Revised investment policy approved

By SARAH HAMILTON
Editor-in-Chief

Notre Dame's Board of Trustees has refused to set a deadline for divestment from corporations doing business in South Africa, but instead is requiring them to adhere to a toughened civil rights policy, according to the statement approved Friday.

Any company in which Notre Dame invests now must have signed the Sullivan Principles and adhere to the amplified Sullivan Principles, which demand that companies "take an active part in talking the South African government out of apartheid," said Thomas Carney, board chairman, at a press conference Friday.

The unrevised Sullivan Principles concern treatment of blacks only in the workplace.

Rather than imposing a blanket policy of divestment, the University will consider each corporation individually. "We have made the policy totally flexible," said Carney.

"I don't believe in running away from a fight... and that is what divestment would be."

- Fr. Theodore Hesburgh

"We can make the decision to divest tomorrow," Carney said. "Something horrible can happen," and the University might decide it has to pull out of South Africa, he explained.

The policy recommends "Notre Dame will not invest in any company, lending institution or government if such an investment would support the policy of apartheid."

Examples of such support, described by the policy statement, are selling goods or services to the South African police, military or government.

In addition to its statement regarding corporations, the policy states that Notre Dame will not invest in banks that make loans directly or indirectly to the South African government or its agencies or engage in the sale or trading of South African Krugerrands.

The new policy further states, "Decisions as to further investment or divestment from corporations and banks doing business in South Africa will be made on the basis of both of the above criteria: genuine negotiations and the ending of apartheid."

"We're going to need all the influence we can bring to bear in South Africa," University President Father Theodore Hesburgh said in support of the board's policy.

"The day you divest... you're out of the ball game. We wouldn't have any base from which to operate," Hesburgh said. "I don't believe in running away from a fight," he added, and that is what divestment would be.

Although Notre Dame has divested from 11 corporations doing business in South Africa, the University currently owns stock in 30 such corporations. Carney estimated that 10 percent of the school's total endowment fund is invested in businesses with holdings in South Africa.

The University's Investment Committee unanimously approved the policy and the full board supported that which its Ad Hoc Committee on South African Investments recommended after reviewing the University's policy established in 1978.

John Dettling, a member of the Anti-Apartheid Network, and Director of African Studies A. Peter Walshe, both members of the Ad Hoc Committee, dissented from the committee's final investment policy recommendation because they said it was "seriously inadequate on the central issue of divestment."

In response to the board's decision, Walshe said, "For Notre Dame to encourage corporations to remain in South Africa in these circumstances, is to abdicate moral responsibility. When the dust of repression settles, our endowment funds will remain in the new apartheid with its more flexible institutional racism."

Walshe had recommended that

Students to decide senate future; Healy recall campaign continues

By CHRIS BEDNARSKI
Senior Staff Reporter

A petition requesting the recall of the student body president and vice president is approaching the number of signatures needed for a student referendum while students will vote next week on another referendum calling for the disbandment of the Student Senate.

"We're not out to get Healy. We just have some questions if he can be an effective leader," said Mike Vore, one of the students sponsoring a petition to recall the student body president and vice president.

The petition states that Student Body President Bill Healy and Vice President Duane Lawrence have failed to be responsive to the diversity of student opinion.

Furthermore, the petition states, Healy and Lawrence have failed to operate student government efficiently and to represent student interests in all areas of University life.

Vore said he has approximately 800 signatures so far. The signatures of 1100 students are needed to force a referendum to recall Healy and Lawrence, he said.

Once the necessary signatures are collected, Vore will present the petition to the Student Senate which then would have to act on the petition within two weeks, he said.

"We want someone to represent the people in a more vocal way," said Vore. "We looked at the duties of the president and vice president, and felt they weren't being followed correctly."

"We're just calling for more effective student government," said Susan Yadlon, another student in-

Trustees consider student committee members at meeting

By SARAH HAMILTON
Editor-in-Chief

Students soon could be serving on three of the four committees of Notre Dame's Board of Trustees, as a result of student government's proposal for a student trustee at the Oct. 24 meeting of the board's student affairs committee.

Dr. Martha Peterson, chairwoman of the academic and faculty affairs committee and Frank Sullivan, chairman of the University relations committee have taken the student committee member's proposal back to their committees for final approval. The committees also will discuss the mechanics of selecting such members.

Robert Wilmouth, chairman of the investment committee rejected the idea of a student member because he said it would be more of a learning experience for the individual student rather than a positive source of input for the board.

Student representatives who attend each meeting of the student affairs committee with speaking privileges are members of that committee, according to Anthony Earley, chairman of the student affairs committee.

Student Body President Bill Healy is encouraged by the board's positive reception of student government's proposal. "I think it's fantastic. The way this board is set up, it's a committee board. If we have people on those committees it's a great first step in the right direction," he said yesterday.

Healy said he never had been informed that the student representatives who attended the meetings of the board's student affairs committee were members of that committee. "I knew that I chaired that committee (during the session students attend) but I didn't know we were full members," he said.

If that is the case, Healy said he would like to see the student members included in the rest of the activities of the student affairs committee. The committee meets at least once before and after the session which now includes the students.

Student government's proposal, presented at last Thursday's meeting of the board's student affairs committee, stressed that a student trustee would not represent the student body to the board, rather a student trustee would add another perspective to the governing process at Notre Dame.

"... a student on the Board would be a formal recognition that students do have a right to participate in their governing system, and that, in fact, students are needed in the process. As we have seen with such bodies as the academic council, and the student affairs committee, students can provide important insights into very important issues," the proposal also states.

The major opposition to the proposal was that a student trustee would not be an effective avenue of student input. Those committee members who disagreed with the proposal said a student trustee would not be as effective as the input the student representatives have through the student affairs committee.

Several trustees suggested that the two recent graduate trustees accomplished student government's intended goal. Kathleen Sullivan, a graduate of the class of 1978, and Terrence Keeley, a graduate of the class of 1981, were appointed to the board in 1984 for a three-year term. Sullivan serves on the student affairs committee and Keeley is a mem-

Vince Willis, campus chairperson for Students Against Multiple Sclerosis, appeared on "Good Morning America" this morning in the show's opening faces segment. The show highlighted 150 campus chairpeople waving their school pennants and banners, all on behalf of a national collegiate effort to wipe out multiple sclerosis. The segment was shot in Miami during a leadership seminar sponsored by the National Multiple Sclerosis Society. All 150 campus chairpeople shouted, "From Miami, Good Morning America," in unison, symbolic of the camaraderie that has turned the campaign into what one student called "a movement." - The Observer

Inspiring? That's what today's weather is, according to Dick Addis, WNDU's weatherman. And what exactly is inspiring weather? Partly cloudy skies with highs in the low to mid 60s. For tonight, mostly cloudy skies are expected with lows in the mid to upper 40s. And for tomorrow, cloudy skies also are expected but with a 20-percent chance of rain and highs in the upper 50s to low 60s. - AP

Student government mid-term quiz shows less than flattering marks

OK, now that everyone's back from break, it's time for a quiz:

Student government is (supposed to be):

A. An organization through which students can organize various events and thereby aid the struggling social life on campus.

B. An organization representing student concerns before the administration, Board of Trustees and outside groups.

C. An organization providing good material for a select group of students' resumes, but basically ignored by other students.

If you're turning the page, you obviously picked option C. You're sick and tired of reading about student government.

Go ahead and turn to The Far Side, if you like, but please don't sign the petition now circulating which asks for a recall election. If you don't care what student government does or does not do, a recall election will produce no change.

For those who chose option A or B, you didn't fail the quiz, but your grade can't be established yet. Why? There is no consensus as to what the answer should be.

No one seems to have a clear idea of what student government is supposed to do, least of all many student leaders. And until recently no one seemed to care.

