Policy on tailgaters remains the same

By MICHELLE DALL
Senior Staff Reporter

Despite the revised alcohol policy, the University's attitude toward tailgaters will remain the same, according to Ann Firth, director of residence life at Notre Dame.

"There will be no change in the policy regarding tailgating; tailgaters were never supposed to be student-sponsored," said Firth.

The newly-revised 1988-89 Alcohol Policy states, "No student, student organization, or residence hall may organize or sponsor 'tailgaters' on campus or on any adjacent fields or parking lots at any time for the purpose of serving alcoholic beverages."

According to the policy, students who violate the rules will receive a $300 fine upon their first offense. The document also states, "Further violations will result in suspension or dismissal (of the student)."

"Security has always made an effort to enforce the rules at tailgaters," said Security Director Rex Rakow. "No additional officers will be employed this year. Instead, Security will continue to enforce the rules consistently."

"As long as the tailgaters don't infringe on the rights of others and aren't student or dorm sponsored," said Rakow, "they shouldn't impose a greater problem than before. Obviously, large, loud gatherings will attract the attention of security officers."

Although extra measures will not be employed to prevent alcohol consumption in the tailgating area, added steps will be taken to deter alcohol usage inside the football stadium, according to Dick Rosenthal, director of athletics at Notre Dame. "We've added extra hosts and hostesses and re-trained our usher force so they'll identify anyone who attempts to drink in the stadium more easily," he said.

Mutz and Bayh face off in first gubernatorial debate

By DAN MURPHY
Staff Reporter

Republican John Mutz and Democrat Evan Bayh devoted most of their time addressing taxes, education and experience as they faced off in the first debate of their gubernatorial race Wednesday night. The hour-long event was broadcast live from the Center for Continuing Education at Notre Dame.

"We Hoosiers understand the importance of traditional values," said Bayh, the first-term secretary of state, "family, hard work, public service."

The two-term Lieutenant Governor Mutz cited his political experience and accomplishments. "The most important questions are those that will not be asked," he said, "the questions that are determining how we will react to those crisis and challenges that we can't know."

Bayh said he would keep taxes down by fighting wasteful spending, reducing spending by 10 percent and cutting his staff by 20 percent. He indicted Indiana's tax record for the last eight years, which includes five tax hikes, two of which were the largest in the state's history.

Quake rocks 5 states

Associated Press

An earthquake shook Kentucky, Indiana and three other states Tuesday night, alarming thousands of people but causing little significant property damage, authorities said.

Cracks appeared in a few buildings, items fell off walls, pilot lights in furnaces were blown out and a home propane tank overturned near the epicenter of the quake, between Mount Sterling and Sharpsburg in eastern Kentucky.

John Minsch, a geophysicist with the National Earthquake Information Center in Golden, Colo., said the shocks registered 4.5 on the Richter scale compared to a 5.1 reading for a damaging quake that was centered in about the same area in 1980.

"It looks like this is the kissing cousin of the 1980 earthquake," University of Kentucky seismologist Ron Street said Wednesday. "It looks like it occurred in the same spot."

Minsch and Street both said the tremor was not related to the New Madrid Fault, a 150-mile crack in the earth from northern Arkansas to southern Illinois that produced catastrophic earthquakes in 1811 and 1812.

"It practically shook me out of the chair," Betty Raines of Huntington, W.Va., said of Tuesday's quake, which also was felt in Tennessee, West Virginia and Ohio.

The Ohio River town of Maysville, Ky., which suffered $1 million in damage during the 1980 quake, apparently was largely unaffected by Tuesday's tremor. Authorities there said no significant damage had been reported.

Kentucky Department of Mines and Minerals officials said Wednesday there had been no reports of damage to the state's coal mines as a result of the quake.

"I've worried all day about that but so far I haven't had the first call," said David Phillips, the department's district supervisor in Pikeville. Phillips said a severe earthquake easily could cause disasters in coal mines by forcing roofs to collapse.

About 500 people called Cincinnati police to report the quake during the first hour after the quake, said Richard Young, Hamilton County Communication Center supervisor.

Montgomery County, Ky., Fire Chief Wayne Welch said the quake had damaged plaster and ceilings in a 98-year-old apartment building in Mount Sterling. After the shocks subsided, some of about 60 people who live in the building also reported smelling natural gas, Welch said.

Authorities later determined the gas odor was coming from pilot lights for the building's furnaces that apparently had been knocked out during the initial quake or a minor aftershock immediately afterward, Welch said.

State disaster officials and local building inspectors also were checking the condition of several schools in the area.

INSIDE COLUMN

Don't be cruel...
let Elvis rest in peace

Robyn
Simmons
Accent Copy Editor

For the past 11 years, every tabloid newspaper has had one story to fall back on when U.F.O. and Bigfoot sightings were down and Hollywood love affairs weren't heated up enough. It seems that the National Enquirer and its cousins follow one credo:

When in doubt, do another story on Elvis.

Yes, the King has been dead since 1977, but his reign continues. People just can't seem to get enough of him. Elvis' followers make their faithful pilgrimages to Graceland and weep over his grave while placing flowers at his tombstone. Elvis impersonators still perform in nightclubs across the country. And the tabloids keep trying to convince us that Elvis is still alive.

Elvis has reportedly been sighted in a convenience store and driving along a deserted country road. People seem to spot him everywhere. Some women say they have borne his illegitimate children (all born with jet black hair and sideburns.) One woman even claimed that she made love to the ghost of Elvis.

All of these people who claim that they have seen Elvis usually come from towns with a population of about 20 with a collective I.Q. even lower than that. Most eyewitness accounts sound like this: "And there it was, plain as day. It was the biggest thing I ever saw. With rhinestones as big as my head. Then it started to sing 'Love Me Tender,' an' I figured that I had either met my maker or I'd just seen Elvis!"

