Senate disbandment referendum delayed: HPC to meet tonight

By FRANK LIPO
News Editor

A student referendum concerning the possible disbandment of the Student Senate has been postponed one week, according to Maher Mousher, who handles constitutional affairs for Ombudsman.

The referendum was scheduled for tomorrow.

A letter signed by presidents from nine halls calling for a special meeting of the Hall Presidents' Council tonight prompted the postponement. In the letter, delivered to The Observer last night, the presidents said that last week's vote, which approved an amendment to the constitution to disband the senate, was "taken in haste."

The letter said, "Since we consider this issue of disbandment significant to student life, we feel we must reconsider our votes."

"We're not saying people should say no to the disbandment. We're saying people should be more informed on the issue," said Glen Sgambati, Holy Cross Hall president.

The ten signers of the letter comprise one-third of the HPC. According to HPC bylaws, that number is enough to call the special meeting. If a two-thirds quorum (17 of 25 members) attend the meeting tonight, the HPC can discuss the amendment. A majority of that quorum would have to vote to overturn last week's vote.

"I think holding off a week is great. I'm not sure everyone knows what they're voting on," said Bill Healy, student body president and one of five sponsors of the amendment to disband the senate.

"The key is misinformation," said Sgambati. In a vote before October break, the HPC voted by more than the necessary two-thirds majority to bring the disbandment issue before the student body in a referendum.

In a second vote last week, the HPC proposed an amendment to the constitution to disband the senate. Sgambati said HPC Chairman Kevin Howard led the members of the HPC to believe the second vote was just an extension of the first vote and not the approval of the constitutional amendment.

In effect, Sgambati said, the HPC did not know what it was voting on because the line-by-line changes to the constitution were not yet made at the time of the vote. He said the signers of the letter questioned the role the HPC would play in the absence of the senate.

"We have enough things going on in the hall... (The amendment) gives us a lot of authority and power that we didn't have," said Sgambati. "Hall presidents have a lot of obligations to their dorms... More respon-

By voting last Tuesday, we, as members of the Hall Presidents' Council, proposed an amendment to the constitution to disband the Student Senate. We feel that this vote was taken in haste. We were intentionally misled as to the content and ramifications of this amendment. Since we consider this issue of disbandment significant to student life, we feel that we must reconsider our votes. Therefore, we would like to call a special meeting of the HPC for Monday, November 4, at 8:00 p.m., in the conference room of Keenan Hall.

ND student gov't starts newsletter

By PATRICK CREADON
Staff Reporter

Editor's note: This article is part one of a two-part series examining new Notre Dame campus publications.

Notre Dame student government recently published the first of a new twice-per-semester newsletter titled We The People to raise interest in student government and its activities, according to Chuck Beretz, editor-in-chief of the publication.

"What we're actually doing is selling ourselves (student government)," Beretz said.

Student Body President Bill Healy "came to me at the beginning of the year with the idea of putting out a student government newsletter. His main rationale behind it was to make student government more accessible to the students," said Beretz.

Beretz is also the press secretary for the Healy-Lawrence administration.

Several students, according to Beretz, questioned whether the newsletter was a result of much of the controversy now surrounding the Healy-Lawrence administration.

"The fact that the newsletter came out at this time was a complete coincidence," he said. "It had nothing to do with the present conflicts in student government."

The staff of We The People consists mainly of Beretz and four reporters. All of the laying out of the paper is done by Beretz himself on his personal computer. The newsletter is distributed to each dorm by dorm representatives, according to Beretz.

"Everyone who is involved with student government has input to We The People," he said. "For instance, the article about Notre Dame's high phone rates for students started out as only a suggestion, but when we looked into it further, we found quite a story."

That article reported that Notre Dame students pay nearly 300 percent more for their phone services than do students at Indiana University. In all, six colleges were surveyed, and it was revealed that Notre Dame's rates were the highest, according to the report.

Beretz noted that because the newsletter is a student government publication, the articles only will concern student government affairs.

In the first issue of We The People, a personal letter from Healy and Lawrence was inserted. The letter was Healy's idea in an effort to clear up some of the present conflicts surrounding his administration and will not be a regular feature in issues to come, Beretz said.

Money was set aside in the student government's budget for the newsletter, according to Beretz.

"Although there is money set aside for the newsletter, we are probably going to sell advertising to outsiders. For now, however, we are only advertising student government activities," said Beretz.

"I feel that this was a great idea by Bill (Healy)," Beretz said. "We really needed something like this for student government."

"Before We The People, we didn't have anything that informed the students of our progress on a regular basis," he said. "Hopefully this publication will be carried on by student government administrations in the future."

The next publication of We The People is tentatively scheduled for early December, Beretz said.

'Real Beginning' ends: recall effort disbands

By THERESA GUARINO
Saint Mary's Executive Editor

Saying that with the force of student activism, "the current student government can be the effective leaders we need," the group of students organized to recall Student Body President Bill Healy formally abandoned their efforts to continue with the recall in a letter to The Observer yesterday.

The students, with Bill Kraus and Mike Vore as co-spokesmen, met with Healy Friday afternoon, to discuss the reasons for the recall, according to Kraus.

"We had an open dialogue between the group and himself (Healy)," Kraus said. "We expressed how we felt he had not represented the student body."

The letter states that Healy and Student Body Vice President Duane Lawrence had met with the student group to plan "effective means of protest" against recent administration decisions dealing with the Dillon tailgater incident and parietais issues.

"We told Bill we want to see him express the student outrage to the administration much better," said Kraus. "He has promised us a change."

"The (student government-sponsored) forum Wednesday was part of the signs that Bill was willing to listen and exchange ideas," said

Anne Marie Finch, a member of the recall group. "We wanted him to state his position and we think he has."

The group plans to keep, for two to four weeks, the 800 signatures they had gathered on petitions to hold the recall referendum. "We'll see if other people express an interest in the recall and we'd turn them over," said Kraus.

The letter also states that if enough students contact the group, protesting the abandonment of the recall effort, the members would reconsider their position. "Eight-hundred people signed those petitions and if they still want it, we'd have a responsibility to them," Finch said.

In the statement, group members state that "our fight will continue, albeit transformed," and urge students to contact them to "further voice legitimate student concern."

"We feel that we've achieved what we set out to achieve," said Kraus. "Our efforts had turned into unintended consequences."

The letter urges students to retain the Student Senate in the upcoming referendum, saying "it is the only truly representative body comprised solely of students that we have."

To vote in favor of disbanding the senate "would be to vote away our voice in student government," the letter states.

More leading business executives took their undergraduate degrees at Notre Dame than at any other Catholic college or university, according to a survey by the Financial & Economic Information Company of New York City. The study was based on Poor's Register, which contains data on approximately 70,000 presidents, vice presidents and directors of more than 40,000 U.S. corporations. When compared to other private universities, Notre Dame's 641 undergraduate alumni in the survey ranked the University seventh in the nation, and when compared to all American institutions of higher learning, Notre Dame's ranking is 20th. When the survey was done three years ago, Notre Dame was first among Catholic institutions, 11th among private universities and 23rd among all U.S. colleges and universities. - The Observer

Nineteen years of observing the University and the College

Nineteen years ago yesterday, Notre Dame students sat down at lunch and opened The Observer - for the first time.

"People were sort of stunned by it," said The Observer's premiere editor-in-chief, Robert Sam Anson, of the new publication. "It was a whole different breed of cat."

The Observer drew its life from the corpse of another student publication, The Voice. In late October 1966 Steve Feldhaus, editor of The Voice, "met with a handful of key staffers, assessed the newspaper's manifold diseases, and decreed euthanasia," according to the first issue of The Observer. Feldhaus tossed away what many called the rag, but he didn't throw in the towel.

"Because we killed the product didn't mean we were murdering the idea. There was a need for a news-oriented publication then, and there is now," Feldhaus wrote after The Voice went hoarse. Anson, who had been associate editor of Scholastic, decided to join Feldhaus' venture as co-editor-in-chief of The Observer. It was agreed that Feldhaus would retain financial control while Anson assumed responsibility for news content, design and personnel.

Not only did The Observer take its name from the National Observer, but it also borrowed its logo. Notre Dame's newspaper did not have anyone to design its own masthead and Anson always had admired that of the professional journal.

In its first issue The Observer dedicated itself to do just what its name proclaimed, "observe, remark, notice, comment and adhere." As Anson wrote in 1975, the newspaper did more than just print accounts of the latest good deeds of the Fightin' Irish and the Blue Circle. It editorialized against the Vietnam war and raised the demand that students be given a meaningful voice in the University's affairs. "We took special delight in going after sacred cows," Anson wrote in reflection.

These sacred cows ranged from Gen. William Westmoreland to Dr. Tom Dooley. The Observer broke the news that the senior class had voted to name Westmoreland "Patriot of the Year." In the same issue was an editorial denouncing this choice along with the basic concept of such an award. In another issue Observer editors suggested that Dooley might be in the grip of the Central Intelligence Agency. The headline read, "An Ugly American After All?"

Anson described his publication as outspoken with a definite political slant. "It was different and I think the

Sarah Hamilton

Editor-in-Chief

University needed a breath of fresh air" he said. The former editor acknowledged there also was an element of the crude in his paper.

In one incident this unrefined element almost got Anson and Feldhaus booted from the University. In December 1966 The Observer reprinted an article from the Barb, an underground paper at Berkeley. The article was a report of the United Sexual Rights Committee's attempt to abolish a law which prohibited nude parties in the Los Angeles area. One of the committee members was quoted stating the joys of watching others make love. He used a five letter synonym, which in another context can be found on the shelf of a hardware store.

Less than amused, Father Hesburgh called the article "the most irresponsible act in the history of Notre Dame," according to Anson and Feldhaus. The University president considered dismissing the two but instead accepted a formal apology presented to every Notre Dame student.

