Koop calls for AIDS screening of youth

Associated Press

LONDON - U.S. Surgeon General C. Everett Koop said Thursday he wanted to screen every student of a major American university this spring to help determine the incidence of AIDS among young adults.

Koop also proposed similar mass AIDS screening at a few high schools in the United States, but said the government had made no decision on either proposal.

He disclosed the plan at a world meeting on AIDS in London and gave details in an interview Thursday.

The three-day conference, attended by health ministers from 114 countries and senior public-health officials from 34 others, adopted a declaration backing the World Health Organization's global strategy on AIDS control and prevention.

Proclaiming 1988 the "Year of Communication and Cooperation About AIDS," the 650 summit delegates said they "can and will" slow the spread of AIDS, but offered no major new strategies.

Koop's plan for anonymous screening of students could prove controversial. Civil libertarians have argued that anonymous screening is an invasion of privacy and that screening of a limited population could be the forerunner of mandatory nationwide testing.

The surgeon general said health officials had yet to choose a university, but

SMC Security program aids stranded students

Being stranded off campus without any money to get back can be a worrisome experience.

But Saint Mary's students can ease their minds now that the Saint Mary's Security Department has organized the Transport for Stranded Students Program.

"We run into some cases where students don't have the money to get back to campus," said Richard Chlebek, director of Saint Mary's security. "If students are in that situation, we can call cabs and get them back to campus safely," Chlebek said.

Student concerns regarding safety off campus and incidents involving strong arm robberies and assaults prompted this program, said Chlebek. These incidents occurred in the northeast section of town during the football season, he said.

Officer Bambenek, a safety technician and investigator, first came up with the idea for the program, Chlebek said.

"Students can be picked up from anywhere in the South Bend and Roseland area," said Chlebek.

Stranded students should call security at 284-5000 and explain their problem to the dispatcher, he said.

At the discretion of the shift supervisor, either a taxi will be summoned or a security vehicle will go off campus to meet the student, Chlebek said. If a

Observer elects Murphy editor for 1988-89

By REGIS COCCIA
Assistant News Editor

A majority vote of The Observer's general board Thursday elected Chris Murphy as editor-in-chief for 1988-89.

A junior American studies major from Manchester, Mo., Murphy says he is looking forward to serving as editor-in-chief. "I think it will be an exciting year," Murphy said. "The Observer, as the independent daily newspaper, will continue to serve as it has in the past," he said.

"We will continue to build on some of the improvements of the past year," Murphy said. "I think the primary responsibility of a student newspaper is to accurately reflect the events of the community. We will continue to uphold the standards that our predecessors at The Observer have set for us."

Murphy began working at The Observer as a freshman on the news staff. As a sophomore, he was appointed as-

Chris Murphy assistant Viewpoint editor. Last January, Murphy was elected to his current position as Viewpoint editor.

Murphy will assume his duties as editor-in-chief in March, succeeding senior Kevin Becker.

Governor candidate Daily speaks to ND students

By KENDRA MORRILL

Indiana gubernatorial candidate Stephen Daily made a stop Thursday at Notre Dame during an informal campaign swing through northern Indiana.

The 40-year-old former Kokomo mayor is considered the Democratic dark horse candidate in the gubernatorial race, running against what is referred to as the "dream ticket" of Indiana Secretary of State Evan Bayh and Sen. Frank O'Bannon.

"The Bayh name is well-recognized, and the polls taken reflect name recognition," Daily said. "The numbers don't surprise me, nor do I find them terribly disturbing."

The campaigns are really just beginning now, said Daily, and in the next 90 days he plans to greatly increase his own name recognition through hard work, speaking out on issues and through local organizations.

Steve Daily

Daily said he is a better candidate than his opponents because of his local government experience. "The state of Indiana is lacking top officials with local government experience," he said. "(The officials) are lacking experience dealing with people face-to-face, day in and day out."

Daily obtained his experience while serving as a Kokomo city councilman from 1976-1979 and then as mayor from 1980-1988. Daily chose not to run for a third term in order to begin his campaign for the governor's office.

Daily's two terms as mayor of Kokomo were during tough times, he said. When he entered office the Kokomo unemployment rate was 24 percent; it has since fallen to 6 percent.

Daily said the Indiana economy is also depressed - more so than what numbers lead people to believe. "As a state, we've gotten so involved in the glamour of chasing foreign companies and stealing business from other states. . . . that

The Institute for International Peace Studies received a grant of $450,000 from the MacArthur Foundation of Chicago to support the institute's programs through 1990. An additional $300,000 for the period 1991-92 is contingent upon the Foundation's review and approval of the University's use of the initial funds. Abortion in Canada is now a legal right, as the Supreme Court of Canada struck down the nation's restrictive abortion law in a split decision Thursday, ruling it unconstitutional and a "violation of a woman's right to control her own body." While abortion crusaders applauded the decision, pro-life groups vowed to fight on, urging the Canadian Parliament to rewrite the law. The ruling mirrors the U.S. supreme Court decision of Roe vs. Wade in 1973 that struck down the U.S. abortion law. - Associated Press

Space workers paused at Cape Canaveral to pay silent tribute Thursday to the seven astronauts who died two years ago in the fiery Challenger disaster. It was one of many remembrances around the country. Tour buses stopped, cafeteria lines halted and hundreds of engineers, technicians and other workers poured out of buildings at 11:38 a.m., the moment when Challenger lifted off on Jan. 28, 1986. Flags around the Kennedy Space Center were lowered to half staff, while workers stood silent for 73 seconds, the length of the fatal Challenger flight. The air was chilly, the sky clear, a grim reminder of the frigid conditions that contributed to the space shuttle's destruction. - Associated Press

Contra policy leaves legitimate questions

Unlike Ronald Reagan, who charmed the media during his campaign and early administration, George Bush has entered into an adversarial relationship with the press. The much-publicized confrontation with Dan Rather made it quite apparent that the Bush campaign is not the favorite cause of the CBS evening news. Likewise, Bush holds no great admiration for what he considers a liberal and slanted press.

