Large-scale earthquake jolts parts of California; no injuries reported

Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — A powerful earthquake jolted a wide area of Northern California and parts of Nevada yesterday, collapsing houses, swaying skyscrapers and forcing the evacuation of some buildings. There were no immediate reports of injury.

The earthquake hit at about 1:15 p.m. and was centered 12 miles east of San Jose. It was given a preliminary Richter reading of 6.0 by the United States Geological Survey, while the State Office of Emergency Services gave it a reading of 5.8.

"We have a preliminary reading of 6.0 on the Richter scale with an epicenter of 20 kilometers (about 12 miles) east of San Jose on the Calaveras Fault," said Edna King, public information officer for the USGS in Menlo Park.

Five or six houses, apparently unoccupied, collapsed in Monterey County about three miles east of Morgan Hill, according to the state Division of Forestry.

The state Department of Water Resources said there was a crack in the pavement atop Anderson Dam five miles east of San Jose. Ground crews were sent to inspect the dam and the upstream gates were closed.

The worst California earthquake in recent years was the May 2, 1983, quake that devastated the Central California town of Coalinga. That registered 6.7 on the Richter scale and destroyed 90 percent of the downtown business district.

In yesterday's quake, San Francisco police reported shattered glass fell from windows in the Western Merchandise Mart, but no injuries were reported.

In San Jose, City Hall and the county administration building were evacuated after walls cracked. Elevators in those buildings stopped automatically and about a dozen people were trapped inside, officials said.

Tall buildings trembled in San Francisco for 20 to 30 seconds, and there were reports of objects knocked from shelves and walls.

At Mission San Juan Bautista near Hollister, 100 miles south of San Francisco, some plaster fell from the ceiling of the historic mission, according to Father Felix. The structure was not damaged.

"It was the worst," said Mary Guglielmo, owner of the Plateau 7 restaurant atop a seven-story building in San Jose. "It just went on and on and on."

She said wine bottles toppled from shelves and a small tree fell over on a diner.

The quake was felt in Inyo, Sacramento, Mono, Sonoma and Stanislaus counties, among others, and reports from newspapers and police departments said the ground shook as far south as San Luis Obispo, 250 miles south of San Francisco and in western Nevada.

In Martinez, about 35 miles east of San Francisco, Nel Veder said, "Cupboards rattled, chandeliers swayed. It was a long rolling quake of about 20 seconds duration." She said it was the strongest earthquake she has felt in at least 15 years.

Reports on the quake, at 1:15 p.m. PST, came in from as far south as Stanford, 35 miles to the south, and Fresno, 200 miles to the southeast of San Francisco. In Sacramento, about 75 miles to the east, it was felt slightly. Most people described the quake as one or two rolling shakes.

In San Francisco, the skyscraper housing the AP bureau swayed and trembled for close to 20 to 30 seconds.

Families crumbling, says Schlafly

Special to The Observer

The American family structure is being undermined by a broad array of legal and social challenges, Phyllis Schlafly, an outspoken critic of the Equal Rights Amendment, said yesterday.

In a wide-ranging talk at the Law School, Schlafly took on feminists, divorce laws and the nation's educational system.

An overflow crowd of Schlafly's supporters, opponents and the curious filled a law school classroom to hear the attorney and author.

Schlafly, founder of Stop ERA, said the concept of the husband as bread winner and wife as homemaker was "one of the major keys to the high prosperity and standard of living we have in this country."

Listeners who came expecting controversy weren't disappointed.

"I can understand that not all women want to get married and raise children," she said, adding "that leaves more men for the women who do want to get married."

Of the leaders of the feminist movement, she noted "Almost all of them don't have children or don't have husbands."

"They don't have their act together," she added, to audible groans from several in the audience.

During her 45-minute talk, Schlafly also took on the country's legal system.

"Easy divorce laws are probably the number one cause of the high divorce rate," she said.

Schlafly saved her biggest broadsides for the Equal Rights Amendment, however.

"The ERA is a great attack on the family. It takes away or makes unconstitutional the legal rights of wives and gives a whole raft of rights to homosexuals," she said.

While some in the crowd muttered comments like "Give me a break," others nodded their heads in assent.

Schlafly also said there was a "clear connection" between ERA and abortion.

"The ERA will be used to mandate state tax funds to pay for abortions," she said, explaining that government funding of abortions would be guaranteed under the ERA to avoid charges of medical discrimination against women.

She noted that when a state version of the ERA was written in Wisconsin, excluding abortion funding and homosexual rights, the National

Sit-in demonstration at LaFortune organized to protest alcohol policy

By KEITH HARRISON, JR.
Senior Staff Reporter

An all-night sit-in demonstration will take place tomorrow in LaFortune Student Center, and the candlelight vigil protesting the new alcohol policy has been cancelled, according to former Keenan Hall President Jim Wolfe.

The sit-in demonstration, which will begin at 11 p.m., is not being organized by any student government body. "There is a problem with having student government organize all of the protests, because they run into trouble with the administration," explained Wolfe, one of the organizers of the sit-in.

The cancellation of the candlelight vigil was cited as an example of the problems that face student government. "It seems that the administration considered the vigil a fire hazard," said Hall Presidents' Council Chairman Chris Tayback.

Keenan President Kevin Howard added, "Brian Callaghan has told me that a permit is required for any protest, and that the University would not let student government have a permit for the Friday afternoon rally unless the Friday night vigil was cancelled."

A handout explaining the sit-in states, "We must emphasize our displeasure with the paternalistic policy-making of the administration."

One of the goals of the demonstration, according to the handout, is to "refocus the protest away from alcohol specifically and toward the problems of life on campus."

"Forms of responsible protest must be continued before we go back to the normal channels of communication that student government must take," said Wolfe, who spoke at the HPC meeting. "We've used those channels (student government) before, and the administration has not been responsive," he added.

Several hall presidents expressed support for the sit-in protest. "I think that it's a kind of eloquent way of stating our basic protest," said Howard. "They say we don't use LaFortune, and we will be saying that the only thing LaFortune is good for is this demonstration."

Wolfe, however, stressed the importance of student body participation. "This is a good alternative to the candlelight vigil, which won't happen," he said. "But student support is essential. If we don't get the numbers, we won't accomplish anything."

Dean of Students James Roemer also spoke at the HPC meeting. He responded to several amendments the HPC has proposed to the alcohol directive.

Hickey recuperating from heart attack

By SARAH HAMILTON
News Editor

William Hickey, director of Notre Dame Food Services, experienced a "comfortable day" yesterday in the coronary care unit of Saint Joseph's Medical Center in South Bend following a heart attack he suffered Saturday.

Late Saturday, Hickey was placed in the intensive care unit of Saint Joseph's Medical Center because he suffered what Assistant Director of Food Services Ronald Athey said was neither a mild nor a "real severe" heart attack. Hickey was moved to the coronary care unit yesterday. Two sources close to Hickey's family said he could be moved to a private room within a day or two.

Concerning her husband's health Ann Hickey said, "I'm very contented. He is improving." Athey expressed similar optimism — "If he could just learn to relax . . . He's a hard worker."

Unofficially, Athey said Hickey might be able to return to work in four to eight weeks. In Hickey's absence Athey, assistant director since 1980, is assuming his administrative responsibilities. Athey does not foresee any major problems while Hickey is away. Most of the work now centers around catering the commencement exercises. If a problem does arise, "any decisions made . . . would parallel his (Hickey's)," said Athey.

Associate Professor of History Dr. John H. Van Engen recently received a fellowship from the John Simon Guggenheim Memorial Foundation for his proposed study of lawyers, pastors, and theologians in the twelfth century. Van Engen became a candidate for the fellowship last fall when he submitted a proposal for a book on the subject, accompanied by recommendations from four other scholars of medieval history. The award allows him to take a leave of absence from teaching in 1985-86 in order to complete intensive research, and also sponsors a research trip to Europe. In his study, Van Engen will explore the influences of the intellectual accomplishments of the Medieval Ages on the Church. — The Observer

ND can learn from MU's mistakes

The April 13 Marquette Tribune reported a story with more far-reaching implications than might first be suspected. This unobtrusive story in the twice-weekly student newspaper could affect us here at Notre Dame as well as students at private colleges and universities all across the country.

The administration of Marquette banned the showing of "Porky's" and "Monty Python's Meaning of Life" in the University-owned-and-operated movie theatre.

"Porky's" was not approved because of the excessive amount of sex, and "The Meaning of Life" was not approved because of its anti-Catholic humor," explained Judy Shields, Marquette's assistant dean of students.

To argue that these movies ought to be shown for their social worth and meaningful message would be futile. "Porky's" has been called a thoroughly stupid movie, and "The Meaning of Life" did poke fun at Catholics, including a scene which portrayed an unemployed Catholic father who threatened to sell his children for scientific experiments.