I know if I ever met the King, I wouldn't go running to the Enquirer. I'd show Elvis around campus, perhaps take him along with my friends when we go out on the weekends. I could introduce him to all the people I meet at parties, "... and these are my friends Nancy, Lisa, and Elvis."

Since Elvis seemed to have an affinity for eating considerable amounts of food in his later years, he could probably work in the dining hall. Elvis could eat all of the leftovers before they became ingredients in some casserole later on in the week.

Elvis would also make Notre Dame a dry campus at last. As I recall, Elvis also had an affinity for intoxicating substances. Monk Malloy could enlist Elvis as a drugs/alcohol officer, confiscating every narcotic in sight.

Elvis would go from party to party saying, "Sorry kids, I'm afraid the party's over. I've got my orders to drink every last drop of beer in the place. Remember, I'm doing this for your own good. If you don't mind, I'll just start drinking from the tap."

With Elvis on campus, he could hold concerts every week in the JACC. People from all over the country would flock to hear him sing and see him wiggle his pelvis onstage. With all of his fans traveling thousands of miles to see the King, South Bend/Mishawaka would truly be "alive with pride."

I know that Elvis has a lot of fans who are truly devoted to him. I will admit that Elvis had an outstanding voice, and his performances were equally enthralling. However, the fact remains that Elvis never wrote any of his songs, hit on a 14-year-old Priscilla when he was about 25, and by the end of his life he was a bloated walking pharmacy.

Of all the people in the world people would want to bring back to life, why should it be Elvis? I don't hear of people sighting Martin Luther King or Ghandi in the grocery store buying Oreos. Why aren't people looking for the ghosts of the truly great leaders of our time instead of a talented performer who let fame go to his head? Seeing Elvis is just wishful thinking, and those people who keep looking for him should spend their time more productively.

So let me make it clear once and for all: Elvis is dead, he has been for 11 years, and he's not coming back. However, I did see John Lennon in the 7-11 the other day...

Old Faithful evacuated for first time in park's history

Associated Press

YELLOWSTONE NATIONAL PARK, Wyo.—For the first time in the 116-year history of the oldest U.S. national park, officials ordered the evacuation Wednesday of the Old Faithful Geyser complex ahead of a 165,000-acre fire.

About 800 visitors calmly left the Old Faithful Inn, which park officials decided to close for the season more than a month early. Later, however, park officials decided to allow day visitors in the area.

High wind caused the North Fork fire to expand by 20,000 acres on its northern flank, but the blaze threatened no buildings in the geyser complex.

Fires in the Greater Yellowstone area, which includes nearby national parks in Montana, have charred close to 1 million acres, park spokeswoman Marsha Karle said.

On Yellowstone's northern border, a river of fire flowed within feet of two small tourist towns, and firefighters hoped winds would continue to shepherd the Storm Creek fire past Cooke City and Silver Gate, Mont.

Nearly 550 firefighters and a fleet of bulldozers were moved to the Island Park area in Idaho to keep the North Fork fire from spreading there.

Forest fires also burned in California, Washington, Idaho and Utah.

The North Fork fire extended a finger of flame toward Old Faithful, but firefighters expected to be able to steer the flames around the southern perimeter of the complex, said incident commander Denny Bungarz.

"It's still sitting up on the ridge, about half a mile away from us," Bungarz said. "We expect the fire, if it does run into our lines, will hit us very lightly. It will not be a big wall of flame."

Park officials changed their mind about closing roads into the geyser complex and banning all visitors after they flew over the North Fork fire, said Joe Evans, district park ranger in charge of Old Faithful.

Park officials also scrapped a plan to evacuate employees of the historic inn and decided instead to have them stay about two days and close the inn for the season, which was scheduled to end Oct. 12, Evans said.

Bungarz said the 13 fires in the Greater Yellowstone area had advanced a total of about 80,000 acres on Tuesday.

The fires burning in the park, which has a total of 2.2 million acres, are the worst by far in the park's history. In no year has the acreage consumed by fire exceeded 30,000 acres, park naturalists say.

The Boise Interagency Fire Center, the coordinating office for firefighting in the West, said fires this year have charred 3.65 million acres.

The Soviet and Afghan cosmonauts as they return from space. (Story below)

Newspaper blames cosmonaut for delay

Associated Press

MOSCOW—The commander of a Soviet space capsule stranded in space for a day may have worsened equipment problems by not taking manual control, the government newspaper suggested Wednesday after the Soyuz TM-5 landed safely.

The government daily Izvestia said reporters questioned deputy flight chief Viktor Blagov of the Soviet space program, on whether the commander, Vladimir Lyakhov, made mistakes Tuesday during attempts to fire braking rockets aboard his Soyuz TM-5 capsule.

The tiny capsule parachuted to a landing at 4:50 a.m. Wednesday, Moscow time, 100 miles southeast of Dzhezkazgan in the Kazakhstan republic of Soviet Central Asia.

Despite a problem with the guidance system, the spacecraft landed within only a few dozen miles of the intended target and only 24 hours late, Izvestia reported.

Television showed the tiny spherical Soyuz capsule floating toward the ground on a white parachute with orange stripes against a reddish dawn sky. A puff of dust rose from the ground when the capsule landed.

Abdul Ahad Mohmand, the first Afghan in space, and Soviet crewmate Lyakhov spent 26 hours aboard the cramped capsule that had enough air for only two days, dwindling food supplies and no toilet.

"Of course it was not an easy thing to sit in spacesuits for 24 hours," Lyakhov, 47, said in an interview near the charred capsule.

The problems began after the capsule undocked early Tuesday from Mir, the space station where Lyakhov and Mohmand spent six days with three other cosmonauts.

After boarding their capsule and undocking from Mir, the cosmonauts made two attempts to reenter the atmosphere on Tuesday.

Izvestia quoted Blagov as giving a philosophical answer to reporters asking whether technical problems or mistakes by mission control or the capsule crew were to blame for the landing delay.

"Life is guilty, a coincidence of circumstances," Blagov said.