Bush suffers from an image problem that in part stems from the often-repeated claim that he is a wimp. In faithfully serving a president as powerful and as colorful as Ronald Reagan, Bush has been typecast as a mild mannered assistant with neither the nerve nor the energy to implement policies of his own. However unfair this characterization might be, the general public is unaware of what influence Bush has or had in Reagan's cabinet. As vice president he has remained mostly invisible, and for this, a lack of presence is often associated with his name.

Bush claims that he is heckled by newspaper reporters and TV journalists who seek to destroy his presidential candidacy on the basis of a single controversial issue whose importance is past, namely, the Iran-Contra affair. Instead of answering questions on this topic he chooses to avoid them. For unknown reasons the issue of the Nicaraguan Contras touches a sore spot and is one that Bush prefers to avoid.

But questions concerning the Contras are not ones that he can choose to avoid - at least not while he remains a public official and presidential candidate.

For seven years now the United States government has sponsored the Contra war in Nicaragua. Despite the millions of dollars they have spent the Contras have failed to achieve any of their objectives. The war drags on and on. And George Bush has publicly said that he completely supports the Reagan policy. If he is to overcome the lack of presence associated with his name, dispel the claim that he is a wimp, and free himself from allegations of wrongdoing in the Iran-Contra affair, then he will have to answer some tough questions, ones such as the following.

Why have the Contras failed to lead the popular revolution that was to topple the Sandinista regime? Other than killing countless numbers of their countrymen and sabotaging public buildings and roads what have they accomplished in seven years of waging war? How many more people will need to be killed before the freedom they fight for is established?

Jim Carroll

If these questions seem too slanted and liberal perhaps the Central American question could be addressed simply in terms of cost effectiveness. The current $36 million that the White House seeks as continuing funds for the Contras is enough to keep them in business as a bandit army but not enough for any significant increase in strength. What purpose is served by funding an army that does not win?

The Central American policy is clearly foundering without leadership and without any clear, attainable objectives. Instead of dodging questions that might implicate himself in the Iran-Contra affair, George Bush should make clear how the Contras could ever even win. Either this or drop the Contra policy all together, which would be the best solution.

SMC library to try experiment with extended Sunday hours

By LISA MONTPETIT
News Staff

Students at Saint Mary's Cushwa-Leighton Library will soon have more time to study, thanks to an experimental increase in Sunday hours.

Beginning Jan. 31, the library will open at 11 a.m. instead of its usual opening at 1 p.m., said Sister Bernice Hollenhorst, library director. The extension of hours was approved because students expressed a need to use the library material and the reserve collection prior to 1 p.m. on Sundays, Hollenhorst said.

Students and other patrons will be asked to sign in and out and indicate their purpose for coming to the library before the usual opening time, in order to assess the results of the experiment, said Hollenhorst.

The results will be evaluated at the end of the semester and used to determine future Sunday hours, Hollenhorst said.

Julie Parrish, vice president of academic affairs and college relations feels that the trial period, which will run throughout the semester, is a "major accomplishment for Saint Mary's student government."

"Now that students have a trial period, they should use what was made available to them at their request," Parrish said, adding that "a change such as this does not happen very often."

Both Hollenhorst and Parrish said full cooperation of anyone who will be using the library during the two hours is needed in order for the experiment to be effective.

"If it's only to have the building open, then that is something else to look at because there are plenty of other places to study," she said.

Hollenhorst also said reference services provided by a member of the library faculty will be available from 1 to 9 p.m. and the lower level study lounge will be open 24 hours each day.

it would likely be one in a large city with a student body of around 25,000. Plans call for the screening to take place some time this spring, Koop said, and it would likely be part of a one-day open-air campus "gala" on AIDS prevention.

"The goal would be to test everybody in that university in such a way that it's done out in the open, above-board; everyone knows that the blood specimen is not in any way tagged," Koop said.

"That would give you a pretty good idea of the prevalence (of AIDS) in the age group in an urban setting," he added.

The incidence of acquired immune deficiency syndrome is highest among 20- to 24-year-olds, with male homosexuals and drug abusers among those most at risk.

AIDS is caused by a virus that damages the body's immune system, leaving victims susceptible to infections and cancer. It is spread most often through sexual contact, needles or syringes shared by drug abusers, infected blood or blood products, and from pregnant women to their offspring.

Blood tests can determine the presence of AIDS antibodies, indicating exposure to the virus.

Gary Hart attacks Democratic rivals

Associated Press

Gary Hart ridiculed his Democratic presidential rivals for misguided "old politics" and complained of endless scrutiny from the media Thursday, while a congressional investigator renewed the call for George Bush to tell all on arms to Iran.

