Cruise ship hijacked near Egyptian coast; 400 believed on board

Associated Press

PORT SAID, Egypt - Palestinian hijackers seized an Italian cruise liner at sea yesterday with more than 400 people aboard, demanded that Israel release 50 prisoners and threatened to blow up the ship if attacked, officials reported.

Italian Defense Minister Giovanni Spadolini placed the nation's armed forces on alert.

An Italian Foreign Ministry report said 72 Americans were listed as passengers aboard the Achille Lauro.

Hours later, Patrizia Terese, a duty officer at the Foreign Ministry, told The Associated Press that 72 Americans and 20 Britons were among 600 passengers who left the ship in Alexandria for a day-long land tour. That would mean that all of the Americans and Britons listed in the previous ministry report had disembarked; but Terese emphasized that the figures were preliminary, and there still could have been Americans aboard the ship when it was hijacked.

In Washington, State Department spokesman Mike Austrian said the U.S. embassy in Cairo was trying to locate the cruise organizers to find out how many Americans left the ship to visit Cairo and the nearby pyramids.

Egyptian officials said the Achille Lauro had left Alexandria and was approximately 30 miles west of Port Said, its next destination, when it was commandeered by an undetermined number of hijackers and headed farther out into the Mediterranean, its destination unknown.

Word of the takeover came in a ship-to-shore radio report by the hijackers' leader to Port Said at about 9:30 p.m. - 3:30 p.m. EST. The guerrilla said the hijackers were members of the Palestine Liberation Front, a dissident faction of the Palestine Liberation Organization.

Many of the passengers who left the Achille Lauro in Alexandria had been scheduled to rejoin the cruise at Port Said, the northern entrance to the Suez Canal and 150 miles east of Alexandria. The vessel then was to continue on to Ashdod on Israel's west coast before heading for Naples.

The threat to blow up the vessel came from the hijackers' leader, identified only by the name Omar, according to the Port Said officials.

A Palestinian named Samir Konahterry headed the list of prisoners the hijackers said were being held in Israel and whose freedom was demanded in exchange

Balanced budget plan deadlocked

Associated Press

WASHINGTON - While the government lived hand-to-mouth without credit in what President Reagan called an "emergency situation," the Senate tried again yesterday to break its deadlock over a balanced-budget plan that has stalled legislation to increase federal borrowing authority.

"We have to do something," said Senate Majority Leader Robert Dole, R-Kan. But there was no indication of a quick end to the tangle that kept the Senate in session over the weekend and delayed action on increasing the national debt limit to a landmark $2 trillion.

At the White House, Reagan urged a gathering of Republican supporters to work for passage of the plan to set statutory limits on federal budget deficits in order to achieve a balanced budget by 1991.

"That's one proposal that is worth fighting for," Reagan said in his fifth pitch in four days for the plan.

He also complained that the proposal was "being held hostage for wrangling over the debt ceiling, putting the federal government in an emergency situation. The business of our nation must go forward. We need the debt ceiling increase passed."

Despite Reagan's warning, the government operated normally yesterday.

However, John Niehenke, acting assistant Treasury secretary for domestic finance, said the government had a cash balance of $6.2 billion at the close of business Friday and that this was likely to be exhausted yesterday.

Deputy Treasury Secretary Richard Darman sent Dole a letter - one of a series from the Treasury Department pleading for action on the debt limit - saying that when the government till becomes empty, "It is my understanding that, upon such notification, the Federal Reserve will then have to notify the banking system not to honor any government checks or electronic fund transfers."

The Reagan administration has requested an increase in the national debt limit from its current $1.824 trillion to $2.078 trillion.

The House increased the debt limit on Aug. 1 as part of the budget

Senate debates Adworks computer

By CHRIS BEDNARSKI
Senior Staff Reporter

Although the University has a laser printer available for student use, the Student Senate debated the possible purchase of a $7,500 computer system for the Adworks advertising agency at last night's meeting.

The proposed computer system has a laser printer capable of doing typesetting work. This could do the work that student government now must contract off campus for, Student Body President Bill Healy said.

Cabinet member Mike Jaeger said the University has a laser printer of its own, open for student use.

Healy said the University's printer is too heavily used for Adworks purpose. "There's a long line to use it, it," he said. "If you step out of line you lose your turn."

Junior Class President Jim Domagalski said he didn't believe the proposed laser printer could typeset as well as a professional's.

"There is no comparison with what a professional can do and what the laser printer does," Domagalski said. He added that his MacIntosh computer does work comparable to the proposed laser printer.

But Healy disagreed with Domagalski. "When its fully set in place it can do a very good job," he said.

The question of where funding for such a system would come from also was discussed. "We have a $15,000 contingency fund set up for any circumstances. The money could come from that," said Student Body

Treasurer Eric Parzianello.

Healy said he wasn't required to bring the matter of funding the project before the senate. He said, however, "I feel it should come before the senate for discussion."

Off Campus Senator Jim Hagan asked Healy if he would let the senate decide on the funding then. "I didn't say that," said Healy.

The future of the Adworks agency, a branch of Healy's cabinet that does advertising work for student organizations on campus, also was discussed.

"The eventual goal of Adworks is to be independent of student government," said Healy.

Domagalski disagreed with Healy.

SMC plans Hurley aid

By KIMBERLY TRENNER
Senior Staff Reporter

"We would like to propose a benefit to help aid Kevin Hurley's parents with medical support," said Elisa Cullina at last night's Saint Mary's Board of Governance meeting.

Cullina, a resident assistant from McCandless Hall, asked the board to support her and others involved in their efforts to sponsor a fundraiser. The board agreed to help organize the fundraiser in any way possible.

"We would like lots of students to get involved," said Cullina. Concerned students and faculty from both Saint Mary's and Notre Dame are planning a possible costume dance, tentatively set for Nov. 1, she said.

In other matters, the American College Union's International Conference, held at Saint Mary's this past weekend, appears to have been a success, said Anne Marie Kollman, Saint Mary's student body president.

"It was a lot of fun. We think people left with a very good feeling about Saint Mary's," said Kollman. At the conference, student leaders from other colleges around the country gathered to exchange ideas and sharpen leadership skills, she said.

In other business, it was announced that Cathy Rigby was unable to speak at the O'Laughlin Theater last night because of a last minute television engagement. Rigby will be coming to Saint Mary's at a future date.

Also announced at the meeting was the board's plans for a Gripe Night on Tuesday, Oct. 15, from 7 p.m. until 9 p.m. Six phones in Haggard College Center will be open for students to air their complaints.

It was also announced last night that the board will sponsor a movie night tomorrow in Carroll Hall. At 7 p.m., "Raiders of the Lost Ark," will be shown, and "Indiana Jones and the Temple of Doom," will be shown at 9:15 p.m.

In Brief

Potential AIDS victims will not automatically be denied insurance coverage because they are men belonging to the high-risk group, an insurance company spokesman said yesterday. But unmarried men between the ages of 20 and 49 living in cities with high numbers of AIDS victims will be questioned more closely and may pay higher premiums, said Bill Forsythe of Lincoln National Corporation. The corporation is the holding company for Lincoln National Life Insurance Co., which suggested underwriters use marital status, "lifestyle, habits, or medical history" to identify potential victims of the disease, the Dallas Times Herald reported. In a letter sent to underwriters in July, the company also discussed the value of an AIDS virus screening test to reduce the insurance risk. Applicants with diagnosed AIDS, like those with diagnosed cancer or heart disease, would be denied coverage, he said. -AP

Doses of steroids appear to protect young victims of cystic fibrosis from lung damage, the single greatest cause of illness and death in this common inherited disease, researchers say. The study, conducted at Harvard University and Children's Hospital in Boston, showed that children who took the drug had healthier lungs and spent less time in the hospital than did a comparison group. After four years, "we felt we had to stop the study, because it was becoming so obvious that the steroid group was better. We felt we needed to open it up and let people know," said Dr. Harvey Auerbach, who directed the study. Steroids reduce inflammation, but they can cause serious side effects. The researchers said they do not recommend the drugs for routine use in cystic fibrosis until their findings are confirmed by a larger study. -AP

Some students don't make grade in handling pressure of college life

"Don't hurry, don't worry. You're only here for a short visit. So be sure to stop and smell the flowers."
Walter C. Hagen (1892-1969)
The New York Times, May 22, 1977

Margie Kersten

Assistant Saint Mary's Editor

Do grades get in the way of an education?

