Two killed, 25 arrested during riots in England

Associated Press

BIRMINGHAM, England - An angry crowd attacked Britain's law enforcement minister yesterday when he visited the scene of overnight rioting and arson that left two people dead in the country's second-largest city.

The violence started Monday night in a confrontation between blacks and a policeman and ended with 50 shops gutted by fire.

It was the worst rioting to hit Britain since 1981, when racial violence raged for two days in parts of London, Liverpool and Manchester in the greatest breakdown of law and order in this century.

Home Secretary Douglas Hurd visited the rundown district of Handsworth yesterday afternoon to view the destruction and quickly drew a crowd, mostly of black youths, who jeered him.

As Hurd said "I'm here to listen," bricks and bottles sailed out of the crowd. Hurd was hurried into a police van and drove him away unhurt, and the crowd pelted two police vans in a service station with stones.

One van drove away, but the crowd overturned the second and set it ablaze, sending a new pall of smoke over a neighborhood still smoldering from fires in some 50 shops.

Police said they found two bodies in a burned-out post office on Lozells Road in the rundown Handsworth district. They did not immediately identify the victims, and they said two other people were missing.

Police said they had arrested 25 blacks on charges of looting.

Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher said she was "absolutely appalled" at the destruction and loss of life, and urged police and community leaders to work together to prevent further trouble.

Police and most politicians said there was no racial aspect to the flareup.

Riot-equipped police moved into the Handsworth district of Birmingham, England Monday night and Tuesday to combat outbreaks of rioting.

Corrigan to HPC: 'Keep off the field'

By SCOTT BEARBY
Assistant News Editor

"Keep off the football field." Director of Athletics Gene Corrigan asked the Hall Presidents' Council last night to relay that request to students who flood the Notre Dame football field during home games.

Corrigan told HPC that a few incidents before games last year led to confrontations with security and opposing football players. He said, "This is not what Notre Dame is known for. The incidents are an embarrassment to anyone associated with Notre Dame."

The situation became particularly bad before the game with University of Miami, Corrigan said. As a result, Miami Head Football Coach Jimmy Johnson wrote a letter to the University of South Carolina coach telling him to expect Notre Dame fans to push and intimidate his football players.

Word of students intimidating opposing players spread to Michigan

State, which will be bringing security to the upcoming game against Notre Dame, according to Corrigan.

Corrigan said they are appealing to the student body to stay off the field. Students may feel that being on the field peps up the team, but Corrigan says this is not true.

He further added that pepping-up the team can take place by cheering loudly from the stands.

While addressing the HPC, Corrigan also informed the group about the new regulation concerning the ban of beer kegs in the parking lots before, during, and after football games. The University was involved in a landmark legal case in which it was determined that Notre Dame has responsibility of everyone on the campus and in the parking lots during games, according to Corrigan.

Although Corrigan said he is not banning tailgating, there will be restrictions on bringing in excessive

New 'animal house' to hold research beasts

By KATHY A. CEPERICH

Notre Dame will soon have a new "animal house."

The almost-complete addition to Galvin Life Science Center, the Frank M. Friemann Biological Research Facility, will house research animals and facilities, according to Robert Spence, administrative assistant of biology.

Research animals were previously located in four rooms in Galvin, but USDA and National Institute for Health guidelines required that the University not board any more than one species in each room, Spence said.

The new facility was built to comply with the regulations, he said.

The University, however, could have delayed construction several years before losing accreditation for the research center, added Francis Castellino, dean of the college of science.

The new Friemann facility contains 33 rooms, Spence said, most of which will be used to house research animals: rodents, cats, dogs and the various parasites which feed on them.

Two will be used as procedure rooms, where animal blood and tissue can be collected, he said, and two other rooms will contain equipment for performing necropsies, animal autopsies.

There will also be a receiving and a quarantine room, he said.

Spence explained that species isolation rooms are essential in raising healthy animals.

Party in Ann Arbor

By MARY REYNOLDS
News Staff

All students who were lucky enough to get tickets to this weekend's Notre Dame/Michigan football game, and even those who weren't so fortunate, are invited to a "kick-off" party this weekend in Ann Arbor.

Sponsored by the Notre Dame Club of Ann Arbor, the party will be held Friday night from 8 to midnight at the St. Patrick's Church Parish Center on Whitmore Lake.

Admission, $10 at the door, includes "all the food you can eat," according to Club Publicity Chairman Jerry McKay.

Those of legal drinking age (21 in Michigan) will also get "all the beer you can drink" for the cost of admission, McKay said. He stressed that I.D.'s will be checked at the door.

Entertainment will include a four-piece band and a bagpipe player. In addition, partygoers will be led in cheers by the Notre Dame cheerleaders and the leprechaun. Assistant Coach Joe Yonto will be present. Approximately 600 people are expected to attend the party, said McKay.

New Personnel boss provides 'progressive' touch

By BOB MUSSELMAN
Assistant News Editor

Notre Dame employees can look forward to a progressive "state-of-the-art" personnel department, according to new Personnel Director Roger Mullins.

Mullins, 37, assumed the position in May. He replaced Tom Bull, who resigned as the department head last year.

The new trend in personnel management, Mullins said, emphasizes human resources.

The term "human resources" encompasses other departmental concerns such as staff relations, compensation and benefits, labor law issues and man-power research, he explained.

"Actually, 'personnel' is not quite state-of-the-art terminology," he said. Most employees think of personnel solely in terms of employment, which is only part of the department's purpose, Mullins said.

Mullins most recently worked as vice president of human resources at Elkhart General Hospital.

"Historically, there has been an adverse relationship between employers and employees," he said. Though he could not comment on specific problems Notre Dame has had, he said such a relationship is typical at such institutions.

The human resources approach tries to be "pro-active," attempting to solve problems before they surface; past personnel strategies have been "re-active," mere answers to worker discontent, he said.

Roger Mullins

"We are a service function," he said, "and sometimes we lose sight of why we're here. We become almost self-serving."

Changes at the department have concentrated on increased communication between employer and employee and more effective management training and development programs, Mullins said.