The Observer somehow survived those wild, crusading days of the 60s as well as nearly two decades of change. The newspaper's two new mastheads since Anson's first "borrowed" logo are insignificant alterations when compared to other areas of growth.

Since 1966 the newspaper has grown from a weekly to a daily and the average issue has increased from 12 to 16 pages. Today more than 100 students from both Notre Dame and Saint Mary's comprise The Observer staff. Together these people work to present the issues and events of both campuses fairly and accurately and to provide a forum for the free expression of ideas.

Considering all of the improvement, I'd like to think that a more efficient distribution system is the reason why fewer people wait outside The Observer office for each day's paper today than in 1966.

USA Today publisher Black heads 'fastest growing paper'

By ANN KALTENBACH
Copy Editor

Cathleen Black, publisher of USA Today, told a forum at Saint Mary's Friday afternoon the publication, once "ridiculed" by skeptics, is now the nation's fastest growing new newspaper.

"We sell 1,400,000 copies per day," Black said, adding that approximately 90 percent of the country is covered by USA Today.

Black, the first female executive-in-residence at Saint Mary's, spoke at a luncheon of the College's Business Associates and lectured in an advertising class.

Speaking at a forum in Stapleton Lounge, Black explained the newspaper's struggle for success.

"We were ridiculed by more skeptics than you can imagine," she said. "Three years ago, people didn't think USA Today had a chance of making it."

Black said the press was USA Today's worst critic. Moreover, she said, the paper was dubbed "The McPaper of Journalism," referring to McDonald's brand of fast food versus USA Today's brand of news stories.

Defending the paper from such criticism, Black highlighted the credibility of the Gannett Co., Inc., the parent company of USA Today. She said Gannett is a nationwide information company which publishes 87 daily newspapers, including USA Today and 38 non-dailies. It operates six television and 14 radio stations and the largest outdoor advertising company in North America.

She said Gannett also offers marketing, news, television production, research and satellite information services.

Black also spoke of Gannett's strides in other areas.

"Gannett is the number one company in affirmative action and equal opportunity. Gannett has felt firmly for affirmative action for a long time," Black said.

Supporting this statement, she said Gannett employs 29,000 persons, 43 percent of whom are women. She added those statistics are "practically unheard of in any company today."

Black joined USA Today from a position as first woman publisher of a weekly consumer magazine, New York, which she helped turn around to a highly profitable publication. A graduate of Trinity College, a private women's college in Washington D.C., she previously served as associate publisher of Ms. magazine.

She sits on the Gannett Management Committee and recently was chosen as an insider of the Gannett Board of Directors.

Discussing women in management positions, she said, "I believe managers are not born. Managers learn as we move along."

Quoting former congresswoman Geraldine Ferraro, she added, "Men assume office with the assumption of success. Women assume office with the burden of proof."

Cathleen Black

"I have a lot of self-confidence," Black said, adding, "It's impossible to move forward... without thinking of yourself as a winner."

Black said, although she's "not driven like Lee Iacocca," good judgement in management is important. Black added she likes being a manager and the sense of authority she can assume from it.

Nevertheless, the publisher said, "I have been in the hot spot and in the limelight. Much of the press coverage about me and USA Today has been very positive."

On another note, Black discussed USA Today's strategies for profitability, including advertising revenue and cost control.

"The cost has been staggering for USA Today. In the first two years, money was spent to accomplish the job. Cost control in the next three to five years will be much more stringent," she said.

A four-color advertising page, when the newspaper was launched, cost a few thousand dollars, she said. Today, it has soared to $33,461.

"We will be aggressive in page cost in the coming years," said Black.

As of Nov. 1, advertising prices were increased seven percent while circulation was increased 100,000. Another advertising increase of 9.8 percent will be implemented March 1, Black said.

"We must be aggressive in pricing to achieve profitability," Black added.

Black noted that the price per issue, originally 25 cents, recently was hiked from 35 cents to 50 cents.

"We have led the charge for the newspaper industry. We saw no falloff (of readership) between the 35 cent to 50 cent increase," she said.

This showed the USA Today's "readers are hooked," Black added.

The wide circulation of USA Today constitutes much of its success, according to Black. The newspaper is printed in 30 cities around the United States and is sold in 113,000 vending machines around the country, which Black amusingly referred to as "those wonderful blue and white machines that have graced the landscape of America."

Black said the International Herald Tribune, the USA Today world edition, is selling 20,000 copies per day in thirty countries after only 17 months of business in this sector. This newspaper, according to Black, is rivaling the Wall Street Journal Europe which sells 28,000 copies per day.

"For Americans overseas," Black said "we are the exact right read."

USA Today hit the presses three years ago with the ambition of becoming the nation's only national interest daily newspaper. It is known for its heavy dose of entertainment and human interest stories, two pages of state-by-state news briefs and its sports section geared to television.

Black told an advertising class at Saint Mary's that because of the newspaper's color and brevity, "We are geared to the TV generation."

Founder of Tenn. 'former prisoner' program visits ND

By JOE MARKEY
News Staff

Father Jack Hickey, the founder of a Nashville, Tenn. prisoner release program, was on campus last week to discuss the possibility of creating a similar program at Notre Dame.

Hickey's program, called Dismas House, has students and community volunteers help former prisoners readjust to society.

Hickey first saw the need for such a program while serving as chaplain at Vanderbilt University in Nashville.

Through a community outreach program for prisoners which Hickey had coordinated with some Vanderbilt students, he noticed prisoners being released with no place to go.

"Any stable relationships which the prisoner may have once had are lost while he is in prison... he is released into a cold community where he is treated as an outcast," said Hickey.

In order to satisfy the needs of released prisoners, Hickey asked active students of his group to form a "collective." Eleven students volunteered to share a house, under the direction of Hickey and another Dominican priest, with former prisoners who were trying to readjust to society.

The name "Dismas House" was chosen because it was the name of the good thief crucified alongside Christ, Hickey said.

Hickey emphasized the humanity of the prisoner saying that after release he should be called a former prisoner rather than an ex-convict. "Former prisoner" suggests imprisonment while "ex-convict" connotes the offense, Hickey said.

"A criminal is not just a criminal, but usually only a poverty-stricken person with inadequate resources - no education, no skills, no family, no friends," said Hickey.

In prison, where crime is the social norm, the person's character is impoverished instead of rehabilitated and his freedom and sense of responsibility are taken away, according to Hickey.

"Lack of freedom is the lack of freedom to choose good over evil," said Hickey.

Upon release the prisoner is incapable of seeking alternatives and can only live from day to day, Hickey said.

Dismas House seeks to help former prisoners utilize their freedom in order to discover alternatives and to give them confidence in relationships, according to Hickey.

"At first they are suspicious because they have never been able to trust anyone, and they think that Dismas House is trying to exploit them somehow," Hickey said.

"Once they realize Dismas House is sincere, they feel happiness and see that life is not a downer," said Hickey, adding, "By choosing a creative lifestyle, we really can affect things."

The role of the student in Dismas House is two-fold, he said. While the students serve as role models, they receive a rich learning experience as well because most students have been isolated from different types of people.

"It's a pretty normal place for the students," he said. "We're not looking for a student with a missionary or counselor attitude - just a normal person."

The atmosphere at Dismas House is safe and non-violent, he said, adding that the two basic rules are "no violence and no threats of violence."

Eight students live in the house with eight former prisoners. Students pay rent, which covers three-fourths of the operating budget, and do chores. There are volunteer cooks, he said.

The head of the house holds three intensive interviews with the prisoner seeking admittance into Dismas House. Once a former prisoner is accepted into Dismas House, he gets a job within an average of ten working days, Hickey said.

Hickey said that although some people do not fully understand the situation and tend to remain ignorant, "most are glad to see something accomplished."

Similar programs are being started at the University of Vermont, Trinity College, and Saint Michael's College, he said.

Director of Community Relations James Roemer has been appointed to head the planning of this project at Notre Dame.

Anyone interested in being involved in Dismas House of South Bend may attend an informational meeting Nov. 18 at 7 p.m. at the Center for Social Concerns.

Outlaws ambush police in Mexico

Associated Press

MEXICO CITY - Drug traffickers in remote southern Mexico ambushed and killed 21 policemen who had found a marijuana cache, torturing some of the officers before shooting them, Mexican officials said Saturday night.

The army sent soldiers to take charge of the site, a settlement in the mountains along the border between the states of Veracruz and Oaxaca, the Veracruz state government said in a release from its press office.

Mexican Attorney General Sergio Garcia Ramirez and Veracruz Gov. Agustin Acosta Lagunes were meeting in the state capital of Veracruz to oversee the investigation.

The Veracruz government statement said all 21 killed were state and federal officers. The statement did not specify how the details were pieced together from Cahuapan, a village of 200 families located approximately 90 minutes by boat along a river from the nearest large town.

A spokesman for the Veracruz government, Arturo Reyes Isidoro, told The Associated Press, however, that two agents had escaped during the ambush and contacted authorities at about 9 a.m. Saturday.

According to the Veracruz government account, the agents of the Federal Judicial Police and the Veracruz state police were patrolling the area for marijuana plantations as part of the federal anti-narcotics campaign, and came upon a load of marijuana that appeared ready for shipment.

The group returned to the site before dawn Friday to collect the marijuana and was fired on by an unknown number of drug traffickers who were waiting in hiding.

Some of the officers were killed immediately, the Veracruz government statement said. It said others were captured and, with their hands bound behind their back, were taken to a nearby ranch where they were tortured and shot.

All of the bodies later were dumped in the village of Cahuapan, the statement said.

Officials did not know if any of the police had fired back at the attackers or had wounded or killed any of them, the statement said.