Republican Pat Robertson, campaigning in Miami, a haven for Cuban exiles, suggested he'd back an armed resistance against Castro's Cuba.

Fighting sagging poll numbers, Hart raised the pitch of his criticism of fellow Democrats in an Iowa speech where he said they avoid specifics by repeating only vague phrases, chanting "Massachusetts miracle" and "presidential leadership" like mantra.

In Washington, House Iran-Contra Committee Chairman

Lee Hamilton, a Democrat, said the vice president's role in the sale of U.S. missiles to Iran "remains unclear" and will be an issue until Bush answers the questions that dog him.

"It seems to me it's a legitimate issue right now for the vice president to tell us exactly what his reservations were and how vigorously he expressed them," Hamilton said on CBS' "This Morning."

thousands of industries in state that have paid taxes - good, loyal corporate citizens - have been ignored," he said. "We need to pay more attention to them to have a healthier economy."

Daily said a college degree ensures greater opportunities for jobs in Indiana. "Because of the changing job market and because the training required to fit into the jobs of the future is much more extensive and demanding than ever before," Daily said, he is in favor of increasing financial aid to college students.

"We have to give as many people the opportunity to attend universities as we possibly can," said Daily, "so it makes sense to invest money in education."

Daily said he wants to "get into the schools" to talk to college students. "The student vote, historically, has been nonexistent. Usually college students don't get involved in the political process, especially in the governor race," said Daily.

But, he added, college students, without knowing it, influence opinion. "There's always a small core of activists that can play a major role in a campaign," he said.

He said it would be a mistake for any candidate to pass up the opportunity to speak to any college audience.

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. - Diners at the Snow Lion restaurant in Bloomington can taste authentic Tibetan food prepared by the nephew of that country's exiled spiritual leader, the Dalai Lama.

The Snow Lion Tibetan and Oriental Cuisine restaurant opened four months ago and is more than just a business to Jigme Norbu.

His heart is with the 6 million people of Tibet and the 100,000 others who were exiled to India after China overran his country in 1959.

Parking situation in dire straits

At the beginning of every school year students wishing to park their cars in the lots adjacent to campus pay a $25 fee. For this price one might expect a guaranteed spot in a safe and convenient location. Unfortunately this is not the case.

The student parking situation is bad and is growing worse. More students with cars this semester means substantial overcrowding in the designated student lots, an appalling lack of snow maintenance has made the lots slippery and often inaccessible, and inadequate security has made it clear that the automobiles left in these lots are at the mercy of thieves and vandals.

Overcrowding in the D-1 and D-6 lots makes it necessary for on-campus students to park either in the muddy trenches of Green Field or in far-removed regions near Senior Bar. Too many cars are assigned for too few spaces.

One solution to the overcrowding would be to expand the D-6 lot by using the empty field that lies adjacent.

Snow removal from all of the student lots is a service sorely in need of improvement. When students returned from Christmas break, D-1 and D-2 seemed not to have been cleared.

Those lucky enough not to be blocked in by heaps of snow must still fight their way through freezing pools of slush. More professional plowing and an improved system of drainage are needed. As for the icy hill that frequently prevents exits from D-6, a little salt and sand applied even occasionally would aid immensely in safety and easy access to the lot.

Snow removal is not the only problem in the parking lots. A quick glance at Security Beat columns shows an alarming number of reports of vandalism and break-ins. On Monday, The Observer reported three incidents involving break-ins or vandalism to student cars. Total damages were estimated at $550. Today's Security Beat column reports two more similar incidents involving $375 in further losses. We've come to expect that an incident of theft or vandalism will occur almost every day in the Notre Dame parking lots. The lighting in D-6 is poor, and while Security cars are seen patrolling the parking lots, there is obviously not enough of a presence by Security in the lots to deter people from committing these crimes.

P. O. Box Q

Language blurs lines of debate

Dear Editor:

Hacking through the dense jungle of Ann Pettifer's pettifogging ad hominems in her Dec. 10 letter (Really, Ms. Pettifer, a Stalinist I can take, but did you have to call me a "mossback?" Now my feelings are hurt), it soon became apparent to me that she entirely missed and obscured the point of my previous letter concerning Common Sense. Allow me to clarify, or rather to disperse your obfuscations.

My purpose in writing the letter was two-fold. First, I wanted to inform graduate students who might have been otherwise unaware (and since I wrote the letter I have learned there were many of these) that their money was supporting Common Sense, and there was something they could do about this. (Incidentally, for all those who asked, all you need do is journey to the Office of Student Accounts in the basement of the Administration Building and inform one of the personnel there that you do not wish to pay the optional graduate student fee.) This was a kind of public service announcement—a notification to friends and fellow students that they might be funding a publication for which they had considerable distaste.

Second, and more importantly, I intended the letter as an exhortation to the University community at large—an exhortation to get that community to consider whether a Catholic university should tolerate a publication which contains defamatory (note well) attacks on the Pope and the Church hierarchy. I did not have in mind dissent nor was I advocating censorship in, say, The Observer, where the reasoned articulation of views questioning the teachings of the Church are occasionally printed.

But your malicious, spiteful and unsupported remarks concerning the person of John Paul II, the vicar of Christ on earth, offend me greatly as a Catholic and offend standards of common decency. If there are enough individuals here who have the conviction to stand up for their Catholic faith, even when it is being pelted by the superficial fluff that adorns the pages of Common Sense, maybe something can be done about this.

