Faculty insurance revised by senate

By BOB MUSSELMAN
Staff Reporter

Progress has been made in the Faculty Senate's bid to influence faculty health care coverage, according to former senate Chairman Associate Professor Mario Borelli and current Vice Chairman Associate Professor Donald Barrett.

"We now have a three-choice health insurance plan," said Borelli.

The senate took notice of the issue at a meeting in September of 1983, when Borelli told the senate he had voiced "various concerns, both with economic and procedural matters" to University Provost Timothy O'Meara after reviewing the terms of a new group health insurance plan implemented that summer.

Under the previous program, faculty essentially paid nothing for insurance. The new plan required those covered to pay a deductible and a co-insurance fee (a certain percentage of the total) on certain medical services, but a premium was not charged.

The purpose of this change was to "get people more directly involved" with the payment of rising health care costs, according to G. Thomas Bull, director of personnel.

Having not been consulted and feeling that the new program intended to combat rising costs "was not the best solution," the faculty objected, according to Barrett.

The Faculty Affairs Committee, then headed by Barrett, conducted a one-year study in order to present the administration with "options that might be improvements." The group made 11 recommendations to the administration, recommendations Barrett said were both sensitive to the budgetary concerns of the University and to the health care needs of the faculty and staff involved.

In November of 1984, the administration implemented a new

Director of ethics office approves Meese appointment

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The government's chief ethics officer said yesterday that Attorney General-designate Edwin Meese III did not break ethics rules, and an assistant who had initially concluded there were violations said, "I probably misconstrued the facts."

Director David Martin of the Office of Government Ethics, appearing at Meese's confirmation hearing, told the Senate Judiciary Committee he was "totally satisfied that Meese was in compliance with conflict of interest laws."

Archibald Cox, the president of the lobbying group Common Cause and another witness at the hearing, called Martin's conclusions "incredible," "unbelievable" and "frightening."

Martin, an appointee of President Reagan, said, "I had no pressure from anyone regarding this matter," including presidential counselor Meese, his attorneys and White House counsel Fred Fielding.

But Cox, the first Watergate special prosecutor, said Martin was sending a "devastating message" to federal officials. Common Cause has been lobbying against Meese's appointment.

Cox cited Martin's conclusion that Meese did not violate ethics rules when he failed to disqualify himself from participating in a White House personnel meeting where McKean's nomination was initiated. Meese had testified he was guilty of no ethics violation because another White House official, Michael Deaver, brought up McKean's name.

"I find it unbelievable that anyone thinks it would matter who spoke first. I can't believe Mr. Martin intends to extend such a rule throughout the government of the United States. I find it frightening," Cox said.

Martin, testified under oath that Meese's participation in the appointment of John McKean to the Postal Service Board of Governors had not created "an appearance of impropriety that required corrective action."

But, Martin said, "I'm totally satisfied that Mr. Meese is in compliance with conflict-of-interest laws, except for an appearance problem."

He said the "corrective action" taken was to notify White House counsel Fred Fielding of the ethics office's problems with Meese's involvement in the McKean affair — but to take no further action such as declaring that a violation had occurred.

J. Gary Davis and Nancy Feathers, two staff attorneys who concluded in an internal agency memorandum that Meese may have violated the government's standard for acceptance of gifts, testified that they shared Martin's ultimate conclusion that there was no violation per se.

Martin also described as "normal procedure" his meeting with Meese's attorneys to discuss that internal, preliminary finding by Davis and Feathers.

Under questioning by Senate Judiciary Committee chairman Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., both Davis and Feathers said they had no quarrel with the way the Meese matter had been handled by their boss.

But Martin, who worked "as a functionary" in President Reagan's 1980 campaign, said he was "outraged" by news accounts maintaining that he had overturned the staff conclusions about Meese.

Davis said he concluded that Meese's conduct involving the McKean matter "required that something be done. . . I wanted Mr. Fielding to be aware of it . . . and that they would talk to Mr. Meese about this problem that we had. . . It ended there, in the executive branch."

Meese has acknowledged that McKean arranged two loans for him totaling $60,000, but said that it was an "arms-length transaction."

Students apathetic to government, according to Ombudsman survey

By CHRIS BEDNARSKI
Staff Reporter

According to a recent Ombudsman survey 74 percent of students polled could not name their student senate representative and 45 percent could not name the student body president.

"Student government is laughed at," said Javier Oliva, district five senator. "Many students don't take it seriously." Oliva said he believes this year's senate has done more than any recent senate. Oliva cited the student-run general store and t-shirt shop as examples.

However, students "just aren't paying attention," said Oliva.

In the first 17 meetings of the senate this year, all of which were open to the public, less than five students attended. District four senator Tom Aboud said, "People should take more interest."

Another reason cited for the lack of student knowledge about student government is the difficulty in getting the senators' newsletters into the hands of students. Paul Healy, district one senator, said, "If there are two people in a room only one will get them."

District two senator Pat Browne issued 18 newsletters. They were either never delivered to the mailboxes or thrown away, according to Browne.

Healy said many of the senate's activities are "too trivial, and not worth reading about." Bertino said, "People don't want to read Observer articles" concerning senate activity.

Bertino said he feels many students are just not interested in who represents them, and that "only at election time" do students care. "They lose interest after the election," Bertino said.

Aboud said students take interest "only at peak times" when their senator has done something newsworthy.

Aboud believes the results of the poll may have been different if taken at a different time and he would like to see a more comprehensive poll with more students involved.

Junior Jerry Murphy of Grace Hall feels there is apathy among the student body towards student government. He and freshman Paul Cottey, of Cavanaugh Hall, admit they don't take student government that Although the announcement of this year's commencement speaker is probably two months away and May 18th is even further, many seniors are picking up the topic of who will be the keynote speaker for the event that celebrates their four years of hard work here.

What if I, or some other plain old student, were to make the decision on whom to invite? What would we consider in making the choice?

Obviously, that is not the case, but the question still remains. How is this man (or woman, as the case may be) chosen?

I don't think information is distributed on what kind of profile Notre Dame wants in its speaker. The qualifications are probably very broad in scope, yet since University President Father Theodore Hesburgh is intimately involved in the choice, what are the criteria he uses?

So, in order to satisfy my curiosity, I spoke with Father Hesburgh personally.

I've always thought that my peculiar name was a detriment to meeting people, so I wasn't surprised when he asked me to repeat "Theron" after I identified myself.

Hesburgh was quite open in telling me what he looks for. "We want to get someone who is a household name. When Ronald Reagan came here, the news was carried across the nation," he explained. "We'd also like the person to have a point-of-view that is of interest to the students."

"The hardest part is finding someone with a Notre Dame connection.

Sometimes we find someone with one, and sometimes not."

So far, he's on the right track in my book. And Notre Dame has been very successful at attracting such people. Everyone remembers Reagan, then Canadian Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau and Chicago Archbishop Joseph Bernardin. They all were great selections.

Come to think of it, the person whom I'd like to have there the most is Father Hesburgh himself. In the first two of three formal occasions held on campus during a student's four years - freshman orientation and Junior Parents Weekend - this year's senior class has not seen Hesburgh fully participate in either.

Father John Van Wolwear celebrated Mass upon our arrival to Notre Dame. Father Hesburgh presided over the Mass during our junior-year oldldrums, but did not say the homily and was rushed out the doors of the ACC afterwards, presumably on his way to another important destination.

Sports Copy Editor

He assured me he would be at commencement, though, along with the chosen "great" speaker. Yes, fellow seniors, our commencement destiny has already been written.

After a disappointing, if not controversial, person made the address last year, I am getting pretty curious thinking about who will speak to the graduates.

I'm sorry the class of 1984 was the victim of the Loret Ruppe experiment. Evidently, Notre Dame was a late entry into the commencement speaker sweepstakes.

But if that result led to landing a more suitable person to take the speaker's platform this year, that's fine with me.

Too bad I didn't get in touch with Father Hesburgh a little sooner. I could have lent him a couple of household names - my great ideas on the perfect choice.

How about Joe Montana? Nearly everybody remembers the fine career he had playing football for the Fighting Irish. Those who don't surely heard Notre Dame mentioned along with Montana's name in the Super Bowl.

Or maybe rock star

Madonna, whose name is even similar to that of our University. I know a lot of people anxious to hear her views on the upcoming U.S. - Soviet nuclear arms talks.

Let's just say I'm glad not to be responsible for making the selection. I'll stick to bringing up the subject over lunch and worrying about making it to graduation day.

