Sacred Heart will close for renovations next year

By TAMRYN J. ETTEN

Sacred Heart Church will be closed for up to a year, beginning in May, 1989, said Father Daniel Jenky, rector of the church.

Undergoing exterior renovation for the last two years, the church will undergo interior renovation beginning after next year's graduation, he said.

Jenky said he will know how long the church will be closed by September, when plans are complete. The church could reopen as soon as the fall of 1989, with Masses being conducted while scaffolding is present.

Jenky said daily Masses may be held in dorms and Sunday Masses in larger campus chapels such as Stanford-Keenan. He said weddings might be held in the crypt and Log Chapel. "There may not be elegance and stained glass, but the convenience will make people want to be married here," he said.

No weddings are being accepted for that summer, and Jenky said he is preparing those who wish to schedule ordinations or final vows for the worst.

"We'd rather give them the bad news first and then make it better," he said.

The renovation will include installing new carpeting, enhancing lighting, restoring the Girl hit in head by thrown keg

A high school senior was in serious condition Sunday night after being hit in the head by a keg at Friday's An Tostal Keg Toss.

Melissa Saucedo, of Weslaco, Tex., was in a coma from Friday afternoon until 5 a.m. Sunday but is now resting, said Director of Campus Ministry Father Andre Leveille, who has been visiting her in Saint Joseph's Medical Center.

"I anointed her (on Friday). She was very sick and in danger of death," he said.

The Medical Center declined comment on Saucedo's condition, but said she is in "serious condition in intensive care."

"She's in good spirits. She smiles and makes jokes," said freshman Diana Fuentes, a friend of Saucedo's from her hometown.

Fuentes also said that University President Father Edward Malloy had visited Saucedo.

Saucedo, recently accepted to Notre Dame, was staying with friends in Farley Hall, said Sister Jean Lenz, assistant vice president for student affairs.

She was struck unconscious and knocked to the ground, striking her head against the sidewalk, eyewitnesses said.

Saucedo's parents flew to Friday, Leveille said, adding they are "very appreciative of the Notre Dame community, but they're most thankful for the prayers."

"The boy who threw the keg came to see her," Leveille said. "The family has no anger or hard feelings toward the boy."

Witnesses said the injury was a freak accident. The student who threw the keg was very upset, students said.

"The guy who did it just lost it --he was just completely in tears," said a student who asked to remain anonymous.

"I think he's doing pretty well now. I'm going to see him for the next few days," said Leveille. "Anyone would feel bad after such a terrible accident," he said.

"It was definitely an accident," one student said. "I just don't think he knew which way he was facing. I think it was poorly organized. There was a kind of tunnel around the guy (who threw the keg)," the stu-

Student reactions to the University task forces on residence life and alcohol will be given to the administration before the end of the school year, said Student Body President Tom Doyle.

Student input was gathered through a series of meetings held in dorms and through a student body survey.

He said 60 to 100 students attended each one. Doyle, Mike Paese, student body vice president and members of the task forces also attended each meeting.

The meetings were characterized by "questions, mainly ones of clarification," said Doyle. He said many students have strong opinions, both in favor and against the task forces' recommendations.

About 1,800 surveys have been turned in to student government, he said.

The preliminary results will be given to administration of-realize it's quite an honor and a very pleasant surprise."

Milani, paralyzed from the chest down in a high school hockey accident, has dedicated time to increasing handicapped awareness at Notre Dame and the South Bend community.

"When I came here it caused a lot of awareness because there hadn't been a student in a wheel chair on campus for three or four years," said the St. Edward's Hall senior.

Milani said he was glad to see that the Huddle be-

Corrections 'not good' but they're inevitable

Corrections. I hate running corrections. They're kind of like pulling wisdom teeth. You hate it but you know it has to be done.

Our fifth correction since spring break is running in today's paper. It's actually a clarification, since we got the story right but the headline wrong. That's more like pulling molars instead of wisdom teeth, but it still hurts.

A couple years back Mark Pankowski wrote a column on why corrections are a good thing to see in a newspaper. A correction shows that a newspaper cares enough about objectivity to get the facts straight the second time. He made a good point, I think.

"But you should get the facts straight the first time," you say.

True. We really do try to get the story right. Every reporter, before they start writing for The Observer, gets a big packet explaining how to interview, how to write a decent opening paragraph, and most importantly, the necessity of getting the news straight. Editors are chosen primarily for their ability to check the facts and make sure they are presented logically and objectively.

The Observer in the past has gotten high marks for objective reporting from collegiate newspaper organizations. No, we're not the New York Times. But compare us to papers at other schools our size. Keep in mind that we have no journalism major at Notre Dame, and no faculty advisorship of any sort. We do all right.

"But if you're a newspaper, you should get the facts straight, or you should pack it up," say Observer critics.

Put yourself in the editors' shoes. Night editors for each story must check:

- Are all the names spelled correctly? Look them all up in the phone book. Check their titles too. Is Szmuszkovicz a professor or an assistant or an adjunct or a visiting?
- Is everything attributed? Does every statement of fact also have a statement of source? Call the reporter and check, if he's home. Call the source and check, and then call back twice more since the source is never home.
- Is everything in the story factually correct? Never mind that, four times out of five you don't know a damn thing about Minority Visitation Weekend or Saint Mary's hall elections or whatever. You're still responsible for checking every fact in the story.
- Does everything conform to the Observer Stylebook (74 pages) and the Associated Press Stylebook (285 pages)? Do we put "tomorrow" or "Tuesday"? Are class titles capitalized? Do we write out "percent"?

