Doyle and Viz will battle in run-off election

Berger finishes in third

By ERIC M. BERGAMO
Senior Staff Reporter

Tom Doyle and Steve Viz will face each other in a Thursday run-off election for student body president, Ombudsman election officials said Tuesday night.

ND/SMC ELECTIONS 88

Doyle and his running mate Mike Paese garnered 1,041 votes or 26.4 percent of the total vote, Viz and running-mate Chris Boron received 698 votes or 17.7 percent.

Finishing third was the ticket of Mary Berger and Mike Carigan with 601 votes for 15.2 percent.

Further back was Michael Keegan and Laurin Dodd with 398 votes; Bill Pelino and Dana Togden with 397 votes; Ellen Nichols and David Lese with 338 votes; Christopher Johnson and Joe Shank with 222 votes; Chris Rado and Russell Hines with 160 votes; and Matt Micros and Pat Sheehan with 93 votes.

Because none of the tickets received over 50 percent of the vote, a run-off will take place Thursday between the Doyle and Viz tickets. Each ticket is allowed to campaign for a period of 24 hours following the announcement of the results, OBUD official Jim Grace said.

The tickets will not be allocated any more funds for the for the run-off, Grace added.

A total of 3,948 votes were cast in this election, compared

The student body presidential ticket of Tom Doyle and Mike Paese will not be penalized for an Observer classified ad endorsing them, even though the ad ran after the official campaigning period, said Jim Grace, Ombudsman co-director.

"There was no violation," Grace said. "(Doyle) and Paese have been cleared."

The person who entered the ad "is not affiliated with the campaign," said Ombudsman's other co-director John Wilson. "They can't control the whole campus. People are allowed to say what they want," he said.

The ad ran Tuesday, after Monday's midnight deadline

Bush, Dukakis win N.H. primary

Associated Press

CONCORD, N.H. - Vice President George Bush defeated Sen. Bob Dole in New Hampshire's kick-off presidential primary Tuesday, dramatically regaining his footing in the Republican race for the White House. Michael Dukakis won handily in the Democratic struggle for supremacy and survival.

Dukakis relegated Rep. Richard Gephardt and Sen. Paul Simon to scrap for second place and said his New England win would "give us a very, very strong boost" going into the delegate-rich southern primaries just ahead.

Bush, rebounding smartly from his third place finish in the Iowa caucuses last week, ended Dole's dream of taking early control over the GOP campaign. Dole blamed his loss on inaccurate attacks by the Bush forces on oil import fees and taxes.

"This is one step along the road," Dole said. "It makes the climb a little steeper, but it doesn't make it impossible. I feel that had we won, it would have been spectacular. We almost won. That's good."

Gephardt led Simon in their tense duel for Democratic runner-up behind Dukakis. CBS projected that Gephardt

New grade changes approved by council

By MARK PANKOWSKI
Managing Editor

Notre Dame's Academic Council voted Tuesday to add "B+," "C+" and "C-" marks to the University's grading system beginning in the fall.

The council also agreed to several principles that will shape Notre Dame's future academic calendars, said Dean Daniel Winicur, University registrar.

The principles, which also will take effect in the fall, include changing the Wednesday before Thanksgiving from a half class day to a full day, Winicur said.

The council, composed of faculty, administrators and students, voted "overwhelmingly" to change the current grading system, Winicur said.

Under the new system, a "B+" will carry a 3.33 grade point, while an "A-" will be bumped from a 3.5 to a 3.67 grade point, Winicur said. A similar division will be made for the "C+" and "B-" grades. A "C-" will carry a 1.67 grade point.

There will be no "A+," "D+" or "D-" grades, he said.

The change in the grading system will not affect grades earned in the past, Winicur said.

"It will be as if you've started new with the new system," Winicur said. "We're not changing history."

Students' transcripts will show grades earned under both the old and new grading systems, Winicur said. Transcripts will also carry an explanation of the old and new systems.

The change will not affect the grade point average needed to

Runoff for District 3; other races are final

By JIM RILEY
News Editor

Mark Chapman and Matt Thiel will face each other in a run-off election Thursday after each received less than 50 percent of the votes in the three-way District 3 race.

In a close contest, Thiel won 393 votes (42.9 percent) to Chapman's 390 votes (42.6 percent). Maeve O'Donovan finished third with 133 votes (14.5 percent).

Pat Kiernan won in District 1 with 636 votes to 369 for Billy Joel. The district includes Keenan and Stanford Halls, and several South Quad dorms.

According to unofficial results, Mary Feliz defeated Tom Ehrhardt in District 2, which includes five North Quad dorms.

Forget fasting, fellas: Meatless meals are mean

Lunchtime, thank Heavens. That nap I took from 11:15 to 12:05 in Cushing sure put me in the mood for a good meal. Oh, well, the Dining Hall will have to do.

I trudge through the residual snow and slush from Cushing to that bastion of haute cuisine, South Dining Hall. Pick up The Observer for some diversionary reading (hm, I see I'm in East Rutherford, N.J., today). As usual, the line's slower than a thoroughbred on crutches. Let's see what's on the menu for today.

Cheese and Vegetarian Pizza (pass), Garden Vegetable Quiche (where else do you grow vegetables?) and Blueberry Pancakes. Did I miss something by being on the back page for so long? Did Bill Hickey rescind his threat to cancel all special meals and declare today Vegetarian Victory Day?

This line's still not going anywhere. I wonder what epicurean epitomes await my palate at dinner. Three Cheese Croissant (one is not enough), Catfish with Tartar Sauce (do y'all know what a catfish eats?), Pasta Bar (I'll have a Rotini and Coke) and Stuffed Shells (for almost four years now I've been trying to figure out what they're stuffed with).

Now it hits me. Yesterday was Mardi Gras (I can tell by the hangover). That means today is the official start of Lent. That means 40 days of University Food Service deciding that those of us with meal plans won't be eating any meat on Fridays. Thank you, Food Service, my Jiminy Cricket just died, and I was looking for a new outside conscience.

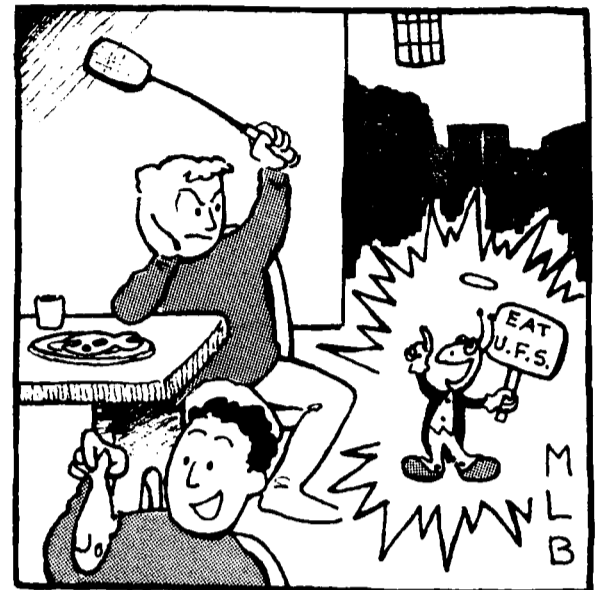

I won't even bring up the argument that this blatantly discriminates against the minority of non-Catholics at this University. That point is usually rebutted by that ever-so-intelligent-and-witty comment, "If you don't like it, you didn't have to come here." As if the food around here was the major factor in anyone's decision to attend Notre Dame (if it was, I don't think there'd be too many people here right now).

Yes, I understand the sacrifice behind going meatless. I choose not to sacrifice meat. Hey, stone me. I don't see the theological significance of eating a bacon double cheeseburger on Friday. To say that eating a cheeseburger is somehow sinful, is (excuse me, father, for I'm about to sin) to me absurd.

