Aquino visits her alma mater and receives school's highest award

Associated Press

NEW YORK -- Philippine President Corazon Aquino returned yesterday to her alma mater after visiting the suburban Boston house she shared with her husband before he returned to the Philippines and was assassinated.

Mrs. Aquino was taken to the College of Mount St. Vincent, from which she had graduated in 1953, and was awarded the school's highest honor, the Elizabeth Seton Medal.

She and her former classmates met for about 20 minutes, posing for a class photo and discussing children, careers and school memories, including Aquino's performances of Filipino dances on the same stage from which she spoke yesterday.

Aquino said that when her husband, Benigno "Ninoy" Aquino was jailed in 1972 by President Ferdinand Marcos, she recalled what she was told when one of her college classmates during her junior year: "thy will be done."

"Perhaps no less than the sacrifice of a man was needed to give freedom to a people," she said at a mass at St. Ignatius Roman Catholic Church in Newton, Mass., where she and her husband had worshiped during his self-imposed exile in the early 1980s.

Later, Mrs. Aquino was to receive an honorary degree from Fordham University and address Filipinos in the United States. About 10,000 Filipino-Americans from the New York City area were expected to attend.

Four of the Philippine presidents since the country's independence in 1946 have received honorary doctorates from Fordham. Marcos was not among them, said Fordham President Joseph A. O'Hare, a Jesuit priest.

Mrs. Aquino also was scheduled to address the United Nations on Monday.

In Newton, Mrs. Aquino removed her glasses and wiped away a tear at St. Ignatius when a choir sang a song her husband used to sing to raise his spirits while he was a dissident imprisoned in the Philippines.

"I think Ninoy's joy is the knowledge that he pulled a fast one on me. Once more he has gone on his merry way and left me to pick up the mess," she said.

At the mass, Boston College presented her with its highest honor, the Ignatius Medal.

Before the mass, about a dozen neighbors stood in the rain in Newton to wave to Mrs. Aquino when she visited her former home, now a museum to her husband. Mrs. Aquino smiled and waved as a neighbor shouted "Madam President, welcome home!" but ignored reporters' questions.

Inside the house, Mrs. Aquino met privately with board members of the Benigno S. Aquino Memorial Foundation.

"It was a little bit emotional for her" to visit the house, said board member Ceferino Bague. "It was nice to have her back."

At St. Ignatius, Cardinal Bernard Law noted parallels between the Philippine and Polish struggles for freedom and presented Mrs. Aquino with a replica of the painting of Our Lady of Chetochowa, Poland's black madonna.

Earlier in her U.S. tour, Mrs. Aquino had her first meeting with President Reagan, after which senior aids signed an agreement that will make available to her country an additional $150 million in economic and military assistance.

She also addressed a joint meeting of Congress. The House immediately voted to give the Philippines $200 million in aid; the Senate has yet to vote.

Hesburgh OK after brief hospital stay

By MARK PANKOWSKI
News Editor

Against the advice of doctors, University President Father Theodore Hesburgh was released from a Connecticut hospital yesterday after spending the night under observation because of a fainting spell.

Hesburgh, 69, lost consciousness for fewer than five seconds while standing outside his hotel at about 7 p.m. Saturday, said Richard Conklin, assistant vice president of University relations.

Hesburgh was taken by ambulance to the emergency room of Yale-New Haven hospital and evaluated there, Conklin said. He was later admitted to the coronary-care unit for observation.

Tests revealed Hesburgh's "vital signs were stable and his cardiogram normal," said hospital spokesman Tom Urtz.

Urtz said some of Hesburgh's doctors advised him not to leave yesterday morning.

"Certainly we wanted to take a conservative approach with Father Hesburgh, and some (doctors) suggested 24 hours more observation," said Urtz. "But he felt well enough to leave and travel."

Conklin said he didn't know what brought on Hesburgh's fainting spell, but added that there was "no evidence of anything serious causing it."

Urtz said doctors may have discussed the cause with Hesburgh confidentially. Doctors also may have suggested that he get some rest.

Hesburgh had been in New Haven for ceremonies marking the installation of Benno Schmidt Jr. as Yale University's new president, Conklin said.

Hesburgh resumed his schedule after leaving the hospital early yesterday morning, Conklin said. He flew to Washington D.C. to take part in the 25th anniversary celebration of the Peace Corps.

"He called his secretary and told her that doctors found nothing wrong," said Conklin.

Hesburgh was scheduled to return to Notre Dame last night, Conklin said.

