Ariel Sharon, right, leaves Federal Court in New York Wednesday night with an unidentified security guard. A federal jury decided yesterday that Time magazine did not libel the former Israeli Defense Minister, but said several Time employees were careless in organizing the story.

Federal jury finds Time magazine did not libel Ariel Sharon in article

Associated Press

NEW YORK — A federal jury decided yesterday that Time magazine did not libel former Israeli Defense Minister Ariel Sharon when it linked him to a massacre of Palestinians, but it said some Time employees were careless in putting together the story.

The six-person jury decided that Time did not show "actual malice" in publishing a defamatory paragraph, which it earlier found to be both defamatory and false. For "actual malice," it would have had to be proven Time published the paragraph knowing it was false or with "reckless disregard" of whether it was true or false.

Both sides claimed victory. "A lawsuit is very much like a war," said Time attorney Thomas Barr. "Who wins the battle is not particularly important. Who wins the war is terribly important. The war is over and we won."

"We came in order to prove that Time magazine lied and we managed to prove that they lied," said Sharon of his $50 million lawsuit.

Sharon claimed a Feb. 21, 1983, Time cover story libeled him in reporting he "discussed" revenge for the assassination of Lebanon's president-elect, Bashir Gemayel — who headed the Phalangists — one day before the Christian militiamen massacred hundreds of Palestinians at two refugee camps in Israeli-occupied West Beirut.

After announcing the verdict, the jury foreman, Richard Peter Zug, read a statement in which the jurors said certain Time employees, especially Jerusalem correspondent David Halevy, acted "negligently and carelessly in reporting and verifying the information which ultimately found its way" into the disputed paragraph.

The jurors were taken from the courtroom shortly after the verdict and were not immediately available for comment.

Halevy, 43, a native Israeli who testified at the trial, was not present.

Yesterday's verdict was crucial because although the jury, which had been deliberating since Jan. 14, had found for Sharon on the two earlier points, he also had to show malice and damage to his reputation to prove libel.

If the jury had found "actual malice," a mini-trial would have been held to determine if Sharon's reputation was injured by the article and how much in damages he should be paid.

"We're most pleased with the verdict," said Ray Cave, Time's editor-in-chief. "I'm not totally happy with the jury's earlier findings on defamation and on falsity because with all due respect to the jury . . . I believe that they were wrong about defamation and the falsity."

"We believe that our story was substantially true, but the important thing is that Mr. Sharon was not able to defeat us in an American court for his own purposes," he said. "The important thing is that Time won this case."

In a written statement, the magazine said, "Time feels strongly that the case should never have reached an American courtroom. It was brought by a foreign politician attempting to recoup his political fortunes."

Student government election process discussed at meeting

By MARK S. PANKOWSKI
News Staff

The procedure for the upcoming student government elections was discussed by Maher Mouasher, Ombudsman election officer, at last night's sparsely attended Judicial Council meeting.

Coordinator Tim McDowell announced the possibility of an upcoming meeting being closed to all.

Though only 12 of the 24 commissioners were present, Mouasher told the council each dorm's commissioner would be responsible for manning the ballot boxes during the Feb. 12 election will be to elect the student government president, vice-president, and senate. The March 5 election will elect class officers and an off-campus commissioner.

Stressing an election free of mistakes and fraud, Mouasher discussed ways of preventing such infractions as ballot-box stuffing and campaigning by the candidates on election day.

According to Mauasher, such methods for preventing fraud would include the use of student ID's, procedure sheets, computer listing of students, and at least two people watching the ballot boxes at all times. Ombudsman will also have spot checks with "people walking around posing as potential voters who do not have their ID's."

Voter fraud has not been a problem in recent elections but Mouasher doesn't want to take any chances.

"We want to be sure that we have no objections from anyone," said Mouasher. "We want (this election) to be as airtight as possible."

Tim McDowell, presiding over the first Judicial Council meeting of the spring semester, told the council members a future meeting might be closed to the public due to the sensitivity of the issues to be discussed.

The proposed ban to the public, which will include reporters from The Observer if enacted, is to ensure that council members will be able to discuss issues freely.

"I'm not criticizing The Observer," said McDowell. "I want all the council members to be able to discuss the key issues intelligently and openly without having to worry about their statements being taken the wrong way."