Mark Mc Laughlin
News Editor

• Is everything spelled correctly? Check it twice, even if it's four in the morning, our usual time that the paper is done.

Night editors have to do all of the above for each campus story, an average of five stories a night. Similar editing has to be done on all the Associated Press stories, once the editor plows through the 150 stories on the wire to find the decent ones. Then they must write the weather, all the photo captions, all the headlines, design all the news pages, and proofread the entire news section of the paper.

The job usually takes two people nine hours to do. Untold additional hours are spent by reporters trying to get the news. All these people are also students, with the same academic loads as everyone else at Notre Dame and Saint Mary's.

No, all of this is not an excuse. We still have an obligation to get the news straight, and to correct it if we screw up.

But with all the work that goes into producing this paper and getting news stories, it's inevitable that we'll screw up sometime. Yes, stories that need corrections misinform the public. No, that's not good. All I can say is we're doing our best. Hopefully that's good enough.

Iranian boat fires on Arabian tanker

Associated Press

MANAMA, Bahrain - An Iranian speedboat shot up a Saudi Arabian-owned tanker in the Strait of Hormuz on Sunday after President Reagan said the U.S. Navy will no longer ignore attacks on noncombatants in the Persian Gulf region.

The speedboat fired rocket-propelled grenades and machine guns at the 37,011-ton Sea Trader in the strait, the southern entrance to the gulf.

An unexploded rocket dangled from the Sea Trader's hull after the attack but fell into the sea before the tanker reached the port of Dubai in the United Arab Emirates.

The Indian master, Capt. B.R. Pagarkar, reported his vessel sustained slight damage and no casualties among the Indian crew.

It was not known whether any U.S. warships were near the Sea Trader during the attack. Navy officials do not disclose warships' movements, but several U.S. frigates and destroyers have been in the southern gulf since last week,

Coast Guard might be sent to Persian Gulf

Associated Press

WASHINGTON - Defense Secretary Frank Carlucci said Sunday the United States is considering shoring up its Persian Gulf fleet with Coast Guard ships but U.S. officials downplayed any immediate retaliation for an Iranian attack on a neutral vessel.

Admiral William Crowe, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, said the "level of violence is much less" against the Saudi-owned tanker than in the mining incident that touched off last week's U.S. retaliatory strike against two Iranian offshore platforms.

"We consider our response on Monday a suitable response when U.S. and Iranian ships skirmished in the area.

Reagan warned Iran in his weekly radio broadcast Saturday that continued attacks on neutral parties, including gulf shipping, "will be very costly to Iran and its people."

On Friday, U.S. officials disclosed in Washington that the Reagan administration was planning to expand the U.S. naval role in the gulf by giving American commanders the right to intervene in Iranian attacks on non-U.S. flag vessels.

Previously, U.S. warships have only been permitted to provide "humanitarian aid" to non-American ships in distress and requesting aid, but not to intercede in armed conflict involving those ships.

Gulf-based shipping executives, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the Sea Trader encountered a flotilla of six armed speedboats as it sailed into the gulf through the strait about 7:30 a.m.

The tanker, owned by a Saudi firm but flying the Liberian flag, was bound for the Saudi oil port of Ras Tanura.

for the indiscriminate mining, and we do not contemplate any more violence unless Iran continues what we would say is an indiscriminate and a threatening pattern," Crowe said on CBS-TV's "Face the Nation."

"And as you saw the report from the tanker, they did not feel that they had been heavily damaged," Crowe said. "And we will certainly keep those events in the calculations of this review."

The captain of the Sea Trader said there were no casualties among the vessel's crew, but the 37,011-ton tanker sustained slight damage in the grenade and machine gun attack at 7:30 a.m. (11:30 p.m. EDT)

Car bomb toll climbs to 69

Associated Press

TRIPOLI, Lebanon - The death toll from Lebanon's worst car bombing in three years climbed to 69 Sunday after 15 of the wounded died in hospitals. One man was dragged injured but alive from a wrecked building.

Tripoli's eight hospitals were filled to capacity with casualties and morgues were "packed with corpses," police said.

Local officials in the northern port city declared two days of public mourning for the victims of Saturday's explosion in a crowded vegetable market that knocked down buildings and set dozens of cars ablaze.

Police said 111 people were wounded from the blast in the low-income Tabbaneh district of Tripoli, the country's second-largest city. Radio stations broadcast urgent appeals for blood.

Civil defense rescue teams who clawed through the rubble during the night called off their search early Sunday after dragging the 33-year-old survivor, a grocer, to safety at about midnight, police reported.

The man, who was not identified, had been buried for more than 16 hours. He was taken to Batroun hospital, 15 miles south of Tripoli, because the city's hospitals were already overflowing with casualties.

Police said no one else was listed as missing or believed to be buried in the wreckage.

Tripoli, whose 850,000 population is predominantly Sunni Moslem, is 50 miles north of the capital, Beirut.

Police said a black pickup truck used in Saturday's bombing was loaded with vegetables and 330 pounds of TNT.

It exploded while the market was filled with shoppers on the seventh day of Islam's holy month of Ramadan, when devout Moslems fast from sunrise to sunset.

No group has claimed responsibility for Saturday's bombing, and police said they had no clues about who was behind the carnage.

Israeli army lifts Arab travel ban

Associated Press

JERUSALEM - The army lifted a four-day ban Sunday to let Palestinians travel from the occupied territories into Israel, but Arabs said soldiers wrecked homes and shops in another bid to control unrest.

