Austrian president barred from U.S.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON - Austrian President Kurt Waldheim is barred from entering the United States because he aided in the deportation and execution of thousands of Jews and others as a German Army officer in World War II, the Justice Department announced Monday.

Waldheim, who was United Nations secretary general from 1972 to 1982, thus becomes the first head of state ever placed on an Immigration Watchlist of 40,000 people, many of whom, like him, are excluded from the United States as undesirable aliens.

Attorney General Edwin Meese III made the decision, which found that "a case of excludability exists with respect to Kurt Waldheim as an individual," the Justice Department said in a statement. It said he knew of and aided persecutions of Jews, other civilians and partisans.

In Vienna, Austrian Foreign Minister Alois Mock said the decision produced "great dismay," and the government recalled Ambassador Thomas Klestil from Washington for consultations. Mock said it was unclear whether Chancellor Franz Vranitzky would proceed with a visit to the United States planned for later this month.

Police arrest ND and SMC students in party raids

By CHRIS BEDNARSKI
News Editor

Three separate raids by the South Bend Police Department, one involving the use of an undercover officer, resulted in the arrests and issuance of citations to more than 20 Notre Dame and Saint Mary's College students this past weekend.

After receiving a complaint about a large party, South Bend police officers arrived at 814 Corby St. at approximately 12:20 a.m. Saturday morning, according to Lieutenant Jack Kilgore, spokesman for the South Bend Police Department.

Kilgore said an undercover officer entered the party and purchased alcohol from Notre Dame student William Componovo, 18, who was then arrested for the sale of an alcoholic beverage without permission and being a minor consuming alcohol.

It is a normal procedure to send an undercover officer into a party after a complaint has been received, Kilgore said.

Police then arrested Saint Mary's students Carmella Garritano, 18, Ann Perri, 20, Lucy Hostettler, 18, Deborah Caiola, 18, Erin Connor, 18, Tina Pupil, 18, and Lisa Coleman, 19, for being a minor consuming alcohol, said Kilgore.

Also arrested for being a minor consuming alcohol were Notre Dame students Douglas Silfies, 19, Julie Johnson, 19, and Mary Andreano, 20, Kilgore said.

In addition, Julie McKeiver and Brad Pavloski of Grand Rapids, Michigan were arrested for being a minor consuming alcohol, according to Kilgore.

Those arrested, Kilgore said, were transported by police cars and a police van to the Saint Joseph county jail.

Kilgore also said a 16 year-old and a 17 year-old Saint Mary's student were cited for illegal possession and consumption of alcohol. Because of their age, Kilgore said he would not release their names.

Later Saturday, at 8:30 p.m. police went to St. Louis St. after receiving a complaint of persons in the street and a large party at 713 St. Louis St., Kilgore said. Notre Dame students Charles Mayer, 21, and Michael MacNulty, 22, were arrested for public intoxication. Notre Dame student Michael Varlotta, 21, was arrested for public intoxication and resist-

Student identified in theft of Common Sense

By CATHY STACY
Assistant News Editor

A suspect has been identified in connection with the recent disappearances of Common Sense, according to the independent monthly's editor-in-chief Joe Merchant.

"We've identified someone who took (the papers), but we're still investigating the matter," said Phil Johnson, assistant director of Security.

Johnson said, "Apparently, there has been an ongoing problem with people taking issues and destroying them."

Father Isaac McDaniel, a graduate student and member of Common Sense's editorial board, said he stationed himself in the library lobby to monitor the stack of Monday's paper in hopes of preventing further thefts of issues.

"I saw a guy walk through (the lobby) who looked around to see if anyone was looking and then grabbed a huge stack of papers," said McDaniel.

McDaniel said he followed the student into an elevator, took the papers from him, and told him that the papers had to stay in the lobby.

A half-hour later the same student ran through the lobby again and took more than fifty papers, according to McDaniel. McDaniel said he was unable to get on the elevator which the student entered. He said he took another elevator to the thirteenth floor and searched each floor of the library until he found the student studying on the seventh floor.

According to McDaniel, the student did not have the papers with him, and when McDaniel accosted him, the student said, "I've never seen your newspaper."

Graduate student Tim Tibida identified the suspect as one of two students he had seen carrying a large stack of the papers in the Medieval Institute.

Student Activity Budget approved

By GREG LUCAS
Senior Staff Reporter

The Student Senate passed the $392,000 1987/88 Student Activity Fee Budget proposed last night by unanimous consent.

A little more than $167,000 was allocated to the clubs and classes, $152,620 went to the Student Activities Board and $71,680 was allotted to student government.

Funds are allocated on the basis of previous allotments, the amount left in the clubs' treasuries, and the clubs' opportunities for concession profits at upcoming football games.

The Senate disagreed on the allocation of $2,430 to Adworks. The controversy was centered on the role of Adworks in Student Government.

According to Janel Blount, SAB manager, Adworks is a branch of student government and also a profit-making business.

Steve Yeager, chief of staff, said that the role of Adworks should be to produce and distribute posters for student government at cost. "Why should the notion of being a business negate (Adworks) being a service to students and student government?" said Yeager.

The Senate concluded that it will work through Adworks for publicity but possibly at a reduced rate, said Blount.

There was also discussion as to the proper categorization of such special interests groups as the NAACP and the Anti-

PLO office closed in retaliation

Associated Press

CAIRO, Egypt - President Hosni Mubarak's government retaliated Monday against PLO criticism by shutting down the organization's offices in Egypt.

The break marks the most severe crisis between Egypt and the Palestine Liberation Organization since PLO chairman Yasser Arafat resumed relations with Cairo in late 1983.

At that time, Arafat came personally to Egypt to thank Mubarak for his help in providing protection for PLO forces evacuated from Lebanon following the Israeli invasion of Lebanon in June 1982. Arafat has visited Egypt several times since then.

A statement read Monday by Egyptian Foreign Minister Esmat Abdel-Meguid implied that Palestinian officials might be expelled.

"The Arab Republic of Egypt has decided to close all offices of the Palestine Liberation Organization and the organizations belonging to it (in Egypt) and will take the necessary measures related to this," he said.

Diplomatic sources said seven offices of the PLO and related agencies were covered by the order.

The closure was a response to resolutions passed at a week-long meeting in Algeria of the Palestine National Council, the PLO parliament. The resolutions referred to previous resolutions highly critical of Mubarak's government.

Christianity or Hollywood production?

Is anything holy any more?

No, I am not about to talk about Saturday Night Live, process theology, or the American Civil Liberties Union. (I just assume that everybody knows that there is nothing holy about them). Rather, I had more in mind Oral Roberts, Jim Bakker, and Jerry Falwell.

