ND hosts Hiler-Ward congressional debate

By REGIS COCCIA
Senior Staff Reporter

The candidates for Indiana's 3rd Congressional District went head to head Thursday night in the Joyce ACC in the first student-run congressional debate ever held at Notre Dame.

Incumbent Rep. John Hiler and Democrat Tom Ward responded to questions from a six-member student panel on issues ranging from the economy to education.

Hiler said he hoped the debate would bring out some of the differences between his opponent and himself. The one-hour meeting did just that, giving the audience a look at the positions of both candidates.

The Republican Hiler drew heavy fire during the debate from Democrat Ward, who criticized the incumbent's congressional record and stances on defense spending and education. Hiler accused Ward of ignorance of the issues.

Hiler stressed the importance of economic growth during his terms in Congress in providing jobs, improving the education system and building a strong national defense.

But Ward criticized the eco-

Rep. John Hiler

nomie policies of the Reagan administration, calling the increasing federal budget deficit a "terrible legacy" he was "not proud of."

"Over the last eight years we've made a number of decisions that have helped restore the vitality of our economy," Hiler said. "I have been happy to be in Congress the last eight years and cast some of those tough votes and make some of those tough decisions that are responsible for the dramatic improvement in the economy."

The government's toughest job in the next two years will be bringing the deficit under control, Ward said. "When we look at priorities, I know where mine are at and I know where I want to make the cuts and I know where things need to be supported," he said.

Ward stressed the need for cuts in defense spending, calling the MX missile program "a tremendous waste of U.S. dollars."

"I see it as very important that we invest money in education, and that making dollars available to students who don't have the wherewithal to go to school," said Ward, a Notre Dame graduate.

Asked what he would do to remedy skyrocketing tuition costs for students like those at Notre Dame and Saint Mary's, Hiler said there are two ways funds can work for students.

"I think one of the highest priorities of the secretary of education is to do an in-depth study of what is driving the cost side of the equation of higher education," he said. "If we continue to have that price inflation, in a generation or two generations nobody is going to be able to afford it."

Removing the house or sole proprietorship business or farm from family assets in financial aid consideration would help students, Hiler said. A study of grants and loans would help diminish loan defaults and make more higher education funding available, he added.

Tom Ward had hard words for his Republican opponent but agreed that removing homes from financial aid assets would help. "I don't have any confidence in the incumbent doing anything positive for higher education," Ward said.

"Too many students are borrowing too much money, coming out of college with too much debt," he said, but did not specify how the financial aid system for higher education should change.

"I'd like to continue to put my experience to work for this community," Hiler said in

ND off-campus students robbed

By MATT GALLAGHER
Senior Staff Reporter

A home occupied by four off-campus students was broken into October 15, and the thieves escaped with an undetermined amount of cash and property.

Tracy Swetz, a resident of the Northeast-neighborhood home, said she and a housemate, Michelle Lynch, were home asleep when the break-in occurred at about 2:30 a.m.

"We woke up when we heard our dog barking," Swetz said.

When she and Lynch went to investigate, Swetz said, "We heard at least two voices downstairs, and it sounded like they were rummaging through the kitchen."

The two residents then proceeded to call the South Bend Police Department, who arrived at the house within five minutes, according to Swetz. The police dispatcher had the residents remain on the telephone until the officers arrived.

Swetz said the intruders apparently kicked in the plexiglass cover over a basement window to gain entry to the house. The robbers took at least $100 in cash, a radio and several pieces of jewelry of an undetermined value.

When police arrived on the scene, the intruders had already left. Swetz said she believed the thieves heard her voice and fled.

According to Lt. Kilgore of the South Bend Police Department, the intruders made off with $75 in cash, a table lamp and a bottle of rum. The lamp and broken bottle were later found near the home. Currently, police have no suspects in the case.

Swetz said she and her housemates plan to increase the security of the house.

"We've boarded up the broken window and added several locks," Swetz said.

Swetz said she and her housemates have contacted several of their student neighbors to form a neighborhood watch group.

She also said she believed her house was an ideal target for crime. "We're in a bad location, we're girls, and we're basically easy targets."

7 alumni, 2 ND students assaulted

By SARA MARLEY
Senior Staff Reporter

A recent fight on the 900 block of Corby Boulevard has left several alumni injured and some off-campus students worried about neighborhood relations.

According to Seniors Kevin Camblin and Craig Simon, the fight began when seven alumni were attacked on Oct. 15 around 11:30 p.m. while leaving the students' house on Corby Street.

Simon said one alumnus was stabbed in the arm and required stitches. Another was beaten in the face and broke his jaw, according to Simon.

The alumni were walking to their cars in the S and N Mini-Mart on South Bend Avenue. "There were five guys and two girls walking to their cars. They were attacked out of nowhere by twenty blacks, aged fifteen to eighteen or nineteen, using baseball bats and brass knuckles," said Simon.

Simon and Camblin responded to the commotion. "We drew the crowd to ourselves, and they (the alumni) were able to get into their cars and go to the hospital," Simon said.

"Our neighbors from across the street were helping us to break it up," said Simon.

"After the cops left, a shot was fired," Simon said. "At that point, we just got everyone inside," he said.

According to Simon, the police returned to the scene and the crowd dispersed.

Neither Simon nor Camblin was seriously injured, and neither filed a police report. Four other reports were filed by alumni.

Two arrests were made in the incident. Eric Gilbert, 24, of Chicago was arrested for public intoxication and resisting law enforcement. Eric Ruffin, 27, of South Bend was arrested for public intoxication and disorderly conduct.

"It is more than likely that this incident was precipitated by alcohol," said Lieutenant Richard Kilgore of the South Bend Police Department.

Simon reported there had been "no retaliation" from the attackers, but housemates Mike Flynn and Mike Nolan did receive crank phone calls during October break. "Someone would call and hang up," Flynn said, adding that he felt the calls were made in an attempt to find out if the students were at home.

"Now we don't know what to expect. We don't know if this is an isolated incident or if this will make the situation worse," Simon said.

"We thought about moving out, but we didn't want to run out on our landlord or the other students who live in the neighborhood," said Simon.

The students have scheduled a meeting with Phil Johnson,

INSIDE COLUMN

Miami fan is still fuming over alleged 'fumble'

No, I'm not digging into Lou Holtz' was-tebasket.

This letter, from a man named King ---- from Miami, was sent to The Observer with a challenge scrawled in red marker across the top of the page: DO YOU HAVE THE "CLASS" TO PRINT THIS?

Dear Mr. Holtz,

I have waited three days to write this letter to be able to write a reasoned letter..

Maybe, King, you should have waited three weeks.