This year's "leaders" were elected on the usual platform of placebos. In a debate last spring, Bill Healy said his number one priority as student body president would be to improve the social life on campus. Obviously, he thought the function of student government leaned toward choice A. He was elected.

Now, halfway through his term, he is being told he is also responsible for option B.

Students rights were trampled upon in the Dillon tailgater incident. Nothing has been done. But student government is looking into it.

Students are upset about apartheid. Student government has not adequately voiced students' complaints in this area, and some would claim it has helped muzzle them.

Suddenly students are looking toward student government as a powerful voice through which they can effect change. They are finding student government has laryngitis.

We cannot blame student leaders for this illness. After all, they thought they were elected to provide a better social life, and rumor has it their victory party was a good time.

POLITICAL LARYNGITIS

Amy Stephan

Managing Editor

It wasn't until the recent leadership conference that our elected officials realized that in order for one to be a leader, one must actually lead.

So after the conference, they took a stab at leading. They marched up to The Observer with a petition to disband the Student Senate, one hour after a senate meeting at which no mention was made of the soon-to-be-descending guillotine.

This attempt was admittedly clumsy and perhaps a bit rash, but let's not be too harsh. After all, this was, for some of them, their first attempt at leading. One cannot expect full-blooming roses to spring from a void. Perhaps their next attempt will be better. Perhaps not.

You could wait patiently for leaders to learn their jobs now that their terms are half over. But if you haven't flipped to The Far Side by now, chances are you won't sit back and wait for student government to recover its voice. Chances are you've come to realize what Notre Dame students historically have not realized; student government belongs to the students and without their support it is powerless.

Many branches of student government are responsible for planning certain social events. But student government's most important duty is one that is unique unto itself; representing student concerns and working to effect necessary change. This is where our student leaders have failed.

Students recently have needed a channel through which they could be heard, and our current leaders have not provided this. So students are actively involving themselves in an attempt to change student government.

Such an infusion of student concern into student government cannot be bad. A recall election either will provide the student body with new, and we hope more effective, student leaders, or force Lawrence and Healy to reaffirm their commitment to the student body.

Either way the students end up with a more effective government, a government that does much more than embellish the resumes of its leaders.

USA Today publisher to visit SMC

Special to The Observer

Cathleen Black, publisher of USA Today, will be executive-in-residence at Saint Mary's Nov. 1.

Black, who joined USA Today as president and became a member of the Gannett Management Committee in 1983, will speak at a luncheon of the College's Business Associates and will lecture to business students.

Black was promoted to USA Today publisher in June, 1984.

USA Today, which hit the presses three years ago with the goal of becoming the nation's only national general interest daily newspaper, is known for its heavy dose of human interest stories, two pages of state-by-state news briefs, a giant sports section, a consumer-oriented business section, and a hard news section that is famous for reducing almost every story to five or six short paragraphs.

Gannett Co., Inc., parent company of USA Today and largest media company in the United States, publishes 87 daily newspapers, including USA Today, and 381 non-dailies.

Gannett also operates six television and 14 radio stations and the largest outdoor advertising company in North America.

USA Today has an operating deficit which the company predicts will approach $350 million. Several publishing and advertising veterans, however, agree that Black has the ability to pull the paper out of the red.

USA Today almost has doubled its advertising revenues in the last year, and is now the number three paper in circulation.

Black joined USA Today from a position as the first woman publisher of a weekly consumer magazine, New York, which she helped turn into a highly profitable publication. A graduate of Trinity College in Washington D.C., she previously served as associate publisher of Ms. magazine.

Also a member of the Advertising Council's Board of Directors, Black recently was selected as The Outstanding Newspaper Executive by

Mazzoli: Students ready for public service

By KATIE CRONIN
News Staff

Congressman Roman Mazzoli was one of the many alumni on campus for the Army football weekend, but instead of spending his Friday afternoon in the bookstore updating his Notre Dame wardrobe, Mazzoli spoke to students about the University's role in preparing them to be public servants.

Mazzoli, a U.S. representative from Kentucky since 1970, described the role of public servant as "demanding, but rewarding," and said he believed Notre Dame students are well prepared socially, intellectually, and morally to play such a role.

Mazzoli, on campus to receive the Rev. John J. Cavanaugh CSC Award, noted that Notre Dame students benefit not only from a strong education, but also from the religious influence and tradition that is unique to the University.

He said the pervasive influence of the Church also is a strong factor in shaping character.

Because the best public servant is the one who bases his decisions on the needs of his fellow man, Mazzoli said the Notre Dame student's experiences and moral and religious attitudes make him an excellent candidate for a career in public service.

He noted that this year there are three freshman congressmen on Capitol Hill with Notre Dame backgrounds.

Mazzoli also spoke about changes he'd like to see made in the structure of Congress. He criticized what he saw as an overabundance of congressional committees and suggested that the number and jurisdiction of different committees be reduced.

Mazzoli also suggested that representative's term of office be lengthened, saying the present term of two years makes it necessary for a representative to spend much of his term campaigning for his next election.

Sensitive issues are dodged by campaigning politicians and the government is less effective, he said.

Mazzoli recently has served as chairman on the House Judiciary Subcommittee on Immigration, Refugees, and International Law.

The Rev. John J. Cavanaugh CSC Award honors a former student performing outstanding service in the field of government, patriotism, public service, and local, state or national politics.

Apartheid meeting, library hours highlight College governance talks

By KIMBERLY TRENNER
Senior Staff Reporter

"Awareness is very important," said Saint Mary's Student Body President Anne Marie Kollman, referring to the need for student awareness of the injustice of apartheid, at last night's Board of Governance meeting.

Kollman encouraged members of the board to attend tonight's panel discussion on apartheid at 7:30 in Flanner Hall.

The panel will provide students with the opportunity to learn about apartheid and to ask questions, she said.

In other business at last night's meeting, the results from the recent library survey were discussed.

Of the 44 percent of the student body who responded, 69 percent said the current weekend library hours were unsatisfactory. Most students who responded said they would like the library to open at 10 a.m. or 11 a.m. on Sundays, rather than the current 1 p.m. opening.

For the new hours to take effect, however, they first must be cleared by both the library and the Academic Council, Kollman said.

The United Way campaign also was discussed at the meeting.

"The United Way campaign took in a total of $368 in cash and $1,800 in pledges," said Kollman. The pledges will be collected shortly, she said.

Also brought up at the meeting was the Gripe Night held by the council before break, which Kol-

LeMans residents are complaining about the early morning construction taking place. "Although it is a pain for students, this work is important," said Kollman.

The renovations are being done for safety purposes, she said.

Iman said had a big response. Student gripes included the need for a flower shop and an aerobics class on campus, demands for the yearbook, the new system of basketball ticket distribution, and the high cost of ID replacements, she said.

The $4 million dollar renovations on both Holy Cross and LeMans Hall also were discussed last night.

Renovations currently are being done on the bathrooms in LeMans Hall, Kollman said. "Each bathroom takes 13 weeks to finish," she said.

In other matters, the full board gave its support to student government's proposal for an indepth study of the feasibility of placing an underpass or overpass on U.S. Route 31. The crossing would be in the area between Notre Dame and Saint Mary's where freshman Kevin Hurley was struck by a car in September.

Father David Tyson, vice president of student affairs and a member ex-officio of the student affairs committee, said yesterday the board approved the idea in principle, but no details were discussed.

During the committee's discussion of the proposal it was acknowledged that the University would have to deal with county and state officials on this issue.

The student affairs committee also concurred that the vice president of student affairs no longer should sit ex officio on the Campus Life Council. "Because the vice president has veto power over any action taken, his expressed opinion at any meeting tends to stifle debate amongst other members of the council," student government's proposal stated. Tyson agreed with the recommendation, but said that he does retain the right to participate in meetings in an informal capacity.

the University call upon those corporations with holdings in South Africa in which Notre Dame invests to start the process of divesting if the government there has not committed itself to ending apartheid by Feb. 1, 1986.