McDowell is not sure whether or not a future Judicial Council meeting will have to be closed.

"I haven't made a definite decision about whether to close it or not," he said. "A reporter may be able to stay and report it, but we would have to look over what the reporter had written to make sure nothing is written or taken out of context."

World Hunger Coalition continues Wednesday Fast in second semester

By EILEEN HOFFMANN
News Staff

When was the last time you thought about hunger, other than when you slept through dinner?

The World Hunger Coalition wants students to consider world hunger issues, and as the new semester starts, it is once again beginning its efforts to alert students to these issues.

According to senior Mark Storen, head of the World Hunger Coalition at Notre Dame, each student will receive a personal letter with information about the fast. In addition, a sign-up sheet will be posted in each dorm.

Off-campus residents will be able to sign up for the fast in the Center for Social Concerns.

For every lunch abstained from by students, one dollar will be donated by the dining hall toward the World Hunger Coalition. The funds collected will go to projects in foreign areas such as India, Africa and South America. Last year, $19,000 was raised and even more is expected this year, said Storen.

Other activities for this semester include a retreat in Michigan, a Wednesday reflection group during lunch and work once a month at St. Augustine's Soup Kitchen.

An effort is being made this semester to begin a network of world hunger groups among different universities throughout the country. A brochure containing information about the coalition's activities will be circulated to different schools in the United States.

Recruiting will be done on campus for CROP, a church work service organization. On April 15, a 10-kilometer run will be sponsored at Notre Dame to benefit CROP. Profit from the run will be distributed among different relief organizations as well as among South Bend groups.

At Saint Mary's, the group also will be sponsoring a Wednesday and a Lenten fast, according to senior Colleen Flynn, head of the Saint Mary's World Hunger Coalition. Money from these events will be distributed among such groups as Bread for the World and Oxfam.

Information theft named as motive for break-in

By BOB MUSSELMAN
Staff Reporter

A weekend intruder in the Student Government offices apparently "was looking for some kind of information," according to Student Body President Rob Bertino.

Bertino, however, does "not want to speculate" about the kind of information which was stolen or the motive for its theft. He did say no materials appear to be missing, further indicating information theft as the break-in's goal.

Student Body Vice President Cathy David noticed Monday that someone had tampered with papers left locked in her office over the weekend.

"Some stuff was misplaced," she said, adding that the materials consisted of "things not meant to be seen by everyone."

Also Monday, secretary Margaret Linhart found several files in her locked drawer in disarray, notably the Student Senate file and the file about David.

Linhart said the materials in the files were not sensitive or confidential. They merely contained records of projects and other information she would give to anyone who asked for it.

"Nothing I can say is missing," she said.

Bertino said there was no indication of intrusion in his office. Security Director Glenn Terry said his department received "a report of somebody being in [the Student Government offices]," but "there doesn't seem to be anything taken."

He said there are no leads or suspects in the case, but did mention the absence of evidence of forced entry indicates the work of an insider.

Both Bertino and David said many "legitimate" people have keys to the door and drawers which were opened.

President Reagan and his 6-year old grandson "really had a ball" building a snowman on the White House lawn over the weekend, Michael Reagan says. Michael was a guest in the White House for Reagan's inaugural celebrations, along with his wife Colleen, daughter Ashley, 20 months, and Cameron. Michael, who had complained of not being invited to the White House, was pleased at how well things went between his father and his son, Cameron, the New York Daily News reported yesterday. "Dad called me in my room and asked if he could take Cameron into the garden. They spent about half an hour building the snowman," Michael said. "They really had a ball."

Bowling for Domers

Many years ago, there was an all-campus event which may have rivaled the current Bookstore Basketball Tournament in popularity, at least when taking the smaller size of the University into account.

In 1938, Scholastic, then a campus newsmagazine, sponsored a bowling tournament on campus, in which 275 people participated. It was not held at Beacon Bowl, or some other location far from the campus, but rather near the original site of the Bookstore Tournament: in the basement of Walsh Hall.

The lanes are gone now, part of the laundry room, mail room, and other rooms. But the former location can still be seen on the eastern side of the basement, below the main stairwell, where the floor is raised several inches.