Survey alleges discrimination in local housing complexes

By MARC ANTONETTI
News Staff

South Bend's Human Rights Commission has said it will follow up on a report released last week stating eight of 18 area apartment complexes allegedly engage in some form of racial discrimination.

According to Micheal Bueno, housing specialist for the commission, the primary purpose of the report was "to let people know that there was somebody looking out."

Bueno also said that presently no legal action is planned against the eight un-named housing complexes, and that the survey was conducted for "educational purposes."

According to Bueno, the survey served to alert the public that ways to combat discrimination exist, as well as to notify potential discriminators that the commission is alert.

Bueno hopes the report will discourage any future discrimination.

Elizabeth Wajszczuck, of Notre Dame's office of off-campus housing, said she had not heard of any discrimination against minority students who wished to move off campus.

If a landlord engaged in discriminatory practices, information concerning the apartments would be removed from the office's listings of rooms available in the area, Wajszczuck said.

Liz Adams, an off-campus student advisor at Saint Mary's, said she had not heard of any discrimination against minority students who desired to move off campus.

In fact, according to Adams, a surplus of rooms has been created because of the large numbers of students moving off campus.

Saint Mary's provides similar housing information to students moving off campus.

Bueno said anyone, "even if they just suspect," they are being discriminated against should contact South Bend's Human Rights Commission. According to Bueno, the commission will investigate all complaints.

"Discriminating is against the law, and it is bad business."

Chernenko condemns 'Star Wars' program as an 'aggressive concept'

Associated Press

WASHINGTON - Soviet President Konstantin Chernenko, in a direct challenge to President Reagan, condemned the U.S. "Star Wars" program yesterday as an "aggressive concept" designed to achieve U.S. military superiority over the Soviet Union.

In an interview with Cable News Network, the Soviet leader said "to put it simply, the aim is to acquire a capability to deliver a nuclear strike counting on impunity."

Chernenko said the U.S.-Soviet negotiations set to resume on March 12 could solve the problems of nuclear weapons, but only if steps are taken to prevent the militarization of outer space.

Otherwise, Chernenko said in written replies to questions submitted by Stuart Loory, CNN's Moscow bureau chief, the Strategic Defense Initiative "would become a catalyst of an uncontrolled arms race in all directions."

Reagan has defended the program, known popularly as Star Wars, as a research venture designed to determine whether the United States could be shielded with futuristic technology from attacking missiles.

Future presidents, he said, would have to decide whether the goal was attainable and defenses should be deployed. Reagan agreed with visiting British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher last December that there would have to be negotiations on that point with the Soviets first.

But Chernenko, without referring to Reagan by name, challenged the U.S. leader's description of the program as well as Reagan's justification of concentrating on missile defense as humane and moral.

"Using the term 'defense' is juggling with words," Chernenko said. "In its substance this is an offensive, or to be more precise, aggressive concept. The aim is to try to disarm the other side and deprive it of a capability to retaliate in the event of nuclear aggressions against it."

He said the Soviets, if compelled, would do their utmost to protect the country's security as well as allies and friends. "But one should face the truth," Chernenko said. "The militarization of outer space would upset the Soviet-U.S. treaty on the limitation of anti-ballistic missile systems, which is of unlimited duration, as well as many other international agreements presently in force."

At the behest of the Soviets, the administration agreed to discuss the Star Wars program in the Geneva negotiations. But U.S. officials have emphasized it was not "a bargaining chip" for Soviet concessions in other areas.

The talks will deal also with Soviet radar and missile defenses, as well as long and medium-range offensive nuclear weapons on both sides.

Berkeley offers land and plumbing to area denizens of motor vehicles

Associated Press

BERKELEY, Calif. - Responding to complaints that up to 100 people have been living in cars, trucks, vans and buses along a street, the city has offered a plot of land, with plumbing, where the homeless can park in friendlier surroundings.

"We did it. . . . We got a lot and showers and stuff, and Berkeley did it pretty fast," said Harry Shorman, 31, an unemployed Berkeley native who helped work out the plan and will be among those taking advantage of it. "I think they did it because they want to be an example for the rest of the country."

One reason for the city's speed, said assistant city manager Bill Castellanos, was a desire to set it up in time to prevent an "Oklahoma-type land rush" by other homeless people. He said no one knows how many vehicles are lurking around the area just waiting to descend.

The city and the residents of "Rainbow Village" along a two-block stretch of semi-industrial Fifth Street also are trying to keep quiet about the location of the lot. Castellanos said the lot is about 18,000 square feet, fenced, and has portable toilets and showers.

Details - such as who pays how much for towing disabled vehicles to their new home, shower rentals and other costs - were worked out yesterday but some people were already moving in on Wednesday.

The campaign to move the denizens of "Rainbow Village" began when local residents and business people began complaining that the neighborhood had been taken over in the past two years by the unemployed, transients and others living along the street.

The newcomers have complained that they can't afford to pay local rents and have nowhere to go. A sticker on one battered bus read "Bound for the Promised Land."

"I hate to see them out in the cold, but contrarily, with all the publicity, we're getting a lot of new vehicles coming in," said Marion Hammond, a neighborhood resident since World War II and freelance photographer. Temperatures often get down into the low 40s on winter nights.

Castellanos said the city was forced to do something, not only to help the homeless but to solve health and safety problems created by people living in close quarters without showers, toilets or running water.

"We think we're going to be able to provide a humane answer to a very complex question," said Castellanos. "The main thing is to get them off the streets and into some location."

seriously. Said Cotter, "Student government doesn't do anything and the administration doesn't want them to do anything."

Sophomores John Wallace and Chris Lyon of Saint Ed's said they had not received any newsletters even though their district senator, Paul Healy, lives on the floor above them. Grace Hall freshman Chris Simms of senate district four said he "hasn't seen one (a newsletter) all year."

The senators agree something should be done about the apparent communications gap between students and student government. Healy spoke to the Hall Presidents' Council which decided to give newsletters to section leaders to pass out to students individually. Healy said, "Each senator will be visiting the respective dorms of their district through hall council meetings."

Bertino said the current student government has "done all we can," to reach the students. He hopes those elected next year "can come up with a better solution."

"The administration is aware we are serious, we know what we're talking about," he said. "Most people are satisfied," Barrett commented.

Democrat officials meet to discuss party leadership and imagemaking

Associated Press

WASHINGTON - Democratic Party officials opened three days of meetings Wednesday and quickly moved toward a test of strength in the four-way race for the party chairmanship.

While most attention was centered on that contest, members of the Democratic National Committee also were ready to debate whether Walter Mondale's landslide defeat last November was a demand from voters that the party update its image.

Members of the party rules committee approved proposals that would dilute the power of special interest caucuses and establish the makeup of a commission to review the rules governing the presidential nominating process.

Paul Kirk Jr., the party treasurer and a former aide to Sen. Edward Kennedy of Massachusetts, was regarded as the front-runner in the race to succeed Charles Manatt as chairman. The other contenders were Nancy Pelosi, former chairman of the California Democratic Party; former Gov. Terry Sanford of North Carolina, and Robert J. Keefe, a political consultant.

The test of strength in the chairmanship race occurred yesterday on the question of whether 25 at-large members of the national committee must stand for re-election before the new chairman is elected today.

Kirk's rivals were united in backing a proposal to require a new election for the at-large members. The present group, whose terms expired yesterday, is composed primarily of Kirk supporters.

Kirk has the backing of organized labor. While the AFL-CIO announced it was not taking a position in the race, labor officials have been pushing hard for Kirk.

Pelosi has strong support in her home state as well as from Gov. Mario Cuomo of New York.

Sanford's backing was centered among southern party leaders with additional support from the Ohio and Pennsylvania chairmen.

Nuns demand apology from Reagan

Associated Press

HOLYOKE, Mass. - The leaders of 48 congregations of Roman Catholic nuns in New England have demanded a "prompt" public apology from outgoing Treasury Secretary Donald Regan for remarks he made about sisters who run hospitals.

Regan was quoted in Newsweek as saying, "My heart cannot bleed for many hospitals hurt by limits on Medicare payments, even those run by Roman Catholic nuns. Their hearts are big, but their heads aren't screwed on tight. Most of them need new management."

Sister Kathleen Keating, chairwoman of the New England Region of the Leadership Conference of Women Religious, said the sisters "voted unanimously to express their indignation to Mr. Regan."