Walshe said he wanted Notre Dame to divest from particular corporations that did not begin this process.

If Notre Dame does not follow this recommendation, Walshe said, "We (the University) should also be contributing to the only alternative means of change - civil war, with our endowment resources at the disposal of the oppressors."

Carney said that if the board thought civil war would result if Notre Dame did not divest, the University would divest. He called this idea, however, a "Hesburgh view."

Both Carney and Hesburgh mentioned other actions the University is taking to help end apartheid in South Africa.

"Notre Dame is part of a prestigious U.S. university network collaborating with South African universities in their struggles," Hesburgh said. "We are part of two consortia providing scholarships to South African blacks and colored."

Notre Dame has granted scholarships to two black South African students for the University's graduate theological program this year. Hesburgh said he hopes to add two more scholarships next year.

Carney admitted that the board was between a rock and a hard place in that the policy is only a threat and if it enforces the policy then the University will have no more leverage.

In determining the University's policy, the board considered the sentiment of the student body, he said. "Certainly the attitude of the students influences the board," Carney said.

He explained, however, "I don't think if all three students had been against the policy it would have made a difference."

Hostage families' confidence raised after 'fruitful' meeting with Reagan

Associated Press

WASHINGTON - Relatives of some of the six U.S. hostages held in Lebanon said yesterday a half-hour meeting with President Reagan bolstered their confidence that steps are being taken to obtain their loved ones' release, but no breakthroughs appear likely soon.

"It was a very fruitful meeting, and we hope that the administration will continue to pursue their initiatives, and we intend to continue to pursue private initiatives," said Peggy Say, sister of Terry Anderson, 38, chief Middle East correspondent for The Associated Press.

Say, whose brother was kidnapped on March 16, said the group was given information "that we cannot pass on."

"There are initiatives being pursued," she said.

Paul Jacobsen, the son of David Jacobsen, 54, who was abducted on May 28, said he found the meeting with Reagan "constructive."

"We do feel that the president is committed to getting these men out, that is something that he does keep track of," Jacobsen said. He said the group presented a yellow ribbon to Reagan to place on a White House door as a remembrance.

"We learned a lot, and I think they accept the feelings of the families and the frustrations and the suggestions," Say said. "(But) there apparently are not any breakthroughs."

In recent weeks, one of the nine Americans kidnapped in Lebanon since early 1984 has been reported killed. This followed the release of another, who carried a message that the remaining hostages would die if the kidnappers' demands were not met.

Jacobsen said McFarlane reaffirmed a commitment made several months ago "to speak directly with a representative of the group" that is believed responsible for the hostage-taking.

"If the captors are willing to come out and open up some direct lines of communication," progress could be made in gaining the hostages release, Jacobsen said.

Saint Mary's announces activities

By KATHLEEN ZASSICK
News Staff

November will be a busy month for Saint Mary's students, thanks to the Student Programming Board.

The Board has scheduled a variety of social and community awareness events for the month, including Alcohol Awareness Week, which has been slated for the week of Nov. 4-9.

Speakers, who have been scheduled for Monday, Wednesday, and Thursday of that week, will discuss the results of a survey taken about alcohol awareness, the experiences of a reformed alcoholic, and the Church's position on alcohol, marriage, and birth control.

In an effort to educate the campus on the apartheid issue, Nov. 19 has been set as a tentative date for Apartheid Awareness Day.

A proposed panel discussion would include members of the faculty and there would be an opportunity for those attending to ask questions.

An apartheid awareness bulletin board also will be assembled in Madeleva Hall.

The Board is attempting to get the movie "Six Days in South Africa" to show in coordination with the awareness week.

The Board also has scheduled the musical "They're Playing Our Song" for Nov. 3 at O'Laughlin Theater at 8 p.m. Tickets may be purchased at O'Laughlin for $5 each.

On Nov. 12, Bob Husky, an acoustic guitarist, will perform. Tickets will be available for purchase for the 8 p.m. performance at O'Laughlin.

volved in the petition.

"That's our main goal. If they convince me that they can do it then I would vote for them (if a new election is called for)," she said.

"We're looking for student leaders that are able to voice the outrage that students feel. It may not get anything done but at least we need to be heard," said Vore.

"That hasn't been done at all," added Yadlon.

Healy would not comment on the recall petition. "I would rather not talk about it," he said.

Healy would comment, however, on the student referendum calling for the disbandment of the Student Senate.

He said students will vote next week on whether or not to disband the senate, saying a two-thirds majority of those who vote will be needed to pass the referendum.

Two weeks ago Healy and four other student leaders proposed to disband the senate in a letter that stated the senate had "long ceased to be a legitimate voice of the student body."

"It's time we start doing our job and addressing student concerns," Lawrence, a co-signer the letter, said at the time.

"The Student Senate is stopping us. It's apparent to everyone on campus," he added.

Last week the Hall Presidents' Council passed an initiative to put the vote before the students.

Healy said the senate would be replaced by the Campus Life Council if the referendum is passed. He has called a meeting of that body for next Wednesday.

"We want to make sure the body starts out on the right foot," said Healy.

Beyond the Great Wall, ND finds China

CAROLINE GILLESPIE
features writer

John Fitzpatrick was walking along the streets of Tianjin, China, with some other Notre Dame students. They were lost.

"We were walking in the ... wrong direction," said Fitzpatrick, a graduate student who participated in last summer's Notre Dame foreign study program in Tianjin. "Finally, we ran into a Chinese person who, although he spoke no English and we spoke no Chinese, somehow managed to get us back on the right track. We would've ended up in Peking at the rate we were going."

The eight-week Tianjin program, established in the summer of 1984, enables students to experience first hand Chinese language and culture. Open to all students of Notre Dame and Saint Mary's, including graduate students and faculty, the Tianjin program has had 22 students participate in the summers of 1984 and 1985. The program costs less than $3000, which includes round-trip airfare, tuition, room and board, and a final two-week tour. The students live in dormitories and eat typical Chinese food in the student dining hall. Professor Peter Moody has acted as director of the program and has accompanied the students the past two summers.

Tianjin is a seaport city 60 miles from Peking. Foreign trade is a big business with various trade sections of the city designated for foreigners, giving the city an international flavor. The students have easy access to the nation's capital, Beijing, which is located just northwest of Tianjin.

While at the Tianjin Foreign Languages Institute, the students study six credit hours of Chinese which help to fulfill Notre Dame's language requirement. The study of the language is encouraged before departure but it is not required.

"The more Chinese a student knows before going over there, the better," Fitzpatrick said. "However, even though there is a great language barrier, there is such warmth and hospitality among the (Chinese) people that they would do anything to help a visitor, even if they couldn't speak a word of English."

In addition to the learning opportunities provided in the classroom, the students have the chance to travel on weekends and further experience the culture. The two-week tour at the end of the program, led by Chinese faculty from the institute, covers such cities as Tianjin, Nanjin, Suzhou and Shanghai. The students then depart from the Orient after a short visit in Hong Kong.

"The tour takes the students to all the standard stops and allows the students to get a sense of Chinese history," Fitzpatrick said. "There is a human element which shows the Chinese people as remarkably resilient and adaptive. They are a people who have suffered a great deal, even beyond communism and yet they retain remarkable achievements."

Isabel Charles, director of the Foreign Study Program at Notre Dame, stressed the advantages of the program. "I think it's very important to introduce our students to the Chinese people, their language and their culture since such a large portion of the world's population is centered in this area. Hopefully this introduction will forge relationships contributing to an understanding which will promote world peace. We also hope to encourage Notre Dame students to consider helping and working in these areas in their future lives."

Provost Timothy O'Meara first explored the possibility of a formal program with the Tianjin Foreign Languages Institute. O'Meara and his wife have visited China every summer since 1981. O'Meara believes that contact with the Chinese people, especially at this time in history, is vital.