New club to promote responsible drinking

By REGIS COCCIA

Although alcohol is consumed by students on campuses across the nation, BACCHUS, a newclub at Notre Dame, would like to do something about it.

BACCHUS has more than 200 chapters at universities nationwide and seeks to promote responsible attitudes toward drinking.

"Our major message is to get away from the negative attitude associated with an alcohol awareness club. BACCHUS is a student organization," said John Sheehy, president of the club at Notre Dame.

"We're not saying don't drink, but learn what alcohol is about and drink responsibly," Sheehy said.

BACCHUS also seeks to promote awareness of the effects of alcohol on the body, according to Sheehy.

"One thing that must be noted is that BACCHUS is very pro-drinking," said Vince Willis, vice president of the Notre Dame chapter. "Drinking can be a very positive thing, why turn it into a negative one?" Willis said.

Interest in bringing BACCHUS to Notre Dame began last fall after club officers Laurie Bink, Sheehy, Willis and Assistant Director of Facilities and Programming for Student Activities Ceil Paulsen attended the BACCHUS General Assembly in Louisville, Kentucky, according to Willis.

Both Sheehy and Willis said that support for BACCHUS is coming out of the student body. Willis expressed hope that the University Philippines President Corazon Aquino, now touring the United States, visited her alma mater, the College of Mount Saint Vincent, from which she had graduated in 1953, yesterday. Earlier in her U.S. visit, Aquino had her first meeting with President Reagan and addressed a joint meeting of Congress.

To some it's "cornfusing." To others it's "cornfounding." But to three homeowners in Evans, Colorado, it's just a nuisance. For the past four years, they say, corn kernels have sporadically fallen out of the sky onto their roofs and back yards. "I'd probably have a ton of it if I picked it all up," said homeowner Gary Bryan. Kobel and Bryan say all the obvious explanations don't seem to fit. There are no corn fields near their houses, and the closest grain elevator is about five miles away. There are no trees or overhead wires for squirrels to drop corn from, and frequently no birds or planes are visible when the corn starts to fall. Associated Press

An Arkansas printing company made quite a hit with Allan Hancock College's box office crew when it sent the school 64,000 World Series tickets instead of theater tickets. When Marcy Rafetto, assistant box office manager for the college's Pacific Conservatory of Performing Arts, opened the cases of tickets Friday, her first thought was, "We're going to New York." The tickets had been printed for the New York Mets. Weldon, Williams and Licks Inc. of Fort Smith, Ark., sent the college some of the tickets it ordered for upcoming plays. In place of the rest were four cases of baseball tickets, each containing about 16,000 field and box seat tickets worth $40 apiece. When college president Gary Edelbrock calculated the value of the tickets--about $2.5 million--he said, "I think this is better than the (state) lottery." -Associated Press

A Federal Appeals court has rejected the City of Philadelphia's argument that the U.S. Army, whose policy of discriminating against homosexuals violates the city's Fair Practices Act, should be prohibited from recruiting at Temple University's law school. Israel to back allies with gunships

Associated Press

JERUSALEM - Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin said yesterday that Israel would back up its Lebanese militia allies with Israeli-manned helicopter gunships and tanks to halt a surge of guerrilla attacks in southern Lebanon.

He also suggested that Israel may increase the estimated 1,000 troops it keeps in southern Lebanon, but declined to elaborate.

Rabin told reporters the Israeli assistance was meant "to absolutely break these attacks by inflicting large casualties" on Shiite Moslem guerrillas.

A senior military officer, demanding anonymity, said Israel would deploy troops to reinforce the South Lebanon Army militia on a case-by-case basis, but did not intend to send in a big force.

The latest rocket attack Saturday wounded three Israeli soldiers, the Israeli military command said. The attack occurred in the Israeli-occupied buffer zone of southern Lebanon, which stretches six to 10 miles deep along the border and is meant to prevent guerrillas from attacking Israel itself.

Two soldiers suffered slight injuries, and the third was hospitalized with moderate stomach wounds, the command said.

The attack came one day after five French soldiers with the United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon were wounded by a rocket fired at their barracks in south Lebanon.

Rabin briefed the Cabinet on the stepped-up assaults against Israeli troops, their Lebanese allies and UNIFIL in southern Lebanon.

Speaking to reporters afterward, he warned that "if there will be no tranquillity on our side, there will be no tranquillity on their side."

