Rebel troops may control South Yemen in civil war

Associated Press

SOUTH YEMEN - Palestinian forces heading for Aden to try to arrange a cease-fire were barred from crossing this frontier post yesterday, and indications were that rebel troops may have seized control of South Yemen in this Marxist country's civil war.

Diplomatic sources based along the Persian Gulf said yesterday there were signs that President Ali Nasser Mohammed had been ousted, basing their assessment on reports received from their Aden missions and a transmission on the government radio wave length describing the president as "irresponsible."

But the British Broadcasting Corp. and an Israeli television monitor said Mohammed was on his way back to the capital, Aden, after fleeing to Ethiopia Saturday.

A radio station which said it was transmitting from Aden on behalf of an unidentified new leadership broadcast a communique yesterday indicating that rebels had ousted Mohammed after a week of fighting, a news report said.

Frontier guards at Quraish Border Post said fighting "is still continuing" in the capital.

"It is dangerous to proceed further because of the fighting, and anyway, nobody is allowed through," said the officer in charge of the post, who refused to give his name.

Fighting has shut down international communications with South Yemen and there has been no way to verify most reports. Diplomats in the region said the situation appeared ambiguous.

Three finalists named in Saint Mary's search for new president

By SCOTT BEARBY
Assistant News Editor

The search for a new Saint Mary's president is in its final stages after the College's search committee last week named three finalists for the post, according to Dorothy Feigl, acting vice president and dean of faculty at Saint Mary's.

William Hickey, acting president at Saint Mary's; Kathleen Ashe, assistant to the president at Rosary College in Illinois; and Bridget Puzon, acting dean of the college at Virginia's Hollins College remain in the running for the college presidency, said Feigl, who is spokeswoman for the search committee.

The finalists were chosen from a pool of 124 applicants, Feigl said.

The three candidates are in the process of visiting the campus for interaction with students, faculty, administrators and the Sisters of the Holy Cross. These visits will be completed this week, at which time the groups will complete evaluations on the candidates, according to Feigl.

Feigl said the candidates will be coming to campus in order to give the search committee some additional input from the Saint Mary's community before preparing a report for the Board of Regents. At the end of January, the board will have the opportunity to interview the candidates and send its recommendations to the Executive Governing Board of the College.

Feigl said she expects the Executive Governing Board, composed of members of the Sisters of the Holy Cross, to make the ultimate decision on the new president "sometime in February."

The process of finding a new president began last April when the search committee, composed of parents, students, alumnae, Board of Regents members and administrators, was formed. Feigl said the committee's unveiling of the three finalists marks "the most distinctive step besides the final selection," since preliminary work remained confidential.

A large number of sources were approached to form the original pool of candidates, said Feigl. She added that the sources consisted of a "wide range" of sources from within and outside the College.

Specifically, the committee sought suggestions from various members of the Saint Mary's community and contacted heads of colleges similar to Saint Mary's, as well as heads of religious orders. The presidential opening was also advertised in the Chronicle of Higher Education and other publications.

Feigl said she thinks the three finalists are "the best candidates" among the pool of applicants. Summing up the type of individual the committee was looking for as president, Feigl said it was looking for the best person for Saint Mary's at this point in its history and one who can best "support the mission of the College."

Feigl credits the success of the search to the members of the committee. "Each of the members took their responsibilities seriously. They were extremely thorough and conscientious throughout the search," she said.

Tutu, rock stars honor King holiday nationally

Associated Press

South African Archbishop Desmond Tutu joined yesterday in events honoring Martin Luther King Jr. as Americans of all races remembered the slain civil rights leader on the eve of the first national holiday marking his birth.

A candlelight memorial service was planned last night at King's tomb in Atlanta, in advance of today's official holiday. His widow, Coretta Scott King, was to place a wreath at the tomb today.

Tutu was among those scheduled to participate yesterday in an international conference in opposition to South Africa's apartheid system at Atlanta's Ebenezer Baptist Church, where King was pastor. He also spoke earlier at Ebenezer's Sunday morning service.

Today's scheduled observances included "Living the Dream," a musical celebration by several top recording stars and others in Washington, New York City and Atlanta. Performers will include such people as Bob Dylan, Joan Baez, Quincy Jones, the Rev. Jesse Jackson, Patti Labelle and more, with Harry Belafonte and Bill Cosby as co-hosts.

Belafonte, who is also chairman of the Martin Luther King New York State Holiday Commission, said the idea for the linked performances in three cities came from Stevie Wonder, a longtime proponent of a national holiday for King.

In addition to that program, Washington was to hold its 17th city observance of King's birthday. King's actual birthday was Jan. 15, but today was set as the federal holiday.

In Philadelphia, the city and Jackson's People United to Serve Humanity planned a celebration of brotherhood and freedom. In previous years, the city had sponsored a prayer breakfast in honor of King and PUSH held an separate ecumenical service.

In South Carolina, Gov. Dick Riley, Sen. Ernest Hollings, NAACP national President William Gibson and other officials were to gather on the grounds of the Statehouse in Columbia for speeches and song honoring King.

Elsewhere, radio stations throughout Rhode Island agreed to simulcast a two-minute excerpt of King's "I have a Dream" speech, to be followed by noon church bell ringing throughout the state.

Students at Lewis and Clark College in Portland, Ore., planned to begin a five-day fast to protest race discrimination. The fast, sponsored by the private college's South Africa Action Group, is aimed at showing support for American and South African blacks in their struggle for civil rights.

Some people protested the idea of a national holiday for King.

Members of North Carolina's White Patriot Party and other white supremacist groups marched in front of the state Capitol in Raleigh on Saturday, and held a rally in front of a Confederate monument.

Ku Klux Klansmen held a parade and cross-burning Saturday at Pulaski, Tenn., where the original Klan was formed in 1865.

ND, South Bend join for local King events

By BUD LUEPKE

The first annual national holiday honoring Martin Luther King Jr. will meet with limited on-campus celebrations as campus organizers pool their efforts with those of the South Bend community.

Gospel Choir President Rod Brown said this collaborative effort was chosen for fear that separately organized events at both the Century Center and on campus would detract from each.

The Center for Social Concerns is handling most of the Martin Luther King Day celebrations for Notre Dame students, said Martin Rodgers, co-president of the Black Cultural Arts Commission.

From 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. today the CSC is offering birthday cake and reflective readings. Tomorrow and Thursday at 7 and 9 p.m. the CSC will feature the film "King, Montgomery to Memphis."

A bus will leave from the CSC at noon and 3:30 p.m. today for the Century Center where most of South Bend's activities are taking place.

The events of the day, titled "Called to Live the Dream," will commemorate King's whole life rather than any one aspect, according to Gladys Muhammed, who organized the day's events.

"It will be a day of peace on which to remember Martin Luther King Jr. and hopefully to bring his dream into reality," Muhammed said.

Opening ceremonies, at which South Bend Mayor Roger Parent will be present, begin at 9:30 a.m. in the Century Center Foyer and will be followed by a televised panel talk show highlighting the meaning of the day.

From 10:30 to 11:45 a.m. the first of five seminars on King's life and relevant contemporary issues will take place in the Century Center.

"The aim is to isolate a special contribution of Dr. King's life in each seminar and explore the relevance of those contributions

Chicago Superbowl mania becomes too much to Bear

I used to think that I might someday like to live in Chicago. Now I realize it would never work.

It wasn't the cold, the Midwest or the politics that disillusioned me. No, what convinced me I would never make it in the Windy City is the latest four-letter word cursing the nation: BEAR.

It's worse than Grizzly Adams. Everywhere you turn, there are Bear hats, Bear signs, Bear songs. Before the NFC Championship game, Chicago fans were treated to a half-hour show focusing on the greatest symbol of Bear-hype titled "FRIDGE: The legend grows."

But the Bears do not limit themselves to terrorizing Chicago. The "Superbowl Shuffle" is a popular annoyance on the South Bend airwaves, and it apparently has made itself heard all the way to Washington D.C. National sports broadcasts have introduced us to William Perry's mother, and the Fridge himself can be seen on a McDonald's commercial near you. Even our school mascot, the symbol of the Fighting Irish, wore a refrigerator with the number 72 (William "The Refrigerator" Perry's number) at Saturday's basketball game.

There seems to be no escaping Bear-mania.

I don't deny that the Bears are a good team, nor do I begrudge Bear fans the right to cheer their team on to a Superbowl victory. Under ordinary circumstances, I might even be inclined to wish them luck. But after a long season of Bear-saturation, the mere mention of the Bears invokes the same reaction as Mary Lou Retton piping, "Energize me."

I don't believe mine is an isolated case. The overhype of the Superbowl-bound Bears polarizes football fans and casual television viewers throughout the country into two camps. Those who like the Bears become Bear-maniacs. Those who dislike the Bears or are indifferent toward them become Bear-haters. There is no middle ground.

Given the two-hour distance between South Bend and Chicago and the geographical diversity of Notre Dame students, it is possible for Bear-haters to survive at Notre Dame. As one approaches Chicago, however, the territory becomes more dangerous. Soon, there remain only Bear-maniacs and those who have never heard of football. The Bear-hater, no doubt, would be subject to brutal discrimination, social alienation and physical abuse.

OK, maybe the Bear-hater could survive winter in Chicago by avoiding all discussions concerning football and occasionally humming a bar or two of the "Superbowl Shuffle" on his way to work. Spring, however, offers no asylum. In Chicago, the warmer months are stalked by the Bears' younger brother, the Cubs. And those who care to remember the summer of 1984 will attest that Cub-mania (or Cubbie-mania, as more affectionate fans like to call it) is at least as annoying as Bear-hype.