Junior Kevin Cullen participated in the program last summer. "I liked a lot of little things in the experience. I really liked the Chinese people. I liked the fact that when you went shopping, you could buy things that were unique - not like our mass-production items that you find in K-Mart."

Scott Cossu a musical force

features writer

While most of the campus was watching the Royals win the World Series, the Scott Cossu Quartet performed in Washington Hall. Describing his group as "the 'Spinal Tap' of heavy mellow," the performance was the second in a series of jazz concerts by Windham Hill recording artists sponsored by the Around the Corner Club.

The show began with Cossu alone at the piano for a medley of semi-improvisational solo compositions. He was joined by his two percussionists, Jim Brock and Billy Collie, and a violinist, Tora. Cossu was the primary musical force in the group, laying the harmonic and rhythmic framework for each piece.

The concert featured Cossu playing an erotic courtship song on an instrument from northeastern Thailand, a bamboo pan pipe, as well as a solo by Brock on a Brazilian birumbau, which he likened to a "talking burrito." The rest of the show focused on Cossu's previously recorded material, cast in an entirely new light in the hands of his current sidemen, making the pieces interesting to people familiar with his albums.

Cossu's pieces were not particularly melodic, but he made an impression with his interesting arrangements and unhurried phrasing. Nearly every piece was based on a motif onto which layer upon layer of rhythmic and harmonic complexity was added. This built the tension and feeling of chaos without losing the original tone or structure.

The real beauty of Cossu's playing was his phrasing of his harmonic ideas. Each phrase swelled and unfolded naturally into the next, giving the music a life of its own. The percussionists' wide variety of natural sounds added to the rhythmic flow of Cossu's compositions, but their effects sometimes overpowered the other musicians. The violinist played too mechanically to match the free lines delivered by the rest of the ensemble, failing to make a significant contribution. Despite these shortcomings, the concert provided a rare opportunity to be entertained on campus by a musician as talented as Scott Cossu.

The World Series is over, but the Windham Hill series at Notre Dame continues. The final performance in the series is scheduled for November 23, and will feature solo pianist Philip Aaberg in Washington Hall.

Life is meant to be enjoyed for seven days a week

Monday morning, moan and groan,
Another week's begun.
Why did it have to come around
And spoil my weekend fun?
Wednesday morning, half a week
Is almost gone and then
If I can make it two more days
I'll come to life again.
Friday morning, hip hooray,
Another weekend's nearing.
Two days off and payday, too.
It makes me feel like cheering.
But wait a minute, something's wrong.
It really is annoying.
I've wished away five days of life
I should have been enjoying.

- Karen Wegand

Carol Brown

in these times

It is sad, but true. A lot of us do wish five-sevenths of our lives away. We "live for the weekend," or more appropriately, we DO NOT live; we waste a good part of our lives looking to the future, or even rekindling the past. How many times do we find ourselves saying something to the effect of, "If I can only make it to this weekend..."? It seems as if we think our happiness depends on some distant future event. Yet, we know from experience that often that event that we have "lived for" all week falls through anyway. So, we must ask ourselves, what have we wished those last five days away for?

Time is especially important for those of us here at school now. We only have about four years to be a part of college life. And it is a great time in life, a unique time. Not everyone has the opportunity to spend four years in pursuit of higher learning and higher goals. We are very lucky to have this time to try to discover what we want for our lives. But four years is not a millenium. It goes by very quickly. This gives us all the more reason to make the most of our days here - all of our days, Monday through Sunday.

However, even worse than wishing away our days "living for the weekends" is "living for the weekends" and then, when they finally do arrive, obliterated becoming so obliterated that we forget them anyway. What is the point? Why do some seem to feel that the only way they can "get through life" is by wasting it, forgetting it, or simply fantasizing about how great it will be in some far off time?

It is time to realize that life is great - right now! Every moment wasted is a moment lost forever - REALLY! Life is an expendable commodity - the MOST expendable commodity! Every moment is a "once in a lifetime opportunity."

Life is short. Anyone who has ever taken a history course knows that on a historical time line one man's life would look about the size of a speck of dust. Particularly in our times of nuclear technology, we cannot predict how much time we have. This is not to say we should spend our lives dwelling on the thought that we could all be gone tomorrow, for this would only be another useless waste of our time. But realize that although our time seems limitless, it is not. We have to make the most of our lives everyday.

Of course, things do not always go smoothly, and we may feel as if we have to "live for the weekend." But that is what life is all about. We have to take the good with the bad in order to experience it fully. We should not wish tougher times away. We should deal with them, make the best of them, and hopefully we will learn from them and emerge stronger as a result.

So, if you are looking at a rough work load this week, do not spend half of your time complaining about it and the other half miserably plodding through it. Just tackle the mountain of work straight on and do your best. Do not approach it from a negative perspective. Instead, think of it as a challenge. Think how lucky you are to have the opportunity and ability to learn, to deal with that challenge.

Attitude means everything. If we view life's difficulties with a negative outlook, the result will be self-defeating and depressing - definitely not the way we want to spend our moments. Yet, if we can handle those same difficulties within an optimistic framework, we can truly live our lives to the fullest. If we can learn to appreciate all of life's moments, we will be that much happier for all those moments.

So, do not wake up tomorrow and think, "It's Tuesday...only 3 more days to get through until the weekend." Rather, say to yourself, "This is a day in my life. How do I want to spend it?"

Healy-Lawrence recall gaining great support

Dear Editor:

Bill Healy is a joke and we are not laughing. Time and time again Bill Healy and Duane Lawrence have proven their dedication to the Administration. When the administration says "jump," Healy and Lawrence buy pogo-sticks - with our money.

The administration does not have to attack the students; Healy handles that for them. Whether it be Healy's personal Observer scam or his firing of students allegedly "disrespectful" to the administration, Healy and Lawrence have repeatedly demonstrated where their loyalty lies. To them, respect for the administration is synonymous with unquestioned obedience.

How can we expect the Student Senate to accomplish anything with Healy and Lawrence at the helm? It is also sad to see the collusion of Kevin Howard, Lee Broussard, and Karen Ingwersen on the filthy grab for power. It is no secret that the chairman of the Hall Presidents' Council has the most to gain by making the Student Senate a scapegoat for the Healy-Lawrence administration's ineptitude. Howard and Lawrence, let us all remember, were the main instigators behind the debacle in student government last spring. Howard, Broussard, and Ingwersen have no constituency and serve no purpose as members in the Senate. Yet these so-called student "leaders" abolish themselves and resign from the Student Senate so that some real work can be done.

Please do not put the Observer down now. Make sure that you read Healy's $300 "political crutch" ad of Oct. 18. After all, you paid for it. $300 of the students' money was spent on this joke.

It is no secret that there has been increasingly overwhelming support for the impeachment/recall and/or resignation of Healy and

Lawrence. In short, "there's a bad moon a'risin' for Healy and Lawrence."

Healy showed care in visiting Hurley's room

Dear Editor:

It is time that people stop the name calling and look at what Bill Healy has really done for the student body.

When Kevin Hurley was in the hospital here in South Bend, Healy made it a point to visit Hurley almost every day. He gave his support to the family and friends of Hurley and he tried to help in any way he could. No one bothers to look and see that Healy truly cares and shows it everyday. To any of those students calling names that can say they care as much about the student body as Healy, I challenge them to go and talk to him face to face. Sure, go ahead and write letters of complaint, but also have the guts to go up and visit Healy and talk to him about all that he is trying to accomplish.

Letters from everyone needed to make change

Dear Editor:

"Principle is important but what about the people?" These words surrounded an advertisement in the Friday, Oct. 18th, issue of the Observer, which asked members of the Notre Dame community to write letters to demonstrate their discontent with the administration's handling of a recent parietals case.