Izvestia said Tuesday's first landing attempt was aborted when an infrared sensor used in guiding the spacecraft malfunctioned.

'Hell Week' ends for ND Army ROTC Rangers

By MICHAEL WELLS
News Staff

Yesterday ended the three day ordeal of "hell week" for freshmen and sophomores in the Army ROTC Ranger Corps.

"Basically it's an initiation period for the Rangers," said Senior Chuck Wehnes, Cadet Company Commander for "Charlie" Company (Rangers).

During this period the cadets are assembled on Green Field at 5 a.m. and put through two to three hours of grueling physical and mental workouts. Seventy-two Rangers went through the event, said Wehnes, including the junior and senior officers in charge of the cadets.

This is also the first time the group has consisted of anyone who did not volunteer to become an Army Ranger, said Wehnes.

In previous years, the Ranger company on campus has been composed of only those who voluntarily joined. Now, however, every student entering Army ROTC will be required to spend one semester in each of the three companies: Weapons, Drill, and Rangers, said Wehnes.

Sophomores not previously in the Ranger program will also be spending one semester in each area.

According to Wehnes, the idea behind the rotation is to broaden the experience of every cadet in the Army's program, who will then be given the chance to choose which company he will finally stay with as an upperclassman.

"The changes in battalion have really improved the cadet company. They're going to produce a more qualified cadet, especially when they get to advanced camp," said Wehnes.

Pat Murphy, a sophomore spending his third semester in the Ranger program, described doing "low crawl and high crawl" races through the mud, getting "smoked" when an officer runs you until you drop, and being subjected to "mental harassment" and "mind games."

Nevertheless, Murphy's previous experience with hell week gave him a slightly different perspective this time around, he said. "Last year I was really intimidated. I didn't know any of the people," he said. "This year I wasn't terrified and intimidated, just challenged."

SMC Board of Governance discusses new parking policy

By KAREN BALCERZAK
News Staff

The new parking policy was one issue discussed at last night's meeting of Saint Mary's Board of Governance. Many complaints have been received about increased violation fines, lack of space, and the "no parking in front of dorms" rule.

Student Body President Julie Parrish talked to Jason Lindower, business manager of St.

Mary's, about the present concerns. He said the new policy is a result of the large number of violators and unpaid fines from last year.

Half-hour loading/unloading passes may be picked up at security by leaving one's ID, Parrish said. She added that the McCandless parking lot is only three-quarters full, and students may find plenty of parking space there. Parrish asked students not to park in the Bertrand lot, as it is for convent use only.

The student input table was also discussed at the meeting. This will be today outside Hagggar College Center or, weather not permitting, in the lobby.

"If you have a problem, come to us," said Julie Parrish.

The idea of purchasing a computer for student government use was also discussed. This computer might also be available for student use during certain hours, said Parrish. Possible locations are still up in the air.

Voter Registration at Saint Mary's will be Sept. 20-22 in the dining hall and Hagggar College Center. Registration will be sponsored by Campus Ministry. Information about the presidential candidates will be made available.

If a student is observed violating the alcohol policy in the stadium, the ushers will first ask the student to surrender the alcohol, said Rosenthal. "Then, if the student refuses to comply, the police will be contacted, and the student will have to leave," he said.

"The officers will try to apprehend alcoholic beverages prior to entry into the stadium without inhibiting the rest of the crowd going into the stadium," Rosenthal said.

He added that fans will also be continuously reminded over the PA system not to bring liquor into the stadium.

ND men descend on SMC for yearly raid

Observer Staff Report

Domers descended on the Saint Mary's campus last night to take part in this year's "panty raid," with Regina and McCandless Halls serving as the primary targets due to their large percentage of freshmen residents.

Traditionally held the Wednesday prior to the first home football game, the raid consisted of the men serenading the hall residents with "You Lost That Lovin' Feelin'" as lingerie inscribed with handwritten messages was hurled out the windows while security guards looked on.

Linda Gogliotti of Holy Cross Hall said she participated in the evening's festivities because "it is a tradition and I bought out Hudson's clearance underwear section for it."

Resident advisor Aimee Meccia, explaining the added security measures in effect, said: "Because neither school condones it, men were not allowed inside of any of the dorms while the raid was going on," Meccia said.

Security prevented men from entering the dorms without going through the usual escort procedure.

those which occurred in past years, said Rosenthal. "In the past, a few people have abused alcohol privileges by employing abusive language, being overly exuberant, and becoming ill," he said. "This obviously destroys an otherwise good outing for other fans forced to endure such boorish conduct."

"Our fans are our guests... We have an obligation to the vast majority of our fans to vigorously enforce this policy," he said.

Mutz firmly stated that there would be no tax increase during his administration if elected governor. A "Rainy Day" fund and a 10 percent budget reduction would generate money to cover any new programs or expenses, he said.

Mutz defended the tax hikes made during his administration. He said they were necessary to "clean up" the problems caused by the recession which set in during the Carter administration and to fund the A Plus education reform in 1986.

Accused of wanting to scuttle the A Plus program, Bayh said he wanted to preserve certain aspects of the program, such as lowering the student-teacher ratio and focusing on at-risk children. He said he had reservations about other parts of the program, especially the longer school year, which he said costs the state $100 million.

"The A Plus program is a monumental achievement, truly a piece of leadership," said Mutz. He said would not be able to retain or expand certain parts of the program without a tax increase.

On the issue of higher education, Bayh said he would keep state college tuition within a reasonable limit while raising tuition for students from outside the state by five percent. Mutz stressed a need to raise student aspiration to attend college through scholarships, grants and work-study programs.

"I have more experience now than Ronald Reagan had before he was elected governor of California," said 32-year-old Bayh, "and look where he is now." He said his good ideas qualified him for the job of governor, despite his limited 18 months of political experience.

Mutz said his 20 years of experience and record of programs demonstrate his political knowledge. He said there is no substitute for experience, and the office of governor should go to the candidate who is best prepared.

