Tylenol stops production of capsules after death

Associated Press

NEW BRUNSWICK, N.J. - The maker of Tylenol announced yesterday it will no longer produce over-the-counter medication in capsules, nine days after cyanide-contaminated capsules killed a woman and more than three years after they killed seven people in Illinois.

"We feel the company can no longer guarantee the safety of these capsules," said James Burke, chairman of Johnson & Johnson.

The announcement came as a team of investigators went to Pennsylvania to trace the path of the Tylenol capsules taken by a woman who died in suburban New York City on Feb. 8.

The 1982 cyanide-poisoning deaths of seven people in Illinois also were blamed on tainted Tylenol capsules.

Burke urged people to switch to coated oval-shaped tablets known as caplets, and said Johnson & Johnson would replace free any capsules consumers or stores now possess.

The company has "no plans to re-

Restructuring plan presented to senate

By CHRIS BEDNARSKI
Senior Staff Reporter

A proposal for a new student government constitution was presented by members of the Committee on Restructuring to the student senate last night.

According to the proposed constitution, the governing body of Notre Dame student government will be the student senate. The proposed senate would consist of a single representative from each dorm, with the exception of Grace and Flanner which would have two, and two off campus senators. The student body president will chair the senate but will only vote in the case of a tie. The student body vice president would be a nonvoting member of the senate.

John Spatz, senior class president, said he thinks representatives from the classes should be on the senate. "You need more distribution of representation," he said. I think it's important that we (the classes) have more say and input into what's happening."

Under the bylaws of the proposed constitution six standing committees would be established under the direction of the senate to carry out much of the senate's work. A finance and budget committee would be established to allocate student funds. A Student Concerns Committee would "formulate policy and direct action on matters that concern academic and societal problems which will affect student life," according to the proposed constitution.

Under the proposal, a Student Activities Board Steering Committee would determine social programming and a Rules Committee would interpret the constitution. An Executive Communications Committee would establish a channel of communication between leaders of various student interests.

In addition, under the proposal, a Campus Life Committee, composed of eight senators would formulate policy and direct action on matters that concern student residential life. Hall President's Council Chairman Kevin Howard said he thought eight senators is too many people on the committee. Howard said that a committee of eight won't be able to get anything done. Howard suggested a two member committee would be more effective. "They will get much more done," he said.

If the senate adopts the new constitution then it must be passed by two-thirds of the Hall President's Council or a two-thirds vote of the student body.

Notre Dame, Saint Mary's student sexuality rules differ

Editor's note: This is the second of a three-day series examining sex issues at Notre Dame and Saint Mary's. Today's story deals with sexual attitudes and rules. Tomorrow's story will examine pregnancy-related issues at both schools.

Notre Dame and Saint Mary's share similar philosophies about many areas of student life. Concerning student sexuality, however, the schools' regulations differ.

At Notre Dame, du Lac, the official guide to student life, prohibits premarital sex.

Rule eight states: "Because a genuine and complete expression of love through sex requires a commitment to a total living and sharing together of two persons in marriage, the University believes that sexual union should occur only in marriage. Violations shall involve suspension or dismissal."

Campus Sexuality

At Saint Mary's, however, there are no rules about disciplinary action to be taken toward any students who engage in sexual union.

Mary Ann O'Donnell, dean of student affairs at Saint Mary's, explained the reason for no direct reference to sex and sexuality in the Student Handbook. Sex is difficult to address in the form of rules, according to O'Donnell.

"We feel that it is the responsibility of the students. They can decide for themselves," said O'Donnell, stating that the policy at Saint Mary's deals with education rather than regulation.

"Saint Mary's has always prided itself in being proactive in education," said O'Donnell. That is the reason why Saint Mary's developed a Sexuality Education Council, she said. Saint Mary's sponsored a series of speakers addressing such topics as hygiene, knowing your body, sexually transmitted diseases, and contraception, which will be final series tomorrow night at Saint Mary's. She said, adding that experts in each field have spoken on three

Notre Dame cadet serves as model in Army scholarship ad campaign

By BOB MUSSELMAN

Readers all over the world can see Notre Dame senior Carl Gebo in a place usually reserved for bikini-clad beauties: the Sports Illustrated swimsuit issue.

Gebo, a Notre Dame cheerleader and Army ROTC cadet, is featured in a full-page advertisement for the Army ROTC scholarship program which appears or will appear in 10 issues of 8 national magazines, including Sports Illustrated, Sport, Popular Science, People and Newsweek.

The Howard Hall resident said he was one of nine cadets chosen at the Army junior summer camp at Fort Louis, Washington, to have their pictures taken for promotional literature.

In October, Army ad agency representatives notified Gebo that they wanted to use his photo in a scholarship ad. Photographers spent three days here later that month capturing him in various poses and activities.

He found out in December that the ad would appear in the swimsuit issue.

"I really don't know what criteria they used to decide who to use in the ad," Gebo said, but he guessed that the choice was based upon his extracurricular activities, an interview conducted at the camp photo sessions and his photogenic qualities.

An inset photo in the ad shows Gebo with several Notre Dame cheerleaders. Gebo said he and the cheerleaders were paid $1 to sign a release allowing the pictures to be used.

Gebo said the ad tries to show that "even though you're a member of Army ROTC, you don't miss out on other college experiences."

"For me, an Army ROTC scholarship isn't making college any easier. It's making college possible," he says in the ad.

Two other cadets from other schools, who are also heavily involved with extracurricular activities, were chosen to appear in similar ads in different magazines, he said.

Colonel Robert Skinner, commander of the Fighting Irish Army ROTC Battalion, said Gebo was chosen from approximately 10,000 senior cadets.

The University was paid a "legal buck," $1, for the right to use the "ND" symbol in the ad, Skinner said.

He said the advertisement appears in magazines that the Army's market survey indicated are read by high school seniors. Army ROTC, he said, is looking for students like Gebo who are athletically and academically inclined.

In Brief

MTV, the cable music channel, has stopped using NASA footage of the space shuttle blasting off as part of its logo in the wake of the Challenger disaster. For the first week after the tragedy, MTV left the logo on the air as a statement of support for space exploration along with a statement by MTV's "VJ's" extending the network's sympathies to the families of the seven astronauts killed in the Challenger fireball. But network executives soon decided it was "too painful to use" and have replaced it with an interim logo, a menagerie of animated MTV promos, and a message from MTV's general manager explaining why it has been replaced. - The Observer

To err is human, to correct is simply good journalism

Nobody likes to make mistakes.

Especially a newspaper, which prides itself on accuracy and getting it right the first time. Indeed, because a newspaper does pride itself on accuracy, making a mistake hurts all the more.

Yet a newspaper, like all human institutions, does make mistakes. Speakers can be misquoted, information misunderstood and names misspelled.

When a mistake is made in a story, it reflects on that section of the newspaper and the newspaper as a whole.

If a name is misspelled in a news story, for example, it hurts the credibility of not just the news department, but the sports, editorial and features departments as well. After all, when one fact is wrong in a story, how can the reader be sure that the rest of the story is accurate? Or the rest of the paper?

Thus, once a mistake does appear, the newspaper has to admit it. In print.

And it hurts. Running a correction can be comparable to standing in front of an auditorium packed with people and admitting that what you told them yesterday was wrong. For papers like the Wall Street Journal, Detroit Free Press or Chicago Tribune more than a half a million people are in that "auditorium." For The Observer, approximately 12,000 are there.