It is not Food Service's place to decide what I should give up for Lent. If I want meat on Friday, then that option should be available. Every other night, they have that 'Fast Fare' option which is usually something edible. Why not serve sandwiches or burgers there on Friday? That way, everyone is satisfied, those who choose to follow the Churches proscriptions and those blasphemers like me.

I hear a reply right now, "Why don't you just go off-campus or to the Huddle?" My answer is, why should I? I've already paid for one meal on my meal plan. Why should I be forced into a situation where I have to pay twice to eat once?

Unfortunately, that's the only option open to me. No more going out on Friday nights. I have to save my pennies to eat because of yet another example of that most famous of all Notre Dame traditions, in loco parentis, which to me is just plumb loco.

Well, enjoy your meal. We sinners are on our way to McDonald's.

More bar raids likely in future, say police

By CHRIS BEDNARSKI
News Editor

South Bend bars and taverns can expect more raids in the near future, similar to the one at Tivoli's, said St. Joseph County Sheriff Joseph Nagy Tuesday.

"I think if we continue to get the intelligence information," Nagy said, "we will continue to make more busts in our area for underage drinking."

"There's quite a bit of information that either we or the state excise or state police has developed," he said. "Now we just need to sit down and see how much of it is actual fact and what is not."

Nagy said although Tuesday's raid netted only four tickets for underage drinking, he was happy with its results. "We sent a message to people who sell to underage drinkers that we will and are watching them," Nagy said.

"We did expect more (underage drinkers) in the place," he said.

However, Nagy said, Tivoli's patrons knew about the raid in advance. The customers received a tip at about 9:30 p.m., he said. Although about 30 police officers were briefed in the Joyce ACC before the raid, he said the tip was not from a Notre Dame student or administrator.

All 500 of the bar's patrons were checked for I.D., Nagy said. None of the four cited for underage drinking were Notre Dame or Saint Mary's students. Six were arrested for disorderly conduct including Notre Dame law student Shannon Hough.

Nagy said Tivoli's was chosen because of intelligence information police had developed over the last two or three months.

This information comes from parent's complaints and "sending in officers to certain places and absorbing" information, he said.

Wariness can stop date rape

By REGIS COCCIA
Assistant News Editor

Date rape among college students affects both men and women, on and off-campus. One in four college women will experience sexual assault or attempted assault, according to research by Mary Koss, a professor of psychology at Kent State University.

Koss spoke Tuesday night at Saint Mary's on the results of a survey of more than 6,000 students at 32 colleges and universities she conducted in 1984 in collaboration with Ms. magazine. Her lecture was sponsored by C.A.R.E., the Campus Alliance for Rape Elimination, a group of students and administrators from five area colleges.

The statistics of date rape are startling. More than 84 percent of college women said they knew the man who raped them and 57 percent of the offenders were dates, Koss said.

One way to solve the problem of rape to change men's attitudes toward sex, said Koss.

"I really think that men have an important role to play in this," Koss said. "The best way men can help is to counteract the 'scoring' mentality. You can't just stand around when others (talk about 'doing it'). Being part of the solution means to have the courage to stand up and to hope that we can stop this."

Alcohol can also be a large factor in date rape, Koss said, adding that it can reduce inhibitions and increase aggressive behavior. "You would still have date rape if you took away alcohol, it just wouldn't be as big of a problem," she said.

Koss said her research revealed that college men share common views about sexual intercourse. "Men tend to say, 'How do I know that this no means no?' Men get the idea that women like to get roughed up during sex. (Research showed) the major emotion that men felt (after forced intercourse) was pride. They felt they scored," said Koss.

"Most people think that date rape is something less than rape, that it isn't really rape," said Koss. "There are no differences. As far as psychology is concerned, the hurt is the same."

Koss said the largest risk factor in date rape is dating. "I don't say stop dating. The appropriate way to deter it is to be wary," she said.

"Appropriate wariness means asking yourself, 'Do I want to be in an isolated place with this guy?'" said Koss. "You can't blame yourself if you make a mistake, but you can be wary."

But Koss warned against putting unnecessary blame on women. "You can't put women in a 'Catch-22' situation. The way we dress is part of socialization," she said. "We're forced to toe the fine line between looking seductive and attractive, but not to go too far," Koss said, adding that society tends to dwell on the actions of the rape victim.

"Rape victims will tell you that they made their non-consent clear, that they used force in trying to resist and when they finally realized that (their attacker) was not going to stop, the major emotion they felt was fear," Koss said. "The fears of rape do not go away until after one and a half years, but anxiety outlasts them all," Koss said, citing research on the subject.

"You should always have the right to say no."

Tyson joins council; Sibs weekend back

By BRADLEY GALKO
Staff Reporter

Change was the dominant theme as Student Body President Pat Cooke brought this year's first meeting of the Campus Life Council (CLC) to order Tuesday.

The first change Cooke proposed was to have future meetings of the CLC co-chaired by the student body president and the vice president for Student Affairs, presently Father David Tyson, rather than the student body president alone. Cooke said this proposal was for the sake of continuity.

"Presently, the leadership of the council changes over from year to year," he said. "As a result, the CLC has not functioned in the same capacity any two consecutive years," he added. He explained that the existence of a non-changing co-chairman such as Tyson "would offer the continuity necessary to make this body (CLC) successful."

Tyson was removed from the CLC in the fall of 1985, said Cooke, because his presence was believed by some former council members to inhibit creative discussion among other council members. John Goldrick, associate vice president for residence life, told the council he did not think this would be a problem this year, sighting Father Hesburgh's former work with the Academic Council as a parallel example which worked without any conflicts.

The second change proposed by Cooke was that an executive committee be formed consisting of one rector, one faculty member, one senator, and Goldrick, which would be chaired by the student body president. Cooke said the executive committee "will screen all business as well as generate business for the CLC agenda." Presently the agenda is set exclusively by the student body president.

"By providing an executive committee for the council," said Cooke, "rectors, faculty, and students will all have input in formulating the agenda." The idea was well received by all committee members.

Cooke said both changes would be implemented on a trial basis and, if successful, "the (CLC) by-laws will be amended," to accommodate them permanently.

The next order of business was a proposal to add Sophomore Sibs Weekend to the annual calendar of campus events. Laurie Hollenbeck presented the proposal. She said the weekend of April 15-17 would be the best weekend for the event since it is during the Senior Formal in Chicago. This would lessen any overcrowding the siblings might cause and there would most likely not be any SYR's that weekend she explained.

She also said the number of sophomores allowed to participate would be limited to 100. She stressed that the limited number would allow more opportunities for the smaller group than for a larger group of students and their siblings. She also added the siblings from 100 people could vary, but still not exceed an unreasonable number.

Goldrick and Cooke lauded the limit, sighting the immense overcrowding on campus that the event caused in 1982. Goldrick also told the committee that the number could be expanded, much as JPW has the past 15 years, without a great deal of bureaucracy by working through the appropriate people in the administration.

The proposal was unanimously approved and Cooke set the next meeting for March 2 at 3:30 p.m.

The CLC is composed of student senators, faculty members, hall rectors, Cooke, and Goldrick. It must present all its approved legislation to Tyson who has the power to veto them, implement them, or present them to the Board of Trustees, if necessary.

With 56 percent of the precincts reporting, Bush had 37 percent of the vote, compared to 28 percent for Dole. Former Delaware Gov. Rep. Jack Kemp had 13 percent to lead Pete du Pont and former television evangelist Pat Robertson in the third-place competition to emerge as a conservative alternative to the front-runners. Du Pont had 12 percent and Robertson 10.

Dukakis, capitalizing on ten years as governor in next-door Massachusetts, had 33 percent of the Democratic vote, ahead of Gephardt with 22 percent and Simon with 17 percent.