I watched the game on television from beginning to end, and it is clear from what I saw at the time and from the films and the newspaper stories that the officials badly mishandled the ruling on the supposed fumble at the 1-yard line late in the fourth quarter.

I don't remember that particular play, King. It is clear to any unbiased observer such as I...

Yeah, right.

...that the runner's knee had touched the ground before the ball came loose from his grasp. That being the case, the ruling should have been "first down" for Miami at the 1-yard line. That is what Coach Jimmy Johnson was indicating on the sideline.

With a first down at the one yard line, there is no doubt that the University of Miami would have scored, either a touchdown or at least a field goal.

In that case, King (may I call you King?), I guess there would have been no reason to play the downs. Why not put the points on the board and get on with the rest of the game?

But this is where the letter gets really good.

If you and the University of Notre Dame have any of the "class" that you say the University of Miami lacks, you will voluntarily forfeit the game, since you clearly did not defeat Miami without the help of the officials.

This is the guy who called himself an unbiased observer.

If you are still convinced that Notre Dame defeated the University of Miami honestly without any illegal assistance from incompetent or biased officials...

Are you suggesting some sort of conspiracy against your Hurricanes?

...you will seek a re-match and re-play the game at whatever post-season bowl is willing to host the event.

Sorry, King, we may be playing for a national championship that day.

Otherwise, if there is no good-faith effort on your part to correct this grave injustice, the game next year in the Orange Bowl will be a massacre, with the "Fighting Irish" being pounded into the dirt and becoming fertilizer, producing a good turf for future Hurricane games.

Theresa Kelly
Assistant Sports Editor

Remember this guy claimed to be writing a "reasoned letter" and, of course, is unbiased.

I appreciate your attention and anticipate your prompt announcement that Notre Dame is forfeiting the game in the spirit of good sportsmanship.

Sincerely, King ----

Okay King, here's the deal. Notre Dame will forfeit the game to Miami, which then in turn will forfeit the game back to the Irish in a classy gesture in response to the first-half "incompletion" that would have been called a fumble had the officials not given Miami "illegal assistance from incompetent or biased officials" when Irish defender Frank Stams hit Miami quarterback Steve Walsh on the Miami 37-yard line.

And forfeit the game to Michigan, also because of officiating.

This is getting ridiculous.

Fans of the Miami football team, like King, had the chance to show they had class and could lose gracefully. Jimmy Johnson could have followed the example of his players, especially Walsh, who credited the Irish with playing well and said it was "a great game between two great teams."

Instead, Coach Johnson whined about the fumble call for a week. No class.

But that's okay, King (and Johnson), because the Irish are looking forward to giving you another chance to be graceful losers--next year at the Orange Bowl on Nov. 25.

Awad: Israeli-Palestinian conflict may be solved by non-violence

By FLORENTINE HOELKER News Staff

Nonviolence is the only way the opposing factions in the Gaza strip can come to any type of agreement, according to Dr. Mubarak Awad, the founder and director of the Palestinian Center for Nonviolence.

Awad spoke about "Non-violence in Action" in a lecture at the Notre Dame Law School Thursday. Awad detailed conditions in the West Bank in Gaza, where Israeli forces have occupied the territory for a number of years. He said that, despite the terrible restrictions imposed upon Palestinians by Israel, "there have been changes in the Palestinian concept of peace."

"Many suppose that an understanding of the Middle East either gives people a headache or promotes the response that the situation is unsolvable. I feel strongly that there is a solution to the problem," Awad said.

The solution, which Awad believes has been gathering support from the Palestinians, is nonviolence. He has written articles directed at the Palestinians which list ways to oppose the Israeli occupation. Awad said he believes actions such as writing "P.L.O." on Israeli currency, rejecting any mail not written in Arabic and being proud of filling Israeli jails will effectively demonstrate that the occupation is wrong.

"A change in the social conditions of the Palestinian people" is beginning, he said. "We have stopped being afraid, and we now are becoming proud and feel strong about ourselves. We now realize that the Israelis are also afraid."

As a result of this realization, the Palestinians have sent a challenge to Israel—a challenge of peace. This challenge will only be met when both factions learn to accept one another, according to Awad.

Awad said much progress would be made if the United States peacefully supported both sides, instead of providing military aid to Israel. "Neither of us is the good guy; neither of us is the bad guy. Both Israelis and Palestinians need peace."

"Believe me," Awad said, "if there were peace in the Middle East, America would benefit."

Alum and Newsweek writer speaks at ND

By REGIS COCCIA
Senior Staff Reporter

Newsweek writer Frank Maier, a Notre Dame graduate who almost died from chronic liver disease, returned to campus Thursday to tell about his experience.

Accompanied by his wife Ginny, Maier told students in LaFortune's Montgomery Theater how he struggled with death and survived to write about it. The account of Maier's illness and recovery was the cover story on Newsweek's Sept. 12 edition.

"In February of 1987, I was dying. That kind of jolts you," Maier said. "It's not like the movies. It was like getting a death sentence for murder. But you can appeal a murder sentence; I couldn't."

Maier was diagnosed in 1984 as having chronic active hepatitis, a progressive disease which attacks the liver, the body's most complex organ after the brain. A gland crucial for regulating blood and body chemicals, a poorly functioning liver causes other organs to break down.

Maier's illness had progressed so much that on St. Patrick's Day, 1986, his heart stopped. Numerous hospital stays forced Maier to leave his job as Newsweek's Chicago bureau chief. His illness became so severe he was unable to perform everyday activities; even reading and writing became impossible, he said.

Faced with the only solution to preserve his life, Maier underwent a liver transplant operation on May 12, 1987. Liver transplantation, currently the most complex single-organ operation, was performed on only 1,182 patients last year, Maier said.

Maier said he wrote stories about organ transplants but never expected to undergo one.

"I really wasn't sure I was ever going to wake up again," he said. But the 10-hour operation in Minnesota's Mayo Clinic was successful.

"My first instinct was, 'I gotta call New York. I'm alive, and it's a terrific story,'" said Maier. "I'm the first journalist in the history of mankind to go through a liver transplant."

Surviving the operation was one thing, but getting the story on it in the magazine was another, Maier said. An initial meeting with his editors in New York was positive, but weeks and months passed before the story was mentioned again, he said.

"It sort of dawned on me that getting this story into the magazine had nothing to do with me or the story itself. I thought, 'I'm losing the battle on politics,'" Maier said.

"I was involved in two ways. Professionally, I thought, 'Here's a great story. Why don't those yo-yos in New York get on it?' I was involved emotionally," he said. "I wanted to tell my story. Getting it in was just as compelling as staying alive had been."

The story was eventually published, said Maier, nearly 10 months after he wrote it. Maier said response to the story has been overwhelming, adding he has personally received 125 letters from organ donors and people suffering from illnesses like his.