In brief, the case at issue involves two students who were recently suspended from Notre Dame for a parietals violation. There is no question as to whether or not the rule was violated; the couple openly admitted their guilt. The question is whether or not all parietals violations should be handled in the same manner, regardless of the circumstances or the intent of the people involved. In this case, the couple was found asleep in the living room of a suite in a women's dorm, with the door open and the lights on. Should these people be dismissed from the University just as would a couple whose sole intention is to have sexual relations behind closed doors after parietals? That is ridiculous!

Unfortunately, the administration does not presently recognize this distinction. After Associate Vice President for Residence Life John Goldrick and Director of Residence Life Ann Firth handed down the original decision to dismiss the students, the judicial review board overturned the decision, choosing community service as a reasonable punishment for the violation. The review board's decision, however, was appealed once more, leaving the final decision to Father Hesburgh. The administration had one more opportunity to recognize that the violation was not premeditated; the intent was not to blatantly abuse university regulations. Nevertheless, Hesburgh decided that the students should be suspended.

The parietals rules themselves are not in question here, but discretion on the part of the administration in dealing with parietals violations is a necessity. We need to work for a change. We need to demonstrate our dissatisfaction to the administration. Because the student voice is not always heard as much as we would like it to be, we need the support of parents and alumni.

Recently, there has been a lot of criticism about the lack of action in student government. Student government is acting on this issue; but without the support of the entire Notre Dame community, it is very difficult to make a change. Please take five minutes to write a letter addressed to Father Tyson, C/O OBUD, and drop it in a campus mailbox. Ask your parents to write letters also. The potential for change is there. With a unified effort, we can reach that potential.

Students must not work against ND government

Dear Editor:

Rationality has never been a key factor in politics, but at Notre Dame rationality must be the factor students rely on to make decisions. Currently the popular issue on campus is the recall of Student Body President Bill Healy. Its vocal proponents argue for "A Real Beginning," but if Healy is ousted, what will continue is chaotic, self-seeking politics. The student's have already had quite enough of that.

This student body does not need another election to take time away from working on issues that need our sincerest effort, issues that the student's care about. Yet to satisfy the egos of Notre Dame's pseudo-politicians, we might have to put off workese issues and further hurt the student body's image. If we act like irrational children, following on the newest political fad, we have justified the administration's view of us. Rather, if we let our voices be heard within the framework of student government, we will show ourselves to be mature and informed adults deserving of respect.

Yes, the structure and its leaders are far from perfect, but to improve our government requires work from within the set of structures. To obtain what we desire from student government, we must work for it in an atmosphere of stability. It is easy for 15 percent of the students to ask for the recall of the president. However, if that same number would let the student body president know loudly and clearly what they want, and then work with him for it, the desires of the students would be met much more effectively than by blindly following an irrational fad.

Students insulted by Hesburgh's statement

Dear Editor:

I would like to comment on a statement made by University President Father Theodore Hesburgh at the anti-apartheid rally. Hesburgh remarked that students must think carefully about the consequences of divestment. I felt this remark was an insult to those who drew up a petition which seeks University divestment from South African related stock, to those who signed it and to professors who spend many hours teaching students to think critically. Those who drew up the petition spent a lot of time analyzing the issues and gathering facts prior to concluding that divestment, under the conditions stated in the petition, is a good answer - not just an "easy answer" as Hesburgh stated. Further, much energy and effort has been spent on educating students about the facts and issues. The students have thought the issue through very carefully and are aware of what they signed.

The divestment option, as outlined in the petition, does not support total divestment from all firms in South Africa. Rather, it outlines specific steps toward the elimination of apartheid which firms must take by Feb. 1, 1986 or the University will begin divestment from these firms. This allows the University to maintain activity in those firms which are moving toward elimination of apartheid. Continuing to hold investments in those firms which do not take action as outlined in the petition is a failure to exercise one's option of divestment as an investor. If one is not able to exercise power as an investor (i.e. convince firms to take the actions outlined in the petition), what is the point of maintaining the investment? Further, to continue to hold investments in those firms is to participate in an economic institution that actively advocates apartheid. The purpose of an economic institution is to serve the individual by allowing for freedom, justice and self-determination. Continued participation in economic institutions which do not promote these ends is immoral and unethical.

Students should know when good things occur

Dear Editor:

We would like to pose the question, "What is the function of The Observer?" Is it not supposed to bring information to the students?

We attended the Alex DeGrassi/Anger, Higbie and Marshall Trio concert at Stepan Center on Sunday evening. Stepan had been converted into a coffee house with round tables covered in red and white checked tablecloths, plants screens and a lot of food such as croissants and pastries. This was an excellent achievement and we applaud The Around the Corner Club. All 350 or so in attendance enjoyed an excellent performance with a surprisingly comfortable atmosphere in Stepan Center. But no one else found out about it because of the failure of The Observer to cover the event. There was no mention of it in Monday's paper, or Tuesday's for that matter, while Alabama and Charlie Daniels were featured. It seems at least one staff reporter could be afforded to attend and report on the concert. A lot of time and money goes into the organizing of these events for the students, and the students should know about a good thing when it happens.

From what we have seen and heard, this situation seems to be a habit where The Observer is concerned. There will be future events of this kind at Stepan; see what you can do.

T-shirts against Faust harm more than help

Dear Editor:

This letter is in regard to the ingenious shirts which have appeared on campus lately. These shirts, which poke fun at Head Coach Gerry Faust, are very creative and sometimes even amusing. But one would think that students with such creativity could channel their thoughts and opinions in a more positive way. The individuals making and selling these T-shirts are among the select few that are allowed to attend Notre Dame. When they elected to go here they agreed to support and be a part of the University, good or bad. The students that came to Notre Dame within the last five years recognized and understood the "Faust" situation. Although it is good that the people making these T-shirts care about the welfare of our University, and want to make a statement, it seems to me that they are hurting the University more than they are helping it.

Healy's submissiveness not acceptable to all

Dear Editor:

So very few times do the students of Notre Dame have the courage and resolve to question authority and the commitment to institute a change that it is a sad and bitter blow to this University's integrity when two such voices of protest are silenced because they chose to ignore the empty rhetoric of most student leaders and fight injustice through positive action. The decision to dismiss John Dettling and Pat Baccanari from the Committee for Responsible University Business Practices sends a clear message to the Notre Dame student body: question authority, but not the University's authority.

Perhaps Student Body President Bill Healy felt pressure from above, or perhaps he was motivated by personal ambition, but the reasons he offers for the dismissals cannot fool even the most submissive and blindly loyal domer. I am outraged and disappointed, then, to find the students of Notre Dame so accepting of Healy's action. I suppose with the experience of age comes the realization that one does not try to question or change authority. No, if one wishes to survive, one must accept its actions like a docile and ignorant animal. Perhaps this is a lesson that the blacks of South Africa also find difficult to accept.

Wolf holds distorted view on 'bandwagons'

Dear Editor:

I am concerned about the backward order of importance many students at Notre Dame place on current issues.

Typical of this was an article written by Phil Wolf in the Oct. 16 issue of The Observer on the fickleness of Notre Dame football supporters.

Although Wolf reasonably tried to urge people to continue supporting the football team, a passage in the article sadly revealed a distorted perspective of what is and what is not important in his eyes.

In the article, Wolf adopted the role of a "bandwagon" driver, driving groups characterized by a crowd mentality fueled by emotions rather than reason. As an example, he unfortunately wrote, "I have some buddies who've been driving the anti-apartheid bandwagon and they sure are busy."

This statement, perhaps written rashly, reflects a sheltered awareness of the world. Wolf's outlook places support of the football team as a moral priority above any thinking on the apartheid issue.

Surely feelings on any political issue, including apartheid, should be encouraged.

Most countries in the world look at universities as sources of fresh thought on current issues. Students have more time to develop their ideas about these issues than they will at any other time in their lives.

Sad to say, Wolf's priorities, common here at Notre Dame, contribute nothing to that development.