Mexican drug agents have said that most of the country's marijuana crop, estimated at 700 tons a year, is grown in the mountains along the Veracruz-Oaxaca border. Most of it is shipped eventually to the United States, they say.

Shuttle carries on despite leak, fire

Associated Press

SPACE CENTER, HOUSTON - An air leak traced to a furnace and a loss of communications caused by a fire on the ground plagued the international crew of the space shuttle Challenger on Saturday, but officials said there was no threat to the astronauts or to their science mission.

Space agency officials said the leak caused the flow of oxygen and nitrogen gas from supply tanks to more than triple for a short time, and forced the astronauts to search for the source of the atmosphere loss.

Flight director Larry Bourgois said the problem was believed to be in a vent in one of five furnaces used to melt metals and glasses in the laboratory carried in Challenger's cargo bay.

Officials said Challenger carries approximately 200 pounds of surplus oxygen, enough to overcome any loss from the small leak.

While Mission Control was checking the problem, a communications ground station at White Sands, N.M., suddenly lost contact with the spacecraft.

Bourgois said later that a small fire at the White Sands center knocked out power to two computers that keep Mission Control in contact with a satellite that normally relays communications between the ground and shuttles.

Power was restored to one of the computers and communications resumed after approximately two hours.

Challenger's crew of eight, the largest ever, were working in two 12-hour shifts daily to keep experiments operating around the clock in the Spacelab module.

Officials in West Germany, which is paying NASA $64 million to fly the 76 spacelab experiments, were quoted by an interpreter as saying, "All the experiment systems are working perfectly. The astronauts are performing very well."

P.R. Sahn, one of the West German project directors, said he feels "we may have been too ambitious in planning the experiments for this mission."

"There may be too many experiments," Sahn said at a news conference at the science control center near Munich, West Germany. "Our colleagues in space are overworked and overburdened... They and the experimenters need more time to think."

U.S. proposes ceiling on strategic bombers and missiles

Associated Press

HELSINKI, Finland - The United States has proposed a ceiling on American and Soviet strategic bombers and a freeze on nuclear missiles in Europe as part of a new arms control accord with Moscow, a senior U.S. official said yesterday.

Other key elements of the package now before Soviet negotiators in Geneva include a ceiling of 3,000 on long-range nuclear warheads and no limits on submarine-launched cruise missiles.

The official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said there is "compromise" in President Reagan's proposal to overcome what he described as "hookers" - snags - in the plan Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev submitted five weeks ago.

For instance, the ceiling of 3,000 on intercontinental ballistic missile warheads is 500 higher than the initial U.S. position in the Geneva negotiations. It would allow the Soviets to retain more of their land-based missile arsenal, the heart of Soviet nuclear strength.

Gorbachev called for a 3,600-warhead limit on strategic ground missiles, bombers and nuclear submarines.

The U.S. official said that if the Soviets accepted the American package deal, there would be no mobile Soviet strategic missiles or any new heavy intercontinental ballistic missiles added to the superpowers' arsenals.

This would presumably prompt the United States, in return, to scuttle the single-warhead Midget Man, which has stirred complaints by some members of Congress. The Soviet SS-24 missile and SS-25 mobile missile are much more advanced than the Midget Man, which is still on the drawing board.

But the outlook for an early agreement appears dim. Secretary of State George Shultz, who is expected to discuss prospects for an accord during two days of talks in Moscow beginning today, told reporters the two sides remain "quite a distance apart."

The main stumbling block is a Soviet demand for a "total ban" on all arms in space. The senior official said Moscow's definition encompasses all U.S. attempts "to counter objects in space." It is aimed at stopping Reagan's Strategic Defense Initiative, which envisages using futuristic technology in space to intercept and destroy attacking missiles.

After a rest stop here, Shultz leaves for Moscow this morning to discuss preparations for the Nov. 19-20 Reagan-Gorbachev summit meeting with Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze and Gorbachev.

Shultz made a courtesy call yesterday on President Mauno Koivisto and Foreign Minister Paavo Vayrynen. Finland is neutral in East-West disputes.

The ceiling on heavy bombers proposed by Reagan is 350, the official said. They could carry up to 1,500 air-launched cruise missiles.

By U.S. count, the Soviets now have 375 Backfires, Bisons and Bears. The United States has 263 B-52s.

Gorbachev's call for a total of 6,000 nuclear "charges" lumped bombers in with all kinds of nuclear weapons, from potent globe-girdling missiles to mines.

American and Soviet intermediate-range missiles in Europe, meanwhile, would be frozen at 140 under the U.S. proposal. This would require a reduction of 103 Soviet SS-20 missiles and no reductions by the United States in the Pershing 2 and cruise missiles, deployed among NATO allies.

The United States, however, would not build up to the 572 total approved by NATO by 1988.

sibilities would make me an ineffective hall president," he said.

"I understand what they are doing," said Howard. "They want to understand what the role of the HPC will be. That is their right."

Under the proposed amendment, the HPC shall advance the position of the student body on issues concerning student life, approve all cabinet appointments, approve appointments made by the Student Activities Board Steering Committee, and bring bills of impeachment against various elected and appointed officials.

"Discussion (of campus-wide issues) will move to the HPC," said Mouasher.

Also under the amendment, the Campus Life Council would determine who would represent the student body at Board of Trustees meetings, the budget committee would handle fiscal work as an independent committee with a slightly changed composition, Obud would handle elections by its own authority with appeals to the HPC, and the judicial coordinator would select the faculty and administration members of the judicial review board. The judicial review board handles appeals in disciplinary procedures.

The CLC retains final approval of legislative actions under the amendment.

Comedian Jay Leno shows who's the boss

Concerts

CATHERINE COFFEY
assistant features editor

Saturday night, Stepan Center. He appears on stage attired in black pants, blue shirt, tie, and yellow jacket with the sleeves rolled up.

"Ho, hoooo, hoooo," the man says as he tries to quiet the applauding crowd.

The man is Jay Leno, comedian and frequent guest on "Late Night with David Letterman."

His thoughts on comedy?

As Leno noticed the unique ceiling of Stepan Center, he remarked, "Nice ceiling you've got here. Looks like the inside of a giant Jiffy Pop."

"I think David Letterman and I share the same philosophy of humor. We both like to use words effectively. If you can dress up a sentence with colorful metaphors, then I think it makes it that much more interesting for people to hear, plus it makes it that much more funny."

Leno uses no props, relying instead on gestures and his wit. As he noticed the unique ceiling of Stepan Center, he remarked, "Nice ceiling you've got here. Looks like the inside of a giant Jiffy Pop."

More examples of Leno's sense of humor can be seen in his observations of fast-food restaurants. "Ever notice how those restaurants use sexual connotations to sell their food? Yeah, you've got to wonder what you're getting when you order a 'Wendy's hot and juicy' or a 'Big Jack' from Jack-In-The-Box."

Leno also pointed out that 7-11 stores have $10,000 worth of cameras watching $20 worth of Twinkies. "At 7-11," Leno said, "they really care about their customers. In fact, they care so much that their handicapped parking is across the street."

Leno took time to explain the major difference between men and women. "All men like the Three Stooges, and all women think they're idiots. I mean, you ask a guy to name the three men he admires the most, and he'll say, 'Abraham Lincoln, Albert Einstein, and Moe,'" Leno said.

In the course of the evening, Leno had the opportunity to poke fun at some of the different areas of study on campus. "Oh, so you took courses in literature, philosophy, language..." Leno says, pretending he's reading a resume. "Ummm, you can take cab number 7."

In response to a communications major in the audience, he said, "So, what does that involve? Learning how to dial a push-button phone?"

Despite Leno's chiding, the audience gave him an encore, during which he discussed his wife's cat. "I hate cats," said Leno. My wife's won't eat anything except Friskies Buffet. I don't mind the friskies, but the buffet... I mean you've got to set up the tables and get out all the serving spoons. And those tall, white hats. I hate wearing those tall, white hats."

Most people would think he could hire someone to feed his cat, considering the ticket price for the show was $12.50. Yet the show was well worth the money. Leno's style is similar to such reputable comedians as Steve Martin and Johnny Carson, and his material is easy to relate to. Leno concentrates on subjects that appeal to a wide variety of people, usually commenting on everyday trivialities.

Leno lived up to his reputation as "the Bruce Springsteen of Comedy," delivering a two-hour performance. And what a two hours it was.

Spirits soar in ACC with Christian singer Amy Grant

Concerts

MARY REYNOLDS
features writer

As ghosts took to the streets Thursday night, spirits of another kind filled the ACC as Christian-rock singer Amy Grant shook the crowd with her uplifting message. "I want you to know that God is God," she told the audience, which ranged from high school students to families with small children.

Christian singer Bob Bennett opened the show with songs from his album, Non-Fiction. Accompanying himself on guitar, Bennett started the audience clapping and singing. As the crowd screamed, Grant appeared on stage amid a mass of smoke and purple lights, and opened the concert with an energetic version of "Too Late."

"You're going to hear a lot of songs from an album called Unguarded," she told the audience. In keeping with her word, she then broke into an upbeat rendition of "Love of Another Kind," the opening song on that album.

Grant proceeded to bring the audience to its feet with "Wise Up" and "Sharayah." A highlight of the concert was her performance of the mystical "El Shaddai."

Midway through the concert, she yielded the stage to guitarist Gary Chapman, who performed one of his own songs. Backup singers Kim Fleming, Renee Garcia, and Donna McElroy next rocked the audience with a song of their own.

After returning to the stage, Grant told the audience, "While we're young, let's love hard and do all the things we won't be able to do some day." She then sang "I Love You," which she wrote for Chapman, her husband.

The crowd screamed as Grant rocked her way through "Love Will Find a Way." To break up the concert, she performed a big band-type tune called "Fat Girl," complete with a bubble machine.