Now I am not about to jump on the media bandwagon just so I can join in the open-season of joke-making and mud-slinging, for I am not totally unsympathetic to the religious revival. I would agree that the much hyped "sexual revolution" is about as "revolutionary" as the orgies in Rome before it fell. Also, anybody who takes the time to read will discover some purely empirical problems with the theory of evolution as accepted today.

But you don't have to be religious or "born again" to hold concerns or views like these. The fact of the matter is that if preachers on TV are so worried about a divorce rate of thirty percent, starvation in Africa, and the rise of the "Condom Generation," (as anybody has reason to be), their biggest problem is not the secular humanists. Their biggest problem is the three-ring circus that some people, especially charismatics like Roberts, Swaggart, and Bakker, have the audacity to call religion.

Of course, Bakker's affair with Jessica Hahn and Roberts' "Your-money-or-your-life" depiction of God is already old news. Beyond these instances, however, even if they are isolated, I still have a problem with the approach of the televangelists in general.

More often than not, the philosophy at work seems to be: if there's some really tacky way of capturing the hearts and minds of the people, go for it. T-shirts, preachy rock groups, cassette-recordings of sermons, telethons, cartoons. . . There is nothing in the Bible so sublime that it cannot be put on a bumper sticker or appear on a telethon, seems to be the rationale.

In Old Testament times the Hebrews regarded God's name as so sacred that they would never use it directly, substituting instead Adonai or "Lord." Today the phrases "personal relationship with God" and "Jesus loves you" are insisted upon so often and melodramatically that it sounds as if the minister is trying to psychoanalyze Him. Maybe I am the only one, but it seems to me like some evangelists are trying to turn the Bible narrative into a B-movie, with Charlton Heston playing God and keeping the sea parted as long as the donations keep clinking in the collection plate.

I once watched a show called "I Predict 1985," in which an evangelist named Lester Sumerall said he could foretell everything worthwhile that would happen in that year. Not only did he make the most dramatic predictions for that terribly boring year, but after each commercial one of those smooth, matter-of-fact television voices would introduce his predictions "as having been revealed to him by God."

Chris Julka

Assistant News Editor

I almost expected someone to add at the end of the program, "This program has been brought to you by (guess who?) God: everything you wanted in a religion and less."

The Ringling Brothers never had it so good. Through the miracle of television, the televangelists have become so successful that if P.T. Barnum were still alive, he would probably have to revise his saying to "There's a sucker born every tenth of a second."

Now I don't want to go too far. Everybody knows that the members of the media worship John Lennon and Vladimir Lenin more than they do the Holy Trinity, so I don't want to give Christianity any worse of a press than it already gets.

My question is, however, is this really Christianity? Isn't there a way to spread the word without turning it into a cheap Hollywood production?

Reagan addresses trade, hopes to lift sanctions

Associated Press

WASHINGTON - President Reagan said Monday it's time to stop "hemming and hawing" about trade problems between the United States and Japan and warned he has not ruled out imposing additional sanctions against Tokyo to resolve trade disputes.

Although saying he hopes to be able to lift sanctions against Japan soon, Reagan said, "We will do what is necessary to see that other nations live up to their obligations and trading agreements with us."

Meanwhile, 12 members of Reagan's Cabinet said they will recommend a veto of sweeping trade legislation scheduled to be debated in the House of Representatives today "unless substantial changes are made."

"Many provisions are so contrary to our objective of opening markets that it would be impossible for us to recommend that he (the president) approve the entire package in its present form," said the Cabinet secretaries in a joint letter to House Speaker Jim Wright, D-Texas.

SMC program aired on cable

By SANDY CERIMELE
Assistant Saint Mary's Editor

Saint Mary's students are now producing a series of 30-minute television programs entitled "Take One" that are being aired on Heritage Cablevision's community access channel. These programs are the result of a new course offered by the Communication and Theatre Department.

Each semester, 12 students work together for three credit hours to write, produce, film and edit five shows that aired on community access channel 31 at 9 p.m. on March 19, April 2, 9, 23. The final show will air on April 30.

The "Take One" format is similar to that of the syndicated show "Entertainment Tonight." It contains four regular features: "Community on the Spot," "Entertainment,"

"Community Service," and "Special Focus."

Early segments this semester have focused on the Farmers' Market, the South Bend School Corporation Radio Station, the Beach Boys' concert, the Special Olympics, Hotline, and alcohol on campus.

"We used the Cable Policy Act of 1985 which requires all cable companies to provide a community access channel for any group to use free of charge, and we developed a course in conjunction with Heritage Cablevision," said Professor Ann Plamondon, chairman of the Saint Mary's Communication and Theatre Department.

Plamondon said that the program started last semester with a one-hour, one-credit Production course in which four students produced one program in the fall. She attributed the success of the program to the joint effort of Professor Craig Hosterman of the Communication and Theatre Department and Gary Stephenson, the programming coordinator of Heritage Cablevision.

"The purpose of the program was to provide students with the hands on experience of working on a television show," said Hosterman.

He said that the program has benefited three groups of people: "In addition to the students' experience, enthusiasm and awareness, the community benefits because content of the stories gives the interest groups publicity, and Heritage Cablevision benefits because the program provides an expanded schedule of offerings."

Hosterman said that the slots are limited to 12 and broken down by class year and previous experience in the program. "We reserve four slots for those students who have already taken the course to lead the others, four slots for juniors, and the remaining four can either be filled by juniors or seniors who have declared a communication major," he said.

Tibida, who said he is not affiliated with Common Sense, had heard that there was a problem with papers disappearing and decided to follow the students into the hall. He said he asked them, "Are you going to throw those away?" They said the papers were for their friends, according to Tibida.

Tibida did not think much of the incident until he met McDaniel in the lobby. When they approached the student, who was still studying, he again denied ever seeing the papers, according to McDaniel.

Tibida said he was upset to see students suppressing freedom of speech.

SMC Board announces upcoming events

By THERESA HARRINGTON
News Staff

The Student Committee on Campus Diversity received support from the Saint Mary's Board of Governance Monday night. Jeanne Heller, the former Student Body President, started the committee three months ago to "make life on campus more like real life."

With support from the Board of Regents, faculty and alumni, the group has grown considerably.

According to Mary Kim Koch, the group's current director, "The long term goals include attracting more minorities, older students, and women from diverse religious backgrounds."

Koch said that the group is "working on an exchange program with a predominantly black campus and a campus survey to assess the attitudes of students and faculty" to begin next fall.