The people who pay to see movies such as this probably aren't concerned with the social implications to begin with, but rather with entertaining themselves at a funny movie.

The Marquette administration's rash action has set a dangerous precedent which could be followed by other private institutions, such as Notre Dame. By forbidding their students from seeing these particular movies in their theatre they are saying they have the right to control what films their students can view.

The administration seems to think they are worthy judges of morality, and by banning these films they are preserving the moral conscience of their students. What they are actually doing is retarding the moral growth of Marquette students. In order to fully develop a sense of morality towards what films an individual chooses to see, he or she must be allowed to have a choice.

But the administration at Marquette has decided the best way for an individual to develop this ability to make moral choices is to offer no alternatives.

Some may feel that Marquette's administration was correct in stopping these movies from being shown. These films aren't likely to change the world with their significance, and it might be counterproductive to show them since they don't exactly promote the ideals of Marquette's Jesuit tradition. After all, the administration owns the theatre and they have the right to show what they want. If the students want to see these movies they can always walk down Wisconsin Avenue to a privately owned theatre.

While these points are all viable, they sidestep the issue. The administration may own the theatre, but they cannot ultimately control what the student chooses to view. If they are truly concerned with preserving the moral integrity of the student body, then they should not subject every film to approval or veto. The best way to deal with this issue would be to organize a committee of administration members, faculty and students to view and discuss the merits of each film and judge by democratic, not dictatorial power.

The relationship between the situation in Milwaukee and Notre Dame is obvious. Presently, the Student Union films shown in the Engineering Auditorium do not have to meet with the approval of the administration. But what would happen if the people on the third floor of the Administration Building happened to pick up a copy of Marquette's newspaper and read the unobtrusive story?

They might just think it is a pretty good idea. The recent alcohol policy illustrates how the administration can reconsider their own policies after reviewing those of other schools, such as Brigham Young and Indiana University.

The censorship question is a tricky one. At what point must the people in charge step in and ban the showing of a movie they find offensive? Anti-Catholicism and sexual immaturity are enough to make the Marquette administration take action. So far, the Notre Dame student government has not been confronted with this situation.

The liberal attitude of our administration has saved us from the Marquette situation and continues to distinguish us from other Catholic attitudes. But the administration must be careful to maintain this attitude if they hope to preserve the Notre Dame image, which may be our most valuable asset.

Communication gap cited at senate meeting

By MIKE MILLEN
Staff Reporter

The official student response to the new alcohol policy was discussed at last night's emergency student senate meeting.

Student Body President Rob Bertino saw the meeting as a "forum," where students and senate members could discuss their views regarding the policy.

Bertino discussed the rally to be held on Friday, noting "we expect between 20 and 25" reporters and media representatives to attend the event. Student Body Vice President Cathy David announced information packets will be distributed to the press.

Bertino said he wanted to shift the attention from the loss of drinking liberties to the more general "lack of communication" between students and university officials. "We're not just fighting for alcohol," he added.

Bertino asked that students use taste and thought in their banners to maintain credibility. He added "If the press sees students waving beers, then everyone will just laugh."

Bertino announced that the meeting will be reopened today at 5:30 p.m., and encouraged students to attend and express their views.

Alcohol Policy Committee Member and Former Student Body President Brian Callaghan, when asked his opinion on the policy, stated "There is nothing within two miles of this campus. The alcohol problem is not a cause but an effect. Student Union can't do everything, and halls can't put on social events every night. For the last 10 years, the Student Center idea has been rehashed. No changes are scheduled to take effect. We want to see a strong commitment."

"In 1963, the faculty was promised their building (Decio)," said Dean Christy, senior class vice president. Bertino pointed out "there is no motivation to construct a student center" at the present time.

Bertino hopes to have a final draft of the student senate response ready by tonight.

ND student arrested in Mishawaka for DUI

By MIRIAM HILL
Staff Reporter

A Notre Dame student was arrested on a charge of driving under the influence of intoxicants after leaving the Loadville Tavern at the 100 Center in Mishawaka with seven other Notre Dame and Saint Mary's students last Thursday.

Patrolman L.W. Witucki of the Mishawaka police force saw the students leave the tavern and walk toward a car in the parking lot while drinking beer and throwing cans. After the students entered the car, Witucki followed them and pulled the car over when the driver drove

The driver was taken to the police station where he agreed to take a breath test which showed him to be above the legal limit. He was then charged with driving under the influence of alcohol. None of the other students were arrested, although all of them were under the legal drinking age.

Regarding the arrest, Dean Roemer stated, "The University has not been involved in the case. When a student gets in trouble in the community for a misdemeanor, we let the local courts take care of it."

The student's court date has been set for Monday, April 30.

An Tostal fun to start off today with decathlon event

By CAROLYN GILLESPIE
News Staff

Since its founding by the Hall Presidents' Council in 1967, An Tostal has grown into one of the biggest events of the year. It is a much-needed and much-anticipated excuse to act a little crazy for a while before the crush of finals.

There is a multitude of activities planned for each day, all promising to be adventurous. The key to the success of An Tostal '84, according to Chairman Dave Jakopin, is "active student participation." The events can be an excellent opportunity to boost student morale and promote campus unity. A lot of time, energy and hard work by the An Tostal committee has given the events potential for great success if everyone gets involved.

Following is a brief preview of the coming events.

Today

This is the first big day, to kick off the festival with three new activities:

•Decathlon — to take place at Father Sorin's Statue; the winner will carry a torch Saturday morning to lead the Chariot Procession.

•Slam Dunk Contest — to take place at the Bookstore Courts.

•Airband Competition — to take place at Father Sorin's Statue, finalists will compete at the Irish Wake Saturday night in Stepan Center.

Thursday

Both campuses will be active tomorrow. A picnic will start things off at Saint Mary's, with such events as a canoe race, a tricycle race and the famous "jail" game. One main attraction will be the Mr. Campus Contest, held in Angela Athletic Facility. The Beer Garden will begin at 9:30 at Senior Bar (3 Budweisers for $1!).

Friday

All stage activities will take place at Father Sorin's Statue with a band to provide music all afternoon. Various events held on the quads will include contests such as car stuffing, donut eating, and the hilarious Dating Game. On Green Field the infamous Keg Toss and Mattress Races will be taking place.

The new contest referred to as Miss Mud will also be held Friday. Miss Mud is parallel to Mr. Campus. She will lead the Chariot Procession on Saturday along with him and the decathlon winners to start the ever-famous mud fights. The contest itself will not be based upon looks but rather upon answering questions correctly.

Saturday

This day is full of events ranging from a road rally, a campus-wide picnic to the popular mud pits. Before the famous Chariot Races take place, there will be a Mud Pillow Fight, Mud Wheelbarrow Race and Mud Volleyball. Bookstore Basketball semifinals will also be going on. The highlight of the day will be the Irish Wake featuring the band Airian, to be held in Stepan Center.

Sunday

The final day of An Tostal brings rest to those who have actively participated in the past five days. The main attraction will be the Bookstore Basketball Finals. The finals of the Ultimate Frisbee contest will also be held Sunday.

Snack bar gains profits with new pizza service

By P.A.CIMINO
Staff Reporter

The newest competitor for the pizza crown at Saint Mary's is called the Wild Pizza, served by the snack bar and now available for free delivery anywhere on campus.

The delivery service, instituted just two weeks ago, has been a big hit on campus and is growing, said Jane Ellickson, snack bar manager.

Why the name "Wild Pizza?" "It's a very catchy name and also a SAGA trademark," said Ellickson. SAGA is a nationwide food service that runs both the snack bar and the Saint Mary's dining hall. Saint Mary's is one of approximately 400 colleges across the United States served by SAGA.

The Wild Pizza has been adding to the snack bar's profits since it was introduced at the beginning of last semester. "Sales have increased considerably this semester over last semester," Ellickson said.

The Wild Pizza has a tough battle ahead, however, as it is vying for the affections of a student body that has been a steady and welcome customer of such pizza giants as Domino's and Good Time Pizza. Domino's representative Liz Early said they have not noticed any change in the number of orders from the Saint Mary's campus. "The number of orders has not diminished," Early said. "We still deliver an average of 150 pizzas to Saint Mary's daily." Meanwhile, the snack bar delivers an average of twenty pizzas a day, said Ellickson. She was quick to point out that this number varies drastically from day to day.

In the midst of all these pies, Ellickson said Saint Mary's students are very happy with the Wild Pizza. "I have gotten a good amount of positive feedback from the students," she said. Ellickson also said she wished students would give the Wild Pizza a try and that if they did, they would not be disappointed.

For those interested in trying the Wild Pizza it is delivered free of charge Sunday through Thursday from 7 p.m. to midnight. Prices range from $2.90 to $8.60 and the number to call is 284-2011.