Also, membership in the Mystical

Body of Christ is slightly more important than U.S. citizenship.

Democrats lack new alternatives

Dear Editor:

In the January 19 Observer, our resident Democrats, Messrs. Kronenburger, Schadek and Sophy complain that to their dismay they have received few responses to their strange, "liberal onslaughts." Well, if you insist....

I use the word "strange" for three reasons. Strange, first, because I notice that our local Democratic propagandists are sounding familiar themes - Reagan as anti-peace, anti-prosperity, and anti-poor. In other words, so far all we have heard is a rerun of the 1980 and 1984 presidential campaigns. Not only does this show a lack of imagination, but it also implies a latent masochism in our Democratic friends. Didn't the lessons pounded into Mr. Carter and Mr. Mondale by the American people rub off?

Strange, secondly, because of the rather desperate tankering with statistics. Democrats ignore the improvements engendered by Mr. Reagan's all-to-infrequent injections of the free-market economies into the American system. Deregulation of airlines and gasoline prices, as well as tax cuts, have reduced inflation and unemployment significantly. In the last twelve months, industrial production rose 5.3 percent, while total manufacturing jobs are up a solid 249,000. But Democrats have always had a rather selective memory.

Strange, finally, because these Democrats exhibit the same symptoms of a disease afflicting Democrats nationally—the lack of new alternatives. Our Democratic opponents here at ND have gleefully attacked the Reagan administration twice now. But they have NOT told us why, especially based on past performance, anyone should vote Democratic. Could it be that our friends are silent on this point because, indeed, Democrats have no new ideas? Time will tell, but don't hold your breath.

The Revue: all in fun

MARK PANKOWSKI and MIKE NAUGHTON
accent writers

Yes, Thursday night's Keenan Revue did have jokes about "fat chicks."

It also had jokes about Mark Stevenson's alleged extracurricular activities, Tim Brown's towel, University Food Services, Stanford Hall's "Studs," Tim Brown's towel, St. Michael's Laundry, off-campus parties, Tim Brown's towel, Crimestoppers, "Queen" Laurie Bink, John Goldrick, and Tim Brown's towel.

And nearly every one of them worked.

In addition to the usual array of slams, barbs and jibes, there were several instrumental numbers that demonstrated the immense talent of Keenan students.

Clearly, Thursday night's three-and-a-half hour show was a success. Though some acts ran a little long, the 1988 Revue left the standing-room-only crowd wanting more.

The best act was saved for last: SMC Side Story. The musical featured Paul A. Kane, Daniel A. Izzo, Dave McMonagle, Steve Traubert, Kevin Keim, Michael Peeney, Michael Zoltan Ury, Greg Wagner and Chris Barnabo. This undoubtedly was the act that required the most work. The songs, which parodied those from "West Side Story," were well written and well sung.

Mr. Olympia was a simpler skit, but it nearly brought the house down. Tom "Stick" Shaw courageously got on stage, displayed his physique and "outflexed" Notre Dame football players Anthony Johnson and Rod West to the delight of the audience.

Notre Dame flanker and Heisman Trophy winner Tim Brown was hit three times with Just When You Thought It Was Safe. . . . The three skits, interspersed throughout the Revue, featured Trey Dodson, John Hamill, Jim Mazurek, Steve Shemwell. We only hope Tim can laugh about the towel incident as much as Thursday night's audience.

Off-Campus Party hit home for anyone whose ever attended a party at CampusView Apartments. And one of the best skits was a short but sweet parody of a familiar commercial, General Foods International Coffees.

Two other "commercials," however, Less Filling, Tastes Great and Smickers Satisfies, took old jokes and made them older with unoriginal shots at Notre Dame and Saint Mary's women.

While short-skits helped the Revue maintain a fast pace, some of the longer acts bogged down.

Despite their promising premises, Donahue, SMC Trek, Peewee Hickey's Dining Hall, Midgets at ND, Crimestoppers - It Works! and A Day at the Superhero Academy failed to really go anywhere. The students who played Donahue and Peewee, however, were good enough to rescue their skits from boring the audience.

Good Math With Dr. Ruth Westhyperbola may have been too clever for its own good. Although George Cannon did a fantastic impression of Dr. Ruth, the skit seemed to elicit more uncomfortable laughs than genuine ones with its sexual innuendos.

The great majority of the acts, however, were very entertaining.

Some of the most impressive were the musical interludes between the comedy acts. Annie's Song, performed by J.J. McCabe Noble Levesque and Mark Sanders was a union of music and sign language that moved the audience. Hiroshima Mon Amour added a more artistic element to the show with a synthesis of music and a video. The original compositions Across the River and Midsummer's Daydream, showed both skill and ability by their artists.

Other acts were entertaining primarily because of their originality. The ND Voodoo Sumo Wrestlers, Formal Dating . . . With a Tuba and Stopping by the Woods on a Snowy Evening all explored the outer limits of humor.

In the two of the more humorous skits, University Food Services was chewed up in Vat Chu Vant, and the men's laundry service was wrung out in St. Michael's Does Your Laundry.

Stand-up comedy is difficult but Dan Izzo proved to be up to the task with a well-delivered and well-received act. Another entertaining one-man skit was Dramatic Reading, an act in which Rich Pokorny presented a deliberately overdone reading of the song, "Shake Your Love."