The upcoming events of Student Government were also discussed at the meeting. Student Body President Eileen Hetterich announced an outdoor day of fun in the LeMans courtyard from 1 - 5 p.m., Saturday May 2 at Saint Mary's. The event features entertainment by "The Law" and "Freudian Slip" and free munchies. All SMC and ND students are welcome.

Student Government is also sponsoring "Ferris Bueller's Day Off" in the Haggar College Game Room. The movie will be shown at 7 and 9 p.m. every night this week as well as at 11 p.m. on Saturday and Sunday. Admission is 50 cents.

Falwell considers resigning

Associated Press

COLUMBIA, S.C. - Two members of the new board of the PTL ministry empire said Monday that its founder, the Rev. Jim Bakker, should not be allowed to return in spite of his threat of a "holy war" to regain it.

The Rev. Bailey E. Smith said the board's chairman, the Rev. Jerry Falwell, is considering resigning at Tuesday's board meeting in Fort Mill and that if he does the rest of the board also might step down.

The Baptist evangelist from Oklahoma said his ministry and Falwell's have been hurt financially because of their connection with the scandal-ridden PTL.

Smith said from First Baptist Church in Del City, Okla., that he can't say exactly how much donations have decreased because of the PTL scandal and his connection to it, but Falwell has said he has lost $2 million.

Most of the senate members felt that the group was more educational than political. "I see this group as fostering awareness and I think that if you start cutting off awareness, you are making a bad precedent" said Diane Fitzgibbon, next year's Senior Class President.

Bruce Lohman, executive assistant to the former student body president, also announced the completion of the Board of Trustees report that will be presented in early May.

"I think that the Board of Trustees report should be of the utmost importance in a senator's mind" said Cooke of this six month study of the student body consensus on the issues of foreign students, intellectual life of the undergraduate student and residential life.

The Senate decided to discuss the reports in an informational meeting over the weekend, but not to attempt to edit the reports in any way. The issue over the mechanism of Senate approval was assigned to next years executive committee for review by Pat Cooke.

"Regardless of how the process has been run in the past, we must concentrate on positive steps in the future" said Cooke.

Homosexuals in need of more understanding

The following is the second in a series.

Sometimes, when straight women discover that Sarah is a lesbian, it makes them immediately uncomfortable. "The commonly held attitude, I think, is that lesbians are out to seduce any woman in sight, and that's just blatantly untrue."

Jenifer Naughton

guest column

There is a risk of rejection in any relationship. Nobody wants to be rejected. "If you're a lesbian trying to develop something with a straight woman who is not open to it, you know you're going to be rejected. It's not something you set yourself up for if you have a brain in your head."

Myths about homosexuality persist. People are curious, but often ill-informed and afraid to show an interest. Stereotypes are merely incomplete and harmful explanations, dismissing people in a word: queer, dyke or faggot.

Gay men are not all sissies. Straight men are not all macho.

"The effeminate gay men that you see," Sarah says, "are just a fringe of the entire male population. The majority of gay men that I know, you would not be able to tell by looking at them. That's obviously the case since most of them are, you know, they're all around you."

Steve is very aware of the stereotypes. He is very conscious of how he acts and what he wears. He tries to act straight.

"I was always afraid if I'd wear something that wasn't real conservative that people would make assumptions. Not that I wear blouses, or anything, but you have to be careful."

Richard sees Notre Dame as being a particularly difficult place to learn about homosexuality. "I think the reason that I became so aware of the prejudice here was because it contrasted so much with my seminary experience. It was really when I got into seminary that I realized I was gay, and I think I accepted it because I met so many other people who were gay, too. I found that a lot of people I really admired were gay."

"The big question people have in seminary about being gay is whether or not one wants to go ahead and get ordained and be celibate, or to live out some other kind of lifestyle. The big question here is whether or not it's even human at all."

Steve is a bit baffled by the hostile ignorance. "If people would try to realize what being gay is like, and maybe realize that it's not easy here. But they dismiss the thought and don't worry about it. But if they would just realize that we're very normal people. You know, I like going to football games. And going to parties and having fun. We're just like normal everyday people."

Christopher is offended by the prejudice and the stereotypes. "We're not out to get anybody. I'm not about to put on a dress. I'm not about to molest a child. It's disgusting. I'm just as revolted by it as anyone else. I'm just as anti-pornographic as many people on this campus."

Gays and lesbians are said to be promiscuous. Their sexuality is what distinguishes them, so people tend to think that they are just out for sex. Steve admits that a lot of gay people sleep around, "but so do a lot of straight people. Most gay people I know do not sleep around and are not promiscuous. I still consider myself a Christian, and whether I'm straight or gay, I don't think that type of behavior is necessarily good. So we're not all that type."

People don't realize that we experience the same emotions, just being with somebody we like. And falling in love with someone, it's the same thing. I guess. I can't say what it's like for a straight person."

Chris has fallen in love. Ask him how he is and he smiles, blissfully. He and John have been together for quite some time and they are very happy, very romantic.

They plan to get married. Both believe in monogamy, and they take their relationship seriously. "John and I consider our relationship sacramental. God is definitely present. Some people will hear that and be totally revolted, and I'm really sorry, but that's the way it is."

"Just in the time we have been together, we have grown so incredibly much. If we hadn't then there would be something wrong. If it was just a physical relationship, then there would be problems. But it's not. There's a continued challenging of each other to be better persons."

Chris does not try to hide his relationship with John, but neither does he announce it. The risk is still too great. People still make gay jokes, without realizing who they might be hurting. People might not be ready to see two men holding hands in front of O'Shaughnessy or Dillon.

"If gay people here were much more open, maybe other people would not be antagonistic, would not be intentionally cruel - call people names or embarrass them," Steve supposes. "I wouldn't be afraid of getting beat up or anything, but I do think people here would be very cold. In a sense, that's being antagonistic. They would probably just try not to associate with us, maybe for their own sake, so that people might not think they were gay. It's hard to say."

"I wish people wouldn't be scared of us. It sure would make life a little happier."

Doctrinal authority open to interpretation

Dear Editor:

I would like to thank Jerry Walls for sharing his experiences of Catholics here at Notre Dame (The Observer, Apr. 23). I would like to point out, however, that his understanding of Catholic doctrinal authority is incorrect. As he understands it, "its official teachings are guaranteed to be infallible, particularly when the pope or another ecumenical council exercises 'extraordinary magisterium' when making doctrinal or moral pronouncements." Mr. Walls could change the word "particularly" to "only".