In a letter to Regan, who is to become President Reagan's new chief of staff, they said, "We are appalled at your unfounded attack on the integrity and professional competency of American women religious... One need only to look at the history of the United States to document the unparalleled contribution women religious have made to the health care field."

Sister Keating, president of the Sisters of St. Joseph in Springfield, a teaching order, said the letter to Regan was approved by the Sisters of Providence, who run hospitals in Holyoke and Worcester; the Sisters of Mercy, another nursing order with hospitals in Rhode Island, Connecticut, Vermont, Maine and New Hampshire; as well as the Sisters of St. Joseph in Boston, Sisters of Notre Dame in Connecticut and Boston and Dominican Sisters in Boston.

Student Affairs Committee considers male/female ratio

By LORI ZAPF
News Staff

A proposal to increase the percentage of women admitted to Notre Dame has recently been presented to the Student Affairs Committee of the Board of Trustees.

The proposal, sponsored by Lyons Hall President Joan Cahill, suggested the number of men admitted be decreased and the number of women admitted increased.

Cahill presented the proposal to the Student Affairs Committee prior to Christmas break.

Recently, Cahill and Cathy David, student body vice president, met with Terry Keating, president of the National Alumni Board, to promote the equal access admissions policy.

The option of increasing the total number of students admitted each year is opposed by Cahill and David because it would push total enrollment over the set limit of 10,000.

Long-range plans for the University include the addition of one more men's dorm and several more women's dorms.

The original presentation made by Cahill will eventually be sent to each trustee. The issue will be presented at the February Board meeting by Keating.

Board member Philip Hawley has shown interest in the topic and will be influential in the board's decisions concerning a modified admissions policy, said Cahill.

Administration stops Middle East arms sales

Associated Press

WASHINGTON - The Reagan administration is suspending all new arms sales to the Middle East while it reviews the defense needs of Israel and moderate Arab nations, White House spokesman Larry Speakes said yesterday.

Speakes said the review is expected to be completed in four to six weeks, and that it will not interfere with shipments of spare parts and weapons already destined for the region.

He declined to call the action a suspension of sales, emphasizing that arms shipments would not "come to a screeching halt."

However, he said the administration would not send any new requests for arms sales to Congress while the review is under way.

"I think we will have to wait until the study is complete before we proceed with any sales request to Congress," Speakes said.

The spokesman said the review will not include a re-examination of President Reagan's 1982 blueprint for peace in the Middle East.

The action came as Reagan continued to press his case for the MX nuclear missile system and a large military budget with members of the House Armed Services Committee.

And one day earlier, Reagan promised visiting Israeli Defense

Minister Yitzhak Rabin the president would ask Congress to approve $1.8 billion in military aid for the coming fiscal year. That would be an increase of $400 million over the 1985 grant level.

Although Speakes allowed that "there could be changes" because of the review, he said the administration did not anticipate any "fundamental changes in our policy or commitments to the region."

He described it as a "comprehensive look at security-related issues in the area... a refined overview."

Speakes said the study was aimed at providing Congress with a comprehensive "justification and rationale" for administration proposals in the Middle East.

He denied that there was any connection between the temporary halt in arms sales and the scheduled Feb. 11 visit of Saudi Arabia's King Fahd. But he added that the study will not preclude discussions of arms sales to Saudi Arabia or Egypt.

Garn set for historical trip through space

Associated Press

SPACE CENTER, Houston - Sen. Jake Garn said Wednesday he will be a "medical guinea pig," seeking possible causes of space sickness, when he flies on the space shuttle next month as the first orbiting legislator.

Garn, a 52-year-old Utah Republican, was added to the flight crew two weeks ago as a congressional observer. He is chairman of a subcommittee that monitors NASA's expenses.

When his selection was announced, he said he would like to contribute in other ways to the mission. He said Wednesday the NASA medical team was delighted and developed a series of medical tests he will perform on himself in an effort to shed some light on the space sickness that has affected many shuttle astronauts early in flight.

Garn and the other six crew members discussed the mission at a news conference and in a daylong series of interviews with reporters. They are scheduled to be launched Feb. 20 for a four-day trip aboard Challenger.

The other crew members are commander Karol Bobko, pilot Donald Williams, mission specialists Dr. Rhea Seddon, David Griggs and Jeffrey Hoffman, and payload specialist Patrick Baudry, a French astronaut.

Garn said that on launching he will wear a battery of sensors to measure various body responses to lift-off forces and the sudden entry into weightless space.

"One will measure if the gut or bowel shuts down," the senator said. "Several shuttle astronauts have vomited, but few of them have suffered nausea or perspiration. So we're checking to see if the vomiting might be caused by a bowel shut-down."

He said he also will wear devices to measure blood pressure, body fluid transfer and brain waves.

Do not come back until you can appreciate

Dear Editor:

The letter by one Sister Maurita concerning the students' "reprehensible" behavior at the Notre Dame - DePaul basketball game provided me with a much-needed laugh. In fact, it was more of an outburst.

Obviously, Sister Maurita does not understand the meaning of the term "home-court advantage." The purpose of home games is to allow students to support their team, which invariably involves taunting the opposition.

I am quite certain few, if any, Notre Dame students hold personal vendettas against the members of the DePaul basketball team. Rather, our booing and other "rude" actions were done in the spirit of competition.

I can just envision the Notre Dame student body issuing a formal apology to the DePaul team, as Sister Maurita so ridiculously suggests. We would become the laughing stock of the country.

My advice to Sister Maurita is to avoid watching college basketball in the future, or at least until she can appreciate what it is all about.

Social justice means less than eternal welfare

Dear Editor:

After reading Ann Pettifer's vituperative column attacking Mother Theresa and the church hierarchy, I am led to wonder what induced her to convert to Catholicism. Pettifer seems more comfortable with the teachings of Karl Marx and Gloria Steinem than with those of Jesus.

When she berates Mother Theresa for exhorting the survivors of Bhopal to forgive those responsible for the disaster, Pettifer is taking an understandable stance, but not a Christian stance. How does she explain Christ's repeated injunctions to turn the other cheek, to forgive one's neighbor seventy times seven times, and to forgive those who trespass against us if we wish our own sins to be forgiven? Even if these words of Christ's were not meant to be taken literally, we are still faced with his words on the cross: "Father, forgive them, they do not know what they are doing." Perhaps the reference to God as Father is enough to convince Ms. Pettifer that the whole line is a figment of a male chauvinist's imagination.

Pettifer may be right when she states that a new breed of non-woman is on the move. Sadly, this new breed seems to be moving away from the heart of Christianity in its haste to become socially active. Social justice is important, but not as important as our eternal welfare.

Congratulations for a job well done

Dear Editor:

Do you know what I hate? I hate it when people get mad at students for booing opposing teams. Just when you think you are helping your own team, someone has to go and tell you that you are "reprehensible." Boy, I hate it when that happens.

Unlike Sister Maurita, who found the behavior of the students nothing short of praiseworthy I believe that the uproar which lasted from the pre-game warm-ups to the final buzzer not only helped to raise the level of excitement in the ACC, but also the level of play.

In response to the charge that the students' behavior was reprehensible because we booed, I say, lighten up Sister. I am positive that none of the Notre Dame students had anything personal against any of the DePaul players. It simply comes down to the fact that the students, as fans, have a responsibility to do anything, within limits, that might cause an opposing player to be nervous, to miss a shot or to throw an errant pass. In short, to inform other teams that it will be no easy task to win a basketball game in the ACC.

Once again, I think the student body should be congratulated for a job well done at the DePaul game. They were loud, they were rowdy and they stayed within the limits of acceptable fan behavior. Keep it up, everybody! And GO IRISH!

Allow equal access in higher education

The education of students should be based solely on talent, disregarding a family's financial status. If a society deviates from this basic premise of equally accessible education, then it has taken the fatal steps toward the formation of a culture in which the wealthy will be educated while the poor and middle-classes

save the whales

will be forced to live off of unfulfilled dreams.

Two proposals presented by the Reagan administration to Congress could have significant effects.

The first would put a cap of $4,000 a year on Federal financial aid from all sources - grants and loans - while the second would deny eligibility for Guaranteed Student Loans of $2,500 to any applicant from a family with an income more than $30,000, regardless of need or specific family circumstances. The Reagan administration is apparently prepared to grant education only to those who can afford it, not necessarily to those who deserve it.

The first proposal, placing a cap on financial aid from all sources, would prohibit needy students from being worthily educated. Students who rely upon federal assistance to fund their education will have one hell of a time paying for four years at Harvard, Princeton, M.I.T., or any other institution in which one year of tuition, room and board can cost more than $13,000, without such aid.