According to Professor Thomas Schlereth of the American Studies department, who has written a walking history of Notre Dame, two lanes were built there in 1909. No one seems to have any idea when they were taken out of use and partitioned, but all agree they were gone by 1955.

The end of Walsh Rec Lanes was not the permanent end of bowling on the Notre Dame campus. According to the Scholastic of Oct. 8, 1954, the Hammes Shopping Center, which would open in the "Badin Bog" in the fall of 1955, would include a 10-lane alley in the basement. The lanes included such modern features as automatic pin setters, which, according to Brother Frank Gorch, cost $10,000 a year to rent.

In this period, bowling was very popular on campus, if the war stories of alumni are to be believed. Bowling leagues were in action almost every night; many priests on campus, including Father Joe Walter and Father Jerry Knoll enjoyed the activity in their own league, according to Cavanaugh Rector Father Matthew Miceli, who has been around the campus as long as anyone.

A Notre Dame team participated in an inter-collegiate bowling league from 1938 until at least 1961, when ND edged Loyola for the Midwest Inter-collegiate Bowling League championship.

Interest in the sport declined during the sixties, and the final demise of the Hammes Lanes received little if any notice in campus publications. John Moorman, director of maintenance, says they had been dismantled by the time he arrived on campus in 1969; Walter's best guess is that they were taken down in 1967.

Miceli remembers talking about the issue with University President Father Theodore Hesburgh recently. He says Hesburgh named heavy losses due to lack of use by the students as the main reason for the Lanes' decommissioning. The area where they were, under the main section of the bookstore, is used for storage and shipping.

These lanes will never be restored, although if student interest were there, it may be possible that a bowling alley could be included in a future student center. A key here is the level of student interest, and how long it would be sustained. The same argument would apply for any other facility built for the student use on campus. The University will not - indeed, could hardly be expected to - keep facilities open in the face of student apathy.

Tom Mowle

Assistant News Editor

It seems possible that a major renovation of LaFortune could occur within the next few years, but we know the faculty waited 20 years for their building. Nevertheless, this is a good time to suggest student desires. Mike Royko notwithstanding, bowling may not be the most popular pastime on campus. But whatever suggestions are offered, if students do not support the facilities when they are built, they will be shut down.

The administration's reluctance to build facilities may be tied to the fate of the bowling alley. Hesburgh was here through their entire existence; according to Miceli at least, he still remembers the losses they incurred through disuse. The administration may be convinced to try experimenting with students' wants again, but if similar results occur, they will not be willing to do it a third time. When the current and future student leaders give their ideas to the administration, they must be careful that their ideas are popular with the students.

EPA penalizes waste

Associated Press

CHICAGO - The Environmental Protection Agency announced yesterday it is seeking the largest toxic waste penalty in its history, $6.8 million, against Chemical Waste Management Inc. of suburban Oak Brook, Ill.

The agency filed a civil administrative complaint with EPA's regional hearing clerk yesterday, alleging the toxic waste-handler violated federal regulations governing the "use, recordkeeping and marking of PCBs between 1980 and 1983" in storing the material.

Company officials could not be reached immediately for comment. The penalty is the largest ever sought by the federal government under the Toxic Substances Control Act, said EPA spokeswoman Virginia Donohua.

Saint Mary's is awarded large grant

By MARY FRAN GISCH
News Staff

The National Endowment for the Humanities has awarded Saint Mary's College a $375,000 challenge grant which will be used for faculty development in the humanities. The grant will fund the College's first chair, for Professor Bruno Schlesinger, the chairman of the Humanistic Studies Department.

"Because of its uniqueness, the Humanistic Studies Program helped obtain the grant for Saint Mary's," said Anne Reed, assistant vice president for college relations.

Schlesinger developed the Humanistic Studies Program in 1956. Previously, he taught history and originally wanted to start the program within the history department.

The Christian Culture Program emphasizes the unity of culture through an interdisciplinary approach. The undergraduate program is based on ideas of the late English scholar Christopher Dawson.

"The program is strong now, but it has been stronger in previous years as well," said Schlesinger. "Originally I was the only full-time professor in the department and now we have two others. Gail Mandell and John Shinnars are definite assets to the program."