There is a difference between a person who genuinely wants to learn, who has a goal in mind and is serious about reaching it, and the person who will do anything to "get the 'A.'"

The latter is the cutthroat: Someone who accidentally erases another's computer program, clumsily knocks over another's chemistry solution, or mistakenly spills coffee on another's 15-page history paper.

Competition among students encompasses the Saint Mary's and Notre Dame campuses, creating the utmost pressure. This competitive attitude can force students into a survival-of-the-fittest mentality.

The same sense of competition that prompts students to do their best, however, can be unhealthy.

A cutthroat sets out to stop the competition and to hurt another person's chances. He thinks his study philosophy should be the norm for the entire student body. If he goes to the library, so should you.

Because of the cutthroat's influence, he can harm his own identity as well as another's. Whether it is study habits, social life, extra-curricular activities or even romantic interest, the cutthroat seems to emphasize what he wants to do.

Saint Mary's and Notre Dame offer programs to assist students such as these to guide them if they feel pressured. In addition, both schools offer programs to help students in their career choices.

Counseling and Career Development is a center at Saint Mary's offering many programs for students. Study skills, time management, test-taking techniques, and personal problems can be dealt with at the center.

The director of the center, Mary DePauw, said, "We try to be very sensitive to the time demands on students and to package quality educational programs with that in mind."

Students need to "cherish individual differences, and begin again to have joy in one another's successes," DePauw added. While stressing the necessity of a healthy balance in one's life, DePauw said the center is available to help students cope with everything from career decisions to personal problems.

Notre Dame also offers assistance at the Counseling and Psychological Services Center. Individual and group counseling is available to students, according to Mary Raeker, who is a graduate student in psychology at Notre Dame. Raeker works at the center as a psychology trainee and is in charge of the Counselline, which is open to students Monday through Friday from 4 p.m. until midnight.

Students can call anonymously and request a variety of tapes including, "Coping with Stress," "How to Handle Fears," "Building Self Esteem and Confidence,"

"Learning to Accept Yourself," and "Anxiety and Possible Ways to Deal With It."

Possibly one of the most important factors for effective study is time management and study skills. If a person masters these, he will be able to increase his perceptive skills and broaden his interests.

Through the programs offered at Saint Mary's and Notre Dame, then, students can advance their own skills and re-examine their personal identity.

Grades are a personal choice. A negative attitude towards competition can be created by the cutthroat student, and other students could lose their identities by trying to live up to another student's expectations. If you want the 'A,' go for it.

But if the 'B' would satisfy you and give you a few extra hours to yourself, or time spent in other activities like taking walks, talking with friends, and sincerely trying to get to know people - that's what is important.

A well-rounded student who can get along with others, articulate his own opinion and adapt to social and work situations, will succeed. It is not necessary to spend 99 percent of the day in the library.

Yes, grades could get in the way of an education. But only if you let them. If you take the time to be with others and stop and smell the roses, your education will be enhanced.

Overhaul of Scholastic produces betterments in magazine operation

By WENDY P. CALLAHAN
News Staff

A change for the better could be the Scholastic's theme this year.

Because the magazine for Notre Dame and Saint Mary's "was not getting through to students last year," changes have been made this year in Scholastic's content, production and business practices, according to Jim Basile, Scholastic editor-in-chief.

The changes in content this year include articles "more relevant to the student but at the same time raise important issues," said Basile.

Financial aid and a guide to Chicago have been the core of the first two issues of the Scholastic published this year. In future issues, the Scholastic will explore such topics as minority students and the state of the Notre Dame business school, he said.

The magazine's format this year allows students to glance quickly through the magazine and pick out those articles that interest them, Basile said.

"There is something for everyone," Basile added, referring to Scholastic's articles, editorials and calendar which lists campus events for the upcoming two weeks.

The change in production primarily involved the purchase of a $15,000 typesetter, he said. Formerly, the Scholastic sent its articles to the Ave Maria Press to be typeset, which was both more costly and more time consuming than with the new typesetter, Basile said.

The new typesetter has cut production time by approximately two weeks, enabling the Scholastic to publish twice a month, said Basile. Last year the Scholastic published three times per semester, he said.

Most of the cost of the typesetter was paid with the excess funds in the 1984-85 budget, Basile said. A University loan provided the rest of the cost, he added.

Scholastic will pay off the loan in approximately two years with the leftover funds in its budget and advertising income, Basile said.

Scholastic's business practices also have been improved, according to Basile. All business operations have been "tightened up," he said, referring to the magazine's lower costs and more efficient procedures this year.

More people are working for Scholastic this year, Basile said. This year's staff, which now numbers approximately 30 people, is triple the size of last year's staff, Basile said.

All these changes, according to Basile, will lead to Scholastic's "goal of being a competitive and important part of Notre Dame."

Controversial 'Hail Mary' debuts

Associated Press

NEW YORK - "Hail Mary," the film which was hounded out of Rome by a wrathful pope, made its U.S. debut yesterday amid fresh protests by Roman Catholics who cannot envision the Blessed Virgin as a nude starlet.

Cardinal John O'Connor denounced the film as "blasphemous and sacrilegious," and demonstrations were planned at Lincoln Center during yesterday evening's premiere at the 23rd New York Film Festival.

"We believe in some sort of decency and decorum in dealing with matters religious. There is obscene language being used, and obscene scenes," said John Puthenveetil, executive director of the Greater New York chapter of the Catholic League for Religious and Civil Rights, which coordinated the protests.

In Jean-Luc Godard's film, Mary is an avid basketball player who works at a gas station; Joseph is a dreamy and frustrated cabdriver; Gabriel an unshaven, unsavory-looking angel who travels by jet. Mary, played by Myriem Roussel, is nude in several scenes, but there is no sex.

As in the Biblical story, Mary is a pregnant virgin, and Godard focuses on the struggles of Mary and Joseph to come to terms with divine insemination. The film takes little interest in the child.

At one point, Gabriel and a little girl angel tell Joseph that he must have trust. "And love, you jerk!" Gabriel adds, slapping Joseph hard.

The story of Mary, Godard said at a news conference after Friday's screening, happens every day. Every man must take his wife's word about her child's paternity. "Every man must trust his wife," he said.

Yet not every woman learns of her pregnancy from an angel, the distinction which makes the film so controversial.

The film has been praised by some Catholics and won a prize from the International Catholic Cinema Office at the Berlin Film Festival this year, but Puthenveetil said that anyone who takes the film as a sincerely religious statement "doesn't understand the story."

Promising further, unspecified action against the film when it opens its theatrical run in New York tomorrow, he said, "I think Catholics too often have been silent. I think it is time we proved we are not political pygmies."

"I can't see letting (Adworks) go," Domagalski said. "Why give them $7,500 for the system and then have them charge us (for their work)?"

"Let them make money from someone else," he said, "while we use it at no cost."

District Senator Chris Abood agreed with Domagalski. "Why should we spend $7,000 to set them up and then let them become autonomous?" Abood asked.

No final action was taken at the meeting.

The possibility of excess money in the Student Activities fund also was discussed by the senate. "We budgeted for 7000 (students) and got money for 7331," said Parzianello.

All Notre Dame students pay a $35 Student Activities fee that goes into the Student Activities fund.