Israeli soldiers have killed 173 Palestinian protesters in the nearly five-month-old uprising against 21 years of Israeli occupation of the West Bank and Gaza, according to U.N. figures. An Israeli soldier and civilian also have been killed.

Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin told the Cabinet that 165 Palestinians have died in the uprising, including 147 killed by soldiers, Israel radio said Sunday. Rabin said 4,900 Palestinians have been detained since Dec. 8, including 1,700 held in administrative detention for up to six months without trial.

Police ordered Arab merchants in Jerusalem to open their stores at normal hours in a tug-of-war with protest leaders, who are also trying to dictate when shops may do business.

"I am afraid for my life," 43-year-old Saleh Sagari said, explaining why he opened his tiny grocery shop at hours dictated by the uprising's leaders. "If I open (during army-ordered hours), they will burn me down."

Police in riot gear delivered the new orders to shopkeepers along the Street of the Prophets just outside the walled Old City. Officers on horses kept back curious tourists and passers-by.

Shopkeepers could be jailed for two years if they defy the army's instructions, said police spokesman Rafi Levy.

In the West Bank village of Bet Roch near Hebron, Arab witnesses said Ahmad Hassan Salim Amar, 23, was killed Saturday when he defied the army order to halt. The army said it was investigating.

Mitterrand wins election's round 1

Associated Press

PARIS - Socialist President Francois Mitterrand won the first round of the presidential election Sunday setting up a May 8 runoff with conservative Premier Jacques Chirac who finished a distant second.

With 98 percent of the ballots counted, and with tabulating suspended for the day, Mitterrand had 34 percent of the vote in his quest for a second seven-year term. Chirac, 55, had 19.9 percent.

Former center-right Premier Raymond Barre, 64, finished third with 16.5 percent. He conceded defeat and called on his supporters to back fellow conservative Chirac and oust Mitterrand.

Making a strong showing in the field of nine candidates was Jean-Marie Le Pen, 59, leader of the extreme right National Front, with 14.5 percent. Le Pen campaigned on a tough anti-immigration platform.

The result confirmed the growing strength of his party, which espouses a tough anti-immigration platform.

Television computer projections like that of Antenne 2 have been very accurate in past elections.

Barre conceded defeat Sunday evening and called on supporters to back Chirac in the runoff. Chirac, in a joint appearance with Barre at the Senate building, added, "Now, against the Socialist candidate, we must rally together."

Turnout was about 72 percent of France's 38 million voters, compared to about 81 percent in 1981, when Mitterrand won his first term.

Mitterrand, whose popularity sank to unprecedented lows at midterm only to soar in the last two years, will face in two weeks the hard-driving conservative who has run the government since the right won the 1986 legislative elections.

said, adding he was about 20 feet from where the keg was thrown. "When I saw her lying on the ground and the force that knocked her down, I wouldn't have been surprised if it killed her."

"I've never seen a keg tossed, but the guy spun around six or seven times," another student said. "I guess he miscalculated and the keg went right into the crowd. The crowd cleared and the girl was lying on her back, bleeding from her ears," the student said. "She was lying on the sidewalk an awfully long time."

Students said Notre Dame Security came to the scene within about five minutes. An ambulance later took her to the hospital, they said.

The events scheduled to follow the Keg Toss were cancelled, students said. An Tostal Co-Chairmen Colleen Cushnie and David Duncan could not be reached for comment.

No information has been released regarding the extent of Saucedo's injuries, Leveille said. "The worst is over. She's had a brain scan and we're waiting for the results," he said. "I think she still wants to come here."

officials and the student body before finals, said Doyle.

In addition, they will present a letter to the administration with student government's opinions, said Doyle. This letter will also summarize the surveys and the forums.

Notes and comments from the forums and the survey results will be given to University President Father Edward Malloy and other administration officials responsible for implementing the suggested changes, said Doyle.

The administration rushed to get the reports out so that the students had adequate time before exams to make their feelings known, Doyle said.

"We heard from Monk (Malloy) and (University Executive Vice President Father William) Beauchamp that they will take the (students') response seriously," said Doyle.

A final report will be issued during Senior Week, he said. The administration will examine the results over the summer, hopefully reaching some decision before classes resume, said Doyle.

Clarification

Due to an editing error, a headline in Friday's Observer incorrectly listed the winner of the McCandless Hall elections. As stated in the story, Kathy Schmidt's ticket won the election with 63 percent the vote.

INDIANAPOLIS - Thirty-two Hoosiers will be among 1,000 delegates from around the world who will help decide whether practicing homosexuals should be allowed to be or-

The delegates - half clergy and half laity - will meet Tuesday through May 6 in St. Louis, Mo., for the quadrennial General Conference of the second-largest Protestant denomination in the United States.

Observers say the issue of homosexual ministers is arousing such strong feelings among the 9.1 million church members that it could split the denomination.

Article harbors myths

Dear Editor:

As a returning student from the Holy Land, I find it is my right as well as my duty to discount many of the so-called "facts" that Billy Lerman presented in his article, "Palestine: the facts and the myths" in the April 20 edition of The Observer.

First of all, Mr. Lerman begins his article by claiming that a chief myth of the Palestinian people is that the cause of their anguish is the Israelis themselves. Now it would be foolish to claim that all of the anguish experienced by the Palestinians originates with the Israelis, but it would be more than fair to say that the greater majority of it does. I base my stance on my own personal encounters with Israelis and Palestinians alike last semester.