Sen. Albert Gore Jr. and Jesse

Jackson, hoping for a boost as the primary campaign moves South, led the rest of the pack with 8 percent of the vote. Former Arizona Gov. Bruce Babbitt had 5 percent and was a candidate for withdrawal, as was one-time front-runner Gary Hart, who had 4 percent.

Dukakis sought every last ounce of momentum his showing could gain, appearing on CBS' evening news program even before the polls closed. "I think this is a very strong message about the future," he said. "It's about which of us has the strength, the values to lead this country into the future."

Dole, speaking as the numbers turned against him, said, "I think it depends on what the spread is... if it is very close I don't think that it means that much."

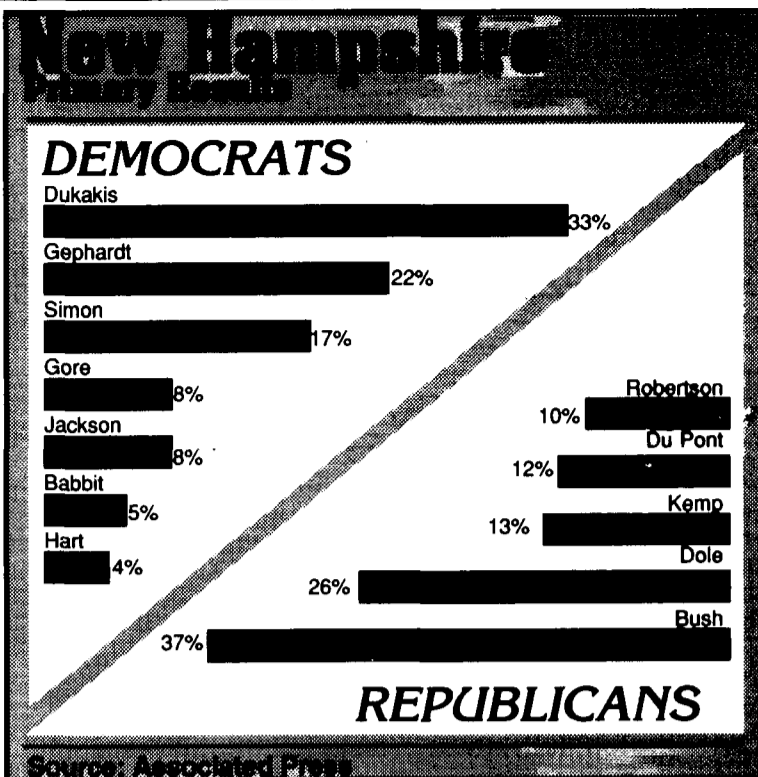

Earlier he'd said: "If it hadn't been for the distortion of my positions on tax increases and an oil import fee, I'd be 10 points ahead." The vice president portrayed Dole all last week as an advocate of an oil import fee and likely to cave in to pressures for a tax increase.

Dole's campaign manager, Bill Brock, reminded reporters of a post-Iowa surge in which the Kansas senator erased most of Bush's lead.

"We were down more than 20 points eight days ago and to have come this close is a tremendous commentary on Bob Dole," he said.

Babbitt, a candidate for withdrawal on the Democratic side, said he would spend the next few days meeting with supporters in Washington before making a decision on his campaign.

HPC vote favors Student Business Board's 'business'

By DAN MURPHY
New staff

The Hall Presidents' Council voted in favor of an amendment to create a Student Business Board which will assume the Student Union Board's job of overseeing student businesses.

The new board's purpose is to "provide commercial services to the Notre Dame community in a fair and competitive manner" according to the amendment, presented by Brian Holst, District 1 student senator. Student Body President Pat Cooke said, "the new system will allow for a complete check on what is going on in the businesses. The Cellar, Irish Gardens and Adworks are the three businesses that will be controlled by the Student Business Board."

Two additional amendments proposed by Holst and Cooke were rejected by the HPC. The first proposed the addition of a student senator to the Student Union Board Steering Committee.

The second planned to alter student government's amendment procedure, allowing the senate to adopt an amendment by a three-quarters vote without a consent of the HPC. Defending the second proposal, Holst said, "No one is trying to pull anything over anyone, we're just trying to eliminate bureaucracy."

The Gong Show is slated for March 29, according to sophomore Betsy Joseph. She told the HPC that the show is looking for acts and will benefit St. Hedwig's Outreach Program. "If it's ridiculously stupid we want it," said Joseph.

Another show, the Keenan Rebuttal, will hold tryouts March 5, said Kathleen Maglicic, president of Breen-Phillips Hall. She stressed the need for acts for the show.

A King and Queen of the Irish will be elected during a week of "St. Patrick's Day events" according to Brian Reilly, next year's Student Union Board Manager. Reilly told each hall president to "nominate one person who best exemplifies the spirit of the hall." During the week of Feb. 29 students will vote for their favorite candidate in Lafortune Student Center, and on March 2 nominees will compete in various events at Theodore's.

The Board will donate money to an AIDS fund started by Meyerhofer, a foreign language professor at the College.

The fund will be used to help pay the funeral and medical expenses of Richie Teders, a thirteen-year-old boy whose immunity system battled virus for three years before his death on Jan. 9. Meyerhofer learned of Teder's death from the boy's godfather who belongs to the professor's church.

Teder contracted AIDS after receiving a blood transfusion infected with the virus for a car accident in 1982.

Also, a new committee was created to critique and make suggestions about the food served in SAGA, said Eileen Hetterich, student body president, who explained that Marie VonFeldt, residence director of Holy Cross Hall, made the proposal.

The seven or eight-person committee will include one hall director, a resident advisor, one representative from each hall, and a representative from student government.

The committee will meet once a month for dinner in SAGA with Paul Bakker, food service director, and Ann Bonifas, a SAGA manager.

The first meeting will be run by Bakker and Bonifas, but in the future they want the students to conduct the meetings.

In other business, Election Commissioner Frances Thompson asked fellow council members to write down questions to ask the candidates on Monday night, Feb. 22.

Thompson signed up members to work the polls at SAGA on election day, Wednesday, Feb. 24.

Because there are six tickets running, Thompson said she thinks that a run-off on Feb. 26 is inevitable.

Co-ed housing works in London

Over 95 percent of the colleges and universities in the United States offer their students co-ed housing; Notre Dame does not. Most, if not all, of the top 25 schools offer co-ed housing; Notre Dame does not. Most of the better Catholic institutions, including Holy Cross, Boston College and Georgetown offer co-ed housing; Notre Dame does not. With just about every other significant school in the country offering co-ed housing, why has Notre Dame just now begun to consider testing the idea?

Ah, but wait! As a matter of fact Notre Dame actually offers co-ed housing, though you have to travel quite a way to find it (no, not Turtle Creek). As a member of the Arts and Letters London Program, I live in a co-ed dorm. Like the arrangements at many other schools, including Boston College and Harvard, our dorm has single sex floors: the second and fourth are female, the third and fifth male. We use the same stairs, soda machines, telephones, lounges, bathrooms and (gasp!) showers. Co-ed living only extends so far, however, co-ed showering is not permitted (du Lac, you know).

I have been here for a couple of weeks now, and I have yet to witness any rapid decline in the moral fiber of my fellow residents. Contrary to the opinion of the administration, co-ed housing does not degenerate into a house full of drunken orgies. Before this semester, I firmly believed in the value and advantages of co-ed living. After just a few weeks of co-ed living, I am further convinced of the unlimited benefits of co-ed housing.

First of all, co-ed housing prepares students for the real world better than single sex housing. After all, single sex condos and apartment buildings are opened about as often as Golden Domes are built at Notre Dame. Single sex dorms are simply unnatural. We have lived in co-ed housing for the most part of the first 18 years of our lives. After we graduate from school, most of us will return to a co-ed situation. Why does the administration disrupt this arrangement?