"This office can't motivate, but we can assist managers in being able to motivate," he said of the management training programs.

The department offers personnel development programs which help employees deal with stress, nutrition and cigarette addiction.

Personnel has also begun staying open during lunch hour, the only time many employees can visit the office.

The ultimate aim, Mullins said, is to "make the personnel department an integral part of the University," while making employees feel like they are an important part of the total process.

That, he said, has been difficult for universities to do.

While books like "Megatrends" and "In Search of Excellence" have proposed new management techniques and major corporations such as IBM have implemented the theories, higher learning institutions have been slow in changing their management philosophies, he said.

"I think the emphasis at universities has been to deliver education to the students," he said, while

Plop plop, fizz, fizz that's what enthusiasm is

It happens every year, and it all starts with Activities Night.

Hundreds of bright-eyed, curious students, many of them fresh out of high school, wander around Stepan Center and Angela Athletic Facility gathering information about campus clubs and organizations.

At every table, enthusiastic club leaders greet the inquiring students with a smiling face and a firm handshake. Basic information on the organizations is exchanged and the students move onto the next table, where the process is repeated.

All of that took place last week. This week, many of those clubs and organizations are moving into the second phase of their recruiting plans: the organizational meeting.

A typical organizational meeting often resembles a football pep rally. A feeling of excitement permeates in the air. The club leader stands up and proclaims this will be the best year ever for the organization. Countless goals and ideas are discussed. Volunteers spring up for every available position.

But how long will it last?

Not very long at all, if past trends are to be believed. Call it the dissolving Alka-Seltzer tablet theory.

Nearly every campus group, from the business and engineering societies to student government and The Observer, starts the year with big plans and oodles of excited volunteers. But as the leaves start falling off the trees, the volunteers start falling off the bandwagon.

In short, enthusiasm dissolves like an Alka-Seltzer tablet in a glass of water. And as that enthusiasm dissolves, so does the number of activities sponsored by these campus groups.

Any number of factors can cause this decline in interest. To a certain extent, it is simply human nature to become less enthusiastic as the school year progresses.

But there are probably more factors at play.

One explanation may be that students misjudge how much time they will be able to devote to an organization. Activities Night comes during the first week of the semester, when assignments are light and exams are non-existent. But when the work load increases, students often have to re-budget their time in favor of their studies. And seniors have to devote their time to job hunting.

Another problem can arise if one of the group's first activities is not well-attended. Nothing can bring about a drop in enthusiasm like the feeling that the organization is unpopular.

Keith Harrison

News Editor

A lack of communication can cause an organization's decline as well. Students join groups for a variety of reasons, but a common one is to meet other people and possibly make new friends. If only the people in leadership roles get to interact on a regular basis, the group's members may feel unwanted and lose interest.

Japan Club President Wayne Wennick agrees.

"What you have to do is build up a family atmosphere where everyone knows each other as early as possible," Wennick said. "If you can do that, then people will be motivated easily and make time to attend club events."

Increased communication, especially through the use of newsletters, is the way Big Brothers/Big Sisters President John Eustermann will fight dwindling enthusiasm.

"I think that when it gets to be exam time, a lot of clubs will only put out one newsletter per month," Eustermann said. "But that is just the time when the club leaders have to do a little more work, to make sure everyone will stay involved."

The Saint Mary's chapter of Toastmasters uses a slightly different approach to keep members involved.

"We have weekly meetings where attendance is required," said President Theresa Hardy. If a member misses more than three meetings in one semester he or she is forced to resign from the chapter, Hardy said.

"We only do that because we know people have a tendency to lose interest and not come to meetings," she said. "We also want them to get the most from their membership dues."

Though their methods may differ, most organization leaders are fully aware of the need to fight dwindling student enthusiasm. If they are successful, the dissolving Alka-Seltzer tablet theory will be proved wrong, and the only fizzling heard on these campuses will come from the plop, plop, fizz, fizz, of that hangover remedy.

SMC summer program in Europe sends 100 to London, Rome, Italy

By KIMBERLY TRENNER
Senior Staff Reporter

The Saint Mary's summer foreign study programs turn approximately 100 college students and alumnae into "world travellers."

Saint Mary's offers London and Rome programs to all college or university students, alumnae and friends and relatives of participants.

"These programs are an ideal combination between both traveling and also settling down in some of the major cities in Europe," said Anthony Black, professor of history. "The objective of these programs is to make students aware of all the things they can see."

"These are not restrictive programs, students have as much free time as they want," said Black. Taking daily walking tours, seeing many of the major attractions and sights, going on day trips, shopping and spending nights on the town are some of the things students can do.

"Students are provided with the opportunity to travel with other students who are compatible in age and background," said Black.

Both the London and the Rome Programs offer students courses for college credit, he said. A maximum of six credit hours may be earned in the areas of biology, business, history, music, sociology, speech and drama, and modern literature.

Course work is integrated with the tours and lectures during travel, according to promotional literature.

"It wasn't a leisure trip," said Anne Quinn, a senior Communications major who traveled with the London Program this past summer. "We kept up a good pace so that we could see the most in the amount of time we had."

Joanne DeLorey, a Saint Mary's senior, traveled with both the London and the Rome Programs.

"It was the best two months of my life," said DeLorey.

"It's a great way to see Europe for the first time," said Mike Hofman, a Notre Dame senior and art major. "Everything is taken care of for you, such as reservations for hotels and plans for tours, yet you are free to break away from the group at any time you like."

After traveling with both the London and Rome programs, Hofman went on his own to Capri and Brunsels. Students are not required to return with the group after the programs conclude.

Materials describing the trips, available outside Black's office, 346

Madeleva Hall, provide information about the programs:

The London Program begins May 21 with a flight from New York to Shannon, Ireland. After six days there, students move to Scotland for a few days, followed by a two week stay in London.

The trip concludes in Paris on June 20th after four days of sightseeing.

Students traveling with the Rome Program fly directly to Paris on June 15. After five days in Paris, students move to West Germany for several days.