In any other city, it may be possible to live a normal life and still hate that city's professional teams. Not so in Chicago.

Chicago fans are like no other fans because Chicago teams are like no other teams. Chicago fans thrive on disappointment. For years, these teams will sit latent at the bottom of their respective divisions, and every year Chicago fans support them, hoping against hope that they will climb out of the cellar.

When these teams finally enjoy some degree of success, their long-suffering fans lose all touch with reality. They feel obliged to talk, brag and gloat about their teams at every hint of an opportunity. They plan Superbowl and World Series victory parties before the season is half finished. Worst of all, they force their teams down the throat of anyone foolish enough to open his mouth while standing near a Chicago fan.

All this enthusiasm only serves to make Chicago fans look more foolish when their bubble inevitably pops. Their teams, no matter how great they look throughout the season, almost always choke when it comes down to the wire. And there are always plenty of Chicago-team haters around to bask in their pre-loss brags.

But none of this phases Chicago fans. Despite their disappointment, they obstinately support their teams, somehow summoning fresh optimism for each new season.

Chicago fans may well be the best fans in the nation. I am not, however, going to admit that in my column.

Thanks to you...
it works...

Army paid 10 times available rate for shipment of European goods

Associated Press

WASHINGTON - The Army paid more than 10 times the lowest rate to ship household goods of soldiers from West Germany to Washington because of a mistake by military clerks, according to computer records and federal officials.

Records show that the Army paid more than $565,900 for 46 shipments from Frankfurt, West Germany between May 1984 and June 1985. The shipments could have cost $51,300 if they were made through the most inexpensive companies.

"It looks like a booking clerk (in Frankfurt) made a mistake," said Col. George Kaine, public information officer for the Army's Military Traffic Management Command in Baileys Crossroads, Va.

The Army spokesman said the problem occurred because the personnel in West Germany were unfamiliar with the rate structure for shipping to the Washington area, which includes installations in nearby northern Virginia.

Kaine said the Army has no evidence that the problem went beyond Frankfurt-to-Washington shipments, adding, "We don't see any worldwide problem."

Kaine said the foulup was "brought to our attention" last October by General Services Administration auditors. He said the Army acted immediately to notify its shipping personnel worldwide of the correct rates for the District of Columbia area. "We have put a stop to it," he said.

Joseph Cosimano, an official in the General Services Administration's Office of Transportation Audits, confirmed the error. He said it was brought to the attention of his office by Army officials in West Germany.

The traffic management command is responsible for 800,000 personal property shipments a year.

The companies that arrange the moves are called freight forwarders. They have no trucks, ships or planes, but coordinate the moves with local moving firms. The Frankfurt-to-Washington shipments were handled under a category that utilizes local movers at each end and Air Force planes over water.

One company official, explaining the rate system, said forwarders purposely charge high rates in certain areas because they don't want the business in those localities.

Ken Armstrong, chief executive officer of Sound Forwarders, said the selection of his Bothell, Wash., firm to handle high-cost moves "puzzled me so much" that he called his data processing service to verify that his copy of the rate list for Washington D.C. was correct.

"You know where you stand in relation to other companies," Armstrong said. "A low rate tells them (the Army) that we want to do business in that area. Anything way out of line tells them we don't want business in that area."

"But we're required to handle all shipments tendered to us. If you turn a shipment back, they would suspend us for non-fulfillment of our contract."

Kaine said the error occurred because the shipping rates for the District of Columbia area include military installations in nearby Virginia.

One or more clerks in Frankfurt, seeing a northern Virginia destination for the shipment, assumed that the Virginia rates would apply and contacted a company that had low rates for that state.

Soviets make plea for disarmament

Associated Press

MOSCOW - The Soviet Parliament urged the U.S. Congress yesterday to accept the new Kremlin disarmament plan as "the only reasonable and feasible alternative to nuclear weapons" and renewed a plea that the United States halt nuclear tests.

The appeal through the official news agency Tass kept up Moscow's unrelenting publicity for the proposal and appeared to be part of the Kremlin effort to win Americans and others over to the plan.

"The time has come to put an end to the nuclear arms race madness ... The nuclear threat should be eliminated for good," the 1,500-member Supreme Soviet, or national parliament, told Congress.

The Soviet press yesterday said early U.S. reaction did not raise hopes for quick progress and stressed that a space weapons ban is essential to the plan.

Wright organized the seminars and his department is co-sponsoring the event.

Titled "Great People of Peace," the first seminar will examine, among other topics, how King would stand today on the South African issue. Other seminars will discuss the impact of contemporary economic policies on black families, the state of the black Church today, and the last seminar at 5:15 p.m., "Black Entrepreneurships," features a panel of minority businessmen who will discuss their problems and successes in the business world.

Wright described the overall purpose of the seminars as endorsing "progressive change through non-violent means."

MIA talks in Laos produce little new information

Associated Press

VIENTIANE, LAOS - The parting toasts were cordial, but little new information emerged from talks between a U.S. congressional delegation and Laotian officials yesterday on the issue of 556 Americans still missing in action in Laos from the Vietnam War, which ended in 1975.

After the talks, all four U.S. lawmakers said in interviews that the Laotian government rejects the possibility of Americans entering Laos to conduct joint investigations of possible sightings of living Americans.

The lawmakers, representing the Senate and House of Representatives veterans affairs committees, met for two hours with Soubanh Sritthirath, the vice minister of foreign affairs, and then for less than an hour with Foreign Minister Phoun Sipaseut.

The delegation was winding up a visit to the Philippines, Vietnam, Thailand and Laos. It was led by Sen. Frank Murkowski, R-Alaska, accompanied by Sen. Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz., Rep. Bob McEwen, R-Ohio, and Rep. Michael Bilirakis, R-Fla. Murkowski is chairman of the Senate Veterans Affairs Committee.

Since the war ended, 806 "live sightings" of Americans in Indochina have been reported, mostly by refugees, according to U.S. government records. Investigations have ruled out the possibility of living Americans in all but 95 reports, including 13 reported live sightings in Laos, U.S. officials say.

A total of 2,441 Americans are still listed as missing in action from the Indochina conflict, 556 of them in Laos, 88 in Cambodia, and 1,797 in Vietnam.

Murkowski said he and his colleagues pressed the Laotians to allow independent verification of their claim that no missing American servicemen are alive in Laos.

DeConcini said he asked at both meetings for the United States to be allowed to send observers with Laotian teams to the area of the live sightings in Laos.

Phoun refused, because his government has said there are no living Americans, said DeConcini.

McEwen proposed that an international inspection team from the Red Cross or the United Nations accompany Laotian searchers, but said Phoun bristled at the idea.

Murkowski quoted Phoun as saying his government conducted an extensive national census last year that found no Americans, and that notices had been distributed throughout Laos asking people for information on Americans.

"The minister told us three times, 'There are absolutely none,'" said Murkowski.

A day earlier, Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach of Vietnam pledged that any of the lawmakers could personally investigate any reported live sighting in Vietnam, but said Vietnam was not holding any Americans.

Vietnamese mom's dream realized

Associated Press

FAIRBANKS, ALASKA - Xuan Thi Nguyen says she has dreamed of her children every night since she had to leave them behind when she fled Vietnam, and this week her hopes will be realized when she is reunited with two of them.

"I'm so excited ... I cry, so happy," said Ms. Nguyen, 35, who has not seen her children in seven years. "My children, when I left them, were very young."

Nguyen Vu Chinh, an adopted 10-year-old boy, and Tran Thanh Quynh, a 9-year-old girl, are expected to arrive here tomorrow after their release by the Vietnamese government Saturday following a plea by Sen. Frank Murkowski, R-Alaska.

The senator went to Vietnam to lead a U.S. congressional delegation which asked the Vietnamese to help resolve the cases of Americans still listed as missing in action from the Vietnam War. (Story above)

But Murkowski also brought to Hanoi a plea from Ms. Nguyen that her children be allowed to leave Vietnam.

While she has exchanged letters with her children, she has not spoken to them by telephone since leaving Vietnam.

"I saw them in my dreams," she said. "Every night, I talk to them in my dreams. It's almost real now."

She didn't want to go into detail about her separation from her children or her escape from Vietnam, fearing that might jeopardize the reunion or cause problems for family members still in the country.

She also would not talk about why another daughter, Nguyen Thi Ha, 10, is still in Vietnam.

Ms. Nguyen, who is from Tay Ninh, about 55 miles north of Ho Chi Minh city, formerly Saigon, said she got out of Vietnam "overland," to a refugee camp in Thailand.

In the camp, she met a cousin, Tong Vo Nguyen, who had worked as an interpreter in Vietnam for J.B. Carnahan.

Congress to debate budget cuts

Associated Press

WASHINGTON - The debate over guns versus butter, raised to new intensity by the sweeping Gramm-Rudman budget cuts, dominates the agenda along with tax revision as the second session of the 99th Congress opens this week.

The lawmakers will be operating for the first time under the Gramm-Rudman law they passed last month, which mandates deep spending cuts if Congress and the president fail to pass enough cutbacks or tax increases to meet deficit-reduction targets.

Government agencies are already laboring to make the $11.7 billion cut required on March 1, which would still leave a deficit of about $208 billion. Far more onerous is the prospect of more than $50 billion in cuts to meet the fiscal 1987 deficit target of $144 billion.

The 1987 fiscal year begins Oct. 1, so the decision making will be spotlighted in the campaigns for 34 Senate and 435 House seats.

Gramm-Rudman, to reach a balanced budget by fiscal 1991, cuts a wide range of programs, and "that's going to be very unfair to some programs and some groups," said Senate Democratic leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va.