The abuse of human rights in the occupied lands of the West Bank and the Gaza Strip by the Israelis is appalling. To think that these acts are perpetrated by a democratic state and a close ally of the United States is sickening at best. I can recall countless conversations with Palestinians (even teenagers) who had been beaten, arrested and even tortured by the Israeli military for suspicious activity, which usually meant participation in a demonstration. One specific case that occurred while I was in the Holy Land was the rape and subsequent killing of a Palestinian girl, who was thrown from a moving jeep by Israeli Army members. Believe it or not, the case was covered up and the soldiers escaped punishment.

One of Mr. Lerman's own self-proclaimed goals throughout his article is the wishful attempt to dispel any myths of all when he describes, in the form of a quote, that all Palestinians are terrorists, "Then we exploited them in executing crimes of murder, arson and throwing bombs upon men, women and children-- all this in the service of political purposes." There is no doubt in my mind that the PLO has carried out some very questionable, unjustifiable and criminal acts throughout the years. But, to brand a nationality of people as evil, hate-filled terrorists, as the use of the quote seems to imply, is narrow-minded as well as ridiculous. In my everyday dealings with Palestinians, I found them to be the most spirited, warm-natured and loving people that I have ever come into contact with. This is a commonality that I believe would be shared and attested to by the other eleven students that participated in last semester's program.

In conclusion, I would like to label as ludicrous that belief held by Mr. Lerman that the Palestinians are in the occupied territories simply "because of their political value in tallying world opinion against Israel." The fact is, the Palestinians are there because it is their last bastion of hope in an attempt to gain a national homeland. I am not discrediting Israel's right to exist at all, but simply recognizing the Palestinians' rights as a people and not a problem!

ND support appreciated

Dear Editor:

As you may well know, our son Tom was seriously injured in a hit and run accident during spring break in Texas. While these have been trying times, Tom's condition continues to improve dramatically everyday. His spirits are high and we are sure this is largely due to the high interest shown by the Notre Dame community. We appreciate your prayers and thank you for your strong support. Tom has received an unending number of cards and flowers from well-wishers. We would like to take this opportunity to thank you all for your generosity.

Arabs leaving not voluntary

Dear Editor:

In Billy Lerman's introductory paragraph to his Viewpoint article of Wednesday April 20, he describes the "assumption" that the Palestinians were forced from their land into their present refugee camps at the hands of Israel as being "logically as well as factually incorrect." Unfortunately, his essay seems to lack a lot of fact and logic as well.

Mr. Lerman states that the "Arab" inhabitants of Palestine left of their free will. He seems to forget that most of them left because of the campaign of terror organized by the Zionist underground movements, highlighted by the Deir Yaseen massacre. They left in fear for their families and in hope of returning someday. Wasn't that the case with the large numbers of Poles who left their country after the Nazi occupation to join the Free Forces in England? Presently, isn't there a large number of Afghan refugees in Pakistan who left their country to avoid the violence and are waiting for the Russians to pull out in order to return to their homes?

Mr. Lerman claims: "The reason that the number of Jews decreased is that they were in many cases formally expelled and in other cases murdered in Nazi-style attacks." I do not know if

Mr. Lerman is aware of the fact that Arab Jews are Arabs who lived among Arabs of other religions for many centuries with relatively no problems. Actually, it is largely thanks to Arab civilization that the Jewish civilization survived through the Dark Ages and to the post-Renaissance era. We would suggest that Mr. Lerman read about the life the Jews had in Andalusia before the fall of the Umayyad Caliphate there. It would seem logical that a large number of Jews would move to a state that "represents" them and to which they are encouraged to immigrate. Thus, a large number of them left of their "free will." As far as "Nazi-style attacks," the only things that seem to come to mind are massacres such as "Deir Yaseen" and "Sabra and Shatila," "Nazi-style attacks" against Palestinian refugees.

Mr. Lerman blames the Arab countries which number over 20 for not settling 700,000 Palestinians, while Israel managed to settle 1,200,000 refugees. The comparison is ridiculous, and is yet another example of "truth distortion." Mr. Lerman, the Jews were going to the country of their dreams, whereas the Palestinians were fleeing away from their homeland. The Arab countries' accommodation of Palestinian refugees is on a temporary basis, awaiting a peaceful solution. The actions of a small number of Arab leaders should not be confused with the actual policy regarding the Palestinian problem. It would be similar to assuming that Rabbi Kahane represents the Jews! As far as calling Arab countries "oil-rich," the label is misleading. They have their social and economic problems as well. And if Mr. Lerman has to be reminded, not all of them produce oil.

Mr. Lerman claims that Arabs who chose to remain in Israel after 1948 "celebrate full autonomy." What is autonomy? Is it having to possess a pass in order to move from village to village? If that is the case, we can say that they "celebrate" the same autonomy that the blacks in South Africa do!

Mr. Lerman asks us to recall "the facts" when reading about Palestinian refugees. Whose facts, Mr. Lerman?

Foodshare puts dining hall food to good use

accent writer

What happens to the food that the dining hall doesn't use? Up until a few weeks ago, the unserved food was thrown out. But due to the idealism and hard work of three Notre Dame students, some of the needy in South Bend are eating the dining hall's leftovers.

Since March 22 Foodshare, a group of Notre Dame volunteers, has been bringing the leftovers from North Dining Hall's evening meals to the Hope Rescue Mission in downtown South Bend, a shelter for the homeless which serves over 200 meals a day to those in need.