"There was no clear winner, but I was surprised that both candidates seemed willing to be as combative as they were," said Associate Professor Robert Schmuhl, director of the Program on Ethics and the Media.

Protest will not nullify Alcohol Policy

Did the Administration's new 1988-89 Alcohol Policy catch anyone else as off-guard as it did me? Or were you former Howard residents used to it by now? After finally sifting through the assorted rumors and determining what the new rules actually are, the resulting feeling around campus does not seem to be one of great joy. If we complain or protest, we will probably find ourselves with even fewer privileges than before. We all somehow know that, even though life does not revolve around alcohol, our social lives will never again be the same.

guest column

The first reaction for most of us was that something other than our roommate had been screwed. No alcohol to be served at SYR's, leaving drinking (and socializing) to be done in our rooms? Mandatory 70 percent participation in order for the SYR to take place? I'm hard pressed to think of one of my classes where there is 70 percent attendance (at least on Fridays), and we're not paying $10,000 for that privilege. We found that not only were SYR's affected. After a few chilling rumors that all tailgaters were banned, we were at least relieved to learn that only ones sponsored by students are prohibited. And, not least, my favorite rule: no punch, even non-alcoholic, at parties. All right, maybe students can live with that -- after all, beer is America's drink, not Kool-Aid. But SYR's? Did they really have to take away much of the social aspect of one of the few true opportunities on this campus to get a date? Is nothing sacred?

Put mildly, the University's handling of the entire situation was not the smoothest. Most of us did learn of the policy by word of mouth. Granted, the attitude toward knowingly supplying alcohol to minors is justified. Since all 50 states now see 21 as the legal drinking age, it is logical that Notre Dame's toleration had to fall in line. Yet is it not hypocritical that Indiana has had 21 as the legal drinking age since Prohibition was lifted, and the University has just now gotten around to complying? Wouldn't it have been better to justify an alcohol policy with basis in law when the law was first in place? And isn't it even more hypocritical that while students are not allowed to drink alcohol in the hallway outside their room, just a few feet inside their own four walls they can drink as much as they want, as long as it does not become public?

Not only was the transition handled abruptly and without sensible justification, student privileges were denied and no alternatives were proposed. Last spring, the Task Force on the Use and Abuse of Alcohol suggested several immediate alternatives to social life in their recommendations to the University. Among these were increased availability of recreational facilities on campus, legal lighting for outdoor basketball courts, greater opportunities to socialize on campus, alternate uses for Stepan Center, and development of our "park-like campus" for concerts and outdoor cafe/coffeehouse settings. All great ideas, but what has been done? And so what are we to do? More movies? Ask a date to play football or pool?

Selfish complaints aside, anyone who has been to an SYR can empathize with freshmen who are missing out on the true SYR experience. By this, I don't mean drinking until you get sick and passing out on your date. I do mean finally getting up the nerve to ask someone special to an event that is sure to be a fun time. Roaming the halls, stopping at the bars, checking out the decorations, getting acquainted with your date, socializing, heading to the dance floor after losing some inhibitions. To be sure, SYR's still have the potential to be enjoyable, but we can all imagine a scenario where a bunch of people are crowded into one room, leaving occasionally to grab a bite to eat or maybe go to the bathroom.

It is extremely easy to complain about the entire situation. Yet all of us,

"If we do not support and attend the revised version of SYR's, they may disappear entirely."

especially upperclassmen, have an obligation to ourselves and to others to make the best of the situation. If we do not support and attend the revised version of SYR's, they may disappear entirely. If we all open our minds a little, we may even come up with some positive additions to SYR's. The price of tickets will be lower, so higher attendance may even be easier to attain. Hall sections could contribute extra money and sponsor section dinners before the dance, to allow for a group activity.

There are also probably other positive social alternatives to SYR's that have not yet been thought of. Tom King, co-president of Morrissey Manor, suggests that hall presidents are very interested in regaining support for SYR's and also providing other activities to further enhance social life on campus. King emphasized that anyone with fun ideas for group dorm events talk to their hall presidents about organizing them.

And finally, maybe it would be beneficial to step and remind ourselves of the many other things there are to appreciate about this University. Football season, and seven home games, is now upon us. There will be no shortage of fun, food, and beverage on those weekends. For the time being, we can appreciate the outdoors -- the lakes, the Grotto, the sunshine, and the trees. We all have the opportunity to take part in daily and Sunday masses within our halls. There is no problem finding someone any time to play basketball with, or tennis, or a round of golf. We have also at our disposal an innumerable number of professors who are willing to drop everything and help us deal with our difficulties in their classes.

These are just a few of the positive aspects of our lives here at Notre Dame. We have just been given one of the few negative aspects, the new Alcohol Policy. It has been handed down to us, and we are left to accept it gracefully, or to see what is left of our social lives to disappear. If we fail to give it our support, we should remember that a totally dry campus is not an impossible fate. The challenge lies ahead of us, and if we do not find a way to accept it, we really will end up shooting pool with our dates.

Abortion issue more than black and white

A recent Observer article called for the issue of abortion to be discussed "In light of the authoritative teaching of the church." In response to this challenge, I seek to point out the source of such teaching; to question the ability of those individuals who proclaim as truth that which still remains uncertain in light of physical, philosophical, and Biblical evidence; and to additionally question the authority of those who make moral decisions that affect others upon the premise of their own assumptions.

Contrary to the first point of discussion, there is no current debate (at least in educated circles) concerning when life begins. It is but rather an age-old query involving when the soul enters the body, modern science having already proven the fetus to be a living organism from the moment of fertilization. But is the living fetus a separate entity from the mother, in and of itself? Were the Stoics proper in their assessment that the soul enters the body following birth, or is the Roman Catholic Church right in its assumption that the soul enters the body at the moment of conception?