Because corrections call attention to newspapers' mistakes, many of those in that "auditorium" focus on the aspect of error in that correction rather than the correction itself. In other words, instead of viewing corrections as evidence of a newspaper's commitment to accuracy, some readers unconsciously focus on that newspaper's occasional mistakes.

Ironically then, while corrections should help a newspaper's credibility, corrections inadvertently may be hurting it.

Public opinion polls on the credibility of different media may provide indirect evidence of this. According to one such poll in 1980, a majority of Americans said that when they receive conflicting stories from television and newspaper reports, they give more credit to the television's account of the events.

This might have something to do with television newscasts rarely, if ever, admitting to mistakes they've made the day before. Of course it may be that television reporters never make mistakes. More than likely, however, it's because viewers would switch stations if every other night they heard the anchorman say, "Sorry about this folks, but last night we made a mistake in saying...."

Mark Pankowski

Assistant News Editor

So newscasts have good reason for not admitting to their mistakes, if in fact they do make them. And by not airing corrections, that might just be enough to give television newscasts the edge over newspapers in the credibility department.

Yet responsible newspapers continue to run corrections. And they do so primarily for two reasons.

The first is the simple fact that when a newspaper makes a mistake, usually someone knows about it, and he or she makes sure the newspaper knows about it too. Sometimes in rather strong terms. If the newspaper then doesn't run a correction, that person is sure to tell others. Or file a lawsuit.

Once enough mistakes run without next-day corrections, then, that paper eventually loses its credibility, its readers, and its money.

The other reason is much more idealistic, and important: a newspaper's commitment to accuracy and truth.

A newspaper must go out of its way to get the most accurate information possible.

This of course means getting the facts right the first time. But when the facts aren't right the first time, it means admitting the mistake with a correction the next day.

And readers must help that newspaper. They must try to focus on the newspaper's commitment to accuracy when it has to run corrections rather than its occasional mistakes.

After all, when a newspaper prints corrections, readers shouldn't worry about that paper's commitment to truth and accuracy. It's when a newspaper stops printing corrections when readers should start to worry.

Food services director receives 'silver plate'

By DAVID T. LEE
News Staff

Under the leadership of Director of University Food Services William Hickey, the dining halls may have to expand their trophy case.

Hickey has been awarded the Silver Plate Award from the International Foodservice Manufacturers Association.

"(It is) the most exciting professional citation I've ever received in my life," said Hickey. "My family and I are elated."

He gave credit to "creativity, innovativeness, pride in the work we do," and pointed to a "routine that's offset... creating special theme nights."

"(Food Services) tries to cover every aspect of student dining," Hickey said. He pointed to such features as an excellent salad bar and the ever-present variety of cereals.

Suffering a heart attack two years ago, Hickey showed a healthy appreciation of the nutritional value of food. "Everyone has healthy food available," He pointed to examples of low cholesterol fish and high carbohydrate pasta.

Hickey said, however, he sees "nothing different" from dining hall service last year.

The International Food Service Manufacturers Association awards eight Silver Plate Awards from various categories of service. These include secondary schools, hospitals, hotels, public institutions, military, fast service and full service restaurants, and colleges, of which Hickey represents the last.

Hickey said he will receive his medal at a banquet in Chicago on May 19. In addition, one person will receive the Gold Plate Award, which is the highest honor bestowed by the food service industry. Hickey, who noted that no college has won the award since 1955, is extremely doubtful he will receive this coveted honor.

Although aware of the "dissatisfaction of students," Hickey said "students... (are) very important to us." "I wish students would try to compare our food service with other food services."

Saint Mary's board notes Hurley valentine, health update

By PEGGY PROSSER
Staff Reporter

Saint Mary's students recently received Valentine greetings from injured Notre Dame student Kevin Hurley, announced student body president Anne Marie Kollman, at last night's Board of Governance meeting.

In a letter written by his mother, it was said that Hurley's condition is steadily improving. Hurley is slowly able to identify people through a freshman class picture sent to him last semester, according to the letter.

Students are encouraged to stop by the bulletin board in the Haggard College Center to see the valentine, said Kollman.

The last lecture of the Sexuality series will be this Wednesday at 7 p.m. in Stapleton lounge, said Kollman. The lecture will be titled, "Optimism, the Worst Contraceptive."

"Romancing the Stone" will be shown this Thursday night at 6, 8 and 10. It will also be shown at 6, 8, 10 and 12 pm this Friday.

Kollman congratulated the new student body officers, who will take office after spring break. Mary Lally was also recognized for her effort in organizing the elections.

"I think Mary gets a nice hand because she did an awesome job," said Kollman.

Most students do not know about activities sponsored by the Christian Life Commission due to lack of publicity, lack of student attendance at meetings and general lack of interest, according to Heidi Cerneka, a CLC member.

In response to this problem, a proposal has been drawn up by the CLC, calling for a representative who can meet on a regular basis with Campus Ministry, attend CLC meetings and report all information to the Board of Governance.

Doing this, said Cath Dahle, Christian Life commissioner, would result in more information being passed on to students, through their hall representatives.

Dahle said the role of CLC is to provide a link between Campus Ministry and student government, and a representative is needed to serve as that link.

"The primary responsibility of the representative is to communicate information between hall and class council, and they are there to respond to the needs of the council," said Dahle.

Student government has expressed concern over the purpose of a CLC representative on the board of governance. According to Kollman, student government would like to have a representative from Campus Ministry to serve as liaison, as the present system of CLC representatives on student government is not working as effectively as it could.

"I want to know what's going on in Campus Ministry, not Christian Life," said Kollman.

"I think we need to know the best way to connect Campus Ministry and student government," said Sister Mary Turgi, assistant director of Campus Ministry.

"The person who has traditionally been CLC representative has felt isolated on the boards. She's felt like she was the only person representing that interest," said Turgi.

The CLC Proposal will have to be re-written by both CLC and Campus Ministry, as the present plan does not satisfy the needs of all concerned, Kollman said.

ND endowed with professorship

Special to The Observer

Jack Melchor, a California venture capitalist who received his doctorate from Notre Dame, has endowed a visiting professorship in Notre Dame's College of Engineering.

"The fruits of Jack Melchor's business acumen will benefit engineering students at Notre Dame for decades to come," commented Father Theodore Hesburgh, University president.

After receiving bachelor's and master's degrees in physics from the University of North Carolina, Melchor graduated from Notre Dame with a Ph.D. in physics. He headed the microwave ferrite group of Sylvania Electric Products, Mountain View, Calif., from 1953-56. In 1956 he became a co-founder and first president of Melabs, a microwave systems and components company in Palo Alto, Calif. Five years later he co-founded Hewlett-Packard Associates, a producer of semiconductor, photoconductor and microwave components. After the company was fully acquired as an H-P Group he became general manager of the Hewlett-Packard Palo Alto Division.

In 1969 Melchor founded the Palo Alto Investment Co. He served as chairman and chief executive officer of the firm, which initially invested in 12 start-up companies and four others. In 1980 he founded Melchor Venture Management Inc. in Los Altos, Calif., and continues to serve as its president. As a venture capitalist, Melchor has helped finance some 35 electronics companies on the San Francisco peninsula. As a member of President Reagan's Innovation & Entrepreneurship Task Force, he was among those who recommended the capital gains tax rollback and a research and development tax credit. He holds six U.S. patents, has written 12 technical publications and is a fellow of the Institute for Electrical and Electronics Engineers.