Throughout the concert, Grant's enthusiasm kept the energy level high inside the ACC. As she performed, she moved to the music with her unique knee-up dancing, which is faintly reminiscent of an Indian war dance.

As the concert drew to an end, she said, "There are a lot of great things in life to celebrate, and I'll tell you one," and then she broke into the powerful "Emmanuel." She ended the concert with "Straight Ahead" as the crowd clapped and cheered.

The popular opinion might be that God and good music are mutually exclusive entities, but Grant proved this wrong as she filled the ACC with her music. The emotions of the concert are perhaps best described by a banner which hung on the wall of the ACC during the concert: "Love found a way."

Wanted: competent leader for student position

Wanted: a full-time student who can handle a full-time job. Must be an experienced volunteer able to do things beyond his control, receive hate mail with a smile, dominate an administration unwilling to be dominated, stay in touch with 8,000 constituents, and be perceived as the traditional scapegoat - the leader without followers - the voice unheard.

so it goes

The job, one which may be open soon, is that of student body president. Life at the top can be lonely, as Bill Healy is finding out. One cannot help but feel sorry for him; however, students should not elect or keep an official out of pity. If being kicked out of office is the worse thing that ever happens to Bill Healy, then his will have been a good life.

Leadership is a learning process. Mistakes have been made, but Healy can become a much stronger individual if he incorporates the lessons which he painfully has been taught.

Healy's problems rest as much in perception as in substance. What people perceive Healy as doing is as important as what he is actually doing.

Even if he survives the recall petition, Healy faces a plethora of problems. Hopefully, his vision will be perceived as clearer and his spine perceived as stronger. Perceptions, though, persist long after changes have occurred.

One must admit his holding an open forum last Wednesday was as gutsy a call as a leader can make. Healy knowingly walked into a lion's den to discuss his administration's record. Also, the government newsletter, which has been in motion since last semester, finally has commenced publication. And despite complaints of his handling of the Dillon Hall taigater, Dillon President John Husmann has come to Healy's defense.

In short, while it may be too little too late, Healy has begun to articulate, communicate and act on his vision of student government's purpose and place at Notre Dame.

His opponents argue Healy is manipulating friends and foes to save his own seat; however, Healy alone can serve as judge of his motives.

The questions Healy should be asking of himself are whether he is placing his interests before those of the institution he leads, whether his primary goal is to save himself or student government and whether his continued presence promotes or inhibits the common good of the student body.

The institution must come before the individual. Healy exists to serve student government; student government does not exist to serve Healy.

Healy's supporters have stressed if Healy is elected or kicked out of office, then student government will stop functioning. This is true only if those volunteers in student government place their loyalty to Bill Healy before their loyalty to the students and to student government. If a new leader is selected, all they need do is offer their resignations. The new president can keep them aboard or set them adrift.

If, and it's a big if, Healy survives the recall, he should legitimize a mandate he is perceived as never having received. Students as a whole see Healy as having been elected by default. Healy is not viewed as having won the race; his opponent lost it. Had the election scandal not occurred, Healy, according to many, would not be president today.

In fact, though carrying all but three dorms and garnering 55 percent of the vote, only 44 percent of the students voted, making the turnout the lowest in at least five years.

In calling for a new election, Healy would be placing his head in the lion's mouth. If Healy loses the election, the student government was never his to lead in the first place. If he wins, then he has an opportunity for "a new beginning." He will have gained credibility, something he never has had and something a leader cannot do without.

Being perceived as too willing to attack student organizations and unwilling to attack the administration, Healy can transform himself into a leader who students trust as the keeper of their interests.

If attacking the administration is not in the best interest of students or if pushing too hard on one issue jeopardizes other important goals, then Healy simply has to state what he is doing or not doing and why he is doing or not doing it. He must be honest with himself and with students. Many students do not perceive him as such at the moment. Whether he is or not, only he knows.

As student body president, Healy should clean up the executive branch of student government by spending less time in his office and more time in the student halls, cutting down the size and focus of his branch of the government, delegating the paperwork, selecting realistic goals, prioritizing those goals, communicating the goals directly to his peers and implementing long-term strategies to achieve the goals.

Knowing the art of the possible, a student president must not give his peers false expectations. What cannot be done cannot be done. For too long, too many student body presidents have undertaken tasks in which they lack the means to attain the ends. Hence, the perceived feeling of impotency. It is far better to do a little well, than a lot of nothing.

Student government is not, never has been and never will be the panacea to all the students' problems. Healy must communicate this to those who think otherwise.

If Healy does do this, then the problem of poor perception gradually will eliminate itself.

I cannot say this strongly or often enough: Leadership is a learning process, and each one here learning is a first-time leader.

Let us hope all those involved, students and student leaders, have learned something in the past few weeks about themselves and the nature of the institutions which are a part of their lives. If they have, then what happens this week will not mark the end of the beginning nor the beginning of the end, but rather "a new beginning."

Joe Murphy is a junior government and international relations major and the Viewpoint editor of The Observer.

Anti-Apartheid Network responds to ND's policy

As a coalition of various interest groups on campus and as a representative of many student and faculty members in the Notre Dame community, the Anti-Apartheid Network would like to respond to the University's new "Policy Statement on South African Investments" as approved by the Board of Trustees over the fall break. We applaud the board for recognizing the "moral imperative" that Notre Dame use its influence to help end apartheid.

guest column

Clearly, investment policy is a means to that end. The new policy falls far short of the pressure required to bring "the South African government to abandon apartheid and to negotiate with legitimate black leaders."

While the policy statement has adopted the revised Sullivan Principles and established further limitations on investment, it fails to use the ultimate threat of divestment to its full potential. The policy notes further decisions on investment or divestment will be based on "genuine negotiations and the ending of apartheid," but it does not establish any deadline for these conditions to be met.

Members of the Anti-Apartheid Network feel serious pressure on the South African government will not be brought about until the leaders of apartheid understand there is a real danger of U.S. corporations pulling out of that country.

This judgment is not based on speculation, but rather on the observation of past South African reactions to sanctions as applied by the U.S. government and the curtailment of new private bank loans from the Chase Manhattan Bank and other financial institutions. The fact the South African government has waged an intense propaganda campaign in the United States further testifies to their fear of the divestment movement in this country.

We recognize the divestment movement may lead to disinvestment on the part of U.S. companies in South Africa and thus deny U.S. business a lever by which to administer further pressure. But we object to this being used as an excuse for not divesting University stock for the following reasons.

First, divestment is a process and not a sudden action. It involves first making the threat of selling stock if certain conditions are not met, and then carrying out the threatened action in a gradual, steady manner. The threat itself and the process are important forms of pressure.

Second, divestment on the part of Notre Dame does not automatically constitute disinvestment by U.S. companies. Rather, American businessmen in South Africa will feel the economic pressure of yet another large stockholder's divestiture and continue to push the white government for change. We feel the divestment movement is the main cause of current corporate activism in South Africa and should thus be continued.

Third, we disagree with the view that U.S. businesses have the potential to bring about significant change in the apartheid system. We are pleased that U.S. corporations, pressed by the Sullivan Principles, have brought some reform to the workplace, but are not convinced that these institutions can effect change in the more fundamental structures of apartheid outside the business environment.

Rather, these corporations have contributed capital, technology and administrative expertise to the system. They have paid taxes and supplied products to the state, military and police. Most U.S. companies have been in South Africa for a quarter century and have made very little progress in bettering the lot of the great majority of blacks.

Moreover, the escalating violence that currently reigns in South Africa demands immediate action, not the gradual, long-term foreign corporations offer. Divestment and, if necessary, escalating economic sanctions provide the only non-violent opportunities to end apartheid and civil war.

Finally, the argument fails to take account of black opinion and black leadership, and as such is paternalistic. If it is blacks we want to help in South Africa, then we should be listening to their call for divestment. We should be listening to the voices of Nelson Mandela, Bishop Desmond Tutu, Rev. Allan Boesak and Beyers Naude. We should be listening to the African National Congress and the United Democratic Front, not deciding what we think is best for them.

Tutu has said, "Those who invest in South Africa should not think they are doing us a favor; they are here for what they get out of our cheap and abundant labor and they should know that they are buttressing one of the most vicious systems."

Blacks have been told over and over what is best for them. They have been told to be patient, to wait, that change would come about gradually. They have waited, but they have seen no significant change, and now they can wait no longer. They are asking for our help now; they are asking for divestment now. The Anti-Apartheid Network believes it is time to respond.

Pat Mullen is vice chairman of the Anti-Apartheid Network and is representing the viewpoint of its members.

Dillon, administration take issue to the extremes

You are entering into a world where all sense of reality has disappeared, where students think they can do anything they please, where New Year's Eve parties are broken up after 2 a.m. because they violate the brackets, where looking at two sides of an issue is undeniably absurd. You are entering into . . .

Hello? Is anybody home?

It is time for somebody to go out and find the residents of Dillon Hall and the members of the Notre Dame administration responsible for making the rules that govern student life and bring them back to reality.

Mike Wilkins

here, there and back

It seems members of both groups have taken a vacation from the real world and become at least temporary residents of "The Twilight Zone." They have stopped off at that dreaded place where all your worst fears, no matter how crazy they are, become reality through the powers of your imagination.

Along the way, Dillon residents have somehow come to believe that there are no bounds to the exhibitions of their spirit, and that the administration is trying to take over their lives by making rules that suddenly appear between the lines of du Lac.

And the administration has been struck by the thought that the best way to punish a group of people is to take away privileges from those people and all their friends, and that the best way to get a better handle on students is to make rules that suddenly appear from between the lines of du Lac.

Truthfully, you have to admire the spirit continuously displayed by members of Dillon. They throw themselves into everything they do and set the example for the rest of us to follow when it comes to supporting Notre Dame in virtually any endeavor. But sometimes Dillonites get a little carried away.