"The one thing we learned from this story was, no matter how bad we thought we had it, other people had it worse," Maier said.

"Now I really am much more interested in people," he said.

Maier came to campus at the request of longtime friend Robert Schmuhl, University professor of American studies and director of the Program for Ethics in Media.

24 hour shelter for homeless scheduled to open on Dec. 1

By MICHAEL WELLS
Staff Reporter

The downtown homeless shelter, where several Notre Dame students and faculty members volunteer their services every year, will open again for the winter on November 1, according to Law School Dean David Link.

Link said a new 24 hour center for the homeless is still being readied in a refurbished building on Michigan Street, but should be open by December 1.

Link, along with J. D'Arcy Chisolm, associate director for the Center for Pastoral and Social Ministry, is one of the directors of COPOSH, a newly formed coordinating group for homeless services. COPOSH, which stands for the Council of Providers of Services to the Homeless, is largely responsible for the establishing of the new center, according to Link.

"The original motivation of COPOSH was to provide more services than simply sheltering the homeless," said Link. "We're trying to get all these organizations who are doing something for the homeless into one organization."

Link described the soon-to-be-opened center as "more than a shelter." The new building, Link said, will include a drop-in center, food services, emergency clothing and counseling services. "Do we just put these people in a building," said Link, "or do we give them someplace to go with dignity?"

While the new shelter itself will continue to be run by the United Religious Community, other help agencies will also assist in carrying out the related services. "This is not going to replace anything except the old Maranatha shelter," said Link, referring to other community services provided by the COPOSH member agencies.

The United Religious Community has run the shelter for the past five years in the basement of the Maranatha Temple.

Fifteen local agencies are participating in COPOSH, said Link. "Here we've found a great spirit of cooperation among service providers," he said.

Another thing that makes this project different is the University's ownership and refurbishing of the building which will house the new center, according to Link.

Link said Father Malloy has referred to the University's involvement as a "social justice investment."

He said the University's involvement was neither a pure charity effort nor a profit-making venture. "They're the owners of the building. That relieves all these other charitable organizations of great expense," said Link. In addition, he indicated that Father Malloy may have taken an interest because of traditionally high participation in past years. "This is unique, in that he sees a lot of student involvement," said Link.

According to Link, Notre Dame will provide about half of the volunteers who will work at the shelter. He added, "We will need to increase our number of student volunteers. One of the big changes is that this will be open most of the day, and it will be open year round."

Summing up the intent of the new COPOSH effort, Link said, "We're really talking about helping people get back on their feet."

Flynt says his threat was 'only a joke'

Associated Press

LOS ANGELES—A $1 million check Hustler publisher Larry Flynt gave a Soldier of Fortune was a joke, and a story that it was payment for killing Frank Sinatra and three publishers was concocted later, Flynt's lawyer said Thursday.

Bizarre behavior by Flynt was at its height when he allegedly wrote the check on Nov. 14, 1983, to Mitchel WerBell for the slaying of Sinatra, Playboy publisher Hugh Hefner, Penthouse publisher Robert Guccione and former TV guide publisher and U.S. ambassador Walter Annenberg.

"The allegations are totally unfounded," said Flynt's attorney, Alan Isaacman. "Back in November 1983, Larry Flynt had a dinner party and gave out, as a joke, million-dollar checks to about half a dozen people."

WerBell, head of a Georgia private security center called Sionics Inc., of which Flynt was a client, was among those given a check at the party, said Isaacman, "and there wasn't any talk of killing anyone. That was someone else's idea."

The sons sued Flynt in a Georgia court to get the money, and Isaacman said the case was thrown out. The check was preserved as part of the court record, he said.

Sheriff's Capt. Robert Grimm said Wednesday there was no evidence the alleged plot went further. But Los Angeles County Sheriff Sherman Block said Wednesday he took the matter seriously, although no charges had been filed.

Kozol speaks on homeless

By SARAH VOIGT
News Staff

Jonathan Kozol, author of several books on adult illiteracy and the homeless, gave a lecture Thursday entitled "At the mercy of America: the homeless and their children." Kozol cited widespread ignorance about the plight of the homeless and cuts in federal aid as reasons for the half million homeless children in America.

"We've always had homeless in America, but never this flood of family homelessness. Not since the Great Depression have there been so many homeless children in America," Kozol said.

Kozol said rents in low income housing have skyrocketed in all the major cities in recent years, resulting in an increased number of homeless Americans. In addition, he said, two million jobs per year have been eliminated since 1980. Most of these jobs were in the suffering steel, auto and textile industries.

"With rents up and wages down, the White House picked this decade to cut benefits," Kozol said. Although the need for aid has increased, federal funding for housing projects has decreased, according to Kozol.

In what Kozol refers to as "possibly the single greatest domestic budget cut of the Reagan administration," yearly funding to provide low cost housing has decreased from a high of 32 billion dollars in 1979 to an all time low of 7 billion dollars today.

"In New York City today, the waiting list for public housing is 18 years, 12 years in Boston and 20 years in Miami. The administration has stopped building public housing. Yet the president tells us that the homeless are 'homeless, you might say, by choice,'" said Kozol.

For the past three years, Kozol has lived and worked in the Martinique Hotel, one of the 60 shelters for the homeless in New York City. The Martinique houses 2,000 destitute people, 1,400 of which are children. Kozol focused much of his lecture on impoverished children.

"Sometimes I wish they (the homeless children) would march into the lobbies of elegant hotels and make it impossible for them to enjoy their pleasures. At least if these kids could strike out in this way, they wouldn't strike at themselves," Kozol said.

Kozol links extreme poverty to the drug problems endemic to the homeless shelters. He refers to their widespread drug and alcoholic abuse as "a disguised form of suicide."

According to Kozol, the tragedy of homelessness transcends the partisan issue. "Homeless children need Americans of all political positions to hear their words," Kozol said.

"Someday, we're told, there will be physicians for these children, food for their families, mercy for their mothers. Someday, somewhere, someplace—but not now. These children that are alive right now will not profit from the blessings of another decade, from the kindness of another congress or the mercy of another head of state," Kozol said.

"That's the pity; that's the urgency. They will have no second chance to live their childhoods.... This is an irreversible theft. The loss is incalculable, the crime unspeakable," he said.

Soviets release only a few political prisoners

Associated Press

WASHINGTON--The expressed intention of the Soviet Union to release all political prisoners by the end of the year may refer only to a small group of people, perhaps as few as 20, the State Department said Thursday.

Spokesman Charles Redman said the two superpowers continue to disagree on the definition of exactly what constitutes a political prisoner.