Organization for Women, the League of Women Voters and the American Civil Liberties Union testified against it before legislative committees.

Schlafly also criticized the nation's schools for dwelling on social issues like sex education and nuclear war at the expense of basic reading, writing and mathematical skills.

In an interview after her talk, Schlafly said she "completely" supported an Indianapolis ordinance, passed Monday night, that defines violent pornography as sexual discrimination and makes its distributors subject to civil lawsuits.

"This new idea is to deal with the issue (of pornography) as a type of civil rights litigation. It adapts civil rights legal jargon to the pornography issue."

Schlafly dismissed the constitutional ramifications of the new law.

"Pornography is the degradation and exploitation of women," she said. "It isn't women tying up and abusing men. It is men tying up and abusing women. There are clear sexist differences."

don't think they'll budge on that one," Roemer said.

The definition of a party "needs a lot of discussion," said Roemer. The HPC suggested that the hall rectors should be able to determine if a gathering of students constitutes a party. "One possible problem with that is that it may lead to a lot of inequities among the halls," said Roemer. "They may want a set of uniform guidelines to work with."

Soviets employ bombs against Afghan rebels

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Reagan administration said yesterday that Soviet forces have opened a major offensive against rebels in Afghanistan and a Pentagon spokesman said "it appears their force levels of personnel, aircraft and armor may be higher than ever before."

Defense Department spokesman Michael Burch also said the Soviets "probably have begun to employ high-altitude bombing" for the first time in their four-year effort to suppress Afghan resistance which began with a Soviet invasion in late 1979.

"It appears that some sort of spring offensive has begun," Burch said in response to questions.

At the State Department, spokesman Alan Romberg said the United States has confirmed from several sources that the new Soviet military offensive includes "high-altitude saturation bombing" up and down the 70-mile-long Panjsher Valley north of Kabul, the Afghan capital. The rebels have a stronghold in the valley.

Romberg said the bombing began on Friday and continued Saturday.

"There is also a large convoy of several hundred Soviet vehicles which has started to move north from the mouth of the valley," Romberg said.

In addition, he said other Soviet "sweep operations" are taking place in western Afghanistan near Herat and near Jalalabad, the country's second and third largest cities after Kabul.

Other such operations are taking place in northern Afghanistan, close to the Soviet border, Romberg said.

He reported increased resistance activity near Kabul, saying Mujahidin resistance fighters have carried out numerous raids and attacks on the main road from the Soviet Union to Kabul.

The State Department spokesman noted that the Soviets previously have carried out six unsuccessful campaigns in the Panjsher Valley.

He said the most recent of them was in the summer of 1982 before a truce was worked out between the Soviets and the Afghan resistance commander in the Panjsher, Ahmad Shah Masood.

Other sources said up to 20,000 Soviet troops may be involved in the new offensive, along with more than 500 tanks and armored troop carriers, plus 60 to 80 heavily armed helicopter gunships.

Burch did not specifically identify the types of bombers being used by the Soviets against targets in the valley, but he told reporters that "I wouldn't quarrel" with reports that the Soviets have sent TU-16 Badger bombers against the Afghans from bases in the southern part of the Soviet Union.

Chicago man shoots wife, children to death

Associated Press

CHICAGO — A man shot his wife and two children to death yesterday, then ran down the stairs of a high-rise housing project firing on "everyone he encountered," police said. A bystander died and four people were wounded before police shot down the gunman in the parking lot.

Officers said a family dispute sparked the shooting spree by Charles Hunt, 37. A neighbor said Hunt was "very strange" and that she had reported to police in the past that he was abusing his family.

Two people remained hospitalized Tuesday afternoon after the incident at Theodore K. Lawless Gardens, a normally quiet, middle class residence on the South Side.

Cmdr. James Delaney said that at about 8 a.m., Hunt fatally shot his wife, Betty, 50, his son, Charles Jr., 17, and his daughter, Linda, 15, in the family's 23rd-floor apartment.

He then dashed downstairs to the 18th floor and killed Gloria Carney, 49, with three shots to the head, police said.

He then went to the building's lobby, where he shot "everyone he encountered, wounding 29-year-old Londa McDaniels, and a boy," Delaney said.

"I saw him shoot the woman as she was pressing the elevator button," said W.L. Williams, who was repairing his car outside the building. "He stepped outside the lobby and fired more shots into it."

Delaney said Hunt walked outside and shot the building's manager, Robert Gholar, 31.

"He ... shot Robert in the face and reloaded the gun," Williams said. "I yelled for Robert to run and that's when the police pulled up."

Delaney said Hunt then raced through the building's parking lot, firing at police. Witnesses said Hunt appeared to be reloading the automatic pistol as he was felled by a hail of police gunfire.

If you've attended college on a Guaranteed Student Loan or a National Direct Student Loan made after October 1, 1975, consider spending a couple of years in the Army.

If you train for certain specialties, the government will release you from 1/3 of your indebtedness (or $1,500, whichever is greater) for each year of active duty.

Obviously, a three year enlistment cancels 100 percent of your debt. But if you sign up for the Army's exclusive two-year enlistment option, we'll still cancel 2/3 of your debt.

Food costs, inflation falling, report claims

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Food costs tumbled for the first time since July to hold the increase in consumer prices to a mere 0.2 percent last month, leaving inflation for the year running at a moderate 5 percent annual clip, the government reported Tuesday.

The White House cheered the news as "very reassuring" and private analysts found no signs inflation was moving back into the fast lane.

In its new report, the Labor Department said food prices, paced by cheaper meat, poultry, fish, eggs and fruit, were off 0.1 percent in March after surging 1.6 percent in January and 0.6 percent in February.

Gasoline prices reversed a five-month slide to climb 1 percent in March, their biggest gain since last spring. Even so, they were still 12.4 percent below their peak of three years ago.

Fuel oil prices declined 5 percent after shooting up nearly 10 percent over the previous two months, the department said.

The overall increase in the Consumer Price Index was well under the seasonally adjusted gain of 0.6 percent in January and 0.4 percent in February. It was 0.2 percent in December, capping a 1983 advance of .8 percent, the smallest gain since the price-controlled years of 1971-72.

At the White House, spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said, "This is very reassuring news in view of the extraordinary growth of the economy in the first quarter."

He added, "It provides further evidence the economy is not overheating. This is very promising for a downward trend in interest rates."

Some economists have expressed concern that the economy's strong expansion — at an 8.3 percent annual rate in the first quarter — could put pressure on wages and prices reigniting the inflation fires of past years.

But analysts could find little evidence of that on Tuesday.

"There are no signs here overheating is starting to bubble forward," said Donald Ratajczak, forecaster at Georgia State University.

Allen Sinai, chief economist at the New York investment banking firm of Lehman Brothers Kuhn Loeb Inc., said the March increase "underscores the fact there is no major re-acceleration of inflation in prospect now or in the next few months."

Ratajczak said there was nothing in the report to alter his projection of about 5 percent inflation for the year, a forecast shared by many private economists.

Bolstering the analysts' predictions the economy was not growing too energetically, the Commerce Department said factory orders for "big ticket" durable goods climbed 0.8 percent in March, the smallest gain in three months and mostly due to a surge in orders for defense capital goods.

The six major automakers sold cars at an annual rate of 7.7 million in mid-April. The carmakers have been at or above that rate for most of this year, continuing the brisk sales recovery that took hold late last year.

The automakers said they delivered 232,156 cars in the April 10-April 20 industry selling period, 22.6 percent better than last year's 189,363.

There were nine selling days in the period, so that works out to a rate of 25,795 cars a day, the best since 27,153 a day were sold in mid-April 1979.

For the year, U.S. automakers have delivered 2,437,160 cars to dealers, 34.0 percent ahead of 1,799,062 at the same point in 1983.

In other economic developments Tuesday:

—The government outspent its income by $28.6 billion last month, but red ink for the year is still running 9 percent below last year's record, the Treasury Department said in its monthly statement. The March figures raised the deficit to $117.8 billion for the fiscal year which began in October, compared to $129.2 billion during the same period last year.

—Steel production rose to 2.127 million tons in the week ended April 21, an increase of 1.7 percent from the previous week's 2.092 million tons, the American Iron and Steel Institute reported. The industry's production amounted to 81.9 percent of capacity during the week, compared with 80.6 percent in the previous week.

Restoring prestige to the Senior Fellow Award

I think it goes without saying that the Senior Class Fellow award is in trouble; this year's fiasco has made that clear. I should like to make a modest proposal concerning this award; one that would restore its original in-

Richard Conklin

attention and, I hope, some of the educational usefulness it was meant to have.

Up front, two disclaimers. I speak here as an individual and not as a member of the University Administration. Also, I do not mean to disparage those members of the Notre Dame community who have received the award in recent years.

Each of these individuals deserved some honor; but the Senior Class Fellow award, at least as it was originally conceived, was not the appropriate honor.