The creation of co-ed housing can only strengthen the so-called "Notre Dame Community." By bringing men and women closer, one creates a closer, more balanced community. Our "community" in London is closer than the single sex "communities" on campus. By sharing a common home, men and women learn how to respect and appreciate each other. Any worthwhile community cannot tolerate segregation. Whether by race, creed or even sex, segregation limits the interaction of people. Interaction, especially at a university, enhances education.

Co-ed housing will improve the personal relationships between men and women. In our co-ed situation in London, men and women meet as friends sharing a common living experience rather than "pick-up artists" sharing a common "scope." Presently, opportunities for men and women to meet socially at Notre Dame are severely limited. Too often, these meetings are restricted to loud, drunken fests: "Hi, what's your name? Where are you from? What's your major? Wanna come up to my room and see my stamp collection (wink, wink, nudge, nudge)?"

We are all adults at Notre Dame and should be treated as such. We are old enough to understand the responsibility and maturity which accompanies co-ed housing. For many years, the London program has proven this postulate.

The administration should stop dragging its collective rosary beads and give students the option of co-ed housing. The tests have been completed in London. Although the situation over here is a bit different, it still serves as a valid test of co-ed housing. In fact, as far as we are from campus, it may well have served as an even better test. If students in London haven't abused the privilege of co-ed housing in eight years, I find it hard to believe on-campus students would abuse it under the shadow of the dome. The co-ed option could be implemented in time for the fall of 1989. Judging by the speed in which Howard was gelded last year, it should be quite a simple procedure. After all, they would only have to remove half of the urinals this time. Tom Varnum is a junior English major studying in London and is a regular Viewpoint columnist.

P.O. Box Q

Apartheid forum to be held today

Dear Editor:

Today St. Edward's, Farley and Zahm Halls will be hosting a discussion and film about apartheid at 7:30 p.m. in the Zahm Hall basement. The film will be "Children of Apartheid," a documentary that previously was aired on television. After the film a discussion will be directed by a few members of the Anti-Apartheid Network.

This activity is an attempt by each of the three halls to foster awareness in its residents and in the student body. With recent Viewpoint columns about apartheid and the general state of the informed, or uninformed, students on campus, we feel this discussion is serving a dual purpose.

Apartheid is a hot topic on this campus today. There are many people in our community who understand what it means and how it affects the lives of millions of South Africans; however, there are many people who lack details on the topic. The forum that will be presented is a great opportunity to learn something about apartheid and to make an attempt at understanding it. This is one example of an education program run by the Anti-Apartheid Network.

One of the goals of the dorms is to foster an environment of social awareness. An education should not be limited to the classroom, it should be extended to social consciousness and understanding. An opportunity is provided at this discussion to make one's self more informed and to experience an alternate form of education.

At the heart of the program we are pushing our dorm's participation, but we would like to invite the entire campus to attend. Too often, students get caught up in their own worlds with the pressure of exams, papers and studying; they lose sight of the real world. Take advantage of this chance and other channels to become informed. All members of the community are welcomed and encouraged to participate.

Opus Dei ties need considering

Dear Editor:

Graduate student Thomas D'Andrea is, of course, entitled to use the columns of The Observer to attack the content of the monthly publication Common Sense, and to register his displeasure with the Graduate Student Union for providing it with some modest funding. However, in assessing his criticism, people in the Notre Dame community should be aware that Mr. D'Andrea is associated with the organization Opus Dei.

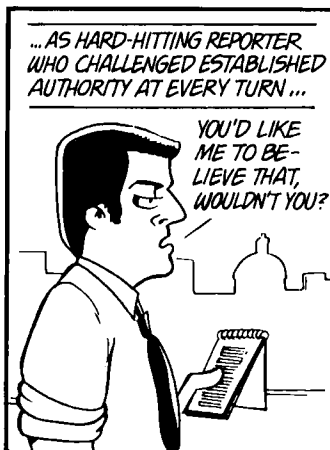

It is surprising how few Catholics know anything about Opus Dei or its history. The movement was born in the 1930s in the context of Spanish fascist politics. It continues to betray its fascist origins in its obsessive emphasis on an autocratic hierarchy and on a monarchical papacy. High on its agenda is the elimination of anything that smacks of openness and consultation in the Church. Secrecy is its modus operandi—in this respect it resembles Freemasonry. Opus Dei is fiercely hostile to any attempt to flush it out into the open.

During the pontificate of John XXIII and the heyday of the Second Vatican Council, this shadowy organization was obliged to lie low and to bide its time until a more sympathetic pope turned up. Writing in a recent issue of the National Catholic Reporter, journalist Penny Lernoux said that the hand of Opus Dei could be detected in the firing of Jesuit Father Pedro Lamet from his post as director of the Spanish Catholic weekly Vida Nueva. Lamet had been accused of "publishing articles critical of the conservative trend in the Church." He had also "earned the enmity" of Opus Dei through publicizing its maneuvers inside the Vatican.

Mr. D'Andrea is being disingenuous when he says he is not advocating censorship. His letter bristles with frustration at the University's commitment to free speech. Perhaps he should consider transferring to a more controlled milieu; the Gregorian in Rome might be just his cup of tea.

Being 'halfway to 40' sinks in

I had a horrible revelation this weekend. It came as I was stumbling home from a party over the sludgy, muddy mess that is Green Field. It had been a particularly brutal evening, and my mind was wandering as it's apt to do after Kris: Everything went great even though I'm still not sure what I'm going to do with my life. Whatever I'm doing sure is fun though. And it pays great!

Sasha: I'm so glad for you, dear. Guess where we're going for dinner.

Kris Murphy

slightly too much bad beer. Anyway, I was stepping from slush puddle to slush puddle when I suddenly sank up to my ankles in mud. That's when it hit me: "Hey buddy, you're 20 years old. That's halfway to 40."

Ka-boom! Instant sobriety. I don't know why sinking up to my ankles in mud made me think of being halfway to 40, but the implications aren't too good.

I tried to imagine myself at 40. Couldn't do it. It just wouldn't happen. I hope I make some progress in the next 20 years, but I had this horrible vision of me reaching that mid-life crisis in the sky and acting just like I do now. It went something like this:

(Kris Murphy, 40 years old, comes home after work and is greeted by his wife of ten years, Sasha.)

Kris: Hi honey, I'm home!

Sasha: Why, hello dear. (They kiss.) How was your day?

Kris: Dinner? Didn't you make a beer run yet?

Sasha: Beer run? What's a beer run, darling?

Kris: C'mon Sasha, you know what a beer run is. I left some money on the kitchen table, and I figured you'd go out to the liquor store and pick up a few cases of Old Milwaukee. I left it up to you because I couldn't find my ID.

Sasha: Darling, I don't know what you're talking about.

We've got plenty of liquor in the liquor cabinet, and I have no idea what we'd do with "a few CASES" of beer. Also, you're a 40-year-old man. You haven't been carded in years.

Kris: Oh yeah. But Sasha, if we don't get some beer, there's no way we'll be able to do any serious pounding before we go out.

Sasha: Kris, I was planning to take you out tonight. I thought we'd go to that wonderful German restaurant you like so much, and I never

I dreamed you'd have to "pound" beer before you went out with your wife.

Kris: Well that's OK. I guess we don't really have to pound. But hey, instead of going out to eat, let's go to the bars instead.

Sasha: Kris, what is wrong with you? What about the children?

Kris: Sasha, you know I love the kids, but if they want to come with us, they'll have to get some IDs. They're real harsh on minors around here. Maybe we can borrow that neighbor kid's driver's license....

Sasha: Kris! You have two children. They're only 3 and 4 years old!

Kris: See what I mean? There's no way they'll get in without some really excellent IDs.

Sasha: Aaagh! That's not what I mean, love of my life!

Three-year-old children don't go to bars!

Kris: Well, what about the 4-year-old? He's a tough little bugger, and I think it's about time my son and I did something fun together.

Sasha: You've got to be kidding.