The more the students become obsessed with and stew over football issues, the less they help in giving Notre Dame a voice. This ultimately hurts the school and the individual more than any lack of football fanaticism.

I would hope the administration can do more in the future for the development of students' awareness and ideals.

Hesburgh, Healy dodge main apartheid issues

Dear Editor:

It was great to see so many people at the rally against apartheid - although the crowd seemed to thin significantly after Father Theodore Hesburgh spoke. For those who left then I'm sorry you had to stand in the cold for so long. Hesburgh managed to meander around the issue for about 45 minutes lacing his "memoirs" with names of the people he hangs around with and what he said or did 30 years ago.

Hesburgh stated that the easiest way out would be to divest now but that it would not be a very intelligent move right now. To me that was just the easiest way of getting away from discussing the whole issue. Just making blatant statements without offering any alternatives shouldn't satisfy anybody. I wonder if there was as much debate when Notre Dame decided to invest in these companies operating in South Africa - I doubt the moral question ever came up. There are no easy solutions to the problem except to leave the investment there and continue to bolster the apartheid regime. Did anyone ever talk of investing in the economy of Nazi Germany in order to help the Jews?

Hesburgh also mentioned the standard argument against divestment, "Well if it's not us then it will just be someone else who doesn't care." Can a man justify raping a woman by saying that if he didn't do it someone else would? Morally, this University should not aid in South Africa's repression whatever other countries are willing to do. He mentioned Japan as one of those countries - actually Japan does have policies prohibiting new investments in South Africa.

Finally, I would like to address Bill Healy, the student body president/trustee puppet who fired the two student government members who have been active in the South African issue. According to him, they were fired for being impolite (in his mind) to Board of Trustees Chairman Thomas Carney. To put the whole issue into a broader and yet relevant context, does he think that the South African police are polite when they ask a black man for his pass book or break down his door to search his room? They seem to get quite a bit done by being impolite. Healy, this is no longer a "please sir," "thank you sir" issue.

Harassment of students extended far from ND

Dear Editor:

In the last week, I have been following the various articles that have been published on the "Dillon" tailgater at Ann Arbor. Personally, I find the University's attitude on this event and similar events as very unjust and very out of date. It is not like those young men were in prison, let out on parole, violated parole and so must be punished. They are free, or is this Russia?

I am from Ireland and I have never heard the Irish government complain to the Notre Dame administration about their use of the slogan "the Fighting Irish" or the symbol of the leprechaun. For in similar fashion, the Irish people would find this insulting and very unrepresentative of our country.

What is the problem with the Office of Student Affairs? Why do they persist in harassing the students; constantly keeping them in check? Does this mean when I go back to Ireland for Christmas that I must not go to a pub and sing songs with my friends, in fear that the out of date, unjust Office of Student Affairs might not approve? Who knows, maybe it wishes to extend this rather large campus east to Dublin, Ireland, someday.

Ditka not surprised with Bears

Associated Press

LAKE FOREST, Ill. - Coach Mike Ditka isn't surprised that his Chicago Bears are 8-0 and the only undefeated team in the National Football League.

"If you speculated before the season that we'd be 8-0, yes, it would seem tough and I'd be surprised," Ditka said yesterday. "But now, no. We've earned every one of our victories. We haven't backed into any games."

Asked if his Bears could go undefeated and wind up 19-0 with a Super Bowl triumph, Ditka smiled and said, "Stranger things have happened."

As far as Ditka is concerned, the Bears have not reached the peak of their potential.

"We can execute on offense better," Ditka said. "We told the players early that if they'd cooperate, we'd be in good shape. We told them every game would be a dogfight."

"The main thing is we wanted to control our Central Division."

GO FROM COLLEGE TO THE ARMY WITHOUT MISSING A BEAT.

The hardest thing about breaking into professional music is — well, breaking into professional music. So if you're looking for an opportunity to turn your musical talent into a full-time performing career, take a good look at the Army.

It's not all parades and John Philip Sousa. Army bands rock, waltz and boogie as well as march, and they perform before concert audiences as well as spectators. With an average of 40 performances a month, there's also the opportunity for travel — not only across America, but possibly abroad.

Most important, you can expect a first-rate professional environment from your instructors, facilities and fellow musicians. The Army has educational programs that can help you pay for off-duty instruction, and if you qualify, even help you repay your federally-insured student loans. If you can sight-read music, performing in the Army could be your big break. Write: Chief, Army Bands Office, Fort Benjamin Harrison, IN 46216-5005. Or call toll free 1-800-USA-ARMY.

Iowa retains No. 1 spot in AP poll

Associated Press

Iowa remained a unanimous No. 1 as the nation's top college football team for the second week in a row yesterday while defending national champion Brigham Young suffered its second loss of the season and skidded from seventh place to 17th.

The 7-0 Hawkeyes, 49-10 winners over Northwestern, received all 58 first-place votes and a perfect 1,160 points from a nationwide panel of sports writers and sportscasters in the Associated Press poll.

Over the last 13 years, the only other team to be voted a unanimous No. 1 for two consecutive weeks was Nebraska early in the 1983 season.

The first six teams all held onto their spots from last week. Runner-up Florida, a 35-18 winner over Virginia Tech, received 1,060 points while Penn State blanked West Virginia 27-0 and totaled 1,025 points.

Fourth-ranked Michigan received 994 points after trouncing Indiana 42-15. No. 5 Nebraska downed Colorado 17-7 and received 912 points, and sixth-ranked Auburn turned back Mississippi State 21-9 for 866 points.

BYU's stunning 23-16 loss to previously winning Texas-El Paso dropped the Cougars 10 places in the rankings. Meanwhile, Air Force, another Western Athletic Conference team, climbed from eighth to seventh with 764 points by defeating Utah 32-15.

Ohio State pulled out a 23-19 triumph over Minnesota and rose from ninth to eighth with 682 points while Minnesota fell out of the Top Twenty. Oklahoma moved up from 10th to ninth with 655 points by crushing Iowa State 59-14, and Florida State went from 11th to 10th with 592 points by rallying to beat North Carolina 20-10.

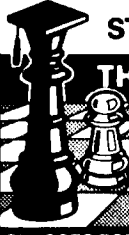

The Top Twenty college football teams in The Associated Press poll, with first-place votes in parentheses, this season's records and total points. Points based on 20-19-18-17 etc. Notre Dame opponents are italicized.

1. Iowa (58)	7-0-0	1180
2. Florida	6-0-1	1080
3. Penn St.	7-0-0	1025
4. Michigan	6-1-0	994
5. Nebraska	6-1-0	912
6. Auburn	6-1-0	866
7. Air Force	8-0-0	764
8. Ohio St.	6-1-0	682
9. Oklahoma	4-1-0	655
10. Florida St.	6-1-0	592
11. Miami (Fla.)	6-1-0	548
12. Oklahoma St.	5-1-0	539
13. Baylor	7-1-0	537
14. Arkansas	6-1-0	486
15. UCLA	6-1-1	394
16. LSU	4-1-0	287
17. BYU	6-2-0	162
18. Georgia	5-1-1	113
19. Tennessee	3-1-2	81
20. SMU	4-2-0	77

The Second Ten consists of Miami (Fla.), Oklahoma State, Baylor, Arkansas, UCLA, LSU, BYU, Georgia, Tennessee and Southern Methodist.

Last week, it was Florida State, Oklahoma State, Baylor, Arkansas, Miami, Tennessee, UCLA, LSU, Texas and Minnesota.

However, Texas was drubbed by SMU 44-14 while Minnesota lost to Ohio State. SMU made the rankings at No. 20 after a two-week absence and Georgia, which had been missing for just the last week, reappeared as No. 18 by defeating Kentucky 26-6.

hardly scratched out there. We're making less mistakes. It makes my job easy."