"We are guaranteed about $5,000 of the extra $11,000," said Parzianello. "The rest can be withdrawn by the registrar as students withdraw in the first or second semester," he said. "We will have the exact amount in February."

"I think we should postpone this until February when it becomes available," said Domagalski. "(Vice President for Student Affairs) Father (David) Tyson said none of the money will be released until February."

232 British police injured in rioting

Associated Press

LONDON - Police threatened yesterday to use tear gas and plastic bullets against street rioters, after some of the worst urban violence in Britain since 1981. One policeman was stabbed to death and 232 fellow officers were injured.

Twenty civilians also were hurt when more than 500 youths, some armed with shotguns, machetes and staves, battled police Sunday night and early yesterday in the racially mixed north London district of Tottenham.

Police Commissioner Sir Kenneth Newman told a news conference the riot - the fourth major outbreak of urban violence in Britain in a month - was the first in mainland Britain in modern times in which guns were used and a police officer was killed.

Newman said he sent tactical squad officers armed with plastic bullets and tear gas to the scene at the height of the violence but the riot was contained without using them.

"But I wish to put all people of London on notice that I will not shrink from such a decision should I believe it a practical option for restoring peace and preventing crime and injury," he warned.

British police have never used plastic bullets in riots outside Northern Ireland, and tear gas has not been used since the 1981 disturbance in the Toxteth district of Liverpool.

Except for Northern Ireland, where all police patrols are armed, police in Britain traditionally carry only night sticks and go into riots protected by body-length plastic shields.

Home Secretary Douglas Hurd, the Cabinet official in charge of the police, said he fully supported the use of plastic bullets "if police find themselves being attacked by petrol bombs."

The rioters, blacks and whites, appeared to be aiming at police, whom they blamed for the death of Cynthia Jarrett, a 49-year-old black woman who collapsed and died of an apparent heart attack during a police search of her home on Saturday night.

Newman said Patrolman Keith Henry Blakelock, a 40-year-old father of three, "was savagely murdered" during an attack by about 100 youths wielding machetes, knives and an axe. Police yesterday recovered a knife found near the scene of the attack.

Scotland Yard said 69 injured policemen were treated at hospitals and 163 were treated at the scene for less serious injuries. Five were reported in serious condition, including one officer who was hit on the head by a slab of concrete and was suffering from kidney failure.

Seven people, including two policemen and four journalists, suffered shotgun wounds and one civilian suffered serious stab wounds.

Rioting in 20 towns and cities in 1981 injured hundreds of police and rioters, caused millions of dollars in damage and led to 4,000 arrests. In the past month, riots have swept Birmingham, where two Asian brothers were killed, and London's Brixton district. There also was serious unrest in Liverpool.

Bernie Grant, the black leader of Haringey Council, which covers Tottenham, said the police treatment of Jarrett was an "atrocious action" and said it caused the Tottenham rioting.

Police have refused to comment beyond an initial statement that said when Jarrett collapsed, the officers "were physically shoved out of the house." They were later allowed back in to administer mouth-to-mouth resuscitation, but the effort to revive the woman failed, the statement said.

United States reverses view of World Court authority

Associated Press

WASHINGTON - The United States, reversing almost four decades of policy, announced yesterday it would limit U.S. recognition of decisions by the World Court, which is hearing Nicaraguan charges that America illegally is supporting anti-government rebels.

"Our experience with compulsory jurisdiction has been deeply disappointing," the State Department said in a statement. It accused the Soviet Union and Cuba of using the court as "a political weapon."

The action, approved by President Reagan, reverses 39 years of U.S. policy and takes effect in six months. Formal notice was given to U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar.

The State Department's statement, read by spokesman Charles Redman, said Reagan concluded that continuing to accept the court's compulsory jurisdiction "would endanger our vital national interests."

"We believe that the Nicaraguans are supported by Cuba and the Soviet Union," Abraham Sofaer, the State Department's legal adviser, said later at a news briefing. "We believe that the Nicaraguan effort to export revolution is a part of a general effort by Communist regimes to take over and undermine democracies."

Sofaer said the charges brought by Nicaragua to the World Court should have been taken to the U.N. Security Council; the Contadora group - Mexico, Venezuela, Panama and Colombia - that is dealing with Central American problems; or to another forum. But he said the case did not belong in the World Court.

Paul Reichler, a lawyer for Nicaragua in the Court case, called the U.S. action "an outrage." He said the administration had demonstrated "contempt" for international law.

The Court ruled "that this is a legal dispute, raising fundamental questions under the U.N. charter," Reichler said.

for the ship and passengers, the officials reported.

In Tel Aviv, a spokesman said the Foreign Ministry was in close contact with Italian officials and the Israeli Cabinet was being summoned for a meeting this morning.

Other Israeli officials said Konaiterry was one of four Palestinians who landed on the Israeli coast at Nahariya on April 22, 1979, and seized Dani Haran and his five-year-old daughter as hostages. The hostages were killed as Israeli soldiers closed in; two guerrillas were slain in a gunfight and the other two captured.

It was not known how the hijackers took control of the ship, which had been scheduled to dock in Port Said at 9 p.m. (3 p.m. EST).

Italian news agencies quoted the Foreign Ministry as saying the hijackers were armed and had a large supply of explosives with which to blow up the ship.

There were conflicting estimates on the number of hostages aboard the ship.

An Italian official involved in the crisis command said there were 340 crew members and "about 60 to 80 passengers aboard the ship."

"The passengers seem to be treated well on the basis of what we've learned from Egyptian authorities" who were in radio contact with the ship, the official added.

"We don't know how it happened," he said. "The crew apparently was disabled, but we don't know if the hijackers boarded in Alexandria or from the sea."

Egyptian officials said they believed there were 160 passengers aboard the ship when it was commandeered.

Port officials in Naples said the ship originally carried 840 passengers, including approximately 300 West Germans, 160 Italians, 120 Britons and others from France, Spain and the United States.

We are spirits in the electric world

features writer

Remember those Ronco commercials on television before and after every episode of "Gilligan's Island?" "All this for only $19.95. But that's not all! We'll also include..." were the key words that always caught my attention.

The awe I felt while seeing all those wonderful gadgets I could get by just buying twenty-seven odd-shaped, teflon poached-egg pans is probably similar to what the apostles felt when all those loaves and fishes kept popping up.

That's the same impression one may have when he walks into a student's room and sees the multitude of electric appliances staring him in the face (and hears the humming of those gadgets hidden in strategic places).

First, our visitor spies the stereo and amplifier in the corner and the speakers suspended from the ceiling. On the desk, beside the electric pencil sharpener, oscillating fan, and revolving desk lamp, there is a Macintosh computer just itching to be used. If there's no personal computer, there's an electric typewriter stuffed somewhere near the desk.

As our guest's eye travels around the room, he spies the dining area of the room. Next to the granola bars, cup-of-soups, cookies, Tang, bread and peanut butter stands a refrigerator with a toaster, a hot pot, a hot plate, and a toaster oven atop it. (Makes you wonder if these guys are running their own food sales.)

Getting close to the sink area, the grooming essentials spring up. There's a hair dryer with its cord twisted incredibly out of shape, and the ol' Water Pik without the base to hold the water. In girls' rooms there are curling irons, curling brushes, and hot rollers while guys have electric razors. Some students have electric toothbrushes and many have contact lens cleaners.

So, let's say the average student has an average of three appliances he needs to use in the morning and has only two outlets at his sink. That means he either has two triple outlet converters plugged in so he and his roommate can each have three outlets, or he has his room draped with extension cords. (I motion we have a "most-efficiently decorated room" contest.)

Finally our visitor is offered a seat. He settles down on a brown-plaid Goodwill couch and continues to gaze around the room. He spots a popcorn popper and a blender under a bed and his host informs him the blender is for his high-protein breakfast drink. Next to the bed is another lamp, an alarm clock, and the controller for an electric blanket.