He said Moscow insists the term fits only those actually charged with political offenses, while Washington says it also should include those jailed on "trumped-up charges."

"We've long pressed for the release of Soviet political prisoners," Redman told reporters. "The Soviets finally accept that there are such prisoners, but we continue to disagree on a definition."

He said Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze told U.S. officials during a visit to the United States last month that there were only about 40 such prisoners, all of whom had been convicted for violations of the political and religious articles of the Soviet criminal code.

But Redman said U.S. officials have raised with the Soviets the names of some 200 prisoners, including those jailed on fabricated charges.

West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl told reporters in Moscow on Wednesday that he had been assured in talks with Soviet officials that all political prisoners would be released within 10 weeks.

However, the Foreign Ministry spokesman, Gennady Gerasimov, refused to confirm or deny that a release of political prisoners is imminent, saying there are only about two dozen such prisoners.

assistant director of Notre Dame Security, to discuss the situation "to make sure they're aware of what went on and to see if he has any suggestions for us," said Simon.

Camblin and Simon stressed that anyone walking in the neighborhood should be cautious. "We've been here five years, and we're finding out this neighborhood is more dangerous than we ever thought," Camblin said.

The students cited other cases of harassment involving people walking in the neighborhood, near The Commons, Bridget McGuire's Filling Station and other off-campus student residences.

"People walking should be careful. I don't plan on walking to Bridget's by myself anymore, and I live a block away. Incidents like this can happen," Simon said.

Police reports indicate a call was made at 11:50 p.m. responding to a fight in the 900 block of Corby Street and a possible stabbing. A total of four police reports were made, none by Notre Dame students.

The reports list Michael Nelson, 25, of Clinton, MA, as receiving a knife wound in his upper left arm. "The victim realized he'd been cut and went to Bridget's, where an off-duty South Bend police officer reported the incident at 11:50," said Kilgore.

Nelson reported he was at a party when the attack occurred. He was transported by ambulance to St. Joseph's Medical Center.

Two additional reports of aggravated assault and one report of simple assault were also filed from Memorial Hospital, where the victims were seeking medical assistance, according to Kilgore.

Christopher Long, 25, of Smyrna, GA, was assaulted by a black male approximately 25 years old who was bleeding from an unknown head injury. Police reports indicate the suspect confronted Long and Roderick Cockburn, 25, also of Smyrna, in the parking lot of the S and N Mini-Mart and accused Long of causing the suspect's injury.

Long said he had never seen the suspect before. The suspect then punched Long in the face, injuring Long's right eye and left cheek, according to Kilgore.

After being struck in the back of the head, Cockburn fell to the ground and received additional blows to the face. According to police reports, the suspect was carrying a baseball bat.

The suspects fled westward, according to Kilgore.

A fourth report was filed by Sheryl Kane, 23, of Indianapolis. Kane reported being struck in the face by a white female suspect while returning to her car in the S and N parking lot during the same incident. The suspect attempted to enter the victim's car for an undetermined reason, according to Kilgore.

"The reporting officer estimated there were 200 people in the immediate area," said Kilgore.

Bush maintains lead over Dukakis

Associated Press

George Bush pocketed a labor endorsement Thursday and said his drive for the White House was "all about creating jobs and opportunity." Underdog Michael Dukakis accused his GOP rival of airing negative campaign commercials to "divert attention" from Reagan-Bush administration failures.

The pollsters' daily tidings were good once again for Bush, who was reported leading 51 percent to 42 percent in a nationwide survey taken for NBC and the Wall Street Journal. New polls also showed a tight race in New York, one of the country's most Democratic bastions.

Dukakis made his way toward Harry Truman's home town of Independence, Mo., likening himself to the "feisty little guy" who won the White House four decades ago in a storied upset. "Harry Truman was a fighter, and so am I," he said.

In a 14-minute live interview on the CBS "Evening News," Dukakis said again and again he wants to put the government on the "side of average Americans."

The Democrat also conceded that Bush commercials depicting him as weak on crime, defense and the environment had done him political harm. But he said they were also intended to "to divert public attention from the fact that this administration has probably had more corruption and malfeasance than any in recent memory if not in history."

"This is not about who puts together the best commercials or best advertising," he said. "It's about which one of us, Mike Dukakis or George Bush, has the strength and the values to run this country."

Bush continued his week-long emphasis on economic issues as he made his way down the Pacific Coast from Washington to California. Along the way he accused Dukakis of trying to "fan the flames of protectionism" in comments on trade and of "trying to scare the American people by putting Japanese flags on these American commercials of his."

Bush won the endorsement of the 50,000-member Marine Engineers Beneficial Association at a rally interrupted by protesters. Four were hustled away, including one whose nose was bloodied, and Bush paused in his speech long enough to remind them of the high interest rates that prevailed at the end of the Carter administration.

"This election is all about creating jobs and opportunity," he said, promising to keep the economic expansion alive.

US embassy in Moscow is bugged and must be rebuilt

Associated Press

WASHINGTON--President Reagan recommended Thursday that the new U.S. embassy in Moscow be razed and rebuilt from the ground up because it is riddled with listening devices that cannot be removed.

Reagan told reporters the United States has "no choice" in the matter "because there's no way to rid it of the many listening devices that were built into it."

"We're going to start and have an American-built one," Reagan said of the embassy.

At the State Department, spokesman Charles Redman said Reagan will urge Congress to permit the virtually completed embassy to be demolished and reconstructed with American-made components to be shipped from the United States and stored in Moscow warehouses under the tightest possible security. He said the building will be assembled by U.S. workers taken to Moscow for that purpose.

The Soviets will not be permitted to move into their newly built embassy in Washington until the United States can occupy its facilities in Moscow, Redman said.

He said that tearing down the existing structure and building a new one under high security conditions will involve "a very elaborate and costly process."

"Obviously we're talking years," Redman said.

But he said the final cost cannot now be estimated because entirely new engineering and architectural plans will have to be drawn up.

He said Reagan's proposed demolition and reconstruction plan was recommended by Secretary of State George Shultz following several reviews of the project by U.S. experts.

"This option offers the best overall solution to the problem," Redman said.

He said the rebuilt eight-story embassy will occupy the same site but will be different than the one recommended for demolition. The new structure will incorporate features "to take into account what we have learned" about Soviet eavesdropping capabilities, he said.

"Every precaution will be taken to assure the security of the process," Redman said.

House members raise $14.4 million for campaigns

Associated Press

WASHINGTON--The 58 House members facing no major party challenge to re-election have raised $14.4 million for their campaigns, and nearly half of them will be entitled to keep any unspent money when they retire, a private study said Friday.