Rep. Les Aspin, the Wisconsin Democrat who chairs the House Armed Services Committee, yesterday released a report projecting that Gramm-Rudman will take more out of military personnel and readiness than out of high-tech hardware over the next five years.

Gramm-Rudman cuts don't hit Social Security or welfare benefits, veterans compensation, or interest on the national debt. But foreign aid, law enforcement, air traffic control and countless other government tasks are being cut back, and shielding one area from cuts would mean other areas get hit harder.

President Reagan helped push through the House a major tax overhaul slashing individual and corporate tax rates while eliminating or reducing some deductions and credits. The administration will try in the Senate to take away some of what the president considers anti-business bias in the House plan.

World leaders ax interest rate plan

Associated Press

LONDON - Finance ministers and central bank governors of the five biggest industrialized nations outside the communist world rejected Japan's proposal at their weekend meeting to cut worldwide interest rates, sources said yesterday.

An official statement said the financial officials were "satisfied" with efforts they have made since September to lower the value of the dollar and contained no hint of further measures to devalue the dollar.

Reacting to reports of the meeting, foreign exchange dealers said they expected the value of the dollar to stay at its current level in the near future.

Official sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the financial representatives of the United States, Britain, France, West Germany and Japan rejected a Japanese proposal for coordinated interest rate cuts.

Later, Bank of Japan Governor Satoshi Sumita told reporters he did not expect U.S. interest rates to fall soon.

A two-paragraph statement released on the group's behalf by the British Treasury said the Saturday-Sunday meeting "was an informal one to take stock of developments since the meeting in New York on 22 September."

The financial leaders customarily do not officially announce what actions they decide upon in their meetings.

However, last September they announced they had agreed to coordinate intervention on world currency markets to drive down the value of the dollar.

After that meeting, the value of the dollar fell about 10 percent. It now is worth about 20 percent less than it was a year ago, when its skyrocketing value spurred calls for protectionist legislation in the U.S. congress.

"The finance ministers and central bank governors were satisfied with the progress made so far," continued the statement released yesterday, which appeared to signal no new efforts to further devalue the dollar.

"They agreed that their cooperation should continue and that the progress which had been made should not be reversed," it concluded.

There was no other official comment from the British Treasury or the U.S. embassy.

Sources said the financial officials of the Group of Five, known as G-5, agreed the policy formulated in New York would be continued.

The financial officials also discussed a proposal by U.S. Treasury Secretary James Baker that called for more lending to the Third World to help deeply indebted countries repay loans.

The officials expressed satisfaction with Baker's proposal, the sources said.

The sources said the five decided that prospects for economic and monetary stability in their countries were good, and continuing stability would contribute to a favorable environment for lower interest rates.

Baker and Paul Volcker, chairman of the U.S. Federal Reserve Board, were the first to leave the meeting at No. 11 Downing St., official residence of Britain's Treasury chief, Chancellor of the Exchequer Nigel Lawson.

Baker and Volcker left yesterday, bound for Washington, and would not answer reporters' questions.

34-year-old woman takes first-grade classes

Associated Press

CHRISNEY, IND. - Yong S. Duckworth, a 34-year-old first-grader at Chrisney Elementary School, has earned high marks for determination from her teachers and principal.

"I just think she has a lot of guts to do something like this," says Principal Leroy B. Meyer.

Other pupils may take the school bus, but Duckworth arrives in a Mercedes-Benz and often grabs a cup of coffee in the teachers' lounge before heading quietly for her desk.

At 34, the Korean-born woman is older than the teacher of her class, Bobbie Wilhelmus.

"I have to say, at first I didn't know how to relate to having someone older than me in class," says Wilhelmus. "I was uncomfortable and scared to a point... But after a week or so, I was OK."

Because of her determination to learn the English language and earn a high school diploma, Duckworth has inspired her instructors and classmates at this small-town school about 30 miles east of Evansville.

"The kids see her and believe that if education is so important to her that she's in school now, then it must be important," says Meyer.

Duckworth says she completed high school in Seoul, Korea, and even did some private teaching in Korea before moving to the United States with her husband, Benjamin, who was in the Air Force.

They were married at the U.S. Embassy in Korea and later moved to Evansville, and Mrs. Duckworth became an American citizen in 1978.

It was then she realized she needed help learning English, partly because she was afraid her language problem would hinder the development of her 4-year-old son, Simon, who starts school later this year.

"I felt I needed to help my son. He was becoming more aware, and I felt embarrassed."

After the family relocated to Chrisney, where her husband took a higher-paying job at the Alcoa aluminum plant, Mrs. Duckworth found there were limited opportunities to learn.

She contacted Meyer about the possibility of receiving after-school tutoring, and when a tutor couldn't be found, the principal checked into the possibility of her attending school full time.

After conferring with legal staff of the Indiana Department of Education, Meyer learned that because Mrs. Duckworth had never attended a U.S. school, she was as eligible as any 7-year-old child.

Because of her age, she is excused from physical education classes, and takes a coffee break instead of recess.

Otherwise, she is treated like any other pupil. She is expected to turn in homework, receives grades and eats lunch with the youngsters.

Quote of the day

I say to you today, my friends, so even though we face the difficulties of today and tomorrow, I still have a dream. It is a dream deeply rooted in the American dream. I have a dream that one day this nation will rise up and live out the true meaning of its creed: "We hold these truths to be self-evident: that all men are created equal."

I have a dream that one day on the red hills of Georgia the sons of former slaves and the sons of former slave owners will be able to sit down together at the table of brotherhood. I have a dream that one day even the state of Mississippi, a state sweltering with the heat of oppression, will be transformed into an oasis of freedom and justice.

I have a dream that my four little children will one day live in a nation where they will not be judged by the color of their skin but by the content of their character.

I have a dream that one day every valley should be exalted, every hill and mountain shall be made low, the rough places will be made plain, and the crooked places will be made straight, and the glory of the Lord shall be revealed and all flesh shall see it together.

So let freedom ring from the prodigious hilltops of New Hampshire; let freedom ring from the mighty mountains of New York; let freedom ring from the heights of the Alleghenies of Pennsylvania; let freedom ring from the snow-capped Rockies of Colorado; let freedom ring from the curvaceous slopes of California. But not only that, let freedom ring from Lookout Mountain of Tennessee; let freedom ring from every hill and molehill in Mississippi - from every mountainside let freedom ring.

And when this happens, when we allow freedom to ring - when we let it ring from every village and every hamlet, from every state and every city, we will be able to speed up that day when all of God's children, black men and white men, Jews and Gentiles, Protestants and Catholics, will be able to join hands and sing in the words of the old Negro spiritual, "Free at last, free at last, thank God Almighty, we're free at last."

Fulfilling dream requires national commitment

For 24 hours, America will honor the memory of a black American. For 24 hours, America will remember the dream of the grandson of a former slave. For 24 hours, Jan. 20, 1986, America will respect the light that was Martin Luther King Jr.

Martin Rodgers

as a nation

Indeed, today King joins George Washington as the only other American to have a holiday in his name (Christopher Columbus was Italian). Perhaps it is fitting because King and his nonviolent army of love and brotherhood brought a birth of freedom to America in much the same manner as Washington.

But there are haunting and dangerous questions which must be asked today and maybe these reflective questions are the very purpose of this holiday. How far have we come as a nation since King? Is his Dream being realized? Has this nation risen up and lived out the true meaning of its creed that all men are created equal?

Noted historian Lerone Bennett wrote recently that "we are called in and through the holiday to the national task of continuing the struggle for the fulfillment of King's dream. The crucial point here and elsewhere is that this is not a national holiday for rest and frivolity and play. This is a day for study and struggle and preparation for the victory to come. It is a day set aside for measuring ourselves against the terrible yardstick of King's hope. And if we ever loved him, we will use this time to mobilize against the evils we identified ... the evils of racism, militarism, unemployment and violence."

Today we must look at where we stand and how far we have come both as a nation and individually. Regrettably, I believe that our reflection will show that our progress has recently been met with regress. The gains of the past are being lost in a myriad of rhetoric, inaction and the Reagan administration's (Clarence Pendelton) fallacy of "equality through economics."

King once said "what good is the right to sit at a lunch counter if one can't afford the price of a meal?" Indeed the administration's aim is a good one but it is not working because it is merely a facade. More than one-third of black Americans are below the poverty threshold. The Reagan administration has also cut back tax deductions for minority hiring and recruitment as well as chopping Social Security and Welfare. An estimated 25,000 young, disadvantaged, primarily minority children will not be able to participate in "Upward Bound" this year as a result of Reagan's social policies. Food and housing programs for the disadvantaged have also been drastically reduced. In the year that King gave his famous "I have a dream" speech, 1963, unemployment among blacks was 10.8 percent; today it is 14 percent. In the political arena, where most of the recent gains have been realized, blacks still hold only 1.2 percent of elected offices although they comprise 12 percent of the population. It is also worthy to underscore that although today Reagan will grab the attention of the press and publicly praise King and surround himself with black "faces," Reagan vehemently protested the bill which granted the national holiday in honor of King.

Senator Edward M. Kennedy noted that "the recognition of Dr. King is especially timely now, when the fundamental rights for which he fought are so at risk today. We must redouble our efforts to preserve the right to equal job opportunity and affirmative action, the right to a decent education and a fair paycheck ... In honoring Dr. King, we generate a stronger national commitment to the fulfillment of his dream - which is the American dream."

