the refs very hard during the first part of the game, which is probably why he ended up getting the technical... Former New York Knicks star Walt Frazier was in attendance last night at The Gardens... The Irish, who closed out the year at 21-12, will arrive at Michiana Regional Airport this afternoon at 2:23 p.m. and should be back to campus by around 3:00.

In the tournament, the Irish contingent was led by freshman Charles Higgs-Coulthard who won the gold medal in the foil. Higgs-Coulthard just did beat out second place finisher Stefan Kogler of Wayne State with a strong showing in the final round. He is the first Irish foiler to win a gold since Andy Bonk won one in 1979.

Sophomore Mike VanderVelden finished 14th for the Irish in a field of 30 foilers.

Also fencing strong were the sabre men. Sophomore Don Johnson finished third as he was edged out of second place by Brian Keane of Wayne State in the final round. Each finished with 14 points but Keane had more touches in the final match.

Michael Lofton of New York University took first in the sabre with 19 points while junior Mike Janis finished 14th for the Irish.

In the epee, the Irish showing was strong for junior Andy Quaroni who finished 6th with 7 points. According to DeCicco, Quaroni was also honored as the outstanding fencer of the year. He was awarded this honor due to his ability and "classic style."

"After Andy got into the semifinals, he couldn't win for losing," commented DeCicco. "He didn't fence as well as he was capable of fencing."

Ettore Bianche of Wayne State, defeated by Quaroni earlier in the season, took first with 18 points. Sophomore Brian St. Clair came in 18th for Notre Dame.

Individually, three Irish fencers were also named as all-Americans this past week: junior Andy Quaroni, sophomore Don Johnson, and freshman Charles Higgs-Coulthard.

Representing the lady Irish in the women's NCAA Championships was freshman Pia Albertson who finished 10th in the individual competition.

The Irish end their season third in the country with a 19-1 mark, and have yet to finish below 8th in the country since 1976.

Michigan shoots past Notre Dame to capture NIT Championship

By JEFF BLUMB
Assistant Sports Editor

NEW YORK — After trailing only 28-26 at halftime, the Notre Dame basketball team was outscored 20-4 to open the second half and fell to Michigan, 83-63, in the finals of the National Invitation Tournament. The sport by Michigan, which saw the Wolverines outscore the Irish 13-0 during one stretch, effectively killed Notre Dame's chances of its first NIT championship.

"That was the key to the game," said Michigan coach Bill Frieder. "We had the cushion and we had the game. Spurts like that are nice to get because you don't get them often." "That spurt really blew it," Notre Dame coach Digger Phelps said of the Wolverine outburst. "The board play, the turnovers, and the shots that wouldn't fall just put us into a hole."

The Irish, while hitting 84 percent from the free throw line, couldn't come near half that mark from the field, connecting on only 39 percent of their shots. Tom Sluby had a rough night shooting-wise, making only 7-of-20 of his shots.

On the other hand, Michigan was very hot. The Wolverines hit 56 percent of their shots in the game, including 19-of-26 (73 percent) in the second half.

Tournament MVP Tim McCormick had 28 of Michigan's points on 13-of-16 shooting. In addition, the 6-11 senior, with one year of redshirt eligibility remaining, pulled down a game-high 14 rebounds, six more than any Notre Dame player had.

"My teammates got the ball inside to me real well," McCormick said of his output. "And the shots were just falling for me today. We had things really clicking."

From the beginning, one could tell that this just was not Notre Dame's night. The Irish fell behind by an 8-2 margin early before going down by nine twice in the half at 24-15 and 26-17.

Notre Dame was able to get back within two by intermission with a 12-2 spurt of its own. The Irish had made only 32 percent of their shots in the first half and were somewhat lucky to still be in the game as the teams headed to the locker room.

After the Michigan explosion to open the second half, Notre Dame fell behind by as much as 20 points, 52-32. Going to a full court press with Tim Kempton and Joe Howard upcourt, the Irish whittled away at the lead over a five-minute span, at one point narrowing the margin to 11, 59-48, on a Tom Sluby jumper off a Scott Hicks steal.

There was still plenty of time left in the game with 6:04 remaining. The Irish, however, would get no closer.

They pulled within 11 again with 3:14 left. Michigan, though, would not allow the Irish to reduce that margin any further. The Wolverines, 23-10, would eventually run off the final eight points of the game to go away with the 47th NIT Championship.

"If we had cut it to nine," wondered Phelps afterward, "maybe something would have happened. Things happen when you get it down under ten."

"I told the team, though, that I don't want anybody down. Nobody thought we'd win 21 games. Nobody thought we'd get to the finals of the NIT. But these guys have taken a season and proven that they could

University of Michigan graduate assistant coach Ernie Sellers had plenty to be happy about last night after the Wolverines beat the Irish, 83-63, in front of 13,123 spectators at Madison Square Garden in New York. Senior Tim McCormick, who had 28 points and 14 rebounds, was named the game's Most Valuable Player.

ND fencers take third at finals competition

By MICHAEL J. CHMIEL
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame men's fencing team concluded its 1984 season over break by taking third place in a field of 35 teams at the NCAA Championships held March 20-21 at Princeton.