Rabin blamed Iranian-backed Hezbollah extremists and the Shiite Amal militia for attacks which killed four French peacekeepers and at least 12 militiamen of the Israeli-financed South Lebanon Army in the past six weeks.

Peace Corps looks for Notre Dame students

By DAVID T. LEE
News Staff

While some students after graduation will be busy spending their first paychecks, others may be spending a couple years in Africa, living in a modest hut, and teaching the basics of good farming to people who speak Swahili and practice polygamy.

Peace Corps representative Dan Smolka said he can give seniors that chance if they enter the Peace Corps after graduation.

Smolka said that now is the best time to sign up for the Peace Corps. Signing up "should not be a spur-of-the-moment decision," he said.

Peace Corps volunteers must have a college degree, six months experience in a skilled trade, such as carpentry, and "some type of social service in their background," he said.

Smolka said any college degree is sufficient, although those in engineering and the sciences are preferred. He said liberal arts graduates, called "generalists," make up 40 percent of the Peace Corps.

He said Peace Corps workers are given free medical benefits, free transportation, and a monthly allowance while working in a country. Upon returning to the U.S., the worker receives $4200 in "readjustment allowance," he said.

After enlisting and completing the three-month training program, volunteers work for two years, although a person is always free to leave if dissatisfied, said Smolka.

The Peace Corps is looking for unique people, said Smolka. "If he does not have the social and cultural sensitivity, he is not going to be a good Peace Corps representative," he said.

Smolka said Peace Corps workers will be given positions of leadership they might not find in the United States.

Superpower summit delayed by detention of Daniloff

Associated Press

WASHINGTON - Secretary of State George Shultz continued yesterday to press the Soviet Union to let American journalist Nicholas Daniloff leave Moscow, saying a superpower summit was "most unlikely" until the case is resolved.

Meanwhile, members of Congress supported the Reagan administration's position to hold a firm line with the Soviets until Daniloff is freed.

"I think it is most unlikely that you could have a fruitful meeting in the conditions that we have today," Shultz said on ABC's "This Week With David Brinkley," reiterating remarks he made Saturday evening after he concluded two days of talks with Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze.

"It seems to me that what we must do is get this case settled before really you have an atmosphere that you can make some progress on the things people want to talk about," Shultz said during the broadcast.

At separate news conferences after their meetings ended Saturday, Shultz and Shevardnadze reported they had made some progress in preparing for a second meeting between Reagan and Gorbachev.

But Shultz said the Soviet spy charges against Daniloff were a stumbling block and Shevardnadze cited the American expulsion of 25 persons from the Soviet U.N. mission as an obstacle.

Soviet Foreign Ministry spokesman Gennadi Gerasimov, appearing Sunday on CBS' "Face the Nation," said resolution of the Daniloff case is "not a very big problem at all."

"Mr. Daniloff is under investigation, he is charged and usually he's going to be put to trial, but because we don't want this particular case to be an obstacle in our relations, we can find some kind of solution and let him free," he said.

Gerasimov said, "There are several ideas in air" to resolve the Daniloff case. "They were discussed and they can continue to be discussed," but he declined to disclose specifics of the ideas.

Sen. Daniel P. Moynihan, D-N.Y., objected to any plan to release Daniloff in exchange for accused Soviet spy Gennadiy Zakharov, even to effect an arms summit.

East, West countries agree on peace pact

Associated Press

STOCKHOLM, Sweden - Delegates to the 35-nation East-West security conference agreed Sunday on a package of information-sharing measures designed to reduce the risk that war could break out in Europe by accident.

It is the first East-west security accord since the SALT II pact in 1979.

A formal vote on the agreement was scheduled for late Sunday but was put off until Monday so the document could be printed. It then must be ratified by the 35 governments, and is scheduled to take effect Jan. 1.

Both U.S. and Soviet delegates praised the accord as contributing to a more stable military situation in Europe and improving East-West relations in general.

Soviet chief delegate Oleg Grinevsky described it as a "new foundation for the peace process in Europe." U.S. delegation chief Robert Barry said the agreement "shows East and West can say yes to each other for a change."

However, a ranking U.S. delegate, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Soviet-required restrictions on verification through on-site inspection made the agreement inadequate.

The agreement stipulates that members of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization and the Warsaw Pact must notify the other bloc at least 42 days in advance when planning military activities involving 13,000 soldiers or more or 300 tanks or more.

Any nation conducting military maneuvers involving 17,000 soldiers or more must invite two observers from other participants in the Stockholm conference.