If one is to answer this latter question satisfactorily and thereby without doubt, it should be suggested that the source of the Church's teaching be properly investigated. If we look to Holy Scripture as the Church's first source of knowledge, not only do we come out empty-handed, but we also find contradiction to the "murderous" accusations made by church leaders concerning the act of abortion itself. There is but one source in the entire Bible (Old and New Testaments combined) that specifically relates to abortion, the conclusion of which states that the destruction of the fetus cannot be deemed murder. Exodus 21:22 reads: "If people, when brawling, hurt a pregnant woman and she suffers a miscarriage but no further harm is done, the person responsible will pay compensation as fixed by the woman's master, paying as much as the judges decide. If further harm is done, however, you will award life for life."

Catholic teaching on abortion is neither founded upon the Laws of Moses nor upon the recorded Gospels of Jesus Christ. It instead coincides with the supportive teachings of the Greek philosopher Plato, who argued that the soul was conferred upon the body at the moment of conception. It is upon this contingency that Church doctrine has developed and endured up to and through the present century.

The three major modern branches of Judaism (Orthodox, Conservative, and Reform) reflect an attitude towards abortion which may, upon the review of the discerning Catholic, provide a more acceptable approach to the issue. Based originally upon the arguments of Rabbinical authorities during the Talmudic era (who collectively accepted Aristotle's view that the soul is conferred upon the body at the moment of conception, which lies in accord with the Exodus passage) all three branches agree that therapeutic abortions may be permitted when the life of the mother is physically endangered by pregnancy, and that (particularly in cases of adultery) abortions for the sake of convenience are inexcusable. Conservative and Reform branches additionally concur that the practice be permitted when the mother's life is mentally endangered by pregnancy, and also in cases of rape and incest. Do these allowances, liberal by official Church standards, make abortion an "easy way out" or an "easy decision?" Of course not. But it does reflect a more responsible, sensible attitude than that of blind faith and constant adherence to a set of impersonable rules.

Catholics believing in the moral permissiveness of abortion under certain circumstances may take comfort in the fact that their beliefs are not entirely inconsistent with Christianity. They are, however, entirely inconsistent with the beliefs of Plato and the established dogma of the Roman Catholic Church. When the theoretical rights of the unborn (especially in cases when the unborn child serves as an aggressor that threatens its own life and that of its mother) are placed in higher regard than the proven rights of the living (the term "living" being defined here as those knowingly in possession of souls), Church documents like the one written by the Second Vatican Council are made paradoxical in nature. Inevitably, a choice does have to be made concerning the issue.

As Christians, we are called to be disciples of Christ, to follow His teachings, and to be compassionate towards others less fortunate than ourselves. But according to some, we are led to believe that someone who disbelieves in official Catholic teaching on abortion has renounced God and stumbled into moral blindness. But what kind of man, professing himself to be a Christian, would willingly and knowingly force his wife, daughter, or loved one to carry through the final term of pregnancy the child of an attacker? Does he disobey the will of his own conscience merely to satisfy an edict written by someone far distant and removed, so as not to break with the formalities of Catholic tradition? Reason stands that he would not, if the man in fact is reasonable. For the choice of any individual on the specific question of abortion is not one of performing an evil to bring about a good, but is rather one involving that having to choose between the lesser of two evils in a very gray area.

CSC offers service to community

Matthew Spatz
accent writer

The Center for Social Concerns. For some students, the name conjures visions of peace-loving, long-haired liberals protesting the killing of whales. For others, the center may be a place where the nuns work. Still others may call it the Commie Cafe. More likely, the name CSC doesn't mean anything to us because we have never bothered to take a look inside. In fact, many students don't even know where it is.

The truth is that the center offers something crucial to the lives of Notre Dame students and staff. It allows them to practice what they preach. In addition, it provides a service to the surrounding community.

The official mission of the center is to "integrate justice and peace concerns into everyday life through formative educational experience." Kathy Royer, coordinator for service and social action groups, said, "We try to take students into the South Bend and other communities to give exposure to different settings." In addition, "We give them a chance to think about and talk about their experience."

There are over twenty-five student-run groups that work with the CSC. They include Amnesty International, Women United for Justice and Peace, Community for the International Lay Apostolate (CILA), Right to Life, and many others. "The groups are fueled by student energy," said Royer. "The center acts as a support system, providing resources and moral support."

Two new groups this year are particularly interesting because they are very much alive in the South Bend area. Food Share picks up left-over food from the Notre Dame dining halls and brings it to soup kitchens in South Bend. Another group, affiliated with the national organization, is Habitat for Humanity. Through actions of the group, two houses in South Bend are being renovated by students for families that would otherwise be homeless.

Perhaps the group enjoying the most support by students is the Neighborhood Study Help Program (NSHP) which provides students with the chance to tutor children of all grade levels in the area. But there are many other ways for students to help. For instance, the Council for the Retarded helps integrate clients of the Logan Center into the community, and volunteers for the Overnight Shelter for the Homeless spend a night to help feed and clothe the homeless.

The Observer/Rob Regovich

Students have easy access to the Center for Social Concerns, located next to the library.

This is the Year of Cultural Diversity, and the center is trying to support it with events such as hospitality lunches. Sept. 16 will feature a Hispanic lunch with Mexican and Spanish food, dancers, and music. The money raised will go to La Casa in South Bend. "Cultural diversity is something we really want to work on this year," said Royer.

"This year, we really want for students to give us a try," Royer said. "For students who don't want their lives to be completely consumed by it, we want them to get a taste of what we are about."

We always hear so much about the Notre Dame family, but many of us are missing the opportunity to put into practice the Christian ideals of service we have been brought up believing. The Center for Social Concerns offers this opportunity, and it may be worth the five-minute walk over to the CSC building to find out about it. By the way, it's that little one with the picnic tables next to the library.

The art of loftmaking

One night during my freshman year, I awoke with a terrifying thought. "I'm suspended seven feet above the floor on a few sticks held together by chewing gum, paper clips, and prayers that were built by a business major from Pittsburgh. That's scary. It gave a must unless you want to stand on the sink to dress. However, this leads to a problem: major construction at the hands of college intellectuals.