Kris: Sweetness, for heaven's sake! It's Friday night! Are we just going to sit around all night and stare into space? Look, if you don't want to pound beers and you don't want to go to the bars, maybe we can go to a concert.

Sasha: Finally! The man I married speaks! How about the Bach recital downtown?

Kris: Bach? Uh ... I was thinking more along the lines of Whitesnake. Their big reunion tour is in town tonight, and I figured we could put on leather and....

Sasha: Aaaaaaaagggggghhhh!

Kris: OK, OK, you hate Whitesnake. I admit they're kind of lame. Let's dress in black and listen to my old Smiths albums instead. You look great in black anyway. Then, maybe after that, we can get the kid and hit the bars.

Sasha: Yaaaaah! I don't want to listen to Smiths records, I don't want to go to the bars, and I don't, I repeat, I DON'T want to pound beers! What happened to the man I love? Oh Lord, I need a valium!

Kris: Whoa. What a drag ... like, mega bad scene.... (Kris and Sasha's 4-year-old son Nigel appears and speaks to Kris.)

Nigel: Daddy? (He pulls at his father's coat.) What's wrong with Mom?

Kris: I don't know, son. I offered to take her out, and she spazzed. Hey son, how would you like to go with Daddy to the Whitesnake concert?

'Star Trek: The Next Generation' takes off

ERIC M. BERGAMO
accent writer

Going "where no one has gone before" is proving to be pretty popular this television season.

"Star Trek: The Next Generation" (Fridays at midnight on WSJV, Ch. 28) is the story of the radically new starship Enterprise and her crew 85 years after the 5-year mission chronicled in the original "Star Trek."

Nothing could measure up to the original with Kirk, Spock and the rest who went on to four successful movies. Right? Guess again.

Considering the weak slate of new shows the networks have put up (including "thirtysomething," ABC's yup-scale answer to "St. Elsewhere"), "Star Trek: The Next Generation" is far and away the best new program of the season and more than matches the original.

Continuity is one way "Star Trek: The Next Generation" has succeeded. Paramount, who produced the original "Trek" and the four movies, has made sure that many of the same "behind the scenes" people are working on the new show.

Most important of these people is Gene Roddenberry who created "Star Trek" for NBC in 1966 and was the show's executive producer. He fills that same role for "Star Trek: The Next Generation" and brings the same vision and philosophy to the new show that he did to the original.

Others who have been involved with both series are producer Robert H. Justman, writer and script consultant David Gerold (he wrote the classic "Trouble With Tribbles" episode), writer D.C. Fontana and costumer William Ware Theiss. If Paramount hadn't cared about producing a quality project, they wouldn't have taken the trouble to get the original team together.

But the new look of this next generation is also distinct. Most obvious are the sharper look of the "new" Enterprise and the improved special effects which are 100 times better than the shaky and, at times, silly effects of the original. Industrial Light and Magic, who handled the effects for the "Star Wars" movies, has done a fantastic job of producing movie-like effects for a television show.

And with the new look has come a new crew. Roddenberry was smart in creating new characters that weren't copies of the characters in the original.

The new commander is Capt. Jean-Luc Picard (Patrick Stewart), whose character is more strongly defined than William Shatner's James Kirk. Jonathan Frakes is his second-in-command, Cmdr. William Riker, who is more impulsive than Picard.

There is some romantic interest between Picard and chief medical officer Dr. Beverly Crusher (Gates McFadden) which could lead to some interesting stories later in the season. Crusher has a teenage son, Wesley (Wil Wheaton of "Stand By Me") accompanying her.

Also along for the voyage is Lt. Geordi La Forge (LeVar Burton of "Roots" fame) who is blind, but is able to "see" with a device that looks like something given out at a Student Union Board event. And Marina Sirtis plays Deanna Troi, a half-human, half-Betazoid counselor who can communicate through telepathy.

There is also a Klingon navigator, Lt. Worf (Michael Dorn) on board. (The Federation is now at peace with the Klingons.) Denise Crosby, Bing's daughter, plays the chief of security, Lt. Cmdr. Tasha Yar.

The one character who will probably gain the cult status that Spock held is Commander Data (Brett Spiner). An android who knows just about everything in the universe and lets everyone know so, he looks as if he's suffering from a terminal case of jaundice.

The portrayals are, for the most part, on the mark and competent. The exceptions are Spiner, who has a field day playing Data, and Stewart, bringing a cool and collected interpretation of his Picard.

The stories are typical of the original "Trek" - entertaining mixes of action and humor that deliver a message to the audience.

One problem that could be corrected is the production of episodes that too closely resemble episodes from the original. This was acceptable in the beginning of the series when the show wanted to attract "Star Trek" fans. Now, however, the "Next Generation" writers should be striking out towards new ideas.

Early upsets are the rule as men's IH playoffs begin

By CHRIS PAULISON
Sports Writer

While the Irish basketball team anxiously awaits a ticket to the NCAA tournament, six teams in men's Interhall basketball are currently attempting to capitalize on their post-season invitations.

Stanford A-1 and Morrissey, both undefeated in regular season play, were awarded for their efforts with free passes to the second round of the playoffs. Holy Cross and Keenan joined this pair in the winners bracket with upset victories over Sorin and Stanford A-2, respectively.

In defeating the Studs 66-62, Keenan pulled out their third win in as many outings. Overcoming a slow start early on in the season, Keenan now sports an impressive 5-2 record. While concentration might have been directed to the production of the Revue as the team struggled early, Keenan has been providing most of their entertainment these days on the hardwood. Junior forward Tom Dywer realizes the road ahead will not be easy though, as the Keenanites encounter a formidable Morrissey squad in their next engagement.

The Holy Cross Hogs utilized strong performances by 6'6" junior center Tim Woods and 6'4" forward Mike McCleary, in never relinquishing the lead they held from the opening whistle. Senior guard John Sheehan commented on what this five-point victory over Sorin meant to his team.

Because the tournament is one of double-elimination, the first-round losers will continue playoff competition in the loser's bracket. Defending champions, Sorin, and Stanford A-2, both with their backs to the wall, will square off tonight.

Eight teams are currently vying for the crown given to the League's B division champion on March 6. Sorin B had little trouble keeping its undefeated status intact, as the Otters downed Flanner in a laughter Monday night. It took a controversial call and an eighteen foot buzzer shot by Bobby Rasta, for the O.C. Whitesnakes to do away with a persistent Dillon team. With the win, the Whitesnakes earned the right to challenge Sorin B Tuesday night.

Two more Off-Campus teams joined this pair in the winner's bracket. O.C. Madison Ave. remained the other undefeated team in the B division, mauling Grace by a wide margin. The Off-Campus team, skippered by Mike Szymanski, victimized Cavanaugh B, making a date with Madison Ave. set for Tuesday.

Men's Interhall basketball playoffs are underway and upsets have been the rule thus far. Chris Paulison has the details at left.

PW remains undefeated in women's IH basketball

By ROBERT MITCHELL
Sports Writer

As the women's Interhall basketball league approaches its regular season conclusion, a heated battle for playoff spots is being waged. So far this season, the key word is parity. No team has been able to take hold of first place and pull away from the pack. In fact, there are six teams in contention for four playoff positions. It has truly come down to crunch time as the next two weeks will decide the playoff participants. At this time, the first two positions belong to Pasquerilla West and Lyons, but from there on, it is anybody's guess.

Pasquerilla West possesses the only perfect record at 6-0, having yet to play Farley and Howard. In their most recent action, PW defeated Breen Phillips, 39-29. This contest was highlighted by the outstanding play of Pandora Fecko and Cathy Kronenberger. This duo enabled PW to extend and maintain their halftime lead. Breen Phillips (4-2), one of the six contenders, was lead by Cynthia Duckien who poured in eleven points. Another good effort was put forth for BP by Ann Curoc, who scored nine points in one half of play.