As our guest turns to ask his host how all of these appliances can run on so much electricity at the same time, he sees the television is on.

There's Gilligan smiling as the credits roll when suddenly a voice is heard, "How much would you expect to pay for these thirteen, sturdy, plastic bowls which fit inside each for easy storage?" when suddenly the picture dies. His host checks the set, looks up, and shrugs, "Guess we blew a fuse!"

Going from abroad to South Bend: culture shock at ND

Kathy Martin
features writer

Culture shock is not unusual when visiting a foreign country, but would you expect that when returning to your own campus? As hard as it is to believe, that is what almost every Notre Dame and Saint Mary's foreign studies student feels when he or she arrives back on campus after a year abroad!

The reimmersion into a culture of ten-page papers, football Saturdays, all-nighters, the alcohol policy, SYRs, parietals, and scoping in the dining halls can make just as large a splash as the plunge into a culture abroad. As an Innsbruck returnee, I can vouch that readjustment to campus life, in comparison with the freedom of the year abroad, can be both frustrating and exciting.

The decision whether or not to go abroad is the most difficult one of the freshman year for some. "Should I Stay or Should I Go?" became my theme song. As freshmen, we had just arrived, survived Emil, and made a place for ourselves in the dorms, clubs, and with our groups of friends. It was hard to think about giving up that familiarity we had worked so hard to achieve, only to return to Notre Dame and Saint Mary's as third-year freshmen.

In Austria, I was homesick for the green quads of Notre Dame, my friends, dorm life, the Grotto, even Italian night at South Dining Hall! Most of all, I missed that sense of belonging to a community of peers with common goals, and those familiar sidewalks on campus where I would see the same nameless but always smiling faces every day on the way to classes. Abroad, I discovered things I had taken for granted but couldn't live without: peanut butter, Pop-tarts, American music and dancing. The worst culture shock, though, was waking up to my roommate speaking German - I faked sleep a lot when I didn't understand!

But returning from ten months abroad is just as much of a culture shock as the foreign experience. Dollars and quarters seemed like Monopoly money, and iron steeples of skyscrapers and power towers replaced the cathedral spires to which I had grown so accustomed.

At Notre Dame, students were wearing backpacks on one shoulder, packing in three classes worth of books for the trek to the library, rather than three weeks' clothing and souvenirs for a trip across a continent. I could wear my Notre Dame shirts again without people thinking I was from Paris!

Returning to campus rules and the alcohol policy can seem limiting after a year of total independence. Steve Butman of the Angers program said, "When you go away and come back, you realize that Notre Dame has authority in more areas of your life than you thought. Without Notre Dame and your parents, you have to make your own decisions, control your own life. Europeans tend to be more accepting and open. You can do or be anything you want to."

Diane Emard, also of the Angers program, called the social life here at Notre Dame "stifling." She said, "It wasn't hard to make a social life in Europe. You just went out and there it was. It wasn't the same thing every weekend, either. You were like one person in a crowd, and nobody knew you, so there were challenges and adventure."

Alise Moretti, a returnee from Mexico City, said she has become "more mellow without the cosmopolitan atmosphere of Mexico City." But she also said that the noise and tension of Mexico City made her appreciate the beauty of the Notre Dame campus. "It's so quiet here, and you can see the stars. I forgot all about it until I got back here."

The culture shock of returning to America is even greater for some participants in the Japan program, like Leo Scheibelhut. "Some of what I learned last year just doesn't fit in with society here. I have to put it away, save it for the next time I go back. It's almost like I've developed two sides of my personality."

Most returnees said they grew up a lot last year. "I learned as much in one year abroad as I could have in four years here," said Wendy Noble of the Saint Mary's Rome program. "I learned another language and how to get along in any foreign situation. I learned so much about myself and my limitations, but we're treated like children here." Jodie Githens of the 1983-1984 Angers program also remarked, "We had a lot of responsibility. We were sent abroad as ambassadors of America, but brought back and treated like children."

Some returnees opt to move off campus to make the readjustment easier. Innsbrucker Xavier Zang said, "I still have the freedom I had abroad. I can come and go when I want and I got used to cooking for myself last year. This way, I'm far enough away from school to relax."

The long-awaited reunion with close friends is probably the smoothest transition for most. Although some students feel that they don't fit in with new groups of friends, don't know many people, and stay close with their fellow returnees, most agree that roommates and close friends have welcomed them back with open arms and interested questions. "No matter how integrated you are into a culture abroad," said Moretti, "you need those friends who really understand you. It's uncomfortable being so conspicuous abroad. 'There's the American,' they all say."

Almost a whole quarter of the school year is over, and I guess our readjustment should be about complete. My memories of the year abroad are tucked away safely, but I still find myself reaching for my photo albums and journals quite often, trying to integrate what I've experienced and become in my life at Notre Dame. I may not be enjoying the Austrian Alps in my backyard anymore, but there's still no place like home.

United States supports Israel's state terrorism

People who do not understand the situation in Israel are very unlikely to approve of whatever Israel does because of the existence of powerful propaganda, especially in this country.

Khalil Mrabet

guest column

As we all know, Israel conducted a so-called "retaliatory" action, according to the Israelis and their supporters, against the Palestine Liberation Organization headquarters in Tunisia. Tunisia is a sovereign Arab country which believes the Palestinians, like all other people, have the right to exist in their homeland and have the right to self-determination.

The Israelis' act of terrorism is a very important issue in international politics. The action itself is to be condemned by every nation which believes in international law and respects other nations' sovereignty, including what they believe to be right or wrong.

Influencing people's ideas or imposing certain issues on them by acting against what all nations agreed on, just because you are militarily more powerful, is the pure definition of imperialism.

The problem, however, is that the United States, one of the two superpowers to be sitting on the table of discussions with the Soviet Union on arms controls, justifies the military act of Israel as an "act of retaliation against terrorism." They should have added "by the worst kind of terrorism."

I call the Israelis' act state terrorism, which usually is accomplished by nations. Small groups always are condemned for carrying out "acts of terrorism," but military countries are not.

If this is the case, then I believe the United States should have an air raid also on all the nuclear reactors in the Soviet Union, since Israel did it in 1981 against Iraq, with the approval of the United States.

This shows how the two superpowers have their hands tied. But Israel can do anything, with or without the blessing of the United States. Israel does not care about the decisions of the United Nations, on what all the countries agree to be wrong. Of course a decision always will be vetoed if it touches a close friend. And as a matter of fact, this has happened several times in the past.

This operation is a slap in the face of peace. The Israelis, feeling the pressure to sit face to face with people they have accused of being terrorists for as long as they are taking their land, took this action to put some barriers in the Middle East peace negotiations.

If they wanted peace they never should do something to disturb the whole world, all the countries who denied the act and especially the Arab world. But their intention is to keep the land occupied in 1947 and 1967 by avoiding any talks with the Palestinians.

It is very difficult to imagine someone who wants peace flying more than 1,500 miles just to retaliate for the assassinations of three people for which the PLO denied all responsibility. I cannot imagine an act of terrorism done by a group of people and not claimed; if this is the case, why did they do it?

Violence brings about more violence. Everyone knows that for every action there is an equal and opposite reaction, but the Tunisians never will respond to terrorism by terrorism, and never will forget. They will defend integrity until the last effort, believing always in the civilized people and the future.

We should learn a lot from the history of civilizations, and never forget the past which is always the foundation of the future. Israel is not invincible, and Lebanon is the proof.

Khalil Mrabet is a graduate student at Notre Dame.

Students responses to global concerns lacking

Unfairness.
Injustice.
Revenge.
These three recurring themes are bleeding much ink into the local media lately.