Melchor received the Notre Dame Centennial of Science citation in 1967 and has been a member of the University's College of Engineering Advisory Council since 1982. He and his wife, Norma, a South Bend native, are the parents of four children.

Most AIDS inmates located in East

Associated Press

WASHINGTON - Nearly 75 percent of prison inmates who have AIDS are housed in correctional facilities in three East Coast states, according to a federally financed study that disputes assertions that the deadly disease is rampant among the nation's jails.

The report, the first of national scope on the incidence of the disease in prisons, found that about 50 percent of the nation's prisons are totally free of AIDS, and that 4 percent of the nation's correctional institutions have 72 percent of all the inmate AIDS cases.

The study, "AIDS in Correctional Facilities: Issues and Options," found 144 current AIDS cases in all of the nation's state and federal prisons, where the inmate population is about 500,000. An additional 35 current cases were found in 11 of 32 city and county systems surveyed, according to the report, sponsored by the National Institute of Justice in the Justice Department and the American Correctional Association.

Nearly all current AIDS cases found by the study were contracted from intravenous drug abuse before admission to the jail or prison, the study released Sunday concluded.

On a cumulative basis, nearly three-quarters of the offenders who have had AIDS in state, county and city jails nationwide are in facilities in New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania, the report concluded.

"You keep hearing that prisons are breeding grounds for AIDS, but in fact there are only a very small number of jurisdictions with substantial numbers of AIDS cases and the vast majority of jurisdictions have very few or no cases," the report's author, Theodore Hammett of the research firm Abt Associates Inc., said in an interview.

Three state prison systems have AIDS rates that are in excess of 30 times that of the general prison population, the study said. The report categorized the figures by region and did not identify individual systems.

The senate will consider adopting the constitution proposal at a meeting tomorrow.

Judicial Coordinator Karen Ingwersen and Student Activities Board Manager Lee Broussard said they think it will be difficult to approve a new constitution before the upcoming student government elections, scheduled for March 4. They suggested that the senate take the next month to consider the proposed constitution and then have it take effect in April 1987. "If we decided tonight to make it come into effect a year from now then we will have more time to work on this," said Broussard.

Off-Campus senator Jim Hagan disagreed with Ingwersen and Broussard. "I think the longer we delay, the worse things get. I think we need a strong, centralized student government right away," he said. It's like putting off chemotherapy for another year."

Jim Domagalski, junior class president, also said he didn't think putting off ratification of the constitution was wise.

The senate compromised by rescheduling the date for student government elections to March 11. The delay will give the senate more time to consider the constitution and allow potential candidates more time to make a decision about running, said Senator K.C. Culum.

separate occasions.

Should a student become pregnant, O'Donnell said they would not be suspended or expelled from school.

O'Donnell concluded, "It should be remembered, however, that Saint Mary's strictly enforces a social conduct code which prohibits male visitation before or after the designated parietal hours."

Patricia Rissmeyer, director of residence life and housing, outlined Saint Mary's philosophy on sex and sexuality.

"I think what is most important to Saint Mary's is to graduate students who have developed a conscience. I think our approach to rules and regulations is to have students decide their own conscience and make their own decisions on important issues.

"The RAs and residence hall staff are qualified to discuss issues about sex and sexuality. If a student has a decision then she can discuss the pros and cons with them in a Catholic context," said Rissmeyer.

"When a student graduates, we hope she can make decisions that she can live with. That's what we want to send our students out into the world to do," she said.

Rissmeyer also told of the sexuality education program initiated at Saint Mary's to help inform students. Its purpose is to aid in responsible decision-making based on sound knowledge of all aspects of the issue.

Repeated attempts to contact John Goldrick, Notre Dame associate vice president for residence life, were unsuccessful. Sister Jean Lenz, assistant vice president for student affairs, said that Goldrick deals with violations of the rules and she could not speak for him.

Father Edward Malloy, associate provost and assistant professor of theology at Notre Dame, discussed the University's attitude towards sex and sexuality.

"The basic philosophy is regulated by the trustees. Notre Dame defines itself as a Catholic institution and it respects the tradition from which it comes," said Malloy.

"We try to acquaint students with the Catholic Church's teachings. There are courses in departments like theology, sociology, biology, etc., in which the teacher can deal with various areas of sexuality in the formal sense," he said.

According to Malloy, "If a student becomes pregnant, however, she will not be asked to leave school."

"One educates by expectations for behavior. We keep trying to find ways to help students," Malloy said.

University Ministry had a program titled the "Catholic Faith Series" which dealt with ethics and addressed the subject of sexuality. Counseling is also available in the dorms, through Counseling and Psychological Services and its counselor.

enter this business for the foreseeable future," Burke said.

The decision was made to "protect the public," Burke said. He said the company was confident that consumers would keep Tylenol "the most preferred" brand of painkiller in the country.

"We fought our way back from the Chicago tragedy... thanks to the fairness and good judgement of consumers," Burke said. "We will do it again this time."

The company will stop producing capsule forms of Extra-Strength Tylenol, Regular Strength Tylenol, Sine-Aid, Co-Tylenol, Maximum-Strength Tylenol Sinus Medication and Dimensyn, a menstrual medication.

Frank Young, commissioner of the U.S. Food and Drug Administration, said the agency "respects" the company's decision. "This is a matter of Johnson & Johnson's own business judgement and represents a responsible action under tough circumstances," he said.

However, it would be "premature" for the rest of the industry to follow suit, Young said, noting that various types of capsules have certain advantages, such as a time-release capability.

He said FDA and industry officials will meet in the next few days to "discuss what technological changes might be possible to respond effectively to this problem."

Johnson & Johnson stopped

making Tylenol capsules after Diane Elsrath's death, and Burke had said Friday that resumption of production would depend on consumer surveys and the investigation of the tamperings.

The replacement program will cost the company an estimated $150 million, he said. But he said that does not compare with the suffering of the family of Elsrath, who had taken cyanide-laced Extra-Strength Tylenol capsules.

The future of capsule medications was called into question after Elsrath died and a second bottle containing tainted Tylenol capsules was found in a store less than two blocks from the store in which the fatal dose was purchased in Bronxville, just north of New York City.

The three-seal tamper-resistant wrappings, introduced in 1982 after the deaths in the Chicago area, appeared to be intact on the second bottle, found Thursday.

FDA spokesman William Grigg said the government considered the tampering a "local incident."

A few practical jokes: Courtesy of Notre Dame

features writer

Father Hesburgh's sense of humor is a well-kept secret here at Notre Dame. Just look at du Lac. Pretty funny, huh? Sorry, the joke's on you. Like it says in "The Absolutely, Positively Very Last Notre Dame Joke Book," "What's black and white and living-in-the-40s all over? du Lac." Du Lac may well be the handbook that is used for all the practical jokes that go on here.

I'm not talking about the cosmic practical jokes that the universe plays on us with mathematics, or Casey Kasem, or even those McDLT "Hand-Warmin'" commercials. No, these are jokes thought up by some power (this may be hard for some of you to believe) even greater than the people under the Dome.

Despite the fact that they really aren't the Omnipotent Proprietors of the Entire Universe that they pass themselves off to be, being at Notre Dame, one experiences some pretty clever practical jokes. Come with me as we uncover the Horrible and Nasty Practical Joke Conspiracy going on right under our noses.