The "Zambini Brothers" were back again this year with The Farewell Victory Tour of the Flying Zambini Brothers. They're still silly enough to remain one of the biggest crowd pleasers.

Familiar musical tunes were altered to successfully lampoon campus life. Cindy the Smicker chronicled the social life of a Saint Mary's student. "John Goldrick" and his henchmen sang Screw Miser, a modified version of the tune "Heat Miser" from the Christmas special, "A Year Without Santa Claus." And the Stanford Studs sang a song of narcissism and dubious sexual preference.

All in all, the show was once again an incredible display of talent and energy. The show was nearly perfect technically despite many scenery and lighting changes, and the sound was generally good.

It just goes to show that some of the best things in life really are free.

The Keenan Revue continues tonight and Saturday night at 7:30.

...meanwhile, St. Ed's players get 'Odd'

MARY BURGER
Accent Writer

As the song goes, breaking up is hard to do, and thanks to the St. Edward's Hall Players, now we know that it's often funny, too.

The Players, under the guise of Junior Duane DiFranco, entertained a crowd of 125 last night in Washington Hall with their rendition of Neil Simon's "The Odd Couple."

Although director DiFranco had said earlier that this production would probably not leave the audience "rolling in the aisles," it was obvious that the Keenan Revue was not the only place to go for some good laughs and some good insight last night.

The production did not get a quick start out of the blocks, but when Oscar, played by Sophomore Tim Flood, brought out the warm coke and brown and green sandwiches, he also brought on the laughs.

Clad in khaki pants, sneakers, t-shirt, and baseball cap, Oscar sprayed his buddies with beer, weasled money out of them, and was just plain entertaining.

According to DiFranco's note in the program, Simon is one of the "most prolific comedic writers of our time." True, much of the success of this show is due to the excellent script filled with hilarious one-liners. Credit must be given, though, to DiFranco for his extraordinary efforts in putting the production on and in leading the Players.

As an entirely student-run project, the Players did a professional job. For instance, when a prop flub occurred involving a telephone, the actors did not get flustered. Another outstanding part of the production was the superb set designed by Charles Maher and constructed chiefly by Pat Murphy. Immediately upon entering the theater, it was obvious the set was solid and professional.

The direction and the acting in general were all very well done. Senior Andy Barlow was convincing in his portrayal of the depressed neat freak, Felix Ungar, and he had some of the best facial and body gestures of the group. My neck kinked when he got a nerve twitch in his and one of the funniest scenes was during the disastrous double date when Felix is struggling to carry on a conversation with the two giggly "cuckoo Pigeon sisters" (Robin Dvorak and Shawna Rheäume) from England. He gets swallowed into an easy chair and squirms in it from then on, pleading for Oscar to bring the drinks and rescue him from the horrendous job of conversing with the two women.

"The Odd Couple" is about relationships. Friendships, romantic involvements, and poker-buddy bonds are all examined. We see the caring side of Felix's friends when he wants to commit suicide, we see the best friend role fully played when Oscar invites Felix to live with him since he has separated with his wife, we see the love and devotion Felix and Oscar both have for their wives and children, even though they cannot live with them and be families any longer.

It was amusing to see Felix throwing all of the classic "female" lines at Oscar for being late for their date and not calling: "If you knew you were going to be late, why didn't you call? Were you so busy you couldn't even pick up a phone? Oh, you were working were you, down at a bar?" Heck, Felix had spent the day "slaving" over dinner for the big date and what did Oscar really care anyway?

By this time, Felix and Oscar have obviously fallen into ruts and roles which are keeping their friendship from flourishing. What Simon, DiFranco, and the Players hope is that we see ourselves in these characters and learn a little bit about ourselves and how we handle relationships. As DiFranco says in his program note, "while you're laughing at Oscar, Felix, and all of their friends, look twice. You may find that you have been laughing at yourself!"

So, if you are looking for another good laugh this weekend, and you think your roommate, friend, or romantic involvement is tough to get along with or get through to, be sure to make a date to find out if you really are an odd couple.

Felix receives some consolation in the St. Ed's Hall Players version of "The Odd Couple."

Hockey gets KSU rematch

By STEVE MEGARGEE
Sports Writer

Kent State is the only school the Notre Dame hockey team has played and failed to defeat this season.

But the Irish get their chance to change that this weekend in a rematch with their American Collegiate Hockey Association rival. Faceoff at the JACC is set for 7:30 on Friday and Saturday nights.

In the second series of the season on Nov. 6-7, the Irish took a trip to Kent State and stumbled back home with a pair of ties. Several defensive lapses by Notre Dame and a potent Kent State offense led to a 5-5 deadlock in the first game and a 6-6 draw in the second one.

"We might have been fortunate to come away with two ties last time, but we're a much better team now," said Schafer. "We're going to work on our penalty-killing. They burned us pretty well that last time."

In the series at Kent, eight of the 11 Kent State goals came on the power play. All six of the Golden Flashes' goals in the second game were results of a man-advantage situation.

The Irish have made great strides in the penalty-killing department since that time. For the season, Notre Dame has stopped the opposition on the power play 83 percent of the time.

Notre Dame has been on a tear since the series at Kent, winning eight straight and 16 of their last 17 on their way to a 17-2-2 season record. For the Golden Flashes, the story has not been quite the same.

Kent State lost six of eight games following the first series with the Irish. Since then, the Flashes have won six of their last 10 games, but still have a record of only 10-17-3.