When maneuvers involve amphibious landings or paratroops, nations must notify the other side if just 3,000 or more are involved, and invite observers if 5,000 troops or more are taking part.

The Stockholm Conference on Security- and Confidence-Building Measures and Disarmament in Europe began in January 1984, with delegations from the United States, Canada, the Soviet Union and all European nations except Albania.

Paulsen the club's advisor, could not be contacted for comment.

"The club is loosely knit right now but the future looks bright," Willis said.

BACCHUS is planning its first general meeting for sometime next month, according to Sheehy. He said there was an excellent turnout of students at Activities Night who showed interest in the club.

"We'd like to be an information group—we realize people are going to drink," Sheehy said. "We just hope they don't drink and drive."

Sheehy said the club wants to provide information outlets on campus for the student body. Although BACCHUS is not associated with any other club at Notre Dame, Sheehy said it may co-sponsor events with different clubs on campus. "We're going to try to think of something unique," Sheehy said.

each time we went to the brink, we came away empty-handed."

But if the Irish aren't getting the big plays when it most needs them, they should now be able to take a cue from the Spartans. Michigan State parlayed several key plays into crucial advantages, the most valuable by far being Spartan cornerback Todd Krumm's two interceptions.

Krumm's first interception off of Notre Dame quarterback Steve Beuerlein (19 Completions in 36 attempts, 259 yards) came when the junior defender stepped in front of Irish receiver Tim Brown and took the ball 44 yards in for the touchdown. That score gave Michigan State and early 7-3 lead and seemed to break the stride of a Notre Dame offense which had marched 70 yards for a John Carney field goal on its opening drive.

Knocking the Irish offense out of synch was not enough for Krumm, however, as his second interception, this one at the Spartan 18-yard line with 1:26 left, sealed the victory and earned him the game ball.

"On the last interception the play developed just like it was supposed to," said Beuerlein. "He sat on it right and it was a great play."

"The first interception, though, was a dumb play on my part. They did a good job disguising their defense and I threw it without looking. It put us in a hole and we had to play catch-up."

As was the case last week, the Irish task of catching up was made possible in the end by a fine defensive performance that yielded only one Spartan touchdown on the day. That score, a 40-yard air strike from quarterback Dave Yarema to flanker Mark Ingram in the fourth period came on a nice catch off a perfectly thrown ball.

Other than that score, however, the Notre Dame defense kept Yarema at bay, holding the talented senior to a paltry 7-of-18 for 144 yards. And although Heisman Trophy-candidate Lorenzo White kept Michigan State in control of the ball with many nice runs, he was kept out of the open field by the Irish defense and held to 147 total yards on 41 carries.

Somehow the Notre Dame offense did recover from its first-half doldrums to score a pair of second-half touchdowns, one a 38-yard Joel Williams scamper after a Beuerlein pass and the other a five-yard leaping touchdown by freshman Anthony Johnson. BOTH of these drives, and another 53-yard drive that ended when MSU's Dean Altobelli jarred the ball loose from Notre Dame's Brown at the Spartan goal line, were built around the passing game.

"It was very difficult for us to get something going offensively," said Holtz. "We had trouble running the ball (Irish tailback Mark Green's 30 yards on 13 carries led the team), and Michigan State made all the big plays. After the first interception for a touchdown, we were a little disjointed for the remainder of the first half. AND we really never got ontempo until the middle of the third quarter."

Holtz tried some unusual strategies to give the Irish some help, putting in the entire second-team offense in the second quarter and calling for a Beuerlein quick-kick in the third. The former wasn't effective, while the latter backfired as Beuerlein shanked the kick to set up one of Chris Caudell's two field goals of the day.

Spartan fullback

Morse follows father's footsteps

By ERIC SCHEUERMANN
Sports Writer

Michigan State senior fullback Bobby Morse, a man with quite a few ties to Notre Dame, didn't do anything fancy Saturday. But when it was all over, his contribution to the Spartans' 20-15 defeat of the Irish was evident.

You see, Morse is the main blocking back for Spartan Heisman Trophy candidate Lorenzo White. On Saturday, it was often a Morse block that sprung White for a substantial gain on his way to a 147-yard day.

Much has been made of the fact that Morse's father, Jim, started at right halfback for Notre Dame from 1954-1956, blocking some for Paul Hornung when the latter won the Heisman in 1956. Morse's older brother Jim also played for the Irish as a reserve defensive back from 1976-77.