"For instance if there is 55 gallons of soup cooked, and five left over, it is shipped to the mission," said William Hickey, director of food services.

"Anytime we help our brothers out by sharing food that would be discarded, without impacting our cost, we're helping out the poor souls who need help," he said.

Senior Kathy Barron, one of the captains of the basketball team, went to Mexico with the Community for the Lay Apostolate (CILA) last summer and saw the starvation and poverty there. "I had seen a lot of hungry people and it bothered me," she said.

Barron was approached by senior Jim MacDonald, who had visited a national convention for Food Salvage, a similar program implemented by Harvard and Northwestern universities. Together they began researching the possibilities of starting a program at Notre Dame.

"We researched everything--the health aspects, legal aspects. We got names of students who were interested in helping. We wanted to cover everything before we took the idea to the administration," Barron said.

Lisa Mackett, a freshman who worked in the dining hall, became involved in the project, and the three became a bargaining, speaking, researching and lobbying team.

They took the idea to University President Father Edward Malloy. "He thought it was a good idea, but he had concerns about the health aspect of it. But he gave us his encouragement," Barron said.

They discovered their ticket to success was Indiana's Good Samaritain Law which states that if an organization "in good faith makes a gift of a food item to a charitable entity is not liable for damages arising for the use, condition, quality, or content of that food item..."

They began looking for a place to bring the food. "We asked the (Center for Social Concerns) what places in South Bend needed food. What time, facilities, and health standards they had (and) if the feeding time corresponded," Barron said. They wrote the Hope Rescue Mission and received a hand-written positive response.

After a few months of discussions with the administration, they finally agreed to try the project. The University Food Services purchased food warmers and pans, and the CSC donated use of their van for the transport.

"We were originally going to do it on Tuesday and Thursday, but then we decided if we had the food, why not every night?" Barron said.

The students who transport the food keep a diary of what food is brought. "We look in the refrigerator. They're using it," she said.

The mission has six different feeding times and serves about 200 meals a day. "With all the meals we have, we can use a lot of food," said Martin Polecki, social service coordinator for the mission.

"If we had to purchase everything with as many meals as we have, it would take all of our money," he said. According to Polecki, the mission is a non-profit organization, so donated food is tax deductible.

Next year Foodshare wants to expand their operation by using the food from both dining halls on the campus, and possibly expand the number of recipients of the food.

Their biggest challenge ahead is tactfully approaching the students on food waste. "We want people to be consciously aware of what they take and what they eat," Barron said, "It may seem trivial, but we're forming habits. Ones that are hard to break."

Irish find pitching in sweep

By STEVE MEGARGEE
Assistant Sports Editor

How long it lasts remains to be seen, but the Notre Dame baseball team was able to solve its pitching problems Sunday afternoon at Jake Kline Field.

The Irish swept a doubleheader from Illinois-Chicago 8-1 and 8-1 Sunday after being swept at Michigan State by scores of 13-1 and 6-5 on Saturday. The two sweeps in opposite directions put Notre Dame's overall record at 25-20.

"We knew we had to get back on the winning track," said Irish coach Pat Murphy. "We came back, and we executed when we had to."

Notre Dame received strong pitching performances from juniors Erik Madsen and Mike Passilla, both of whom had struggled in recent outings.

Passilla allowed just three hits in 6 1/3 innings in the first game before giving way to sophomore Mike Coffey. Madsen pitched a complete-game six-hitter in the second game.

"They both pitched with tired arms and got the job done," said Murphy. "They've got to get back on track, and this was a confidence builder for them."

Freshman left fielder Greg Vogele gave Passilla all the runs he would need in the first game with a second-inning grand slam. Vogele's smash over the left field wall was the first collegiate home run for the Cincinnati native.

"It's great to see a freshman make the gamewinning hit or homer," said Murphy. "He's been working hard. He needs a little more maturity physically and on the field, and he'll be a fine player. He deserves to play because he's been working hard."

Notre Dame scored twice in the third and added single runs in the fourth and sixth to put the game away. Coffey only had to pitch to one batter in the seventh, retiring Flame second baseman Paul Belo on a double play to end the game.

Madsen had similar results as Passilla in the second game. The righthander from Great Falls, Mont., allowed just one run in seven innings to raise his record to 7-4.

The Irish managed only one hit off Flame starter Craig Niedermaier in the first four innings, but Notre Dame still managed to score four runs during that time by taking advantage of four UIC errors.

Sophomore rightfielder Dan Peltier doubled down the right field line in the sixth inning of the contest. The hit marked Peltier's 16th double of the season, breaking the school record.

While Notre Dame had its way with UIC, now 12-18 on the year, the Irish did not have quite as much success against Michigan State.

Mike Davidson, Scott Makarewicz and Mike Koceski helped the Spartans pound out 13 runs against five Irish pitchers for a 13-1 rout in the first game.

The Irish appeared on the verge of a split for much of the second game. A third-inning two-run single by sophomore Ed Lund, who went 4-of-4 on the game, gave Notre Dame an early 4-0 lead.

Michigan State eventually tied the game, but Peltier boomed a home run over the scoreboard in dead centerfield to give the Irish a 5-4 lead in the seventh inning of a game scheduled for seven innings.

Notre Dame was one out away from victory after Madsen, pitching in relief, retired the first two Spartan batters. Designated hitter Sean Bruce singled to keep Michigan State alive, and he scored the tying run when Rich Juday hit a double on a ball misjudged by Peltier.