Notre Dame has won by having a strong defense to complement its powerful offense. Led by senior captain McNeill (18 goals, 30 assists), Guay (21, 12) and Mooney (9, 24), the Irish have scored 6.3 goals a game.

While much of the scoring has come from the front line (McNeill, Guay, Mooney) and the second line of forwards (Tim Kuehl, Brian Montgomery, Matt Hanzel), Schafer has shown much satisfaction with the recent play of the third line.

"Bob Bilton's line with Bob Herber and either Tommy Smith or Frank O'Brien - they've been really unnoticed at times and not gotten enough credit," said Schafer.

"There's a lot of attention put on the top two lines, but we wouldn't be successful without the contributions of everyone on the team."

'Skins aim to outscore Elway

Associated Press

SAN DIEGO - Richie Petitbon answered the question with the patience of someone who has been listening for more than 30 years in pro football. "No," said Washington's defensive coordinator, he didn't expect the Redskins would get the eight sacks on Denver's John Elway in Sunday's Super Bowl that they got on Minnesota's Wade Wilson in the NFC championship game.

"I don't mean to say this the wrong way," Petitbon said. "Wade Wilson's a good quarterback. But he's not in the same class with John Elway."

Thus the questions: How can the Redskins keep Elway from dodging and dancing and putting up somewhere between 27 and 40 points, as he has done almost all season? In shorthand, how do you play D on the E?

The answer: You don't. You try to outscore him.

"You know going in that he's going to be on the move," said Charles Mann, who with Dexter Manley presents Elway with as quick a defensive end tandem as he has faced in his five NFL seasons.

"We know for sure that our tongues are going to be hanging out chasing him."

Washington has been working hard at it.

Players described Wednesday's workout as one of the hardest-hitting ever.

taining Maryland Tuesday night. But this week one of the biggest contests to take place at the Joyce Center since its renaming takes place Wednesday night at 7:30 when the women's basketball team plays host to fourth-ranked Tennessee.

The defending national champion Lady Volunteers are currently sporting a 15-2 record (one of the losses was to top-ranked Texas) pending a game at SEC foe Georgia. As for Notre Dame, the 12-5 Irish are off to their best start since the 1982-83 season. For the game against Tennessee, Notre Dame will be trying to break its attendance record of 3,420 set in 1983 against, ironically, then-defending national champion Louisiana Tech. Be part of the event at the Joyce Center, 7:30, Wednesday night. As always, admission is free to students with their student ID.

Eddie Sutton, but they have been playing well of late.

Sutton says the game against the Irish should be fun for his squad.

"It should just be an outstanding college basketball game," says Sutton (405-142 overall, 63-17 at Kentucky). "It will actually be a welcome relief for us to play a non-conference game."

For Notre Dame, it will be more of a test. After defeating Kansas and Butler, Phelps is taking a wait-and-see attitude on how his team can make up for suspended forward Mark Stevenson's scoring in a big game.

"We're going to have to do certain things in the game to find out who can do it and who can't do it and make the adjustments as the game goes on," Phelps says. "We don't know yet."

Sutton, who is president of the National Association of Basketball Coaches, has some vivid memories of his association with Phelps, who is on the NABC Board of Directors.

The first time the two coaches faced each other in the 1971-72 season, Sutton was at Creighton and Phelps was in his first season at Notre Dame. Creighton crushed the Irish 104-77.

"We've become pretty good friends since then" says Sutton. "We teamed up at the 1978 Final Four. We both felt it was senseless to play a third-place game. We ended up playing each other (Sutton was then with Arkansas) and before the game we discussed pulling our teams off the floor to show the NCAA how we felt.

"As it turns out, we put on a great game."

In that game, Arkansas guard Ron Brewer hit a jumper at the buzzer to give the Razorbacks a 71-69 win.

Phelps also had the tournament on his mind when talking about the game, but he was speaking of the future, not the past.

"This is the midpoint of season when you're looking to see how good you are and what you can do on the road, because that's what the tournament is going to be like," he says.

gram, I would have changed my decision to come here."

In a team meeting last Monday Lindenfeld told the players of the decision.

"Telling us in January makes it really late to transfer," said freshman back Patty Ahearne. "(The Athletic Department) did not warn us at all. I thought it was very deceptive. I feel that they did not put us in mind at all."

Both Bundens and Ahearne said they would consider transferring from Notre Dame as a result of the decision.

"I'm just devastated for the girls," said Lindenfeld. "We have nine freshmen on the team - what are they to do?" Lindenfeld noted that the team will have a meeting Monday to determine if it wants to go to club status.

An official statement has not come from the Athletic Department, but a press conference on the subject is expected to be held today or in the near future.

The decision corresponds with the promotion of three women's club sports to varsity level and Notre Dame's entrance into the Midwestern Collegiate Conference for all non-revenue sports next school year. According to conference commissioner Jim Shaffer, the MCC will sponsor six women's sports in 1988-89: basketball, cross country, softball, swimming, tennis and volleyball.

Out of the eight schools forming the conference, only Saint Louis has a varsity field hockey team. Seven out of eight schools participate in softball, however, as only Xavier does not have a varsity team.

Women's soccer is not a conference-sponsored sport, but according to conference commissioner Jim Shaffer, "some interest has been expressed by a couple of schools to start that as a women's conference sport."

Currently Dayton and Xavier field varsity soccer teams.