Reed said the endowment is an honor for the College. Saint Mary's was one of 46 institutions to receive the award. The NEH based its choices on the institution's ability to plan and administer programs efficiently and to show financial stability, according to Reed.

"Each dollar the endowment awards Saint Mary's must be matched by three non-federal dollars," said Reed.

Schlesinger points out the money will be used for all the humanities at Saint Mary's including English, philosophy and modern languages, as well as the Humanistic Studies department. "I want to make that distinction clear that the award is for all the humanities, not just the Humanistic Studies Department," said Schlesinger.

Discrimination charged against managers

Associated Press

SOUTH BEND, Ind. — The city Human Rights Commission will pursue legal action against apartment owners and managers who practice racial discrimination in renting, a commission official said yesterday.

"We know where the discrimination exists," commission Chairman Edward Levy said. "We have the names and you can believe we're going back."

His comments followed the release of a commission report that said at least eight of 18 area apartment complexes practice racial discrimination in renting.

The report contains the conclusions of an eight-month study in which blacks and whites, working for the study, asked apartment managers and owners for rental information. The testers visited sites within a few hours of each other and gave similar information about themselves.

Some testers were given contradicting information about waiting lists and apartment availability in a manner that discriminated against blacks, the report said. The report did not identify the apartments visited during the study.

Levy said the commission will use the report to identify apartments which persist in discriminating against black renters for further testing and possible legal action.

"We have given everybody in the city of South Bend warning that the South Bend Human Rights commission exists," he said.

The report was written by Richard Lamanna, professor of sociology at the University of Notre Dame, and Timothy Kenny, a consultant to the Human Rights Commission.

"This is not a trivial problem," Lamanna said.

'A' league action

Interhall basketball races heat up

By FRANK HUEMMER
Sports Writer

As the frigid temperatures of South Bend begin to rise, the men's interhall basketball "A" league action is starting to heat up. The races in the three leagues are unfolding into tight battles in which the remaining games are certain to be packed with excitement as the teams struggle to reach the playoffs.

"The ACC division will go down to the wire and right now anything can happen," said Flanner captain Pete Vrdolyak.

His analysis appears to be correct, as the ACC league shows Flanner, Dillon, Off Campus and Stanford at 3-1, while Alumni is 2-2. Stanford gained a share of first place by knocking Off Campus from the ranks of the unbeaten, 62-36, while Dillon was victorious by forfeit over Carroll.

In further action, Flanner split its two games. It toppled Carroll (0-2) trounced Howard (0-4), 67-48, 4), 68-37, and then lost to Alumni, 48-46, as Henry Zeisel sank two pressure free throws with one second left to give Alumni the victory.

The ACC, however, is not the only tight race, as the Big Ten has three teams in contention. Dillon (3-1) knocked off Holy Cross (1-3), 50-40, and Grace remained unbeaten with a 72-56 triumph over Off Campus (2-2). Also Alumni (2-2) but the upset in the division occurred when Keenan edged Morrissey, 36-35. A tip-in by Jim Reed with 10 seconds left propelled Keenan to its first victory of the season over previously undefeated Morrissey.

"It's about time we finally won a close game," said Keenan captain Mychal Schulz, whose team has lost three games by a total of 12 points.

With Morrissey's first loss, Grace takes over the division lead at 4-0, followed by Dillon and Morrissey at 3-1.

Finally, in a showdown between the divisional leaders of the Pac Ten, Sorin squeaked by St. Ed's, 37-36, giving it sole possession of first place.

"It was a big victory for us, and it will not be the last time we see St. Ed's," noted Sorin captain Pat Collins.

In this game, which was close throughout, Steve Beuerlein's 14 points led Sorin while Brian Behmer's 11 points paced St. Ed's.

"It was real war out there," said St. Ed's Kevin Finger about the Sorin game.

With the loss, St. Ed's slipped to a second-place tie with Grace at 3-1. Grace remained in the playoff picture by defeating Stanford, 60-50, while Flanner (2-2) trounced Off Campus (0-4), 67-40.

It appears certain that the second half of the men's interhall "A" league basketball season should be filled with plenty of excitement as the three divisional races begin to take shape.

Long (2.4 ppg) also have contributed.

