New academic honor code to be implemented

By KENDRA MORRILL
Staff Reporter

Beginning in January of 1988 and ending in January of 1992, the University will conduct a four-year experimental program designed to accustom students to a full honor code.

On Tuesday, April 28, the Academic Council passed a resolution implementing the new honor code.

Father Oliver Williams, associate provost of the University, will oversee the program as chairman of the Honesty Committee.

"One of the hallmarks of a Catholic university is to instill virtues of a Christian way of life. Learning cannot be value-neutral. One of the central virtues in academic life is honor . . . Notre Dame is committed to fostering the development of honor," said Williams.

He added that although the present academic honesty policy causes no overwhelming problems, he believes it does not rely enough upon the students' maturity.

Under this experimental system, certain freshman and upperclass courses will be conducted under a full honor code.

The dean of the Freshman Year of Studies will designate which freshman courses will be taught under the honor code. Faculty members teaching upperclass courses may volunteer to use the honor code, with approval of the dean of the college in which the class is taught.

The proposed honor code contains:
■unproctored examinations

■a pledge signed by each student indicating willingness to abide by the code and a pledge signed by each student when submitting work indicating that the student has neither given nor received unauthorized aid

■a requirement that any student aware of an honor code violation report the violation (a student not acting on a known violation will be considered to be violating the code)

■student participation in the investigation and determination of guilt or innocence of alleged offenders

■a system of sanctions.

Violations of the honor code will be reported to the dean of the college in which the violation occurred. The dean will then refer the reports to Honesty

250 attend Lee's hearing

By JIM RILEY
News Editor

More than 250 Notre Dame and Saint Mary's testified at an Indiana Alcoholic Beverages Commission hearing involving Lee's Grill & Barbeque Friday.

The students, who were cited or arrested in raids of Lee's on Jan. 15 and 25, had received subpoenas ordering them to attend legal proceedings at Mishawaka Common Council Chambers at 10 that morning.

In individual questioning, three students refused to answer the prosecutor, citing their fifth amendment rights against self-incrimination.

Most questions, however, were directed to the students as a group.

The hearing was held to decide "what sanction if any should be taken against" Lee's liquor license, said Joseph Rabb, the prosecutor at the hearing.

Lee's owner has been charged with 234 counts of allowing minors to loiter and two counts of employing persons who were not licensed, in connection with the Jan. 15 incident, according to Rabb.

Lee's owner was also charged with 12 counts of allowing minors to loiter as well as violations of Indiana "Happy Hour" laws.

For a half an hour, Rabb, defense attorney Melvin Reed, and Judge Robert McNevin, hearing judge of the Indiana ABC, asked the group questions. Students were asked whether they had been "carded" at the door, whether they presented false identification and what police said when they arrived to begin the raid.

The prosecutor then called four individual students to testify. The first three refused to answer questions on the grounds that they might incriminate themselves. The judge dismissed their need to invoke the fifth amendment, saying they were in no jeopardy because their individual cases had already been disposed of.

There was confusion among the students, however, because those in pre-trial diversion programs did not know if their cases were officially disposed of. Some students were also reluctant

Leadership at the top changes hands

By MARK PANKOWSKI
Managing Editor

It hasn't happened at Notre Dame for 35 years, a period longer than at any other American college or university.

Following commencement on May 17, it will happen again.

A new administration will take over for the old. Father Edward "Monk" Malloy will succeed Father Theodore M. Hesburgh, who is retiring after 35 years as president of Notre Dame.

The transfer of leadership will bring a change in style, administrators say, but little change, at least immediately, in the University itself.

"I think the changes that will occur will be changes in style more than anything, not in changes in priorities or in the way we do things at Notre Dame," said Father E. William Beauchamp, who will serve as executive vice president in the new administration.

Striving for same goals

Malloy said as president he will continue striving toward many of the goals that have already been set by Hesburgh. Speaking in an interview and at the press conference called to announce his selection, Malloy spelled out some of these goals:

■Attract capable faculty to make Notre Dame a major research institution.

■Maintain the balance between faculty research and teaching.

■Continue Notre Dame's "established legacy of high-quality undergraduate education."

■Get more women and minorities involved in administrative roles at the University.

■Look at student life, including the use and abuse of alcohol.

■Examine the problems of minority students and faculty.

■Continue Notre Dame's tradition of residentiality by attracting high-quality dormitory staff members.

■Maintain "the standards of the Joyce era - that competitive high-quality athletic program," while at the same time, maintain the University's academic and conduct standards, something that "has been the hallmark of Notre Dame up to now."

"And to make all this happen, we're going to have to raise money," said Malloy, who got his nickname "Monk" as a child and not from his profession.

Leadership styles differ

Although Malloy's and Hesburgh's goals may be similar, their personalities and leadership styles apparently differ. Already much has been said and written about the contrasts between the two men.

Malloy is described as a friendly, thoughtful, even-tempered leader who makes decisions only after much consultation, while Hesburgh is

The Observer (USPS 599 2-4000) is published Monday through Friday except during exam and vacation periods. The Observer is published by the students of the University of Notre Dame and Saint Mary's College. Subscriptions may be purchased for $40 per year ($25 per semester) by writing The Observer, P.O. Box Q, Notre Dame, Indiana 46556.

The Observer is a member of The Associated Press. All reproduction rights are reserved.

There has been much said recently about the duty of Notre Dame's campus press in the community. Ever since assuming my role last March, I have been told privately and publicly what The Observer should and should not print if it is to serve its community well.

It was first told that University administrators were stalking The Observer in hopes that we would slip up and print something with which they disagreed. This, of course, would give them an excuse to shut down our operation, and us an excuse not to print anything we personally and capriciously deemed unfit for The Observer's image.

This advice is so ridiculously fallible that it is insulting. To believe the administrators of the University are so myopic that they cannot participate or listen to sensible debate or tolerate objective reporting of somewhat controversial issues is absurd. It is an affront to them and those who look to them for leadership.

On the other hand, there are those members of the community who exhort the campus press to stir up the pot, if you will, to make the place a bit more interesting. For instance, in her latest column in Common Sense, Ann Pettifer advises us to "tweak a few tails at the top now and then" to show the priests around here that the student's pen is mightier than the administrative sword.