Church teachings are only "guaranteed to be infallible" when the pope speaks ex cathedra ("from the chair") on matters of faith and morals with the intention of binding the whole church. This is a very infrequent occurrence. In lay terms infallible statements are literally "not wrong". Infallibility does not insure that a particular statement is an adequate expression or even an appropriate formulation of truth. There is plenty of room for growth. To remain Catholic, one may not insist that an infallible statement is wrong, however Catholics may disagree with non-infallible church teachings and remain true to their faith.

Not all official teachings carry the force of infallibility. The Declaration of Religious Freedom of the Second Vatican Council clearly states that the "Christian faithful ought carefully to attend to the sacred and certain doctrine (church teaching) of the Church," but as Fr. McBrien states in his book, "Catholicism", "If, after appropriate study, reflection and prayer, a person is convinced that his or her conscience is correct, in spite of a conflict with the moral teachings of the Church, the person not only may but must follow the dictates of conscience rather than the teachings of the Church." It is also worth noting, as McBrien does, that the Church has never explicitly claimed to speak infallibly on a moral question.

I am happy to hear that the conclusions of Lutheran-Catholic dialogue of 1978 are being lived out here at Notre Dame. I am glad that Mr. Walls in conversations with Catholics finds our views differing little from his own. The matter does not surprise me. The term "functional protestant" does not offend, and is often appropriate. Fr. Burtchaell, in disagreeing with a certain non-infallible church doctrine, might be a functional protestant, or he might just be a good Catholic. Margaret E. Payne Lyons Hall

Checkmarking takes courtesy and order

Dear Editor:

In a wonderful display of Christianity, Notre Dame students have once again pushed, shoved, trampled and deprived one another of oxygen to get their theology courses. We are two of the lucky ones to have escaped Stepan Center with both of our lives and the checkmarked theology courses of our choice. Not that it was like a Who concert or anything, but one of us had to crawl under the registration table just to get out of there.

Do you think they could put up ropes or barbed wire, (or maybe even just two tables side by side, like the English department did) so there could be a line, and those who get there first could register first?

In the meantime, is there any possibility that we could all learn something before we graduate - like courtesy, maybe?

Too many people waste time being serious

In previous columns, I have dealt with many important issues. But no topic has been more significant than today's: people who take themselves too seriously. You've seen them in the classroom, on the quad and in your dorm. You've wanted to grab them by the shirt and say, "Hey, pal, give us a break!" People who take themselves too seriously have lost perspective on life. They fail to realize they are just an insignificant speck of cosmic sand in somebody's big sandbox. Someone must inform them of this before they completely waste their lives.

third and long

Many people in the real world obviously take themselves too seriously: fundamentalist preachers, MTV VJ's, movie critics, aerobic instructors, daytime talk-show hosts, America's cup fans, Joan Rivers, Dr. Ruth, and the list could go on forever. You may be saying to yourself, "What does this have to do with me?" Well, fellow domers and domettes, a few of you have been leaning a little too much to the serious side lately, and I thought you might like to know about it.

First of all, some athletes take themselves too seriously. You know the ones, they flash Oak Room coupons like credit cards, walk with a strut that would put Hulk Hogan to shame, and wear a wardrobe stolen from the ACC Issue Room. Fellas, lighten up, huh? We all realize your extreme importance to our school. You really don't have to constantly remind us about it. Relax that strut, walk slightly hunched like the rest of us. Go return those stolen turf shoes, they look silly anyway. (By the way, my address listed in the phone book is incorrect, so don't even bother looking for me.)

R.O.T.C. people. Let me tell you right now, you look downright silly running around in those matching outfits, talking about field maneuvers and calling each other "Mr." or "Miss" so-and-so. Let your hair down every now and then. Oh, I'm sorry, it's too short for that. Well, um, let it grow a little. Take down your Reagan, Ollie North and Rambo posters and listen to the song "Even of Destruction." But, most of all, please call each other by your first names.

People who like to study in the 'brar. Puh-lease, try and relax. This is college, remember? You know, irresponsibility, irrationality and inconsistency? We're supposed to have fun, here. Ten years from now, that four on that Emil isn't going to mean squat. Relax. Blow off work for an entire night. Go into class the next day completely cold and fake it like the rest of us. For a change, get a good night's sleep (remember those)? And for crying out loud, stop having your meals in the pit, it's not good for your health. Skateboarders and hacky-sackers. 'Nuff said.

P.L.S. majors. Stop trying to argue about everything! Don't discuss Aristotle's Poetics like we discuss Moonlighting. Stop talking about Sartre as if he were still alive. Do me a favor. Put down your Plato and dig into a juicy Harold Robbins paperback. Every now and then, when embroiled in an argument, just say, "Who cares?" Go up to a friend in R.O.T.C. and say, "You know, I think Alexander Haig is a viable candidate for president." I know that's asking a bit much, but think of the look on their face when you say it.

The people in Student Government. It is a noble gesture folks, but on this campus you carry about as much weight as a contraceptive salesman. Please stop promising to make the social life better if you can't deliver. You can make chicken salad out of chicken... feathers. Realize there is only one president on this campus, and it's not the one that gets elected every year. Don't take it seriously. The last guys did a great job because they didn't take themselves too seriously. Learn from them. And don't try to tell us you didn't run to pad the old resume.

Senior business majors. I would really appreciate it if you put away your personalized Big 8 business cards. Stop babbling about marginal profit and your first BMW. Stop being so bloody efficient. Go waste some time by the lake. Bounce a check. Do something wild before your times becomes surgically attached to your neck. Above all, stop praying that the 22nd Amendment is repealed so that Reagan can run again.

Dining Hall workers. If we pay all this money to go here, we shouldn't be harassed if we try to smuggle out the occasional loaf of bread or box of Captain Crunch. It's not as if we're taking money out of your pockets. And what's it to you if we want to take two entrees at the same time. After all, we are paying for it! So wipe that sneer off your face and by all means, don't get so excited for these theme meals, we sure don't.

Some professors take themselves too seriously. We are tired of hearing about your latest publication and your grant to teach at some less socially strict school. And try to remember we are college students. Try to realize we are not going to prepare for every class. Go find your college yearbook. Look at the pictures of your friends. Did they knock themselves out all the time? Of course not. Did you? Let's be truthful, now. You turned out alright, so cut us some slack.

The people who censor student publications. Folks, we are adults and we can really decide for ourselves what is dirty and what is clean. Please realize that "ambiguous" is not a four letter word. We are big boys and girls now. Let us run our own publications. Take a break. Go sit through a double feature at the Pussycat theatre. Visit the Linebacker Inn on lingerie night. Listen to the album "American Prayer" by the Doors. Live and let live, huh?