Indeed today as Bennett and Kennedy highlight we must commit ourselves to progress. King once said, foreshadowing his assassination, "I may not get there with you but I want you to know that we as a people will get to the Promised Land." Neither King's people nor King's country have made it yet. The struggle still must continue or King's death may turn out to have been in vain. We must use this holiday to strengthen and focus our efforts for justice, peace and equality. We cannot grow tired of the fight. If America could hold our people in bondage for approximately 73,000 days and nights than surely it can stand continuing to attempt making reparations for a little while longer considering that the recent progress has spanned only 20 years.

The words of Robert Hayden perhaps best describe how King shall be remembered "not with statues" rhetoric, not with legends and poems and wreaths of bronze alone but lives grown out of his life, the lives fleshing his dream." King himself said in a tape played at his funeral that he wanted to be remembered as a person "who tried to love somebody" and who attempted to "serve humanity."

Today we can remember King by committing ourselves to peace and nonviolence. Today we individually can try to see each person as a brother or a sister trying not make assumptions based on race, color or creed, but rather on a person's "content of character." Today we can have a "dream" and have hope. Today, we as a nation can reflect on how far we have come and prepare for the long hard road we have yet to travel and must travel. Also as a nation we must further commit ourselves to a course of action that will lead to even greater progress. Today, in memory of Martin Luther King, we can "try and love somebody."

Blacks must still struggle for progress at ND

Today marks the first official national holiday in honor of the late civil rights leader, Martin Luther King, Jr. For most black Americans, "King Day" signifies a time when blacks can proudly look back in history and see the long overdue fruits of their labor.

Lester Flemons

as a campus

They can see new socio-economic and political opportunities opening up for blacks and other minorities at every walk of life. Blacks who only yesterday were predominantly workers of the soil, laborers or house workers now are found in almost every gainful field of employment. Indeed, the many years of struggle have yielded visible progress, and the martyrdom of King has inspired steps toward a richer life for blacks.

Yet the triumphs of King, positive in so many respects, are nevertheless partial in the never-ending struggle for equality. It was King himself who said, "The road to freedom is long and winding." Therefore, anyone who sincerely believes in what Martin Luther King, Jr. stood for must also believe it is our duty to ensure that his dream remains alive. He dreamed of a nation bound by social justice and committed to the unconditional equality of its people.

Unfortunately, discrimination and prejudice remain a part of our society, including our educational system. Even today, 18 years after the death of Martin Luther King, various institutions and universities continue to lag behind in the area of civil rights and black progress. Notre Dame, a widely acclaimed and respected institution is unfortunately one of the schools which lags behind.

When a black student at Notre Dame reflects on the history of blacks at Notre Dame, he will find very little to be proud of. The University definitely will not receive an award for its accomplishments in the area of black progression. Nor will the administrators of this great institution receive commendations for their sterling efforts to improve the situation for blacks at Notre Dame.

In terms of black admittance, Notre Dame has, for the past 15 years, experienced something similar to a roller coaster ride. One year black admittance is up, the next year woefully down. In 1982, there were 75 blacks admitted to the University, while 1984 yielded a black freshman class of only 34. It would appear that Notre Dame is regressing rather than progressing.

Oddly enough, no one is able to pinpoint exactly what the problem is. If you asked 10 different administrators what the problem is, you probably would get 10 different answers. Indeed, if King were alive today he would be appalled, not only by Notre Dame's dwindling black population but by the overall situation for blacks at Notre Dame.

Where is the progress? Where is the justice? Certainly a highly-regarded Catholic institution like Notre Dame can answer these questions.

One of Martin Luther King's dominant traits was his ability to incite action on behalf of social reform. King refused to wait until society decided it was time for the black man to have equality. Instead he taught blacks that they could attain unity and hold it until they had won a victory. Beyond this, they learned that even after mistakes, lost ground can be recaptured.

These are lessons which suggest the future will have fewer defeats and more successes. The emergence of the Notre Dame College Chapter NAACP (National Association for the Advancement of Colored People) is an indication that black students at Notre Dame finally are achieving the unity needed to ignite change. By "change," I am referring to a change in attitude rather than merely an increase in numbers. As King taught, we must learn to attack the roots of the problem, not the symptoms.

Granted, it will be difficult to bring about such a change of attitude at Notre Dame. The victories of black people always have been tortuously slow in coming and too often incomplete. But there have been victories. Martin Luther King has pointed the way to further achievement. If his life and death are to find a permanent place in history, we must keep marching, moving, struggling toward the land of which he dreamed.

I encourage all those who would like to honor King to attend the United Religious Community of St. Joseph County's all-day celebration today from 9:30 a.m. to 10 p.m. The festivities will take place at the Century Center, located at 319 S. Main St., South Bend.

1986 horoscopes - Observer scoops Enquirer?

Kris Murphy

Altered

OK, I'm a little late. It's already mid-January, but I'm presenting the 1986 Altered Horoscopes anyway (with thanks to M. Ramirez). Better late than never. Better fried than scrambled. Better be good to me. Better shut up and get on with it.

Pisces (Feb. 19 - March 20):

The stars will not be good to you. In fact, two of them will fall on your house. Frankly, life is going to be a major pain in the posterior for the next 365 days, so get used to it. Give all your money away now and write it off your taxes because it's all going to get stolen anyway. All of it. Romantic relationships will be terrible. For men: the only girls you can pick up are thirteen years old. They all have chaperones. For women: some guy at a party asks you to come upstairs and see his stamp collection. You refuse. Things never get any better. The high point of your year will be Arbor Day. Pack it up now and spend your year cleaning the basement.

Aries (March 21 - April 19):

A year of decisions. Some of this year's biggest: "Should I change my shampoo?" "What type of dog should I buy?" and "Is it kosher to eat yogurt in mixed company?" Funny things happen on Tuesdays. Romance blossoms in April but you sit on a lightbulb in May. You sleep through June and old acquaintances make December a living hell. Don't wear tight clothes.

Taurus (April 20 - May 20):

You start the new year with ice cream in your ear. Things get better, though, because excellent job offers pour in. Unfortunately you die a slow death in early March and that pretty well blows your chances for actually starting one of those jobs. Your funeral is great but everyone cuts out early and goes to Taco Bell. Your friends remember you as "weenie." Have as many children as possible before it's too late.

Gemini (May 21 - June 21):

Pets play an important part in your life. You let the dog out and he doesn't come back. Lovers play practical jokes on you. High point of the year comes in July. You're on the beach. A member of the opposite sex approaches in a towel. You hear waves roaring as he/she approaches. He/she stands there holding his/her towel up while you discuss seafood. You blow everything by blowing your nose in your beach bag. Avoid high places and low incomes.

Cancer (June 22 - July 22):

An exciting year for women. Men come and go (mostly go) with alarming frequency. You are at the height of popularity. Family matters get violent. Your mother chases you through your new house with a hacksaw. Your uncle plays "Russian Roulette" with a staple gun. Frozen meat becomes your favorite food.

Leo (July 23 - Aug. 22):

You blow this year off. Come back next year.

Virgo (Aug. 23 - Sept. 22):

The best year of your life. Considering how your life has gone so far, that's not promising much excitement. A big radish crop makes you rich and academic pursuits bring only happiness after an affair with a language lab moderator. Things slow down during November and you find more time to engage in your favorite pastime - Play-doh sculpture. Avoid tossed salads, concrete, and horoscopes. Oops! You blew it!

Libra (Sept. 23 - Oct. 23):

A time for testing and learning. You grow wiser through experience. Your creative powers are at an apex but you don't have the slightest idea what "apex" means. School gets easier and partying gets harder so you work harder at partying. You try new foods like Spam and green Jell-o. Avoid yellow Lifesavers. Romantic relationships develop and all your dreams come true. Even the ones you can't remember.

Scorpio (Oct. 24 - Nov. 21):

A turning point in your life. You turn too much though and get dizzy. Wednesdays are key days and you change your favorite color to mauve. You meet a sexy newspaper writer named Mr. X and he takes you to Bermuda. Everyone wears shorts there. You get a great tan and a bargain on a used bowling ball. Exciting additions to your wardrobe change your life. Eat more pickles.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22 - Dec. 21):

You smell funny until April. This destroys your social life, but that's OK because you're a twit anyway. You try to change but it's hopeless. You're a loser, so give up.

Capricorn (Dec. 22 - Jan. 19):

You wish upon your star and it turns out to be a spot on your contact lens. Other than that, things go well. Sports are a high point, even though you couldn't catch a pass if you threw it to yourself. Watch out for crazy drivers, agitated women, and nuclear weapons. Don't eat macaroni with a fork. Hold your breath often.

Aquarius (Jan. 20 - Feb. 18):

You get a new car but you lose the keys and leave it in the garage all the time. Your academic life is on the rocks. So is your love life. You continue to think positively, though, and everything works out. You become a leader in your field and an example for millions of juvenile delinquents. Don't travel in the daytime. Join the first terrorist group that takes you hostage. Meet exciting members of the opposite sex through full-contact karate. Believe everything you read.

Marshall Crenshaw still looking for that big hit

LARRY McSHANE
AP features writer

Critical acclaim is nice, and praise from other artists even nicer. But why, Marshall Crenshaw wonders, can't he get a Top 10 hit?

"It's terribly frustrating not to have a big hit single," said Crenshaw, the 32-year-old guitarist and songwriter whose Downtown album is hovering in the Billboard charts. "I think every single we've put out has been right on the money, so I'm really confused as to why we haven't had a hit."

Crenshaw is not alone in his confusion. His three- and four-minute songs appear tailor-made to be pop hits: they have catchy hooks, sing-along choruses and tight instrumentation. Bette Midler sings Crenshaw's praises and his song, "You're My Favorite Waste of Time." Rockabilly singer Robert Gordon scored a Top 40 hit with the Crenshaw-penned, "Someday, Someway."