But for all of their vociferous vituperations and shrill caterwauling about conservative, "self-censoring" student editors, these people are saying the same thing as those who call for information to be withheld and ideas to be repressed. I prefer to leave the pot-stirring and "tail-tweaking" to those who enjoy that type of thing, thank you.

The Observer is here to print the facts and issues that affect this community. Writing vitriolic columns and putting bees in administrative bonnets is, as I see it, a lesser calling.

This is not to say, however, that The Observer is going to make everyone happy all of the time. In the Friday, May 1, issue of our newspaper, our Viewpoint section contained a letter from Notre Dame freshman John Tansey. In his letter Tansey complained that "The Observer guest columns (on homosexuality) these last few days has viciously re-opened that festering wound." "In the future," Tansey advised, "please consider the majority of people who provide the majority of funding for this paper and write for their tastes."

Again, another sector of the community that believes it has the solution to making tough editorial decisions. We should start tallying up the votes from our subscribers and advertisers

Editor-in-Chief

(who, by the way, actually provide the majority of funding for this paper) and run our newspaper the "decent, red-blooded American way," whatever that may mean.

If that were done and those Tansey-like members of our community were able to garner enough votes, I fear we may be running 16 pages of liquor store ads intermixed with very readable and digestible comic strips to make lunch go down more easily.

In the end, of course, the editorial decisions are still left up to us. It gives us something to do until 4 in the morning, five days a week.

Of course, in the past The Observer has been too closely allied with one or the other of the above viewpoints. At points, critiques of the administration were so constant and sharp that our masthead should not have read newspaper but "muckraker." At another time characterized by what a professor called "editorial blandness," we should have called ourselves a PR sheet, more aware of our image than the job we were supposed to be doing.

But we live and learn. We, more often than I would like to admit, make mistakes, but we try. I do not complain about the "advice" I get from our readers. It helps remind me that mine is not the only opinion on any subject and certainly makes the job more interesting.

Protestors call for divestment

By JON THEISEN
News Staff

Nearly 150 students, faculty, and members of the South Bend community participated in a rally for justice Friday afternoon on the steps of the Administration Building.

Through speeches, songs, poetry, prayers, and cheers, the crowd displayed discontent for racism in both South Africa and the United States.

"The (Notre Dame) Board of Trustees meets again next week to re-consider their position on divestment. We want to show them that we are in favor of divestment," explained Patrick Mullen, one organizer of the event.

Yelling and chanting erupted when University President Father Theodore Hesburgh and Executive Vice President Father Edmund Joyce appeared from beneath the Administration Building steps during a speech by the chairwoman of the Anti-Apartheid Network, Margarita Rose.

In unison, the participants in the rally repeatedly chanted, "Divest now." Hesburgh and Joyce rushed to their automobiles and quickly drove off.

"Is (Notre Dame) a Board of Trustees?" asked Dennis Tillman, president of the Notre Dame National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. "(Notre Dame) isn't only a building with a golden dome. It is us - you and me," he added.

"Say a prayer for the oppressed. Say a prayer for (Notre Dame), that she may open her eyes. Say a prayer for yourselves, that you may open-up and (Notre Dame) may be heard around the world," said

Tillman who then lead the participants in the Our Father.

Professor of Government Peter Walshe expressed his hope that the new administration would take a firmer stance against racism.

Walshe recalled the involvement that the Catholic Church had had with Nazi Germany. He said, "Years after people asked, 'How could the Catholic Church have remained involved for so long?' Years from now, people will ask how the University of Notre Dame could have remained involved for so long."

The rally was sponsored by several campus groups including Student Government, Anti-Apartheid Network, Black Cultural Arts Council, Women United For Justice and Peace, the Peace Institute, and the Notre Dame chapter of the NAACP.

Task force to study the ramifications of alcohol use and abuse in college settings

Special to The Observer

A 15-member Task Force on Whole Health and the Use and Abuse of Alcohol has been appointed by Father Edward Malloy, president-elect of the University of Notre Dame.

The Task Force has the following mandate:

- to examine the use and abuse of alcohol in the context of contemporary American society, with special attention to the college and university environment.

- to provide an appropriate frame of reference for the analysis of the ethical, social, personal, and legal significance of alcohol use and abuse.

- to determine the University's educational responsibility with regard to alcohol.

- to review present University policies concerning the availability and consumption of alcohol as they apply to all segments of the University community.

The Task Force, which will issue a report and recommendations to the University president by March 15, 1988, will be chaired by Patrick Utz, director of the University Counseling Center.

to admit that they used fake ID's because they could potentially be sued in civil court by the tavern.

Reed later said his client would not sue any of the students.

Gale Lighthall, Lee's manager, testified that at the Jan. 15 raid, police announced at the door that students who showed false identification would be arrested, but those who showed the police no identification would only be cited. He said this encouraged students to "ditch" their ID's.

When questioned about what police said when they arrived, students made no mention of a jail threat, according to McNevin.

Lighthall contended that so many underage people were in Lee's on the nights of the raids because they presented fake ID's at the door.

Staffs chosen for yearbooks

By GREG TUEL
News Staff

John Kirk, a third year architecture student from St. Paul, Minnesota, has been chosen editor-in-chief of the 1987/88 Dome, the Notre Dame yearbook, according to Anne Iacono, the current editor-in-chief.

The new co-editors of the Saint Mary's yearbook, the Blue Mantle, for 1988 will be Mari Doti and Kara Cudzilo.

The Notre Dame book will be distributed in May 1988 and Saint Mary's book will come out in fall of 1988.

The Dome has also announced its editorial board which will include Ron Almiron as managing editor, Paul Pahoresky as photography editor and Cindy Harrigan as copy editor.

The senior staff of the Blue Mantle is still accepting applications for positions on next year's staff.

Kirk said he has planned new ideas for next year.

"The Dome is traditionally a 'year in review,' but this year I'd rather make it a 'year of discovery' - we'll look at those things that haven't been covered by other Domes like the campus band situation and dorm events," Kirk said.

described as a forceful and charismatic leader who sometimes makes unilateral decisions.

Comparisons 'fruitless'

Hesburgh doesn't give such comparisons much credence, however.