"We play Maryland, not just Branch and Bias," says Phelps. "I'm not concerned about two guys getting 40 points because I think it's going to come down to how well we do and how we play offensively."

"We've been concentrating on our offensive execution because that's where our letdown has been recently. We just have to score some points on the road in key situations."

If this is a typical Notre Dame-Maryland game, you can be sure that there will be quite a few "key situations."

IRISH ITEMS— There will be no television for tomorrow's game which begins at 1 p.m. . . . The Feb. 9 Syracuse game in the ACC has been changed from 1 p.m. to 3 p.m. for NBC Television.

Men

Maryland is not a two-man show, though. Keith Gatlin, a 6-5 sophomore, is developing into one of the better point guards in the country, while 6-5 senior guard Jeff Adkins has proven that he can put a lot of points on the board coming off the bench.

Inside, the Terps will be relying on three young players to help out Bias and Branch. Freshman Derrick Lewis has shown flashes of brilliance while scoring over six points and pulling down 6.6 rebounds per game. JuCo transfer Tom Jones (7.5 ppg) and Terry since the injury, Anderson has failed to break the 20-point barrier.

Women

Alongside Anderson in DePaul's starting backcourt is 5-0 freshman Andrea Morgan, who averages 5.7 points per game. The forwards are the only veterans in the starting lineup: 5-10 senior Mary Lou O'Brien (6.9 ppg.) and 5-10 junior Tracy Manuel (6.0 ppg.). The center is a 6-0 freshman Janice Streit, the team's second-leading scorer with a 12.2 points-per-game average.

"DePaul is a pressing team," says DiStanislao. "They're a team that wants to go up-tempo, a team that goes hard to the boards. But on the offensive end of it, if they're not getting fast-break baskets they're going to pull up and shoot from the perimeter."

The Irish haven't played a game since last Saturday's convincing 76-62 win at Detroit. In that game, Notre Dame's frontcourt players dominated the action, as Sandy Botham, Mary Beth Schueth, Trena Keyes and Carrie Bates combined for 59 points and 32 rebounds in the contest. Overall, the Irish out-rebounded Detroit, 41-34.

"What we're looking to do this weekend is improve on the consistency that we showed last weekend," says DiStanislao. "We won't play the same kind of game, at least defensively, as we did last weekend because we're playing different types of teams this weekend. We need to shoot a good percentage from the floor and we need to control the boards the way we did against Detroit."

IRISH ITEMS - Schueth's nine rebounds against Detroit brought her a career total to 723 as she attempts to become the Irish all-time leading career rebounder. Schueth needs 23 boards to pass Shari Matvey's current standard of 745, amassed between 1979-83. . . . The Irish will be back on the road at Butler Wednesday night for a 7:30 contest, before returning home to face Evansville in the ACC on Feb. 1.

Irish take to road to continue classic series with Terrapins

By MIKE SULLIVAN
Sports Editor

January 27, 1979 - With Maryland trailing No. 1 Notre Dame, 66-64, and the final seconds ticking down, Terp center Larry Gibson gets a pass under the basket and banks it in with one second left. Bruce Flowers is whistled for a pushing foul. Gibson sinks the foul shot and Maryland pulls off the upset, 67-66.

January 26, 1980 - Maryland erases a seven-point Notre Dame lead, finally taking a 63-62 lead with 15 seconds left when Albert King steals an inbound pass and scores on a layup. However, Irish guard Tracy Jackson takes the ensuing inbound pass, drives the length of the court and converts on another layup with four seconds remaining. Notre Dame wins, 64-63.

January 28, 1984 - In front of a national television audience, Notre Dame stays close to the fifth-ranked Terps with the help of a tough defense that holds Maryland star Adrian Branch to one basket. Then, with 18 seconds left and the score tied, Irish senior Tom Sluby drives the right side for a layup and is fouled in the process. He finishes off the three-point play and the Irish go on to win, 52-47.

The Maryland Terrapins and Notre Dame began playing each other in 1974. At the time both teams were among the best in the nation, so it appeared that the series had the potential to become one of college basketball's best rivalries. After 11 games, of which Notre Dame has won six, it is obvious that the Terp-Irish rivalry has been everything anyone could have expected.