The Senior Class Fellow award was originally modeled on the Chubb Fellowships at Yale University. Chubb Fellows are drawn from the influence hierarchy of the nation, most often the area of public service, and come to Yale not for a quick, in-and-out lecture, but for a more leisurely stay that includes informal give-and-take with the students.

The University committed itself to finding funding for such a fellowship (which is costly); Father Hesburgh offered his clout in extending invitations; and the Provost's Office promised to coordinate the selection process. In the early days of the award, the late William Burke, associate provost, helped a Senior Class Committee to winnow nominations and to produce a short list of candidates.

The most successful Senior Class Fellow was Eugene McCarthy in 1969. McCarthy talked to classes, led seminars, dined with students and otherwise spent his two days on campus living the life of the University. I remember one lengthy night session — a colloquy in the best tradition of medieval academic taverns — spent on the second floor of the old Alumni-Senior Club.

Timing was the one major problem in the award's early days. The Senior Class committee did not begin work until the first semester of their last year, and often did not begin issuing invitations until spring. If the first person on the list was unable to spend time on campus (a token appearance was not sufficient), an invitation went out to No. 2, and so on. The longest lead time — say, two months — was insufficient to commandeer the calendars of the people of the calibre the award suggested.

As the selectors dropped from No. 1 to No. 2 to No. 3, often accompanied by publicity, the award suffered. Eventually, it was turned into an award honoring someone within the community, and even the idea of this person being obliged to involve himself or herself in a special educational role was lost in the crowded days of April.

It became, quite frankly, an internal and titular honor, exactly the opposite of what it was intended to be.

What to do?

First, return the locus of coordination of the Senior Fellow search to the Provost's Office, with a member of its staff becoming non-voting chair of the selection committee, insuring continuity and underlining the educational nature of the award.

Second, make the Junior Class officers ex-officio the Senior Class Fellow selection committee, and give them a deadline of the end of their junior year to come up with a short list, after inviting nominations from the entire class.

Third, have a bias toward persons with a Notre Dame connection, but do not make a previous association with the University a prerequisite. In other words, first think of people such as John Noonan, Michael Novak, Father Bryan Hehir, Congressman Romano Mazzoli, and Governor Bruce Babbitt, all of whom know the University and its culture.

But do not exclude, for example, a member of the President's cabinet, whom we have reason to believe might come, simply because he or she is a stranger to campus.

Fourth, make sure that the invitation goes out the summer before the senior year begins, with the candidate allowed to choose a convenient date during the coming academic year. This should largely overcome the timing problem.

Fifth, insist on more than a perfunctory campus appearance and provide an honorarium sufficient to interest persons who have no trouble filling their calendars.

If we adopt these measures, I believe we can recover the original purpose and prestige of the Senior Fellow award.

An insider's view of Latin American guerrillas

One of the first things people find when they study the third world is that a characteristic trait of these ex-colonial countries is the existence of guerrilla movements. Yet outside the third world little is known about these movements, and less is understood.

In a recent trip to Mexico, I interviewed "Mario", an Argentinian who may legitimately be considered an expert in guerrilla ideology and methods. Mario's background includes a master in philosophy from the Pontifical Catholic University in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, three years as a math and philosophy student and class delegate at the University of Buenos Aires and, more importantly, four years of direct involvement with the Montoneros Organization, one of the major urban guerrilla movements in Latin America.

Santiago O'Donnell

Free-lance

Why did you become a "guerrillero"? What does it mean to be one? Why did you leave the guerrillas? What do you see as the future of revolutions in Latin America? These were the questions I posed as I turned on the tape recorder.

"When I entered the University of Buenos Aires in 1961 I had to work to make a living, which made it difficult to study. The only people I found receptive to this problem and to the problem of the university's strict admission code were students with leftist ideas.

"I became a class delegate and obtained some reforms in the admissions policy, which led to an offer to join Communist Youth. I accepted their invitation, seduced by the Marxist interpretation of history and influenced by the literature that circulated at the time.

"A year later I became a member of the (communist) party and was assigned to a group working in the barrio with the poor. I realized that the potential for revolution was not in the communist party.

"The barrios were Peronist and they would not accept communist material even if it was free. But the communist party was not the only Marxist group in Argentina, and I began to contact sectors in the Peronist youth, eventually I became a member of Cooke's group.

"Cooke was the Cuban contact in Argentina, and the first group of Argentine 'guerrilleros' received military training in Cuba via Cooke. But this group was more a family-type discussion group, and all it offered, was a remote possibility to travel to Cuba. So after a few months, I left this group and joined others in the peronist youth. They gave me what I was looking for, military instruction."

What kind of military instruction did you receive?

"It was pretty primitive, basically oriented towards explosives, and how to construct them with materials that could be purchased in drug stores, or here and there. Many of these groups rejected military paraphernalia like bazookas and the like.

"The idea was to use easily accessible hand guns and explosives or flammable materials, so that the common person could identify with the revolution and eventually become involved. The weapon of poor people is the 22 pistol; you assault a bank with a 22, not with a grenade or a fancy machine gun."

Mario did not raise his voice at any point of the interview, but he was far from being indifferent. Several times he interrupted his speech, started shaking his legs, took a heavy toke off of his cigarette, and reached into his memory for words, then return to his story.

"One day I met an old friend from the University, and we decided to form a closed terrorist group, separated from the other armed groups (for our personal security). We managed to do a few things, like gather I.D.S., and pull robberies to get money for buying weapons."

Eventually you got arrested, didn't you?

"Well, in one of these episodes two members of our group were arrested. They did not tie the man well enough and he managed to yell at a policeman that was passing by. Another mistake they made was to wait for the elevator instead of running down the stairs. When I arrived at home, the police were waiting for me. I was given three years, but after a year and a half I was freed on probation.

"During this period I made contact with the Montoneros, and when I left prison I joined them. I did this partly because it was the guerrilla organization with the most Nietzschean 'will to power,' and partly because it was clearly emerging as the dominant group within the mobilized sectors, and I didn't want to miss the bus. That is how I became involved with the 'hardcore' guerrillas, which is what you asked me at the beginning."

Going to a more psychological level, what made you join the guerrillas? What was the limit that had to be transposed for you to pick up a gun?

"There wasn't a specific event or thing, rather ideology weighed a lot. When you have an idea of revolution in your head, and you combine it with the rebellion of the popular sectors, you believe that your idea is correct. But to what extent the popular sectors would follow the revolutionary process, and how to lead them were problems that I would discover later. Injustice? I could make a long list of injustices: the electoral proscription of the Peronist party, the (military) dictatorships and many other things . . .

"The example of the Tupamaros (in Uruguay) led me to believe in the revolutionary potential of the urban guerrilla."

In 1979 Montonero member, Ana Maria Gonzales, placed a bomb under the bed of Chief Police Commissioner Cardozo using her friendship with Cardozo's daughter. As a guerrilla, are there any limits to your use of violence?

"I always avoided . . . I was able to avoid — and in this sense I was lucky — I was able to avoid this type of situation . . . Of course you can never be 100 percent sure, but I never killed anybody . . . But sometimes you are in a situation where you are a friend of the daughter of the chief of police, and the atmosphere is heavy with all the killings that have been taking place, and someone from the leadership comes up to you and tells you that since you are her friend you should put a bomb under her father's bed. Maybe Ana Maria would have never killed anyone in her life, but she was the only one with the opportunity to do it.

"Anyway, by that time I had left the Guerrillas and was working with the Peronist party. I thought that the killings hadn't taken us anywhere. We had nobody behind us, and they had thousands of policemen waiting in line."

Why did you leave the Montoneros?

"It's hard to explain, but at the time there was no way of controlling the violence, because the leadership of the Montoneros did not want to admit it had been defeated, and the pattern of violence that had been established was impossible to control. So my proposal to the leadership — a proposal that had significant support — was to admit our defeat, distribute the money among the needy, distribute the weapons and wait for the situation to change. Also I began to value human life more, which is something we had had contempt for. In relation to our families, to other people's life, etc."

Why did the revolution fail in Argentina?

"In the Latin American context, revolution is necessary in some cases — like in Nicaragua or El Salvador — is to be expected. But in South America, I can justify violence only in some cases, but cannot accept the idea of revolution. I believe it obtains the opposite result from what it seeks, because the forces we manage to gather are violently dispersed by the enemy.

"I believe that the revolution is justified when the population assumes it and takes part in it. In South America the revolution is only an adventure of the petit-bourgeoisie."

Under what circumstances would you pick up a gun again?

"Only to defend my daughter."

So you have discarded any future personal involvement in armed insurrection as a political option.

"In terms of Argentine politics today I do. I cannot foresee a situation that would put me in a position to do so. I could only be taken to that situation if I decided to live in Argentina at any cost. But today I have a different perspective. If things get bad in a place I take the first plane and leave."