Coming in ahead of the Irish and finishing first as a team was repeating national champion Wayne State with 69 total points. Penn State edged out the Irish for second with 50 points to Notre Dame's 46.

"Wayne State fenced three who were all-Americans last year and they won the national title last year," said Irish head coach Mike DeCicco. "They were considered the team to beat and that's the way it turned out."

"We had good and disappointing results," continued DeCicco. "The fact that we finished third and have a trophy to show for it is the good part."

DeCicco was disappointed with the overall structure of the tournament which put all of the top fencers into one bracket. By having possible semi-finalists and finalists eliminated in early rounds, a team could not gain enough points to have a strong shot at the title.

"The seeding committee did not take the trouble to seed the thirty fencers that were there as they should have or could have," said DeCicco.

"In the process of seeding it (the tournament) in the way that they did, they put a number of semi-finalists and finalists in the same preliminary pool. The first round was supposed to be a seeding round and it really didn't turn out that way."

"Mike Janis, Mike VanderVelden, and Brian St. Clair were eliminated in the quarterfinals by indicators (touches) despite their won-loss records which were good enough to move them up."

Baseball season opens

Irish look promising in Texas trip

By ERIC SCHEUERMANN
Sports Writer

A 4-7 record at the start of a baseball season does not usually give hope for a successful season. But that same 4-7 record owned by the Notre Dame baseball team is evidence of strong play over its spring trip to Texas.

"I was very happy with the way we played," said Irish head coach Larry Gallo. "We played some very good teams and managed to play well in almost every game."

When Gallo speaks of good teams, he does not exaggerate. The Irish certainly played no patsies, and most of their opponents were already almost twenty games into their seasons.

The Irish nine opened the season with a game against a strong St. Edward's team out of Austin, Texas. St. Edward's entered the game with a 17-4 record, and looked to sweep by Notre Dame for an eighteenth victory.

The Irish took a 1-0 lead in the first inning, and a 3-1 lead in the third inning. Each time, St. Edward's tied the game, and in the fifth took the lead for good. Notre Dame could never quite catch up, and started the season with a 7-5 loss.

Junior outfielder Mike Trudeau led the Irish with three hits, while second baseman Jack Moran was one-for-two with two RBI.

Next for the Irish was a game with Trinity University. Pounding out eleven hits and capitalizing on four Trinity errors, Notre Dame evened its record with a 4-3 victory.

Sophomore hurler Steve Powell pitched a strong game to gain the win, while senior Mark Clementz came on in the ninth inning to provide relief help. Moran and senior infielder Mike Metzler each contributed doubles.

The Irish next faced northern rival Minnesota, a squad from the Big Ten. Although Minnesota had just descended from the snowy north also and had not played many games as yet, Notre Dame was unable to push its record over .500. Although the Irish hung tough, Minnesota was able to come away with a 7-4 victory.

The very next day, the Irish suffered two tough defeats at the hands of St. Mary's College of Texas. In the first game, a beautiful pitching effort by Clementz was ruined as the Irish failed to score a run. Although he allowed only one run, Clementz lost out in the pitching duel to Mark Bond of St. Mary's by a score of 1-0.

In the second contest, St. Mary's took control by scoring two runs in the third through the fifth innings. Notre Dame could score no more than three runs off Alan Sapp of St. Mary's, and lost the game by an 8-3 margin. Moran had a double for the Irish, while Metzler had two RBI.

The Irish were finally able to get back on the winning track in the next day's game against Mankato State. A six-run rally in the bottom of the eighth, powered by Metzler's three-run double, enabled Notre Dame to take an 8-5 victory.

Trudeau smacked two doubles for the Irish, while catcher David Clark went 3-for-3 at the plate. Pitcher Jason Schomer relieved in the sixth inning and collected his first win.

Back on the winning track, the Irish again met Trinity University in a doubleheader. The team's bats exploded for seventeen runs in the two games, leading Notre Dame to a pair of wins by scores of 8-2 and 9-0. These two wins raised the team's record to 4-4, with three games left on the trip.

Unfortunately, the Irish would not win again. In a game against St. Mary's, the team was able to push seven runs across the plate. However, the Irish suffered a hard defeat by an 8-7 score.

On the last day of the trip, Texas Lutheran took two close games from the Irish by scores of 5-4 and 6-4. In the first game, Steve Passinaut led the Irish with a home run and a single. Trudeau also contributed two hits to the Irish attack. Junior pitcher Buster Lopes took the tough loss, pitching well in defeat.

Lutheran hit two home runs in the second contest and played errorless baseball. The Irish could only collect five hits, and once again fell just short. Passinaut completed a fine day with a double for the Irish.

At the NCAA Championships last week, the Notre Dame men's fencing team finished third to defending champion Wayne State and second-place Penn State. Notre Dame freshman Charles Higgs-Coulthard won the gold medal in the foil, the first Irish fencer to do so since 1979. But Irish head coach Mike DeCicco was disappointed with the structuring of the tournament which put the top fencers into one bracket. Michael Chmiel's story above.