Ethanol. Literally, right under our noses. This one is kind of like that stink perfume that you can buy in Spencer's only on a much larger scale. Remember how funny it was to sprinkle that stuff on your best friend's sister when you were in fifth grade? Imagine the rollicking hilarity to be had from dousing an entire college campus in the stuff.

Gerry Faust. I picture a member of the administration and his cronies sitting around some Friday night five years ago with a bottle of Peach Schnapps and a bandolier of grenades trying to dunk midgets in McDonald's Secret Big Mac sauce. Around 2:30 a.m., someone burped and he was suddenly hit with inspiration. "Hey! I've got it! Wouldn't it be hilarious if we hired a high school coach?" Of course, he knew the dangers of practical joking when he started.

The Dining Halls. The jokes being played in the dining halls lean more toward the traditional.

There's the "Eggplant Grinder." The trick brown bowls that are so hot that they evaporate yogurt always get me. And which one of us hasn't stood by stifling our glee while some hapless friend or freshman unknowingly tried to actually eat one of those rubber biscuits? Whoever originally came up with the masterstroke of staffing the dining halls with renegades from Willy Wonka's Oompa-Loompa Land and outcasts from the Far Side is deserving of some kind of Practical Joke Lifetime Achievement Award.

My Hall. Okay, I admit that it might have been a mistake telling the Admissions people that I was "a simple, sensitive country boy, who likes quiet music, good friends, fresh strawberries, and rainy days." It was a deplorable, vile lie. But did they have to punish me so permanently? They put me right down the hall from a couple of psychos who enjoy racing up and down the hallways at light speed from sundown to sunup, screeching loudly like chipmunks sucking helium. When those two are busy hiding from the sun, the six-and-a-half-foot kickboxer next door usually has his atomic-powered stereo turned up so loud that it registers on the Richter Scale. The novelty of our R.A.; a blind, Air Force ROTC leper, wore off in two or three weeks. Then there are the wretched water grem-lins living in the walls near the showers who wait for me to let my guard down in the shower before turning up the heat levels of the water so high that three layers of skin are instantly vaporized off my inner thigh. Funny stuff. And to top it all off, I think someone is stealing my Kleenex.

The Phone System. This is a twist on the classic "Have you got Prince Albert in a can?" phone prank from everyone's childhood. I'm sure that all the Big Guys over in the Administration Building giggle like gleeful maniacs when they think about the phones here. My roommate noted astutely that one could conceivably walk to St. Mary's in the time it takes to get a phone connection over there. Then of course there are the "trick" connections that I keep stumbling into. Is it me? Do I have a demon phone or what? I'll pick up the phone and suddenly I'm listening into some stranger's secret and intimate conversation.

"Have you got Prince Albert in a can?"

Guy: You drive me mad with desire.

Girl: Uh...me too.

Me (disguising my voice): but you look like Babe Ruth on acid.

Guy: What? Me?

Girl: Did you say that?

Me (disguising my voice): No, my darling, you have the shins of an eighty-year-old Zulu tribesman.

Then I hang up.

So that's it. These are but a few of the practical jokes that Notre Dame has played on me and I'm sure on you too. One that I didn't mention was the whole College Scene Facade. Sure, I saw "Animal House" in high school. I figured that's what college should be: wild parties, lots of beer, pretty girls surrounding me at all hours, mustard smeared all over my body and an endless soundtrack of great music.

So when does the Administration come up with a rock and roll policy?

Fun with the phones

Dollmaker strives for originality

Associated Press

MEDFORD, Ore. Some artists paint, create pottery or put words on paper. Theresa McQuiston Robinson makes dolls. She's created between 2,000 and 3,000 of them in the last 10 years, for people all over the United States and in several foreign countries.

She creates quietly behind the counter of the shop at which she works, the Calico Junction in Jacksonville, as well as at home.

"It started as a home business," she says. "From there it just blossomed."

Robinson attributes part of her success to timing. She got interested in making dolls in the early 1970s, "before Cabbage Patch," and before national interest in sewn dolls "became in."

Living in the San Francisco Bay area at the time, she tried experimenting with making a few dolls. A friend took a couple of the dolls to work with her and showed them to her co-workers. Robinson suddenly started to get orders. Her work became known by word of mouth.

Her dolls sold in shops in Beverly Hills and Santa Monica, often for as much as $600 each. She made dolls for Disney World and Universal Studios.

Robinson moved to the Rogue Valley eight years ago and has worked at the Calico Junction for six years.

At one point, she was commissioned to create 12 patterns for dolls. The problem, she says, is that there is no money in creating doll patterns "unless you own the company."

Robinson now prefers to take someone else's pattern and do something creative with it. If you compare her doll with the pattern from which it came, you'll notice obvious differences.

"I always try to make them different," she says. "My main trademark is hair." She works with each doll to make an elaborate hair style.

How long does it take to make a doll? the average is about six hours, Robinson says. Hers vary in size from nine to 36 inches.

Around the Rogue Valley, making dolls is not so lucrative. An average creation of hers goes for about $30, a far cry from the $600 one might fetch in Beverly Hills. But she is content to work at those prices.

Walk into the Calico Junction and you see a number of dolls, among them a grandma doll and an angel doll that are much admired by browsers. The grandma doll led to the invitation to create those 12 patterns.

You also see quilts and pillows that Robinson creates.

"I always try to do something out of the ordinary," she says.

Besides creating her own dolls, Robinson also teaches others how to do it.

"I love teaching," she says. "It's fun to make a doll but even more fun to watch a student you've taught make one."

Besides classes at the store, she has taught at Ashland High School and Everyone's U at Southern Oregon State College. She has taught for the last seven to eight years and estimates 700 students have learned from her. Some are now her competitors, in a sense.

A bit of advice Robinson gives students is to sign and date each doll they create. Antique dolls are popular in exhibits in museums. Today's dolls may be the museum exhibits of tomorrow, she points out.

"One hundred years from now, sewing techniques will have changed some more," she says. "It's rewarding to see your knowledge passed on."

Citibank has many reasons for lending to Brazil

Hey, do you want to get a job at Citibank? If you do, you should never mention in your job interview that you disagree with Citibank's credit policy towards countries like Brazil. This article is to help you understand why Citibank, among other banks, is still in love with the "Girl from Ipanema."

Ricardo Araujo

guest column

Last January, authorities from the Brazilian government (the Finance Minister, the Planning Minister and the President of the Central Bank - the "Boys from Ipanema") visited the headquarters of Citibank in New York. They came to the United States reluctant to pay the world's biggest foreign debt ever - $105 billion. Instead, the Brazilian authorities arrived in New York with hopes of borrowing more money from Citibank, one of Brazil's major creditors.

What Brazil asked for, and got, was a short-run credit of $15.2 billion and a "will think about it" promise from the bankers about changing the interest rate level from the American prime rate to the libor rate (the rate paid in London's market). This change would save Brazil some $350 million annually, according to Brazilian authorities.

Like all previous meetings, the negotiations were long and tiresome. They were marked by remarks of skepticism on the part of Citibank negotiators, who demonstrated reluctance to lend more money to Brazil without the approval of the International Monetary Fund (IMF), yet, despite the hesitations expressed in the first rounds of negotiations, the three Brazilian authorities returned to Brazil with "their pockets full of fresh cash." This time they got the best out of the negotiations precisely because the IMF played no role in the direct transactions between Brazil and Citibank.