Don't take music away

Dear Editor:

I am writing in regards to a recent memorandum sent to all dorms by Dean of Students, James A. Roemer. The memorandum stated that a number of complaints had been received by Roemer, from visitors and faculty, about the practice of students playing their stereos with the speakers in the windows facing the outside. In summary, Roemer asked that this practice be discouraged and that RA's try to enforce the discouragement.

I wonder who has been complaining so to Dean Roemer. Obviously some persons with absolutely no tolerance for popular music have been ruffling some of the administration's feathers. Is it that these people have neurotic tendencies and can not cope with musical stimulus, or is it just that these people have an innate disliking for music?

Roemer clearly stated that faculty and visitors have been making the complaints. The funny part of this is that most faculty and visitors do not even live here. The campus is primarily the home of the students. I have never yet come in contact with a student who thought that the playing of such music was of ill practice. In fact, most students feel that the music is relaxing and adds some spice to an already nice day.

Enforcing Dean Roemer's request would only cause more tension between the administration and the students. We may not be able to drink, walk on the grass, or be with our girlfriend after 2 a.m., but God help us if you take away our music.

Move off campus

Dear Editor:

This afternoon I had the opportunity to watch the student demonstration in front of the administration building. While I admired the unified student reaction to the new alcohol policy, I think the demonstrators merely displayed why such a policy was formulated. Shouting "Let's get drunk" demonstrates the unhealthy student attitude towards alcohol use.

Furthermore protesting to an administration which practices "in loco parentis" is almost certainly bound to fail. The administration may listen to student opinion, but they certainly have no obligation to make concessions to the students.

If students truly wish to exercise greater control over their lives, there is one very clear, viable option. The population of South Bend has declined approximately 20,000 in the past 20 years, leaving thousands of cheap, unused housing units. Moving off campus would not only allow students to do as they see fit, but it would cause students to mature much more rapidly than they would living on campus.

Signing housing leases, paying rent, and buying groceries might sound like a headache, but such things are part of the real world, a world those living on campus are insulated from.

I would venture to say that the varying circumstances under which off-campus students would be living would create more diversity in an otherwise rather homogeneous student body. A mass off-campus migration would also leave the administration with a lot of empty rooms, something which will influence policy in favor of those wishing to, or forced to, stay on campus.

Student Union fiasco

Dear Editor:

During spring break we traveled to Aspen, Colorado on a Student Union sponsored and organized ski trip. Although we had a great time skiing, we were extremely disappointed with the way the trip was organized.

In fact, the trip was so poorly run by the Student Union representatives, Alyson Miller and Deborah Hickey, who did not have to pay for the trip, that we would not recommend a Student Union sponsored trip to anyone.

Let us cite a few of the more blatant examples of the Student Union's and group leader's unexcusably poor organization and management of the trip. First, we were told that bus transportation was too expensive, although the buses to Florida were very reasonably priced.

Instead, we traveled in compact cars without ski racks that ended up costing approximately $80 per person, even though five persons were squeezed into each car. When we arrived at Aspen we were not given the Summit Party Cards that were a part of our ski package and were necessary for admittance to all of the group activities planned by the travel agency.

Although the condominium accommodations were excellent, they lacked the pool and jacuzzi we were promised and they were definitely not within walking distance of the ski slopes.

Although we could go on to cite numerous other problems, we think the ones mentioned are enough to give a good idea of the overall poor quality of the Student Union trip management. To prevent a recurrence of this situation, we are submitting a complete list of the problems to the Student Union.

Hopefully, with more careful planning and control and selection of more competent and courteous trip representatives, fiascos such as this year's trip can be alleviated before they occur.

Ruppe is sound choice

Dear Editor:

Your April 13 editorial on the choice of Peace Corps Director Loret Ruppe as commencement speaker had the uncertain credibility that one might expect from an Idi Amin writing on human rights or James Watt writing on diplomacy. You may see that even by the use of these names the issue is polarized.

Distorting Mrs. Ruppe's values by calling her pro-abortion is similar to labeling her a Bolshevik pig, or a Red sympathizer in 1950, it's a loaded term and not fair in your usage. As with parts of the Alcohol Policy, this approach insensitively closes the issue to proper discussion.

You can see that Mrs. Woidat, in her letter to the editor on April 18, quickly focused in on this single volatile issue, with a judgement which her daughter may not in fact share.

The controversy concerning tape recorded conversations with a Peace Corps deputy, seems to be little more than the backwash from the much larger whirlpool that Ed Meese found himself caught in because of his own indiscretions.

Loret Ruppe has reinstalled the Peace Corps with an Esprit de corps and vision that has been absent from the organization since the departure of Sargent Shriver. Loret Ruppe has taken an organization that was at its nadir, and has restored it in the world community as a respected human service organization.

Within weeks of her appointment, the integrity of the Peace Corps was jeopardized when her department was to report to a CIA alumnus. Loret Ruppe showed that she was both a competent administrator and a quick thinking "street fighter" when she successfully opposed that arrangement.

Thus, in an important way, she helped to regain much of the credibility that the Peace Corps had lost because of previous dealings with Central Intelligence. The deputy whose conversations were recorded had allegedly both resisted Mrs. Ruppe direction and covertly her leadership.

The job of Peace Corps director demands a tremendous amount of travel to coordinate a thin world-wide organization, hence it is critical that Loret Ruppe have reliable deputies.

The deputy in question had reportedly lied to her on various occasions and was subverting her leadership. Therefore recording these conversations within the organization was primarily a defensive manoeuvre albeit an indiscreet one.

The effectiveness restored to the Peace Corps, and the newfound integrity and vision that Loret Ruppe has given that organization should alone be enough to qualify her to be commencement speaker. At Notre Dame we have demonstrated an unyielding commitment to social concerns both here and abroad. To honor someone who shares with us this Christian zeal and love is only natural.

As a woman and parent, Loret Ruppe has, with her husband Phil, raised six beautiful children, while managing two homes in both Maryland and Michigan while Phil served as Congressman from Michigan.

As an unpaid administrator, volunteer or board member she has managed countless projects and events to serve her community. Your editorial challenged Mrs. Ruppe's credentials with an insensitivity hinting of sexism, as if you expected her resume to emulate that of a primary wage earner.

Had Loret been professionally employed, and her husband at home rearing six children, then her resume would more accurately reflect the dynamism and skill of the outstanding person that I personally know her to be.

I would like to commend our administration for an exceptional choice. Loret Ruppe is truly worthy to succeed others we have previously honored; John Kennedy, the President who established the Peace Corps (Laetare Medal '61); Kathryn Graham, the publisher of the newspaper that exposed Watergate (commencement '74); and Robert Sargent Shriver, the first Director of the Peace Corps (Laetare Medal '68)

Paranoid policy

Dear Editor:

As a high school senior last year, I looked forward to coming to Notre Dame this year. I had heard from many sources that I would receive a complete education at this university. I expected that while I was being challenged academically I also would mature both socially and morally and upon my graduation I would have received this so-called complete education.

Instead, I am now awakened to the reality that I attend a school with a paranoid administration who has lost all perspective of educating young adults in the 1980s. I receive much more trust and responsibility from my parents who realize that I cannot be protected in a glass bubble away from all the world's problems.

Instead of concentrating with the overall welfare of the students, this administration focuses its attention on liability and the "golden" image of Notre Dame. The events of the past week are sterling examples of an attitude that the administration has been displaying all year long.

This attitude sees the administration as the all-knowing parent who controls the troublesome child otherwise known as the student body. This school has the unique combination of great students and rectors who can work together to implement a realistic policy. Unfortunately, a realistic policy was not adopted.

I sincerely believe that if the administration and student government could work together, a viable solution can be found. If the administration persists in ignoring realities, I see catastrophic consequences for the future of Notre Dame.

Traffic deaths

Dear Editor:

Hey Father Beauchamp and Father Hesburgh get a clue! As one of the students on campus who does not drink, I can truly appreciate your concern and feeling of need to take action on this matter, but let's do it in a responsible and realistic manner.

Obviously, you feel that a Notre Dame degree is the most important thing to anyone attending school here and that because of this belief the administration can take any action it deems warranted without prolonged student protest. I think that you are about to find out how wrong that belief is.

Students here will only put up with so much before they take extreme action. Think about the costs of such action: It won't be long before your policy hits the nationwide press and when it does you can bet the publicity will be neither fair nor unbiased. Once this happens you can bet alumni will get involved and what happens if they side with the students? Unless I am mistaken a fair amount of money comes from those alumni, what happens if it stops coming in? What about incoming freshman and transfer students who will hear about the matter and take the attitude of realizing just how uncooperative and unconsidering a bunch of "old men" in power can be? And lastly, what about the disillusioned students already here? How often have we been promised an Undergraduate Club and renovated Student Center and it has not been delivered? And what if you deliver, do you seriously believe that a few thousand dollars will cure a diseased and now dead social life?