The second proposal exhibits the ridiculous nature of these recommendations. By not permitting special circumstances to concern student loan approval the Reagan administration is disregarding that some families have many children or others have extraordinary medical bills and that these families rely heavily upon the $2,500 loan to cover the cost of higher education.

Many suggest that private foundations as well as the college or university concerned make up the difference created by the lack of Federal financial aid. On the surface this seems fair, however, it is obvious the void created will certainly be far greater than any private concern could underwrite.

Quite simply, it is our government's responsibility to aid in the education of its citizens; if it does not, then education will indeed be limited to the privileged few.

Yet, the proposals transcend the superficiality of financial matters. They seem to outline the absurd ideologies which the Reagan administration religiously submits to; that is, a willingness to deprive one of an education while providing another with a gun or bomb. Our society must realize the vital importance of education and the inevitable results which will follow from the deprivation of higher education.

If the current proposals are ratified, our colleges and universities will assume a stifling one-dimensional nature. Absent from the college campus will be the democratic array, the ethnic diversity, which complement both the atmosphere and learning experience. Those who add so much to college life will be denied an education and will have little or no opportunity for self-improvement. Meanwhile, homogeneity will strike the college campus. The wealthy will continue to indulge themselves in education while prohibiting the less fortunate, though in many cases more deserving, of the same advantage.

I think Barry McCarty, director of financial aid at Lafayette College, best stated the case. In a recent New York Times editorial McCarty said, "If enacted, these proposals will inevitably produce a greater stratification in higher education, one based not on ability to benefit from a particular institution but simply on the strength of the family check-book."

1985 Keenan Revue shows traditional creativity, variety, talent

by Amy Stephan
features staff writer

Dear Col. Jackson T. Beauregarde,
We had planned to run a giant Far Side cartoon on this page today, but because you seemed so anxious to see a review of your revue in today's paper, here it is.

So get your black marker ready....
You waited in line five hours to get them.

Relax, your Keenan Revue tickets are good for more than a free beer at Senior Bar. This year's show is fresh and creative.

Humor and talent blend nicely to make this year's revue much more than three-and-a-half hours of rehashed jokes. That's right, the show lasts three-and-a-half hours, but don't worry. The acts are so well-paced that it's unlikely you'll even notice the length.

As usual, the humor spares no one. The old targets are there of course - dining halls, social life, and Breen-Phillips and Saint Mary's women receive plenty of abuse.

But only a few acts rely too heavily on the standard "fat chicks, no booze" jokes. Most skits either focus on new, untried subjects or take a fresh stab at an old target.
This year, General Foods, the Dancin' Irish, The Observer, and even the search for revue tickets are subject to jokes.

"The Making of an R.A." offers an inside look at R.A. orientation. In "Townie," Keenan men look off campus for new material.

"Under the Golden Dome" features a frustrated Domer, an Arts and Letters major and the Queen of the South Quad, as they seek help from Father Hesburgh. "The Exorcist" and "Dome-Aid" give us two fresh looks at the alcohol policy.
"Keenan Kindergarten" and "Jeopardy 3 East" aim plenty of better-than-average jokes at all sorts of targets. The audience does more than applaud during this year's revue. Several acts demand audience participation, and last night's crowd was more than willing to help out. Don't be surprised if you're anxious to try out some new dance steps after seeing the show.

Some old favorites are back this year, but missing are the Keenan Tumblers and Theater-K. Those dancing, singing Holy Cross priests and sisters return, asking for "More Money." And for those who enjoyed "Rinderella" last year, this year
there's "Beeping Sleauty."

There is no lack of musical talent in the 1985 revue. Several pianists and guitarists perform original compositions, and some - like Doug Pishkur - are outstanding. A barbershop quartet adds a new twist to a rendition of "When I'm Old and Grey."

Some of the more creative ideas showed up in the short, between-the-act skits. "Humanoes," "A Dramatic Reading," "A Welcome Friend," and other short acts were good for a laugh and kept the show moving.

The revue is weakest when it relies entirely on old jokes and old approaches. Skits such as "Because I'm a SMC" and "Michiana Jones and the Temple of Dome" are comprised of the standard fat-Domer, SMC-chick jokes and would better be left out.

Technical problems hurt some acts. Sometimes the microphones refused to pick up the lyrics, while in between some skits they picked up exclamations that weren't meant for the audience. "Yo' Mama" probably has some good moments, but the microphones were so bad last night that most of the lyrics were lost.

There were also more than a few rough edges. "Revolution according to Luke" contains some interesting ideas, but these are lost in the general disorganization of the act. Many scene changes were somewhat less than letter-perfect last night, and the timing of lighting and music was off at times.

But rough edges are to be expected in a production that only has a week in rehearsal, and in the Keenan Revue, enthusiasm more than compensates for any lack of professionalism.

The standing ovation at the end of last night's show demonstrated the success of this year's revue.
Variety, talent and enthusiasm combine to create a highly entertaining show.

Regardless of how you got your tickets - even if you waited in line for hours, served dinner to your favorite Keenanite, or asked a total stranger to an SYR - it was probably worth it. The 1985 Keenan Revue is one show you won't want to miss.

Letters to a Lonely God

You know that Greenwich Village isn't the permissive, Bohemian place it used to be when non-smokers make scenes in public if you light up a cigarette. Four times over Christmas as I was eating in classless joints, I was asked by diners at distant tables to stop smoking. God wouldn't have given us coffee to linger over if He hadn't intended for us to enjoy them with cigarettes. Four meals were ruined for me by obnoxious strangers, whose air space I wasn't breathing on, who didn't like the idea of my using tobacco in the world they wanted to keep to themselves. Greenwich Village's greatest attraction has always been its tolerance. Now the blue noses are clamoring for smokeless public rooms. I've never met a blue nose I thought was fair.

I may be the only priest in America who is fighting for smoker's rights. It's the smugness of non-smokers that drives me crazy, their self-righteousness that drives me up the wall. I've spent three quarters of my life learning to be open minded. I've taken the time to learn respect for lifestyles and minority members whose preferences are wild. Women who wear eye makeup, for example, remind me of the cosmeticians who wax the faces of the newly embalmed. Nobody who goes with you to dinner should have a face belonging on the freshly dead. Men who chew gum should be arrested as a public nuisance. Who wants to watch a wad of Wrigley's shift across the mouth from one bulging cheek to another? Later they'll lose the gum in a place you're bound to step on. Nothing ruins your day quicker than a gummy shoe. I've walked through neighborhoods in the Village where there's been a role reversal; men wear mascara, and girls chew gum. Instead of staying angry, I remind myself that people, despite their crummy habits, deserve my love and respect, and it's none of my business if they're marching to the beat of a different drummer. "Live and let live," they say. Not many folk have been saying it lately to us smokers.

I wouldn't mind giving up smoking. A cigarette as a friend isn't entirely trustworthy. The first million cigarettes can leave you coughing. The second million can leave you dead. Last summer in the village, I attended a session of Smokers Anonymous at the Episcopal Church. People introduced themselves with their case histories: "My name is Bert. I'm an alcoholic, and I'm gay. You name it, and I've done it, including hard drugs. I've been sober for a year, and clean of tobacco for a month."

Or, "Hello. I'm Cynthia. I'm a bi-sexual alcoholic just starting the program. I've been sober for a week, and I'm trying to kick cigarettes." Or, "I'm Richie. I'm an alcoholic and straight. Tonight I celebrate my tenth birthday on the program, booze-free and butt-free."

There was a round of applause for Richie's sobriety, and he was presented with a cake with ten candles to blow out. In the meantime, I was getting nervous. I wasn't there to present myself as a case history. Before I had to tell them of my pleasant involvement with Pall Malls, they all took a coffee break so they could eat Richie's cake. Half of them lit up cigarettes over the second cup of coffee. I could see that Smokers Anonymous as the overflow of an Alcoholics Anonymous meeting wasn't the place where I could find help, and so I left.

I would work harder to give up smoking, if the non-smokers would leave the smokers alone, because smoking isn't so wonderful. The blue noses have begun their crusade, and I'd rather fight them than switch. What gets my dander up is that the non-smokers want to leave me no choice. I'm turned off in the way some of the women clamoring to be ordained are turned off. They're not passionate to become clergy, but they're as mad as hornets at the Pope for telling them he will not let them be clergy. I'll probably die of ruined lungs, the victim of a habit dear to my heart only because of the principle of the thing.