In women's golf only Evansville and Xavier have varsity squads.

A member of the 1980 U.S. Olympic field hockey team, Lindenfeld came to Notre Dame in 1984. In four seasons she compiled a 62-41-19 record.

Lindenfeld said she has been offered a full-time teaching position in the physical education department. But as far as field hockey goes, she is not sure of the future.

"Notre Dame is a great place to work," she said, "but it won't be the same without coaching. I don't think there's another job as worthwhile as coaching."

"I will probably coach at some field hockey camps this summer. I used to officiate - maybe I can get back into that. I don't know yet."

The decision to drop field hockey comes on the heels of Purdue's decision to do the same.

According to Dr. Carol Mertler, associate athletic director at the school, the question of whether or not to keep field hockey arose in 1984 when the school was looking to add softball to its varsity sports.

The time to decide came when head coach Nancy Cross resigned in December to take another job in the University.

"We thought that if we were going to go through with the process of finding a new coach, we had better make a decision on the program at that time. All of this happened concurrently," she said.

So, despite having the equivalent of eight full scholarships (11 in-state and 6 out-of-state), the field hockey team was dropped. All the players currently on scholarship will keep them if they choose to stay.

"It's a very emotional thing for a rational decision," said Mertler.

McCann gives Irish the edge in National Catholics

By STEVE MEGARGEE
Sports Writer

To say Notre Dame wrestling coach Fran McCann is confident going into this weekend's National Catholic Tournament at Cleveland might be an understatement.

"We'll be the best team there," said the fourth-year head coach. "I don't want to overlook it, but it's the type of meet we should dominate, and the kids are going into it like it's a must-win."

Notre Dame won the National Catholic in 1986, but failed to defend the title last year. John Carroll won last year's championship and hosts this year's event.

But the three wrestlers who won individual championships last year for John Carroll all have graduated. Notre Dame did not lose any of their individual winners to graduation. That, plus a freshman class rated the 10th best in the country by Amateur Wrestling News, makes the Irish prohibitive favorites to win this year's National Catholic.

One of the freshmen expected to do big things for Notre Dame this weekend is 158-pound Mark Gerardi. The frosh from El Cajon, Cal., has surprised even himself in jumping out to a 19-5 individual record in the early part of his first season.

"I expected I'd take my lumps and lose a few times," said Gerardi. "I didn't expect to come in and kill people. I'm happy with the way I've done."

The only "lump" Gerardi has taken this season has been an injury suffered in the team's winter trip to Colorado. Due to the lack of depth on the team, Gerardi has continued to wrestle, and win, with the injury, a bruised rib or separated cartilage in the bone.

"In the practice before Air Force I hurt it, then I hurt it again back in practice here," said Gerardi. "The doctor said it was a slight separation on the cartilage."

"Todd Tomazic was hurt also with his collarbone, and I pretty much had to wrestle. We couldn't afford to forfeit those weight classes. Between my weight class and Todd's, there were only three of us, so I had to wrestle."

"I knew him in high school, and when I came on a recruiting trip he was here also," said Gerardi. "I didn't know for sure he was coming here, but I had an idea he would. I never wrestled him in high school, but I knew him from wrestling tournaments and stuff like that."

While Tomazic has been sidelined for much of the year with his collarbone injury, McCann has been more than pleased with the performance of Gerardi. Mention Gerardi to the Irish head coach, and the word "composure" is soon to follow.

That composure is a result of over 10 years of wrestling experience. Mark started to wrestle when he was seven years old. His brother started at the same time, and went on to wrestle at Cal-State Fullerton.

Mark became the third person in history to win three state championships at California.

"We knew he had tremendous ability, but the biggest thing that concerned us was that he wasn't the most physical person in the world," said McCann. "He's got so many ways to offset his lack of strength, like his speed, quickness, intelligence and just all-around athletic ability."

"I think he has the ability to place in the NCAA's this season as a freshman. We thought he was one of the best guys coming in, and he hasn't done anything to prove us wrong."

Free throws hurt Belles in loss

By HEATHER ATKINSON
Sports Writer

The Saint Mary's basketball team was defeated by Goshen Tuesday night by a 57-55 score in a well-fought battle.

Although it controlled the tempo and did not allow Goshen to gain a significant lead, Saint Mary's was unable to make its free throws to win the game. The Belles shot 48 percent from the field, but only hit 1-of-9 from the line.

"Our field-goal shooting was one of the best of the year," said Head Coach Marvin Wood, "but our free-throw percentage made the difference."

The game was tied throughout, with either team leading only by a few points at times.

"We played one of our best games of the year and it was close all the way," said Wood. "Goshen is one of the top teams in the NIAI. They provided good competition and we stayed with them."

Leading 28-26 at the half, Saint Mary's held the lead until the final three minutes. With only 29 seconds remaining, Goshen hit two free throws to win the game.

Linda Garrett contributed 14 points and pulled down 10 rebounds for a season high.

The next game for the Belles is Tuesday at St. Francis.

The Notre Dame field hockey team will be dropped from varsity status beginning with the 1988-89 school year, Assistant Athletic Director Brian Boulac confirmed Thursday.

According to field hockey head coach Jill Lindenfeld, Boulac and Athletic Director Dick Rosenthal informed her of the decision Jan. 19. In a subsequent meeting with Boulac, he gave Lindenfeld the reasoning behind the move.