The list includes such House leadership figures as Speaker Jim Wright, D-Texas, and Reps. Claude Pepper, D-Fla., chairman of the Rules Committee; John Dingell, D-Mich., chairman of the Energy and Commerce Committee, and Kika de la Garza, D-Texas, chairman of the Agriculture Committee.

Forty-one of the 58 unopposed lawmakers are Democrats, who control the House, according to the study compiled by the watchdog group Congress Watch. The $14.4 million includes $7.3 million from political action committees.

"That these PACs feel compelled to contribute to lawmakers who have no opponent shows that what's being sought is access and influence, not compatible candidates or good government," said Joan Claybrook, president of Public Citizen, the parent organization of Congress Watch.

The legislators or their aides who were questioned defended the fund raising, arguing that campaign funds must be collected before they know whether they will have an election opponent.

"If you had a crystal ball, you wouldn't enter into one of these fund-raising strategies," said Cliff Gibbons, who is campaign finance manager for his father, Rep. Sam Gibbons, D-Fla.

Congress Watch said the elder Gibbons has raised $309,537 from PACs, second highest total among the unopposed incumbents, and $503,340 overall, the third highest mark after Rep. Martin Frost, D-

Texas, and Dingell. Gibbons is chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee subcommittee on trade.

PAC are formed by corporations, labor unions and other interest groups to funnel money to candidates, with incumbents the long-favored recipients. For the 1986 elections, according to Federal Election Commission records, PACs sent 88 percent of their contributions to lawmakers seeking re-election.

Testing service plans new exam to assess teachers

Associated Press

NEW YORK--The Educational Testing Service unveiled plans Thursday for a comprehensive new teacher licensing exam, including computer simulations of classroom situations, to help states weed out incompetents.

"There is a widespread and growing concern about the preparedness and effectiveness of beginning teachers, and we believe that breakthroughs in research and technology make possible a new kind of assessment that will provide greater assistance, fairness and accuracy," said ETS president Gregory Anrig.

He expressed hope that the new exam would help put to rest recurring charges by teacher unions and others that existing teacher tests don't accurately assess classroom skills and are unfair to minorities.

Jane Usdan, a spokeswoman for the American Federation of Teachers, called the new test "a step in the right direction."

We have said we need to test teachers differently, not only on what they know but on what they can do."

The exam is designed as a licensing tool for beginning teachers and is not intended to assess veteran teachers, Anrig stressed.

Prototypes of the exam, as yet unnamed, will be field tested in 1990, and a final version is expected to be ready in 1992, according to the Lawrenceville, N.J.-based testing service.

The test eventually is expected to replace the National Teacher Exam, a paper-and-pencil multiple choice test taken by some 200,000 teaching candidates a year and administered by ETS. That test, which costs from $35 to $50 depending on how many parts of it a state requires, was first offered in 1939 and is part of the teacher licensing program in 30 states.

Unlike current teacher exams, the new test is designed to be taken at three stages of a would-be teacher's training.

The first part would use a computer to test reading, math and writing skills during or after the second year of undergraduate study.

The second test would assess grasp of subject matter and teaching principles following completion of teacher training.

Beginning teachers would take a third test to evaluate how well they perform in actual classrooms once they have had some supervised teaching experience. It would include observation of teaching performance and computer simulations of classroom situations.

"The evaluation may extend over a period of time for a prospective teacher, giving states a much better sense of professional development," said Carol Dwyer, an ETS senior development leader who created the new test. "The method also allows the student to find out early whether he or she meets the prerequisites needed to teach while there is still time to improve or make other career plans."

The right to vote

Residents of Soweto, in Johannesburg, South Africa, look for their names on the voters role in order to cast their ballots for a municipal representative in Wednesday's nationwide municipal elections, which have been marked by tight security, sporadic bombings, and partial stayaways.

closing, citing areas such as drug abuse, child care and education as areas he will work to improve.

Ward ended with a last stab at his opponent and stressed his own campaign as "people-oriented." "When it came time for people items, this man's (pointing to Hiler) vote was cut, cut, cut. My priorities are put the people first. Let's make sure we put people before corporate profits."

About 750 attended the debate, which culminated a Notre Dame-Saint Mary's student government push to increase political awareness on campus, said Student Body President Tom Doyle.

"By and large it was students who attended. That was the whole goal," Doyle said. "I think it's a tremendous credit to the students who set it up."

The six-member panel included: Mike Bolles of WVFI-AM; Bill Hawkins, SUB's ideas and issues commissioner; Steven Horst of the Graduate Student Union; Katherine Koller of Saint Mary's student government and Chris Murphy, editor of The Observer.

Mike Keegan, student government's executive coordinator of political, cultural and social concerns, moderated the debate.

The event was sponsored by both student governments, College Democrats, College Republicans, Student Union Board, the Graduate Student Union, WVFI-AM and The Observer, Doyle said.

"A lot of student groups with different agendas put them aside for the sake of this event and that's the beauty of it," he said. "I think it's a tremendous credit to the students who set it up."

United Way seeks aid

Dear Editor:

The students of Saint Mary's and Notre Dame create and envelop themselves in a thriving community, seeking personal growth and enriching their lives. As part of that community, it is easy to see that we are all blessed with many gifts, and part of our growth stems from sharing those gifts with others.

In the first week of October, United Way of St. Joseph County turned to Saint Mary's and Notre Dame for support. It is important that as students we recognize the larger community of which we are also a part.

Last year, United Way served over 70,000 people through 36 agencies in St. Joseph County. Their service truly reflects a state of compassion and goodwill which would not be possible without the people concerned with health and social needs, people who are willing to care for and embrace the less fortunate. Our efforts are directed toward such agencies as the American Red Cross, Catholic Social Services, Goodwill, Logan, and many others who are warmly appreciative.

This year, I hope that as a whole, we may extend ourselves to the call of our larger community. The campaign for Saint Mary's ends Nov. 14, and Nov. 17 for Notre Dame. See your section representative to make a gift. Their names may be obtained through your residence assistant.

"United way is more than a great way to give, it's the best way to care." Let us continue to share our gifts with others.

Weekend Wheels provides safety

Dear Editor:

We are not writing this article to try to shock you with statistics as to why you should not drink and drive. You all have heard the horrifying facts before. However, like so many other things in life, most people have the attitude that the tragedy will never happen to them.

That is a dangerous attitude to take, one that may cost you your life. Notre Dame has not been spared from the tragedy of drunk driving in the past, but maybe it can be prevented in the future. This is why the Hall Presidents' Council is sponsoring the transportation service of Weekend Wheels.

We realize that many people think that it is not too far to drive home from the bars, and they will be fine. Just think for a moment of the danger you are putting yourself as well as everyone else on the road in.