Now, according to Time magazine, the R. J. Reynolds Company is coming out with the last word in smoking chic - designer cigarettes. In March, Reynolds will begin test-marketing Ritz, a brand that will feature the Yves Saint Laurent logo on the package. The country needs designer cigarettes like a hole in the head. As a smoker, I'll be cheering for a company giving those of us favoring nicotine a status symbol.

"Why do you do it?" a reporter asked the mountain climbers who were attempting the ascent of Mt. Everest. "Because it's there," they replied. They knew the danger, and they were willing to take the risk. "Why do you smoke cigarettes?" I couldn't answer. "Because they're there." To tell the truth, I had to go and get them. I do it for the same reasons people do anything foolish, like driving a sports car 200 miles per hour on an icy road: for the poetry of the thing, without which life would be lonelier and duller. Every person needs a controlling vice, to keep the other vices dormant. I prefer a vice that the Church has never condemned as illegal, immoral or fattening. The blue noses will keep me smoking until the poetry has burned down to nothing, as worthless to joy as white ash left in the tray. The alternative is to quit, and join the Puritans. God doesn't have room in His wide, blue heaven for the blue noses. I'd rather smoke here, than burn later.

Art

•EXHIBIT. The traveling exhibit "Autochromes: Color Photography Comes of Age" which is organized by the Library of Congress, continues this weekend at the Snite Museum. The exhibition presents some of the earliest color photographic images made, dating from a time when most people think color photography did not exist. In a nostalgic, almost impressionistic fashion, they capture a world now lost.

Gallery hours at the Snite are 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Tuesday thru Friday, 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday thru Sunday, and 4 p.m. to 8 p.m. Thursday evenings.

The Saint Mary's Art Department Faculty Exhibition continues this weekend at the Moreau Galleries at Saint Mary's. Gallery hours are Monday to Friday from 9:30 to noon and 1 to 3 p.m., and Sunday from 1 to 3 p.m.

COMING ATTRACTIONS FEATURING THIS WEEKEND

Mass

•MASS. The celebrants for Mass at Sacred Heart Church this weekend will be:
Father Robert Kennedy at 5:15 p.m. (Saturday night vigil).
Father William Beauchamp at 9 a.m.
Father John Gerber at 10:30.
Father David Tyson at 12:15.

Nazz

•COMPETITION. It's a contest! You can get front row action for free (if you get there early enough of course). All of Notre Dame's hidden talents will be on stage tonight as a panel of judges determine which talents should be recognized and which should remain hidden. The action starts tonight at 7 in the Nazz (basement of LaFortune). The winners will return tomorrow night for a "Winner's Night" performance.

Movies

•LOCAL HERO. Bill Forsyth, director of Chariots of Fire, directed this 1983 film starring Burt Lancaster. The story is described as a comic fairy tale that merrily mixes astronomy and a mermaid with two oil tycoons, a village that wants to get rich, and an old man that doesn't. Showings are at 7:30 and 9:30 tonight in the Annenburg Auditorium. Tickets are $2.50.

•ROCKY. It's not the Keenan Revue, but it is an Academy Award winner. Sylvester Stallone, Talia Shire, and Burgess Merideth star in this story of a two-bit boxer who gets a second chance in life by being offered an impossible shot at heavyweight title. Showings are tonight and tomorrow night at 7, 9:15, and 11:30 in the Engineering Auditorium. Tickets are $1.50.

In Interhall hockey

Grace, Alumni win with defense

By DENNIS CORRIGAN
Sports Writer

Defense was the key word in the third week of interhall hockey action. Strong blue-line play and responsible goaltending profited Alumni and Grace Halls in both of their victories.

In its first outing of the season, Alumni used tough defensive tactics to down previously unbeaten Zahm 5-1. By bringing its wings back into the defensive zone to assist the defensemen, Alumni limited Zahm to just six shots on the night. After a tight 2-1 first period, Alumni broke the game open with three second-period goals to ease the pressure on netminder Paul Zaremba. Each of Alumni's three lines contributed to in the victory as John Keltenmark, Brian Aquado, Mark Nemec, Bill Nemec, and Tom Krus each recorded single goals.

Charlie Hackett notched Zahm's lone tally. Hackett has scored in each of Zahm's three games, including two game-winners.

Alumni captain Ed Domansky said his team's long layoff didn't affect its play.

"Everyone was really excited to finally be able to play. We had scrimmaged the night before the Zahm game and lost," Domansky said. "It didn't really bother us, though. We got together and realized that now it was for keeps. We wanted to go out and play someone for real."

Goaltending was the key in Grace's 3-0 victory over Flanner. Grace came out flat after tying a tough Off-Campus team last Thursday, but goalie Pat Chura thwarted Flanner's bid to catch Grace on the rebound. Grace got balanced scoring from Lance Williams, Jim Rataczek, and Kevin Stone in the winning effort.

In other action, Jay Lewis of the combined Cavanaugh-Howard squad scored in the final minutes of the third period to tie Morrissey 2-2. Morrissey had held the lead on goals by team captain Ted Gradel and Tim O'Brien.

standing Irish sprinters are sophomore Robert Nobles and junior Van Percy.

In the field events the pressure will be on senior James Patterson to win the long jump and triple jump as he did last year. High-jumper Lloyd Constable is also expected to continue his winning ways.

Saturday will also mark the return of sophomore Jeff Van Wie, who is coming back from a severe car accident. He won the 800-yard run last year and will compete in the 1000 tomorrow.

"Although the game was a tie, it was really fun to play because both teams were so evenly matched. It was really competitive throughout," Gradel said of the game.

In the only other game scheduled for earlier in the week, Fisher forfeited to Pangborn due to lack of players. With the forfeit, Fisher's record fell to 0-4. With the two points, Pangborn gained a share of the Corrigan Division lead with Stanford and Zahm. Alumni is two points behind the leaders. Alumni and Stanford faced each other late last night. In another late-nighter, Off-Campus tangled with Morrissey.

SMC-ND rivalry set in swim meet

By KATHLEEN NICHOLSON
Sports Writer

The annual Saint Mary's-Notre Dame swim meet should be another fine display of women's swimming from both campuses. Traditionally the rivalry between the two schools has not been a close one, however, with the Irish women getting the best of the Saint Mary's team.

The Belles will be entering the meet on Saturday after a post-Christmas loss to Calvin College on January 23rd. The team was scheduled to face Albion College in Michigan on January 25th but severe weather conditions hampered their trip and the Belles continued to prepare for the Irish.

The women from both teams were able to train together when Notre Dame and Saint Mary's traveled to San Juan, Puerto Rico for a 10-day, intensive training session. The Belles were able to get four hours of water time each day due to the optimum weather conditions and Coach Dan Flynn thinks this will help them during the rest of the season.

"The trip went very well," Flynn said. "We had excellent training facilities and I think the girls are now in good physical shape."

The culmination of the San Juan trip for both teams was a competition held at the Pan American Games Natatorium which featured more than 20 teams from all over the United States who had trained in Puerto Rico over the holiday.

Although the Belles are missing their top two swimmers from last year, Gail Casey and Rosie Whalen, senior captain Ellen Byrne will try to lead her teammates to a high-scoring competition. Byrne will be seen in the short-distance freestyle while teammate junior Joyce Murtagh will try to better her performance in the middle-distance freestyle events. Sophomore Kathleen Kennedy, hampered by an elbow injury, will attempt to swim her specialty events in butterfly. Freshman divers Ann

Chargers to avenge losses

Hockey team travels to Huntsville

By ED DOMANSKY
Sports Writer

HUNTSVILLE, Ala. - Both the Notre Dame and Alabama-Huntsville hockey teams have had a chance to play at each other's arena. And each time the home team has emerged with a sweep.

Last February, the Irish ventured to the Von Braun Civic Center undefeated in Central States Collegiate Hockey League play and hoping to win the league title.

The Chargers were also undefeated and had the same thoughts on their minds and came away with 6-5 and 6-4 victories before raucous crowds in excess of 6,000 each night.

Hoping to avenge those two defeats, Notre Dame welcomed Huntsville to the ACC for two contests on Nov. 30 and Dec. 1 of this season. The Irish more than made up for the defeats in the South by taking convincing 10-4 and 8-4 wins.