Bankers are smart, no doubt about it. They play only to win in this business of giving loans. Although they also make occasional mistakes, bankers score high in financial deals. Therefore, it was not the smiling and friendly faces of the three Brazilian authorities that persuaded Citibank to advance more money to Brazil. The decision was undoubtedly based on the bank's optimism about the conditions of the Brazilian economy now and in the future.

While it holds the fame of big debtor, Brazil remains the only country paying $1 billion in interest every month to all of its creditors, without delay. Although the principal is left unpaid, one could say "who cares?" If the bankers received the principal owed them tomorrow, they would have to find somebody else to borrow the "bloody petro-dollars" that the Saudi Arabians deposited in American banks not too long ago. (The Saudis were looking for a safe place to put their money).

As Michael Moffit, an economics consultant for Shearson-American Spress, has said, the bankers knew from the beginning that they could not get the same profit margin if they tried to lend money to made-in-USA companies. A company the size of Exxon, for example, can go anywhere to borrow money. Therefore, since the 1970's the bankers have largely depended on "poor" countries to make fat profits. Citibank, Chase Manhattan, and Bank of America together increased their profits by 55 percent in the late seventies with transactions outside the United States.

With Brazil, banks have a good thing going. They receive fresh payments every month from a debtor they have good reason to believe will not default.

As a developing country, Brazil is doing very well despite the negative effects of the 1973 and 1979 oil shocks, which jeopardized the building of infra-structures (dams, bridges, roads, telecommunications network, for example) and the industrialization of consumer and capital goods. The high cost of energy put pressure on the country to diversify its industrialization in order to increase its export earnings. Up until recently, 80 percent of the oil used in Brazil was imported from Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC). When the country used up all of its foreign reserves, Brazil had to borrow dollars to pay the oil import bill and to finance its major industries.

In the past five years, the tenth largest economy in the world has been struggling to restore its development process. So far, the results have been convincing. Last year Brazil had one of the highest growth rates of Gross Domestic Product (GDP) in the world - seven percent or $214.2 billion. The trade surplus reached $12.5 billion and now the country has $9 billion in foreign reserves. This trade surplus is bound to continue at this level, or higher. For the export diversification policy has made Brazil the fifth largest seller of arms in the world and the third largest exporter of frozen chicken, among other items.

Though the bankers are aware of the fact that Brazil has many internal problems (high inflation, unemployment, underemployment) and continues to depend largely on international markets to obtain dollars to pay the loans, they are optimistic about the future of the Brazilian economy and the political stability of the country's new democracy.

Citibank's positive response to the demands of Brazil shows that this bank sees Brazil's economy as robust and dynamic. The foreign debt represents a plus for both Brazil (in regard to its development) and Citibank (in regards to its profit margin). And this is a good reason to remain in love with the "Girl from Ipanema."

Elitest attitude denying Rice a fair chance at ND

The number 640 holds no significance in itself but seems to have come under close scrutiny over the past few days. 640 is the SAT score of football recruit Tony Rice. Many on this campus are quick to say that Rice does not belong academically at Notre Dame, that the University is lowering its standards to win football games. Before looking at that one simple number and deciding that Tony Rice does not belong at Notre Dame, consider this:

Eric M. Bergamo

here's to future days

Many people believed that Vegas Ferguson did not belong at Notre Dame.

Vegas Ferguson, one of the great players of the Dan Devine era, came to Notre Dame with academic numbers that were not much higher than Rice's. Some critics claimed that Notre Dame was lowering its high standards with the intention of winning football games. Ferguson was accepted, and the naysayers waited for the moment that the prized recruit would fail in the classroom. That moment never came.

Ferguson succeeded, both on the playing field and in the classroom. He became the all-time leading rusher with 3,472 yards and helped the Irish in their drive to the national championship in 1977. Ferguson graduated with a degree in economics in three and half years.

Before we point the finger at Holtz and accuse him of not knowing the high academic standards of the University, consider that Devine knew the academic standards when he recruited Ferguson. Consider that the University would not have hired Holtz if he was not aware of the academic standards that the University demands. In Ferguson's case, the University believed that he could succeed, with help, in the classroom. If the University did not believe that Rice has the same desire that Ferguson had, Rice would not have been accepted into Notre Dame.

As a community, we place too much of an emphasis on the SAT score. Our chances of success and of failure are gauged by one standardized test. Remember that this test has many variables involved. My sister recently took the SAT; she is very proficient in English but got an SAT that was mostly math. That difference showed in the total score. One of her friends, with very high grades in math, received an SAT that was mostly English and received a lower total score in the end. We cannot judge a person just on his or her SAT scores, yet that is what we are doing in the case of Tony Rice. This judgment is greatly unfair to him. We are saying, "You didn't do well on the SAT, so you don't belong here at Notre Dame."

This line of thinking is very dangerous, an elitest view that one who is not as academically gifted as we deserves no place at Notre Dame. Tony Rice is an extremely gifted athlete, as some of the Notre Dame community are gifted scholars. Rice deserves a chance to prove himself in the classroom; that is what we as a community should give him. He also needs our support, both on and off the playing field, if he is to succeed. The speculation that because of his 640 SAT score he will not succeed at Notre Dame is the last thing he needs. We should not question, but accept his admittance to Notre Dame and give him the chance he deserves. Be assured that Holtz and the University know what they are doing in letting Rice come to Notre Dame as Devine and the University did in letting Vegas Ferguson come to Notre Dame.

Vegas Ferguson proved the critics wrong when he received his degree. Hopefully, Tony Rice will rise above his critics to receive his degree.

The Pearl leads No. 9 Syracuse to win over Pitt

Associated Press

PITTSBURGH - Dwayne "Pearl" Washington scored 23 points, including six key points down the stretch, as ninth-ranked Syracuse held off Pittsburgh, 69-62, last night to remain atop the Big East Conference.

The Orangemen, trailing 55-54, scored six consecutive points to take a 60-55 lead with 5:35 remaining. Washington then sealed the victory with a driving layup and two free throws in the final 1:34 after Pitt rallied to within one point.

Washington, averaging 28 points over his last five games, scored 16 in the second half as Syracuse improved its record to 21-3 overall and 12-1 in the Big East.

Pittsburgh, 14-9 overall and 5-7 in the conference, again pulled within one point at 62-61 on Demetreus Gore's running shot from the lane. But Washington dribbled into the lane for an eight-footer with 1:34 to play and followed with two foul shots at the 52-second mark to make it 66-61.

SMC swimmers end regular season with an impressive loss to Albion

By ANDREA LaFRENIERE
Sports Writer

The Saint Mary's swim team completed its regular season on Saturday in Albion, Mich., where it lost a close meet to Albion College by a score of 60-53.

The meet was the Belles' best of the season, according to head coach Nancy Jo Kuzmitz.

"This was our most exciting meet," she said. "Everyone was all fired up for it, and the competition was keen."

The meet's outcome is somewhat misleading, according to Kuzmitz, as Saint Mary's dominated Albion in the majority of the swimming events.

"We swept pretty much each event, finishing in the one and two, one and three, and two and three seedings," she said. "We won both relays, too."