Nine days are spent traveling through the Italian cities of Milan, Bergamo, Vicenza, Venice, Ferrara, Ravenna, Florence, Tuscany, and Umbria. The group spends the remaining days in Rome and returns July 14.

The cost of both trips covers all air, land, and sea travel, meals, living accommodations, and admission to many of the museums and other sights.

For further information, students should contact Black in his office or call 284-4460. An informational meeting will be held for interested students October 14 at 7 p.m. in Carroll Hall.

amounts of all alcohol. He added that this situation is not limited to only Notre Dame, as he expects similar rules to go into effect around the country.

Corrigan stressed that the rule was not directed only toward students. The rule is directed toward anyone attending a football game.

The current student ticket allotment procedure was discussed in further questioning by the council. Ticket Manager Mike Bobinski and Corrigan said although nothing can be done about the situation this year, they are willing to look into changing the system.

They added that students will never be able to receive the entire allotment, since alumni have rights to tickets as well.

The HPC also listened to Maureen Trubac, spokesperson for the campus blood drives. She appealed to the council for continued support of the program. According to Trubac, last year was one of the best periods ever with over 500 units collected.

Trubac said students on campus have had a need for blood in the past and the community has helped them. She added that students should consider returning the favor and donate blood.

Michael Vore, chairman of the ideas and issues committee, addressed the council on the upcoming lecture of Timothy Leary.

Leary, the self-proclaimed "Messiah of LSD," is scheduled to speak Thursday at noon on the west end of the Fieldhouse Mall. Later, he will lecture at Washington Hall on "High Technology: The 1960's through the 1980's."

Vore said tickets for the event were distributed yesterday. Since there was an abundance of students who failed to get tickets before supplies ran out, Vore said the lecture will be videotaped so it can be shown at a later date.

In other business, HPC Chairman Kevin Howard relayed proposed undertakings of student government in the coming year. These include:

- *tackling the issue of whether to restructure the current student government

- *taking action to raise the student activities fee in order to increase student government projects

- *looking at the relationships between student government bodies and the image the student body has of government

- *asking the Notre Dame Board of Trustees to add a student trustee to their board. This, according to Howard, is a large undertaking, but it can be done.

- *looking at the student government's relationship with the media

- *examining dorm life and the role of rectors in the halls

The meeting closed after Lyons Hall President thanked HPC for their support in their recent charity volleyball tournament. According to Cahill, over 80 teams participated, helping to make it a success.

Unusual talent not traditional fare

Associated Press

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. - The usual Miss America talent fare of singers, dancers and piano players will be jazzed up this year when Miss Michigan breaks a 4-inch-thick piece of concrete with her foot and walks on broken glass.

Other unusual talent selections include a comic monologue by Miss Alaska, clog dancing by Miss South Carolina, down-home fiddle playing by Miss Texas, and presentation of an original commentary on the impact of advertising by Miss District of Columbia.

Those who selected talents less familiar to pageant audiences said they were only doing what they do best. But some acknowledged that there might be a strategic purpose behind their choice.

"It will help me stand out," Alecia Rae Masalkoski, 23, of Muskegon, Mich., said of the opening of her karate performance, in which she'll stomp across a bed of broken glass to demonstrate her powers of concentration.

"You feel it," she said of the feat that will be a first for the Miss America stage. "It's a little prickly."

But she said she thinks the pageant is ready for a Miss America with a black belt.

"In the '80s, women can be strong and capable of defending themselves and be feminine at the same time," said the woman who was the Midwest karate champion at age 16.

North Dakota sells self on signs

Associated Press

BISMARCK, N.D. - State tourism officials fear many travelers may think North Dakota is just a long haul on the way to somewhere else, so they're setting up billboards to explain why they should stop and look around.

"Stay in North Dakota; Custer Was Healthy When He Left," will say one roadside announcement, said state tourism director James Fuglie.

"Stay in North Dakota; Montana is Closed This Week" will face west-bound motorists, Fuglie said. Travelers heading east or south out of the state will see similar messages about South Dakota and Minnesota, he said Monday.

And for those who haven't heard about winter on the northern plains, another message will read, "Welcome to North Dakota; Open Year-Round."

The campaign was inspired by a column written by Lloyd Omdahl, director of the Bureau of Governmental Affairs at the University of North Dakota, who suggested the state make traveling fun by putting up entertaining signs.

Omdahl offered several suggestions, including "Isn't This The Flattest Place You've Ever Seen?" and "You Are Now Entering Minnesota. Why?"

Spence added that no surgeries were being performed on the animals.

Gunmen take Duarte's daughter; security guards killed, wounded

Associated Press

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador - Gunmen attacked presidential security guards outside a private university here yesterday, and witnesses said the daughter of President Jose Napoleon Duarte was kidnapped. Employees at a local radio station owned by the daughter, Ines Guadalupe Duarte Duran, 34, also said they had been notified by the family that she had been kidnapped. One of her security guards was killed and one was wounded in the shootout. "We only know that she has been kidnapped and that there is one dead," said an employee of the Armed Forces Press Committee when asked about the reports. An official at the presidential house, Gertrudis Sandoval, identified the slain guard as Mauricio Alfredo Elena Palomares and said he and the wounded man were Mrs. Duarte Duran's personal bodyguards. Troops and presidential security guards swarmed over the area on a main street on the west edge of the capital where the New San Salvador University is located. Students said Mrs. Duarte Duran was studying advertising and public relations at the university and apparently was grabbed as she left the building.

"Employees have a legal and moral right to form and join unions," he said, adding that unions usually result from employees' perception of management injustice. "I can't prevent a union from forming, but I can produce an environment which would make union membership less desirable," he said.

It started out as a game. Eating everything I wanted ...thousands of calories. Then throwing up so I wouldn't have to worry about gaining weight. But my game turned into something else. A way of life. Bulimia had taken over. Making me feel guilty. Alone. And out of control.

One phone call helped me begin to change all that. When I contacted HOPE, I discovered a special program designed by Memorial Hospital of South Bend that helps people like me who have eating disorders. By the end of the program I was finally feeling better about myself - finally feeling like I was in control.