You know it's amazing, we are supposedly the most brilliant students in America, with a supposedly equally brilliant administration and they come up with a plan that looks like it was drawn up by fourth graders. Fr. Beauchamp says, "The whole party scene leads to alcohol abuse, so we've got to eliminate it." Well I tell you what Father, why don't you go ahead and do that and when you're finished why don't you and Father Hesburgh go to Congress and get a law passed banning cars on American roads, after all they do lead to a whole lot of traffic deaths.

Realistic concern

Dear Editor:

Having just learned of the University's new policy with regard to student socializing on campus, I am somewhat disturbed.

First, I would like to acknowledge your apparent good intentions behind the recent decision to limit students' parties on campus to twice the number of people as those residents who host the gathering.

Nevertheless, I feel that this policy is excessive and fails to recognize circumstances peculiar to the geographic location and students, characteristics of Notre Dame.

As you know, Notre Dame's campus is its own enclave, for the most part severed by distance and a paucity of social attractions from the city of South Bend. Despite my own gregarious nature and incessant search for socializing, I only ventured into South Bend on a few occasions during my years at Notre Dame.

I honestly felt quite fortunate that my desire to meet and mingle with students in a non-academic setting could be satiated by visiting parties held in various dorms on weekends. Many fond memories and lasting friendships derived from my attendance of many such soirees.

Furthermore, I can not recall one instance of serious personal or property harm attributable to such parties. Resident Assistants were always close at hand, though their services were rarely required.

Notre Dame fortunately requires of its students a tedious and demanding academic effort during the week. Weekend parties, even large ones — served more than just to allow students to indulge in some beer. It enabled them to deservedly relax and to create and to strengthen friendships with fellow men and women from the Notre Dame/Saint Mary's community. I feel sorry for those young adults who will now be deprived of this opportunity.

Finally, I want to express my realistic concern that this decision will certainly lead to more accidents — perhaps fatal — by causing more students to transplant their socializing off-campus. Obviously, some students will drink too much.

I would rather have this take place on campus than off, where not only an irresponsible or overzealous student suffers the consequences of overdrinking, but where innocent people will be endangered.

I appreciate your concern for the health and safety of the young adults on campus, but I ardently disagree with this decision and hope it will be reconsidered.

Another damp day

Dear Editor:

Tuesday morning I woke up, but I did not look out my window. Upon leaving the dorm, I was surprised at the sight of snow falling. It was going to be another damp, dreary day for Domers.

Later that morning, as reached for The Observer at the dining hall, I noticed the faces of those people reading the article regarding the new alcohol policy. I wondered, on this damp, dreary day for Domers, "Is a wet campus really a happy campus?"

New Tarzan not an adventure film

by Cat Francis
features copy editor

There I was, sitting in the theatre, eating my popcorn and waiting for Warner Brothers' new film, "Greystoke: The Legend of Tarzan, Lord of the Apes."

"This is going to be Adventure," I thought. "This is going to be Tarzan swinging on vines, fighting elephants, beating his chest and all sorts of good stuff."

It wasn't.

"Greystoke" is, more than anything else, a psychological movie. It shows the mental struggles of a human caught between the demands of the society in which he was raised and the society into which he is pulled. Christopher Lambert, playing Lord Clayton (Tarzan), shows the inner battle of a man who exits the jungles of Africa and moves into a more perilous and complex jungle, human society.

The movie is filmed beautifully. The viewer is treated to shots of waterfalls, towering trees, a multitude of wild animals and later, to the beauties of the English countryside.

However, I have some bones to pick with "Greystoke." It has been advertised as being absolutely true to the book by Edgar Rice Burroughs and the advertisers have been a little smug about this. But there were enough discrepancies to bother anyone who has read the book.

The major irritant lies in the fact that although the movie is subtitled "The Legend of Tarzan, Lord of the Apes," the name Tarzan is never mentioned in the movie. Lambert is referred to throughout the film as Lord Clayton. I have nothing against this except for the fact that if something is mentioned in the title, it should be included in the movie.

"Greystoke" is long — two and a half hours. The beginning uses up excessive time among the apes, proceeding at a plodding pace which continues until Clayton arrives in England.

The apes are wonderful. The makeup is painstaking and flawless.

John Huston, the movie's director, hired Roger Fouts, an expert on primates, as a consultant for the film and Fouts' efforts add greatly to the realistic appearances.

"Greystoke" contains the last screen appearance of Sir Ralph Richardson, who died last year. Richardson is delightful as the 6th Earl of Greystoke, Clayton's grandfather. His performance is nicely complemented by the acting of Annie MacDowell, who plays Jane Porter, the Earl's American ward.

Huston is best known for his work, "Chariots of Fire" and "Greystoke" contains several of the actors from that movie. Among these are Cheryl Campbell, who plays Clayton's mother, and Ian Holm, who plays Phillippe d'Arnot, the Belgian explorer who is saved by Clayton and later takes him back to England.

The movie is filled with emotion, perhaps because of the series of people who die in Clayton's arms. This gets a trifle tiresome, but I couldn't help reflecting that under the same circumstances, like Clayton, I might have, if you'll excuse the expression . . . gone ape.

99 Luftballons a one-song album

features staff writer

If ever an album had a single song as its selling point, Nena's 99 Luftballons is that album. The title cut has been at the top of the charts in Europe and America for months. But as for the rest of the album — not very impressive.

99 Luftballons suffers from one very serious deficiency — engineering. The few good qualities that the album might possess are hidden by the generally poor quality of the recording itself.

Because of the extremely low record level on both the LP and cassette versions of the album, the volume on a stereo must be turned up so high that noises like turntable rumble and tape hiss become annoying. Better stereo systems will eliminate some of this noise, but even the most expensive stereo can't compensate for a poor mixing job.

Ordinarily, well engineered albums combine the separate tracks — individual instruments, voices, etc. — into a finished product that highlights the good qualities of the individual elements. 99 Luftballons fails to do this.

It is dominated by a bass drum that obscures almost all of the instrumentation and most of the vocals. 99 Luftballons has some very good saxophone and keyboard sections, but these are generally concealed by a pounding, driving beat.

Given a decent production, 99 Luftballons would not be a bad album — maybe not awe inspiring, but once you get around the bass drum, definitely listenable.

The album's format — one side of English songs and a second side of German songs — seems only natural for a German band trying to make it big in America.

The English side of the album shows off the band more than the German side. There are some interesting saxophone lines in the songs "7" and "Let Me Be Your Pirate," which also happens to contain some minor guitar brilliance.

"Let Me Be Your Pirate" is one of the better cuts on the album. It is a slow-paced song, reminiscent of some older Lou Reed tunes. The drumming highlights the sound instead of smothering it. Unfortunately, this is about the only song where this is true.

"Let Me Be Your Pirate" closes out the first side and "Kino" opens the second. It starts out with a good introduction without any drums — good enough to get your hopes up. But before long, the bass drum enters.

The album ends with the title cut, "99 Luftballons." The lead singer, presumably Nena, has a very good voice, and this song shows it off well. Again, engineering problems give one the impression that she's singing out of a closet, but at least it sounds like the door is open.

99 Luftballons is not a debut album on a par with that of a group like Asia, but there is probably a good reason. It seems reasonable to guess that Nena did not have a contract with a major studio prior to recording their album, and hence had to pay for their own studio time. It wouldn't be difficult, especially in Germany, to find an inexpensive recording studio where a small band could cut an album.

99 Luftballons is not a great album, but Nena has potential.

Fighting over cats and dogs

by Cat Francis
features copy editor

In the April 16 edition of "The Observer," Paul Cimino presented us with an article entitled "On the Superiority of Dogs." In answer to the multitude of outraged readers who, I am convinced, are crying out in the wilderness of indignation, I am presenting the other side of the story.

Why, Cimino asks, are Garfield and Heathcliff so popular? The answer should be apparent. Cats, because of their intelligence and independence, simply are more capable of humor than dogs. Dogs are too busy fawning over people to have time out for a good joke.

At this point, someone may bring up the subject of Snoopy. Snoopy is an exception in the annals of doggie-dom, exhibiting none of the characteristic servility and drooling enthusiasm so common to canines. This leads me to believe Snoopy is a farce perpetuated by two particularly active cats in a beagle costume.

Before anyone accuses me of being a dog-hater, I will observe that I own a dog. Her name is Suzie. She is a dalmatian. She sleeps on the foot of my bed. She does not sleep there out of any sense of loyalty, but because she likes my electric blanket.