We realize in the past people may not have viewed this service (formerly the Buzz Bus) as a viable option. We have tried very hard to work within the constraints that have been placed on us to make it more useful. The hours have been expanded, and the stops will soon be more recognizable with permanent signs.

When you are ready to leave the bar or a party, ride home safely on Weekend Wheels. If you drove to the destination and think that you are OK to drive home, think again. We realize that it is an inconvenience to leave your car where it is overnight, but it is better to leave your car than lose your life or that of another.

Weekend Wheels is free to everyone and is easy to ride. There will be five stops this year: Campus View, Five Points, St. Louis and Corby St., Main Circle and Library Circle. The bus can take you home safely and with absolutely no hassle. Please look for posters to see the exact times for pick-up. The bus will run every Friday and Saturday night so please take advantage of it. Also, the first 100 riders will each receive a free T-shirt.

Dukakis stance shows deception

Dear Editor:

The second presidential debate on Oct. 13 between Michael Dukakis and George Bush, was important for the American people for many reasons. It was especially remarkable for being one of very few occasions that either candidate acknowledged the issue of abortion. Prompted by a reporter's question, Dukakis replied to Bush's position of favoring a ban on abortion except in cases of rape, incest, and danger to the mother's life: "Isn't the real question that we have to answer, not how many exceptions we have to make, because the vice president himself is prepared to make exceptions? It's who makes the decision."

"Who makes this very difficult, very wrenching decision? And I think it has to be the woman, in the exercise of her own conscience and religious beliefs, that makes the decision."

I must confess that, even though I believe in the right to life of unborn children, I was momentarily paralyzed by this statement. Perhaps many people accepted this argument as reasonable. However, after some thought, I have discovered why this statement is paralyzing. The question the governor puts to himself and then answers is meaningless. You cannot directly refute Dukakis' answer to the question he posed because the asking of the question, and our willingness to be asked the question, requires that we swallow a big, fat assumption. Who should make this decision? Who says there has to be a decision? Let us look at what Mr. Dukakis wants us to accept without any discussion or debate.

Every decision results from a freedom. The freedom in this case is to kill a baby whose only crime is that it now happens to be living in his or her mother's womb. Therefore, to give any answer to the question requires that you believe in a freedom to kill a certain class of living human individuals. The question is, upon analysis, circular, illogical and absurd, to anyone that believes that freedom may have limits.

Upon examination the logic evaporates. Dukakis tries to persuade, but assumes everybody already agrees with his opinion. By doing this he avoids asking any meaningful questions; he avoids having to engage in any substantive discussion.

This quote is a good example of the subtle deception which has been practiced by political figures who speak on abortion and women's rights. Is this deception unintended, or purposeful?

I believe that Dukakis is not alone in being afraid to ask meaningful, more relevant questions to the American people. The "dreaded" answers would just make things difficult, expensive and inconvenient. Surely, any just solutions to the social problems implied by the answers would be complicated, and point to considerable change. Really, Mr. Dukakis must think American folks just aren't ready for that responsibility, that decision, and that freedom. It's better to avoid the central issues of abortion all together.

Eloquent language by political figures, like the illogical statement of Mr. Dukakis, can be very powerful in persuading people to condone abortion. Behind such language is subtle, grave deception.

Article stoops to chauvinism

Dear Editor:

I would like to thank Glenn Fogarty for his Viewpoint article of Oct. 26 entitled, "On desk graffiti, football, and flowers," in which he expressed his dislike for a football cheer by writing "Only a woman or some type of fairy could have made up that monstrosity." Sometimes it is difficult to give concrete examples of bigotry in our community, but Mr. Fogarty has provided us with a classic. Whether or not he realized it, women, gays, and lesbians are a vital part of the Notre Dame community who, as his words demonstrate, are often the victims of prejudice and oppression. Next time Mr. Fogarty can't come up with a "worthwhile topic" for his column, he shouldn't write one. Only a homophobic chauvinist could have made up his latest piece, and such an author isn't worth reading.

K eith Richards, one of rock-n-roll's original rebels, seems to have matured and come into his own with his first solo effort, Talk is Cheap. This album, released last week, reveals a confident and powerful artist who, until recently, pledged never to leave the Rolling Stones to do solo work.

Talk is Cheap provided a desperately needed creative outlet for Richards during the time the Stones were forced to take a back seat to Mick Jagger's ill-fated solo wanderings.

plore a wide variety of musical styles.

Talk is Cheap opens with a strange, but very successful wander into the world of funk. Richards combines his vocals and guitar with some of James Brown's band to come up with the hot and jumpy "Big Enough." The resulting mixture is good enough to get you up and dancing.

"Make No Mistake," this album's best track, has Keith's eerie vocals working Away," explores the age-old dilemma of malefemale relationships. This song, with its acoustic guitar and violin, paints a moody and contemplative, almost psychotic, picture of a man in love.

Though Richards explores new musical styles on Talk is Cheap, he did not attempt to abandon the sound he has perfected during 25 years with the Rolling Stones. Songs like "Take it So Hard," "Struggle," and the riveting

The anger and desertion Richards felt towards Jagger are apparent in the song "You Don't Move Me." Keith blatantly attacks Mick with lines such as "Now you wanna throw the dice. You already crapped out twice."

Though "You Don't Move Me" provides an interesting look into the complex Jagger/Richards relationship, this album does much more than fan the fire of the ever-burning argument between Mick and Keith. It provides Richards with freedom to ex-together with the peaceful and soft voice of Sarah Dash. The Memphis Horns, Robert Cray's horn section, provide a strong backbone for the singers' slow but passionate vocal interplay.

Richards also takes a fun jaunt down nostalgia row with the Rockabilly tune "I Could Have Stood You Up." Johnnie Johnson's light and happy piano solos combine with Keith's love of 50s style rock-n-roll to make this song work well.

Another highlight, "Locked

"It Means A Lot" remind us that Richards has been, and remains, the musical backbone of one of rock-n-roll's greatest bands.

This album is not, however, a Rolling Stones album. It is a strong, well-rounded solo effort by a musician in limbo. Talk is Cheap has assured the musical world that there is passion left in this 44-year-old musician. Mark my words: we shall hear from Keith Richards again, with or without the Stones.

SPECIAL TO THE OBSERVER

Sotavento, a Latin American musical ensemble which performs in a variety of traditional and contemporary musical styles, will give a concert Sunday at 3 p.m. in the Annenberg Auditorium in the Snite Museum.