Yet the one hit which could send his career skyrocketing eludes Crenshaw, whose songwriting style prompted Rolling Stone magazine to compare his first album to the work of the late Buddy Holly.

"I think it had a lot to do with just an impression of a physical resemblance," the bespectacled Crenshaw said in an interview, running his hand through his short hair. "But then on the other hand, there's a couple of songs on there that are almost straight rip-offs of Buddy Holly songs."

Either way, Crenshaw doesn't mind the comparison to Holly or any of the musicians from the late 1950s and early 1960s he grew up hearing. Crenshaw is also well acquainted with the work of the Beatles, having played John Lennon in a nationwide tour of "Beatlemania." But despite these influences and experiences, the Detroit native believes he has carved his own niche.

On his third and most recent album, Crenshaw featured new instruments - electric sitar and congas, for example - and recruited musicians other than drummer (and brother) Robert Crenshaw and bassist Chris Donato, the only other players on Crenshaw's first two albums.

Crenshaw and his band, which now includes his brother, Donato, former Joe Jackson bassist Graham Maby and onetime "Beatlemania" sidekick Tom Teeley (who portrayed George Harrison), recently completed a concert tour at arenas as an opening act for British techno-pop star Howard Jones. Maby and Teeley joined the band in time for the tour.

Crenshaw now says he wants to record his next album with his tour band, but his thoughts still stray to that hard-to-find smash single.

"I wouldn't even begin to try to imagine why he haven't had one," he said with a shrug. "There's no good reason for that. But I still think we'll have one someday."

Patriots join together as family; team more comfortable with Berry

Associated Press

FOXBORO, MASS. - Two weeks ago, about a dozen New England Patriots' players and their wives feasted at a famous Boston seafood restaurant.

Offensive guard John Hannah, often praised for his individual greatness but never on a winning playoff team in his first 12 seasons in the National Football League, was among them.

"We ate and acted like we were Rockefeller down there and he picked the tab up," said running back Craig James. "I said, 'thank you,' and he said, 'No, thank you.' That meant a lot to me, knowing he's happy."

The dinner followed the Patriots' second playoff victory of the season, over the Los Angeles Raiders.

It has been a season in which, Patriots' players say, there is more togetherness and feeling for each other than there has been in years.

"We see each other as being a room full of brothers," said free safety Fred Marion. "We fight for each other and we cry for each other. That's the way you have to be to be champions."

The Patriots embark Monday on their last journey toward that goal when they leave for New Orleans, where they will seek their fourth consecutive playoff upset, against the Chicago Bears in next Sunday's Super Bowl.

It has been a remarkable journey from the ill-fated reign of Ron Meyer, who was fired midway through last season. During his 2½ years as coach, unhappy players grumbled about him and traveled, according to one of his rules, on separate buses for the offense and defense.

"The teams that get close and are a unit and a family are the teams that win and that's what we are right now," James said. "We're not as much a defense and offense. It's more a mingling. There's not a lot of little groups."

Before Raymond Berry succeeded Meyer, "the guys would hang with either (teammates who played) their position or other players they had things in common with," said wide receiver Cedric Jones.

"But this year, with coach Berry, he emphasizes putting the team before yourself, an unselfish type of attitude. I think we've formed a type of brotherhood, a cohesiveness that we didn't have before as players and it's fun to be around

Cook wins Bob Hope golf tourney

Associated Press

PALM DESSERT, CA - Donnie Hammond forced a playoff with a birdie-birdie finish and then beat John Cook on the first extra hole for the title yesterday in the Bob Hope Chrysler Classic.

Hammond, 28, claimed the first victory of his four-year PGA tour career with a 10-foot birdie putt that curled into the cup on the first playoff hole.

The victory, which took five days, 91 holes and competition over four desert courses to achieve, was worth $108,000 from the total purse of $600,000. That's more than the easy-going Hammond won in any previous full season.

Cook, in a slump since winning the Canadian Open in 1983, and Hammond each played the final round in 6-under-par 66 and had matching 90-hole totals of 335, 25 shots under par.

Hammond, one shot back with two holes to go, hit a long iron to within four feet of the flag on the 17th and coaxed in the putt for a share of the lead.

He went in front alone, briefly, when he was green-high in two on the par-5 18th and chipped to tap-in distance.

He then waited in the scoring tent beside the 18th green while Cook, a resident of this desert resort area and a gallery favorite, played the final hole. From the fairway, Cook put his second shot on the green, some 18 feet away from an eagle that would have won it.

But he left that putt short, then tapped in for the birdie that sent it to overtime - the fifth consecutive year this tournament has required a playoff.

On the first extra hole, Cook's approach skipped through the green while Hammond put his near the flag. Cook chipped back close, marked his ball and then watched as Hammond rolled in the right-to-left breaking putt for his first victory.

Jodie Mudd, the leader through four rounds, played the last 74 holes of the tournament without a bogey. But it wasn't enough. His finishing 69 left him at 337, two shots out of the playoff.

Former PGA champion Hal Sutton had a 69 despite a balky, erratic putter and was alone at 338.

Payne Stewart, Craig Stadler and Gary Koch followed at 339. Stewart closed up with a 65 in the 85-degree heat. Stadler and Koch each shot 68.

Belmont blaze destroys 45 thoroughbreds; total damages estimated at over $5 million

Associated Press

ELMONT, N.Y. - A fire yesterday swept through a Belmont Park Racetrack barn where a sprinkler system had broken down just days earlier, killing 45 thoroughbred horses worth up to $5 million and injuring two firefighters, authorities said.

"It looked like a fireball in the middle of the barn. It was tough to make a decision not to charge in there and try to get the horses out," said Assistant Fire Chief John Loser.

Flames shot 50 feet into the air from the 400-foot-long barn and it took 200 firefighters more than an hour to contain the early morning blaze, said Fire Chief James Snadecky.

Most of the horses suffocated in their 12-foot-by-12-foot stalls where they had been tied up for the night, said Loser.

"They didn't have a chance," added Gene Martello, 34, a horse trainer who works in a neighboring barn.

Two horses were rescued. One was Pleasant Sea, an offspring of Pleasant Colony, which won the Kentucky Derby and the Preakness in 1981.

Two firefighters, one suffering from smoke inhalation and the other with minor burns, were taken to Franklin General Hospital, Snadecky said. They were treated and released.

Track officials issued a statement estimating the loss at $1 million for the barn and from $500,000 to $5 million for the horses. Nassau County police officer Howard Burt estimated the loss at up to $10 million.

The track is the annual home of the Belmont Stakes, the third leg of the Triple Crown, horse racing's most prestigious honor. The horses were among more than 2,000 kept in 64 barns at the 430-acre complex on Long Island, although the track's racing season is over.

The fire was first spotted by a night watchman who "saw flames coming out of a stall in the middle of the barn," said John Keenan, vice president of operations for the New York Racing Association.

Although some of the horses might have been able to break out of their stalls, Keenan said that would have been unusual. "The nature of a horse is he considers that stable his home, and if something happens, he's more inclined to go into it than out," he said.

Keenan said the sprinkler system's pipes burst last week when the temperature fell to near zero and "would have been repaired today or tomorrow."

The barn contained a hay loft and Keenan said it was possible the hay caught fire through spontaneous combustion, an occasional hazard with stored hay.

The cause of the fire was undetermined, but authorities found "nothing that indicates it would be suspicious," said Detective Lt. William Guttersloh, head of the Nassau County arson squad.

Lendl defeats Becker, wins Nabisco Masters

Associated Press

NEW YORK - Rising to the challenge, Ivan Lendl, the world's top-ranked player, brushed aside the latest pretender to his throne yesterday, capturing the $500,000 Nabisco Masters tennis championships with a straight-set victory over West Germany's Boris Becker.

It was power against power, strength against strength. And, in the end, nearly 2½ hours after they had begun, Lendl, the 1985 U.S. open champion, had handed the Wimbledon winner a 6-2, 7-6, 6-3 lesson.

For the victory, Lendl earned $100,000, while Becker collected $70,000.

Lendl also received a check for $800,000 as winner of the year-long, worldwide Nabisco Grand Prix circuit, bringing his 1985 earnings to nearly $2 million.

"I, at the moment, hold all three titles in your town, and I'm proud of that," Lendl told the cheering crowd at Madison Square Garden. He referred to the Masters, the U.S. open and the WCT Tournament of Champions, all of which are played in New York. Then he admitted that the 18-year-old Becker is a force to be reckoned with.

The two tested each other out to begin the match, preferring to remain on the baseline, trading strong groundstrokes as they held serve through the first four games.

Then, raising his game to another level, Lendl ripped off four straight games, breaking Becker in the fifth and seventh games, to close out the first set. After the seventh game, the 18-year-old Becker, disgusted with his play, slammed his racket to the floor.

With shouts of encouragement in German coming from the crowd, Becker held serve at 15 to begin the second set, the final two points coming on his fourth and fifth aces of the match. He then broke Lendl's service - only the second time Lendl's serve had been broken during the tournament.

Becker raced to a 3-0 lead when he held at 30, finishing the game with a smash.

Lendl held to 5-3, then broke Becker at 30. And when he held service in the 10th game, they were tied 5-5.

Becker had a set point at 30-40 in the 12th game, but Lendl crushed his sixth ace, pulling to deuce.

Irish to entertain Hofstra tonight, begin busy week of hoop action

By MARTY BURNS
Assistant Sports Editor

Many people feel it will be a real cakewalk tonight for the Notre Dame basketball team when it hosts Hofstra at 7:30 in the ACC.