Barbara Blanchette

with earnest

Open your eyes and really look at the issues. Perhaps the South African crisis is just a bit too heavy to deserve any student opinion in the papers, or at the dining halls. All that rioting and unjustified slaughter is just not worth the thought. The government has the right to discipline its own citizens, like a parent-child relationship, but here the babies are being murdered instead of spanked.

Apartheid is real, and Notre Dame has a certain degree of investment leverage in the economic and political situation in Africa. Perhaps no one needs to get indignant about a situation so far away, but there is an active faction in South Bend sponsoring a protest march on Oct. 12. Take a step in the right direction, people, if you care to show any opinion at all.

Hey, how about those Mexicans? An earthquake just swallowed up their capital city along with more than 4,000 people, nearly half of Notre Dame's population. Several Notre Dame students in the area for a foreign study program now are helping rescue teams cope with the aftermath.

A terrific image for the University, and probably an experience the students never will forget. When is the last time you heard anything: comment, opinion, or speculation about the situation? Mexico is just south of the border, and near and dear to our Naugle-mangled stomachs, but even closer in the thoughts and prayers of many of these students' friends and family.

Let us try something a little more seasonal: football. The spirit with which we cheered the Fighting Irish over Michigan State is waning again. Crowds who wrote impassioned letters and cried in their cups over the loss of kegs at Green Field did enjoy the game, and learned how to drink out of cans.

The Irish's beloved coach, of whom many vocal fans were skeptical, saw strong support. After his loss to Purdue, there was doubt again. To the chagrin of many Observer football gurus, Notre Dame again has put forth an unpredictable team.

Want a real challenge? Try predicting whose side the Irish fans will be on.

A little closer to home we find that "monstrosity" and "architectural mutant," to quote several dining hall conversations not too far back. Massive construction efforts still are underway on the new Fieldhouse Mall, leveled for the students' enjoyment of a green park-like pathway. It was a hot topic, attracting anger and response from all sides.

Students tried building their own cardboard monuments designed to reduce University costs by 5,000 percent. Some resourceful North Quad students even dug graves near Zahm, and whether they were reacting directly to the monument's presence or not, they showed some initiative and creativity on the part of a large, talented student body.

This seems to have been the last, and most recent student reaction to any University or College policies. Hey, is there anybody out there?

Student reaction comes alive in spurts of energy, some of it at times not really focused on the most important issues in our tiny, and getting tinier, world.

Once hotbeds for social reaction, campuses should be alive with the opinions and statements of fervent young minds. Causing conflict within one's community is destructive, yet refusing to respond to global concerns can lead to other wrongs, like death.

Drunkenness not necessary for drinking pleasure

For all of the drinking that occurs on campus, there is little discussion of the proper etiquette of drinking. As in all social endeavors, there should be an etiquette observed that insures proper sociability and pleasure in a responsible way.

Michael Ialacci

the troubadour

I will offer my own opinions on the matter, not as having all the answers, but as approaching the ultimate truth, but as offering some thoughtful reflections that will cause others to think on the matter as well.

The end, the objectives, in drinking formulate one's entire attitude on the subject. The proper end is crucial for responsible social drinking. The proper end of drinking should be to increase the pleasurable of a social context. It is perfectly acceptable, for example, to drink because one likes the taste, or one wants to be "loose", or one enjoys the fellowship in drinking. Drunkenness is understandable (though not condoned) if, in the course of these ends, one drinks too much.

Drinking with the intention to get drunk, however, is totally unacceptable. First, it is morally irresponsible. A choice of drunkenness is a choice of potential destructiveness and obnoxiousness. It is a choice of dulling one's social, moral and mental faculties. One loses his ability to control his actions. Such a choice, then, is far from acceptable.

Second, drinking to get drunk is not socially amenable. One loses the ability to carry on a conversation, or to dance with any degree of alacrity. One no longer is sensitive to other people's changing emotions, discourse or opinions and cannot properly respond. One does not adequately commingle with people. A choice of drunkenness is effectively a choice of isolation.

Finally, the pleasure derived from drinking grows commensurately less in proportion to the pain as one approaches drunkenness. There is a law of diminishing returns in drinking. The social pleasures of fellowship, conversation, even the general feeling of well-being fade as one approaches drunkenness. Conversely, however, the physical sickness and nausea increase. How enjoyable can drinking be if the inevitable outcome is immolation before the Porcelain God? The choice of drunkenness is hardly a choice for optimum pleasure.

Once establishing an end, the style of drinking must necessarily correspond to it. The style, then, should be relaxed, sociable and moderate. Thus, drinking should occur in a wider social context: within a meal, within a party, within a conversation. It should not be the sole activity to the exclusion of social intercourse. Drinking games, then, are unacceptable because they elevate drinking from its proper social context and make it an activity of its own (whose end is more times than not to get drunk). Beer "chugging" and beer "bongs" are also unacceptable for similar reasons. They divorce drinking from its proper social context, are strenuous and not relaxed, and preclude social intercourse. And again, the end is often to get drunk in the fastest way possible. Drinking should be an ingredient in a healthy social environment, not the means of abandoning such an environment.

I wish to make clear that I am not a teetotaler. I do not disparage drinking in the proper context. I am also not so naive as to think everyone will think about responsible drinking, let alone adopt an etiquette of drinking. I am also not so self-righteous as to claim always to follow the stringency of my etiquette. I understand human failing and weakness. Yet I am firmly convinced we can all follow the spirit of an etiquette even if we occasionally fail. Drinking can be a pleasurable and socially amenable experience if we observe moderation and reason in our enjoyment. We need not get drunk to get the most out of drinking.

Flexibility of Gorbachev outshines Reagan image

The upcoming Geneva summit between the United States and the Soviet Union gives President Reagan a chance to display his remarkable showmanship. But he has a formidable adversary. Mikhail Gorbachev has proven himself quite a propagandist, one who can hold his own against Reagan in the game of gaining friends and influencing the world opinion. What we see is Reagan going into the November meetings a step behind the Soviet leader, or at least that is an opinion widely held by the rest of the world.

Ken Kollman

no easy solutions

The Canadian Globe and Mail says that the "hard-nosed tactics of the Reagan administration have inadvertently reinforced the impression of flexibility created by the Gorbachev leadership." Uno Mas Uno from Mexico City writes "we hope the Reagan-Gorbachev meeting will induce in both - especially in Reagan - the belief that it is possible to halt the arms race..." (emphasis added). India's Economic Times hopes that the summit will "clarify the degree of pragmatism that (Gorbachev) will bring to bear on improving relations with the United States."

There is more. The French Liberation tells us that the "Soviet leader holds the advantage," and Ha'aretz of Israel writes, "There is no sign that President Reagan intends to give in on 'Star Wars'."

Gorbachev has developed an image of the flexible, diplomatic leader while Reagan is seen wallowing in rigid idealism, a man who will not budge on any issue. It is fairly obvious that the Soviets have scored a hefty propaganda victory in the last several months.

Images and world opinion aside, though, is Reagan actually far behind? I do not think so. The President has been trying to minimize the importance of the summit with the hope of deflating expectations. Meanwhile, Gorbachev has been determined to sway Western hearts and minds in his direction and is out on the stump to do so.

Some signs of the lack of Soviet advantage are the several concessions they have made recently. They have given in on "Star Wars," in effect, by agreeing to research programs on missile defense systems as long as tests and development of the weapons in space are not used. And they recently offered a fifty percent reduction in long range and medium range missiles by both superpowers. Although the United States is still looking over the proposals, intuition tells me that Reagan will balk.

The Soviets are flexible precisely because of their disadvantage. While he continually claims "Star Wars" is not a bargaining chip, Reagan uses it as one, and it is working. All of the sudden Gorbachev throws offers on the table, which tells me that there is fear in the minds of the Soviets.

The fear is not necessarily of the U.S. advantage. Consider this quote from Vladimir Lomeyko, spokesman for the Soviet Foreign Ministry, as reported by the German weekly, Die Zeit: "We want to set our house in order. We need time and money to do so. We do not want to spend more on arms."