It made everyone's job easier. With the Irish able to move the ball downfield via the rush, Irish quarterback Steve Beuerlein was able to pass when it was not totally expected, thus gaining more time to throw.

Simply put, the Irish were finally able to set up the pass with the run Saturday, instead of having to do it the other way around.

And with the offense able to grind first downs out on the ground, the Irish defense was able to get some much-needed rest it had not been getting in past games when the offense was not able to move the ball.

"We just got whipped in every phase of the game," said Trojan head coach Ted Tollner. "Their line just came off the ball so fast, and their backs came right up and ran right at us."

It was the kind of line play that was expected from the start of the season, but has only recently appeared. Team captain and starting guard Tim Scannell had some thoughts on this development.

"Consistency is the key with the play of a line," said Scannell. "If one guy screws up, the whole team screws up. And earlier in the year we were taking turns screwing up on the line. Now it seems like the errors are disappearing."

"It should have been that way earlier in the year," he said, "but it's just a matter of getting better each week and coming together more. We're just having more fun and are more relaxed now. I think we've improved each week and I think we'll continue to do that."

And Faust sounded very different this time than he had on that sad Saturday after his squad had been bowled over by Michigan.

"You've got to give credit to the offensive and defensive lines," he said. "Our offense, both the first and second units, moved the ball extremely well."

"The offensive line is coming off the ball much better. And they're healthy now. Southern Cal was ranked fifth in the country on defense, and I think they're a bit quicker than they were last year. And we moved the ball great distances down the field. The offense helped the defense out."

"The confidence is starting to come," he continued. "We're starting to make things happen."

Indeed they are. With a tough schedule ahead of them, however, the Irish will need continued strong play from the men blocking in the trenches in order to continue making things happen.

NVA gives all-nighter

Special to the Observer

The department of Non-Varsity Athletics has announced the first-ever all-campus all-nighter to be held in the ACC. The campus all-nighter is scheduled to begin the evening of Nov. 15, and will run into the morning hours of Nov. 16.

The all-nighter will include sporting tournaments in basketball, indoor soccer, broom ball, innertube water polo and volleyball. This will be the first all-campus event to make use of the new natatorium. Other activities planned are all-night aerobics, open skating, racquetball and squash tournaments.

Proceeds from the event are slated to support the Special Olympics of St. Joseph's County. Special Olympics is a program of sports training and competition for mentally retarded individuals. Locally, Special Olympics involves over 400 athletes.

Trojans

Junior Don Shafer kicked the ball from 39 yards away after missing an earlier 34-yard attempt.

"They didn't do anything to baffle us," said quarterback Sean Salisbury who became the Trojan career pass completion leader on Saturday, completing 21-of-34 for 191 yards. "They just played hard."

With injuries on the defensive line, the Irish were forced to maneuver people around and utilize a healthy linebacking corps. With tackles Wally Kleine and Greg Dingens not being able to play due to injuries, the Irish started senior Mike Kiernan for the second straight week at nose tackle along with sophomore Jeff Kunz in his first start ever at right tackle.

Senior Eric Dorsey, who remains the only defensive lineman to start in every game, made seven tackles including a fourth quarter sack of Salisbury for a 12 yard loss. Due to the lack of depth on the line, the Irish were creative in their use of five linebackers, using either two or three down linemen for much of the game.

"I believe that having the five outside linebackers was the key for us because USC's linemen weren't used to handling quick, very technique-oriented players," explained Dorsey.

To go along with a strong defensive effort, the Irish also put forth an outstanding offensive effort with their first and second units both dominating the line.

"Sure our offense is predictable," said Pinkett who rushed for over 100 yards for the 21st time in his career with 28 carries for 110 yards. "We're going to try to take the ball and shove it down the other team's throat."

broke the frustration. We weren't so worried and we just went out and played."

"They certainly had the momentum after we fumbled early," noted Army head coach Jim Young. "That play took a lot out of us and fired them up. We knew we had to be at our best and get a few advantages from them, but we made our own mistakes."

Notre Dame made no mistakes on two long scoring drives which sealed the victory. The first of these drives carried 86 yards on 11 plays,

"There's no substitute for execution," continued the senior. "I've come out of the last three games without a scratch because the offensive line has blown open some huge, gaping holes."

In the first half, the Irish did not have to punt as they scored five times and went into the locker room with a 27-0 halftime lead.

On their second possession, the Irish capped a 71-yard drive when Irish quarterback Steve Beuerlein scrambled into the end zone on a third-and-four play from the six-yard line. The score was the first one the junior had scored running so far in his collegiate career and increased the Irish lead to 14-0.

In the second period, John Carney sandwiched a five-yard touchdown run by fullback Frank Stams with field goals from 26 and 33 yards away. A 43-yard kick late in the third quarter marked the sixth time that the junior has kicked three or more field goals in a contest for the Irish.

With less than two minutes to go in the game, Joel Williams finished the Irish scoring with an eight-yard touchdown reception from sophomore Terry Andrysiak. The scores by Stams and Williams were both made with the second team ofensive unit of the Irish.

"Our second team played excellent football," commented Faust. "Playing two units also helped in wearing them (Southern Cal) down."

Coming out at half-time, the Irish not only carried a commanding lead. The also carried green jerseys on their backs for the second time in three years.

"I went along with it (wearing the green jerseys) because they scored so many points in their last two games," said Faust in recollection of a game that the Irish lost 55-24 to the Trojans in 1974 after taking a 24-6 half-time lead. "We had it set for the second half, and we felt that it would stir up the crowd."

"We were surprised when we came into the lockerroom and saw the green jerseys," said Pinkett. "I guess it has become somewhat of a tradition since the first time they did it in 1977."

Overall, however, the Irish victory was directly attributable to the players under the jerseys according to Faust, whose team is playing relaxed and improved football.

"The team is taking more of a relaxed approach to the game," said Irish guard Tim Scannel. "We're playing football and we're not worried about making mistakes."

"What we need to do," adds Dorsey, "is to get a couple of games under our belt with a lot of points on our side and a few on their side in order to get the confidence we need. After we destroyed Army and beat USC, we're on our way."

The story goes on. Another chapter in the season saga of the women's volleyball team was completed over break.

Over break the team played in four different states against seven different teams in just one week. When it was all over the team had managed two victories to go along with five defeats.

The Irish knocked off conference opponents St. Louis and Evansville. The team was beaten by Missouri, Oregon and three teams from California: Santa Clara, San Francisco and California-Berkeley.

Irish runners regain strong form

By PETE GEGEN
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame cross-country team made several major strides in regaining its winning form over the fall break. With first-place and third-place showings, the team is positioning itself for what hopes to be a strong performance in the districts.

On October 18, the Irish placed third in the Indiana Intercollegiate State meet. Purdue won the race easily with 20 points. Indiana finished second with 58, and Notre Dame totaled 78.

Jim Tyler, John Magill and Ron Markezich placed seventh, ninth and eleventh respectively. They all ran well, finishing within 14 seconds of each other.

Tom Warth took 16th, and Mike Collins rounded out the top five by finishing 35th. For Collins, this was his first race of the season. He had missed the first three races because of a foot injury.

Head coach Joe Piane believes there is still room for improvement.

"We ran well, but not up to our potential," noted Piane. "We could have beaten Indiana if our fifth man had run better."

Notre Dame will probably face both Purdue and Indiana in the NCAA District IV meet in November. The Boilermakers simply ran away with the state meet, placing five runners in the top eight. The Hoosiers also ran well, as Marty Bassett and Mark Deady placed fourth and fifth respectively.

"Indiana is traditionally a power," said Piane. "If you can beat them, you are almost assured of making the NCAA championships."

During break the team traveled to northern Michigan to train and to take a break from the usual routine.

The following Saturday, October 26, the Irish traveled to Indianapolis to defend their Midwestern Collegiate Conference title. The team finally ran as a group, and the result was an easy victory.