Sotavento (the Spanish word for "leeward") was formed in 1981. Until the release of its third album, Cuciani, last spring, Sotavento had toured mainly in the Midwest, but the group has recently performed on the East Coast and in Canada as well. Based in Madison, Wisconsin, the ensemble consists of six musicians: Orlando Cabrera of Puerto Rico (percussion and marimba); Anne Frailoli of the United States (transverse flute, quena, sikus and vocals); Jaime Gusicafe of El Salvador (guitar, bass and tiple); Francisco Lopez of Mexico (charango, rhythm guitar, strings and sikus); Josue Pizarro of Puerto Rico (guitar, bass, tiple and vocals); and Sylvia Ramirez of the United States (violin, quena, sikus and vocals).

Sotavento uses indigenous and ancient instruments to

Johnson changes jobs in ND Stadium

By STEVE MEGARGEE
Assistant Sports Editor

Anthony Johnson has spent more than his share of Saturdays at Notre Dame Stadium.

The South Bend native spent his weekends starring for the Adams High School football team and working as a messenger to the ushers at Irish home games. But Johnson never thought he someday would be coming to the Stadium as one of Notre Dame's top running backs.

"I didn't think I'd play for a major college team," said the junior fullback. "I was surprised when I was contacted by teams. I was surprised that I could play for them."

Once he signed with Notre Dame, not many people, including Johnson himself, figured he would see much playing time early. But Johnson played the most minutes of any freshman during the 1986 season and has grown to be an integral part of the Irish offensive backfield.

"It surprised me greatly," Johnson said of his freshman season, in which he was the second-leading Irish rusher with 349 yards on 80 carries. "I expected to contribute on the kicking game or perhaps just in practice."

Irish running backs coach Jim Strong understands why Johnson has played so far above original expectations.

"Sometimes you go across the country for prospects, then all of a sudden here's a homegrown product," said Strong. "Since he was a local player, the recruiters knew everything about him, like when he may have had a bad game or an average game. When you go away to recruit, the coach tells you how good his player is and shows you a film of his best game against weak opposition."

"It's like your wife," Strong continued. "You know all her good qualities and bad points, too. With someone you date, you may go out with her once in a month and think she's great."

Johnson tied Pernell Taylor for the team lead with seven rushing touchdowns during his freshman season. He has since moved from tailback to fullback, but he still has a knack for reaching the endzone.

The 6-foot, 225-pounder led the team with 11 touchdowns last season. During a junior season that has been beset by injury problems, Johnson demonstrated his return to form last Saturday with another one of his trademark touchdowns. He broke an Air Force tackle at the last possible moment and burst to the endzone for a 12-yard score.

"You look at the Air Force game and there were two linebackers trying to tackle him, and the next thing you know, he pops out and scores," said Strong. "When Anthony Johnson's healthy, he's as good an inside runner as there probably is in college football. It's hard for one man to tackle him."

The Irish now have a penchant for giving Johnson the ball when they are near the goal line or are in short yardage situations, but he takes the role in stride.

"I attribute that (the touchdowns) to the other people on the team," said Johnson. "I'm just in the right place at the right time."

Johnson had to miss all the preseason scrimmages this fall because of a sprained ankle. He was able to play the season opener against Michigan, but resprained the ankle early in the Michigan State game and was kept out of action until the team's fourth game against Stanford.

Since coming back, Johnson has scored touchdowns against Stanford, Pittsburgh and Air Force. He has gained 182 yards on 47 carries while sharing time at fullback with classmate Braxton Banks. The two fullbacks have mostly run inside, setting up the outside game for tailbacks Mark Green and Tony Brooks.

"We help each other out a lot," Johnson said of the rotating backfield. "Who plays is based on who's tired, who's capable of playing, who's hurt and who's not."

For all the attention Johnson is getting on the football field now, he was just as imposing

Lyght shining in secondary

Former flanker now punishing receivers as CB

By GREG GUFFEY

When he needed to make the biggest decision of his life, Todd Lyght knew whom to ask for advice.

Most high school football players make their own decision about which college to attend. But Lyght isn't just another football player.

Lyght, an AdidasScholastic Coach All-American from Michigan, was recruited by such collegiate powerhouses as Michigan, UCLA, USC and Notre Dame. That decision (three of those four schools are competing for a national title this year) became too much for Lyght to make on his own. He turned to his family for help and he is grateful that their response was the right one.

"I'm very close to my family," Lyght said. "Everyone thought the best decision would be to come to Notre Dame. If I listen to them, I can't go wrong."

And Lyght, the starting field cornerback for the Irish defense, has done little wrong on the field this season. Lyght teams with short cornerback Stan Smagala to stop both the rushing and passing attacks of opposing offenses.

In seven Notre Dame victories, Lyght has recorded 23 tackles with a season-high seven coming against Air Force last weekend.

Todd Lyght

With veteran D'Juan Francisco, the Irish cornerbacks have been impressive, and the triumvirate could be as solid as any in the country.

"If somebody goes down the person behind him can step in and do the job," Lyght said. "We have a lot more speed this year."

About the only criticism directed at Lyght is that neither he nor Smagala has an interception in seven outings. In reality, though, that may be more of a compliment than a criticism.

"We hear that every day," Lyght said of the lack of interceptions. "What happens is that we have a guy covered so well they don't throw it, or if they do throw, there's a weakness in the coverage."

The emergence to defensive superiority has not been as easy for Lyght as it may seem. The 6-1 sophomore from Flint, Mich., came to Notre Dame as a flanker. At that spot as a high school senior, he caught 38 passes for 877 yards and nine touchdowns. Lyght also played defensive back for Luke M. Powers High School, intercept-

Irish Extra: The Game

By PETE SKIKO
Assistant Sports Editor

At first glance, Notre Dame's upcoming game with the Navy Midshipmen on Saturday has the makings of a rout.

And even if you stare at it for a while longer, the bulk of the excitement at Memorial Stadium in Baltimore will probably be centered around whether or not the Irish cover the 34 points they're favored by.

But, never one to look ahead, Head Coach Lou Holtz chooses to look at the worst-case scenario.

"The Naval Academy is a well-disciplined team," said Holtz. "They're very similar to the Air Force Academy in that they run out of the wishbone, but they're much bigger on offense and much bigger on defense than the Air Force Academy. They have two fine quarterbacks and statistically, over the whole year, they're rather impressive."

"Last week Navy lost to Pitt by a decided margin (52-6), but Pitt had to punt six times, had two turnovers and scored on a lot of big plays. We're not necessarily a big-play type of football team. You never know what to expect when you go on the road, but I do think our players will be ready to play well and play hard."

A few additional points might lend more credence to the expectation of an Irish rout:

- The Midshipmen are 3-4 on the year, but they have not defeated a Division IA school since 1986. Their three wins came at the expense of James Madison, Delaware and Yale. Navy has lost to Temple (12-7), The Citadel (42-35), Air Force (34-24), and Pitt.