Koceki led off the eighth with a triple. After Madsen intentionally walked the next two batters, Jeff Boucek won the game for MSU with a single past a drawn-in outfield.

The Irish have lost 20 consecutive games against Big 10 opposition. Notre Dame will get two chances to end that skid this week at Jake Kline Field, as Notre Dame has a Tuesday game with Purdue at 2:30 p.m. and a Wednesday game with Indiana at 3 p.m.

ND comes up short in weekend action

By FRANK PASTOR
Sports Writer

After all was said and done Sunday afternoon at the Eck Tennis Pavilion, the Notre Dame men's tennis team found itself the not-so-proud owner of two more losses than it had when the weekend began.

Personal theories abounded, but no matter how you looked at it, the team's troubles boiled down to one thing - execution, or rather a lack of it.

Following a disappointing 4-5 defeat at the hands of Kalamazoo on Saturday, the Irish (17-12) returned home yesterday where they were dominated by a disciplined Wisconsin team 8-1.

Wisconsin stormed into town like a hurricane on Sunday, destroying everything in its path. The Badgers, coming off big wins over Indiana and Ohio State, swept eight straight matches before the Irish pulled out a win at number-three doubles to thwart any attempt of a shutout.

In the final match of the day, Notre Dame's senior connection, Dan Walsh and Paul Daggs, put away Brian Amero and Marc Schwartz in three sets, 6-4, 4-6, 6-2 to go home on a winning note.

In Saturday's match, Notre Dame's road woes continued as it battled Kalamazoo in less than favorable weather conditions. However, it was the team's struggles with itself that made victory so elusive. Simply put, the Irish did not execute well enough to win.

"I could tell you that it was really cold and that we should have played inside," said Bayliss. "I could tell you that the winds were gusting up to 30-35 miles per hour, but these would just be excuses. We still should have won. We just didn't go get it in the situations that we could have."

Notre Dame was tied with Kalamazoo following singles play, but Kalamazoo took two of three doubles matches to secure the victory.

Second-seeded Ryan Wenger beat Tim Hufner 4-6, 7-5, 7-5. In a battle of the Daves, N.D.'s Reiter defeated Kalamazoo's Tygum 6-3, 4-6, 6-3 at number-four and Paul Odland outscored Greg Wood 6-4, 7-6 at number-five.

The tandem of Wenger and Brian Kalbas procured the sole doubles victory for the Irish, holding off Tygum and Dave Borski 7-6, 6-3 at number-two.

"This was certainly the most disappointing loss I have suffered as a coach at Notre Dame," admitted Bayliss, "and one of the all-time most disappointing losses in my twenty-year coaching career."

Holes filled in draft

Associated Press

NEW YORK - NFL teams went for needs in the annual draft Sunday, picking players to fill gaping holes rather than merely taking the best available athlete.

The first eight picks went about as expected, save for the choice of Wisconsin tackle Paul Gruber by Tampa Bay with the fourth pick of the round.

The first pick, of course, was no surprise -linebacker Aundray Bruce of Auburn, already signed by the Atlanta Falcons.

Kansas City then took Nebraska defensive end Neil Smith, for whom they had given up a second-round choice to change places with Detroit. The Lions picked Miami safety Bennie Blades, whom they had planned to take all along.

Draft

head coach Mike Shanahan. "Not only is he a quality athlete, he's a quality person. With his track background, he'll give us some excitement in both punt and kick returning, as well as at receiver. I expect he will be working extensively in all of those areas."

Brown caught 39 passes for 846 yards in Notre Dame's 8-4 season, rolling up 1,847 all-purpose yards on 130 touches of the ball and becoming the all-time Irish leader in that category.

"I couldn't ask for a better senior year," Brown noted. "We had a good season, winning the Heisman, and now to get the chance to play somewhere millions of people would love to play. It's a great feeling."

Brown watched ESPN's live telecast of the draft, and found out he was a Raider when it was announced on the air.

"I found out just like everybody else," he said. "They called me a couple minutes afterward."

The move to Los Angeles reunites the Dallas native with former Notre Dame quarterback Steve Beuerlein, who was chosen by the Raiders in the fourth round of last year's draft.

"He (Steve) called me this morning," Brown said, "and we talked about the possibility. Now we're both looking forward to it."

The Patriots are looking to boost what has been a struggling offensive line over the past two years with the selection of the 6-7, 263-pound Rehder. Bruce Armstrong was the Pats' first-round choice in last year's draft, and Armstrong started on the offensive line last season.

"Tom's a physical football player, and he has a lot of room to develop," said Dick Steinberg, New England's player personnel director. "He's got decent speed, and good speed off the ball. We'll have to decide whether to play him at guard or tackle."

Immediately following Rehder's selection, Lanza heard from a Steeler representative while viewing the draft from his home in Germantown, Tenn.

"My agent had talked to representatives of New England and Pittsburgh, and we had an idea one of those teams would take me," Lanza explained. "I was surprised Tom (Rehder) went as soon as he did, and right when they announced his name the Steelers called me and told me I was next."

The Steelers also drafted an offensive lineman in the second round, former Kentucky guard Dermonti Dawson.

"Our immediate focus right now is getting a person who can play center and get some experience there before he gets put in the fire," said Pittsburgh offensive line coach Hal Hunter, who has veteran center Mike Webster coming out of retirement for a final NFL season this year. "But that doesn't mean Lanza won't also play guard or tackle."

"Playing behind Mike Webster is a tremendous opportunity for me," said the 6-2, 270-pound Lanza. "I've admired him since I was a kid, and I can't think of anyone else I'd like to have teaching me how to be an NFL center."