With Gorbachev's energetic efforts to rejuvenate the Soviet economy, nothing could be more detrimental than a spiraling defense budget. The Geneva talks in November give Gorbachev an opportunity to bargain for reductions in their defense expenditures, and for this reason, the summit may be the single most important factor in determining the degree of recovery by the Soviet economy. If the United States continues to increase its defense budget, Gorbachev feels he must keep pace. However, any mutual reductions would help him in his efforts to improve his country's fiscal health.

Thus, while Gorbachev has played the world press for all its worth, Reagan still holds the real advantage; it is the Soviets who are showing their cards first. This gives the United States time to react and counter to its benefit. So much for world opinion.

P.O. Box Q

Sacrificing character not what ND is about

Dear Editor:

I would like to express my disappointment with a new line of clothing that refers to our football opponents. I do not know who is selling it, but it is very tasteless. I am talking about the shirts and hats which use an obscene word and our opponent's name with the first letter of each word interchanged. To the people who bought them, it would be nicer if you would just throw your money in the trash rather than purchase something of that nature. It is obvious what these oh-so-clever things are saying. It makes you look foolish, but worse, it makes the University look bad. When a visitor, alumnus or anyone else sees you with it on, the sad fact is that they do not see you doing it; instead, they see only a Notre Dame student doing it. You know, that is not how we do things at Notre Dame. We are not perfect, but we are admired by people all around the world because we have the reputation of achieving excellence while maintaining our dignity. We are supposed to be the good people, the people others look to for high moral character, the people others admire - that is why we are special!

I remember a story from a few years ago about a Notre Dame football game. After making a great stop, a freshman Notre Dame defender started to jump up and down and taunt the opponent he had just tackled. Quickly, an older Notre Dame defender pulled him aside and said "We don't do that at Notre Dame." That is what we are all about: trying to be the best we can be and never sacrificing our character.

I urge you not to buy from this merchandise anymore. This stuff is not cool, see what I'm saying? Thanks!

Neither party benefits from overexaggeration

Dear Editor:

I will choose to ignore the fact that the conversation Jean Rozum referred to in her letter of Oct. 3 seemed singularly unlikely or at least out of context, and instead I will take her account at face-value. I must compliment you on your superb way of formulating your opinions. If, in your view, one isolated incident is a sufficient basis for the establishment of a stereotype, then I think you should spend more time worrying about yourself instead of worrying about the image propagated by Saint Mary's women. I will give you an example to illustrate to you why your method is so narrow-minded. During World War II, there was a fascist movement in Northern America (no doubt there still is). Yet the rest of the world did not jump to the conclusion that the United States was a fascist state. But the reasoning in your enlightening letter seems to suggest that in your view, the United States was indeed fascist at that time.

I would agree with you when you say that there are some women at Saint Mary's who are there for the sole purpose of getting hitched to a Dome. So, what else is new? You are, without a doubt, one of the last bastions of sheer naivety left in the world if you seriously believe that such women do not exist at Notre Dame also. May we infer that Notre Dame women need to clean up their image as well? No, we may not. I believe that, if a generalization is called for, both Saint Mary's and Notre Dame women deserve very good images.

As a result of people like you throwing out these red-herrings, both you and many outsiders believe that there is a battle going on between Notre Dame and Saint Mary's. For your information, this is not the case. It is not the women that are here for the purpose of getting married that bring reputations down.

Rather, it is due to people like you who choose to exaggerate so much that these minorities begin to seem like majorities to those who do not know better. I would appreciate it very much if you and people like you would keep your misconceptions to yourselves because they only serve to stir up trouble. Neither establishment will win but both will lose.

Rozum did damage to image of ND women

Dear Editor:

I cannot believe that after four years I am becoming involved in one of the classic battles on the Observer's Viewpoint page. However, I am appalled by Jean Rozum's letter regarding the motivations of the women who attend Saint Mary's College. I will not address the individual points raised in the letter, for I am afraid that my criticism will be too sarcastic. It will suffice to say that such prejudice is awfully petty for an "enlightened" Notre Dame woman.

We could go on for weeks swapping stories that would support the ridiculous stereotypes of the women on both campuses. Yet the fact remains, although a few of these caricatures exist, there are serious, intelligent, generous and beautiful women on both campuses. So let us all rejoice in the fact that we are lucky enough to be members of the Saint Mary's-Notre Dame Community. There are far too many important and productive things to be done for us to waste our time in meaningless and damaging competition.

Rozum, clean up your own act! You have made far too many Notre Dame women "aware of the damages (their) own college residents are doing to (their) reputation."

Blue Jays face Kansas City tonight as major league playoffs begin

Associated Press

TORONTO - The Toronto Blue Jays, favored to bring the first World Series to Canada, can take their first step in that direction tonight when they meet the Kansas City Royals in the first game of the American League playoffs.

"I'm sure everyone will be a little jittery," said Dave Stieb, who will start the best-of-seven opener for the Blue Jays. "I'm going to try not to overthrow. But I'm sure I'll do that in the first inning."

Toronto, an expansion team formed nine seasons ago, is making its first-ever appearance in the postseason. Despite winning the strong AL east with 99 victories, the Blue Jays are not one of the more well-known teams in baseball.

"You ask anyone who the center fielder for the Blue Jays is and they don't know. They might say Willie Mays," said Toronto center fielder Lloyd Moseby, who hit 18 homers, stole 37 bases and is strong defensively.

"I've played here six years and that's always been the way it is, that no one knows us," he said. "Now, it'll all turnaround. I'm not sure I really want that."

The 8:35 p.m. EDT game will also showcase the best platoon in the game - Rance Mulliniks and Garth Iorg at third base for the Blue Jays.

The unheralded pair combined for 17 homers and 93 RBI, with lefty Mulliniks hitting .295 and Iorg batting .314.

"We don't have anyone of the stature of Dave Winfield," Mulliniks said. "What we have is a lot of all-around people who can play the game."

Kansas City Manager Dick Howser said he's well aware of how good the Blue Jays are.

"They're a little late getting here," he said with a smile. "I picked 'em three or four years ago. We knew this was coming."

Howser and his Royals also both have something to show. Howser has an 0-9 record in postseason games, while Kansas City is making its sixth appearance in the playoffs - but has reached the World Series only once.

"I think this series is pretty even,"

Howser said, although the oddsmakers have rated the Blue Jays as slight favorites.

The Royals won the season series from Toronto seven games to five. A Kansas City victory in the playoffs would mark just the second time since 1974 that the AL west team has won, with Kansas City having won in 1980.

Both teams like the best-of-seven format, expanded from the previous best-of-five.

"I think it's a better test of baseball," Howser said. "I wish it was even longer."

"It used to be that if you lost two of the first three, you were in real trouble," Mulliniks said. "Now, if that happens, you're still not in good shape but you have time to come back."

Both teams rely on their pitching, and that appears to be the key area to watch. Toronto led the league in earned run average and Kansas City was second.

Stieb's 2.48 ERA was best in the AL, although he finished with a 14-13 record. Leibbrandt, at 17-9, was second in the league with a 2.69 ERA.

Tisdale stays away from Pacer camp

Associated Press

NORMAN, Okla. - Although he is missing preseason practices and exhibition games with the Indiana Pacers, former University of Oklahoma basketball star Wayman Tisdale thinks he is in basketball shape.

Tisdale, picked second in last year's National Basketball Association college draft, has not signed a contract with the team although the two sides are reported close on an agreement. He watched from the stands and from a spot behind the Pacers bench Sunday night as the Pacers defeated the San Francisco Kings 110-94 in an exhibition game in Norman.

"It's just a different type of shape... getting with the team, learning their system and style of play," Tisdale said after the game. "I think it'll take me about a week to get adjusted."