Susie has clearly demonstrated to me the true extent of canine intelligence. How smart can an animal be who, after the 500th time she has heard the word "walk" mentioned in conversation, still runs frantically for her leash? How smart is a creature who, at least once per day, crawls under the sofa and gets trapped? How intelligent is a beast who thinks Frisbees are edible?

Suzie is the original Destructomatic Dog. She has chewed countless shoes, not to mention baskets, purses, rolls of paper towels, books and a wastebasket, into ribbons. The debris from this activity is piled by the dog under the dining room table, where she, under the illusion that she is a giant hamster, appears to be building a nest. Cats, aside from the occasional claw mark, leave no permanent damage.

The legend of man's best friend is a myth. Any dog who runs into a burning house is not thinking about saving his or her master but rather considering the perishability of food dishes. The same applies to burglars. A dog who barks at intruders is not trying to save the household possessions, but protecting the steak bone concealed under an armchair. A cat doesn't even bother pretending loyalty. They let you know exactly where you stand early in the game.

Dogs are motivated by food, and they will go to any length to preserve their pipeline to it. If this means jumping all over a person when he comes home, or fetching slippers, or sitting up and doing ridiculous but cute tricks, they'll do it. I've never seen a cat rolling over and playing dead for a bowlful of Kibbles n' Bits.

The Notre Dame baseball team improved its record to 16-17 with a sweep of a doubleheader against Valparaiso yesterday.

In the first contest, the Irish won, 9-5, in eight innings. Captain Carl Vuono blasted a grand slam in the bottom of the first extra inning to give Notre Dame the victory.

Tom Conlin went the distance for the Irish and improved his record to 3-3.

Notre Dame took the second game by a score of 8-7, also in eight innings. Jackie Moran knocked in the game-winning run in the bottom of the inning.

Mark Clementz got the win in relief, improving his record to 2-4.

Baltimore seeks stay

Associated Press

CHICAGO — An attorney for Baltimore asked a U.S. appellate panel yesterday to stay a lower court order requiring the city to notify the National Football League it will halt its lawsuit seeking to block the transfer of the Colts' franchise to Indianapolis.

"We filed the papers this morning (with the 7th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals)," said attorney Edwin Thomas.

The motion for the emergency stay was taken under advisement by the appellate court. Thomas said another motion was filed to allow Baltimore to continue with its condemnation suit, a legal strategy which would allow the city to wrest ownership of the team from Robert Irsay.

No date for a ruling on either motion was set immediately.

Irsay moved the team from Baltimore to Indianapolis on March 28.

sions, which gave the seeded Brick Throwers quite a fight before falling, 21-15.

The Modern Lovers were winners again, this time with a 21-12 victory over Hoop da Doop. Peter Graham took the honors as the best lover of the day with 10-for-20 shooting.

The Near-Perfection Award for the day goes to Rick Louthan of Armed and Dangerous II. Louthan hit seven shots in a row, and then ruined his perfect game just before the end, and he finished the day at 7-for-9. His team, however, did not fade as it saw the demise of Thy Kingdom Come, 21-17.

The Bookstore Basketball Addict Award goes to Bob Brogan of the Corby Tooters. Brogan decided to play yesterday despite a case of mono which he is battling, and he scored five points to help his team past Hoosiers, 21-14.

Today, the 32-team field will be trimmed to 16 in the fifth round of Bookstore XIII. The games will be played at 4:45 p.m., 5:30 p.m., and 6:30 p.m. on all of the regular courts.

At 5:30 p.m., two games seem to be at the top of the games-to-see list, so it all depends on what quad you like to watch basketball. The Modern Lovers will demonstrate their style on Stepan 4 against Team 136, while the Padres meet Return of Pigbag on Bookstore 9. Both games promise to be exciting.

At 6:15 p.m., you can pick a good game at any of the three tournament sites. Stepan 1 is the place for the matchup between the Fun Bunch Five and Corby's Three Reverends of Jesse Jackson and Two Guys to Attract the White Vote. Lyons 11 will be the location of the game that pits Over the Limit against Scratch Twice and the Three Itches.

The most interesting game at 6:15 p.m., though may be on Bookstore 10. That is where Sorin rector Edward "Monk" Malloy and his Sorin teammates on The Shootist will take on Tequila White Lightning IV, another team of Sorin residents. This Battle of Sorin pits two of the better teams in this year's tournament against each other.

Northwestern spoils day

Tennis team loses last home match

By ED KONRADY
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame men's tennis team experienced both the thrill of victory and the agony of defeat over this Easter break.

A loss to Purdue on Wednesday, a third-place finish in the Midwestern City Conference Championships, a blowout of DePaul Monday, and a tough loss to Northwestern yesterday kept the Irish busy.

The Wildcats spoiled the last homestand of the year for Notre Dame, 6-3. In the singles matches, Pat Shields and Captain Tim Noonan were victorious for the Irish.

Shields, who finished second in his flight in the MCC Championships, extended his winning streak with a victory over Dan Christian, 6-3, 6-4.

Noonan, who was playing his last match at Notre Dame, pulled out a 6-4, 6-7, 6-0 victory over Marco Wem. After the match, Noonan admitted, "It (leaving Notre Dame) really hasn't sunk in yet. I just wish I could have gone out with a win."

The third point for the Irish was provided by the third doubles team of Joe Nelligan and Doug Pratt, with a 6-3, 6-4 victory over Wem and Christian.

The loss put Notre Dame's record at 0-5 against Big Ten teams. However, the Irish will have a chance to try to turn the tide against the Michigan State Spartans, their next foe, this Saturday.

"I was pleased with our play, despite the loss," said Head Coach Tom Fallon. "I thought we played very well. A couple of points would have turned it around."

Monday, the Irish travelled to Chicago to pay a visit to the DePaul Blue Demons. Notre Dame swept the competition, 9-0, at the Midtown Tennis Club.

Pat Shields made his first appearance at fifth singles and Doug Pratt played sixth singles as Paul Najarian missed the match due to a sore back. This was Shields' first appearance at fifth since his back injury at the beginning of the spring season.

The bright spot of the weekend was the strong play of the Irish in the MCC Championships. Notre Dame was expected to finish third behind Oral Roberts and Oklahoma City College, but the race was much closer than expected.

"We played well," said Fallon. "We put three in the finals; unfortunately only one was able to win. Nelligan lost in three sets, and Shields lost to a good player."

"We're playing very well now, and hopefully we can keep it up."

The only Irish player to win his flight was Paul Najarian at fifth singles.

"I was very happy, and I thought I played well, concentrated well. I won all of the big points — I was really up for it and I had a little bit of luck," Najarian said.

"I had two wins against guys who were favored over me, and I put up a good show and won. The difference in the final between me and my opponent was the fact that I came back strong after losing the first set in a really close tiebreaker, even stronger than in the first set."

"I just raised my game up a notch," Najarian continued. "I didn't suffer the letdown he was expecting."

With the strenuous schedule the Irish have been facing, it was a mistake that keyed Najarian's victory.

"I think I played so well because I accidentally missed practice the day before," said Najarian, "and I got an extra day of rest which I needed, and I came back well rested."

Wednesday, the tennis team dropped an 8-1 decision to Purdue, extending the Big Ten jinx. The only point was provided by Paul Ghidotti at third singles with a 6-3, 3-6, 6-2 victory over Bill Sheley.

At Indianapolis

Track team takes second place

By CHUCK EHRMAN
Sports Writer

It was an all-day downpour that members of the Notre Dame track team had to endure as they competed in their first scoring meet of the outdoor season at the Indiana Intercollegiate Meet in Indianapolis last weekend.

Said coach Joe Piane of the weather: "It was horrible. It caused a lot of problems." Still, the Irish ran well.

The Irish track team nearly knocked off the strongly favored 1984 Big Ten indoor champions of Indiana with a strong second place finish.

"I was really pleased. I had to be," noted Piane. "The other teams, and even the press, picked us third or fourth at best. We lost by twelve points, which isn't all that much."

Piane pointed to the shot put as the crucial event. The Irish, due to the fact that they did not enter anyone in the competition, could only watch as Indiana scored big points in the field event.

"We had them scared," Piane said. "Without the shot put we could have beaten them, and that's not what Indiana expected."

Indiana topped the field of over twenty teams with 139 points. Behind the Hoosiers came the Irish (127), and Purdue (103).

playing and practice time since the Wooster win, though. Bad weather has made practicing difficult, and a 23-4 rout of Wittenberg last Wednesday did not provide the Irish with much competition. The only good action came on Saturday in an exhibition game against the Michigan Lacrosse Club. Notre Dame lost, 12-11, but the competition was very talented and included many college graduates.

The tough competition at Michigan could be very helpful when Denison visits. The game, which begins at 3:30 p.m., is crucial for the Irish if they hope to make a run at Ohio Wesleyan's MLA title.

Once again, James Patterson was a standout in the jumping competition. A nominee for the Athlete of the Meet award, the top-flight contender won the long jump (23-8 and three-quarter inches) and placed second in the triple jump.