Three of the last four games in the series have been decided by one point, while each of the last six has been decided by five points or less. It does not take a genius to figure out that tomorrow's game between the 9-4 Irish and 14-5 Terps has a good chance of becoming the latest in the series of thrillers.

As usual, both teams enter the game with a lot to gain from a win. Charles "Lefty" Driesell's Terps have flirted with the Top 20 all year and need a win over the Irish to keep them within breathing distance of the list. More importantly, however, Maryland needs to pile up as many wins as possible outside of the brutal Atlantic Coast Conference, because ACC wins are always tough to pick up.

Notre Dame has more to gain from a win over the Terps as it tries to prove that it can beat one of the best teams in the nation on the road. Cole Field House is not an easy place for visitors to play, so it will take a solid effort by the Irish to come out of Maryland with their 10th win.

"Maryland is probably as good, if not better, than they were last year," says Digger Phelps about his hosts. "Last year they won the ACC and I think this is one of Lefty's best teams as far as personnel who complement each other."

Driesell lost two key players from last year's squad, which finished 24-8, losing to Illinois, 72-70, in the second round of the NCAA Tournament. Center Ben Coleman and forward Herman Veal both graduated, and their loss has been felt in the middle as the Terps have occasionally had trouble on the boards.

However, the one-two scoring punch of forward Len Bias and guard Adrian Branch has made Maryland fans forget about the losses. Bias, a 6-8 junior, and Branch, a 6-8 senior, have contributed 19.4 and 19.5 points per game, respectively. They are the only players scoring in double figures on a team that averages 74 points per game.

Senior forward Adrian Branch, who averages 19.5 points per game, will lead the Maryland Terrapins against Notre Dame tomorrow. Mike Sullivan previews the matchup in his story at left.

Women go to Chicago for North Star contests

By LARRY BURKE
Sports Writer

CHICAGO - The Notre Dame women's basketball team ends a six-day layoff tonight, as the Irish hit the Windy City for two North Star Conference games over the weekend.

Tonight at 7:30 CST, Mary DiStanislao's squad faces the Loyola Lady Ramblers, and on Sunday afternoon at 3:00 CST, the Irish take on the Lady Blue Demons of DePaul.

"These are two very important games for us," says DiStanislao. "It's very tough for a visiting team to play at either of these schools. If we can come away with two wins, then we'll be in very good shape as far as the conference is concerned."

Winning both games will be no easy task, however. The Lady trol the boards, as well as have good shot selection on the other end. I think we have to be very aware that they will take advantage of the transition game if you let them, they'll run the ball down the floor and they fill lanes very well."

Joining Mimnaugh in Loyola's starting backcourt is 5-8 junior guard Kathy Leyden, the team's leading scorer with a 15.7 points-per-game average. The frontcourt is small but balanced, with a 5-10 senior Kathy Myers (10.3 points per game) and 6-0 junior Jackie Hustzi (12.8 ppg.) at the forwards, flanking 6-0 junior center Maureen McNerney (11.8 ppg.).

Center Sue Busiel, a 6-0 junior averaging 11.6 points per game, has recovered from an ankle sprain and will be available for tonight's game.

"Offensively, I think we can take advantage of our height and try to push the ball inside," says DiStanislao. "And we might just try a little transition ourselves."

Loyola beat the Irish twice last year, and DiStanislao believes that the Lady Ramblers are a threat to repeat as conference champs in 1984-85.

"I think that even though Detroit and we have gained a little momentum, Loyola is still the team to beat in the conference champs in 1984-85."

"I think that even though Detroit and we have gained a little momentum, Loyola is still the team to beat in the conference," notes the Irish coach. "They have the bulk of their team back and they're playing with the kind of confidence that a successful team has."

First year DePaul coach Jim Izard lost six letterwinners from last year's 12-16 squad, but has still managed to upgrade the Lady Blue Demons' program. Izard's team currently is 10-3 overall, and, like Loyola, beat Xavier and lost to Dayton in its two conference games.