It never ceases to amaze me when I walk around the dorm and see someone drilling a hole into a board right free life insurance, and maybe there would be a coffin for the runner-up. I think the prize last year would have gone to some friends of mine who cut all their 4x4 supports and then discovered that their measuring tape was missing the first foot. So they simply tacked on an extra foot of lumber to each piece, and I'm still amazed that they're walking around campus without crutches.

Now that these contraptions are up for another year, it's fun to look around at different ones and estimate how many cold ones were consumed during the construction phase. Let's face it—drinking and building just don't mix. There should be a law against it, but I'm sure du Lac is a step ahead of us.

I've finally gotten over my freshman loft anxiety, but the scars remain for life. This year I'm sitting pretty in a 2x4 temple that won't budge, probably because I had nothing to do with its construction. When I arrived in sunny

South Bend, I had the singular experience of being greeted by a completed loft and a roommate blotched with stain and hammer bruises. I can't take any credit for it, but it comforts me when I fall asleep to think that even after World War III, our loft will stand among the rubble for the cockroaches to enjoy.

Richard Thornburgh

One More Thing

me nightmares even worse than the time I dug into Grandma's asparagus pie before bedtime when I was seven.

That loft deserved to be ranked among the wonders of the modern world for defying the Law of Gravity, and I deserved an Oscar for selling it to some suckers the next year.

I don't know how folks manage in those new-fangled high-rises on the East side, but in the old dorms, lofts are where his hand is holding it in the back. Never give a drill to a philosophy major. It's a sure recipe for disaster. Also, avoid psychology majors during loft building. They can't resist trying to put square objects in the bolt holes.

There really should be some kind of contest for death defying lofts on campus. I mean, why not? There's a contest for everything else here. The winner could get a year's worth of

ND women's soccer looks to Indiana after win

By COLLEEN HENNESSEY
Sports Writer

Two games into their first varsity season, the Notre Dame women's soccer team remained undefeated with a 8-1 victory over St. Joseph's on Tuesday.

"Obviously, we dominated for the most part," said Irish assistant coach Neil Schmidt. "We had 15 corner kicks to their 0. That kind of says it all."

Despite a slow start, in which St. Joseph's scored during the first few minutes, the Irish played a solid game.

"At first we weren't playing too well," said freshman Susie Zilvitis, who had a hat trick in the game, becoming the first Irish woman soccer player to score three goals in a game.

"But after that first goal, we picked it up. It was fun. I just went out and had a good game."

Schmidt credits the victory to a good team effort and said that "there was a lot of intensity shown on the field."

The relative inexperience of the team necessarily places the tactical emphasis on the basics, leaving other areas, such as the passing attack, open to improvement.

"We applied good defensive pressure," said Schmidt. "But we only scored on one corner kick, so obviously we need to work on our restarts."

The Irish will be travelling to Bloomington on Friday to take on Indiana University. Although the Hoosiers are still playing at club status after approximately eight years, Schmidt does not dismiss the competition.

"I predict that it will be a low scoring game," he said. "The defense will take over."

Schmidt said that he and Notre Dame head coach Dennis Grace are still working out their line-up, seeing what combinations work well together and giving the players a chance to find out where they are most comfortable.

"Right now everybody is playing defense and everybody is playing offense," he said.

"It looks good for Friday," said Zilvitis. "We've been working hard to get ready for Indiana."

After the Hoosier game, the next test for the Irish will come on Sunday when they head for Illinois to face Lake Forest.

Garrison upsets Martina in Open

Associated Press

NEW YORK-- Zina Garrison, winless in 21 previous matches against Martina Navratilova, ended her bid for a third straight U.S. Open title Wednesday with a 6-4, 6-7 (3-7), 7-5 victory in the quarterfinals.

Earlier, top-seeded Steffi Graf breezed into the semifinals while Chris Evert, Gabriela Sabatini and Mats Wilander rallied for come-from-behind victories.

Garrison, the 11th seed, blew five match points in the second set before eliminating Navratilova, the second seed who failed to reach the semifinals for the first time since 1982.

Garrison, a 24-year-old from Houston, advanced to the semifinals for the first time.

She appeared to have the match in hand when she raced out to a 5-0 lead in the second set. But Navratilova pulled even by winning the next five games-- staving off three match points before breaking Garrison's service in the ninth game.

Both players held serve before Navratilova easily took the tie-breaker.

The two held serve for the first four games of the final set before Garrison broke on a backhand return to take a 3-2 lead. Navratilova broke in the 10th game when Garrison netted a backhand half-volley, but Garrison broke back with a cross-court forehand to go ahead 6-5.

Navratilova staved off a fifth match point before Garrison ended the 2-hour, 33-minute match with a forehand volley.

Graf won her 33rd straight match and moved to within two victories of completing a Grand Slam with a 6-3, 6-0 victory over No. 14 Katerina Maleeva of Bulgaria.

Maleeva's older sister, sixth-seeded Manuela, lost a two-hour baseline duel to Evert 3-6, 6-4, 6-2, while Wilander beat Emilio Sanchez of Spain 3-6, 7-6 (8-6), 6-0, 6-4.

Sabatini, the fifth seed, beat 16th-seeded Larisa Savchenko of the Soviet Union 4-6, 6-4, 6-1.

Evert, seeded third, was down a set and a break before rallying to reach the semifinals for the 17th time in 18 years.

Soccer

After leading the nation in scoring as a freshman last year, Snow has picked up this season where he left off, scoring all four goals for Indiana last weekend. The Hoosiers are 17-1 in games Snow has scored at least one goal, with that one loss coming against Notre Dame.

Complementing Snow on the front line is Sean Shapert, who led the team with 18 assists last season. Snow, Shapert, and Chris Sciortino are the starting forwards for the Hoosiers.