"I think all those comparisons are rather fruitless at this point because you're comparing someone whose been on the job for 35 years with someone who hasn't begun yet," he said.

"I think at the very least you ought to let a guy begin the job and do it for two or three years before judging him on his style," Hesburgh added. "If you want to make a comparison, you ought to compare him to what I was 35 years ago."

"And he'd win that one hands down."

'I'm going to be myself'

Like Hesburgh, Malloy doesn't seem much concerned with comparisons between the two. "I'm going to be myself as he was himself," said Malloy, who will be officially inaugurated on Sept. 23.

"I just want to develop a style of administration that I'm comfortable with. So rather than distinguish myself from Father Hesburgh, I'm going to try to build on what I think are my strengths."

Beauchamp, however, said his style will differ from the man he is succeeding. "(The changes) will be primarily a matter of style, a matter of how I work with people," he said.

Nevertheless, the change in style won't mean a change in the administration's handling of athletics and business matters, the two areas for which Beauchamp will be responsible.

"In terms of specific structural changes, there may be some minor ones," he said. "But if somebody were to look at the organizational chart, for example, now and what it might look like in a year, they won't see any major changes."

Malloy elected Nov. 14
Malloy, 45, was elected the University's 16th president by the Board of Trustees on Nov. 14.

Upon his recommendation, the board also elected Beauchamp to succeed Father Edmund P. Joyce, who is retiring after 35 years at Hesburgh's side. Malloy and Beauchamp will serve five-year renewable terms.

"I really feel confident about the people in the administration," said Malloy, who served as associate provost and associate professor of theology before his election. "I think it's a good working team."

'Close working relationship'

Beauchamp agreed, predicting that he and Malloy will have "a very close working relationship," a partnership similar to that of Hesburgh and Joyce.

"First of all, we're good friends," said Beauchamp, who was one of the five candidates for University president. "Secondly, (Malloy) has made it clear that his model is one of collegiality... He's made it clear he and the officers will be working as a team."

That team approach already can be seen. Malloy and other Notre Dame officers recently announced the formations of three task forces, one on marriage, family and life commitments, another on residence life and a third on health and the use and abuse of alcohol.

Each task force will issue a report with recommendations to Malloy by March of 1988.

Smooth transition expected

Despite the differences in style between the old and new leaders, Beauchamp expects the transition to go smoothly.

"There is no shake-up planned at the level we would deal with in the administration," said Beauchamp, who has served as both Joyce and Hesburgh's assistant.

"The difficulty, if any, is when you replace people who have been in positions for 35 years, especially when they're legends, that's not a simple thing to do."

'No coup planned'

Father Carl Ebey, who Malloy appointed as his executive assistant, agreed that the transition would go smoothly. "There is no coup being planned right now," he said.

"I presume that any changes that would take place would be gradual changes and would be changes by attrition," Ebey said. "I don't anticipate anybody leaving the University because they're upset with Father Malloy's appointment."

"So there's no big story coming out the 23rd of May," he added. "Five hundred people are not being replaced."

Transition 'more productive'

Hesburgh said the transition would be "more productive" than those at other universities, which bring in presidents and vice presidents from outside the school.

The new leaders at other universities "come in out of the blue and the year begins," Hesburgh said. "They know nothing about the student body, or the style, or how things get done there."

Malloy and Beauchamp have both gone to school and taught at Notre Dame. They've also attended every budget meeting, promotion and tenure meeting, and important trustee meeting, Hesburgh said.

As a result, their transition "ought to be a thousand times easier" than if they'd come from outside the University, he said.

Plenty of elbow room

To give Malloy and Beauchamp plenty of elbow room at the start, Hesburgh said he and Joyce will remain away from Notre Dame during the new leaders' first year.

Once they return, Hesburgh said he and Joyce hope to work from offices in the Memorial Library, one of the 40 campus buildings constructed during their tenure. "I hope to come back and have an office with Father Ned in the library and do whatever I can to help the University as a utility outfielder," said Hesburgh.

A changing university

When Malloy and Beauchamp take over, they will inherit a changing university.

Notre Dame will increase the number of women in the undergraduate student body by 150 in each of the next four entering classes. To accommodate the additional women, the University is converting another men's dormitory to a woman's hall.

Notre Dame is also building two new women's dormitories, scheduled to be completed in the fall of 1988.

In addition, the University is constructing a $6 million sports center, to be used for varsity football, track and field, intramural athletics, recreational sports and physical education classes. Notre Dame is also building a $1.5 million indoor tennis facility, which will house six courts.

University 'in great shape'

"I think clearly we inherit a University that's in great shape," said Beauchamp. "It's made a lot of strides under Father Hesburgh."

"And it's in great financial shape under Father Joyce."

The University's annual operating budget is currently about $176 million, up from $9.7 million when Hesburgh and Joyce took over. Annual gifts now stand at approximately $48 million, up from $1.1 million, and research funding is at about $15 million, up from $735,000 in 1952.

Major fundraising drive

To continue its financial progress, the University is scheduled to officially kick off a major fund-raising drive on May 9. The drive, reportedly to be called "Notre Dame: A Strategic Moment," has a goal of $300 million.

"We couldn't begin to meet the needs of the University without a substantial influx of money into the operations," Beauchamp said. "If you talk in terms of dreams and what we'd really like to have in an ideal situation, $300 million wouldn't begin to touch it."

As a result, "Monk" and I and the other officers will be spending a considerable amount of time over the next two or three years involved in fund-raising activities," he said. "That will be an on-going thing at Notre Dame always."

Succeeding a 'legend'

For Beauchamp, taking over for a "legend" has created a slew of emotions. "I guess my feelings about taking over are a combination of excitement, joy, apprehension, fear and anxiety all kind of rolled into one," he said.

But, he said "it's healthy fear. 'It's one of recognition that it's a complex operation, that Father Joyce has done a great job over the years, and I inherit a heritage there's that's awfully impressive..."

"You don't replace Father Joyce," he added. "I'm not the next Father Joyce. I'm Bill Beauchamp."

Excited about challenge

Malloy expressed similar sentiments. "I don't think pressure is the right word," he said.

"I feel excited about what I see as a challenge. I'm not sitting around looking over my shoulder or excessively fearful."