Notre Dame Security. Just because you have a tin badge does not make you a descendant of Wyatt Earp. Do you really expect us to take you seriously when you wear those silly hats and ride around on bicycles? Give the macho bit a break. Let our cars on campus every now and again. If we are passed out on the steps of the Archy building, let us sleep. And please, stop kicking us off of the quad when we want to play stickball.

If I've forgotten anyone else, hopefully they will get the message by reading this. If you feel offended by the article, you might be taking yourself a bit too seriously. Relax. If you feel you're beginning to take yourself too seriously, write a letter to Fr. Ted telling him black is not his color or tell your parents you think Charles Manson deserves another chance or do something just as stupid. Don't think about it, just do it. You'll feel a whole lot better.

Oh my, I almost forgot to mention a group of people who really take themselves much too seriously.

Observer columnists.

P.O.Box Q

Students urged to eat in respective halls

Dear Editor:

With the advent of finals on the horizon, a great number of students will be taking to the library for endless hours of power studying in preparation for exams. Unfortunately, most of these students also decide to eat at North Dining Hall while they are studying at the library. There are typically greater concentrations of students at North Dining Hall during finals than at any other time of the year.

North Dining Hall cannot withstand the mass influx of students during finals without tremendous lines. With this in mind, I proposed a resolution at the first meeting of the 1987-1988 Student Senate to formally restrict students of each quad to their respective dining halls (to have been decided by Food Services in the most equitable manner possible) during the final examination periods, and only during these periods, in order to alleviate the frustrating problem of the mass influx of students to the North Dining Hall during finals.

The resolution could have easily been implemented via the computer checking system and I was assured it would have been implemented had there been considerable student support for it. Unfortunately, I could not generate enough support for the resolution as many members of the Senate viewed it as an unnecessary restriction of freedom and simply another burdensome rule thrown onto the heap of already a plethora.

The resolution was not intended to create another, more pervasive problem, disharmony or inter-quad schism, but was meant to be mutually beneficial to both North and South quaders alike in light of this. The resolution was amended to make it a suggestive rather than a binding one and then it was passed unanimously. Essentially, we are strongly urging the students of each quad to eat at their respective dining halls, that is, where they usually eat the majority of their meals, during the final exam period (and only during this period) in order to alleviate the problem of the mass influx of students from the library to North Dining Hall during finals. A short walk from the library back to South Dining Hall during finals' week will save you from wasting time in long lines at North Dining Hall and from unnecessary frustration during an already tension-filled time.

Let's try to keep finals week as pleasant as possible.

Charity Ball continues fight against hunger

Dear Editor:

I would like to sincerely thank all organizations and individuals who helped to make the Third Annual NDSMC Charity Ball a continued success. The beneficiary of the Ball is Catholic Relief Services, which aids Third World Countries. The funds generated will be used to nourish lives blemished by the tragedy of malnutrition.

The Ball, which is a black-tie event, was held on April 4 in the South Dining Hall. Entertainment was provided by Shenanigans, the Law, and the Pat Heiden Jazz Quartet of Chicago. This diversity of talent and showmanship truly added class to the Ball. Attendance at this year's event was diminished significantly because of many Hall formals and parties. However, the tradition of the NDSMC Charity Ball continued strongly, providing a fun-filled soiree for all who were present at this gala of music, dance, refreshments, and "Life."

Life was the celebrated theme of the Ball, which is indicative of the sharing, growing Christian community present at our University. The goal of the Ball is to raise consciousness about World Hunger. We, as a God-fearing community, should be more involved in bringing resources, and new agricultural technology to underdeveloped countries who lack this knowledge. Our Ball is a step in the proper direction, which the Notre Dame and Saint Mary's family must make in order to eliminate this evil - World Hunger.

So, if one person was inspired to give a donation or pray for the end of hunger, then the Charity Ball has been a success. I firmly believe that our prayers, thoughtfulness, and selflessness will extinguish the flames of World Hunger.

WSND brings flair to campus radios

features writer

What do the call letters WSND bring to mind? Unfortunately, a majority of Notre Dame students are not even aware of the station located in the clock tower of O'Shaughnessy Hall. However, 88.9 on the FM dial has much to offer—including a wide range of both music and opportunity.

The station is run through the Office of Student Activities just as the Dome, Juggler, and Scholastic are, with most positions filled by undergraduates. Station manager Jessie Pesta, a junior, said although he is ultimately responsible to Student Activities, the staff works as a group.

WSND possesses some notable characteristics which distinguish it from the other stations and publications under the jurisdiction of the Office of Student Activities. It is licensed by the FCC and, as a public station, is non-commercial. Since it cannot accept advertising, broadcasts are paid through underwriting. At the end of a program the business which helped with funding is recognized as the underwriter and therefore publicized.

The Office of Student Activities funds the station primarily, but two annual fund drives raise additional money necessary to the station's operation. These drives consist of sending a pamphlet and program guide to the approximately 1400 individuals on the mailing list. Premiums, such as tickets to the upcoming production of Macbeth for those giving $15, encourage donations.

The large mailing list highlights another of WSND's unique characteristics. The station, whose tower broadcasts within a 35 mile radius 365 days of the year, directs programming toward an off-campus audience. In fact, WSND has led the area in fine arts broadcasting. Since it is on the air year-round, including vacations, the station employs a considerable number of professors, graduate students, and summer students.

Even though the station does cater to an adult, off-campus audience, Pesta wishes it were better known on campus. He regrets that the term "classical" often carries connotations of boredom, loftiness, or even slight repugnance in the student mind.

Classical music featuring the New York Philharmonic, the Chicago Symphony, the San Francisco Symphony, and selections from Oberlin College (to name a few) are the norm on weekdays between 7 a.m. and 10 p.m. However, the strict "classical" label does not reflect the variety offered by this fine arts and educational station.

On weekdays from 7 to 8 p.m. the Macneil Lerher News Hour is simulcast with WNIT channel 34. The 10 to 12 p.m. weeknight time slot is filled by Jazz Galleries on Monday and Friday, Irish music on Tuesday, Big Band music on Wednesday, and Broadway music on Thursday which ranges from 50's classics to selections from "Cats."

Classic rock, new age music, and progressive music also fill the air waves while requests to the station and community. "Notre Dame in Review" provides news of Notre Dame and St. Mary's on topics of interest to outsiders. Furthermore, director Mike Tarm conducts interviews of people ranging from Fr. Hesburgh to Afghanissituated in the pressbox of the football station originally and then later in the old fieldhouse. More recently it shared its present position with WVFI. At one time the two were more closely affiliated but they now have separate station managers and we are not in LaFortune. It is important for people to realize that we're here." The station publicizes itself through posters, ads in the Observer, and information presented at Stepan Center during the initial part of the school year.