The Hoosier midfield is weakened by the loss of captain Herb Haller, who sprained his ankle last week and probably will not play. Either Wes Priest or Mike Hanhouser will fill Haller's spot, and Simon Kanter and Han Roest round out the midfield.

Indiana's defense is solid, led by keeper Jeorgen Sommer, stopper John Paul and sweeper Jim Crockford, all of whom were named to the Adidas/Met Life all-tournament team. Matt Isgar and Mark Behringer are the wingbacks.

IRISH ITEMS--No Irish players are expected to miss the game because of injury. Reserve forwards Pat Murphy and Tom Connaghan are both banged up, but expected to play.

Speculation swirls around Tyson 'accident'

Associated Press

NEW YORK-- Mike Tyson's alleged suicide attempt, considered pure fiction by those closest to him, may have been an attempt to attract more attention from a wife who is ignoring him, sources close to the heavyweight champion said.

Tyson's manager, Bill Cayton, meanwhile, confirmed on Wednesday that the fighter's actress wife, Robin Givens, and her mother have urged Tyson to see a Manhattan psychiatrist described as an expert on athletic stress.

Stanford

and kept its intensity long enough to win a game.

Senior Maureen Shea's play improved as the match continued, but neither she nor Bennett and Waller could dominate the net consistently against a much taller Stanford team and, in the decisive game of the match, this proved to be the team's downfall.

The Irish played their best volleyball of the night in the fourth game and looked to be headed for a fifth game showdown with the Cardinals, but after leading 12-8 seemed to lose their concentration and go on the defensive.

Even a brilliant defensive performance, led by Shewman's 21 digs, and Waller's third service ace could not prevent the Stanford team from clawing its way into the lead and the Irish offense became nonexistent in the final stages of the game.

"When it was 12-8, I thought 'We've got them; we're going into a fifth game,'" said Waller. "But instead of finishing the game off, we just seemed to lose our concentration and fall apart as a team."

The match was marked by play that was less than consistent for the Irish and the Stanford team, who executed their offense and defense with almost mechanical perfection, seldom lost their intensity long enough for Notre Dame to take control of the match.

"As far as skill goes I think we're right up there with them," said Shea. "But they had that mental edge and we weren't able to incorporate our individual performances into good team play as a whole."

Waller led the team with 21 kills and 11 blocks and Shea and Bennett each contributed 14 kills, but Stanford was able to neutralize much of this attack. The Irish tallied a total of 17 blocks compared to Stanford's nine, but the Cardinals rarely let the Irish attack reach the floor.

Stanford's rapid-fire substitution kept the Cardinals fresh and the Irish seldom found the combination that could trigger a scoring run.

"We just kept getting better as the match went on," said Lambert, "but we can't expect teams like Stanford to hand us a victory. We've got a tough schedule ahead of us and I think we have the ability to be a top ten team, but you've got to keep your intensity for the entire match or you might as well just give them the game."

Cross country faces G'town

By CHRIS FILLIO
Sports Writer

This Saturday morning, the thunderous herds of Notre Dame alumni will have to temporarily postpone their weekend golf outings in order to give way to the Irish cross country teams. For the women's team in particular, there is an air of uncertainty about this year's squad.

"I'm pretty impressed with the runners we've got here," said women's head coach Tim Connelly. "However, we are definitely the underdog going into this weekend's competition."

Although the women's cross country team returns several top runners from last year, there are still a number of question marks concerning the fall season. Senior captain Theresa Rice should hold down the number one spot, as she did last year by coming through with an excellent track season.

Another senior who will help lead the Irish is Terry Kibelstis. Although she was injured for most of last year and in London during the spring season, Connelly believes that she is prepared to once again race competitively.

The pleasant surprises for the Irish women have been the performances of newcomers Lucy Nusrala and Keveleen Ryan. Nusrala hails from Oregon where she placed third statewide last year.

Ryan is a native of Virginia, finishing sixth overall as a high school senior. Together they may be able to help solidify the women's team.

Other veterans from last year's team who will return are juniors Linda Filar and Wendy Murray, and sophomores Terese LeManski and Jenny Ledrick.

Connelly believes that it will be key for these runners to exhibit a willingness to compete as well as pride when they open the fall season this weekend against Big East power Georgetown.

"We've upgraded the program in terms of competition," said Connelly. "We need to raise our expectations, as well as what the runners expect from themselves."

Connelly conceded that, at least on paper, the Georgetown team is better than the Irish women's team. However, this does not rule out the possibility of a few surprises. The women's race begins at 10:00 a.m. this Saturday morning at the Burke Memorial Golf Course, followed by the men's race at 11:15 a.m.

Saint Mary's volleyball overcomes nerves, St. Joe's

By KRISTINE GREGORY
Sports Writer

The Saint Mary's volleyball team overcame intimidation, nerves and a shaky start to come back and crush St. Joseph Rensselaer last Tuesday at St. Joe's.

"It was the first match of the season and we were nervous," said sophomore Melissa Phillips, "but we pulled together after a tough loss in the first game to win the match. The key was that we didn't get down or dwell on our mistakes. We just got ready for the next point."

St. Joe, an NCAA Division II team, came out strong and pummelled the Belles, an NAIA Division 3 team, 15-2 in the first game.

Giving in was the last thing on the Belles' minds as they came back and easily won the next three games, posting scores of 15-11, 15-4 and 15-11.

The comeback was led by the solid performance of senior Patty Knoebel and the strong serving of sophomore Melissa Phillips.

Stanford too much for Irish volleyball

By MOLLY MAHONEY
Sports Writer

The Irish had the Cardinals in their sights, but they couldn't seem to pull the trigger.

The Notre Dame women's volleyball team had its moments of greatness last night, but fourth-ranked Stanford left South Bend undefeated at 4-0 after defeating the Irish in four hard-fought games, 15-5, 15-12, 7-15, 15-13.

"Everyone had their moments," said Irish head coach Art Lambert, "but we just gave them that last game. We cannot sustain anything for five games and you've got to know that a team like Stanford is going to take you four or five games. We just got into the gift-giving business."