The 400-yard freestyle relay team of seniors Anne Cushing and Joyce Murtagh, junior Patty Juckniess and sophomore Meghan Rafferty took first place with a time of 4:02.71, while the team of Juckniess, Rafferty, junior Margaret Mannion and freshman Tanya Reeves finished first in the 200-yard medley relay with a time of 2:04.69.

Meghan Rafferty, a sophomore, placed first in the 50-yard freestyle event with a time of 0:27.01.

Cushing and Murtagh, co-captains for the Belles, performed especially well in their last collegiate meet, capturing first place in the 500- and 100-yard freestyle events, respectively.

"Both seniors put in a fine performance for us," Kuzmitz said. "Anne swam the 500-free in 5:59.18, and Joyce finished the 100-free in 1:00.61."

Cushing and Murtagh each had a second-place finish for the Belles, as well. Cushing swam the 1000-yard freestyle event in 12:21.15, while Murtagh completed the 200-yard freestyle event in 2:07.03.

Other second-place finishers for Saint Mary's include Rafferty, who swam the 100-yard backstroke event in 1:07.47 and Juckniess, who completed the 50-yard freestyle event in 0:27.85.

In addition, Tanya Reeves, a freshman, finished the 200-yard individual medley in second place with a time of 2:31.90, while Mannion took second place in the 100-yard breaststroke event with a time of 1:17.62.

The 200-yard medley relay team of junior Mary Fisher, sophomore Jennifer Veselik and freshmen Jennifer Burke and Anne Marie Wolf also placed second with a time of 2:16.46.

Juckniess finished third in the 100-yard backstroke event, Burke placed third in the 200-yard freestyle event and Reeves took third in the 100-yard butterfly event.

Saint Mary's fell behind Albion in the diving competition, where freshman diver Bridget Murphy's 111.25 points were not enough to surpass the totals of the three entries from Albion.

Kuzmitz was quick to point out, however, that her team's performance was exceptional.

"A lot of the swimmers lowered their qualifying times for Nationals, so I think we have a really strong chance of placing high at that meet," she said.

Although the team's regular season is completed, it is practicing daily in preparation for Nationals, scheduled for March 6-9 in Spokane, Wash.

Big upset keys SMC fencing wins over weekend

By GLORIA ELEUTERI
Sports Writer

How sweet it was for the Saint Mary's fencing team as it went undefeated over the weekend against California State (Pa.), Carnegie Mellon, and Case Western Reserve. With the wins, the Belles raised their overall record to 12-7 this season.

The Belles achieved their first victory on Saturday when they defeated California State by a score of 9-7. There were two times in the meet when St. Mary's found itself down, once at 4-1, and again at 5-2. But determination was key to their comeback, putting the Belles on the winning track for the remainder of the day.

Shannon Maughan enabled the team to pull out the upset over California State. Fencing in the last position, she surprised her opponent and came away with a 3-1 record.

"Shannon helped out a lot," said head coach Mike Weeks. "She was a standout in the meet which later led us to a victorious weekend."

"The team never gave up. It was an important win, their best win ever."

Saint Mary's dominated in its following two meets against Carnegie Mellon and Case Western Reserve. The team won each bout with identical scores of 12-4.

Leading the Belles was captain Mary Beth Proost with a 4-2 mark. Ann Raney continued her consistent play in achieving an 8-3 record. Following were teammates Becca Barnett, Maughan, and Laura Harris with 4-2, 9-2, and 5-2 decisions.

Weeks brought another novice along this past weekend also. Carol Mahony was able to score a 3-4 slate.

"Each time we allow different novices to travel so they will gain experience," said Weeks. "Carol fenced well and as a freshman, shows potential."

"The team has been training hard all season and the improvement shows. I attribute that to the team unity and spirit. It is a good feeling."

The final tournament for the Belles this season will take place in East Lansing, Mich. There the Belles will open on Friday night against Wayne State. Continuing in the meet on Saturday, Saint Mary's will face Michigan State, University of Michigan, and Oakland University.

"I hope that the team continues to keep its record above the .500 mark," noted Weeks. "They have worked hard and come along well this season."

"East Lansing isn't far from here so maybe some students will be able to come support us. That usually gives the team a boost."

Irish

Irish the lead when the teams went into the locker room for the first intermission as he scored at 15:24 with assists from Thebeau and Reilly.

The Golden Flashes forged a tie with the second period's only goal at 9:02, Aldridge once again turning on the red light. But Reilly, playing despite the injury, got the game-winner in the third with assists from Matt Hanzel and Anquillare.

"It was a total team effort," said Smith. "Not any individual really stood out. The entire team gave their all. But with Reilly only playing on a leg and a half and Whitmore on an arm and a half, you really have to take your hat off to them."

The Irish will see if hockey and the desert sun mix when they travel to Phoenix for a weekend series with Northern Arizona. While the Lumberjacks' campus is in Flagstaff, they play their home games in Phoenix at Oceanside Arena.

Improving ND gymnasts tripped up by Purdue

A small but supportive crowd turned out for the ND Gymnastics Club's first home meet of the season. In a close battle with Purdue, both the men and women showed much improvement, but came up short against the Boilermakers.

The men stayed with the Boilermakers through much of the meet, but they spotted Purdue too many points in the horse and the parallel bars. The final score was 118.6 - 110.7 in favor of the Boilermakers.

"We definitely improved this meet," said Club President Jim Ciesil. "At the meet in Miami we lost to Purdue by 10, but this time we only lost by seven points."

Ciesil turned in one of the strongest performances of the meet in the floor exercise. His score of 8.0 was good enough for second place in that event.

"The floor is my best routine," he said. "I still want to work on it and iron out some of the bugs."

Paul Nowak was the only gymnast to compete in the all-around for the Irish. His score of 39.0 for six events left him in second place, two-tenths of a point behind Rob Henthorn of Purdue.

Nowak scored an impressive 8.8 in the vault to take first place in that event. He also finished fourth in the floor exercise with a score of 7.7, and he placed third in the high bar with a 6.6.

Matt Sennett also was a key contributor to the cause, winning the high bar with a 7.4 and taking third with a strong performance on the horse. Mike Downing won the rings with a score of 5.9, and Francis Sverdrup placed third in the vault with an 8.5.

The women also stayed with Purdue the entire meet, and actually believed they would win the meet until the results from the balance beam were announced. The Boilermakers outscored the Irish in the beam by 2.3 points and won the meet, 79.4 - 76.7.

Michelle Broussard gave another strong performance, placing second in the all-around with a score of 29.4 for four events. She won the uneven bars with a score of 7.8, and she took second in the floor exercise and in the beam. Her chances for first in the all-around were hurt when her second run on the vault was disallowed.

Club Corner

"I messed up on the run and touched the board," she said. "I thought you were safe until you touched the horse, but I guess I was wrong."

Megan Zillig also did well, taking third in the floor exercise, the vault, and the unparallel bars. And Maureen Durkin placed fourth in the vault and fifth in the floor exercise.

"Maureen tumbled very strong," said Sandy Vanslager, an advisor to the team. "She hit her front pass which she had been practicing on this past week."

The Purdue team was carried by one gymnast, Becky Gallagher. She placed first in every event except the unparallel bars.

The club now has two weeks to prepare for a triangular meet with Purdue and Miami (Ohio). Head Coach Rich John knows what it will take to beat Purdue in their third and final match.

"We have to really work on routines in practice," he said. "We have to clean them up and keep them free of mistakes."