They do things that could be considered offensive by administrators, alumni or even students. When this happens, the administration has certain reactions.

At the same time, the administration has a justifiable role of maintaining a certain standard of life at Notre Dame. This is certainly an admirable goal and Notre Dame has long been known for the quality atmosphere that pervades the campus. But sometimes the administration gets a little carried away. They try to control students' lives instead of trying to guide them. When this happens, students have certain reactions.

Such is the situation now. A number of Dillon residents got carried away at a tailgater on another campus not too long ago. The administration responded by taking away one of Dillon's SYRs and assigning the dorm a service project.

The folks in the administration are mad because the conduct of a relatively small number of students gave a very bad impression, for which the Notre Dame's administration has received a large number of calls and complaints.

The folks in Dillon are mad because the whole dorm is being punished for the activities of a relatively small number of its members and because the punishment came as a result of activities that took place nowhere near the friendly confines of Notre Dame.

Both sides have legitimate complaints, but on their little vacations from reality they have each failed to see the other's point of view and have put things terribly out of proportion.

There are certain things both sides must realize. First, like it or not, students at Notre Dame represent the University at all times. Embarrassing conduct reflects poorly not only on individual students, but on the University as well. The University has a reputation to protect; that reputation played at least some role in bringing each of us here. When a group of students does something damaging to this reputation, they should expect to be punished.

The second important thing to realize is if the administration wants to set out rules for students to follow, they must be enforced fairly. This means students must know what kind of conduct is prohibited in different situations and that entire groups of people will not be punished for the actions of certain members of that group. If the University is going to establish rules aimed at protecting its reputation, it seems only fair that the students should be informed of these rules before they go out and break them, and that only those students who actually do conduct the rules are punished for their conduct.

So with these ideas in mind, I propose the following suggestions in an effort to bring Dillon and the administration back from "The Twilight Zone."

To Dillon Hall: All those residents involved in the tailgater incident should step forward and turn themselves in. Since their conduct has damaged the entire dorm, these individuals should be punished within the dorm, preferably with some kind of work to be performed for the dorm.

Also, in an offering of good faith, the dorm as a whole should volunteer to take on a service project either with the University at large, or better yet, with some organization or individual outside of campus. This will show the dorm is worried about its reputation and Notre Dame's and will work to see that those reputations are not damaged.

To the administration: Give Dillon its SYR back. This is a much bigger punishment than you realize, and also much bigger than most Dillon residents would be willing to admit. This will show the residents of Dillon and the entire student body you are willing to cooperate with students if they will do the same.

Also, establish firm interpretations of du Lac so students will know exactly what is expected of them. Show the students you are not trying to make rules that prevent them from having a good time with the Notre Dame flag flying overhead, but are merely trying to do your best to protect the reputation and atmosphere that is so important to Notre Dame.

The big question among students, and probably among members of the administration as well, is just how far the provisions of du Lac reach. The administration avoided this issue last year during the spring break incident. Now, the administration must face this issue and provide students with some clear guidance. Unless the administration clarifies its position soon, we are all going to end up in "The Twilight Zone."

NAACP will benefit entire ND black community

The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People is an organization which over the past several decades, has established itself as the most powerful minority institution in the history of the United States. Officially founded in 1909, the organization was designed to elevate the socio-economic and political status of blacks in the United States.

Lester Flemons

guest column

As the years progressed, the NAACP gained tremendous power and influence, particularly in U.S. politics. In the 1960s the organization made political history by winning passage of the 1964 Civil Rights Bill, the 1965 Voting Rights Bill, and the 1968 Fair Housing Act. Membership in the NAACP also progressed, reaching 91,000 in 1919 and a staggering 400,000 in 1985. In the 50-year period immediately following the NAACP's inception, blacks gained more rights than they had gained in the previous 200 years.

Recognizing the need for such an organization at Notre Dame, several black students took the initiative and set out to charter the organization last spring. Led by senior government major Carlton West, and assisted by Melva Martin, president of the local South Bend NAACP chapter, the group succeeded in establishing the Notre Dame's first NAACP college chapter. "Black students at Notre Dame's need to know that they have an organization like the NAACP behind them," stated West.

"Not only will the organization add unity to the black population at Notre Dame, but it will also give black students an organized network for which they may register any complaints or observations they may have."

West and his colleagues noticed that in the fall of 1984, Notre Dame had admitted only 34 black students out of a class of 1,810. "The University's admittance of black students is an area which must be improved," West said. "If the administration does not take a course of action, the students will."

In addition to the problem of black admittance, West also cited Notre Dame's lack of black professors as well as reports of discrimination in dorms and classrooms. "In the past, black students and other minorities have had no one to complain to but themselves," West said. "Now these students have a structured organization which will not only listen to their complaints, but thoroughly investigate them as well."

According to West, another objective of the Notre Dame NAACP college chapter will be to improve the relationship between white and black students at Notre Dame. "It's difficult for whites and blacks to socialize together at Notre Dame," he said. "It's a disheartening situation because blacks tend to become isolated and therefore left out of the Notre Dame social life."

"I've heard several white students complain about the social life at Notre Dame. It would be interesting if some of those white students could be black for a few weeks. Then, they would really have something to complain about."

West is hoping that a proportionate number of white students will recognize the need for the NAACP at Notre Dame and will become members of the organization. "If the organization is truly to be a success, we need participation from all students of all nationalities," asserted West. "It's time for the student body at Notre Dame to come together for a very important cause. The fact that we are all human beings should override whether or not we are white or black."

On Sunday, Sept. 28, the Notre Dame NAACP college chapter held its first general meeting. West was not surprised that only 40 students attended the meeting.

"I think that many of the students are waiting to see if the organization is for real," said West. "Once they see that we are dedicated to make this organization a success, I'm certain greater participation will result."

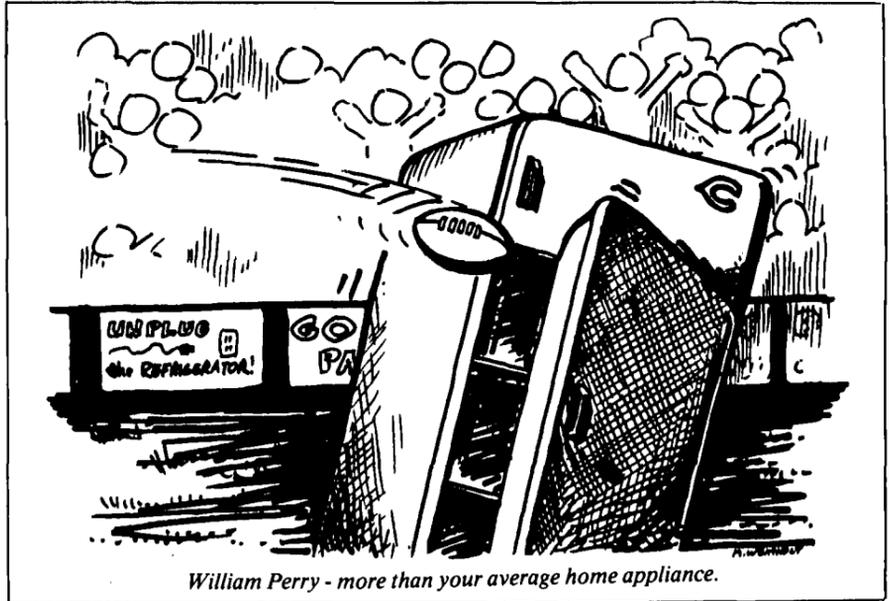

"Every senior must look within himself and realize that we did not do everything we could to better the situation for blacks at Notre Dame, but the future is always bright. If we want to see prosperity grow, we must act on the future's behalf," West concluded.

Although only 40 students attended the first meeting, West reported that membership for the organization, nevertheless, has doubled since then.

West strongly urges any students interested in becoming members of the Notre Dame NAACP chapter to sign up in the Black Cultural Arts Center office on the third floor of the LaFortune Student Center, or call any of the following students: Carlton West (277-7149), Dennis Tillman (1521), Martin Rodgers (1951), or Lester Flemons (2610).

Breeder's darkens award race

Associated Press

NEW YORK - Breeders' Cup Day at Aqueduct provided exciting competition, and when it was over, the championship picture was as cloudy as the skies under which the seven races were run.

"I think it made it more complicated for you guys," trainer John Veitch told a group of reporters Sunday when asked how his Proud Truth's upset victory Saturday in the $3 million Classic would affect the races for the 3-year-old championship and Horse of the Year.

It also kept Chief's Crown from probably clinching both titles. The Marlboro Cup winner, who also won the Breeders' Cup Juvenile in 1984, finished fourth, beaten by about 10 lengths by Proud Truth.

forced some crucial turnovers that kept Navy from putting up any big numbers on the scoreboard.

"After the first series, some of our guys came over and said that Napoleon and a couple of their other backs were carrying the ball a little loosely," recalled Irish strong safety Pat Ballage. "So that was on our minds when we went up to make a tackle. We wanted to put a good lick on them and try to knock the ball out."

That's exactly what happened, and the results were devastating for Navy. Coming into Saturday's game, the Midshipmen had lost the ball on fumbles only twice. But the Irish defense forced six fumbles, four of which it recovered, to help its own cause.

"We saved them all for this game," said Navy Head Coach Gary Tranquill of his team's turnover problems. "You can't turn the ball over six times and expect to win. We felt we could move the ball and I think we did move the ball well. But every time we started moving it, we'd turn it over."

Senior defensive tackle Eric Dorsey attributed that fact to Notre Dame's aggressive play, which was made possible by the success of the Notre Dame offense.