'A lot of strengths'

Malloy is optimistic about the upcoming administration.

"I think Notre Dame has got a lot of strengths, many more strengths than weaknesses," he said. "I think people can get really excited about the transition."

And what does he expect the coming transition to bring?

Smiling, Malloy replied, "Peace, happiness, wisdom, truth..."

Committees which will exist to determine whether the alleged violations have occurred. Both students and faculty will be on these committees.

For a first infraction, the penalty will be an "F" in the course under which the code was violated. For a second infraction, the penalty will be dismissal from the University.

Williams said at this stage of the experiment only those upperclass students who desire to take a course employing the honor code will do so. Any classes regulated by the honor code will be indicated in the pre-registration course bulletin.

In addition, said Williams, on the first day of class a professor may indicate that he is thinking about teaching the class as an honor code course. If one person objects to this proposal, the honor code cannot be used in the class. Everyone in the class must agree to be governed by the code.

He emphasized the fact that many students graduating each year will some day be running corporate and academic America. "We have some very important future leaders on campus," Williams said. "(Faculty members) have to do all they can to educate Notre Dame graduates to be as strong as they possibly can," Williams added. He said acknowledgment of the trust and maturity of students will help students to grow morally.

Notre Dame employed an honor code prior to 1969, at which point the code was abandoned when members of the Student Honor Council resigned because they did not think students were committed to the code.

Williams said he was not here during that period, but believes the code may be more successful today. "There seems to be a feeling that people are more interested in making it work," he said. "Moral development is a primary mission of the University. Faculty members want to use every educational tool available to help students grow."

If the experimental program is successful, according to Williams, the University will convert entirely to an honor code. The Academic Council will vote after the completion of the four-year experiment on the success of the program and whether to require all students to follow the honor code. A final decision on the full honor code will be made by the Academic Council in April of 1992.

If the code is approved, said Williams, any student coming to Notre Dame will have no choice but to be governed under the honor system. He said he personally hopes the honor code will be installed permanently.

He succeeds Father Edward Malloy as associate provost. Malloy chaired the Honesty Committee since 1985.

Notre Dame thanked for loving support

Dear Notre Dame Students, Faculty and Administration:

Presently we will be directing individual thank you notes to the many people who extended their sympathy to us at the time of Michael's death. At this time, we want you, the Notre Dame Community of which Michael was a happy fulfilled member, to know how much your outpouring of care, support and love means to us.

Michael loved his friends; he was challenged by his studies and comfortable in his surroundings. We would anxiously await his Sunday night calls when he would relate the newest happening at Zahm, news of the band, the bookstore basketball league, the paper that was due, the date he had or didn't have, the party he made, the B that he thought was going to be a C, and visa-versa.

You, his fellow students, were the core of his happiness. You are special, as is Michael. Your being with us, either personally or through letters, advising of your prayers and expressing your desire to help lift our burden of sorrow, is very meaningful to us. It tells us that Michael, who was so important to us, was of a vibrant importance to you.

We would like to thank the faculty and administration for maintaining an institution that truly lives. For creating an environment where young men and women, like our Michael, can develop into the image of our Creator. Your personal kindness to us during the darkest of nights is deeply appreciated.

Someday, when the memories are not so painful, we will come back to Notre Dame. In the meantime, know that we receive great joy in hearing from you. Lastly, we believe on the best authority, Jesus Christ, that Michael, in a very special way, is still with you at Notre Dame, as he is with us.

Minorities' opinions deserve respect

Dear Editor:

We are writing in empathy with the letter published in last Friday's "Viewpoint" on the topic of homosexuality, or more accurately, the banishment thereof. This latest public attack on homosexuality was commendable, however within it were many fresh and promising ideas which were not allowed to reach full and just fruition.

For example, we too are alarmed and shocked by the presence of homosexuality on campus. In this recent letter to the editor, the presence of homosexuality was described as a "festering wound," the thought of which would make "any decent, red-blooded American" puke. On reflection of this author's brilliant assessment of the situation of homosexuality, we feel that this festering wound that homosexuality represents for society should not be cured, but rather exterminated. As he says, we should not be "continually subjected to revolting scenarios" about the intimacies of two homosexuals. The thought of two being being "very happy, very romantic," and "blissfully" in love is enough to turn my stomach.

With regard to the news media, the author termed the articles on homosexuality as a "misuse of University media to forward the aims of a minority group." We totally agree. The purpose of media is not to inform the public on irrelevant issues concerning minorities, but rather to further the rightful dominance of the majority. As was so strongly implied by this author, freedom of speech and freedom of the press are just excuses for insubordination, and they should be abolished to preserve the greater good of the ruling majority. The plights of the Jews, blacks and women do not, and need not, concern us. In order to uphold our community whose goal is to rise above the mediocrity of weaklings, we do not have time to concern ourselves with the trivialities of minorities.

The author stated that if he had it his way, "homosexuality would not exist." Well neither should the homosexuals. We, as representatives of the white, Catholic heterosexual male majority should extricate the pestilence of homosexuality from our community. As Hitler did with the Jews, we should make every effort to exterminate them as a people. Not until the waste of our society is removed will we ever hope to be pure. After all, are we not the master race?

Sich heil!

Hatred has no place in good writing

Dear Editor:

I wish that The Observer would offer Mr. John P. Tansey a regular column as food editor so that he could teach those of us looking for new recipes for ignorance and hatred how to serve up our sputum and vomit as appetizingly as he did in his letter on Friday, May 1. What delectable tidbits from his oh, so refined palate could we savor as he shared with us his "tastes" regarding women, blacks, foreigners, non-Catholics, gays, the elderly, the sick, the retarded (of course, I'm only guessing at the range of his gustatory interests). I'm sure that Mr. Tansey is a delightful dining companion with whom any of us could dip into a common bowl and pick out a sweet piece of dung. Bon appetit, Mr. Tansey!