"It's ironic that both my father and I may have been in the same backfield with Heisman winners," said Morse. "But my dad was a running back and Hornung was a quarterback. My dad ran the ball and caught the ball for Hornung more than he blocked for him. I mainly block for Lorenzo. Our roles are different, but I guess it's something to talk about."

Morse carried the ball twice Saturday for five yards, caught one pass for five yards, and returned two punts for 18 yards. But most of his duties this season will revolve around providing for White.

"No, I don't feel overshadowed," says Morse. "I'm not here for publicity. I do it for self-satisfaction. Lorenzo needs the publicity to win the Heisman. He's a great kid, and I want to help him win. I think I'd be disappointed if he doesn't win. Part of it would be my fault."

"As for my personal goals, I want to catch the ball and run for five yards a carry. There's also a punt return record I'd like to break."

With Morse's Notre Dame ties, one might think he would have ended up with the Irish four years ago. But such was not the case.

"I wasn't highly recruited," says Morse. "I came out of Muskegon Catholic on the western side of Michigan and there's not much publicity there. Michigan, Notre Dame and Michigan State wanted me to walk-on. But as soon as I heard about (MSU head coach) George Perles' attitude of playing players who weren't necessarily the biggest and fastest, I liked MSU.

"You don't have to be a 6-5 Parade all-American to play for him - you just have to have the desire. Everyone thinks I knew Notre Dame real well, but I was even more familiar with MSU. They finally offered me a scholarship and I signed the day after."

How close was Morse to signing with Notre Dame?

"Not very," he says. "Gerry Faust is a helluva man and a great person, but he didn't appeal to me as a football coach. When he recruited, he recruited all-Americans. Notoriety wasn't my greatest asset. Mine were my heart and my mind - and that I'm willing to pay the price."

So Michigan State gained a hard-working, if not flashy, fullback - one who'll continue to labor in the shadows for the good of the team and his tailback.

missed a field goal, the Irish saw the walls begin to crumble. Beurlein aired up a blind out-pattern toss to Brown, and Michigan State safety Todd Krumm stepped in to pick it off on his way to the end zone for an easy Spartan touchdown.

Incidentally, Krumm was the beneficiary of the interception which ended Notre Dame's hopes in the fourth quarter as well, tying him with Milt Jackson and Joel Williams for fourth-place among Irish receivers in the game.

"That play put us in a hole and we had to play catch-up," Beurlein said, "but after that week we knew that we could."

This week, however, they couldn't.

Near the end of the first half, Lorenzo White fumbled the ball for only the fifth time in his college career. If eve Notre Dame was going to capitalize and head into the locker room with some momentum, that was the time.

Instead, Carney's 37-yard fieldgoal attempt sailed wide, and the Irish were still looking for something to go right - anything.

Add a pair of missed two-point conversion attempts, a Brown fumble deep in State territory and a 19-yard quick kick, and you've got a pretty good formula for a guaranteed loss.

But how does a team find a way to get some breaks? As quiet as the Notre Dame locker room was after the loss, there was still confidence that things are going to come together one of these days.

"We know that if we run our offense," said Williams, "nobody can stop us. We're not going to give up.

It's only two games and two games don't make a season. There's plenty of time to come back, get things back in order and get Notre Dame back on top."

As for now, if it's any consolation, the Irish might just be the best 0-2 football team in the nation.

Spartans pull out 20-15 win over sloppy Irish

The Observer/Jim Carroll

Michigan State's Heisman Trophy candidate Lorenzo White evades Notre Dame defenders Wally Kleine (96), Darrell Gordon (38), Brandy Wells (5), Ron Weissen

hofer (36), and Cedric Figaro (48) in Saturday's 20-15 Spartan win over the Irish. The Irish defense held White to 147 yards on 41 carries on the day.

Late ND rally denied at goal

Assistant Sports Editor

EAST LANSING, Mich. - One of these days the Notre Dame football team is going to give its fans the "Cardiac Kids" instead of a cardiac arrest.

For the second straight week the Irish outgained an opponent offensively and outplayed an opponent defensively only to see a last-minute attempt at a comeback victory fall by the wayside. This time it was an inspired Michigan State team playing the culprit, as the Spartans pulled out a narrow 20-15 victory in front of 79,895 fans Saturday at Spartan Stadium.

And for the second straight week, inopportune mistakes, silly penalties, bad kicks and bad breaks made the difference. Because of these factors, new Notre Dame coach Lou Holtz finds himself winless in two attempts. Holtz' current team joins Hugh Devore's '63 squad and Dan Devine's '78 team as the only Irish teams of this century to lose their first two games.