If you or someone you know has an eating disorder, call 284-7151. And discover how HOPE can help.

Television cartoons offer 'looney' model for kids

I am not a feminist. I think Gloria Steinem would benefit immensely from a good body perm. I find the thought of unisex clothing appalling and I am unwilling to share a bathroom with anyone who is not carrying a purse (weirdos do not count).

frankly my dear

"Vive la difference," as they say. But different means neither better nor worse. Women have suffered much discrimination throughout history and although our society has advanced many strides towards equality, there remains an insidiously undermining influence. What is this plague of narrow-mindedness? What form does this evil take? The answer is . . . Saturday morning cartoons. Allow me to elaborate.

It is 8 a.m. in Smalltown, U.S.A.; Johnny has just crawled out of bed. He is wearing Incredible Hulk pajamas and he hungers for Mr. T cereal. He slips downstairs, being careful not to wake his parents. Having obtained a bowl of cereal, Johnny settles himself before the television and turns on the Saturday cartoons.

The first cartoon is Popeye. The protagonist is a swaggering sailor, his arch rival a hulking clod named Brutus. Caught between the forces of good and evil is Olive Oyl. Olive Oyl is a blight upon womankind. She is helpless, simpering, completely dependent upon Popeye, vacillating and embarrassing. Time and again she is carried away screaming by Brutus only to be rescued by our hero.

Johnny changes the channel to another favorite, the Smurfs. These little blue creatures have in their merry band one female, coyly named Smurfette. Grandpa Smurf is wise and kind; Smurfette is a giggling imbecile. She, like Olive Oyl, consistently stumbles into disasters and must be delivered by her male counterparts.

Johnny settles deeper into his father's easy chair, takes a last bite of cereal, and awaits the beginning of the Bugs Bunny Show.

Do not misunderstand me. I am a Bugs Bunny fan. No matter how late the Friday night dance or party has lasted, I will drag my exhausted body out of bed and peer at Bugs with bloodshot eyes. But sad to say, the Bugs Bunny Show is guilty of the same offenses as the other morning cartoons. The main characters on the Bugs Bunny Show are male: Bugs himself, Daffy Duck, Sylvester the Cat, Foghorn Leghorn and Yosemite Sam. The few female characters that do appear are either vacuous, eyelash-batting beauties, introduced to the plot to lure the male astray, or shrewish, rolling-pin wielding wives. Neither image is particularly flattering.

Thus, during the two hour span that Johnny is seated before the television on a Saturday morning, he sees a weaking, an airhead, a simpleton and a nag. I contend that children are less influenced by the supposed violence of cartoons than they are by the shameless stereotyping. The impressionable Johnny sits down before the television as a nice, young boy with love and respect for his mother and the other female figures in his life. He gets up two hours later, subliminally convinced that half of the population is worthless. Is it any wonder that he may be disrespectful or condescending towards the women who will later populate his life?

I would remind the television industry of their enormous influence and the ensuing responsibility. The sabotage of young minds can only lead to a growing chasm between the sexes. Both men and women will suffer a loss.

P.O.Box Q

Students should regard neighbors at OC party

Dear Editor:

Everyone on campus is aware of the fact that South Bend police are breaking up parties with frightening regularity, and students are letting out a collective scream in frustration as it seems more and more of our rights are being taken away. While the following request will not completely eliminate the arrival of South Bend's finest at every party, it assuredly will reduce their appearances.

Simply show common sense. Is it too much to ask you not to throw a beer can in a neighbor's yard as you walk to the party? Or relieve yourself on the side of their house? Or park in their yard? Basic courtesy will eliminate a lot of the calls neighbors place to the police. Very often you will find that if even a few behave in a rude and immature manner, these unfortunate few reflect upon the whole in such a magnified way as to seem to necessitate the removal of rights from the whole. It may not be warranted, but it happens.

I apologize if I sound preachy, but I hate to see a promising year ruined. Please take the time to show others around you that you respect them and they will reciprocate. Have a good time, but don't do it at the expense of others!

Fountain will not save students from heat

Dear Editor:

My high school has no windows. It was built to accommodate air-conditioning and heat, but the district ran out of money before installing these necessities. What can you expect from a public school district in the southwest suburbs of Chicago? It is not the tax payers fault students pass out from the heat. Many parents, therefore, would rather pay to send their kids to private schools.

Notre Dame is a private school, one of the most prestigious and financially endowed universities in the country. My own dorm, however, suffers from the same structural inadequacies as my high school. There is no such thing as a breeze in Pasquerilla East. The position of an open window prevents the air from entering the building. The cinderblock walls create the effect of a microwave oven. Obviously, the architects assumed that the Pasquerillas were to be airconditioned. Something must have gone wrong with the budget for these dorms. Meanwhile, we sit here sticking to the furniture.

I realize that a majority of the buildings on this campus are stone saunas. I sympathize with the student not fortunate to have classes in Hayes-Healy, Galvin, or Fitzpatrick. Most of my classes are in O'Shag, or even worse, Cushing. There I sit, glued to my chair, resisting the urge to run up and loosen my professor's tie. I wonder how he feels lecturing to an audience of folders flapping like fans. Who can learn when sitting there is emotionally and physically draining?