Collaborative effort resulted in Gracevision

Dear Editor:

We would like to provide some background to clarify some vagueness in Tuesday's article on the Grace Hall TV system. It is inaccurate to say that Gracevision "began a few years ago as one of Rector Lardner's pet projects." The "guts" of the system is a coaxial cable running throughout the building with an "F" type wall jack in every room. This cable was installed when the building was built in 1969, and in short-sightedness, buildings erected since have not had a similar cable installed. The previous rector, Fr. Noone, sponsored upgrading the roof antenna; the residents voted that they preferred the antenna to be tuned to Chicago stations rather than South Bend. Later, two converters were added to the system to convert Channels 16 and 32 to the VHF band. These show up on Gracevision as channels 6 and 13. The only public channels available on Grace come by way of this antenna. We do not have "cable" in the sense that we have access to C-Span, ESPN, or the Playboy channel.

The system allows its own input on channel 4; the current rector, Fr. Lardner, developed the use of a Commodore 64 computer to generate graphics for the electronic bulletin board notices. The outgoing hall president, Bob Carroll, sponsored the purchase of a hall camera to film hall events for the station, and to pioneer live broadcasting. Jan Farrell has headed up a team to create original video for the station, and Ed Trifone has taken on the task of arranging programming. The system has been financed by the hall through profits from foodsales. The success for Gracevision so far, and its possibilities for the future, is due to a long, collaborative effort by many people.

Stealing Common Sense is student censorship

Dear Editor:

In "We Hold These Truths," John Courtney Murray expressed the mind of St. Thomas Aquinas on society with the quote, "Civilization is formed by men locked together in argument." Conversely, he said, "Barbarism is not...the forest primeval with all its relatively simple savageries... It is the lack of reasonable conversation according to reasonable laws. Here the word "conversation" has its twofold Latin sense. It means living together and talking together."

The founding of Common Sense took a healthy stride toward cultivating such conversation and argument on campus. The theft and destruction of the recent issue by some local barbarians show how little they understand what a university is; if they cannot "live and talk together", they should ask themselves why they are here, and so should their peers. There is no point in students clamoring for journalistic independence from the administration if they will tolerate vigilante censorship from their own ranks.

Rev. Gerald V. Lardner
Rector
Grace Hall

Education involves considering all views

Dear Editor:

The issue of homosexuality and its effects on the cultures of the world has come into the press most recently because of the growing number of AIDS victims. The Notre Dame press is not alone in covering the events in the world related to the issue, and I would venture to say, somewhat lax in so doing. My point is that Notre Dame, specifically, is not exaggerating the importance of homosexuality's effects on our society.

For someone to state that they do not want to hear about events effecting our community should avoid reading completely. Unfortunately, many people at Notre Dame follow this path, and it leads to individuals, supposedly "educated," who are veiled from the reality of conflicts in society. A student, to be educated, cannot simply learn what suits his/her tastes, but must learn that which will make him/her a responsible, educated person. That, of course, is my ideal view of a student. The University emphasizes the philosophy of a well-rounded education, and I believe any student here should be open to this. Any person opposed to this should reconsider his role as a student at Notre Dame (or anywhere) and his responsibility to be informed.

Washington Hall Manager, Tom Barkes performs "Summer Night" with partner Judith Denman on January 31, 1981 at the Akron Civic Center.

A dancer's contribution: Promoting growth through art

JENNIFER O'NEIL
features writer

Washington Hall -- most of us know it well as the site of many long lectures or difficult exams. However, few of us are aware that this 104 year old building is the "home away from home" for manager Tom Barkes -- an interesting man dedicated to the continuation and expansion of the arts at Notre Dame and throughout the United States.

Barkes' interest in the arts stems from his love of dance. As a pre-dental major and member of the varsity wrestling team at Hope College, Barkes was your all-around American "jock." Junior year, confronted with the dilemma of choosing a required Fine Arts class, Barkes decided upon "Modern Dance" -- a class of 14 girls and two guys (odds which he liked).

At first, Barkes was sarcastic and had fun mocking his dancing. "I enjoyed being an iconoclast by showing up late for (wrestling) practice and cockily saying, 'Sorry I'm late coach, I had to dance.'"

Barkes' dance coach, in need of more strong men and recognizing Barkes' potential, asked him to continue lessons and expand them to include tap, jazz, and ballet. Being the "tough guy" that he was, Barkes merely scoffed at the idea. In response, his coach remarked, "Yeah, you jocks just can't cut it -- can you?" This "challenge" was all it took to get Barkes to go all out and attack the field of dancing.

His love and appreciation for dance -- especially ballet -- grew to such an intensity that instead of going on to medical school, Barkes went to New York and studied dance with the world renowned dance company, the Joffrey Ballet. Although his parents were frightened at this move, Barkes' abilities calmed their fears. He soon found himself travelling with the Joffrey to 40 different states, as well as tours and concerts abroad.

Before Barkes' career was cut short by the development of arthritis in his right ankle, his whole attitude regarding the importance of the arts in everyone's life had changed. Although it was time to move on and leave performing professionally, he earnestly sought some way that he could still contribute to the performing arts, as well as, promote their importance in the mainstream of society. Therefore, he went into management of the arts.

Barkes has been manager of Washington Hall, an integral part of the fine arts realm of the Notre Dame community for over two years now. Such a position is extremely challenging at a school where, aside from academics, the biggest interest is sports.

"The Notre Dame arts has a responsibility to share with the community," says Barkes. But, to his disappointment, "...the arts here are not stressed or at a point where they can grow. If the community is interested, a new performing arts center is a must."

Barkes does not deny the importance of athletics and sports. However, he has become disturbed with the over-emphasis on the winning and losing of sports. This over-emphasis prevents the well-roundedness created only when equal importance is given to the performing arts. Says Barkes, "We have become so involved in winning and losing that it's become a tantamount problem today....I find it frightening and incredibly bad that we struggle to fill Washington Hall when professional wrestling is packed."

He believes refuge from such a debasing environment can be found in the arts. Here there is creativity, competition, and a commitment to excellence -- all of which are key ingredients in sports. However, in the arts, the competition is within a framework of team cooperation and most importantly says Barkes, "No one has to lose, there are no fortunes to be made or lost -- instead, everyone benefits."

In the future, Barkes wants to definitely increase staff support for the arts at Notre Dame and to update the facilities so as to provide a healthier environment within which an appreciation for arts can flourish. Barkes' dedication to excellence will not only benefit the whole Notre Dame community, but everyone individually as well.

calvin and Hobbes

Democracy lives. The people have triumphed. At least if you are a Calvin and Hobbes fan they have. If you are allergic to tigers, however, I would suggest a quick transfer to another school -- on second thought, perhaps another planet.