Maybe they better make that a birthday cakewalk.

Sophomore guard David Rivers won't be blowing out candles but he may indeed help the 10-2 Irish blow out the Flying Dutchmen as the flashy Notre Dame player celebrates his 21st birthday. In fact, if the talented floor leader has his way, he'll be the one dishing out all the presents - in the form of passes to his big teammates on the Irish frontline.

Rivers will go to the frontcourt to take advantage of his team's height advantage over Hofstra. The Dutchmen, who are a member of the East Coast Conference, do not have a player on the roster taller than 6-8 and probably will not start a player above 6-6. That should mean plenty of chances for Rivers to get the ball inside to power players Ken Barlow, Donald Royal and Tim Kempton.

This advantage underneath the boards, along with the fact that head coach Dick Berg's squad returns only one senior starter from last year's 14-15 team, should make Rivers' party a happy one. Unless, of course, the Irish are looking past the Dutchmen to Sunday's contest with top-ranked North Carolina.

"This week North Carolina will be in the back of our minds," said Irish head coach Digger Phelps after Saturday's 74-64 win over UCLA. "But we have to be ready for the two games before then. We just have to keep playing the way we have been playing lately and treat Hofstra and American (on Wednesday) as we would any other game."

If Phelps' team cannot keep its mind on the match at hand with Hofstra it could have problems. Although the Flying Dutchmen are 7-7 this season, they are coming off a 79-78 victory over Phelps' alma mater, Rider, and they most likely would be more than ready to take any gifts that the Irish would offer.

Spearheading any efforts to pull off an upset will be 6-1 Hofstra guard, Leroy Allen. The former DeMatha High School star currently averages 13.3 points per game and, as Berg's best defensive player, probably will draw the unenviable task of guarding Rivers. 6-6, 200-pound forward Ron Miner, meanwhile, handles most of the offensive chores for the Dutchmen as he leads the team in scoring at a 14.6 ppg, clip to go with an average of just over seven rebounds per contest.

Other notable Hofstra players include 6-6, 210-pound forward Luke Murphy and 6-2 guard Greg Arnold. Murphy lends a consistent offensive weapon to the Dutchmen's attack, contributing 12.8 ppg and 3.4 rpg., while Arnold, another DeMatha product, plays at both the swing and point positions in the back court.

One Hofstra player who has yet to make a big impact but who might someday, at least if bloodlines mean anything, is 6-5 freshman forward Gerald King. If that name sounds familiar to basketball fans, it should, as King's older brothers, Albert and Bernard, are NBA stars.

Unfortunately for Hofstra, though, it will probably take a lot more than a famous last name to shock Notre Dame. After all, that would put a damper on Rivers' birthday party.

Hofstra guard Leroy Allen (12) will spearhead the attack when the Flying Dutchmen invade the ACC tonight at 7:30. Allen averages 13.3 points per game and has handed out 61 assists on the season. The Irish, meanwhile, will look to give guard David Rivers a birthday present in the form of a victory.

St. Joseph's downs SMC, 79-70

By LINDA BAILY
Sports Writer

Visiting Saint Joseph's College, an NCAA Division II school, handed the Saint Mary's basketball team their fifth loss of the season, 79-70, on Saturday in the Angela Athletic Facility.

The Belles were led by sophomore Tammye Radke, who contributed 22 points, followed by Jenny Harte and Beth Kreber with 14 points apiece. Kreber was also the top rebounder and led the team with five assists and as many steals.

The scoring was fairly even throughout the first ten minutes of the game, but the Pumas took the lead, 25-13, after scoring eight unanswered points. By half time, the Belles were trailing by 13 points, 40-27.

Despite the loss, Coach Marvin Wood was pleased with his team's performance.

"Saint Joseph's did a lot of recruiting, and they have many top-flight players," said Wood. "Four of their players were invited to participate on the Indiana all-star team."

"I'm not sure if it was our weaknesses or their strengths," continued Wood. "They have great quickness, but we adjusted well. We fouled a lot. We tend to overplay on defense which sometimes puts us at a disadvantage."

During the first half, the Belles gave the Pumas 13 trips to foul line while only going three times themselves.

Free throws proved to be the key as Saint Joseph's finished 19 of 24 from the line while the Belles could only cash in on 2 of 5 tosses.

"We worked very hard but we didn't get all the breaks," said sophomore Stephanie Duke. "We came within six or eight points near the end but we just couldn't get all the buckets to fall." The Belles improved their shooting from 34 percent to 64 percent in the second half.

"Overall it was a good team effort," said sophomore Sharon Repik.

The Belles current record is 4-6, but they anticipate winning the Roundball Classic, their annual invitational tournament, scheduled to begin Friday night.

The participants are Grace College, Hope College and Purdue University-Calumet.

"No one in the Classic will be as strong as Saint Joseph's was today," commented Wood. "I hope we can win it. This is our last opportunity to win a tournament."

SMC fencing team finishes 1-2 over break

By GLORIA ELEUTERI
Sports Writer

The Saint Mary's fencing team stands at 1-2 after participating in its first meets of the 1986 season during the semester break. The Belles along with 10 other teams travelled to the University of North Carolina for a twelve-team meet.

Saint Mary's faced Duke, North Carolina and North Carolina State. The Belles took their lone victory from the Blue Devils of Duke, 9-7, but fell to the Tarheels and the Wolfpack, by identical scores of 10-6. The Belles placed twelfth overall against such national contenders as Temple, Penn State and Columbia.

"The tournament allowed the team to gain experience for the season," commented Head Coach Mike Weeks. "It was a positive factor that will help in the following meets."

The team consists of only two returning letter winners, seniors Ann Raney and Becca Barnett. The roster rounds out with little experience, but talented athletes such as seniors Mary Beth Proost, Shannon Maughan and Mary Fran Wilkin should contribute greatly. Filling the sixth position is junior Laura Harris. Weeks can also look to 12 novices who work with the team, but did not travel to the tournament.

The 48 bouts that took place left team member Proost with the best record of 5-5. Barnett and Raney followed with 4-7 slates, with Wilkin finishing with a 3-7 record.

Harris only claimed one victory for a 1-6 ledger, while Maughan's record is 1-3.

"I expect to see progress as the year goes on," says Weeks. "I believe the team is capable of maintaining a .500 record."

On their list of opponents, Saint Mary's faces such teams as Wisconsin, Minnesota, Michigan Dearborn, Northwestern and defending NCAA champion Wayne State.

The team's next meet will be this weekend in Chicago. Their first home appearance will be Feb. 1 at the ACC.

Belles' swimming loses meet with Valpo

By ANDREA LAFRENIERE
Sports Writer

The Saint Mary's swim team dropped its record to 1-1 Friday night at the Rockne Memorial Swimming Pool, losing to Valparaiso, 70.5-40.5.

According to Coach Nancy Jo Kuzmitz, the Belles swam well but simply could not keep up with the Valparaiso team.

"Our overall times improved from our last meet, but (Valparaiso) was just better," Kuzmitz said.

Despite the loss, the team did well in several events. Among the first place finishers for the Belles was sophomore Meghan Rafferty, who won the 100-meter backstroke with a time of 1:07.05 and the 100-meter freestyle with a time of 0:59.00.

In the 200-meter freestyle event, senior Joyce Murtagh came in second with a time of 2:08.68, and freshman Kiernan Walter tied for third place.

Peggy Halloran, a freshman, captured second place in the 500-meter freestyle with a time of 5:59.82 and finished third in the 1650-meter freestyle event. Tanya Reeves, also a freshman, took second in the 200-yard individual medley with a time of 2:35.10 and placed third in the 100-meter butterfly.

Junior Mary Fisher finished second in the 50-meter freestyle event with a time 0:28.02, while Murtagh took third. Margaret Mannion, a junior, placed third in the 100-yard breaststroke.

In the relay events, the team of Fisher, Juckniess, Murtagh and Rafferty captured first place in the 200-meter freestyle with a time of 1:50.20, while the 200-yard medley team of Juckniess, Mannion, Rafferty and Reeves finished second with a time of 2:05.39.

Freshman Bridget Murphy placed second in the diving competition with 137.30 points.

The Belles' next meet is January 29 at Kalamazoo, Mich., against Kalamazoo College.

Notre Dame forward Donald Royal rises above the crowd for two of his six points as Ken Barlow (44) and UCLA's Pooh Richardson look on. The Irish held off a Bruin rally to win, 74-64.

Kempton

Kempton said. "It's disheartening. It's hard to take because these are the people I live with and see in class.

"But it's something you have to learn to expect after you sign your name on that line (of a letter-of-intent), especially when you aren't living up to everyone's expectations. Still, it's something you have to overcome."

Earlier this season, it looked like Kempton might have more than the wrath of the fans to overcome. Sophomore Gary Voce was giving him quite a run in practice for the starting center spot.

"Gary really pushed me," said Kempton, whose parents were on hand for the game. "He's big and strong, and he pushes me every day."

Saturday, Kempton firmly established himself as the No. 1 man with a number of key baskets. The biggest was his three-point play with 8:39 remaining in the game to erase a one-point UCLA lead and put the Irish up for good, 52-50. Kempton made a power move to the basket, drew a foul from the Bruins' Jack Haley and the ball dropped.

"That's supposed to be my role," Kempton said. "I'm supposed to get those points. It felt really good to do it."

Ironically, earlier in the day it was the UCLA center Haley who was the victim of Kempton's ire.

Less than two minutes into the game, Kempton took a retaliatory swing at Haley. Besides giving Kempton his first foul and UCLA its first point of the game on the two shots for an intentional foul, the brief outburst let Kempton make a point to Haley.