"They're adding sports with scholarships (women's soccer and softball) and they said they need money for that," said Lindenfeld. "It was either go all the way with field hockey scholarships (the team did not have any), or drop it, and because the other two sports are more popular, they chose to drop it."

Lindenfeld admitted that field hockey was on the downswing in the Midwest. Purdue, whose field hockey program included eight full scholarships, decided to drop its program last month. In fact no high school in the state of Indiana has a field hockey program.

The decision to drop the program hit the team hard.

"I can't believe it happened," said freshman forward Amy Bundens. "If I would have known that they were going to drop the pro-

ND faces ninth-ranked 'Cats on Super Sunday in Louisville

By RICK RIETBROCK
Assistant Sports Editor

LOUISVILLE, Ky. - The ninth-ranked Kentucky Wildcats' chances of winning the Southeastern Conference definitely were hurt by Wednesday night's 83-66 loss to Vanderbilt. But the loss may make putting away the wounded Wildcats an even tougher assignment for Notre Dame when the Irish travel to Louisville's Freedom Hall to take on Kentucky Sunday at 1:30 p.m. (televised nationally by ABC).

Notre Dame head coach Digger Phelps says the loss doesn't affect his view of the 13-3 Wildcats.

"The loss to Vanderbilt is in no way indicative of how Kentucky can play," says Phelps. "You just have to respect the talent they have, because they're due to explode. You just know Kentucky will be at its best Sunday."

Kentucky at its best is quite a challenging task. The guard tandem of sophomore Rex Chapman and senior Ed Davender is one of the nation's best.

Chapman was last year's SEC "Freshman of the Year" as he became the first Wildcat rookie ever to lead the team in scoring. He leads Kentucky in scoring again this year with 18.4 ppg. and is second in assists with 57.

Davender is a fine defender, who also scores 16 ppg. and leads the team with 59 assists.

If the Wildcats have trouble from the outside, they can go inside to a front line packed with wide-bodies.

Senior forward Winston Bennett (6-7, 210 pounds) has returned after missing last season to have reconstructive knee surgery. He is second on the team in scoring (16.2), and leads the Wildcats with 8.4 rebounds per game.

Other Wildcats who will spend time filling the lane include center Rob Lock (6-11, 225), who scores 11.2 ppg., and adds sevens boards, 6-7, 230-pound senior Richard 'Master Blaster' Madison (4.2 ppg., 4.6 rpg.) and 6-9, 205-pound senior Cedric Jenkins.

A pair of heralded freshmen also contribute for the Wildcats. LeRon Ellis (6-11, 225), the son of former NBA great LeRoy Ellis, was California's Player of the Year and 6-6, 205-pound swingman Eric Manuel was Georgia's Player of the Year. Both have been somewhat disappointing so far, according to Kentucky coach

Limelight means athletes must shine

When the story of Mark Stevenson's latest troubles broke early this week, one comment about his arrest for underage drinking was, "how many other students were cited for the same offense that weekend."

The point is well-taken. Like it or not, underage drinking is as much a part of college life as, well, college basketball. It happens. Look at the number of minors cited at Lee's Ribs last year. There is, however, a difference between Stevenson's case and the Lee's case, aside from the fact that Stevenson had been arrested once before this season.

Those students aren't in the limelight that a basketball player at a major university is.

That may not be fair, but that's the way it goes. People, especially children, look up to athletes. While growing up in the Atlantic Coast Conference area, my friends and I were always Phil Ford, David Thompson or, since we live in Charlottesville, Va., Wally Walker when we played games.

No matter where you grew up, you more than likely played out a scenario like "three seconds to go, Ford launches one from the corner, it's good! Carolina wins!" Well, the same thing goes on now, only with the names changed to Rivers, Voce and Stevenson.

While it may be an unfair burden to put on someone between the ages of 18 and 22, athletes have some responsibility as role models. That question came up at the NCAA Tournament last year when drug testing was almost more of an issue than the games themselves, and in the wake of the death of Maryland all-American Len Bias.

"Maybe in sports we can be the example," said Irish head coach Digger Phelps when questioned on the issue. "(Drug testing) has got to let people know that there are enough role models out there that have not weakened to that type of lifestyle."

While that may apply to the drug issue, it also illustrates the point that athletes, the idols of children, have to live up to that. Again, that's a tough mantle to thrust upon a 19-20 year-old college student, but consider this:

Last Saturday, after Notre Dame had upset Kansas, a reporter stood in the Irish lockerroom, wanting to get a few more words with David Rivers. The reporter found himself second in line to talk to Rivers. Ahead of him was an old man with his grandchildren, one who appeared high school age and another who was much younger. They were asking Rivers to sign their game programs which bore a picture of him on the cover.

While Rivers signed the younger boy's program, the boy looked up with an awed look on his face. It wasn't the first time in almost two years of covering the Irish that the reporter had witnessed a similar scene. He knew it wouldn't be the last.

On a less lofty note in college basketball, the grades are in on which school had the best early recruiting period. The Irish, who got commitments from 6-9 LaPhonso Ellis, 6-11 John Tower and 6-1 Elmer Bennett, have come out very well. Many of the columnists in the January issue of Basketball Times ranked how schools finished in the early period. Here's a run down of how the Irish finished: Dick Vitale- eighth (Georgetown and Alonzo Mourning were first), Dick Weiss- sixth (Georgetown), Van Coleman- third (Syracuse).