You see, C&H fans (Are they Calvinists or Hobbesians?) are everywhere and they're rabid. They make the druids seem like a casual social group. C&H fans are worse though because they seem like normal people -- at least until they turn to the funny pages. Then they chortle, chuckle and guffaw their way into an ecstatic delirium and begin to chant "He's so cute. He's so cute. He's so cute..." The cult of Calvin remained a secret at Notre Dame until The Observer Comic Strip Contest unknowingly "transmogrified" the student body into a raving mob of zealots. What was intended to be an election rapidly degenerated into a complete landslide which left Shoe, Mother Goose and Grimm, and Rubes shaking their heads in shock as they limped back to the land of Dick Tracy and Mary Worth.

If you think that I'm exaggerating the degree of fanaticism in the Notre Dame student body, examine the following real comments from real Comic Strip Contest ballots submitted by real Notre Dame students and ask yourself whether Catholicism is still the only religion at Notre Dame. The students' responses to the contest can be summed up in the following categories:

The "Elvis had nothing on this guy" argument:

"I love Calvin!" Kerry Sieger, Lyons Hall

"I want Hobbes' Cub," Chris Stauduhar, Lewis Hall

"Calvin's my idol." Dave Brown, Grace Hall

The "Don Corleone offer you can't refuse" argument:

"Get Calvin & Hobbes or die!" Michael Joseph, Cavanaugh Hall

"If C&H doesn't win, there'll be hell to pay." Dan Webster, Cavanaugh Hall

The "Do it for your own sake" argument:

"Everyone wants to be a tiger!" Kevin Sandberg, St. Edward's Hall

"The Observer needs Hobbes." Krista Speck, Lewis Hall

The "I've reviewed all the options and..." argument:

"Must! Have Calvin!" Terry Mullen, Cavanaugh Hall

"Calvin and Hobbes! Calvin and Hobbes!"

"Calvin and Hobbes! Calvin and Hobbes!"

Mark Weimholt, Morrissey Hall

"Calvin and Hobbes is the ONLY choice!" Kevin Sidders, Cavanaugh Hall

The "He hasn't forgotten little people" argument:

"Go with Calvin -- he's one of the only cartoon characters left that's not obsessed with his own popularity."

Mike Napierkowski, Carroll Hall

The "You don't understand, it's not just a comic strip" argument:

"Choosing another cartoon would be a crime against humanity." Andy Barlow, St. Edward's Hall

"They rule all planes of existence." Kevin Grogan, Holy Cross Hall

"Calvin and Hobbes is my life." Chris Simms, Grace Hall

The "Subliminal sex." argument:

"Calvin is a total ladies man." SOE

"Calvin is high speed." Dan

"Hobbes is hot." Candace Lyon, Pasquerilla West

The "He's a guy I can really look down on." argument:

"Calvin's shorter than I am." Michele Burkart, Lewis Hall

"Calvin is God. That darn Hobbes is so cute!" Tripp Baltz o.c.

Puckett's homer knocks off Yanks; Brewers lose 4th

Associated Press

MINNEAPOLIS - Kirby Puckett hit a solo home run in the eighth inning Sunday, giving the Minnesota Twins a 4-3 victory over the New Yankees.

Puckett connected on the first pitch from Tim Stoddard for his seventh homer of the season. The Twins hit four solo home runs Sunday and had eight while winning two of three games against the Yankees.

Stoddard, 0-1, relieved starter Dennis Rasmussen after Tom Brunansky's game-tying homer in the sixth.

Mariners 7, Brewers 3

SEATTLE - Mike Morgan won his second consecutive start since returning from the bullpen, giving the Seattle Mariners a 7-3 victory over the Milwaukee Brewers Sunday.

Morgan, 2-3, was shelled in his first three starts of the year and sent to the bullpen. He talked Mariners Manager Dick Williams into putting him back in the starting rotation and responded by going the distance, allowing eight hits. Morgan struck out three and walked two.

Angels 11, Red Sox 4

ANAHEIM - Doug DeCinces hit a grand slam and John Candelaria improved his record to 4-0 Sunday as the California Angels defeated the Boston Red Sox 11-4.

DeCinces' third homer of the season highlighted a six-run, sixth-inning outburst as the Angels pulled out to an 11-1 lead. It was DeCinces' sixth career grand slam and his first since he was with the Baltimore Orioles in 1981.

Athletics 2, Tigers 0

OAKLAND - Eric Plunk held Detroit to six hits for 8 1-3 innings and Mike Gallego got his second game-winning RBI in two days as the Oakland Athletics blanked the Detroit Tigers 2-0 Sunday.

Royals 2, Indians 1

KANSAS CITY - Danny Jackson pitched a four-hitter, out-dueling Ken Schrom and leading the Kansas City Royals to a mistake-filled 2-1 victory Sunday over the Cleveland Indians.

Jackson, 1-4, held Cleveland hitless until Carmen Castillo doubled in the fifth. He struck out seven and walked four. Schrom, 1-3, was the loser.

The Royals scored their first run with the help of a two-base error and a balk.

White Sox 4, Orioles 3

BALTIMORE - Donnie Hill singled home the tie-breaker in the eighth Sunday and gave the Chicago White Sox a 4-3 victory over the Baltimore Orioles.

Chicago swept the three-game series and sent Baltimore to its fourth straight loss.

Blue Jays 3, Rangers 1

TORONTO - Jim Clancy pitched two-hit ball for 8 1-3 innings Sunday and the Toronto Blue Jays extended their winning streak to six games by beating the Texas Rangers 3-1.

Clancy, 3-2, struck out seven and walked two. He allowed a fifth-inning single to Pete O'Brien and departed in the ninth with a 3-0 lead after Geno Petralli doubled and Jerry Browne drew a one-out walk.

ND lacrosse team ends with win as O'Neill saves best for last

By CHRIS DALLAVO
Sports Writer

They saved their best for last.