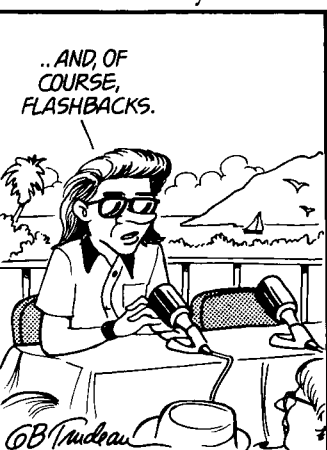

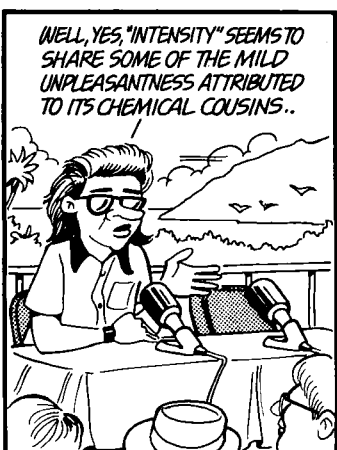

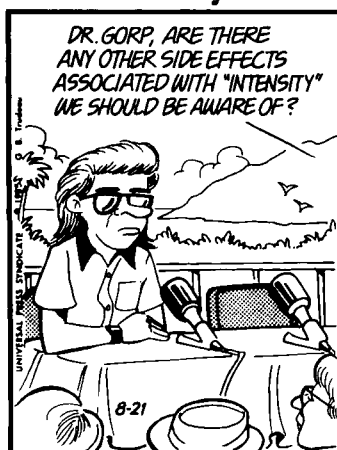

The intense heat and humidity of South

Bend summers are no secret, yet, each year students return to sweltering dorms and unbearable classrooms. When my dad helped me move in, I thought he was having a heart attack as his balding head flushed. My mom called today to see if I was still alive. Students, faculty, and parents express awareness and concern about the health hazards of poorly ventilated rooms in hot, humid weather. The administration needs to fund the installation of airconditioning campus wide.

In a few weeks the weather will be cooler. Those of us who survive the humidity will have forgotten how hot it was, as we don our Notre Dame sweatshirts and head for the football stadium. The administration will have sweated out another summer season, squandering my tuition on a fountain costing thousands of dollars. Come April, do not be surprised to see me jumping in it. It will be the only way to cool off around here. What can you expect from one of the wealthiest private schools in the country?

Gu Qi smiled broadly and tried to concentrate. He has a tough time with English.

"I feel very lucky to be at Notre Dame," he said.

Gu is a 26-year-old freshman from Peking, China. His presence at Notre Dame is the product of the thaw in Sino-American relations, and the attempts of Father Theodore Hesburgh, university president, to establish links with the Chinese scientific community, said Director of Admissions Kevin Rooney.

Rooney said Hesburgh and Provost Timothy O'Meara have visited China several times in recent years to establish academic ties with the Chinese Academy of Science. The secretary general of the academy is Qi's father, Gu Yijien, who was a Notre Dame graduate student taught by chemistry professor Emil T. Hofman in 1950, and who was awarded an honorary degree at this year's commencement exercises. Through his father, Qi was offered the chance to study at Notre Dame.

"It is a fortunate chance for me," Qi, who was a peasant in the countryside from 1969-71 during the Cultural Revolution period of Mao-Tse Tung's rule, said. "Then I no read books. I only work."

In 1971, he went to Peking and became a student. From 1980-82 he studied electronics, learning Fortran computer language. He was already working with "expert computer systems" before he began preparing for his freshman year in the United States.

"I was married June 24 - I leave for America June 26 - just two days after," Qi said. He could not comment on whether he missed his new bride because he could not understand the word "miss" as anything but an unmarried woman. "This 'miss' is a difficult question. I'm sorry," he said.

Once in the United States, Qi toured around the country.

primarily in the Midwest, for a month before coming to Notre Dame where he worked in the biology lab.

literature and physical education. "It is difficult, English, sometimes I forget the words," he said, gesturing with his hands. "But I believe I study hard for degree - in engineering - then for masters and Ph.D."

Qi, who expects to be in the United States for two years before returning home to visit, is not the only Chinese person on campus, Rooney said. "There are also at least two Chinese graduate students on campus as a result of Father Hesburgh's efforts," he said. "In most cases of non-traditional students they come seeking us, but they usually stay with local schools because of the high tuition here."

"They decide to let me come to Notre Dame so I prepared English very hard," Qi said of his chance to be a Doherty. "I like America - many things I like. For example, my roommate. I want to thank you and Notre Dame for the opportunity."

Books are rated on a four-star scale, four being the best

People often ask me where I hear of some of the music I like. And if groups like Naked Raygun and the Meat Puppets don't ring a bell, maybe you'd ask, too.

Aside from friends' recommendations and impulse purchases, most of the music I buy comes from reading about it. Sounds stupid, right? It isn't. You'd be surprised at how often rock critics are right about good music.

One book has recently come out for those of you with a taste for anything ranging from hip-hop to punk rock to African beat music. "The New Trouser Press Record Guide," a revised edition of "The Trouser Press Guide to New Wave Records," covers rather thoroughly every aspect of alternative music, with a smidgen of the mainstream.

Edited by Ira A. Robbins, this guide serves as a useful tool to building a decent record collection. The various contributors make an effort to cover even the most unheard-of bands (Animal Slaves, Screaming Meemees), and the general tone is sympathetic towards new groups.

Each entry gives the titles of all the releases by a band through May of this year (in some cases, going so far as to list singles), the year they were released, and on which label they were released. A whole page or more is devoted to major artists like David Bowie or the Clash, describing in detail all their records.

In general, the criticism is insightful, especially that of Robbins. This book is complete and accurate all the way through; it was obviously a labor of love for him.

The only quibble I have with this book is that Robbins omitted the section on compilation records, which was included in the original edition. He explains that it seemed "useless," but he doesn't know what he's talking about. Compilations are a great way to sample whole genres of music inexpensively, be it cow-punk or industrial music.

For the adventuresome, the book is essential. For the novice, it will certainly entertain. Robbins and the other contributors have done an excellent job in assembling reviews of every major record of alternative music ever released, as well as some that are not so important.

Facilities abound

Hoops are alive and well at ND

By BILL HESSION
Sports Writer

Even with the football team preparing for its big opener at Michigan, many people on the Notre Dame campus are getting ready for the hoops season. In fact, basketball could be considered the campus sport of Notre Dame.

Every day from midmorning until long after sunset, students flock to participate in one of America's favorite games - pick-up basketball. Conveniently located, the many basketball courts provide an excellent opportunity for weekend jocks to work out, have fun and improve their game.