"The first two or three times down court, Haley was sticking an elbow in my neck. I wanted to set the record straight. It wasn't to hurt him, but I wanted to let him know he wasn't going to be doing that the entire game, and nothing more was said or done after that," Kempton said.

Kempton's primary success Saturday was inside, but he also had a good game outside. Two of his four second-half field goals came from long range. And while Kempton consistently shoots, and makes, such outside shots in practice, the events of his freshmen and sophomore seasons made him consider taking those shots in games.

"As a freshman, I just played with my back to the basket," Kempton said. "Then, as a sophomore, people learned how to play me and I forced things. That forced me to shoot the ball from the outside.

"I make them in practice all the time."

Yet, it's confidence that breeds making outside shots in a game, and that is something which Kempton has lacked at times in his career. Phelps' confidence in his big center never wavered, though.

"I have always believed that he can play the game," said the Irish coach. "We have him facing the basket where he can get his confidence and then we send him inside. People are finally starting to realize that Kempton is a scoring factor for Notre Dame."

Before the season began, Kempton realized the importance confidence can play and made a decision to work on that part of his game.

"I resolved myself to work on the mental part of my game," he explained. "I really was going to work on my confidence and playing to my ability. Confidence just builds more confidence."

No doubt, Kempton has lots of confidence now.

the victory - but not before the Bruins mounted an impressive comeback.

Notre Dame led by as many as 14 points in the first half and took a 39-27 edge to the lockerroom at intermission. But the Irish were cold in the early minutes of the second half, and UCLA went on a 23-10 tear in the first 11 minutes to take a 50-49 lead.

But Kempton converted a big three-point play on Notre Dame's next possession to give the Irish a 52-50 lead, which they never relinquished.

It was Kempton's success all afternoon that keyed the Irish win. At 245 pounds, the 6-9 Kempton had the size to outmuscle UCLA's 6-10, 220-pound center Jack Haley. It was a matchup that Irish head coach Digby Phelps believed he could exploit.

"We felt we wanted to go inside on UCLA," Phelps said afterwards. "We saw the way they played against Arizona State last Thursday and we saw they were an explosive team. We lost the 14-point lead for that reason. We wanted to control Montel Hatcher and Reggie Miller offensively and also Pooh Richardson. We didn't lose our composure, we got key defensive rebounds when we needed them and we got the points we needed at the end.

I think the four seniors have shown a lot of maturity recently on the road and today. Like Jim Dolan - he had two key plays today and that's his role now, to come up with those key plays."

Bruins' head coach Walt Hazzard praised his team afterwards, but was bitter in his statements about the officials.

"I'm very proud of my team this afternoon," Hazzard said. "They put out a courageous effort. A break here or there and we would have won it. Now we want to go back to the Pac-10 and do well, and then maybe somewhere down the road we'll meet Notre Dame at a neutral site, and then we'll see what happens."

"This game was very physical at one end of the court. I thought the officials missed some important out-of-bounds calls - one where Dolan had both feet come down out-of-bounds in front of the scorer's table, and two others right on the baseline in front of our bench. But those are the things you expect on the road - especially in this game.

"And when we were down by two points and Miller was fouled by Dolan," continued Hazzard, "the whole world saw it but we didn't get the call. But when you play on the road that's the way it goes."

Hazzard, who saw his team out-rebounded by a 36-22 margin, probably wishes he had a player like Kempton in the middle.

"Kempton is a very good basketball player," said the UCLA coach. "We don't have that big center who can get every rebound and really come off the boards, but some day we will. Haley has only played basketball for three years and here he is playing on national television. In high school when everyone else was playing basketball, he was surfing."

"But when Notre Dame comes out next year, they'll see some big players," Hazzard said, adding that the Bruins had signed two 6-11 players and another 6-8 recruit for next season.

But Notre Dame's concern right now is tonight's game with Hofstra and Wednesday's contest with American, two games which the Irish players could easily be looking past - considering they face top-ranked North Carolina on Sunday.

"We're playing at home this week and North Carolina is in the back of our minds," Phelps said. "But we're going to be getting ready for the next two games. We can't have a let-down and we need to do the things we have to do Monday and Wednesday before North Carolina."

IRISH ITEMS - Kempton turned in his most productive outing since the '83-'84 season, when he scored 20 points in a second-round NIT game against Boston College.

Hazzard said afterwards that "because of the Pac-10 postseason tournament next year we may not play Notre Dame again." The Bruins would have to drop one non-conference game from their schedule in order to play in the tournament. Steve Brelsford hit the second of his two free throws at halftime to successfully complete his "Sports Fantasy." Brelsford, of Fort Wayne, Ind., had the fantasy of shooting a pair of free throws for Indiana with the score tied and no time left on the clock, and the Notre Dame student body in the background. NBC will air the taped fantasy on Sportsworld on March 2.

Thomas denies rumors of retiring

Associated Press

PONTIAC, MI - Isiah Thomas, denying reports that he has considered retiring from professional basketball at the age of 24, is being helped through some trying times by friend Magic Johnson of the Los Angeles Lakers.

Thomas, a Detroit Pistons guard, scored 18 points and was credited with 10 assists before fouling out yesterday in the Pistons 118-115 National Basketball Association victory over Johnson and the Lakers.

The victory was only the Pistons' seventh in their last 22 games. At times during the team's slump, there have been reports that Thomas, who is in the midst of a long-term contract with Detroit, considered quitting.

Thomas said after yesterday's game he is not thinking about retirement.

"When you lose, something's wrong. When you win, everything's OK," said Thomas, who played two years at Indiana University before turning pro as a hardship case. "When you win, what else matters?"

"Over the last five, six games, we've been playing good basketball. That all comes down to mental preparation for the game. You have to prepare yourself to play hard every night."

Johnson told a CBS interviewer that he had considered quitting recently, but that his spirits were lifted when Magic sent him some balloons.

Thomas said Johnson told him over the telephone: "don't you remember when we had nothing?" referring to their childhood days, and Thomas said it was the call that helped keep him from quitting. The interview was shown before yesterday's game and had been taped on Saturday, a Pistons' spokesman said.

Thomas and Johnson, a 6-year NBA veteran, are close friends off the court. They conduct summer basketball camps together and often practice in the off-season at Michigan State University, Johnson's alma mater.

ND wrestlers defeat Illinois State; Frosh continue to play large role

By RICK RIETBROCK
Sports Writer

Coach Fran McCann's young wrestling squad continued enjoying success while gaining valuable experience by beating Illinois State at the ACC Saturday. The Irish avenged last season's 37-6 loss at the hands of the Redbirds by taking a 24-15 victory.

McCann said he expected a close match which made it necessary to get good performances from many different sources.

"Going into any match, there are some matches that you figure you should win," McCann explained. "But when you can come top in some of the other matches as well, it really gives your team a big lift."

Juniors Carl Hildinger and Dave Helmer posted instrumental victories for the Irish. Hildinger, started the match by winning 8-3 at 118 pounds, while Helmer posted an upset victory at 190 pounds.

"Hildinger's win was a big one for us," McCann said. "His opponent had beaten some people to whom Carl had lost, but Carl just went out and dominated him. That really got the momentum going for us."

"Helmer beat his man 11-4 after losing to him by twelve last year. Those are the types of performances we need to win close matches."

The brunt of the charge, however, was once again carried by McCann's fine group of freshmen. At 126 pounds, Dave Carlin posted a 13-6 victory, and Jerry Durso continued to impress while improving his record to 25-6 with a technical fall win.

Pat Boyd won by major decision at 142 pounds and Chris Geneser won a superior decision at 167 pounds.

With six freshmen in his starting lineup, McCann is placed into an awkward situation of counting heavily upon his younger wrestlers.

"In most matches, you have certain matches where you have to score big," McCann continued, "We put that pressure on the freshmen. Guys like Boyd, Durso and Geneser are expected to produce."

The Notre Dame wrestling team defeated the Redbirds from Illinois State Saturday at the ACC, 24-15. The win avenged last year's 37-6 Redbird win. Rick Reitbrock details all of Saturday's action in his story appearing at left.

Hockey splits pair with Dearborn; Smith threatens team with changes

By DENNIS CORRIGAN
Sports Writer

Two Notre Dame hockey teams played at the ACC this weekend. The first utilized strong forechecking and superb goaltending to beat the visiting Wolves of Michigan-Dearborn Friday night, 5-1. The second team did next to nothing right and lost 7-1. With the split, the Irish season record fell to 8-13-1. The split enabled the Wolves to take the season series from the Irish by a 3-1 margin, and their season record stands at 11-13.

"We can't stand prosperity," commented Head Coach Lefty Smith after Saturday's loss. "We absolutely stunk."

Notre Dame was coming off a road trip on which they hadn't exactly given a good showing. After Friday night's win, The Irish looked as if they had gotten the memories of the trip completely out of their minds. Bob Thebeau scored for the Irish with just 13 seconds gone in the first period, and the Irish took control from there. Thebeau finished the game with another goal and a pair of assists, but it was the goaltending of senior Marc Guay that got rave reviews Friday.

Guay finished the night with 32 saves and, except for the one Dearborn goal, played a near flawless game. Part of the credit for this must go to his teammates who managed to keep pressure on the Wolves in their own zone. When Dearborn did break out, Guay was there to come up with some big stops.

After Dearborn's Mike Humitz tied the score at 14:53 of the first, Rich Sobilo put the Irish back in front at the 17:22 mark with a power-play score. Mike McNeill and Dave Waldbillig had the other Irish scores, with goals in the second and third periods, respectively.