Although the staff includes over 100 individuals, people are still needed to ensure progress. Presently, the concern regards summer DJs. Newswriters, newsreaders, and DJs will be needed next year. After initial involvement in those three main positions people can move up to directing the news and assisting in management.

"Since we deal firsthand with people outside the university, in certain ways opportunities here are more practical and closer to real life," commented Pesta. "It is unfortunate that people get the idea they don't want to get involved because they feel they don't know enough. We are more than willing to talk to anyone interested in working, learning, having fun, and doing a good show."

Obviously, Notre Dame's classical music station plays more than the "1812 Overture." WSND is worth looking into for opportunities and equally worth tuning into for musical diversity and enjoyment.

are often played on weekends. "Nocturne Nightflight" is WSND's most well-known show. On weeknights from 12 to 2 p.m. it specializes in more modern rock and occasionally follows themes. Next year reggae and British punk will be added to the station's format.

Programming also includes informational segments unique tan's Minister of the Interior. WSND has added several of the aforementioned shows this year and will continue expanding their format as they build up their record collection.

Station manager Jessie Pesta's wish is that a greater number of students come to realize where WSND is located and what it has to offer. According to him, the station was are totally distinct.

WVFI's move to LaFortune has opened up much needed space for WSND. The additional room will enable groups such as quartets or local bands to perform live on the air and will facilitate continuing expansion and renewal. However, Pesta remarked, "I am afraid we might become more removed from students' minds because

Cable TV lives in a state of Grace

features writer

Keenan has its "Review," Fisher has its "Regatta," and Grace Hall has "Grace Vision"—a dorm broadcasting station exclusively for Grace Hall residents. What began a few years ago as one of Rector Lardner's pet projects has now been popularized into a dorm identity. "I have only received positive responses about (Grace Vision) said program director and Grace resident Ed Trifone.

Since Grace is equipped with a cable antenna every room is capable of receiving cable broadcasting including the Chicago stations. In addition, last year's installment of a VCR into the system allows for more possibilities in programming. "Right now we're at the beginning stages but everything is going well—there is so much potential," said Trifone. Currently, Trifone and approximately 15 other Grace residents are responsible for the broadcasting, but Trifone is encouraging more people to get involved so that Grace Vision can become an "organizational structure with goals and guidelines clearly defined." Staff member Bill Dunn also agreed that "freshmen need to get involved because we need someone to pass it on to."

With Grace Vision, hall residents have a unique sense of community which differs from other dorms on campus. For example, Grace athletes that might seldom receive recognition are presented in video through Grace Vision's broadcasting of intra- and inter-hall sports events. Regular features that viewers can enjoy are Wednesday night social awareness film series and a continuous display of up-to-date dining hall menus, bus schedules and announcements.

However, the programming of special events is what has given Grace Vision its popularity. Much of the recent fame is attributed to the presentation of Keenan Review, Grace hall elections, and the new variety show "Sunday Night Live." For the first time Grace expanded its hall elections this year to include speeches, commercials and election results of the candidates on video. All of the candidates had the opportunity to broadcast a three-minute speech and an original television commercial six minutes or less as part of their campaign. Tri-fone commented that this was a good way to visually associate everyone with the candidates.

This semester "Sunday Night Live" made its debut as a first-time attempt for a live show, and positive responses have made it a success. Hall residents have their chance to capture the audience with their original videos and talent shows. Call-ins, raffles, and trivia questions are also part of the programming that keeps the viewers involved. One of the goals for Grace Vision is to get increased participation from the residents. "We need ideas," said Trifone, "and we want to get more people involved."

Trifone likes to broadcast a variety of shows to maintain a diverse interest. Upcoming special broadcasts include Hesburgh Week which will present Father Hesburgh's interviews on 60 Minutes and Phil Donahue. Also on the agenda is a boxing special showing dorm residents in Bengal Bout action. Already, Trifone and others have plans to expand the programming and technology next year. Additional features might include videos from students in the communication and theater department showing their performances for final projects and certain events. Trifone believes that the hard work of these students is too often unrecognized.

Staff members are already planning to make improvements with the system beginning next year. A likely collaboration with WVFI will enhance the audio and visual effects of the broadcasting. Also, a "new or revised computer system will increase our capabilities for special effects," said Trifone. Special effects and a possible display of personal advertisements will improve the announcements next year. A new television monitor might also be placed in Grace's lobby so that those who don't live in Grace can experience Grace Vision.

Trifone believes that within time everyone on campus will be able to enjoy their own dorm station. A campus-wide system could begin with the Pasquerillas and Flanner Halls and later expand to include the remaining dorms. "Right now we're just realizing our capabilities," said Trifone, but the continued progress of Grace Vision is "what makes us a step ahead of everyone else."

Wrestlemania III, and said he feels as ready as he's ever been.

"If I was in peak condition before Wrestlemania III, then develop another word, because I'm even better than I was," he said. "I can't win the Intercontinental belt back by whooping George 'The Animal' Steele, but I can put the thought back in anybody's mind that lost that thought that the Macho Man Randy Savage is an unbelievable threat to the World Championship belt.

"I'm going to put that thought back into the minds of the fair-weather friends that left Macho Madness. And the loyal ones who supported me all along, well they're going to see that their money is in the right bank because I'm going to explode at the Convocation Center. If I don't, then I might as well leave the planet earth and go someplace else."

Part of the problem has been Steele's affection for Savage's manager, the lovely Elizabeth. On a previous Saturday Night's Main Event, Steele carried Elizabeth away from the ring while Savage and Steamboat were wrestling. Macho Man has not forgotten that night.

"Millions of people around the world love Elizabeth and that's all right, but to scoop her up on national television and carry her out of the arena, that's the embarrassment," he said. "I don't know how much more this guy can do to me. I have to bury that embarrassment. It's got to be done and done properly.

"We're not talking about the possibility of a 60-minute match here, because of the vindictive emotion that I possess. But if I hurt him early, I'm going to drag it on."

Savage, in his distinctive gravelly voice, explained that his sights are firmly set on the Hulk Hogan and the World Heavyweight Championship Title. And he will allow no one to stand in his way. No one.

"In fact, if anybody could ever find my mother and put her in a position where I had to beat her to get a title shot at Hulk Hogan, I'd go in there and give her the flying elbow," he said.

Hogan will also be on hand tonight. It was recently announced that the champion and a mystery partner will face Andre the Giant and Bobby 'The Brain' Heenan in a tag-team match. Recent speculation about Hogan's partner has centered on Strongman Ken Patera, who was recently released from prison, and has voiced his anger over Heenan's (his former manager) desertion of him while he was serving time.