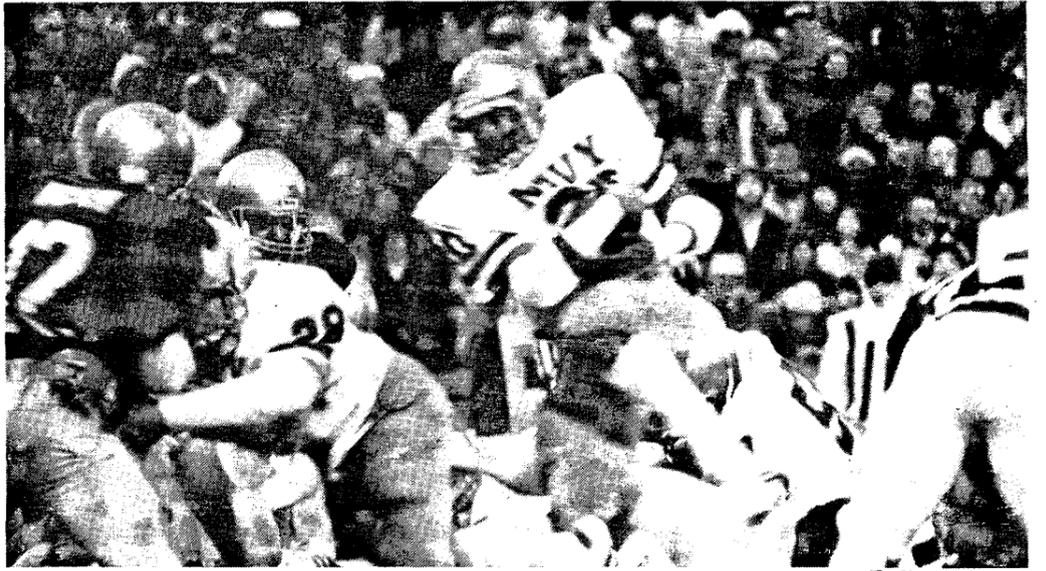

"You have to give our offense credit," noted Dorsey. "The more the offense stayed on the field, the more intensity we had to hit McCallum. I have to give him credit, he's a great running back. But he took some good hits out there today, and not many backs in the nation could keep from fumbling."

EXTRA POINTS - Notre Dame's 544 yards of total offense was the most ever by a Faust-coached team. . . Pinkett has broken the 100-yard barrier in all four of his games against Navy. He gained 129 yards in '82, 121 in '83, and 165 in '84. . . The Irish have now won their fifth straight home game for the first time since the final two games of the '81 season and the first three games of the '82 season. . . The Irish have now beaten Navy 22 straight times, with Navy's last victory coming in 1963.

Navy tailback Napoleon McCallum carries for some of his 124 yards Saturday against the Irish. McCallum also fumbled three times, directly resulting in three Notre Dame touchdowns.

Andrysiak

scored eight out of twelve times with Andrysiak at the controls.

Faust, though, did not attribute Saturday's offensive explosion to Andrysiak alone.

"It's probably coincidence that our offense got started when it did," he said. "Don't take anything away from Terry. He threw well, ran well and ran the club well. He did a super job."

Irish co-captain Allen Pinkett, another major factor in the offense's success, agreed with Faust's assessment.

"I think (Andrysiak) was in the right place at the right time," said Pinkett. "Our offense just woke up. We knew if we let Navy keep building its confidence, it would be a long evening. But I think our offense would have done the same even if Beuerlein would have stayed in."

Irish offensive guard and co-captain Tim Scannell was not as held-back in his praise for Andrysiak's performance.

"Things worked with him in there," said the senior lineman. "When he came in, he was a catalyst, he got things going. I can't say enough about the job he did."

As for Andrysiak himself, he was happy with his performance, but disappointed that it had no bearing on who would start against Mississippi.

"I was nervous going in, but it was a great way to get my feet wet," said Andrysiak, a native of Allen Park, Mich. "Before my first pass, I had butterflies and they never left. I did, however, get more confident as my passing continued. When I came in the first offense was looking for an answer. They were really pepped-up, trying to make it work."

Andrysiak did make things work, but Beuerlein will remain the starter as long as he is healthy.

"I was preparing all week as a possible starter," Andrysiak said when asked about Faust's decision to start Beuerlein. "Until Friday morning, I thought I would start. I've been waiting a long time for an opportunity. I've worked pretty hard.

"The way (Irish Quarterback Coach Ron Hudson) described it, I thought I had the job if I went in and did well. I was a little dissatisfied (in Faust's announcement that Beuerlein will start Saturday.) I thought this was a golden opportunity to win the job. I think I did well, but what can you do? I've just got to put on the chinstrap."

Bears use the 'Fridge to beat the Packers, 16-10

Associated Press

The Chicago Bears got a vintage performance from veteran Walter Payton and a bonus from William "The Refrigerator" Perry to beat Green Bay 16-10 yesterday for their ninth straight National Football League victory.

Payton rushed for 192 yards, including a 27-yard scamper for a key fourth-quarter touchdown, while Perry, a rookie defensive lineman who weighs over 300 pounds, caught his first TD pass in the NFL as the Bears remained the only unbeaten team in the league.

Perry gained national attention two weeks ago when he ran for a touchdown, also against Green Bay. The 4-yard toss from quarterback Jim McMahon Sunday came with 25 seconds left in the second quarter and gave the Bears a 7-3 lead.

The Packers entered the final quarter with a 10-7 lead, but the Bears narrowed the margin with a safety before Payton's game-winning run.

Giants 22, Bucs 20

Eric Schubert, just signed this week, kicked five field goals and Joe Morris rushed for a career-best 132 yards and a touchdown as the Giants came alive in the second half to down Tampa Bay, handing the Buccaneers their ninth straight loss.

Schubert, who until this week was an assistant coach at a New Jersey high school earning $1,000 for the season, hit from 24, 36, 24, 41 and 33 yards as New York overcame a 13-6 halftime deficit to raise its record to 6-3. The five field goals were one short of the Giants team record set by Joe Danelo in 1981.

Vikings 16, Lions 13

Jan Stenerud kicked three field goals, including a 28-yarder as time expired, lifting Minnesota over Detroit.

Stenerud had missed a 37-yarder with 4:12 to play before his winning kick, which was set up by Darrin Nelson's 21-yard punt return and Nelson's 23-yard run. Nelson ran for a career-high 122 yards.

Minnesota had taken a 13-3 lead 5:37 into the third quarter before the Lions stormed back to tie it on a one-yard TD plunge by quarterback Joe Ferguson and a 20-yard field goal by Ed Murray with 11:46 to play.

Bengals 23, Bills 17

Boomer Esiason threw for two touchdowns and fullback Larry Kinnebrew rumbled for another as Cincinnati erased a 10-point deficit and beat Buffalo.

Esiason, the American Football Conference's highest-rated passer, threw a 68-yard scoring bomb to rookie Eddie Brown and a 22-yard touchdown toss to tight end M.L. Harris as the Bengals improved their record to 4-5.

Aside from Esiason's 11 completions in 21 attempts for 193 passing yards, the Bengals also got 128 rushing yards from Larry Kinnebrew in handing Buffalo its eighth loss in nine games.

Seahawks 33, Raiders 3

Cornerback Terry Taylor raced back a pass interception 75 yards and blocked a field goal attempt that teammate Byron Walker returned 56 yards for another score as Seattle exploded for 23 points in the second quarter and beat the Raiders.

Dave Krieg passed for two touchdowns for the Seahawks, who snapped their own two-game losing streak and broke a five-game Raiders' winning streak.

Rams 28, Saints 10

Dieter Brock passed for 256 yards and two touchdowns as the Rams bounced back from their first loss of the season to beat the Saints.

The Los Angeles defense sacked New Orleans quarterback Dave Wilson nine times, with Gary Jeter, Dennis Harrison and Shawn Miller each logging two.

The Rams' Eric Dickerson, who shattered O.J. Simpson's NFL single-season rushing record in 1984, gained 108 yards on 23 carries, just the second time he's been over 100 yards this season. He left the game late in the fourth quarter with an ankle injury.

Steelers 10, Browns 9

Gary Anderson kicked a 25-yard field goal with nine seconds to play as Pittsburgh edged Cleveland in a driving rain to extend a 16-season stadium jinx over the Browns.

The Browns, falling into a tie with the Steelers, 4-5, for the American Conference Central Division lead, have not won in Pittsburgh since Three Rivers Stadium was opened in 1970. The last Browns' victory came in 1969, when the Steelers played in Pitt Stadium.

Oilers 23, Chiefs 20

Tony Zendejas kicked a 38-yard field goal with 14 seconds to play to give Houston a tight victory over Kansas City and a share of the AFC Central Division lead.

Flanner, Alumni advance in Interhall playoffs

By MICHAEL KEEGAN
Sports Writer

Even though the Interhall football season is coming to an end, the level of intensity has anything but died down. The two quarterfinal contests played this weekend were proof of this. In two hard-fought games, Flanner snuck by Stanford 8-7, and Alumni edged Howard 12-10.

In the opening contest at Stepan Field, Flanner defeated Stanford in a game that could have been classified as two different games instead of two different halves. The opening half belonged to Stanford's combination of strong defense and powerful offense, while the second half showed some creative play calling and gutsy play on the part of Flanner.

Stanford opened the scoring with an impressive first quarter drive which featured a few short passes and ended with a short run by Joe Davey. With the ensuing extra point, Flanner quickly trailed by seven points. During the rest of the first half, Stanford thwarted any attempt by Flanner's offense to score while their own offense ran up and down the field. Even though Stanford produced a lot of offense, their first quarter score proved to be their only one of the game.