Lyons, the second place team, has an impressive record of 6-1. Their sole defeat was at the hands of PW. On Sunday night, Lyons found themselves on the hot seat trying to ward off Farley (2-4). Lyons nipped Farley 34-32. Their victory was keyed by clutch free throw shooting. Lyons, which led the majority of the game, was the recipient of a fourth quarter surge by Farley that just fell short of handing Lyons a shocking loss. Captain Debbie Niichel attributes her team's success to its cohesiveness.

"Nobody really stands out, we play together as a team and so far it has worked out well," said Niichel.

In other competition, Lewis, the defending champion, was the receiver of the weekly bye. They sport a 4-2 record and are led by Sue Lipa and Cindy Averdo. Breen Phillips and Walsh are the two remaining teams on their schedule.

This weekend, Walsh posted their first victory of the season by conquering Pasquerilla East (3-4). Walsh's record is 1-5.

MOUNT ALLAN, Alberta - Switzerland's peerless Pirmin Zurbriggen took a major step toward his second gold medal of the Winter Olympics on Tuesday by winning the downhill portion of the men's combined by nearly a half-second.

Results of the downhill will be coupled with those of a slalom on Wednesday to determine a combined champion.

The combined is returning to the Olympics after a 40-year absence. Since 1982 the combined, with separate downhill and slalom races, has been contested in the World Alpine Championships.

Zurbriggen, who overtook teammate Peter Mueller to win the regular men's downhill on Monday, was timed in 1 minute, 46.90 seconds in the combined race. It was held on the same course as Monday's race, but was shortened by moving the start down the hill by about 200 yards.

Franck Piccard of France, the bronze medalist in the regular downhill, was second in 1:47.38, and Felix Belczyk of Canada was third in 1:48.24.

Steven Lee of Australia was tentatively listed in third place at 1:47.39, but he was later disqualified for missing a gate.

Luxembourg's Marc Girardelli, one of the favorites for the combined title, did not start the downhill. The official reason for his absence was given as a sore elbow stemming from an injury in a downhill fall at Leukerbad, Switzerland, last month. Girardelli said his elbow was still causing him problems when he pushes off at the starting gate.

But the headstrong, sometimes petulant Girardelli may have had another reason for not racing. He reportedly is embroiled in a dispute with his ski manufacturer over preparation of his equipment for Monday's downhill.

The wrestling team took a decisive victory from Olivet yesterday. Chris Kiley has the wrapup of the dual meet win below.

Irish wrestlers thrash Olivet 38-7

By CHRIS KILEY
Sports Writer

It's all in a day's work. That is what the Notre Dame wrestlers must have thought as they rolled past the Olivet Comets in a methodical 38-7 victory last night in the Joyce ACC Pit. The Comets were no match for the Irish, who won eight of ten matches, two by pin, and two by technical fall. The victory put the Irish back on the winning track after two disappointing losses against Michigan and Ohio State. "We wrestled well," said Irish Head Coach Fran

McCann. "However, we lacked intensity. I guess that is because we came into the match expecting to win." Jerry Durso and Mark Gerardi recorded pins and Ron Wisniewski and Chris Geneser followed suit with technical falls. The Irish now set their sights on the three remaining dual meets and then the NCAA Regional Tournament at Notre Dame on March 4-5. "If we wrestle hard our remaining matches, I think we can be the number two team in the Regionals," said McCann. "Northern Iowa will definitely be number one. Right now they are in the top five in the nation." McCann feels optimistic about the Irish chances for NCAA Tournament qualifiers. "I think we can have six kids in the Nationals," said McCann. "Gerardi could be the number one seed in the Regionals, based on his upsets. Layton also has a decent chance if he continues to wrestle well." The 6-4 Irish will face Central Michigan on the road Friday before traveling to Indiana University on Sunday.

OSU jockeys for NCAA bid

Associated Press

CHICAGO -Big Ten basketball coaches said Tuesday they think at least five and probably six conference teams should be picked for the NCAA tournament, and that two other schools have a shot at the NIT. "It depends on Ohio State, I believe. Five should go for sure and we can make a case for six because Ohio State belongs in the NCAA Tournament," said Michigan Coach Bill Frieder. But Ohio State's Gary Williams said his team's standing was still unresolved. "We have to win some games coming up to be considered. If we don't then we shouldn't be considered," Williams said. Last year, six Big Ten teams, including Ohio State, got NCAA berths. The Buckeyes beat Kentucky and then lost to Georgetown by 3 points, while Indiana, which had shared the league crown with Purdue, went all the way to win the national title. This season, Ohio State, 13-8 overall, is tied at 6-5 in the conference with 16-8 Illinois and 14-7 Indiana.

The Big Ten's top three teams -Purdue, Michigan and Iowa -appear shoo-ins for the NCAA tournament. "I'd like to see all 10 of them going," joked Wisconsin's Steve Yoder, whose Badgers, 3-8 in the conference and 9-12 overall, are in a battle with Minnesota, Michigan State and Northwestern at the bottom of the Big Ten standings. "We might be a longshot to get into the NIT," said Clem Haskins of Minnesota, 9-12 overall. "I think Michigan State might also get into the NIT." The Spartans are 8-13. The NCAA announces its selections March 13. The competition begins March 17 and the title game set for April 4. The Big Ten team with the best chance at the NCAA title this season appears to be the Boilermakers, ranked No. 2 in the nation behind Temple. Purdue, 10-1 in the league and 21-2 overall, is coming off another impressive win, a 73-66 victory Monday night at Iowa, to stay one game ahead of Michigan and three in front of the Hawkeyes in the conference race. "I think Purdue is going to be very difficult to catch," said Illinois Coach Lou Henson. But Frieder thinks his Michigan team might do it. "If we keep winning into the last week of the season, we'll be in position going into the Purdue game with a chance at the title," he said of the March 5 showdown between the Boilermakers and Wolverines at Purdue.

D.C. star, Bias fan suffers similar fate

Associated Press

FORESTVILLE, Md. -A suburban Washington, D.C. high school on Tuesday mourned the death of football star Rico Leroy Marshall -a senior who idolized Len Bias and faced an athletic career just as promising until apparent involvement with drugs took him to the same end as his hero. Many students at Forestville High School were in tears on their first day of school since Marshall's death Saturday.

Marshall's family continued to deny their son was involved in drugs, despite the story of a girlfriend who said that hours before he died he told her he had swallowed six chunks of crack to hide them from police -and despite his arrest in December for possession with intent to distribute cocaine.

Marshall, 18, appeared to have everything going for him. A record-setting running back, he signed a letter of intent last Wednesday to attend the University of South Carolina. The next night he won a school talent contest for his singing. "I can't believe that he was involved with drugs," said his mother, Carolyn Marshall. "If it comes down to the stories being true, it will really shock me. It will really devastate all of us." Toxicology tests to determine the cause of death were expected to be complete by Friday. The Marshalls live in the Glenarden Apartments, in a notorious drug dealing area of the county. But his family said he wasn't a part of the trafficking that surrounded him. "He hated it here," said his mother in an interview with the Prince George's Journal. "He knew a couple of little guys around here who are into drugs and he tried to get them to straighten up." Marshall's bedroom is decorated with his football jersey, dozens of trophies and newspaper clippings highlighting his athletic career. A Time magazine cover of Len Bias with the headline "The death of the dream" is among the posters on his wall. "He met Len Bias before, and when he died it tested him so bad," a friend Rodney Simms, 19, said of Marshall. "He just couldn't understand how it could happen." Bias, a basketball star from the University of Maryland died June 19, 1986, from cocaine intoxication two days after signing to play with the Boston Celtics. Simms said if Marshall did have drugs and saw police coming he might have panicked. "If he had something like that he knew he couldn't get caught with it," said Simms. According to police reports, Marshall's girlfriend, Belinda Hill, said Marshall picked her up at 2:15 a.m. Saturday and told her he had swallowed the drugs when he saw two uniformed police officers approaching him about an hour earlier on a street known for drug transactions. Although the police stopped Marshall, they did not arrest him. On Dec. 22, at the same location, police said they arrested Marshall. A minor at the time, he was charged with possession with intent to distribute cocaine after police found 29 grams of the cocaine derivative crack on him in 66 plastic bags. Police sources, quoted by the Journal, said he was released to the custody of his parents after receiving a reprimand and probation from a community arbitrator in the Juvenile Services Unit. His father, Leroy Marshall, denies knowing about the arrest. Forestville High School principal Paul Lewis said Tuesday he wished he had known.