Also on the card is a tag-team title match between the British Bulldogs, with Tito Santana and manager Jimmy 'The Mouth of the South' Hart in their corner, and The Hart Foundation, with the referee-turned-evil-wrestler 'Dangerous' Danny Davis in their corner.

ND baseball loses lead and game to Broncos

By KEVIN McCORMACK
Sports Writer

After losing two of three on the road against the University of St. Louis over the weekend, the woes of the Fighting Irish baseball team continued against Western Michigan yesterday at Jake Kline Field.

Jumping out to a 3-1 lead in the second, the Irish self-destructed against the always-tough Broncos and continued its losing skid, falling 7-5 and leaving Head Coach Larry Gallo befuddled about his Fighting Irish.

"We go up two runs early and then we go to bed," said Gallo. "It's happened all year."

In the first inning, it appeared it might be Notre Dame's day as Mike Flynn and Steve Skupien drove in two runs with RBI singles.

Irish starter Brian Piotrowicz then proceeded to shut the door on the Broncos' hitting, holding them to five hits through the first six innings of the nine-inning contest. The lone Western Michigan offensive production during that stretch was an RBI single by John Reimnik, who drove in Mike McNeas. In addition, the Irish added another run of their own when centerfielder Scott Rogers, who scored earlier in the game, drove in leftfielder John Loughran on a fielder's choice grounder.

In the top of the seventh, however, the Bronco bats went wild on reliever Robert Fitz, who surrendered four hits and three runs, two which came on a double by Mike Davis, scoring Steve Trammis and Eric Sowall.

In the eighth inning, newly inserted Irish hurler Tom Howard fared no better, giving up two runs, one of which was an RBI single by All-American John Vanderwal. In the bottom half, however, the Irish were able to rally behind the bats of Pat O'Brien and Tim Hutson, who drove in Skupien and Flynn to close the gap to 6-5. However, an extra insurance run in the top half of the ninth made the score 7-5.

The Irish seemed poised for a comeback when consecutive singles by Pat Pesavento and Dan Peltier put the winning run, Flynn, at the plate with only one out. However, Flynn hit a hot shot to the second baseman, who tagged second when Pesavento was caught between second and third, ending the contest.

"Anything that is hit in the infield means you can't run until it drops," said Gallo. "Our baserunning has been terrible."

"At this point," added Gallo, "I feel that if anything can go wrong, it will. At least the runs we had in the eighth indicated that we're not giving up, but I'm sick and tired about losing so many close ball games. I'm not pleased at all."

Notre Dame is now preparing to take on Ball State this weekend for the state championship of Indiana. Action at Stepan Field starts at 1 p.m.

Ball State defeated the Irish during last October's Indiana-Kentucky Tournament, so Notre Dame will have added incentive going into the match.

"We played them in about the first month of the year, so it will mean a lot to beat them this time," said Williams.

In last weekend's Midwest Sprints at Madison, Wis., the Notre Dame Rowing Club did well, but not quite well enough to earn a berth in the NCAA Championships.

The men's lightweight eight won a silver medal, losing by a few points to Kansas, and the women's lightweight four also earned a silver medal.

"I think that every year we do a little bit better, and gain a little bit more respect," said Club President Joe Brunetti. "Maybe next year or the year after we'll really clean up and get about five or six medals. We came really close to getting more medals this time, but we weren't quite good enough. We're still about the second or third best team in the Midwest."

Even though the Men's Volleyball Club ended its season with a disappointing finish in the MIVA Tournament and a loss in three straight games to nationally-ranked IUPUI-Fort Wayne, the players were still happy with their season as a whole.

The Irish had a final record of 26-8, and were 26-3 against fellow club teams.

"We did far better than the team has in the past," said Club President John Sullivan. "We had never finished much above .500 before, and we can't complain with being 26-3 in the club division. The tournament was kind of a disappointment, but it came down to us all being fatigued, and we had a lot of injuries. We have a lot of respect in the division now."

Mike O'Grady, Mike Shimota, and John Sullivan were selected to the All-Division team.

"Bill Anderson put a phenomenal amount of time in coaching the team, and he was a key to our success," said Sullivan. "If he's back next year, hopefully the guys will continue to get better."

The Fastpitch Softball Club entered Easter break with a 4-3 record, but the Irish have not had too much luck following the holiday, losing four straight games to run their record to 4-7.

Notre Dame dropped two games to Saint Mary's, 1-0 and 5-1, then lost to Taylor University, 6-5 in 10 innings, and to Anderson College, 6-2.

"We've been playing well but not well enough," said Club President Lynn Boyle. "They've been squeaking by in the last few innings. One of our pitchers wasn't available for the last two games, and Barb Mooney had to pitch with an injured back, so that had something to do with it."

The Irish have six more games this week to try to improve their record before the season ends. Notre Dame will be at Purdue University at Hammond for a doubleheader on Tuesday, at Grace College for a doubleheader on Thursday, and at Saint Mary's for a final doubleheader on Friday.

Irish see 'mild success' at Drake

By PETE GEGEN
Assistant Sports Editor

A third-place finish by the 4x1600-meter relay team highlighted what Head Coach Joe Piane termed a "mildly successful" run for the Irish track team in the Drake Relays at Des Moines, Iowa.

Junior Nick Sparks (4:09), freshman Mike O'Conner (4:06), junior Dan Garrett (4:07) and sophomore Ron Markezich (4:14) comprised the relay team that finished behind Iowa State and Rice.

"I was especially pleased with the 4x1600 relay," said Piane. "The best thing is that they'll all be back next year."

Notre Dame's two other relay teams did not fare as well. The 4x800-meter relay team of Sparks (1:54.9), sophomore David Warth (1:50.8), senior Robert Nobles (1:51.1) and freshman Mike Rogan (1:55.0) finished sixth, as did the distance medley relay team of Garrett (1200 meters, 3:00.1), Nobles (400 meters, 48.1), Warth (800 meters, 1:51) and O'Conner (1600 meters, 4:09.5).

The Irish also entered two other team members in individual events. Freshman hurdler Glenn Watson placed third in his heat of the 110-meter highs with a time of 14.37. But freshman shot putter Tom Kraus, who has been struggling as of late, recorded a toss of 51-6.

"It's been a long season for Tom," said Piane. "It's a long season for any freshman."

With junior sprinter Tim Brown staying in South Bend for the Blue-Gold football game, the Irish did not run the 4x400-meter relay team.

The rest of the squad participated in the Hillsdale Invitational. Freshman Yan Searcy was the lone winner for the Irish, taking the 400-meter dash with a time of 48.62.