The ND Ski team hoped to end its season on a high note this past weekend at the National Qualifying meet at Marquette Mountain. Instead, the note was slightly lower as the team skied well, but was unable to qualify anyone for nationals.

Club President John O'Donovan was the top men's performer, placing in the top 20 in the giant slalom Saturday. Chris Simonet also did well for the men.

Against some stiff competition, Kathy Skendzel took sixth in the slalom and ninth in the giant slalom, but failed to qualify for nationals. Laurie Shea and Jane Heisel also skied well. The official team results for the women's, as well as the men's races, were not available.

Last Friday the ND women's Track Club traveled to Ypsilanti, Mich., to participate in the Huron Open. Julia Merkel was very impressive, taking fourth in the 1500 and seventh in the 1000.

"Julia ran a fantastic meet," said head coach Dan Ryan. "The 1500 and the 1000 is a tough double."

Personal bests were recorded by Maureen O'Leary in the 500-meter run and by Nancy Loughlin in the 1500-meter run. And the 1600-meter relay team of Merkel, O'Leary, Christine Dragani, and Kathleen Lehman chopped almost eight seconds off their previous best time.

"I worked them really hard up to the race," said Ryan. "I didn't expect great times, but they surprised me, especially Julia."

The team will finish up its season at Ann Arbor, Mich., this weekend as it participates in the Silverston Invitational track meet.

You can say it was tests or illness, but Ed Abt has the real explanation for the Volleyball Club's play in the three matches at the ACC this past week.

"We played like ----," said the club President.

On Wednesday, the Irish dropped the match to Calvin College (not to be confused with Calvin Coolidge) after winning the first two games. Friday's match against Purdue appeared to be headed for the same result, as Notre Dame took the first two games and dropped the third and fourth. But the Irish held on to win the fifth game and the match.

Saturday afternoon the team won the first game against Wisconsin, and was up 14-11 in the second, but ended up dropping the second game, 16-14, and losing the match in four games.

Things can only get better, right? They had better for the sake of the team because Notre Dame must face Ball State and Ohio State, both top-20 teams.

MSU's Skiles will go to jail

Associated Press

LANSING, Mich. - Michigan State basketball player Scott Skiles has agreed to serve 30 days in jail at the end of the college season for breaking probation on a drug conviction, a newspaper and TV station reported.

Skiles, a senior guard for the Spartans and one of the nation's leading collegiate scorers, would serve the 30-day term at the end of the 1985-86 season under the tentative agreement with Indiana authorities, according to reports Sunday by the Flint Journal and WILX-TV in Lansing.

Last week, Skiles' attorney, Charles Scruggs of Kokomo, Ind., said two weeks of talks with Marshall County Prosecutor Fred Jones had produced an agreement on punishment for Skiles. Scruggs did not say whether Skiles would spend any time in jail.

Skiles, 21, was arrested in Plymouth in August 1984 on cocaine and marijuana charges. He pleaded guilty to a reduced charge of possession of marijuana, a misdemeanor, and last April was given a one-year suspended sentence and fined $100.

Skiles also was ordered to perform 120 hours of community service and placed on one-year probation.

Jones moved to revoke Skiles' probation after East Lansing police arrested Skiles in November on drunken driving charges.

Michigan, Kentucky, and Syracuse moved as a pack as the three were 10th, 11th and 12th, respectively in last week's voting.

Michigan, 22-3 and 847 points, handled two Big Ten Conference teams easily as they downed Minnesota, 92-56, and Iowa, 82-66, while Kentucky, 22-3 and 784 points, registered a big Southeastern Conference road victory, 73-71, at then-No. 18 Alabama. Syracuse, 20-3, received 678 point, 20 more than Oklahoma (23-3), which fell to Missouri, 101-88.

Nevada-Las Vegas, sixth last week before losing to Cal-Irvine, 99-92, leads the Second ten followed by Bradley, Georgetown, Notre Dame, Indiana, Louisville, Navy, Virginia Tech, Michigan State and North Carolina State.

Confident freshman

Toney shows she has "the right stuff"

By MIKE SZYMANSKI
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame women's basketball team has received important production from its freshman class this season, and one of those young impact players has been 5-9 guard Diondra Toney.

"She has made a successful transition to the college game," said Notre Dame head coach Mary DiStanislao. "She operates well both at point guard and in the backcourt. She complements Mary Gavin in that they both are good passers, good defensive players, and improving shooters.

"The best part of her game is her confidence. She is a good rebounder, makes few turnovers, and has made some important shots for us."

As is the case with most freshman, the conversion to the collegiate game was difficult at the beginning.

"In high school we were in shape, but here the players are so physical, and I had to really get on the weights and build stamina," said Toney.

The area where Toney has made her greatest progress, though, is defensive play.

"In high school, we played zone defense so I did not have to work," said Toney. "Here I had to adjust to man-to-man defense, and now I actually enjoy it.

"In our defense, you are not always on your man, but you have to keep an eye on the ball and on the man. You have to help and recover. And when the offense sets screens and hedges, you have to get through them."

As a second team Parade All-American, Toney led Whitney Young High School (Chicago) to the USA Today's Super 25. The training and concentration in basketball in high school was intense and sometimes overwhelming for her.

"We played practically year-round, with holiday and summer tournaments," said Toney. "It ran me down, and it became a job. Here we do not practice every day occasionally, and we have summer to ourselves.

"In the off season, I will work out on my own, and build my physical strength. I play pick-up games with the high school and college players at home. They accepted me once they saw that I did not play like one of the girls."

The Chicago area is traditionally strong in women's basketball, and many players from there end up playing at major universities, some of which play Notre Dame. Toney said that her greatest accomplishment in high school was leading Whitney Young to the Harold Washington Holiday Tournament championship as a junior, gaining all-tourney honors.

"I want to become the best defensive player on the team," said Toney. "I want to be recognized as the most versatile player. I can rebound well, while I can also play point or true guard.

"As a team, we definitely should win the North Star Conference as we improve with every game. Our consistency is improving because everyone knows their roles, and the freshmen have learned from their mistakes and game experience.

"For us to win, Sandy (Botham) must rebound well, Trena (Keys) and Lynn (Ebben) must score, Mary (Gavin) has to have assists, and Lavetta (Willis) must play good defense. It is a team effort.

"In the next few years," Toney continued, "we will have just a great team. We can become explosive, and a National Championship is always possible if we push each other."

Toney appreciates the patience DiStanislao has had with her.

"She stayed with me when I had trouble adjusting. She would put no pressure on me, saying 'relax and do what you do best.'

Recruiting was an educational experience for Toney.

"Notre Dame was the last thing on my mind, in fact I already had chosen my limit of five schools (Ohio State, Texas, Maryland, and Long Beach State) before they approached me.

"Soon I realized that education was most important here. You have to work if you want a degree, no gifts, no babying. At other schools, all they know is basketball, and they take easy classes. Very good players were very screwed up.

"Trena and Lavetta were big reasons why I came here. I took that chance of being the only black girl on the team, adjusting and being comfortable with my situation. I do not see it as a big influence."

But Notre Dame fans already are seeing the influence of Diondra Toney on the Irish program.

Hockey team wins pair on road at Kent State

How a team handles adversity is a direct measure of a team's character. Judging by this weekend's results, the Notre Dame hockey team has a lot of character, as it swept a weekend road series from Kent State by scores of 5-3 and 3-2.