"He had a decent jump considering the weather conditions," Piane said.

In the steeple chase, Irish senior Ed Juba splashed his way to a first-place finish with a 9:09.00 clocking. Dan Shannon turned in an impressive 47.5-second 400-meter time, good enough for second place. Assistant Coach Ed Kelly labeled his performance as "outstanding."

Other Irish trackmen who turned in noteworthy outings include Phil Gilmore (second in the 100-meters), Mitch Van Eyken (second in the 200-meters), Jim Tyler (second in the 1,500-meters), Andy Dillon (second in the 5,000-meters), Tom Warth (second in the 10,000-meters), and the 4x100 relay team of Gilmore, Shannon, Van Eyken, and Patterson, which took second with a time of 42.2 seconds.

"The kids did a good job. No doubt about it. We went out there and just competed," Piane remarked. "But we can be a lot better. We are still far away from what we should be doing."

sion I team), 8-5, which also shows that they have a good defense. They're always a well-coached team, so we'll have our work cut out for us."

The closest that the two teams have come to a common opponent is William & Mary. The Irish dropped a 16-6 game at William & Mary early in the season. Denison has not played William & Mary, but it did beat Washington & Lee, which crushed William & Mary by an identical 16-6 score.

O'Leary can only hope that playing on the home field will help his team's performance like it did in the home opener against Wooster. In that game, Notre Dame jumped out to a big 5-0 lead after the first quarter, and Wooster never got closer than two the rest of the way. O'Leary had directed his team to be very aggressive and push the ball down the field, a strategy which he again will use today.

"We're just going to try to be real aggressive again and try to control the ball," O'Leary says. "We've been getting more offense from our middies recently and they've been doing a good job creating scoring situations. We're going to try to get them to control the tempo of the game."

O'Leary is concerned that his team has not had enough good

After five days of vacation, the 64 teams still remaining in Bookstore XIII did battle yesterday to see which teams would continue on to the fifth round of the tournament.

The 32 games of yesterday's fourth round, which were played with referees for the first time in Bookstore history, went smoothly, and there were several exciting matchups.

One of the best games of the afternoon was the 6:15 p.m. contest between Over the Limit and Foo-Foo the Snoo on Stepan 2. Foo-Foo the Snoo jumped out to an early four-point lead, but could not hold on as Over the Limit went up by as much as six points during the game. The game was close toward the end, but Over the Limit was able to escape with the victory, 21-19.

Chris Brown led the winners with 6-for-8 shooting, while teammate Marty Roddy hit 6-of-12 and grabbed 13 rebounds. Over the Limit shot 21-for-43 as a team, while Foo-Foo the Snoo was close behind at 19-for-45.

In another close game yesterday, John 3:16 overcame the Vacuum Effect, 21-19. John Hussey was the high scorer for John 3:16, with six points on 17 shots. Hussey also had 19 rebounds for the winners in that one.

Of course, not all of the teams playing yesterday had such close games as Over the Limit and John 3:16. Windy City Five had an easy afternoon on Bookstore 10, as The Poison Ivy Award Winners were not able to provide much competition. Windy City Five rolled to a 21-5 victory on the perfect shooting of John Stein (5-for-5), Mark Brooks (5-for-5), and Jim Baron (4-for-4). The team shot a total of 21-for-28, while holding The Poison Ivy Award Winners to just five points on their 28 shots.

White Vote was an easy winner over Nasty, Nasty at 6:15 p.m. on Stepan 6. Cecil Rucker hit seven of his 12 shots to lead the winners, who shot a combined 21-of-35 to eliminate Nasty, Nasty, which shot a poor 6-of-27.

Following that game, Rucker took some dunking lessons from Greg Bell, who upstaged the ex-varsity hoops player as several fascinated fans looked on.

Other blowouts yesterday came from this year's versions of Bookstore XII's top two teams, Macri's Deli and Tequila White Lightning IV. Macri's Deli was a 21-10 winner over Dyspareunia (aka Fopdi), as Joe Sweeney made seven of nine attempts. Meanwhile Tequila White Lightning IV downed in the Crowd by the same score on 5-for-9 shooting by Brian Enright and 5-for-12 from Steve Beuerlein.

The Comeback Award for yesterday goes to Ed Smierciak and Four Other Guys That Are Better Than John Paxson, who destroyed Five Guys Named Moe with 21-for-33 shooting to the losers' 11-for-33. Last Tuesday, Ed Smierciak and his four teammates were able to hit just 21-of-103 in their 21-15 victory over CRAMM!!.

Bob Michels made 7-of-8 yesterday and Ken Schuermann added 7-of-9, as the team regained some credibility and advanced to the fifth round.

The upset of the day occurred at 6:15 p.m. on Bookstore 9 when Rousseau's Noble Savages eliminated the seeded Nutmeggers VIII, 21-16. Tom Arndorfer hit six of his 10 shots from the court and one of his two free throws to help Rousseau's Noble Savages to the victory, while teammate Brian Behmer added six more points and eight rebounds to the cause.

A team called Virtual Unknowns is quickly making a name for itself in Bookstore XIII. The team has not allowed an opponent to score more than 14 points in a game, and yesterday Geritol Express was no exception. Virtual Unknowns defeated the Express, 21-14, to advance to the final 32. Mike Zaske shot 10-for-18 for the winners.

One surprising team yesterday was Stark Naked and the Protru-

Lacrosse team faces big foe

After the Notre Dame lacrosse team lost a tough 12-5 decision to defending conference champion Ohio Wesleyan on April 7, the chances for an Irish Midwest Lacrosse Association championship seemed very slim.

The MLA title is still pretty much a long shot for Rich O'Leary's 6-3 squad, but a win over conference opponent Denison this afternoon on Cartier Field would improve Notre Dame's chances immensely.

Since the Ohio Wesleyan loss, the Irish have improved their record to 5-1 in the conference, putting them one game behind co-leaders Denison and Wesleyan, who have yet to play each other this year. A Notre Dame win over Denison and a Denison win over Wesleyan would leave a three-way tie for first place.

Before the Irish start looking at all the possibilities, though, they must get past perennial Midwest power Denison, a nationally-ranked Division III team that defeated Notre Dame two years ago in the MLA championship game. The visitors enter the game with an 8-4 record after starting the season off slowly against tough Eastern competition.

"They (Denison) started out with a lot of new people, but they're improving every week," explains O'Leary. "At this point in the season, I think they're right up to the level where they were a couple of years ago."

"They are a very balanced club who are able to get some scoring from their midfield. They just beat Washington & Lee (an eastern Divi-

Hello again, everybody!

Recently, this campus, as well as the nation has been overcome by a disease which is quite contagious (and this has nothing to do with alcohol). It can strike at any time, but usually occurs in small groups who have gathered together for a common cause, and the attacks usually occur during the evening hours. Once a recipient of the disease, the victims usually become paralyzed in a circle around an artifact of this plague.

The disease is known as trivialus pursuitus, and it has taken this column as its latest victim (although there are some who would say this column has been a trivial pursuit all year long). Be that as it may, my crack research staff has searched hither and yon to come up with some of the best in Notre Dame sports trivia on which you can test your prowess. Some of these you will find easy, but altogether, this little test will be good preparation for your worst final exam. The answers will appear below each set of questions, but don't look at them until you have gone through the whole set. Consider yourself better than average if you get more than 40 percent.

Career Highs ... 1. What Irish basketball player played in the most games during his Irish career? 2. Who is the all-time leading scorer in Irish field hockey history? (Hint: The record was set this year) 3. What sport had the longest winning streak in Notre Dame history (122 straight wins)? 4. Who is Notre Dame's all-time leading rusher? 5. What was the only year that an Irish basketball team advanced to the final four? 4. What Irish player caught the most passes in bowl games? 5. The year was 1959. "Mack the Knife" was the number-one song in the country (the pep band still thinks it is), the White Sox won the pennant, and Notre Dame won their only national championship of the 1950's. What was the sport?

Answers — 1. Mark McMahon 2. Chris Evert Lloyd 3. Jake Kline 4. Pam Fischette 5. Because they would have been the "Pick of the Week" last week.

Pick of the Week ... First of all, an apology to the men's tennis team, which was slated to be last week's selection in this section. The team turned in a fine third place showing in last weekend's Midwestern City Conference tournament, and they deserve some acknowledgement.

However, this week's honor (?) goes to Rich O' Leary's Irish lacrosse team, as they prepare to take on Midwest Lacrosse Association foe Denison at 3:30 this afternoon on Cartier Field. After today's contest, the Irish will get ready for this weekend when Ohio State pays a visit at 1:30 p.m. The Irish are enjoying a fine season with a record of 6-3, and the team would certainly appreciate your support at this week's games.