Here's a run down on the best places to play basketball at Notre Dame:

Rockne Memorial Building
The Rock is king. Whether summer or winter, the Rock always has the best basketball to be found on campus. You can find its polished hardwood floors constantly in use. One reason for the Rock's popularity is the fact that you can borrow a basketball with the presentation of a student I.D. During the off-season, you can find even the best varsity athletes playing pick-up games.

Stepan Center - Stepan Center provides the towers and the North Quad with the best outdoor facilities on campus. With eight full courts, Stepan is by far the largest of Notre Dame's facilities. In addition, half of the courts are lighted to ac-comodate late-night hoopsters. The lights are turned off by Notre Dame security after the last players leave the courts, which can be as late as 2 or 3 a.m. In the wintertime, players can move their pick-up games into Stepan Center itself.

Lyons Courts - Nestled behind Lyons Hall and the Rock, the Lyons courts are the South Quad's alternative to Stepan Center for outdoor basketball. Recently installed lights make Lyons a hotspot for nighttime basketball.

Bookstore Courts - The famous courts behind the Notre Dame bookstore are seldom crowded until spring when the big tournament rolls around. The Bookstore Tournament is the largest tournament in the world, with 560 teams participating. These courts have seen their share of tradition, sportsmanship and, of course, great basketball.

The Athletic and Convocation Center - The ACC has a court for Digger Phelps and the varsity team, but great courts also are available to the average hoopster. Pick-up games can be found in any of the four auxiliary gyms of the ACC whenever it is open. So when the weather turns wet or cold you can bounce your basketball into the friendly confines of the ACC.

Students play for many different reasons, but by far the most common is to get away from studying.

"It's really relaxing to get out on the court and get a break from studying," says Tim Kenesey, a freshman from Holy Cross Hall.

The installation of lights on the courts is one of the most popular additions to the campus in a long while. Students can play before, after or while they are supposed to be studying.

"It's great - you can go down to the courts at midnight and pick up some good competition," claims Mike Thurston, whose personal favorites are the Lyons courts. "It gives you a good chance to get away from the books."

Students find basketball an excellent way to keep in good physical shape and keep off the pounds. Tom Massarella, a senior and a veteran of the Notre Dame pick-up basketball scene, put it best when he said, "Basketball is a great way to try and stay in shape after all these tough weekends."

If you really enjoy playing competitive basketball, then Notre Dame is the place to be.

In addition to the Bookstore Tournament, the interhall league is a great place to find some tough competition. Sponsored by Non-Varsity Athletics, the league is very popular and always competitive. Hall rivalries help to produce some of the best games to be found on campus.

So whether you play to stay in shape or just to have fun, Notre Dame certainly provides many opportunities to play good basketball.

Auburn takes over top spot in latest AP poll

Associated Press

Oklahoma Coach Barry Switzer wasn't surprised that the Sooners lost their No. 1 ranking in the Associated Press poll yesterday.

"We got all the publicity in the preseason," said Switzer, whose Sooners were No. 1 in the preseason and first regular-season polls, "but we don't play our first game until Sept. 28 and I knew people would forget about us."

While Oklahoma slipped from No. 1 to No. 2, Auburn jumped from No. 2 to No. 1, just two points ahead of the Sooners, by routing Southwestern Louisiana 49-7 behind Bo Jackson's 290 yards rushing and four touchdowns.

Florida, a 35-23 winner over Miami, jumped from fifth to third with three first-place votes and 974 points. The Gators replaced Southern Methodist, which had problems before defeating Texas-El Paso 35-23 and slipped to sixth.

Southern Cal rose from sixth to fourth with six first-place ballots and 970 points on the strength of a 20-10 triumph over Illinois, which had been No. 11 but fell to 19th. Iowa, which has not yet played a game, slipped from fourth to fifth with five first-place votes and 911 points. Sixth-place SMU received the other two first-place ballots and 908 points.

Florida State vaulted from 17th to seventh with 755 points by upsetting No. 10 Nebraska, 17-13, and Oklahoma State went from 16th to eighth with 741 points by trouncing Washington.

Mets take over first

Johnson slams Cards for Darling

Associated Press

NEW YORK - Howard Johnson lined a grand slam moments after a bench-clearing altercation, capping a five-run first inning last night that led the New York Mets past the St. Louis Cardinals 5-4 and back into first place in the National League East.

Johnson's grand slam came after Cox hit George Foster on the hip with a pitch. The two exchanged words, and both benches and bullpens emptied as umpires intervened and the two closed. No punches were thrown and order was restored within five minutes.

The victory in the opener of the three-game series, before a crowd of 50,195, gave the Mets a one-game lead over St. Louis. The Cardinals, who entered the game with the same 82-53 record as the Mets, had been in first place since Aug. 22.

Winner Ron Darling, 15-5, took a three-hitter and a 5-2 lead into the seventh, but yielded to reliever Roger McDowell.

Danny Cox, 15-9, took the loss. Each team was held to only five hits.

Royals 6, Angels 0

ANAHEIM, CALIF. - Frank White and Lonnie Smith hit two-run homers to back the three-hit pitching of Charlie Leibrandt last night as the Kansas City Royals blanked California 6-0 to extend their lead over the Angels in the American League West to 1 1/2 games.

The victory was Kansas City's ninth in its last 10 games, and the Royals are now 32-15 since July 21, when they trailed the Angels by 7 1/2 games.

Leibrandt, 15-7, walked two and struck out four in hurling his eighth complete game and third shutout of the season.

The 28-year-old left-hander allowed only singles by Bobby Grich leading off the fifth inning and Juan Beniquez starting the seventh in winning his ninth game in his last 11 decisions.

The Royals went ahead to stay in the first inning off losing pitcher Kirk McCaskill, 9-11, on a two-out single by George Brett and a run-scoring double by Hal McRae. The hit was the 2,000th of McRae's big-league career. He became the 155th player to accomplish that feat.

The game attracted 37,813, about 20,000 shy of capacity.