With several players out because of injuries or the flu, it would have been easy for the team to roll over and play dead, especially considering recent performances. But putting those behind them, the Irish (9-17-1) grouped together for the victories, leaving Head Coach Lefty Smith very satisfied.

"This weekend was probably the most pleased that I've been in the last couple of years," Smith said. "Between the Army series and practice, we had lost a lot of players, and Kent State had built this series up as the highlight of their season. So going into a hostile environment with people who are regulars hurting, I was a little apprehensive as to what kind of a response we'd get."

Matters appeared to get worse for the Irish as soon as they stepped on the ice Friday night. On the first shift of the evening, Tim Reilly injured his knee. Not much later, Steve Whitmore injured his knee. Worse, the Irish were losing 1-0 as Kirk Aldridge scored for the Golden Flashes.

Reilly and his teammates fought back, however, with Reilly himself tying the score at 8:45 on a power play. The Golden Flashes regained the lead at 11:26 of the first on a score by Chris Barker. But 18 seconds later, co-captain Dave Waldbillig knotted the score at 2 with an assist from fellow co-captain Bob Thebeau. The Irish went ahead for good on a goal by Tom Mooney at the 18:13 mark.

A second-period tally by Thebeau and a goal at 3:34 of the third by Rich Sobilo rounded out the Irish scoring. Kent State's Tim Carlson completed the scoring when he tallied at the 11:26 of the final stanza. Marc Guay stopped 26 shots for the victory.

Saturday's game was similar to Friday's. Kent State once again jumped out to an early lead when Aldridge scored with the game only 43 seconds old. Thebeau tied the game at the 9:30 point of the opening period with an assist from Mark Anquillare. Waldbillig gave the Irish women swimmers drop weekend meet as they fail to keep pace with deep NIU unit

By SCOTT INGLIS

The Notre Dame women's swim team traveled to Northern Illinois University Saturday hoping for its ninth victory of the season but were worn down by the depth of the Huskies, finally losing 82-58. Although the score does not indicate it, the meet was extremely close, with the Irish women turning in some fine performances before the day was over.

"It was a heckuva meet, an extremely close meet," said Irish coach Tim Welsh. "On another day, the results could have been very different. As it was, however, the meet was decided on team depth. (The Huskies) were strong and deep."

Even so, the meet was not decided until the 15th event of the day, the 400-I.M., which was won by Northern Illinois in a time of 4:49.97. Prior to that crucial race, the Irish had hung close, placing first in seven of the previous 14 races and trailing the Huskies by just 10 points. Northern Illinois had built its small lead on the strength of second- and third-place finishes won primarily because of its advantage in depth over the Irish women.

"It is mentally tough to win seven of the first 14 events and yet still look at the score and see you are behind by 10 points," noted Welsh. "But you have to give Northern Illinois credit. They lost a tough meet last week, but rallied back on Saturday against us."

Although the Irish cannot be credited with a victory, they certainly had their share of bright spots on the day. One such highlight was the performance turned in by sophomore Amy Darlington, who was a triple winner for Notre Dame, swimming her best meet of the year. Darlington took first place in the 1000-yard, 500-yard, and the 200-yard freestyle events, a grueling combination that totals the most possible yards that an individual can swim in a meet. In addition, Darlington's time of 11:05.50 in the 1000-yard freestyle was her best time of the year.

Other outstanding performances for the Irish were given by senior Venette Cochiolo and sophomore Barbara Byrne. Byrne, each case, turned in her fastest times of the year swimming in the 100-yard and the 200-yard backstroke. Meanwhile, Cochiolo, a steady performer for the women all year, had the winning times in the 100-yard and 200-yard breaststroke events, in times of 1:11.70 and 2:35.14, respectively.

"They have been swimming well for us all year long," said Welsh. "In fact, Venette has not lost a 200-yard breaststroke event since the first meet of the year. When they get into the water, we know we can expect strong swims."

A further note of encouragement for Notre Dame was the season-best time in the 200-yard medley relay time of 1:54.8.

Despite these efforts, the loss to the deeper Huskie team drops the Irish record to 8-3 after this last dual-meet of the season. The loss, however, does not put a damper on the fine women's season, and Welsh feels the experience will prove beneficial in the future.

"We were prepared, swam well, and will look forward to swimming against them next year. We have accomplished so much this year, but like I told the girls, if we accomplish

ND fencers Sullivan, Hynes meet in "real" competition

By TRISH SULLIVAN
Sports Writer

During practice, players get a chance to improve their skills by competing against each other. But it's all done in fun and no one feels they have to beat their opponent. Well the tables were turned slightly this past weekend when two Notre Dame fencers found themselves competing against each other for the gold medal in the Junior Olympics, held in Minneapolis, Minn.

Sophomore Molly Sullivan and freshman Janice Hynes made it through the double-elimination tournament only to face each other for the title. Sullivan, who has competed in three previous Junior Olympics and was a champion in the under-16 category, showed that winning form again by coming out on top, 8-4. Hynes owns her share of Junior Olympic experience also, competing in three, but this year's was the best finish thus far.

"It was a lot of fun competing against Molly, but also nerve-racking," said the Peabody, Mass., native. "Either way I would have been happy because we were assured of bringing back a first and a second."

"It was different to actually compete against Janice because I knew her style and she knew mine," added Sullivan. "I knew we would come away with the top two honors, but I really wanted this badly. I had gotten the under-16 category but I wanted the under-20 title."

Other women competing in the tournament were junior Vittoria Quaroni, who finished in the top 20, and freshmen Brenda Leiser and Kristin Kralicek, who made it among the top 32 fencers.

The Irish also sent some representatives from the men's squad. Freshmen Derek Holeman met with the most success so far, as he made it to the second round before being eliminated. Two members of the epee team, freshmen Ted Fay and Todd Griffie, were scheduled to compete last night.

Carolina is No. 1 again

Associated Press

North Carolina, unanimous as No. 1 for the second straight week and fourth time this season, led the Associated Press Top Twenty yesterday as the top five teams remained the same as last week.

The Tar Heels, who received 62 first-place votes and 1,240 points from the nationwide panel of sportswriters and broadcasters, have been in the top spot for each of the 13 polls since the regular season began. North Carolina, which beat Clemson, 79-64, in its only game last week and improved its record to 25-1, was behind only Georgia Tech in the preseason poll.

Duke, 25-2, survived a tough weekend to hold on to the No. 2 spot with 1,171 points. The Blue Devils beat then-No. 17 North Carolina State, 72-20, on the road Saturday night and bounced back Sunday afternoon for a 75-74 victory over then-No. 14 Notre Dame.

Kansas, 24-3, held third with 1,087 points, 70 more than Memphis State (23-2). Georgia Tech, 19-4, rounded out the Top five with 960 points.

The remainder of the Top Ten was St. John's, Michigan, Kentucky, Syracuse and Oklahoma.

St. John's, 24-3 and 928 points, moved up one spot from last week's ranking as the Redmen beat then-No. 9 Georgetown, 60-58, on the road and won their 21st straight home game, 74-75, over Connecticut. The Redmen's ranking is their highest of the season and they are the only team not ranked in the preseason poll to crack the Top Ten this season.

Two Notre Dame fencers square off in practice earlier this year. Over the weekend Irish fencers Molly Sullivan and Janice Hynes got the chance to compete against each other in an actual bout at the Junior Olympics. Trish Sullivan describes the results in her story above.