Indiana made Tisdale the second pick overall in last spring's NBA draft behind Georgetown's Patrick Ewing, chosen by the New York Knicks.

Tisdale said the layout has been tough. "It's just one of those things where we have to get business straight first."

His brother, Weldon, is handling the contract talks as Tisdale's agent. After the game, Weldon Tisdale met with Pacers co-owner Herb Simon and Ray Compton, the team's vice-president of operations.

"He knows what he's looking for in the wording of the contract and the business part of it," Tisdale, a three-time All-American, said of his brother. "I'm leaving it up to him. That's why I hired him."

Tisdale said he was ready to get with the team. "That's what I want to do. Hopefully, they're going to accomplish something."

Tisdale said the apparent progress made Sunday "is mainly because the owners are ready to get something done. Everybody's ready to get this thing over with. One night I'm thinking I'm going to get signed and the next day I'm not even close."

He said he doesn't think the negotiations will last into the season. "I think it will be this week - hopefully," Tisdale said.

SMC soccer wins one, loses one

By ANDREA LAFRENIERE
Sports Writer

The Saint Mary's varsity soccer team beat the Wheaton College women's soccer club 5-2 Saturday at Angela Field, but lost to the University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee women's varsity soccer team Sunday at Milwaukee by a score of 6-2.

The Belles, whose record now stands at 2-7, played an aggressive game against Wheaton, particularly in the first half, when the team scored four of its five goals.

Head Coach John Akers said he was quite satisfied with the Belles' performance.

"It was a pleasant surprise to find us put in four goals in the first half," he said. "It's been awhile in having that happen for us. I was pleased, and I think the whole team was pleased with the way we played."

Beth Hallinan, a sophomore, started the action at the goal after about seven minutes of play, scoring for the Belles off an assist by junior Mary Anne Perri. Sophomore Karen Chandler made it 2-0 for the team minutes later. Chandler was assisted by senior Katy Boldt in the play.

Wheaton's goalie gave the Belles a third scoring opportunity when, after making a save, she punted the ball to the Belles' Ellen Boyle, a freshman, who kicked it in for a goal.

Junior Ann Nora Ehret put the Belles ahead 4-0 toward the end of the first half, scoring on a penalty kick.

Freshman Theresa Harrington scored the Belles' fifth and final goal of the game minutes into the second half of the game.

Wheaton scored two goals toward the middle of the second half, but were not able to overcome the Belles.

Saint Mary's did not fare as well Sunday in their game against the University of Wisconsin, whose varsity team includes scholarship players.

Seniors Katy Boldt and Sue Schierl scored two goals for the Belles, but their efforts were not enough to stop the host team, which, according to Akers, is the strongest team the Belles have faced this year.

The Belles next game is Saturday at 1 p.m. against Calvin College, located in Grand Rapids, Mich.

Akers was hesitant to offer any predictions about the outcome of the game.

"It's really difficult to say how the game will go," he said. "We played Calvin last spring at a Notre Dame tournament, and we lost to them in a close match. We'll be looking to turn that around this year," he said.

In one way, Faust is no different than previous Notre Dame coaches

Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS - Gerry Faust, like Dan Devine before him, was greeted with rumbles of dissatisfaction almost as soon as he arrived under Notre Dame's famed Golden Dome.

As successor to a line of coaching legends from Knute Rockne to Ara Parseghian, Faust wears the fragile mantle that goes with college football's most visible and pressure-packed job.

The quiet and outwardly colorless Devine, who labored earlier in the awesome shadow of Vince Lombardi as coach of the Green Bay Packers, never won the affection of Notre Dame's rabid fans. But he lasted six years because he won 53 games and a national championship.

Faust, whose outgoing personality was a big factor in his selection as Devine's replacement four years ago, has always been well-liked, but he hasn't been a big winner. And at Notre Dame, that is unforgivable.

The Irish, 25-20-1 in Faust's first four seasons, are 1-3 this year, with losses on the road at Michigan, Purdue and Air Force and a victory at home against Michigan State. Each loss has brought more criticism and has increased the rumors that Faust is on his way out.

The University, however, states firmly it will honor the rest of his contract.

"We've said before the season we wouldn't comment on it, and we still won't," Notre Dame Athletic Director Gene Corrigan said yesterday, referring to Faust's status. "Gerry's our football coach, and that's it."

"Obviously, it does bother us," Corrigan said of the rumors and criticism. "But there's no sense in commenting on it. There's nothing I can say."

What will happen when the season ends is another matter, and Corrigan said the situation "surely" will be evaluated at that time.

Faust was a successful high school coach whose dynasty at Cincinnati Moeller produced a 174-17-2 record in 18 years. The last time Notre Dame took its coach from the high school ranks was in 1954, when the Irish went with Terry Brennan. Brennan had records of 9-1 and 8-2 in his first two seasons but dipped to 2-8 in 1956 and began feeling the heat.

He lasted two more years before he was replaced. His 32-18 record would be more than respectable at most colleges.

Faust came in 1981 after Notre Dame went 9-2-1 in Devine's final season. He won his first game but lost four of the next six and finished with a 5-6 record, Notre Dame's first losing season since 1963.

"I don't care where you are, you're going to be criticized," Parseghian said yesterday in defense of Faust. "I was criticized when I was winning - I didn't win big enough, I didn't look good winning. It's the nature of coaching."

"I'm sure Gerry is going through a difficult situation because he's not winning. It's no different if it's Gerry Faust or whoever," Parseghian said. "You go around the country, any town, any high school, any college town, where they're not having success, you're going to find the football coach being criticized. This game, it's amazing to me how many people know so much about football, at least purport to know. And they express it."

Will Faust be back next year?

"All I can tell you is the general rumors before the season. The suggestions were that he has to take Notre Dame to a major bowl game for (a contract) renewal. I can't speak for the administration," said Parseghian. "Whether the rumors have any validity, I'm not qualified to express."

Parseghian, who had a 95-17-4 record in 11 years as Irish coach, said his original contract was for three years.

"At the end of the first year, we were 9-1, losing the last game in the last minute and a half. The University offered me a five-year contract. I served that contract, and at the end, I never asked for another contract. I coached the last five years without a contract. I knew if I couldn't do the job, I didn't want to be around."

Faust, who left on a recruiting trip yesterday and was unavailable for comment, said in an interview when similar rumors began circulating a year ago, "If we win next year (1985), I'd say yes, I'd stay; yes, Notre Dame would keep me. We can't be 6-5. We've got to be 8-3 or 9-2. But I understand that. I don't know if I'd want to stay if we didn't have a good year."

Last week, after a 35-17 loss at Purdue - a game in which the Irish appeared totally disorganized - Faust said, "I haven't given up the ship on the players or the staff. We've been in a similar situation before and you have to rise above it. We're not panicking at this point."

On Saturday, after a 21-15 loss to Air Force, Faust heatedly denied a newspaper story that he had already resigned.

"There is absolutely no truth to the story," he said. "I am still the football coach at Notre Dame. We'll be ready to play against Army (on Oct. 19, after a week off)."

John Heisler, Notre Dame's associate sports information director, contrasted Faust's shaky status in his fifth season with the tenures of both Parseghian and Devine.

"Both had taken their teams to major bowl games and won national championships within their first five years. In those instances, there was no question those coaches would be asked to stay," Heisler said. "If those kinds of things aren't happening, and we haven't been to a major bowl game in five years, then the situation isn't so obvious."

"If you're having a great season, there's no question about it. But this season, that may not be true," he said.

Something still wrong as mistakes continue for Irish

Chuck Freeby

Irish Items

It's still wrong!

No need to mix with the pleasantries of "Hello again, everybody!" because it's still wrong.

Unfortunately, things in the Notre Dame football program haven't changed much since the first game of the season. Notre Dame was making silly mistakes then, and it's still making them now. It was wrong then. It's still wrong!

The list of examples is scary.