Notre Dame is once again back here in Dixie, but this time there is no league title on the line. The Irish (6-14) are out to prove that they are a better team than their current record shows. They would also like to find a way to end the jinx which has left them winless in 10 tries away from home this season.

"I think we'll see a much better club than the one that was at Notre Dame at the end of November," said Irish head coach Lefty Smith. "We will have a very difficult time down here."

The contests between the Chargers (14-6) and the Irish have regularly emerged as hard-hitting, penalty-filled affairs, but this time each coach is emphasizing the importance of staying out of the penalty box.

"We're looking forward to a good series," said Huntsville head coach Doug Ross. "Notre Dame is a good team. They really took it to us in South Bend in some penalty-filled games, so this time I'm telling our kids that if we get a solid effort, take advantage of our chances and stay out of the penalty box, we'll do fine."

"Officiating is a very difficult thing to predict in this area," said Smith. "It can have a very big effect on the game. But the way to avoid problems is to keep sticks down and not get cheap."

In the series at Notre Dame, 57 penalties were called, 28 against the Irish.

But one aspect which Smith was pleased with despite all of the penalties was the fact that 10 of 18 Notre Dame goals were scored in specialty situations, either on the powerplay (four times), or while each team was shorthanded.

Huntsville is led by sophomore right wing Dave Wallenstein with 23 goals and 33 assists. Left wing Mike Finn is four points off the pace with 31 goals and 21 assists. Center Brian Kelly holds the third spot with 48 points and 17 goals.

Steve Moerner is the top Charger goalie with a 3.79 GAA in 11 games. Ross is counting on a strong performance from him this weekend.

"Steve was not at his peak the last time we played Notre Dame," said Ross. "This time a good performance from him could help us tremendously."

The Irish will go with junior Marc Guay tonight. Guay has looked sharp in his last two outings, including the 6-3 victory over Lake Forest Jan. 23 which stopped an eight-game losing skid for the Irish.

In the injury department, junior Left wing Dave Waldbillig will be out of action again with a separated shoulder suffered in the second-round loss to Lake Forest in the Forester Classic two weeks ago.

"Dave's loss will hurt," explained Tim Reilly. "He's a consistent player for us. But if we get a good effort from everyone, we will come out all right."

It is homecoming weekend, here, and once again crowds in excess of 6,000 are expected each night.

"They're trying to build a program and our beating them kind of set them back," offered Reilly. "They'll be out to prove to their fans that last year was for real. If we can beat them in front of big crowds, it will be even better for us."

Fencers have chance against NCAA Champ Wayne State

By MICHAEL J. CHMIEL
Sports Writer

After a three-week rest, the Irish fencing squads will get back into the swing of things tonight against perennial power Wayne State in Wayne, Mich.

Wayne State boasts the title of 1984 NCAA National Champions in men's fencing, and there is little doubt that the 19-1 Irish would like nothing more than to dethrone the champs this spring after the Irish finished third in last year's NCAA tourney.

Due to the harsh weather of a week ago, the Irish were unable to participate in a nine-team tournament at Ohio State. According to Irish Head Coach Mike DeCicco, the Irish might be slightly rusty due to their inactiveness in competitive events.

"Last weekend, we were stranded here when the snow fell," said DeCicco, "and we didn't get to fence any of the schools that we had planned to in preparation for Wayne State."

"We haven't had any competitive fencing since January 13. I had planned to have this meet last weekend to get us back on track," DeCicco continued. "If anything, last weekend's sit-out may make us a little stale, and I hate going up against a team like Wayne State with any excuses not to be at our best."

Last year the Irish men suffered their only loss in a 20-meet season in a dual meet to the eventual champs, 12-15. While the Irish did out-fence Wayne State in the Great Lakes Championships last season and took first in the process, they were outdone in the NCAA tourney, falling short by 15 points.

Overall, Notre Dame has a positive mark of 23-14 lifetime against its arch-rivals.

While the Taters lost some key fencers to graduation and transfer, they have entered the 1985 season with an equal or superior team to last year's squad.

"Wayne State might be as good as they were last year and maybe even a little better," said DeCicco.

Leading the defending champions is 1984 Epee Champion Ettore Bianchi. Joining Bianchi are freshmen Michele Giulietti and Guillermo Lande. This far into the season, the young Giulietti is undefeated at 15-0 and is leading a squad that is 36-9.

"They've got two kids to go along with Ettore Bianchi in epee that could make them a pretty nice epee team - a very competitive one in fact," said DeCicco.

According to DeCicco, if Wayne State has a soft spot it is in its sabre squad. In the sabre, Giovanni Girotto (a fourth place finisher in the 1984 NCAA finals) is joined also by two newcomers - Neil Kessler and James Klemic. Bela Kogler who finished fifth in the NCAA's last year, weakened the squad after he transferred during the summer.

In the foil, Wayne State is strong with returning French fencer Stephan Chauvel. Chauvel, who finished fourth in last year's NCAA foil finals, is joined by Peter Dinsdale and Avore Goldstein. Dinsdale was crowned as the Australian National Foil Champion in 1984.

"Their foil team is their best team overall right now, their epee team is right behind, and their sabre team is going to be good with Girotto," said DeCicco. "It's going to be a tough one, but we've got some fencers, too. What we have to do is get back into the meet-situation attitude again."

According to DeCicco, all of his fencers are healthy and prepared to fence. Junior foil captain Mike Van der Velden is back in relatively good form and strength after suffering from an early-season injury. Junior foilist Craig Funai (34-24 lifetime) is back from studying in Rome last year, and has surprised DeCicco of late after a 5-4 1985 start.

"Craig Funai is fencing up a storm and he may be our starter against Wayne State (in the foil) in place of Dave Reuter (5-7)," said DeCicco.

Other than Van der Velden (10-4) and Funai in the foil, the Irish will most likely fence 1984 foil champion Charles Higg-Coulthard. At 13-1, Higg-Coulthard is currently leading all Notre Dame fencers.

In the epee, senior captain Andy Quaroni (11-1), junior Christian Scherpe (9-2), and junior Mike Gostigian (8-1) will be the likely trio to start.

In the sabre, senior captain Mike Janis (9-1) and junior Don Johnson (9-3) will be two of the likely starters on what DeCicco calls "the best sabre squad in the country." Juniors John Edwards (6-3) and Tony Consoli (6-6) will vie for the third spot.

"Last year, their epee team with Ettore Bianchi beat our epee squad 7-2," said DeCicco. "I don't see that happening again, and if we could turn that result around and win that weapon, we could be as competitive as we were last year and beat Wayne State."

"My predicted store is about a 15-12 Notre Dame win. But it would mean that the sabre team is going to do a lion's share of the work because in the foil and epee, the bouts are going to be a little bit tougher to arrive at based on how well they've improved in their weapons - epee and foil."

Following the big matchup tonight, the Irish will travel to Angola, Ind., tomorrow where they will meet Tri-State, Cleveland State and Oklahoma City. According to DeCicco, the Irish should not have too tough of a time with the three teams despite an outstanding foil team for Oklahoma City.

"Their foil team is going to be strong, and that's going to be a challenge to Charles and Mike and Craig and Dave," said DeCicco. "How they handle that will indicate to me how good or bad they really are."

A scheduled meeting with Oral Roberts in the same "mini-tournament" was cancelled after the Oral Roberts fencing coach left that school at the end of its last semester.

The Notre Dame women's team will also be in action today and tomorrow alongside their male counterparts as they try to improve upon their 5-2 start.

Leading the way for the Irish will be freshman Molly Sullivan and an overall improving young cast of starters.

"The women have been coming on slowly but surely," said DeCicco. "I'm anxious to see them match up with the Wayne State girls. Wayne State has a strong foil team, and if we could beat a team like Wayne State, that will give us the credibility for the rest of our schedule."

Since the inception of the women's fencing squad, the Irish are a disappointing 1-13 against Wayne State. A victory tonight would give them a shot in the arm and the impetus for a strong stretch drive. Last year the Taters finished 11th in the NCAA tourney for women.

On Saturday, DeCicco sees no major problems for the women also. Against Tri-State, the Irish are 13-0, and against Cleveland State they are 6-0.

Pizza contest tonight

Now, besides the good basketball and free admission, there is another reason to attend the upcoming Notre Dame women's team's home games.

Domino's Pizza will sponsor a pizza-eating contest, which will take place at halftime of three women's games. Semifinals will be tonight at halftime of the game against Evansville which begins at 7 p.m., and on Saturday, Feb. 9 at 12 p.m. when the Irish face Xavier.