Blue Jays 2, Tigers 1

TORONTO - Damaso Garcia singled in the winning run in the seventh inning to snap a 1-1 tie and Doyle Alexander bested Jack Morris in a pitchers' duel as the Toronto Blue Jays defeated the Detroit Tigers 2-1 last night.

The Blue Jays entered the game leading the second-place New York Yankees by 1.5 games in the American League East.

With one out in the seventh inning Jesse Barfield singled and stole second. One out later, Garcia singled to left to score Barfield.

Alexander, 15-8, checked the Tigers on seven hits and twice pitched his way out of bases loaded jams. He struck out eight and walked four.

Morris, 14-10, was overpowering in the early going, striking out the side in both the first and third innings en route to a season-high 11 strikeouts.

Yanks 13, Brewers 10

MILWAUKEE - Ron Hassey and Ken Griffey hit three-run homers last night as the New York Yankees outlasted the Milwaukee Brewers 13-10 for their 11th consecutive victory.

The win kept the Yankees within 1 1/2 games of the Toronto Blue Jays in the American League East.

The 11-straight wins are the most by a Yankee team since September, 1964.

New York starter Ed Whitson, 10-7, pitched seven innings allowing eight runs on 12 hits. Bob Shirley came on in the eighth to earn his second save.

Milwaukee starter Ray Burris, 9-12, got tagged for seven hits and 10 runs in the 5 1/3 innings he pitched. He also yielded a solo home run to designated hitter Dan Pasqua in the fourth.

The Brewers collected 17 hits in the game while the Yankees knocked out 11.

Phillies 5, Expos 2

PHILADELPHIA - Mike Schmidt's three-run homer with no outs in the bottom of the 11th gave the Philadelphia Phillies a 5-2 victory over the Montreal Expos last night.

Juan Samuel led off the inning by getting hit by a pitch from Montreal reliever Tim Burke, 8-3.

Sophomores Gretchen Kraus (5) and Jill Suglich (7) gave it their all last night, but Notre Dame was unable to beat Ohio State at the ACC in a grueling five-game match. After dominating early, the Irish fell short in the end and lost the match in a 15-5 final game. Jim Buch details the match in his story at right.

Irish volleyball team drops tough five-game match to OSU Buckeyes

By JIM BUCH
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame women's volleyball team played its heart out last night, but came out on the short end in an exciting five-game match against Ohio State at the ACC.

The Irish won two of the first three games, and rallied back to within one point in the fourth game at 14-13. With Notre Dame needing just three more points for the win, the Buckeyes regrouped to win the crucial fourth game, 15-13, and force the match to a decisive fifth game.

Notre Dame never recovered, dropping the deciding game by a 15-5 margin.

Earlier, Notre Dame had stormed to an early lead by winning the first game 15-11 and taking the third game by a 15-12 score. The Buckeyes took the second game, 15-9, despite some outstanding defense by the Irish.

Notre Dame dropped to 0-2 with the defeat, while Ohio State won their fifth match in as many outings.

Irish coach Art Lambert was pleased with his team's performance against a heavily-favored opponent, but would have been happier if his young team had chalked up its much-needed first victory. Notre Dame is playing a much tougher schedule this year than in past seasons, and the Irish coach knows that things will only get tougher for his squad from here on in.

"Even though the team played well and I'm very pleased with everyone's performance, the team has to realize that to lose is not the name of the game," Lambert noted. "This is a young team, so I expect that they're going to have their peaks and valleys in each game as well as in the season."

Notre Dame started a lineup that included two freshmen and two sophomores, and Lambert was pleased with the play of his newer players.

"I'm pleased to see that we're making an improvement as a team," said the Irish coach. "Tonight everyone played well but we just got beat."

Lambert's starting lineup included senior Mary McLaughlin, junior Karen Sapp, sophomores Gretchen Kraus and Jill Suglich and freshmen Mary Kay Waller and Maureen Shea. In her first starting assignment of the season, Sapp, along with Shea, was an integral part of Notre Dame's explosive victory in the first game.

Notably absent from the starting lineup was sophomore Kathleen Morin, who helped the team in a reserve role for the first time in her career. She had been a starter in every game last season and in this year's opening loss to Kentucky. Searching for the right lineup combination, however, Lambert held Morin out of the starting lineup in hopes that she could spark the team from the bench. In the third game his idea worked.

Trailing 8-4 in that game, Lambert put Morin into the contest, and she gave the team a much-needed lift with some crucial hits and timely blocks. The Irish went on a 11-4 tear at that point, and took the third game by a three-point margin.

"I was pleased with Morin's play off the bench tonight," said Lambert. "She came in and played well and hard and helped the team's performance."

Lambert is looking forward to the hard play of Morin, as well as his other players, as the Irish depart from South Bend on an 11-match road trip. Notre Dame will start this vigorous trip by competing in the Hoosier Classic with highly-ranked Purdue, Indiana, and Butler this weekend in Indianapolis.

The Irish will not return to the home court until Oct. 19, when they face North Star Conference rival Butler.

"I'm looking forward to this weekend's tournament, as well as all the matches this young and exciting team plays," said Lambert. "A road trip can be a growing experience for a young team and I am expecting good things from this long road trip."

Rose hitless at home

Associated Press

CINCINNATI - Pete Rose came up empty yesterday in his first attempt to break the tie with Ty Cobb, going 0-for-4 and postponing his date with destiny for at least one night as the Reds lost to the Padres, 3-2.

Rose tied Cobb's lifetime mark of 4,191 hits last Sunday in Chicago, going 2-for-5. He did not play in the opening of a 10-game homestand Monday night against San Diego because the Padres threw a left-hander, Dave Dravecky.

But, last night, before a packed house at Riverfront Stadium, Rose took his place in the lineup at first base for the Cincinnati Reds against Padres right-hander LaMarr Hoyt, against whom he had an 0-for-2 lifetime mark.

The Reds player-manager popped out to shortstop twice and lined out to left field twice. It was the fifth time in his past nine games that Rose has gone without a hit, and he is now hitless in his last six at-bats.