U.S. hockey team hopeful after loss to Czechoslovakia

Associated Press

CALGARY, Alberta -The U.S. hockey team is right where it expected to be, if not where it wants to be, in the Winter Olympics.

"We figured to be one-and-one at this point," said public relations director Mike Schroeder as the U.S. team prepared to play the second-seeded Soviet Union Wednesday night. "Looking at the schedule long-range, it appears now that West Germany will be our most important game."

That game will be Sunday and it could determine whether the Americans reach the six-team medal round.

The U.S. team began Olympic play with a 10-6 victory over Austria last Saturday, as expected, and lost to Czechoslovakia 7-5 Monday night, which was also expected. The Czechoslovaks are seeded third in the Olympics and the United States is No. 7.

If form follows in this tournament, the Americans should lose to the second-seeded Soviets Wednesday night and beat No. 10 Norway on Friday night.

That would give them a 2-2 record and force them to beat No. 6 West Germany to have any chance for a place in the medal round. The West Germans are 2-0 so far after a surprising victory over Czechoslovakia on opening day and a triumph over Norway.

But even if the Americans defeat West Germany next Sunday, nothing is guaranteed for them under the complicated Olympic system. The top three teams in each pool advance after the five-game round robin, but one of the determining factors could be the score of the U.S.-West Germany game. At this point, the Americans have to beat the West Germans by two goals.

The American players have taken note of all the games that have gone against form in this tournament.

"The Swiss weren't supposed to beat the Finns and the Germans weren't supposed to beat the Czechs," said Corey Millen, the scoring leader of the U.S. team. "Hockey's a funny game."

And the Polish team wasn't supposed to give Canada a tough time before losing 1-0 and tying top-seeded Sweden 1-1, either.

"There's a lot of parity in this tournament," said Art Berglund, the general manager of the U.S. team. "People don't realize how many good hockey teams there are in this year's Olympics. They can all skate well."

Like many of the American players, goaltender Mike Richter figured his team would be 1-1 after the first two games. But when the Americans jumped to an early 3-0 lead against the Czechs Monday night, he wasn't thinking "1-1" anymore. Then, he was thinking "2-0."

"Any time you're up with a lead like that (3-0 after 6:08 of the first period), it really hurts to lose it," Richter said.

If he was upset by the loss, U.S. coach Dave Peterson didn't show it.

Asked how the team would react against the Soviets after such a "crushing" loss, Peterson responded sharply.

"It's not crushing," he said. "Those are your words, not mine. It was really only a one-goal loss (to the Czechs). They got an empty-net goal at the end. It was a disappointing loss because we lost the lead, but not the end of the world."

Rutgers

"It was game in which many things went the way we wanted in terms of pace and tempo," Littlepage said. "We wanted to keep it a halfcourt game. Our nemesis -our inability to make shots -hurt us because we didn't make good shots. We just couldn't put it down when we had to."

Rutgers was lead by Tom Savage's 18. Steve Watson had 14 off the bench, and Anthony Duckett added 13.

IRISH ITEMS -The win was the first in six attempts for the Irish in the Meadowlands. "It never entered my mind when they made their run at us," Phelps joked when asked about breaking the jinx. . .In the first game of the doubleheader, Seton Hall downed St. Peter's 79-70 behind 23 points from John Morton and 20 from Mark Bryant.

ND women to take their show on the road

By THERESA KELLY
Sports Writer

You can't take it with you. Especially when 'it' is the home-court advantage.

The Notre Dame women's basketball team will put its 15-6 record on the line as it takes to the road tonight against Cleveland State.

Five of the six Irish losses have come in their 11 road games this season, with the only home loss at the hands of fourth-ranked Tennessee. Six of the team's final seven games are on the road.

"It's a lot tougher to win on the road than at home," said Irish head coach Muffet McGraw, "but it doesn't mean we won't win."

In last season's meeting the Irish easily defeated Cleveland State 85-68. The Vikings are 6-16 this season and are led by forward Debra Taylor (12.1 points, 6.2 rebounds per game) and center Terri Miller (11.9 and 8.7).

"They play a good game," McGraw said of the Vikings. "They hustle, they work hard on defense, they press a lot. They're tough on defense."

The road schedule looks even tougher for the Irish as injuries are hurting the team more now than at any point in the season. Starter Diondra Toney and key reserve Annie Schwartz will be out for the season with knee injuries. Reserve Carol Elliott is out indefinitely after surgery.

Starters Mary Gavin and Lisa Kuhns missed practice this week due to injuries. This is a fine time for the Irish to be travelling.

"Mary's back is really bothering her, and Lisa's knee is still giving her problems," McGraw said. "The team looks really tired, too. I guess it's just that time of year."

Despite the problems, the Irish still hope to have a strong showing on the road. "We've beaten some of these teams this season," McGraw said. "We'll do all right if we play up to our capabilities."

So even though the Irish won't be able to take their home-court advantage with them, they can still move closer and closer to a 20-victory season.

Injuries take toll on Irish track

By PETE GEGEN
Sports Writer

As usual the Irish track team has done well this indoor season, relying on its deep distance corps and a slew of talented freshmen.

But what is not known is that the team has suffered a rash of injuries which has knocked one relay out of chance to qualify for the NCAA championships, and a potential NCAA qualifier in a field event has left the team.

Three-fourths of the two-mile relay team has fallen to injuries. Freshman Mark Lavery has missed the season with tendonitis in his foot, and sophomore David Warth missed the Central Collegiate Conference meet with a severely sprained ankle. According to Irish head coach Joe Piante, both runners are expected back in the near future.

Out for an even longer period of time is senior Nick Sparks. Sparks reinjured his foot in the Michigan meet, the same foot which prevented him from being a member of Notre Dame's all-American two-mile relay team in 1986.

Lavery, Warth and Sparks were expected to team with sophomore Mike Rogan in the relay.

The injuries eliminate any chance of making the NCAA championships," said Piante. "I thought they would qualify. It's still not out of the question, though, that Warth could qualify in the 800." Warth has recorded a time of 1:50.4 in the 800 already this season.

Picking up the slack in the 800 has been Rogan and freshman Kevin Whalen, who ran a personal-best time of 1:55.7 at the Central Collegiate last weekend. And freshman Matt Ronzone owns a first-place finish in the 1000 at the Meyo Invitational.

The Irish also have lost their best performer in the field. Sophomore shot putter Tom Kraus, who set several meet records and qualified for the IC4A's as a freshman last season, left the team for personal reasons last week.

"He has done it with my blessing," said Piante. "He feels he needs to get away from track and field for a while."

"As a coach it's very hard to see him walk out the door, but as a friend I feel he needs the break. It's like Lou Holtz telling Tony Rice he could leave now."

Among the sprinters, senior Tony Ragunas has come back after an illness and will run the 60-yard dash later in the season.

"Tony is really fresh," said Piante. "I expect him to have his best outdoor season ever."

Hurdler Glenn Watson (knee) and sprinters Yan

Searcy (ankle) and Chris McGuire (leg) all have nagging injuries but have not missed any action.

"It seems like we've had more injuries than in the past," said Piante. "But we're still doing well in other events."

Most of the success has come in the distance events. Junior Ron Markezich qualified for the IC4A's in the 5000-meter run last weekend, as did the distance medley relay team.