The Irish will next host the Midwest Catholic Invitational this Saturday.

'Macho Man' looks for revenge at ACC

By RICK RIETBROCK
Assistant Sports Editor

Black Tuesday has arrived. And vengeance is in the air.

Tonight at the ACC, the World Wrestling Federation will stage its first major event since Wrestlemania III as an all-star card has been compiled for a May 2 nationally-televised Main Event.

One of the headlining matches features Randy 'Macho Man' Savage and George 'The Animal' Steele in a Lumberjack match. Lumberjack rules put 12 wrestlers outside the ring to throw any wrestler that is out of the ring back into it.

And Savage is ready.

"I've been set back, and that's the reason for all the vindictive emotion that I possess right now heading into Black Tuesday."

Savage's setback occurred at Wrestlemania III when Ricky 'The Dragon' Steamboat defeated him in a controversial match to take Macho Man's Intercontinental Heavyweight title. But Savage contends that Steele, not Steamboat, was the reason for his defeat.

"The only reason that Steamboat won the belt is because of George 'The Animal' Steele," said Savage. "Steamboat is a fabulous athlete, but he could not hang with the Macho Man, so you know where that puts me. Better than fabulous. George 'The Animal' Steele is the one.

"If I had lost to Little Beaver the midget, it wouldn't have been Little Beaver that beat me, it would have been Steele. I don't think he deserves to be in the same sentence with the Macho Man Randy Savage."

The road to Wrestlemania III was a long one for Savage. In fact, he started his athletic career in baseball, but after playing four years of minor league baseball, he decided to pursue his dream.

"I decided to do what I wanted to do," Savage said. "I hit the weights and trained really hard, paid my dues, and got up to 6-1, 235 pounds, quick as a cat. If I gained a pound and it shaved off a little of that speed, I took it off."

Even though Savage left baseball, one aspect of his baseball career hasn't left him. The nickname, 'Macho Man' stems from several altercations following brushback pitches, and collisions at home plate in the minors. Writers commented that he had an attitude.

But the only altercation on Macho Man's mind right now is tonight's match with Steele. He has not wrestled since

Irish tennis continues hot play through final weeks

By STEVE MEGARGEE
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame men's tennis team is making sure that Head Coach Tom Fallon retires as a winner.

Injuries to several key starters at the beginning of the season left the Irish struggling early, hovering around the .500 mark. But since a trip to California over spring break, the Irish have been on a tear, going 15-4 over their last 19 matches to raise their record to 21-10.

"The spring break trip was a big factor," said Fallon. "We won six out of seven there, and that seemed to carry over pretty well into the season."

Notre Dame showed the rest of the Midwest a good example of its recent prowess during the past week. The Irish beat Toledo, 7-2, on the road last Wednesday, then returned home over the weekend to rout four teams at Courtney Courts.

In Saturday's Notre Dame Triangular, the Irish shut out both DePaul and Butler, 9-0, and thrashed Malone, 8-1. Notre Dame closed out the weekend with an 8-1 triumph over Illinois State, extending its winning streak to five.

Junior captain Dan Walsh has led the way this season for the Irish, posting a 29-2 singles record and a 13-4 doubles record with Paul Daggs. Daggs also sports a 10-2 doubles record with Brian Kalbas, while holding an 18-6 singles record. Kalbas is 18-11 in singles play, Mike Wallace holds a 19-8 record, and Dave Reiter has won his last five matches to improve to 17-14. Tim Carr, playing at the top seeded slot, has a 15-16 record, though he has won four of his last five matches.

The surge by Notre Dame since spring break has given Fallon a fitting way to cap off his 30-year career coaching tennis at Notre Dame. Starting the season with a career record of 494-190, and coming off a 22-9 season that included an Eastern Collegiate Championship, Fallon did not originally appear to have a team that would meet the standards set by previous Fallon-coached squads. But the Irish have shaken off injuries and a slow start to come on late in the season and give Fallon his 500th victory and a final season worth reminiscing. And if the Irish continue their late-season momentum, they have a good shot of defending their Eastern Collegiate Championship on May 25 at Rutgers, N.J.

"The season has gone very well," said Fallon. "We're doing better than we expected. We'd be much further ahead if we hadn't had the injuries."

Notre Dame closes its regular season this weekend with matches against Michigan State on Saturday and against Kalamazoo College on Sunday.

ND Rugby Club wins two over the weekend

The Notre Dame Rugby Club had good reason to celebrate over An Tostal weekend.

While most students spent the day playing in mud pits or watching the Blue-Gold game, the rugby team was busy blowing out Earlham College at Stepan Field.

The A-team won, 35-7, and the B-side came out on top by a 23-6 score.

Steve Megargee

Club Corner

"We were really aggressive, and we had a really strong pass rush," said Club President Quentin Williams. "Paul Bridenstine played probably the best game of his career at inside center."

This win improved Notre Dame's spring record to 2-1 following a 5-3 fall season (4-1 not including tournaments).

SMC softball takes four straight

By MOLLY McNEILL

The Saint Mary's softball team is on a four-game winning streak that has improved their record to 13 wins and 11 losses.

On Friday, the Belles downed Notre Dame in a doubleheader, 1-0 and 6-3. They continued their intense playing and swept Earlham College Saturday, 6-2 and 11-0.

In the first game against Notre Dame, Dawn Koutek scored the victorious run in the third inning on Martha Judge's smash single.

The Belles continued their consistent offensive attack in the second game led by the powerful bat of Dawn Brohman, who connected for three hits, including a triple.

Marge Reynolds was two-forthree and first baseman Lori White was one-for-three with one run batted in.

Head Coach Scott Beisel was pleased to see his team play their own game.

"We are making fewer mental mistakes now," said Beisel. "We are playing the right people in the right positions."

The Belles did not let up Saturday when they easily defeated Earlham College, 6-2 and 11-0.

Janine Adamo led the Belles offensively with three hits in three trips to the plate, including a triple, while teammate White contributed one hit and three RBIs to the Belle's victory.

Winning pitcher Tammy Shelor evened up her record at 7-7, as she threw three strikeouts and only allowed four free rides to first base.

The second game was a five-inning shutout sparked by Dawn Brohman, Trish Tierney and Kris Pantelleria, who connected for two hits each.

Winning pitcher Colleen Murphy held Earlham hitless until the fourth inning when Earlham connected for their only hit of the game.

"These were the most consistent four games we've played," said Beisel, "we are finally starting to gel."

"I like to see strong intensity for two full games," added Beisel. "It is important to keep this level of intensity during the last eight games as we head into the districts."

The Belles travel to Tri-State today and return home Thursday to host Taylor University.