Finals of the contest will be held on Sunday, Feb. 17, when Notre Dame takes on Detroit at 2 p.m.

Domino's will be giving away painter's hats and cups during games, and a drawing will be held for a pizza coupon.

Teams of six will participate in the contest, with each team being split into three pairs. Each partner will feed his partner while at the same time eating from that partner. The first team which has all three pairs finish wins and advances to the championship.

Constable changes technique, sets all-time high jump record

By NICK SCHRANTZ
Sports Writer

Increased confidence and a consistent jumping technique have enabled Lloyd Constable to establish himself as the leading high jumper in Notre Dame history, and only the third Irish performer in 14 years to qualify for the NCAA Indoor Track and Field Championships.

The senior jumper achieved this feat last weekend by jumping seven feet, three and one-half inches in a dual meet against DePaul. Constable's leap set a new ACC and all-time Notre Dame record.

Qualifying for the NCAA's, the goal of Constable and most track performers, will help Constable the rest of the year.

"It takes most people most of the season to reach their goal, and so doing it early takes a load off my shoulders," Constable said. "I had technical problems until now, but now I'm more confident that I can go 7-3 and higher."

The DePaul meet continued an outstanding season for Constable. He cleared 6-10 to win the high jump at the Western Michigan Open on January 11. One week later he leapt 7-2 to capture the event in a home meet against Iowa. In the Iowa meet he cleared 6-8 and 6-10 to win the event, and then went on to jump 7-0 and 7-2, which was the previous ACC and Notre Dame record. At the DePaul meet, Constable also cleared 6-8 and 7-0, and just missed at 7-5.

Constable clearly ranks as the all-time Irish high jumper, both indoors and outdoors. He leapt 7-2 in 1982 in an outdoor meet, which is four inches better than the number two man on the all-time list. During indoor meets he has jumped 7-0 three times, 7-2 twice, and his record height - all of which far surpass the next best height of 6-10.

Constable entered Notre Dame with impressive credentials and had a fine freshman year. However, he slumped in his sophomore year and was academically ineligible for his junior year. The North Babylon, New York native gives several reasons for his comeback and success this season.

"I haven't had any really good years until this year. I was frustrated, and I knew I could do better," Constable explained. "This year I have more confidence and I feel more comfortable with my technique. Feeling good about myself really helps, and not letting things bother me helps my concentration. I'm calm and under control, so there's less pressure and I can just think about jumping."

Despite his fine high school career, Constable had to adapt to a new jumping technique when he entered Notre Dame. He credits the new technique for causing some of his problems earlier.

"I had an eight step approach when I got here, which was a bad way to jump," he said. "Coach Kelly (an Irish assistant coach) changed how I finished over the bar, the steps in my approach, and really my whole style of jumping. It took me three years to get used to it, but this season I feel comfortable with it."

Constable waits almost two minutes before he jumps, while the crowd waits quietly. The silence helps him concentrate and gives him confidence.

"When you have a lot of people watching you, you really want to do your best," he said. "It's a real confidence booster to see everyone in the stands waiting for you and wanting you to do well."

During this wait, Constable prepares himself for what he has to do to clear the height.

"I first think about what I did wrong the last jump," he explained. "I think about the last three steps of my approach, then exploding off the ground, and finally clearing the bar. I repeat this until I feel prepared to jump."

Notre Dame has not beaten the Bruins in the last seven games dating back to an 80-73 victory in Pauley during the '79-'80 season, meaning that no current Irish player has participated in a Notre Dame win over UCLA.

Sunday's game just might be the one to end the recent UCLA domination of Notre Dame. The struggling Irish need a big road win badly, and would dearly love to return from L.A. with that win. This game isn't likely to be as memorable as the 71-70 upset in 1974, but maybe, just maybe, it can be a starting point for future success as that game a little over 11 years ago was.

Constable began his track career in seventh grade, where he ran, long jumped, and threw the shot put. He switched to the high jump in eighth grade because he felt the other kids were too fast for him.

He jumped 6-6 during his sophomore year at North Babylon High School, which was four inches better than his previous personal best. He continued his improvement by leaping 6-10 in his junior year. He capped off his senior year and a successful high school career with a jump of seven feet, one-quarter inch to win the New York state championship.

Despite his fine high school career, Constable was not highly recruited. He played basketball during high school, which forced him to miss the indoor track season and only compete in the outdoor season in the spring. However, college recruiters usually start recruiting during the winter and he was passed up.

"Before Notre Dame, only C.W. Post and Syracuse asked me to visit," he said. "It was a freak thing because we had an outdoor meet moved indoors because of the snow, and I jumped 7-0 in flats. Someone from Long Island sent the article in the paper to Notre Dame, and then the coaches called me. I came out for a visit and decided to come here."

Constable will graduate this spring with a degree in communications, concentrating in film and video productions. The degree has not come easily for him, and even forced him to miss his junior year in track due to academic difficulties.

"I really struggled in school, and made a few mistakes in studying," he admitted. "But in the long run, I earned my degree and came out ahead. I feel I've matured here at Notre Dame."

After graduation Constable plans to return to New York and interview for a job. His high jumping career will likely end this year, unless he can find a sponsor to get him the necessary facilities, equipment, and coaching.

During grade school Constable watched the world class high jumpers like Dwight Stones, and felt that someday he could jump as high as them. He set a goal of one day jumping 7-6. With his continued improvement, consistent technique, and new found confidence Lloyd Constable should reach his goal and set Notre Dame high jumping standards higher than he already has.

The post-John Wooden years have been less than the greatest for the Los Angeles school. Since the retirement of the "Wizard of Westwood" in 1975, the Bruins have had four coaches in nine years, Walt Hazzard being the fifth in this his first year. The pressure to win at UCLA is unbelievable. Bruin fans have been spoiled by all the winning of the past, similar to the situation here at Notre Dame with football.

This pressure has had something of an impact on the UCLA program. It whittles away on coaches and it seems to scare off prospective recruits in some cases. Why should someone play under a magnifying glass at UCLA when he can play in an Wright is playing just phenomenal inside, and between Maloncon, Wright and Haley, they'll always have two of them in there, so you never get a break.

"But Niguel Miguel's the key to this team. When he turns on, I think they turn on in certain ways. He does a lot of different things for them."

This week's Pac-10 Conference Player of the Week, Miguel has been virtually unstoppable in UCLA's last three games, racking up 51 points and 11 assists.

Montel Hatcher is the other starting guard, but fellow sophomores Corey Gaines and Dave Immel also see a lot of playing time for the Bruins.

It's a little hard to make the assertion that a team's 17th game of the season can be a must-win game, but Notre Dame, at 11-5, could really use this one.

"We need a big road win," Phelps says. "We've got some chances coming up starting Sunday with UCLA and could really use this game. It would be a great win for us, and I'd just like to end this string of losses to them."

equally successful program elsewhere and not feel the same pressure to win? One California-bred high school star made the comment last year that it used to be an honor to be recruited by UCLA, and now it was anything but that.

Regardless of the present shaky state of UCLA Basketball, though, Notre Dame certainly cannot afford to take this game lightly. The Bruins may have started this season slowly in making the adjustment to the coaching of Hazzard but they have come on in recent weeks to play some of their best ball in a long time. The Irish have a little score to settle with their California rivals, also.

Freshman distance runner Dan Garrett (right) gets the inside lane in a five-way meet this past weekend. Garrett and his teammates look to repeat as champions of the Midwestern City Conference Meet in the North Dome of the ACC this Saturday. John Coyle previews the meet below.

Irish set to defend MCC Track title

By JOHN COYLE
Sports Writer

The action promises to be fast and furious under the North Dome of the A.C.C. Notre Dame, who will be defending the title it has won the past two years, hosts the Midwestern City Conference Track Championship tomorrow afternoon beginning at 1:30 p.m.

The Irish, however, will face some strong competition from Oral Roberts and Butler. The two teams have finished second and third, respectively, in this meet the past two years and both have several fine middle and long distance runners.

Leading the way for Oral Roberts will be Kim Berghal, a native of Finland, and Kenyan-born Joe Bungei. Scott Harper, who qualified for the NCAA championship, will also be tough.

The size of the Butler team lends credence to the old saying, "there's strength in numbers." The Bulldogs has over 25 members and is always a threat. Loyola also has two solid runners in Gary Donzelli and Steve Doran.

Despite the quality of the opposing runners, Irish head coach, Joe Piane is confident that his team will be successful again this year. "If they compete and do as well as they can, we should be victorious," says Piane.