"I anticipate getting some work at guard, and maybe even tackle," Lanza continued. "But at this level you've got to be prepared to make some adjustments."

Mark Green gained 70 yards in a losing effort as the Gold downed the Blue 27-9 in the 58th Annual Blue-Gold Game Saturday at Notre Dame Stadium. The game signalled the end of spring practice for the Irish football team. Greg Guffey details the action beginning on the back page.

on the roll and George Streeter recovered the ball for the Gold at the Blue 13-yard line. Three plays later, Kent Graham hit Watters for a nine-yard touchdown and the Gold led 7-0 with 3:41 to play in the opening period.

Mark Green returned the Gold kickoff 31 yards to the Blue 44. Green rushed two times for 19 yards and Anthony Johnson once for two more and the Blue had the ball at the White 35. Cornerback Todd Lyght then picked off a Tony Rice pass at the Gold 15.

Blue strong safety Greg Davis then intercepted a Kent Graham pass on the next play from scrimmage. The freshman returned the ball 22 yards for a touchdown and tied the score at 7-7 with 1:52 in the first quarter.

Belles then emerged as a contender for some playing time in the fall. After a Blue punt, the junior engineered a 14-play, 70-yard drive that ended on a Braxton Banks touchdown from two yards out. Hackett converted the PAT and the Gold led 14-7. During the drive, Belles scrambled three times for a total of 25 yards.

"Belles moves the football team," Holtz said. "His main problem has been to eliminate the bad play."

Graham later slipped in the endzone to give the Blue a safety with 54 seconds to play in the half. That cut the lead to 14-9.

Belles took control again for the Gold in the second half. He used 12 plays to lead a 71-yard scoring drive in the opening series of the half to give the Gold a 21-9 advantage. Watters capped the drive with a three-yard touchdown and Hackett converted the PAT.

The Gold scored again one series later when Tony Brooks flipped over the goal line from the one-yard line. The big play in that drive was a 46-yard pass from Graham to Bobby Carpenter. The two-point conversion failed.

The defense had another good showing Saturday, as has been the case all spring. In addition to forcing seven turnovers, the defense recorded five sacks. Blue noseguard

Steve Roddy had two solo sacks and five unassisted tackles. Co-captain Ned Bolcar paced the Gold squad with five solo tackles.

"I think we rushed the passer better today," Holtz said. "Our secondary played well with the exception of a couple of balls in the air."

"I think our defense next year will be the mainstay of the team," Bolcar added. "We had a lot of young guys on the defensive line and they're playing with a lot of quickness and enthusiasm."

Rice connected on 6-of-19 passes for 133 yards and threw two interceptions. Graham hit on two passes in seven attempts for 55 yards. Despite Rice's poor completion rate, Holtz says he is throwing the ball well.

"I thought Tony Rice threw the ball very well," Holtz said. "I thought he threw the ball a lot better this spring even though the stats don't show it."

Mark Green paced the rushers with 70 yards on 13 carries. Green played flanker most of the spring before switching with Watters earlier in the week.

jury to last year's Mr Bookstore John "Booger" Buscher last Monday. Buscher, who had sat out his team's four previous games in favor of Adworks' supersub Marty Watts, decided to play in the championship game despite fear of aggravating the injury.

Before the game, Buscher, who scored three points, expressed concern that he might not be able to finish the contest, at which point his team would have to play the remainder of the final game at a 5-4 disadvantage since no substitutions are allowed in Bookstore Basketball.

Watts was not officially relieved of his duties until moments before gametime when an apparently confused Ricky Watters dashed through a packed Stepan Court 1 grandstand onto the court. Upon Watters' appearance, Watts made yet another contribution to Adworks' championship run by donating his shirt to Watters, who had worn a dark shirt although his team had been designated to wear light.

"I've got to give all the credit in the world to Marty," said Buscher, "who was there whenever we needed him throughout the tournament. He could have been out there today, too, but he gave up the chance so that I could play."

Dingens presented Watts with his championship trophy after the game as an expression of the team's gratitude.

On the road to the finals, on Friday, Lou's 2 QB's and 2 Blind Men beat Pop a Shot at Senior Bar 21-15; Tequila disposed of Who's Next 21-17; Chips Bar shot down Hahn's Funeral Home 21-16; and Adworks nipped I'll Play, No I Won't 22-20, again on a Voce free throw.

In the semis on Saturday, it was Tequila over Chips 21-19, and Adworks ousting Lou's 2 QB's... 21-16.

Adworks strikes down Tequila in final

Voce too much inside as top-seed goes cold

When the rumor that Gary Voce might be teaming up with last year's Mr. Bookstore for this year's Bookstore Basketball tournament surfaced late last month, a lot of potential contenders shuddered at the prospect.

On Sunday, with the addition of Kevin Keyes, Matt Dingsens and Ricky Watters, the rumor culminated in a 21-18, come-from-behind championship victory for Adworks All-Stars over Tequila White Lightning.

Down 16-11 with Tequila in the bonus, Adworks reeled off eight straight points to take a 19-16 lead and never looked back. Tequila helped to fuel the Adworks rally by turning icy cold and shooting 0-for-15 during that stretch, connecting on only one of their last 18 attempts in the game.

Lightning member Dan Reynolds summed up the futility of his team's shooting efforts in the second half.

"We just took a lot of bad shots, and the good ones we took didn't go in," said Reynolds, who was two-for-seven for the game. "(Adworks) played good defense and all, especially in the second half, but we're the ones who didn't hit anything."