Izard has juggled his lineup for much of the season, and he has relied primarily on his guards for scoring. Sally Anderson, a 5-5 sophomore, is averaging 19.9 points per game, but has been hampered recently by an ankle injury suffered in a game against Cornell on Jan. 5. In five games Ramblers, defending North Star champs, are 8-3 this season, and 1-1 in the conference, with a 78-65 victory over Xavier and a 66-56 loss to Dayton. Loyola has a high-powered offensive attack that averages 73 points per game, and Marty Haskin's squad features five players with double-figure scoring averages. The key to the Lady Ramblers offense, however, is 5-2 senior point guard Faith Mimnaugh, who averages 12.5 assists per game.

"When you talk about Loyola you're talking about an experienced team, with a point guard who leads the nation in assists, so what you've got to do defensively is work on taking away passing lanes," explains DiStanislao. "For us to beat Loyola we're going to have to con-

Fencers hope to keep their winning ways at 9-team meet

By KEVIN HERBERT
Sports Writer

Today and tomorrow the Notre Dame fencing teams will try to continue their winning ways when they compete in a nine-team meet in Columbus, Ohio.

Fencing coach Mike DeCicco said he is confident going into the meet.

"We are an excellent team right now. I would be very surprised if any of the teams we are facing, excluding Ohio State, gives us any fits."

The men's team is currently 6-0 and highly ranked on the national level. DeCicco attributes the team's success to its outstanding balance.

"The secret to our success is our tremendous balance. None of the teams that we are facing in the meet, except Ohio State, possess the overall team balance to beat us."

Ohio State has a very good foil team and a more-than-respectable epee squad. The Buckeyes also have one of the best fencers in the nation. Sunil Sabharwal is an all-American foil who placed sixth in the NCCAs last year.

Sabharwal, however, will have to go against another of the nation's best foilers. Notre Dame sophomore Charles Higgs-Coulthard currently is 13-1 and one of the hottest fencers in the country. This matchup certainly should prove to be one of the best of the meet.

Notre Dame will open the meet this afternoon at 4 p.m. when it takes on Cornell. The Irish then square off against Michigan-Dearborn at 6 p.m. Saturday morning Notre Dame will take on Ohio State, then Miami (Ohio) and Oberlin College.

The Notre Dame women's fencing team also will be participating in the nine-school meet. The women bring a 5-2 record into Columbus, but they will be fencing without their freshman sensation, Molly Sullivan.

Sullivan will be participating in a national tournament at San Francisco University. In the tourney she is ranked 12th in a field of 65 of the best women fencers in the country.

Naturally, the team's strength is weakened by the absence of Sullivan. DeCicco, however, said he still feels that Notre Dame has a good chance of success.

"Without Molly we are going to have a tough time beating some of these teams. Still, it can be done, but our fencers will have to fence to their full potential."

The Notre Dame men's and women's fencing teams will face some tough competition over the next few days in the nine-team meet in Columbus. The 6-0 men's team, at full strength, should have an easier time than the women's team minus Sullivan, but both squads will face ample challenges from their competition.

SMC holds tourney

By KELLY PORTOLESE
Sports Writer

The Saint Mary's basketball team will host its third annual Roundball Classic beginning this afternoon when an array of eight NAIA and NCAA Division III teams arrive at the Angela Athletic Facility for two days of play.

"It should be an evenly matched group of teams," said Saint Mary's head coach Marvin Wood. "All the teams will be looking to improve their records, so it should bring out the best in everyone."

Action begins at 2:30 p.m. today when Grace College of Warsaw, Ind., meets up with DePaul University of Greencastle, Ind. Immediately following at 4:30 p.m., Purdue-Calumet, one of the strongest teams in the tourney, will be pitted against George Williams College of Downers Grove, Ill. Chicago State is slated for a 6:30 p.m. contest against Manchester College, which handed the Belles a 64-54 loss earlier this season. Saint Mary's ten will face Albion College of Albion, Mich., at 8:30 p.m. in the nightcap.

Saturday's round of play will begin with consolation games at 9:30 and 11:30 a.m., with the championship game in the consolation bracket to be played at 5:30 p.m.

The winners' bracket will play Saturday at 1 and 3 p.m. The survivors of these games will then collide for the championship at 7:45 p.m.

In last year's tourney, which featured only four teams, Saint Mary's was eliminated in the first round.

This year, with a full week of practice under their belts, the Belles are looking to make an impressive showing in this weekend's tourney and improve on their 2-9 record.