The main reason for Piane's optimism is his talented sprinter contingent. Junior Mitch Van Eyken will be looking to repeat his winning performance of last year in the 300- and 440-yard dashes. Dan Shannon, a senior, will try to top his winning time of last year in the 600. Other out-

UCLA looks to extend streak over struggling Notre Dame

By JEFF BLUMB
Assistant Sports Editor

LOS ANGELES - If the Notre Dame basketball team should beat UCLA on Sunday in Pauley Pavilion, excuse the players for their unfamiliarity with the situation, for no Irish player has ever played on a team which has beaten the Bruins. Notre Dame is 0-7 in the last seven games with the L.A. school and will be looking to end UCLA's recent domination in front of a national television audience on NBC-TV beginning at 3 p.m. EST.

The Bruins struggled out of the gate this year under first-year head coach Walt Hazzard. They were blown out on the road early this season, first at DePaul and Memphis St. and later against St. John's in New York City. Since a 3-6 start, though, UCLA has rebounded to win six of its last seven games and now stands at 6-2 in the Pac 10 and 9-7 overall with a date at USC scheduled for tomorrow.

"This UCLA team is very good and very talented," says Irish coach Digger Phelps. "They have some fine athletes. Early in the season, it was just a case of sitting into a new situation."

"Now they're playing some excellent basketball. They've just won three big games over Washington, Stanford, and California, and are going to be in the thick of the Pac 10 race by the end of the season."

While this UCLA team may not resemble past UCLA teams in terms of the number of wins and losses, the resemblance to the past is clearly there. The aura of John Wooden remains with UCLA Basketball under the coaching of Hazzard, a former player of "The Wizard of Westwood."

"The system's pretty much as it used to be. I don't think Hazzard's changed it that much," Phelps says. "He's added just a few wrinkles but it's 90 percent Wooden."

"It's definitely the Wooden system. We'll see a zone press and then they'll drop back into a man-to-man. We won't see any zone defense at all. Offensively, it's the same offenses that were there during Wooden's last four or five years there."

About all that has changed is the personnel. The Bruins have some fine players left from last year's team that beat the Irish, 51-47, at the ACC. Sophomore forward Reggie Miller, perhaps better known as the younger brother of Cheryl Miller, star of the USC women's team, leads the UCLA team in scoring and assists.

The 6-7 Miller throws in 12.7 points a game and has dished out 27 assists to this point in this season. He had career highs in scoring and rebounding in the California game, pumping in 23 markers and pulling down 10 boards. He has been a hot shooter as of late, hitting at a 62-percent clip from the field over the last four games.

Seniors Brad Wright and Gary Maloncon make up the rest of the UCLA front line. The two, along with Jack Haley, a sophomore transfer from Golden West Junior College who is the first off the bench, give the Bruins an imposing inside game.

"Maloncon's having a very good year," says Phelps. "He hurt us last year, especially on the baseline."

Women try for home win against Evansville

By LARRY BURKE
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame women's basketball team will play its first home game in 18 days tonight, and the Irish hope to make it a happy homecoming as they take on North Star Conference rival Evansville at 7 p.m. in the ACC.

Tonight's game features the first of several promotional Domino's pizza-eating contests at halftime, but it is Mary DiStanislao's squad that could be in for a real feast. The Lady Aces are just 3-12 this season, and while they have shown some improvement of late, they will need an extraordinary effort to overcome an inspired Irish team that is coming off a 79-40 thrashing of Butler Wednesday night.

The Irish last played at home on Jan. 14, when they scored a convincing 70-49 win over Illinois-Chicago. Before that, Notre Dame's last home game was a 71-59 victory over Michigan State. The Irish are 4-1 at home this season, but only five of their 16 games, and just one of their last eight contests, have been played at the ACC.

The Lady Aces are coming off a 4-22 mark last season but figure to improve on that record this season. They have had their best success in North Star contests, where they are 2-1 so far. Evansville has beaten Xavier and Butler this season in NSC games, and flirted with a big upset before falling to Dayton, 63-60.

Guards Barb Dykstra and Shelly Brand-Adlard are the two dominant players for the Lady Aces. Dykstra, a 5-7 junior, stands eighth in the conference in scoring with a 14.4 average, and Brand-Adlard, a 5-6 senior, is ninth at 14.3 points per game. Dykstra joined Brand-Adlard in the 1,000-point club when she broke the mark against Dayton last Saturday. Brand-Adlard is also second in the league at 6.3 assists per game.

The Lady Aces also have 6-0 Sue Rathmacher at center, a freshman who is fifth in the conference in rebounding at 6.7 boards per game, and 5-11 Karla Hughes, who is sixth in rebounding at 6.5 per game. At the other forward spot is 5-8 senior Denise Spear, who averages 10.4 points per game and has hit 62 percent of her shots from the field in conference games.

Despite these respectable individual stats among the starters, the Lady Aces have not been very successful as a team. They rank last in the conference in field shooting (38 percent), seventh (out of eight teams) in free-throw shooting (64 percent), seventh in scoring (60 points per game), seventh in team defense (73 points allowed per game), and seventh in team rebounding differential (-11.3).

"Obviously, Evansville has their liabilities," says DiStanislao. "What we have to do in order to beat them is exploit those liabilities. I know that Evansville will come in here very fired up Friday night."

"It's very easy to take them lightly, which is what I think Dayton did last Saturday. Evansville was on their own court and they caught Dayton by surprise and gave them a good ball game. Dayton wasn't ready, but we'll be ready. I fully expect Evansville to give us a good game."

Streak-ending upset of 1974 sets tone for classic series

LOS ANGELES — It hangs there like the aftertaste of diet cola. Long and lasting.

But one win of 1209 in the history of basketball at Notre Dame and but one loss of 492 in the history of basketball at UCLA. Yet, the memory of that Notre Dame-UCLA battle on Jan. 19, 1974, still reverberates today as one of college basketball's classic rivalries continues Sunday in Pauley Pavilion.

In many people's minds, Notre Dame's 71-70 upset of the Bruins in 1974 at the ACC - thus ending college basketball's longest winning streak at 88 games - marked the starting point of modern-day Notre Dame Basketball. When he had come to South Bend two seasons earlier for the 1971-72 season, Notre Dame coach Digger Phelps first set his sights on reaching the level of the legendary UCLA program. Notre Dame's stunning victory gave its program the credibility it had previously lacked, and which it still holds today.

National champions the last seven seasons and nine of the previous 10, UCLA Basketball was at its pinnacle that fateful January day when the upstarts from Notre Dame rallied to outscore the Bruins 12-0 over the game's final 3:22 for a win that shocked the entire nation. UCLA was to college basketball what the New York Yankees were to baseball or what Notre Dame was to college football. The Irish had come away with the ultimate triumph, and its effects on Notre Dame Basketball would be felt years into the future.

The game still lives on in the memory of Irish assistant coach Gary Brokaw, who was the game's leading scorer with 25 points. "It was the most important game that I have ever played in as a basketball player," he says. "That covers over 25 years, including four years of professional ball. 'People remember me because I played in that game, not because I played in Milwaukee with Kareem Abdul-Jabbar and Oscar Robertson. They remember me because of what Notre Dame did to UCLA on January 19, 1974. It's a game that people remember 10 years later, and I'm sure they'll still remember it 10 years down the road. I'll never forget them telling us it was a Notre Dame moment.'"

Phelps has repeated the phrase 'Notre Dame moment' many times since, but it was that one game which made possible all those to follow. The series has lost some of the luster it once enjoyed, although Sunday's game still will be telecast to a national television audience on NBC. It undoubtedly will be a special game Sunday, but there are a couple of reasons why this one isn't likely to match previous Irish-Bruin battles.

Beginning last year, the series reverted to one game a season. It had been a home-and-home series since Phelps became Irish head coach but that arrangement ended by UCLA's choice. Arizona and Arizona State joined the Bruins' conference, the Pac 10, in time for the '78-'79 season, forcing UCLA to play four additional conference games per year. The Bruins have felt the pinch of playing four more tough games, and decided that it would not be in their best interest to play Notre Dame twice a year.

Because the teams only visit each other in alternate years, a good deal of fan involvement with the series has dissipated, taking away from the excitement that comes with a UCLA game. The Bruins, obviously, aren't what they once were in college basketball. Parity has overridden domination in the last few years, so UCLA finds itself unable to do what it once did so easily - win national championship after national championship.