The All-Stars implemented a familiar strategy in the final, playing a somewhat lackluster first half which led to an 11-7 Tequila lead at the break. Then, after the opposition had opened up its biggest lead of the game and seemed ready to claim the victors' trophy, Adworks turned once again to its bread and butter. The 6-9 Voce, named Most Valuable Player for the tournament, towered over Tequila's front line and scored six of his team's last ten points, including the game-winning free throw, and ripped down 17 rebounds.

"It's been a lot of fun playing with the guys from my dorm," said Voce, who missed Adworks' first two games. "When we first came here, Dingsens and I agreed to play together in Bookstore our senior year. At first, I wasn't going to play because I didn't want to get injured. But the team had a lot of problems and injuries, so I decided to play."

Members of Tequila White Lightning weren't as enthusiastic about Voce's return.

"He's simply unstoppable when he's playing with guys like us," said Tequila forward Sean Cullinan, who was crowned Mr. Bookstore after the final. "Even if you foul him, he's strong enough to power it in anyway. And it's not smart to foul him late in the game because he makes all his free throws. He makes it a no-win situation out there."

Brian Koehr, who drew the unenviable task of guarding Voce, concurred with his teammate.

"He definitely got more intense in the second half," said Koehr, a member of the first-team All-Bookstore squad. "He stepped up the defensive pressure on me and just would not be denied on his way to the basket."

Adworks' status before gametime was very much in doubt, as it had been all week, mainly because of an ankle in-

Botham takes over in finale

Give Me Your Address There ended the 1988 Women's Bookstore Basketball Tournament with a 22-20 victory over Yurtles and Turtles on Sunday at Stepan.

Sandy Botham, who played on Notre Dame's varsity basketball team, led both teams with 10 points and was named Miss Bookstore 1988.

"It was fun playing against friends," said Botham, "but it was also a very competitive game."

"Botham held the team together with her mental attitude as well as her action on the court," said teammate Rochelle Holder.

Give Me Your Address There scored first, and the score remained close the entire game.

The score was tied 15 times during the game. Laura Gidley scored the winning basket on a free throw.

"The game could have gone either way," said Gidley. "The competition was very tough."

Another Notre Dame varsity basketball player, point guard Mary Gavin, scored three points and was the force behind Yurtles and Turtles.

"The game was very intense," said Gavin. "The referees' calls went both ways."

Maureen Shea led Yurtles and Turtles with six points.

"This was the most competition we've had in the tournament," Shea said.

Yurtles led 11-9 at the half. Botham scored two quick points for Give Me Your Address at the start of the second half.

The score stayed tight for the rest of the game with the lead changing hands several times.

Raiders choose Brown sixth ND's Rehder, Lanza also taken in NFL draft

By MARTY STRASEN

A phone call from the Los Angeles Raiders on Saturday was cause for Tim Brown to smile when he was not one of the top five selections in Sunday's NFL draft.

The Raiders and Brown both feel they got a bargain when Los Angeles made the former Irish flanker the No. 6 choice in the first round.

"It's exactly what I wanted, and I feel great about it," Brown said. "My thinking was that, if I wasn't going to be the No. 1 pick, I wanted to be someplace where I'd be happy both playing football and living. Southern California sounds great to me."

A representative of the Raiders contacted Brown on Saturday and told the 1987 Heisman Trophy winner he did not expect Brown to be available by the time Los Angeles picked, Brown said.

"They said they would be very surprised if I was still around," Brown explained. "The way they were talking led me to believe that they would take me if they could. I wanted to be around for the sixth pick after I heard that."

A pair of former Notre Dame offensive linemen were chosen back-to-back in the third round. Tackle Tom Rehder was selected 69th overall by the New England Patriots, while center Chuck Lanza went 70th to the Pittsburgh Steelers.

The first five rounds of the draft were completed Sunday.

The rest will be completed today.

The Raiders also made a trade in the first round which could pave the way for some early playing time for Brown. Los Angeles dealt wide receiverokie Williams to San Francisco for the 49ers' first-round pick (26th overall), as well as San Francisco's second and fourth-round selections.

"We are very excited about Tim Brown," said new Raiders

Watters powers Gold to victory

By GREG GUFFEY
Sports Writer

Freshman Ricky Watters called Irish football coach Lou Holtz last week and said he wanted to do what was best for the team in regard to a possible switch from tailback to flanker.

Watters played both spots and scored two touchdowns Saturday to lead the Gold to a 27-9 victory in the 58th Annual Blue-Gold Game at Notre Dame Stadium.

Watters, the co-offensive player of the game along with quarterback Steve Belles, caught one pass for nine yards and gained 19 yards on four carries. More importantly, he established himself as the player the Irish must go to in the fall, much like they went to Tim Brown last season.

"He has good hands and has the knack for catching the ball," Holtz said of Watters. "He must get his hands on the ball 12-14 times a game. He's a Tim Brown-type player, but I don't want to compare him with Tim Brown. That wouldn't be fair."

The game signalled the end of spring practice sessions for the Irish. Holtz says a lot of improvement still is needed before the Irish are a good team.

"We are not a good football team now, but we have a chance to have a solid team," Holtz said. "We've got to make a tremendous amount of improvement before we come back. We had a good winter program and a good spring practice, but that doesn't matter if we don't have a good summer workout and then have good fall, two-a-day practices."

The Gold got on the scoreboard first. The Blue team's Stan Smagala touched Sean Connor's punt