Co-Captain Dave O'Neill and the rest of the Notre Dame lacrosse team closed out their season in style Saturday by beating Ohio State 16-11 in Columbus. The Irish finished their season 6-5 overall, and 3-1 in the Great Lakes Conference, good enough for second place.

O'Neill, playing in his last game for the Irish, scored four goals and had one assist, making it the highest scoring game of his career.

"Dave just played a super game," said Irish head coach Rich O'Leary. "It was a really nice way to finish, both for the seniors, and for the players who will return next year."

The Irish got off to their usual slow start, and trailed the Buckeyes by two goals for the majority of the first half. The third quarter once again told the story, but this time it had a happy ending for the Irish.

"I think we wore them down, especially later in the game," noted O'Leary. "Our kids worked very, very hard, and we played an excellent second half. The key was probably the aggressiveness of our midfielders."

O'Leary also praised the play of his trio of senior defensemen, Wally Stack, Jim Fallon and Dick Milone.

"They took Ohio State out of the game," he said. "The way they played was typical of their careers here. They earned a victory, and they deserve it."

The Irish took advantage of some Ohio State mistakes in the fourth quarter to assure the outcome. The Buckeyes forced the action, but Notre Dame, led by its seniors, refused to fold.

John Olmstead scored three goals for the Irish, and Tom Lanahan and Jim Shields added two apiece. John McLachlan, playing with a separated shoulder, notched five assists.

IRISH ITEMS - Four awards were handed out at the Notre Dame lacrosse banquet Sunday night. The team voted John McLachlan, the leading scorer for the Irish, the Most Valuable Player for the 1987 season. Freshman goaltender Jeff Glazier, forced to assume full-time duty in net, was acknowledged as the Most Improved Player. The Spirit Award was presented to senior co-captain Wally Stack, who can put the trophy on his mantle right next to the Ugly Man On Campus Award.

The final presentation was the Dedication Award, won by the other senior co-captain, Dave O'Neill.

Erving's career ends with loss

Associated Press

Thanks largely to Craig Hodges, Sunday was the last day of the Philadelphia 76ers' season and the final game of Julius Erving's career.

The Milwaukee guard scored all 14 of his points in the fourth quarter, including six on a pair of 3-point baskets, to lead the Bucks to a 102-89 victory over the 76ers in the deciding fifth game of an opening-round NBA eastern Conference playoff series.

"We love Dr. J," Hodges said. "But today, we had to put him away."

Milwaukee advanced to the conference semifinals against the defending champion Boston Celtics. The best-of-seven series opens Tuesday night at Boston.

Jamaica, came to Notre Dame with impressive stats, but up to this meet he has not performed well. "Maybe he's finally coming around," said Pianie.

But with sophomore David Warth being held out, the 1600-meter relay team of McGuire, Searcy, Gordon and freshman John Whelan was not as successful, finishing third with a time of 3:21.4.

With freshman Glenn Watson at the National Invitational at Indianapolis, freshman Jim Varga won the 110-meter high hurdles with a time of 15.0. Second-place finishes were recorded by sophomore David Warth in the 400-meter intermediate hurdles and by junior John Dadomio in the 800-meter run.

In the field events, junior Chris Matteo set a meet record in the pole vault, easily winning with a mark of 15-4.

"Chris has been less than sterling this year, but that is his highest vault this year," said Pianie. "It is a big breakthrough for him."

With junior Brian Driscoll also at Indianapolis, the javelin crew took second through fifth places. Sophomore John Eusterman led the Irish with a throw of 168-5, followed by senior Steve Demartino, sophomore Mike Napier and sophomore Chuck Curley.

Junior Rick Meunch won the long jump with 22-9 3/4, but was unable to compete in the triple jump due to a heel bruise. But senior Joel Autry filled the vacancy, winning the triple jump with 46-8 1/4. Autry also finished third in the long jump.

Junior Tom Mick won the hammer throw in a non-scoring event, and junior Tim Smith placed second in the discus.

At the National Invitational, Driscoll qualified for the IC4A's in the javelin with a toss of 201-0, but senior Robert Nobles and freshman Mike O'Connor both failed to qualify in the 800 and 1500-meter runs, respectively.

Watson recorded a time of 14.20 in the 110-meter high hurdles.

The Irish are off until May 15 when they travel to Naperville, Ill., for the North Central Invitational. Pianie will have only 15 team members left for this meet.

In other games Sunday, Golden State won its first-round Western Conference series by beating Utah 118-113 in Game 5 and Detroit beat Atlanta 112-111 in the opening game of an Eastern Conference semifinal series.

Golden State opens its conference semifinal series against the Los Angeles Lakers Tuesday night at Inglewood, Calif.

Erving scored 24 points in the final game of his 16-season professional career. He was given a rousing ovation by Milwaukee fans when he left the game with 40 seconds remaining.

"I was thinking about my teammates, my family, the fans, a sigh of relief," Erving said. "I wish in my heart I could be happy even though it was a crushing moment when we lost. Losses always hurt."

"We'll use it to let the guys who have qualified for IC4A's to get a meet in, and to try to qualify a couple others," said Pianie.

Jack Sikma led the Bucks with 18 points and 21 rebounds, John Lucas added 17 points, Paul Pressey 15 and Sidney Moncrief 14.

Milwaukee played the second half without Coach Don Nelson, who was ejected in the second quarter after receiving two technical fouls for arguing with referee Earl Strom.

tories in tennis and 69 in wrestling over his 34-year career.

In Fallon's third year at Notre Dame, his team went 14-0 to earn a share of the NCAA title with Tulane.

The 24 wins by this year's youthful squad mark the 10th time Fallon's teams have earned over twenty victories since schedules were lengthened in 1971.

Fallon will travel with the Irish to Rutgers to defend the team's 1986 Eastern Collegiate Championship title May 15-16.

ND dominates Invite as 'strugglers' shine

By PETE GEGEN
Assistant Sports Editor

Despite the absence of five team members, the Irish track squad won 11 out of 19 events to take the sixth-annual Midwest Catholic Invitational.

Notre Dame ran away with the title, scoring 133 points. Second-place Marquette totaled 60 1/2, followed by DePaul (45), Lewis (40 1/2) and Aquinas (18).

While the team competition may not have been that exciting, the meet featured impressive performances by several members who have been struggling this season.