Rose came to bat against Hoyt in the first inning, greeted by a standing ovation and illuminated by the thousands of flashbulbs popping in the stands. When the count went to 3-1, the crowd booed Hoyt, but Rose popped up the next pitch behind second base to Padres shortstop Garry Templeton.

Rose came up again against Hoyt as the leadoff hitter in the fourth inning. He stepped into the batter's box to the cheers of the crowd, but on the first pitch, he hit a soft liner to Padres left fielder Carmelo Martinez, and he was 0-for-2.

Leading off the sixth inning against Hoyt, Rose went hitless for a third at-bat, hitting a bloop toward shallow left that Templeton drifted back on and handled without trouble. The count was 2-1.

In his last chance to break the record for the night, Rose came up with one out and a runner at second in the eighth inning against rookie right-handed reliever Lance McCullers. Rose took the first pitch, a blazing fastball outside, then hit a line drive toward the gap in left-center.

For a fleeting moment, it had a chance to drop for The Hit, but Martinez ran in and to his left, making a relatively easy catch on the ball as it hung up long enough for him to reach it on the run.

After the out, Padres right fielder Tony Gwynn was caught in a swirl of confetti and toilet paper, dumped onto the field by apparently disgusted fans who had paid their money only to see Rose come up empty.

Notre Dame women's soccer club defeats Saint Mary's in opener, 3-1

By ANDREA LaFRENIERE
Sports Writer

The Saint Mary's soccer team dropped the first game of its 1985 season yesterday at Angela Field to the Notre Dame Women's Soccer Club by a score of 3-1.

Notre Dame freshman Sue Haling scored all three goals for the Irish in the first half of the game and was assisted on the plays by sophomore Kate Titterton.

Sophomore Beth Hallinan scored the Belles' only goal in the first half of the game. Katy Boldt, a senior player, assisted Hallinan in the play.

Boldt said that the Belles' attitude was partially responsible for the loss.

"I think we were too fired up for the game," she said. "It was our first game as a varsity team. There's always a lot of rivalry when we play Notre Dame, and we were too psyched up for the match."

According to Saint Mary's coach John Akers, the Belles were simply outthrust by the Irish.

"I think Notre Dame played more aggressively in general," said Akers. "They took advantage of the opportunities they had. Unfortunately, we were not able to capitalize on our opportunities."

Despite the loss, Akers said he was satisfied with the players' efforts, particularly those of junior Gloria Eleuteri and sophomore Patty Hatfield.

"Gloria filled in well at sweeper," he said. "And Patty did a good job at the goal."

Irish coach Phoebe Hofman said she was pleased with her team's efforts.

"I thought we played very well," said Hofman. "Everybody hustled. Our bench gave us a lot of support, and we played well together as a team."

The Belles travel to Bloomington, Ind., Saturday to play Indiana at 1 p.m.

Akers remarked that yesterday's loss is important to the team as it prepares for Saturday's game.

"This loss is a good lesson for us as we go down to Bloomington," said Akers. "We've got to be more physical, and we've got to move the ball more quickly."

ND students should show class in Ann Arbor

This weekend, I, like many other Notre Dame and Saint Mary's students, will be traveling to Ann Arbor for the Michigan-Notre Dame football game. For me, this trip is the fulfillment of a lifelong dream.

I grew up in Michigan, surrounded by "M - Go Blue" bumperstickers. But I am the son of Domer parents. My football education had a definite bias. I learned at an early age that the Irish are the good guys. Whoever they play are the bad guys.

I was about six- or seven-years-old when Mom sat me down with a piece of paper in front of the TV and explained the game of football to me. The following weekend, I was tailgating in Orange Field before my very first football game. I don't remember what happened in that game, but I remember that the Irish were the good guys and the other guys were the bad guys.

I also remember learning that we shouldn't cheer when one of the bad guys gets hurt. And we never boo. Notre Dame players and fans have class, I was told.

As I grew up, my football knowledge grew, as did my Notre Dame bias. Somewhere along the line, I also picked up a strong dislike for the University of Michigan. I learned that Blue and Gold is better than Maize and Blue. I learned that the Irish have class and the Wolverines don't. The Irish have had Ara Parseghian, Dan Devine and Gerry Faust, while Michigan has had Bo Schembechler (the contrast is incredible).

Phil

Assistant Sports Editor

In September, 1979, I watched from the 50-yard-line as Chuck Male kicked four field goals to beat the Wolverines, 12-10, in Michigan Stadium. A year later, I was sitting in the endzone of Notre Dame Stadium when Harry Oliver's 51-yarder gave the Irish a 29-27 victory as time ran out. For some reason, it just felt right.

But still I dreamed of more. I dreamed of someday being a student at Notre Dame and roadtripping to Michigan for an Irish football game.

Now that the opportunity has arrived, I can't help but think back on all that I have come to believe about Notre Dame football. A lot of the romance is gone, but that is understandable. It's hard to romanticize about people you see all the time on campus.

I have come to know the players and coaches of the Notre Dame football team, and I certainly know many of the fans. One thing that hasn't changed, though, is the belief that the Irish have class.

There have been times when I've been disappointed, of course. Like when I saw a Notre Dame player take a cheap-shot at an opponent out-of-bounds. Or when the students booed the team in Notre Dame Stadium. But I still cannot get rid of the snobbish God-Made-Notre-Dame-Number-One attitude that was drilled into me as a child. And I don't want to, either.

Hundreds of Notre Dame students, like myself, will be going to Ann Arbor this weekend with exactly the same attitude. Many of them, like me, do not even have tickets, so they may be watching the game on a television screen in a bar. For all of us, there will be many temptations.

With relative anonymity, we will be set loose in a "real" college town, with bars, pizza places and fraternity houses. There will be no parietals and no alcohol policies. But still, we will not be entirely separated from Notre Dame.

Everyone will know we are Domers by the way we dress, the way we talk and especially the way we act. Whether we like it or not, our school, beloved to most of us, will be judged by the behavior of the students who travel to Ann Arbor.

Whether the Irish win or lose on the field, we must remember that we are supposed to be the good guys. We have class. We are ND.

Mom will be so proud.