Tyler again was the first Irish runner to cross the finish line, placing fourth. Then, to Piane's delight, a group of four Irish runners - Markezich, Warth, Magill and Craig Maxfield - finished in a 19-second spread, taking sixth through ninth places.

"I'm happier with the way they ran," said Piane. "For the first time all year we ran as a pack."

This meet also marked the fifth time in a row that Tyler has been the first Irish runner to cross the finish line. However, he still has yet to place first overall in a meet this year.

Both Piane and Connelly believe that there is much room for improvement on the team. The fifth man has been a problem for all but the last meet. Also, Collins needs to be running up front with Tyler and Magill if the team wants to advance to the NCAA finals.

There will be plenty of time, though, to iron out the problems as Notre Dame has no meets scheduled until the districts on November 16.

Notre Dame rebounds to even record at 3-3

The Observer/Pete Laches

Irish running back Allen Pinkett bursts through one of the gaping holes opened by his improving offensive line on Saturday. A strong running game helped lead Notre Dame to its lopsided win over the Trojans. Against Army the week before, Pinkett broke the all-time Notre Dame rushing record formerly held by Vegas Ferguson. Mike Chmiel details the USC game at right.

Irish bombard USC, take 37-3 victory

By MICHAEL J. CHMIEL
Sports Writer

For the third time in three home dates, the Irish succeeded in destroying their opponents. For the third straight year, the Irish also succeeded in knocking off their Pac-10 rival, USC, the first time they have done so since the 1957-61 period.

Silencing critics for the second straight week, the Irish seem to have turned things around after destroying Southern Cal Saturday afternoon by a 37-3 margin and improving their record to 3-3 on the season.

"We're getting better," said a pleased Irish head coach, Gerry Faust. "What happened in the beginning was that nobody knew how good Michigan was and we played well against them. We played well the next week too, but then we stunk against Purdue. The next week, though, we played well against Air Force and we've played well since then."

For the second straight week, the Irish began their first possession following a turnover. Against Army, a week earlier, the Irish recovered a fumbled pitch and followed with a 16-yard touchdown drive which set the tone for a 24-10 Notre Dame win.

Saturday, Irish junior Troy Wilson recovered a fumble caused by freshman George Streeter on the opening kickoff. Racing down the middle of the field, Streeter knocked the ball loose from USC sophomore Randy Tanner at the Trojan 11-yard line, and Wilson recovered at the two.

Ten seconds into the contest, the Irish grabbed a quick 7-0 lead as Allen Pinkett swept left and into the end zone on Notre Dame's first play from scrimmage.

"You try to be prepared for things to go wrong in the opening kickoff situation," explained Southern Cal head coach Ted Tollner. "If something bad happens, you try to overcome it. And we never did."

When the Trojans did get their offensive unit onto the field, they were unable to score, even though they outgained Notre Dame, 346 yards to 335 yards. A spirited Irish defense was able to keep Southern Cal from its endzone for the first time since 1966 when Notre Dame notched a 51-0 triumph.

"We knew before the game that Notre Dame would be the most physical team we have played all year," said Tollner. "We knew their size and strength matched up to ours and we knew they have the potential to be the best they can. Notre Dame played an excellent ball game and deserves the credit."

In their last two games, the Trojans downed conference rivals by scores of 63-0 and 30-6. This week they were limited to a late third quarter field goal.

Offensive line dominates in crucial win

By ERIC SCHEUERMANN
Assistant Sports Editor

When the Notre Dame football team started the season in desultory fashion with a 20-12 loss at Michigan, the offensive line received some of the blame. After the 37-3 crushing of USC on Saturday, that offensive line deserves much of the credit.

Head coach Gerry Faust let it be known after the game against the Wolverines that the offensive line had played poorly.

"Michigan controlled the line of scrimmage," said Faust after that disappointing first game. "Our offensive line just didn't come off the ball at all. We aren't going to win when they do that. If we can't open holes our game won't go."

But it was not until the Army game last weekend that the line got untracked, allowing the Irish to wear out the smaller Cadet defense.

And in the game against the Trojans, the line really blossomed for the first time. USC came into the game with a strong defense that was ranked seventh in the country against the rush, allowing only 82.8 yards per game.

But the Irish consistently were able to run over the Trojans, gaining 217 yards on 49 carries, the highest rushing output for the team yet this year.

Tailback Allen Pinkett, who rushed for 110 yards on 28 carries, seemed especially pleased with the execution of the offensive line.

"People say our offense is predictable," said Pinkett. "Well, you're darn right it's predictable. We want to go out and shove the ball down a team's throat."

"It was simply a matter of execution," continued Pinkett. "Our offensive gave me huge, gaping holes to run through. I was

Irish regroup before Army game, wear down Cadets in 24-10 victory

By MARTY BURNS
Assistant Sports Editor

Notre Dame's season opener took place a bit later than usual this year. Five weeks later to be exact.

At least that's what Irish head coach Gerry Faust and his players said Oct. 19 after they had dealt a convincing defeat to previously-unbeaten Army, 24-10, at Notre Dame Stadium. According to the fifth-year coach and his squad, the three sloppy losses and the ensuing onslaught of national criticism which marked the first part of the season now could be put in the past.

"Coach Faust kept telling us this week that it was a new season," said an elated Irish quarterback Steve Beuerlein after the game. "We can learn from what has happened, but it's now a new season."

"We've been subjected to a lot of adversity," echoed tailback Allen Pinkett. "The criticism has come from all angles. It really preys on our nerves, but we have a lot of determination and a lot of pride. We saw (the Army game) as a chance to fight back against that adversity."

The Irish certainly fought hard in their second "season opener." And although the New Year's day bowl committees may not accept Notre Dame's calendar move back to the future, they will accept the fact that the Irish finally have proven that they have the talent to play a national power and emerge victorious.

This revelation was a first to Irish fans this season, but it was not the only "first" they encountered in the win over the Cadets.

- Pinkett truly broke free for the first time this season, garnering 133 yards and a touchdown on 27 carries. In the process, the senior from Sterling, Va. placed his name in first place on the all-time Irish rushing charts with 3,556 yards to pass Vegas Ferguson's total of 3,472.

- The win over 19th-ranked Army marked the first home victory over a nationally-ranked team since 1982.

- The Notre Dame defense stopped a wishbone offense for the first time in a couple of years. The Irish bent but refused to break to the Cadets, holding them almost 200 yards shy of their rushing average and 32 points below their scoring average.

The biggest "first" for the Irish, though, would have to be the way they played errorless football and turned Army mistakes into touchdowns. In fact, Notre Dame was able to take command of the game early when Army committed its only turnover of the day on the second play from scrimmage.

On the option, Army quarterback Tory Crawford pitched the ball over halfback William Lampley's head and in front of Irish safety Steve Lawrence, who fell on it at the Army 16-yard line. After Beuerlein (12 completions out of 20 attempts, 186 yards) hit split end Alvin Miller for a first down, the Irish had first and goal from the four-yard line.

At this point Faust, who had seen his team squander similar scoring opportunities all season, put in a three-man backfield with which the team had been practicing for two weeks in preparation. The strategy worked four plays later when junior fullback Pernell Taylor lunged over from the one. The touchdown gave the Irish a quick 7-0 lead and, more importantly, the confidence and momentum with which they would play the rest of the way.

"It gave us lots of confidence," said Pinkett in reference to the early Irish touchdown. "Our offense has lots of talent, and when you don't get touchdowns it is extremely frustrating. Once we got the touchdown it

Army quarterback Tory Crawford attempts to pitch the ball as he is dragged down by Irish defensive tackle Eric Dorsey in the third quarter of Notre Dame's 24-10 victory on Oct. 19. On the play, Crawford pitched to teammate William Lampley who carried the ball into the end zone for an apparent touchdown. Referees ruled Crawford's knee had touched the ground, however, and nullified the score. Marty Burns details the game at left.