Junior Tony Ragunas, who has been bothered by a bad hamstring since the indoor season, won both the 100 and 200-meter dashes. While the times of 10.6 and 21.8 do not approach his personal career bests, they are his fastest times of the season.

Freshman Tom Kraus defeated Marquette's Paul Nowakowski in the shot put for the first time in three tries this season. Kraus' toss of 53-2 1/4, which easily set a new meet record, outdistanced Nowakowski's by five inches.

Freshman Yan Searcy, junior Dan Garrett and junior Rick Mulvey all continued their consistent running. Searcy took the 400-meter dash with a time of 48.6, Garrett won the 1500-meter run with a time of 3:54.97, and Rick Mulvey outran the field in the 3000-meter steeplechase with a time of 9:18.47, missing the IC4A qualifying time by less than six seconds. Freshman Tom O'Rourke and junior Mike Burns placed second and third respectively behind Mulvey.

Notre Dame's 400-meter relay again qualified for the IC4A's with a time of 42.47. The combination this time for the Irish featured Ragunas, Searcy and sophomores Chris McGuire and Andrew Gordon.

Gordon also finished third in the 200-meter dash with a time of 22.7. Piante noted that Gordon, a native of May Pen, Fallon's final regular season has successful ending

By THERESA KELLY
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame men's tennis team made Head Coach Tom Fallon's last days at Notre Dame memorable by winning two close matches. Saturday, the Irish narrowly defeated Michigan State, 5-4, and followed it up Sunday with a victory over Kalamazoo, also 5-4.

"We won two squeakers," said Fallon, "It was great to end on a good note."

Tim Carr won at the number-one spot for the Irish Saturday at the Courtney Courts, defeating his Spartan opponent 6-4, 6-3. Irish second man Brian Kalbas easily took his match 6-2, 6-1. Dan Walsh went to three sets with his opponent, 0-6, 6-2, 6-2.

In doubles action, the Irish took two of three, with Walsh and Paul Daggs winning 6-2, 6-3, and Mike Wallace and Sean O'Brien winning 6-3, 6-1.

"Dan Walsh was the hero on Saturday," said Fallon. "He came back to win a very tough match and gave us a tie going into the doubles. He and (Paul) Daggs won at number two to clinch the fifth win."

The Irish had another tough match against Kalamazoo, a top-ranked Division III team on Sunday. The Irish won four of the six singles matches but did not clinch the team victory until Wallace and O'Brien again won their number-three doubles match, 6-4, 6-2.

Kalbas won his second match of the weekend, 6-3, 6-2, as did Walsh, 6-3, 7-5. Daggs won a tough singles number-six match, 6-4, 6-7, 6-2. In the fourth spot, the freshman Wallace defeated his Kalamazoo opponent, 7-5, 8-6.

"Wallace was the star for us, although everyone played well," said Fallon. "He was in trouble early, but came back to win in singles. Then he and Sean O'Brien clinched in the doubles."

"It was a nice way to go out. We had a couple of heroes each day."

The Irish season mark stands at 24-11 after this weekend's exciting action, which marked the end of the regular season.

"We made a nice comeback from early injuries," said Fallon, reviewing the season. "It was a great effort on the part of the whole team."

"It took some reorganization, and it was good to see the B-team players working out well. We had new doubles combinations, too, but we put it all together and the season came out really well."

The matches mark the end of Fallon's final regular season. The winningest coach in Notre Dame history totaled 518 vic-

Irish offensive production weak in baseball team's weekend

By STEVE MEGARGEE
Sports Writer

Last season, the Notre Dame baseball team took out the frustrations of a 22-28 campaign by destroying Northwestern, 22-5, in the final game of the year.

If the Irish are to do the same thing in today's season-ending showdown with the Wildcats, they will have to show a much improved offensive attack from last weekend's games. Notre Dame pitchers only allowed four runs in three games, but the hitters also tallied only four runs, as the Irish split a doubleheader with Xavier, losing 2-0 and winning 4-1, and lost to Northwestern, 1-0. The Irish now stand at 15-28 going into the last game of the season.

Notre Dame hitters can expect to face another strong challenge in today's matchup with the Wildcats at Jake Kline Field. Northwestern's starting pitcher, Tony Ariola, is a pre-season first-team All-Big Ten selection and threw a four-hitter in last year's meeting with the Irish. Game time is 3:30 p.m.

The Irish did not have much success with yesterday's Northwestern pitchers, as Notre Dame only could manage three hits against the duo of Everett Cunningham and Chris Nichting. After a serious scoring threat in the sixth inning, the Irish did not have a baserunner in the final three innings, and a seventh-inning run by Mike Stein gave the Wildcats a 1-0 win, wasting a five-hit outing by Irish pitcher Kevin Chenail. Northwestern holds a record of 19-17-1.

In Saturday's doubleheader with Xavier, the Irish received two other good pitching performances from their starters, but only had one win to show for it.

"Ethel Merman Day" at Jake Kline Field must have helped the pitchers, as two first-inning runs by Xavier provided the only offense in the entire first game, as the Musketeers won, 2-0, behind Dave Neuer's three-hitter. Irish starter Brian Piotrowicz, who has not been receiving many runs from the Irish offense all season, fell to 2-7 with the hard-luck loss.

"He (Piotrowicz) has got a lot of heart, and he's improved every time out," said Irish head coach Larry Gallo. "His record shows he's 2-7, but I don't think in any size, shape or form that he's a loser. For a freshman, he's pitched in a lot of close games, and I don't think he'd like it any other way."

The Irish bats came alive a little in the second game, as a three-run fourth inning paced Notre Dame in a 4-1 victory. Mike Passilla allowed one run in six and two-thirds innings, and Mike Harmon got the final out of the game for the save. Xavier's record went to 27-18.

"Mike Passilla had runs to work with, and he pitched well," said Gallo. "Harmon did the job he was supposed to do."

"The pitching's been good over the last week or so," said Gallo. "It was just we didn't hit with authority the way we'd like to."

Gallo could have said those same words the next day.

The Observer/Greg Kohs Mike Passilla picked up the victory in Notre Dame's only baseball win this weekend. Steve Megargee details the weekend games at left.