The game was interrupted twice in the third period because of fights. The first came at 7:42 and involved Notre Dame's Roy Bemiss and the Wolves' Scott Davenport. Both were given game disqualification penalties which meant they wouldn't see action on Saturday. The Irish were already without the services of Brent Chapman and Jeff Badalich, who received similar penalties on the road trip. The second stoppage involved several members of both teams, but no major penalties were handed out.

Smith was happy to get the win, but still showed concern about his squad's play.

"Naturally it was extremely good to get the win after four lousy losses," said Smith. "At the same time, I didn't feel we set the world on fire out there tonight. If it wasn't for Marc Guay I don't what would have happened at times out there. (He) played tremendously."

Guay's performance on Friday night earned him the starting assignment on Saturday. But if the Irish didn't set anyone on fire Friday, on Saturday they looked as if they had forgotten their lighters. The Irish could do nothing right as Dearborn was in control from the opening faceoff to the final horn. While Guay allowed seven goals, his play was not as bad as that might indicate. He simply had little help in front of him.

The Wolves jumped out to a 3-0 lead by 9:08 of the middle period on two goals by Rick Osburn and another by Paul O'Bryan. Mark Anquillare got the Irish on the board at the 13:08 mark with a power-play goal. From then on, though, the only suspense in the game was if Osburn would complete his hat trick. He did with 25 seconds left to play in the game, scoring the Wolves' final goal of the evening. Tim Osburn, Ron Duda and Mike Grodus had the other Dearborn scores.

After the game, an obviously angry Smith threatened changes would be made.

"We're going to sit back and reevaluate exactly who will and who won't be playing," Smith said. "As of right now I can tell you that there will be a lot of people fighting for jobs."

Smith and his squad have two weeks off before a weekend home-and-home series with Lake Forest. The big question will be which Notre Dame team will see action.

Notre Dame goaltender Marc Guay makes one of 32 saves in Friday's 5-1 victory over the visiting Michigan-Dearborn. Things weren't so easy for Guay as the Irish lost, 7-1, on Saturday. Dennis Corrigan has the complete weekend hockey rundown in his article above.

Carolina nips Marquette, Notre Dame one week away

Associated Press

MILWAUKEE - Guard Kenny Smith converted two free throws with three seconds remaining yesterday to lift top-ranked and unbeaten North Carolina to a 66-64 nonconference basketball victory over Marquette.

The Tar Heels, 19-0, trailed by nine points with a little over four minutes remaining before their pressure defense keyed a comeback in front of a sellout crowd at Milwaukee Arena and a national television audience.

Brad Daugherty of North Carolina led all scorers with 20 points, while Michael Sims scored 12 of his 16 points in the second half to lead Marquette, which fell to 11-5.

Marquette had won seven of its last eight starts. North Carolina defeated Duke 95-92 Saturday in a battle of undefeated Atlantic Coast Conference teams.

The Tar Heels, ahead by two points at halftime, went on a 13-6 streak to open the second half. They held a 45-36 lead with 14:53 remaining on a steal and layup by Steve Hale.

North Carolina went on to open a 47-37 lead. But the Tar Heels reeled off 14 straight points for a 51-47 lead with 8:34 left.

Notre Dame holds off UCLA rally, wins 74-64

Rivers leads Irish, scores 21

UCLA is a team whose great winning tradition was built in large part around some outstanding centers - guys like Lew Alcindor and Bill Walton. But when the Bruins took on the Irish in the ACC Saturday afternoon, it was Tim Kempton, Notre Dame's big man in the middle, who ended up stealing the show.

Kempton turned in his best game since his sophomore year, pouring in 20 points on an 8-of-12 shooting day and pulling down 10 rebounds, as Notre Dame beat UCLA Saturday, 74-64, delighting a capacity crowd of 11,345.

The redheaded senior had some help, though. Sophomore guard David Rivers scored 21 points on 6-of-12 shooting from the field and 9-of-13 from the line, dishing out eight assists. Senior captain Ken Barlow added 14 points.

Sophomore Donald Royal and senior Jim Dolan turned in solid defensive efforts to keep UCLA's star forward Reggie Miller under control. Royal also pulled down 10 rebounds in 33 minutes, and Dolan helped the Irish break UCLA's second half press, and grabbed two key boards after a pair of Rivers' missed free throws to help persevere

As the final four seconds ticked off the clock, he stood in the backcourt and cradled the ball tightly against his body. Three UCLA players circled in a futile, last-ditch effort for a victory.

But Tim Kempton would have no part of it. It was his ball, and it was his ball game.

And while this was not the first time Kempton had turned in a big performance during his career at Notre Dame, even he admitted it had been a long time since the last one.

"I haven't played very well the last couple years," he said after scoring 20 points and grabbing 10 rebounds to key Notre Dame's 74-64 win over UCLA Saturday. "People might be surprised at how well I played today, but Coach Phelps and my teammates have always been behind me 100 percent."

The Notre Dame student body, however, has not always been behind the senior center. Over the course of Kempton's career, all too often from the student section has he heard the boos and seen the raised arms mocking a dropped pass.

He heard and saw, although he tried not to, and it hurt.

Times like that made it frustrating for Kempton, and his confidence see KEMPTON, page 13

Irish women split weekend series with Detroit, Boston U.

The Notre Dame women's basketball team won convincingly against Detroit, 72-58, on Friday, but lost a heartbreaker in their last independent game of the season against Boston University, 72-70, on Sunday at the ACC.

The Irish won their first North Star Conference game against rival Detroit in a physical, foul-ridden contest.

"This was a good game for us, but not very pretty," said Head Coach Mary DiStanislao. "The flow of the game was disrupted by too many violation-type calls."

Trena Keys was the high scorer with 21 points while Sandy Botham pulled down 9 rebounds and hit for 16 points. Mary Gavin led the Irish offensive attack by dishing out five assists.

In the first half, errant passing and missed shots plagued Notre Dame along with a disruptive Detroit zone defense. Then an aggressive Irish man-to-man defense shut down the Lady Titans' scoring for the last seven minutes, and the Irish led 26-23 on a 30-foot Diondra Toney jump shot.

In the second half, Heidi Bunek scored 11 points and came down with 9 rebounds to rally her team. Bunek, in her first game since a stress-fracture injury, was especially effective in the paint against the Detroit zone defense.

"Her comeback was strong and timely indeed," said DiStanislao.

The Irish controlled the tempo and forced Detroit to take unwise perimeter shots. They effectively broke the Detroit press and hit key free throws down the stretch to seal the victory.

"Detroit is a very solid team with good talent. This is our first conference game and it was crucial for us to go out and play hard," said DiStanislao.

"I think we found out quite a lot about ourselves on our Christmas break trip to Miami and Rutgers. We found out that we have to play the entire 40 minutes of a game. We also found out that you can't bring part of your game one night and another part the next night.

"We learned those lessons the hard way," continued DiStanislao, "and now we're going to have to go out and play with intensity every time on the floor if we want a shot at the NCAA tournament. We have a chance to make the tournament, but first we have to win the North Star Conference and that means playing 40 minutes each night."

Against Boston, the Irish received another one of those tough lessons as they came up short, blowing a nine-point second-half lead against a team with which they matched up well.

Notre Dame used effective inside passing and good offensive rebounding while trying to force the ball inside the paint. The Terriers, however, rallied with perimeter shooting late in the half to close the gap to 35-32.

The Irish continued their inside game in the second half, getting good second shots off the boards and running a smooth transition game to take a 9-point lead with 10 minutes left.

The Terriers found the seams in Notre Dame's man-to-man, ball-denial defense and climbed back into the lead. Boston applied a full court press that befuddled the Irish, who could not handle tough passes.

Boston hit important free throws in the last three minutes as the Irish tried to foul. Notre Dame drew to within at 74-72, but could not steal the last inbound pass.

DiStanislao very concisely and correctly described Notre Dame's second half difficulties when she described her squad's performance as "flat." Keys was once again the high scorer with 18 points and 6 rebounds, while Botham scored 14 and grabbed 11 rebounds.

IRISH ITEMS... Freshman Lisa Kuhns is out for at least a week with an injury to her right foot suffered against Detroit... Denise Basford, a senior guard, is academically ineligible for the remainder of the '85-'86 season.

Irish forward Lavetta Willis finds the going tough underneath in Friday's 72-58 victory over Detroit. Mike Szymanski details the win as well as yesterday's 74-72 loss to Boston University in his story above.

Holtz assigns staff

Special to the Observer

Notre Dame head football coach Lou Holtz recently revealed the specific on-field duties of his assistant coaches.

On the offensive side, Vinny Cerrato will coach the quarterbacks, Pete Cordelli will direct the receivers and Mike Stock will handle the running backs. Tony Yelovich will coach the offensive lineman, while George Stewart will handle the tight ends as well as help out with the offensive linemen.

Defensively, the inside linebackers will be coached by defensive coordinator Foge Fazio, while Kurt Schottenheimer will handle the outside linebackers. Joe Yonto will direct the defensive lineman, while Terry Forbes will handle the secondary.

George Kelly, inside linebacker coach for the last 17 years, will serve as an assistant coach under Holtz "in charge of the overall football program," Holtz said. Holtz emphasized that Kelly's role was not that of an administrative assistant - the role Yonto played on Faust's staff.

"He'll be in charge of film evaluation - sometimes called quality control," Holtz said. "He'll help tie in people from the outside, actively work in the recruiting process and evaluate talent. He'll evaluate the overall situation."

Kelly will be on the field "depending on the situation and where he feels his priorities are at that time."

"He was selected because of his football knowledge and because of his knowledge about Notre Dame."