•Example No. 1 - Five-yard penalties in crucial situations.

In the Michigan game, Notre Dame's first drive was stalled because of an illegal procedure penalty on third-and-five at the Wolverine nine, and the Irish settled for a field goal. It was wrong.

In the Air Force game, the first Irish possession put the ball on the Falcon five, first-and-10. Notre Dame promptly was whistled for illegal procedure, and the Irish settled for a field goal. It's still wrong.

•Example No. 2 - Play calling. Keith Jackson said it defied his logic. Frank Broyles concurred. The evidence certainly supports their argument.

In the Michigan game, Notre Dame had a third-and-10 at the Wolverine 14 in the first quarter. The Irish ran Allen Pinkett off right tackle for a loss of two. It was wrong.

In the Air Force game, Notre Dame had a third-and-10 at the Falcon 14 in the second quarter. The Irish wouldn't. . . they couldn't. . . they did it again. They ran Pinkett off right tackle for a loss of one. Same play, same result. It's still wrong.

•Example No. 3 - Inability to convert opportunities.

Against Michigan, Notre Dame moved the ball inside the Wolverine 30 five times without scoring a touchdown. The Irish kicked four field goals and came away empty once. It was wrong.

Against Air Force, the Irish moved the ball inside the Falcon 30 six times. Notre Dame scored one touchdown, kicked three field goals, and came away without scoring twice.

That means in 11 possessions inside the opponent's 30, the Irish scored one touchdown and didn't even put points on the board three times. It's little wonder Notre Dame is 6-12-1 under Gerry Faust in games decided by six points or less. It's little wonder because it's still wrong.

•Example No. 4 - Defense.

It's wrong to think the Irish defense did a great job against the wishbone. OK, to their credit, the defense only gave up 13 points to one of the highest scoring offenses in the country. For that they deserve congratulations, and I certainly am happy to offer them.

On the other hand, last year the defense gave up an average of 4.9 yards a play to Air Force for a total of 398 yards. It was wrong.

This year, the defense gave up an average of 5.9 yards a play to the Falcon attack for a total of 412 yards. Hardly an improvement. It's still wrong.

The greatest frustration of all is none of these facts and figures would have really mattered if it weren't for.

•Example No. 5 - Special teams play.

In the Michigan game, Notre Dame fumbled the opening kickoff of the second half, and Michigan took advantage of the mistake by scoring a touchdown. Momentum switched, and the Wolverines went on to win. It was wrong.

In the Air Force game, someone missed a blocking assignment on a John Carney field goal attempt. Air Force blocked the kick and returned it 77 yards for a touchdown. Momentum switched, and the Falcons went on to win. It's still wrong.

Hopefully, the point is obvious by now. As a football team, Notre Dame has appeared to make absolutely no improvement since the first game of the season. The Irish still are making the same bad plays and the same mental errors they did at the beginning of the year. That's a sad commentary on the football situation right now at Notre Dame, and I'm sure it's just as frustrating for the players and coaches as it is for you and me.

Still, there's not much you and I can do about it. The responsibility for improvement starts at the top with Gerry Faust and runs all the way down to the last man on the roster. Fortunately, the Irish have two weeks to work on the situation before they must face an undefeated Army team. Another game with the same problems would just be inexcusable.

If it's still wrong then, drastic measures may be necessary.

Pick of the Week . . . One team that could do no wrong over the weekend was the Notre Dame volleyball team, as it swept three consecutive matches on the road. Now, Notre Dame gets a chance to end a string of 12 consecutive road matches with a pair of matches at the ACC this weekend.

On Friday night, Notre Dame faces a steadily improving Butler squad in a contest beginning at 7:30. Notre Dame is 2-0 in the North Star Conference and would like to continue its winning ways against the Bulldogs.

The Irish return to the court Saturday night to face Illinois State starting at 7:00. The Redbirds were a nationally-ranked team last season, and the Irish are striving for that goal. They could use your support this weekend.

Junior Irish outfielder John Loughbran swings at a pitch in action against Bethel earlier this season. Notre Dame won one game over Illinois State, but lost to Bradley and St. Xavier in games over the weekend at Bradley. Nevertheless, Irish head coach Larry Gallo says that he is happy with the improvement shown by his squad during the fall season. Bill Irvin provides details of the baseball action below.

Baseball team wins once over ISU; loses two other weekend games

"Taking the good with the bad" was the theme for the Notre Dame baseball team this weekend. In action at Bradley University, the Irish scored a thrilling, come-from-behind, 4-1 victory over Illinois State, dropped a 4-1 decision to Bradley, and suffered a 10-2 blowout at the hands of St. Xavier.

The Irish started the action in fine fashion as they battled back to beat ISU in Saturday's opener. The Redbirds tallied the game's initial run in their half of the sixth inning on an Irish error and a pair of singles. Notre Dame countered in its seventh with Scott Rogers' one-out triple and steal of home.

The game then became a scoreless duel until the Notre Dame eleventh, which Rich Vanthournout opened with a single. Tim Hutson sacrificed him to second, and Tom Guilfoile followed with a single. Rogers launched another extra-base hit, a double, and, after Pat O'Brien struck out, Garry Sasse also clouted a two-bagger. In the inning, three runs scored, and Brad Cross came on to record the final three outs of a stellar one-hit, 5 1/3 inning relief performance. Notre Dame took the game, 4-1.

The Irish also hung tough in the second contest on Saturday, but ran into tough pitching in dropping a decision to Bradley. The host team plated a pair of runs in the first inning on a leadoff walk and a home run. That was all Bradley would need in the game, although they scored two insurance runs in the sixth. Pitcher Eric Smithberg made the four runs stand up, as Bradley won it, 4-0.

Not much need be said about Sunday's game, in which St. Xavier capitalized on poor Notre Dame defensive play. St. Xavier pushed across five first-inning runs to sew it up quickly. A leadoff hit-batsman followed by a home run sent the Irish reeling. After a strikeout, the Irish committed a pair of errors. A basehit and another error allowed three more runs to score, and Notre Dame, which never recovered, fell 10-2.

Irish Head Coach Larry Gallo was pleased with Saturday's effort.

"We played well against ISU," he said. "Kevin Chenail pitched well, Brad Cross threw 5 1/3 innings of one-hit ball. Tom Guilfoile got the game-winning hit, and Sasse and Rogers produced with key doubles."

"In the game against Bradley we also played well. We just ran into extremely good pitching from Eric Smithberg. We had opportunities to tie and win, but Smithberg was great."

While lamenting the general performance on Sunday, Gallo praised his "rookie" pitching.

"It was an uphill battle," he said. "We weren't ready to play Sunday. In the first inning it took us six outs to get three. Freshman pitcher Mike Passilla pitched well under alot of adversity."

Gallo expressed guarded optimism for the spring.

"We had tremendous improvement this weekend in outfield play," he said. "For the most part, the pitching was good. The hitting Sunday was not good at all. Craig Pavlina caught well, and Gary Sasse did a fine job. Scott Rogers had a fine weekend also. He improves every week."

"We need alot of improvement, a lot of work. Everyone has had a good look this fall, and all players have had the opportunity to improve themselves either in practice or in a game. These players definitely can play. They need to work hard in the off-season, and go out and play hard in the spring."

SMC announces Kuzmitz will be swimming coach

Nancy Jo Kuzmitz was appointed varsity swim coach at Saint Mary's today by Jo-Ann Nester, director of athletics and recreation.

Kuzmitz has 22 years of competitive swimming experience with the Michiana Marlins and the South Bend YMCA as qualifications. A member of two state championship teams at South Bend John Adams High School, she swam competitively at Indiana State University for two years. She also has taught and coached for five years with the South Bend Recreation Department.

"Nancy Jo brings a very solid competitive background to the position here at Saint Mary's," said Nester. "We are pleased to have her expertise and enthusiasm for our program."