"I thought we had a chance right up to the end," said Holtz in a low voice. "I am disappointed certainly, but we knew it wouldn't be easy. Our football team played hard but

Soccer team rebounds to crush Tri-State, 7-0

By KELLY TOWNSEND and PETE GEGEN

Going by the statistics, the Notre Dame soccer team had two blowouts in this weekend's action. But going by the scoreboard, the Irish could only manage to win one of the two contests.

Despite controlling play, the team dropped a 1-0 decision to Michigan State on Friday. The team responded, however, with a 7-0 thrashing of Tri-State yesterday.

In the Michigan State contest, the Irish kept playing the Spartans' end the entire game. The Irish totalled 13 shots compared to three by the Spartans, and 17 corner kicks to one by Michigan State. The normal number of corner kicks in a game is usually near seven for a team, so the Irish offense played well above par.

Despite the number of shots, three of which went off the posts, the Irish could not get it past Michigan State's keeper.

"We dominated Michigan State, the sixth-ranked team in the Mideast, and I'm proud of the boys," said Coach Dennis Grace. "Everyone played very well and the substitutes we put in played as well as the starters."

The Irish played as a team throughout, with the defense consistently backing up the offense and feeding them from the half line. Senior Pat Szanto did an excellent job at sweeper and was complemented by freshman Pat McClanahan who held his own at the stopper position.

Michigan State's goal came early in the first half. It was bought down the wing and centered at the top of the penalty box. From there it was clipped into the upper left corner, slipping past keeper Hugh Breslin.

After that goal, the rest of the game was all Notre Dame. The Irish controlled the ball and kept all the pressure on the Spartan defense in an attempt to tie the score.

"The man was open in the middle and wasn't challenged. He put it in the right place," said sophomore stopper John Guignon. "We dominate them and know we should have won. Even though we didn't, we're pleased with what we did and so was Coach Grace."

Grace, well known for the little praise he gives his team, was uncharacteristically free with the kudos for the way the team played.

"I was very happy with the way they played," he said. "They played as a team and worked well together. They played their best and if we continue to play like we did Friday, we'll win. (We) have character and we'll be back."

Against Tri-State on Sunday, Notre Dame sent the almost-unheard-of total of 41 shots at the Trojan goal. But even with a 3-0 halftime lead, Grace was not happy with his team's sloppy play.

"We didn't execute very well," noted Grace. "We sent the ball over the post with some moon shots, and we overpassed in front of their goal."

Kevin Kade put the Irish up immediately with a goal at the 1:18 mark, and then proceeded to assist on the second goal, a Joe Sternberg shot at the 9:23 mark.

McCourt increased his team-leading point total to 21 with a goal two minutes before the half.

Sternberg notched a second goal, and then freshman Rolfe Berje scored to give Notre Dame a 5-0 lead.

Pat Murphy and Shawn Magsig both scored the first goals of their careers as the Irish continued to pour it on in the second half.

Irish miscues make day a long one

By MARTY STRASEN
Assistant Sports Editor

EAST LANSING, Mich. - Notre Dame quarterback Steve Beuerlein dropped back with just more than a minute remaining in the game, and promptly fired an interception to seal the win for Michigan State.

But to attribute Notre Dame's 20-15 loss against the Spartans to that miscue would be like convicting a mass murderer for jay-walking. If you are going to point any fingers at plays which cost the Irish in this game, you're going to go through a lot of hands.

"I don't know about the luck-of-the-Irish," said Notre Dame receiver Tim Brown, "but right now it seems to be going against us."

"Everything we did, we did to ourselves. They didn't do anything we didn't expect. We just couldn't execute like we wanted to. We couldn't get the breaks we needed."

"Each time we went to the brink," said Head Coach Lou

Holtz, "we came away empty-handed."

And the dilemma started early for Holtz' troops.

The Irish picked up where they left off last week against Michigan, offensively speaking. John Carney's 27-yard field goal capped an impressive opening drive for Notre Dame, and things were actually looking up.

For a little while, anyway.

The Observer/Jim Carroll

Notre Dame flanker Tim Brown prepares to hit the turf after making a catch in the fourth quarter of Saturday's 20-15 Spartan victory. Before Brown could hit the ground, however, Michigan State safety Dean Altobelli (not in picture) jarred the ball loose with a ringing hit that popped the ball into teammate Johnny Miller's hands. Miller (44) was credited with a fumble recovery.