In the second half, the previously stagnant Flanner team came to life. After a fumble recovery, their offense turned to some trick plays that eventually resulted in a touchdown. On a third down play, Flanner ran a reverse accounting for 30 yards. On the very next play, they called a halfback pass to Dave Kelly for 23 yards and a score. Following the touchdown, Timmy Arnold streaked around end for a two-point conversion which put Flanner ahead to stay.

The rest of the half was all defense. On Stanford's last drive, Flanner's Dave Kelly intercepted a pass to seal the victory.

"It seems that they outplayed us," said Flanner captain Tom Sullivan, "but when we had to play hard we did. We came up with the key defensive stands when we needed them. I must also credit our defense with a strong game. They kept us in it to the end."

they were going to play it simple. We handled their game plan well, but Flanner's execution of a few trick plays toward the end did us in."

In the second game between Alumni and Howard, hard hitting and some clutch passing and receivwith a touchdown of their own as quarterback Ken Schuermann connected with Paul Laughlin following a 45-yard penalty on Howard's defense. The extra point attempt, however, was blocked. Howard stretched its lead to four points with

On their last possession, Howard came inches short of advancing to the semi-finals. Starting with poor field possession, Howard decided to air it out. They initially threw short, but with time running out, Tom Pascinault, Howard's top receiver, grabbed a long bomb. Just when it looked as though he would scamper the last 25 yards for the touchdown, Joe Dearie, an Alumni defensive back, made a diving, game-saving tackle. With almost no time left, Howard tried to win on a 35 yard field goal. As the ball flew through the air, six anonymous Alumni residents stood below the goal posts and tried to jinx the ball which fell inches short. A belated fun bunch embrace followed as the six began to celebrate.

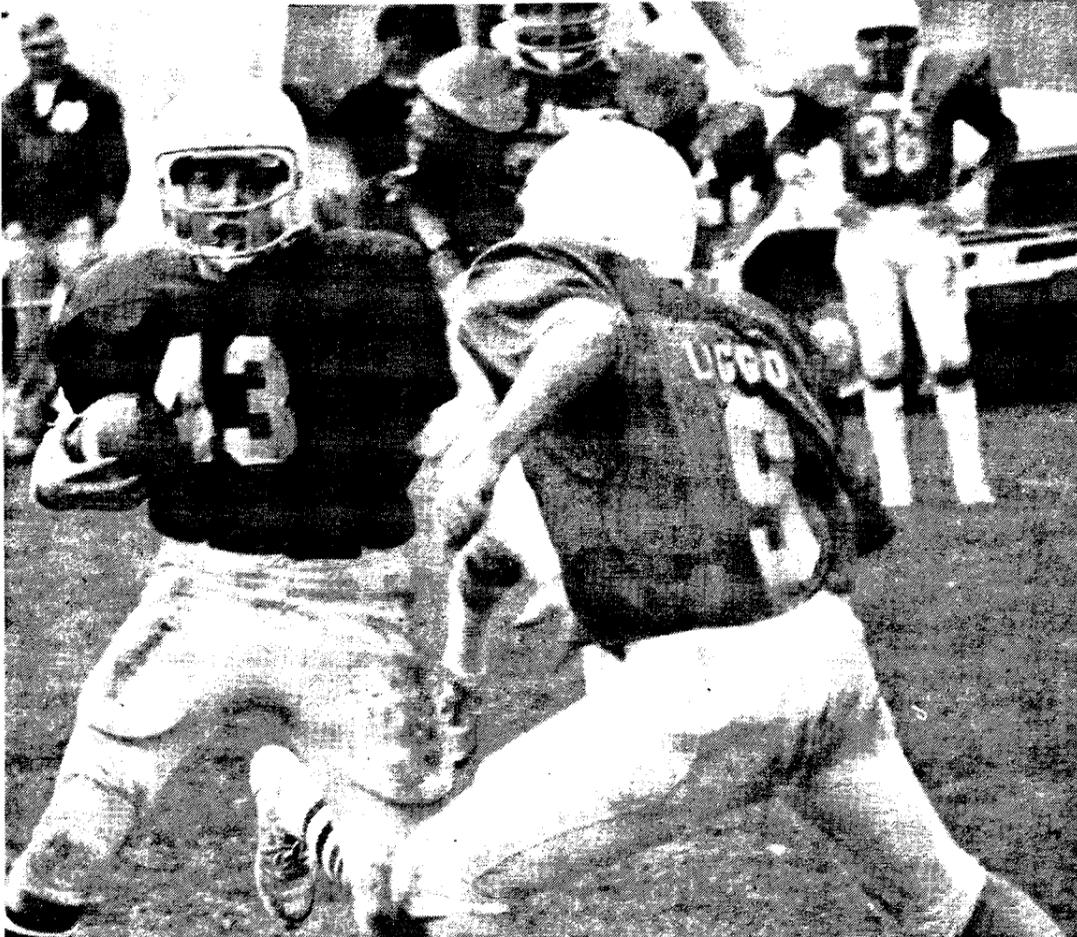

"We all felt extremely lucky to have won this game," said Joe Puetz "Our defense bent all day, but it never broke. They really beat themselves because of all the penalties. If they had not received a five yard penalty before their final field goal attempt, it would have been good by a couple of yards.

"When it counted, we played harder than they did," continued Puetz. "The game was physical to the end, and our players withstood the challenge. In addition to the great play of Laughlin and Schuermann, Chad Smith ran extremely well while the whole defense as a unit should be given credit. (Bill) Smith came up with a crucial fumble recovery, and Dearie made the tackle that preserved our victory."

"We played inconsistently," added freshman linebacker Mark Gibbs, "but in the end we were tough when we needed to be."

"We could have cleaned a few more clocks," added nose guard Jim Gero jokingly, "but we ran out of time."

Next Sunday, Alumni will meet Sorin, and Flanner will meet Grace on Cartier Field in the semi-finals. Both Sorin and Grace received first-round byes due to their regular season finishes. The winners of these games meet in two weeks for the Interhall championship.

Stanford Hall's Vince Caluori carries the ball the Interhall football playoffs. Flanner defeated against Flanner's Frank Liggio in the first round of Stanford, 8-7, and will take on Grace next Sunday.

Bill Jolley, Stanford's captain, believes his team played extremely well in losing.

"Today was the best game we have played all year," said Jolley. "Everyone gave his all. I give credit to (Flanner) because they did what they had to to beat us. Flanner said ing propelled Alumni to victory.

The game was a see-saw battle from the beginning to the end. Howard began the day in impressive fashion. On their opening drive, a first-down reverse play went for a 30 yard touchdown and a 7-0 score. But in the second half, Alumni answered a late second quarter field goal.

The second half belonged to both team's tenacious defenses. Alumni scored the only points of the half as Schuermann again hit Laughlin for a 10 yard score to give Alumni a 12-10 lead. Again, the extra point was muffed.

SMC soccer team blanks Loyola

By ANDREA LaFRENIERE
Sports Writer

The Saint Mary's soccer team defeated the Loyola (Chicago) soccer club 7-0 Saturday at Angela Field.

The competition marked the end of the season for the Belles, who finished the season with a record of 5-9.

Saint Mary's played an aggressive game, especially in the first half when it scored six of its seven goals.

Senior Sue Schierl started things off when she put in a shot seven minutes into the game. Schierl matched that goal minutes later off an assist by junior Mary Anne Perri.

Sophomore Karen Chandler made it 3-0 on an unassisted tally, and freshman Theresa Harrington registered the next two goals. Harrington scored her first goal on a free kick and was assisted on her second goal by freshman Sarah Creech.

Perri scored the sixth goal for the Belles and was assisted on the play by Schierl. The team's final goal came towards the end of the game when Schierl came across the middle to put in the score and complete the hat trick.

Belles' Head Coach John Akers was pleased with the team's strong performance, particularly in the first half of the game.

"I was glad to see us end the season with such a good game. We played the kind of soccer we're capable of playing, and we worked well together as a team, especially in the first half. It was good to finish on a positive note," Akers said.

Akers attributed much of the team's recent success to assistant coach Eric Evans, a Notre Dame junior. Evans began helping the Belles towards midseason. The team's won-loss record after his arrival was 5-3.

The varsity team will organize as a club for the indoor season which is scheduled to begin next week. In addition to its practices, the club team will compete in two invitational tournaments.

The first competition, sponsored by Budweiser, will be held at the University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee in mid-February. The second tournament, scheduled for Feb. 21-22, is the Saint Mary's Annual Soccer Invitational for club and varsity teams.

Notre Dame cruises to 41-17 victory over Middies

Offense rolls up 544 yards; Pinkett: 161 yards, 3 TDs

By LARRY BURKE
Assistant Sports Editor

Notre Dame's "Turnaround '85" continued in fine style Saturday afternoon, but this time there was a new twist.

Yes, Allen Pinkett had another solid game, picking up 161 yards and three touchdowns on 27 carries to outduel Navy's heralded Napoleon McCallum, and yes, the Irish defense held the opponent to just 17 points. But when the curtain went down on Notre Dame's 41-17 win over Navy, the center of everyone's attention was Terry Andrysiak, a sophomore backup quarterback who is playing more and more like a first-stringer each week.

Andrysiak connected on 11 of 17 passes for 195 yards and a touchdown, as his mobile quarterbacking style proved extremely effective against the Midshipmen.

"Terry's the type of quarterback that is good on rollout passes and bootlegs - outside runs with no protection," said senior offensive guard and co-captain Tim Scannell. "He's got good feet and good athletic ability, so those kinds of plays are his forte. We just took advantage of it."

Despite the sophomore's success, Head Coach Gerry Faust insisted that junior Steve Beuerlein would be the starting quarterback next week when Notre Dame plays host to Mississippi. Beuerlein has been the starter in 27 of the last 29 Notre Dame games.