Notre Dame and Stanford were locked in a continuous struggle to maintain momentum but neither could do so consistently. Sporadic play proved to be Notre Dame's fatal flaw and Stanford's perfunctory precision kept the Irish from mounting successful comebacks and maintaining their leads.

The Irish started out slowly in the first game, showing the first signs of the communication problems they would suffer throughout the match, but were still able to make Stanford work for its points.

Unfortunately, the Cardinals steadily accumulated points with their powerful net play and seemingly unpenetrable defense and they never relinquished their lead.

The Irish rallied in game two behind the hitting of seniors Mary Kay Waller and Zanette Bennett, but neither team could maintain their side out long enough to tally more than a point until the Irish broke an endless 8-8 stalemate and gained a 12-9 lead.

But it was not meant to be, as Notre Dame lost its composure after a questionable call by a line judge and struggled to merely stave off the Stanford attack without being able to mount their own.

The team's play improved as the match continued and by the third game they played cohesively enough to keep Stanford on the defensive for much of the game. The Irish experimented with different combinations, rotating senior Whitney Shewman and sophomore Amy White into the lineup, and this chemistry proved to be the difference in the game.

Though the Cardinals made the Irish work for their victory, it marked the first time Notre Dame successfully gained and maintained control of the game

Men's soccer team to face perennial power Indiana

BLOOMINGTON--If the Notre Dame soccer team is looking for praise from the soccer elite, it needs to look no farther than within its home state.

"Upsets for Notre Dame are history," noted Jerry Yeagely, head coach of second-ranked Indiana. "It's to the point that if Notre Dame wins, it's not an upset."

The Irish reached that plateau last season when they surprised the Hoosiers 4-3 in overtime and went on to a 17-3-1 season. When the two teams meet again Friday night at Bill Armstrong Stadium, there will be no surprises.

"Notre Dame is capable of beating any team any day," said Yeagely. "They're a veteran team, they have depth, they have good athletes, and they never give up."

Yeagely knows all too well that the Irish never give up. With a 3-1 lead in last season's game, his team failed to put away the Irish.

That persistence appears to have carried over to this season. Down 2-0 to Lafayette Saturday, Notre Dame ended up winning 3-2.

"They have supreme confidence in themselves," said Irish head coach Dennis Grace of his players. "Down one or two goals, they have enough character and confidence to come back. But it's something they'll have to outgrow."

Thanks to last season's upset and Grace's ties to Indiana (former player and assistant coach under Yeagely), Yeagely is gearing his team to play to its potential against the Irish, and for good reason.

"Notre Dame taught us a big lesson last year," said Yeagely.

"They won't catch us napping this time. We have to be ready to play our best soccer. We have to have the right frame of mind."

The Hoosiers have not lost a regular-season soccer match since that upset, and their most recent victories suggest that they aren't ready to have that undefeated string broken. In its Addidas/Metropolitan Life Tournament last weekend, Indiana bounced No. 3 North Carolina 2-0 and edged No. 4 UCLA 2-1 to win its tournament.

"It was a great weekend, and those were great wins," said Yeagely. "But the team is not satisfied. We didn't play the kind of soccer we're capable of playing."

Meanwhile Notre Dame's offense has been spectacular in the first three games. Bruce "Tiger" McCourt leads the team in scoring with three goals and an assist, and Joe Sternberg follows with two goals and two assists.

While Grace is not making any lineup changes for Indiana, his defense will have to be in top form to stop Ken Snow, one of the best finishers in the game.

As Irish prepare, crunch time approaches

At football practice this week, only one thing was important. Michigan.

What's the big deal? The Irish are at home and aren't far behind in the national rankings.

But the Irish offensive and defensive lines know what they will be up against Saturday when they battle the heralded lines of the Wolverines.

"Michigan's waiting, Michigan's waiting," sang out one coach in reprimand.

"I don't care what Michigan thinks of us coming into the game," Irish head coach Lou Holtz says. "I only care what they think going out."

Michigan's daily quarterback guessing game doesn't take away from the talent.

"Demetrius Brown is a fine quarterback, even if he did have a bad day against us," Holtz says. "If someone on that team beats him out, that really tells me something."

Notre Dame's 2-3 record against the Wolverines includes last season's 26-7 win at Michigan Stadium.

"What worries me most about Michigan is that they're Michigan," Holtz says. "They play well, they play intelligently, they play hard, they're good and sound and they're well coached. They are one of the best teams in the country. They just don't make many mistakes. Last year was an exception, but that wasn't the real Michigan team."

Heading into spring practices, there were a lot of spaces to fill on the team. Which players does Holtz think have made the most progress since May?

"That'd be hard to say; there'd be so many of them," Holtz says. "Winston Sandri (offensive guard) would be one candidate, then there's (center) Mike Heldt, George Williams and Chris Zorich (defensive tackles). I could just go on and on."

Holtz mentions both offensive and defensive linemen, but he regards the players on the defensive line as the most improved on the team.

"In three weeks, they've come a long, long way," he says.

Injury report-- Tailback Tony Brooks has a stress fracture in his foot that will eventually require surgery. Holtz plans to let him play and hope that he can finish the season.

"We've got our fingers crossed," Holtz says. "He may always be one play away from ending his season. He can't do it any more harm by not treating it now, but he's just one step away from the anesthesiologist."

Defensive tackle Tom Gorman says he will be ready to play following despite battling a shoulder injury.

"Up until three days ago, I was just watching, but Sunday I was in the action again. It'll be okay, I'll play, and the shoulder is going to be fine."

Fullback Anthony Johnson suffered an ankle injury last week but was practicing with the team this week.

You'll be ready for it when it happens.

The NCAA has added a new scoring option for teams with offensive troubles.

If a team blocks an extra point attempt, they can pick up the football and run it the other way, scoring two points if they cross the other team's goal line.

Who thinks these things up, anyway?