This weekend the team travels to West Lafayette for the Indiana Intercollegiate.

Rivers leads 2nd half spurt as Irish lance Rutgers 75-62

By DENNIS CORRIGAN
Sports Editor

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J.—It was billed as David Rivers' homecoming, the New Jersey native's last appearance there in an Irish uniform. Most eyes were on him and the senior guard did not disappoint.

When Rivers checked out of the game with 25 seconds to play, he had scored 29 points, handed out nine assists and even came up with six rebounds in leading Notre Dame to a 75-62 victory over Rutgers at the Meadowlands.

"I played an adequate game," Rivers said in the understatement of the year. "I was looking forward to coming home and seeing my family. Yet, I had a job to do. We couldn't afford to lose to Rutgers. I'm glad it worked out well."

Quite simply, it was more than "an adequate game." Rivers put on a one-man show in the stretch. With the Irish up 53-46, Rivers showed all the moves that Notre Dame fans have grown so used to in the last four years.

First he hit a three-pointer from the top of the key. He followed by whipping a behind-the-back pass to Scott Paddock for an easy slam to increase the lead to 58-46. Following a Rutgers basket, the 6-0 senior came up with a steal and fed Gary Voce for an easy jumper. Again in transition, Rivers pulled up for a J in the lane. Suddenly Rutgers, which had only trailed by four minutes earlier, was out of it.

That's when Rivers hit the shot of the night. He drove the lane, twirled in the air and layed in the finger roll. It was simply an amazing performance for the native of Jersey City.

"David Rivers was anxious to go home and play his last game in New Jersey," said Irish head coach Digger Phelps, whose squad now stands at 15-7. "Like Sunday against UCLA, when it became showtime, David knew what had to be done."

"David Rivers is the all-American we all know he is," said beleaguered Scarlet Knight head coach Craig Littlepage, whose club lost its 16th-straight in falling to 3-19. "We felt that even if he got his and we could control the others, we would be in the ballgame."

But the Scarlet Knights couldn't control the rest of the Irish. Gary Voce had 10 and Keith Robinson added 11.

The biggest contributor was Scott Paddock, who came off the bench to score seven points and more impressively grab 12 rebounds, six on the offensive glass. Paddock's rebounding was especially key after the Scarlet had cut the lead to 50-46. Paddock went to the line for two shots, hit the first and missed the second. But the sophomore dashed down the lane for the rebound and was fouled again. This time he canned both and the stage was set for Rivers' heroics.

"We were struggling rebounding, and that's why Rutgers stayed in the game as long as they did," said Paddock, who set a career best in rebounding. "Once we asserted ourselves on the boards, we were able to get the outlet to David. He was able to lead the fastbreak."

Up until then, the game had been played deliberately, to be polite. The Irish led by as many as 12 twice in the opening half, but the Scarlet climbed back in it to trail by six, 36-30, at halftime.

But while Rutgers got the game going at its pace, it simply couldn't hit enough shots to stay in the game. The Scarlet Knights entered the game shooting near 40 percent from the floor, and Tuesday night they could do no better, shooting just 39.6 percent (21-of-53).

David Rivers was the driving force behind Notre Dame's 75-62 win over Rutgers last night in New Jersey. Dennis Corrigan has details of the game at left.

Alvarez named new Irish defensive coordinator

Special to The Observer

Barry Alvarez, who served as the Notre Dame outside linebackers coach last season, has been promoted to defensive coordinator for the Irish.

Alvarez joined the Notre Dame football staff last season following an eight-year stint at the University of Iowa. He was linebackers coach at Iowa, and Iowa went to the Rose Bowl in two of his years with the Hawkeys.

He replaces Foge Fazio, who resigned last Wednesday to become the special teams and tight ends coach with the National Football League's Atlanta Falcons.

Alvarez also will serve as inside linebackers coach next season.

George Stewart, last year's tight ends coach, will be the new outside linebackers coach.

Joe Moore, a former assistant coach for Pitt and Temple, joins the Notre Dame coaching staff as tight ends and offensive tackles coach.

A former halfback at Penn State, the 55-year-old Moore coached under Jackie Sherrill and Fazio during his nine-year stay at Pitt.

While at Pitt, he coached Jimbo Covert and Bill Fralic, who currently star for the Chicago Bears and Atlanta Falcons, respectively. His tenure at Pitt followed 17 years of high school coaching in western Pennsylvania.

During the last two years, Moore worked as the offensive line coach at Temple.

Stewart heads into his third year as a coach for the Irish and his sixth straight under head coach Lou Holtz. Next year will be his first attempt at coaching defense, after coaching the offensive line for Minnesota in 1984 and 1985 and the tight ends the past two years for the Irish.

Nobody has been announced as the new defensive line coach. Joe Yonto, last season's defensive lines coach and a 24-year veteran of the Notre Dame football staff, accepted a position as special assistant to Athletic Director Dick Rosenthal last Wednesday.

'Nameless' Olympians provide great moments

There is little else which can grip a world audience like the Olympics can.

Nameless faces and faceless names. Before the games begin, most of these athletes are well known only in their own country, some only in their own state or province. When they reach the site of the Olympiad, they don national uniforms which identify their origins and loyalties. But there is something which exists above and beyond national ties.

Years of training and sacrifice have been dedicated to the dream of competing in the Olympic Games. Underneath the uniforms and helmets there is a drive to excel. And that drive has brought thousands of athletes to Calgary for two weeks to live out the dream, to race for the gold and to capture the attention and hearts of the world.

There are some talented athletes in Calgary right now. And some crazy ones, too. Like the former Bronx fireman who now luges for Puerto Rico and the 'Flying Finn,' Matti Nykaenen, whose gold medal winning form in ski jumping is rivaled only by Michael Jordan.

Traditional sports like basketball, gymnastics and track make the Summer Olympics a little closer to home for weekend athletes, but the wild and woolly, not to mention chilly, Winter Olympic sports are amazing. The luge, the bobsled and downhill skiing take intense concentration and just a few loose bolts. These men and women have prepped for years to take on the elements in Calgary, where there are more elements than on a periodic chart.

The same people who have brought us the "thrill of victory and the agony of defeat" for years are bringing us over 90 hours of television coverage from Calgary. Since the 1976 Winter Games in In-

Brian O'Gara Irish Items

nsbruck, Jim McKay has called the shots for ABC at the Olympics.

The agony of defeat came quickly in these Games. America's Dan Jansen carried to Calgary the dreams of his dying sister, Jane, in his quest for a medal in 500 meter speed skating. On Sunday, their dreams came crashing down when Jane died Sunday morning and the distraught Jansen slipped on the first turn of his race. The hearts of a nation slipped with him.

There are plenty of opportunites for the thrill of victory to pick up those hearts, however. And when one speaks of Winter Olympics and thrills of victory, one can still faintly hear the echos from Lake Placid chanting, 'USA! USA!'

Those were magic moments in upstate New York in 1980, when that town by the lake was anything but placid. When the Olympic torch was first lit, candles were being lit throughout homes in America for the 52 hostages in Iran, who were in their 15th week of captivity. The nation was badly in need of a booster shot.

It came from the most unpredictable of sources, the U.S. Olympic hockey team. The Soviet team was invincible, or so we were told. Apparently Mike Eruzione and his teammates did not hear that.

His blast which put the Americans up 4-3 may not have proven that our way of government was better, but it did say that our hockey team was better than theirs, if only for a day.

Tonight in Calgary the team names and the commentator will be the same. The USA vs. USSR, with ABC's Al Michaels doing the play-by-play. Team USA will once again be overwhelming underdogs. But it's happened before. And there is no better man to be calling the game than Michaels, whose joy as the clock ticked down in Lake Placid was symbolic of the pride of a nation.

"Do you believe in miracles? Yes!!!"