When Andrysiak entered the game late in the first quarter, Notre Dame was trailing Navy, 7-0. When he left the game eight possessions later in the early fourth quarter, the Irish had a 34-10 lead. What happened in between was an impressive display of big-play offense and hard-hitting defense by the Irish.

Navy jumped out to a 7-0 first quarter lead with quarterback Bill Byrne leading a 74-yard drive that culminated in a one-yard Napoleon McCallum touchdown run. At that point it looked as if it might be a long day for Notre Dame, as Navy's Byrne was completing some long passes and the Irish were struggling offensively with Steve Beuerlein at the helm.

But enter Andrysiak, whose presence on the field had a rejuvenating effect on the entire offense. The sophomore quarterback completed three passes for 32 yards, and Pinkett rushed four times for 25 yards - the final carry a two-yard touchdown run - as the Irish drove 70 yards in nine plays to tie the score.

Andrysiak picked up where he left off on the next Irish possession, which started at the Notre Dame 42 after Navy's gamble on a fourth-and-four play backfired. Andrysiak drove the offense 58 yards in five plays for the go-ahead touchdown, with freshman wideout Mark Green's 40-yard scamper on a reverse setting up the score. Notre Dame led 13-7, as John Carney's extra point attempt was wide.

"I was surprised that they (Navy) went for it (on fourth and four)," said Irish inside linebacker Tony Furjanic. "They ran a sweep, but before the play started I didn't feel they would make it."

A 43-yard Pinkett run set up Notre Dame's third touchdown late in the second quarter. The senior tailback cut through a hole on the left side, picked up a key downfield block from Green and streaked down to the Navy four-yard line. Fullback Frank Stams bulled over the left side for the points and 20-10 Notre Dame lead.

At the end of the first half the clock finally did what the Navy defense could not do - stop Andrysiak and the Irish. Notre Dame was looking for a fourth touchdown with a first-and-goal at the Navy four-yard line, but a shortage of time and timeouts cost the Irish some points. Notre Dame had used two of its timeouts earlier in the half, and spent its final one with 15 seconds left. After Andrysiak's pass for Tim Brown was incomplete on first down, Pinkett slipped in the backfield on a second-down carry and the Irish were unable to stop the clock in time to get off another play.

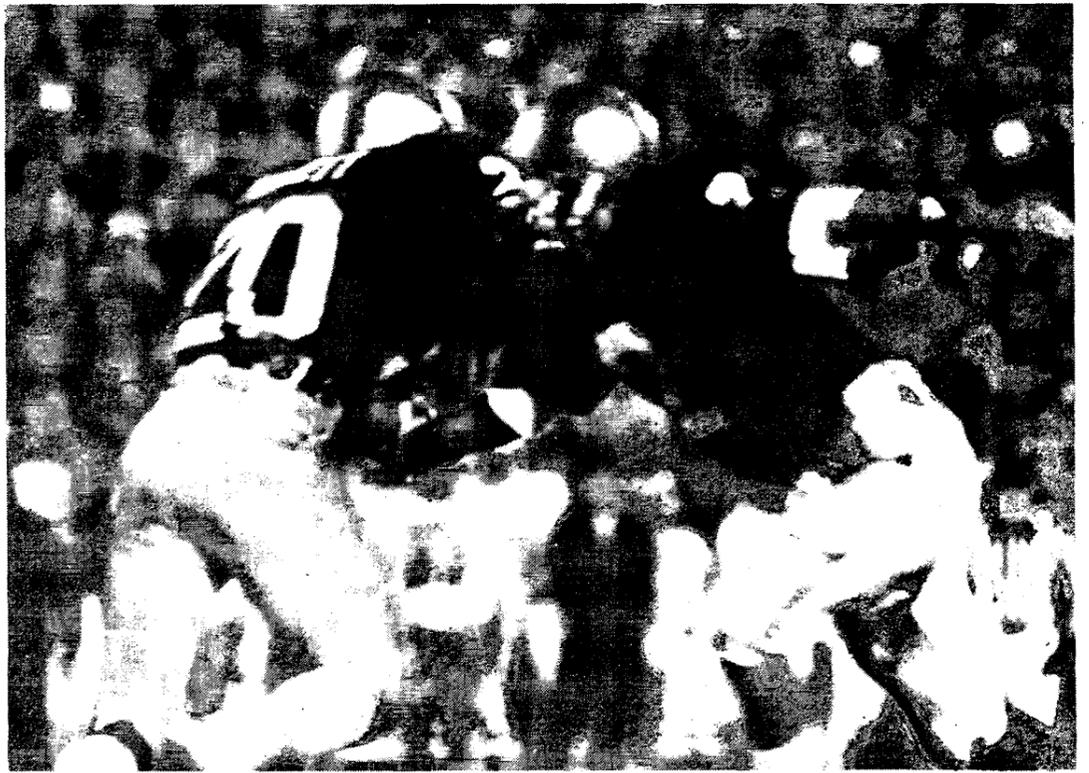

But that mix-up was overshadowed by Andrysiak's success as well as the play of the Irish defense.

Andrysiak drove the Irish to two more touchdowns in the second half. The first was a 29-yard sprint by Pinkett, and the second was a 48-yard touchdown pass to flanker Tim Brown. On that play, the sophomore wideout grabbed Andrysiak's pass and broke free from several Navy tacklers on his way to the end zone.

Brown had the best day among Irish receivers, catching five passes for 111 yards.

The Notre Dame defense, meanwhile, gave up a lot of yards but

Andrysiak the key to Irish win, but Beuerlein will remain starter

By DENNIS CORRIGAN
Sports Writer

Things were looking as bleak as the sky for Notre Dame late in the first quarter in Saturday's game against Navy. With starting quarterback Steve Beuerlein at the helm, the offense had sputtered, turning over the ball twice in its first three possessions. Worse, the Irish were trailing the Midshipmen 7-0.

But with the ball at the Irish 30-yard line and 1:23 remaining in the first quarter, Notre Dame Head Coach Gerry Faust sent second-team quarterback Terry Andrysiak into the game. The rest, as they say, was history.

Andrysiak promptly led the Irish on a nine-play scoring drive to tie the game. In Notre Dame's next two possessions, Andrysiak fashioned touchdown drives of 58 and 75 yards to give the Irish a 20-10 halftime lead on the way to a 41-17 victory.

Meanwhile, people were calling Andrysiak the next Notre Dame savior, envisioning him as the starter for the remainder of the season. Sorry, folks.

"Steve Beuerlein is our starting quarterback," said Faust after the game.

According to Faust, Beuerlein was still feeling the effects of a shoulder injury he sustained last week against USC and was unable to practice until Thursday. On Friday, Faust decided to play Beuerlein for the first few series and then insert Andrysiak.

"I called both of the quarterbacks into my office separately on Friday and told them the situation," said Faust. "They both understood the situation. Usually if one of our guys misses practice, we let the other guy play."

"But we wanted (Beuerlein) in for the first few series to see if (Navy) changed anything. He's got a lot of defensive checks, and Steve's got about 27 starts. We wanted his experience in there. We told Terry he would go in on either the third or fourth series."

Faust did say that the coaches changed the offensive game plan for Andrysiak.

"We planned a roll-out type offense," Faust noted. "We couldn't wait until Thursday to see if Beuerlein would be okay."

With the offense adjusted to take advantage of his mobility, Andrysiak was able to direct the Irish to 544 net yards of offense. He completed 11 of 17 passes for 195 yards and one touchdown, that being a 43-yard pass to Tim Brown, who broke several tackles en route to the endzone.

Andrysiak was aided all afternoon by spectacular catches from Brown, Reggie Ward and the rest of the receiving corps.

In the second quarter, Andrysiak tied the Notre Dame record for consecutive pass completions held by Angelo Bertelli and Joe Montana on a 16-yard completion to a diving Ward. The 10 completions came over the course of his play against Purdue, USC and Navy.

With Frank Stams, one-yard score in the second quarter, Andrysiak had guided the Irish to touchdowns the last five series he had run the offense. For the season, the Irish have

"Go east, young men!" That's a piece of advice which proved to be highly appropriate for the Notre Dame hockey team which returned home from a disastrous 0-4 Alaskan trip to host Kent State Friday and Saturday night. The Irish opened their home schedule with a 4-3 triumph Friday and then cranked up the offense to best the Golden Flashes 8-5 Saturday.

The Friday game began as a defensive duel with neither team scoring in the first period. Referee Doug Winston whistled seven penalties in the tight-checking frame.

Notre Dame finally broke the ice at 1:53 of the second period when Mike McNeill scored an unassisted power-play goal. Tim O'Neill tied the game for the Flashes at 4:09 of the stanza before Dave Tonna put Kent State on top with a power-play goal at 5:16.

The Irish, however, responded on their own power play a little over five minutes later when Tim Reilly set up Tom Mooney. Steve Whitmore closed out the scoring in the middle period when he tallied at 11:20. Greg Duncan and Dave Waldbillig picked up assists on the Irish scoring play.

After Kent State's Marty Schuette evened the score at 1:55 of the final frame, Brent Chapman popped in the game-winner, assisted by Mooney and Reilly, at 2:09. The Irish defense cracked down, and Notre Dame took it, 4-3.

On Saturday night, Marc Guay started in goal for the Irish while Danny Abraham got the call for the Flashes. The offensive action was hectic, as Notre Dame jumped to an early 3-0 lead.

Freshman Brian Montgomery got the Irish on top just 2:21 into the game. Whitmore set him up in front of the net, and the rookie center fired the puck home. Chapman made it 2-0 with an unassisted power-play goal at 6:04. Waldbillig took the unassisted route at 9:46 to give the Irish a three-goal lead before Kevin Harkonen pulled Kent State to within two with his power-play success at 14:12.

In the second period, Kent State sandwiched goals by Tom Carlson and Tonna around Notre Dame tallies by Rich Sobilo and Mark An-