- Notre Dame and Navy will lengthen the longest continuous intersectional rivalry in the country when they square off Saturday, and in the 61 games played between the squads thus far the Irish are 51-9-1. That includes victories in the last 24 straight, dating back to 1963 when Roger Staubach led Navy to a 35-14 win at Notre Dame Stadium. The Irish own more victories over Navy than any other team in Notre Dame history.

- Last year the Irish scored the first six times they had the ball, building a 35-6 halftime lead and going on to win 56-13 over Navy. This year, Notre Dame is 7-0 and ranked No. 2 in the country in both the AP and UPI national polls.

But if you're going to look at trends, in fairness to the Middies, the last time Navy faced a team ranked No. 2 in the nation it won 38-21 over South Carolina back in 1984. And Navy went 4-6-1 that year.

Just a thought.

Notre Dame defense

In a surprise move last week against Pitt, the Middies started sophomore

Elliot Uzelac
Navy Coach

Elliot Uzelac is in his second year as Navy's head football coach, and says he has high hopes for the program's future despite his 2-9 record last year and a 3-4 start this season.

"It will take some time," says the former head coach of Western Michigan, "but we'll turn this thing around."

Gary McIntosh at quarterback in place of Alton Grizzard, who was the team's leading rusher out of the wishbone offense. Grizzard will move to flanker against the Irish and McIntosh should again get the starting nod.

McIntosh is 22-of-52 for 319 yards and two touchdowns on the year, while rushing for 193 yards and four touchdowns on 51 carries.

In the Navy backfield, the wishbone alignment includes senior halfback Luther Archer (69 rushes for 358 yards and a touchdown), junior halfback James Bradley (54 for 264, three TDs), and senior fullback Bert Pangrazio (42 for 151, one TD). Sophomore fullback Deric Sims also will see action.

The top Middie receiver is senior flanker Carl Jordan (21 catches for 377 yards and 4 TDs). Junior Shane Smith will handle the split end duties, and Grizzard (two catches for 35 yards last week against Pitt) will supplement the receiving corps.

On the offensive line, tackles Mike Kircher and senior Tim Hofacre lead a young but improved Navy front. Hofacre is the only returning regular in the Middies' offensive line, but also is considered one of the best linemen in the east.

The Irish defense is coming off of several impressive showings, most recently the limitation of Air Force's vaunted wishbone attack to only 13 points and 216 total yards (46 passing)-far below its previous season averages of 46 points and 522 yards per game. And although Miami QB Steve Walsh had a career-best day passing against Notre Dame, the Irish defense yielded only 57 yards on the ground and forced seven turnovers against the Hurricanes. The defense may need another good effort to repel Navy's 17th-ranked rushing attack, but that kind of effort is likely.

Freshman Arnold Ale is again expected to compete with Flash Gordon and Andre Jones for playing time at defensive end. Nose guard Chris Zorich has 46 tackles and three fumble recoveries on the year.

The threesome of Wes Pritchett, Michael Stonebreaker and Ned Bolcar will again split the majority of time at the linebacker spots. Among the three, they have registered 175 tackles, four sacks and three interceptions.

"Last week I thought the secondary responded very, very well to Air Force's wishbone," said Holtz. "Going into our game, Air Force had had 33 plays of 25 yards or more. Against us they had one play of 22 yards and other than that they did not have a play of above 15 yards. That's a tribute to all five of those guys who played in the secondary."

If there was one thing bothering Holtz after Saturday's fly-by of Air Force, it was the kicking game.

"The kicking game was disappointing certainly," said Holtz. "On our kickoffs, the coverage left a lot to be desired and that's something we've really addressed this week. Anything good that may have come out of our long punt returns of late was negated by (Ricky Watters') fumbled punt Saturday. And we mishandled a snap for a point-after attempt."

"So there are just little things in the kicking game that have really bothered me. We certainly didn't execute as well as we're going to have to."

The running game continues to be the driving force (13th in the country at 259 yards per game) behind the offensive success of the Irish, including the emergence of Tony Brooks, who is 50th in the country in rushing despite playing with a broken bone in his foot.

"Brooks obviously has become an outstanding running back," said Holtz. "He would have exceeded my expectations for him at this point even if his foot wasn't broken. I had written him off earlier in the year, but he must have one heck of a high pain threshold."

Brooks and Mark Green will split action again at tailback and Anthony Johnson gets the nod at fullback. Braxton Banks' knee is still ailing and he is not yet 100 percent.

Quarterback Tony Rice is 43-of-84 for 719 yards, six touchdowns and five interceptions. Perhaps just as important are his 78 rushes for 470 yards and seven touchdowns.

The deep threats of Watters and Raghib "Rocket" Ismail have caught a combined 19 passes for 402 yards and three touchdowns.

Mike Heldt will man the center spot, while co-captain Andy Heck and Dean Brown will start at tackles. Junior guard Tim Grunhard is still feeling the effects of an ankle injury and might not see action this weekend to give the ankle time to heal. In that event, Tim Ryan would be moved to right guard and either Mike Brennan or Winston Sandri would take over at left guard.

Navy's defensive strength is against the pass, where it ranks sixth in the country, yielding only 123 yards a game through the air. That is also the amount the Irish have averaged passing through seven games.

The Middie secondary includes Scott Carson and Jim Chatfield at the corners while Rodney Brown and Bob Weissenfels hold down the safety slots. But the Irish probably will do most of their moving on the ground against a young defensive line and linebacking corps.

Expect another grind-'em-out Irish effort with a lot of effective off-tackle running plays. The larger Notre Dame offensive and defensive lines should wear down their game but outmatched Middie counterparts.

Navy gave 1976 Irish a scare

Devine's squad avoids upset with 27-21 victory

By VIC LOMBARDI
Sports Writer

As many coaches will attest, the best remedy for an overconfident team is an old-fashioned whipping by an underdog. Or even a down-to-the-wire contest against a longshot, a loser, a no-hoper.

These are the games that keep great teams honest.

Time Capsule

In 1976, Coach Dan Devine's 11th-ranked Notre Dame squad was ready to add another notch in the win column when the Irish were made 24-point favorites against a lowly Navy foe. But the 1-6 Midshipmen startled the Irish with a potent passing attack and nearly pulled off what would have been one of the most stunning upsets in Irish football history.

Notre Dame managed a 27-21 squeaker.

Navy Coach George Welsh had one strategy in mind against Notre Dame: to throw until his quarterback's arm fell off. Middle signal-caller Bob Leszczynski completed 21 passes for 294 total yards as he unloaded 45 attempts in all.

The Middies overwhelmed the Irish defense as they struck twice in the second period with their air arsenal. Leszczynski connected with wingback Dave King (10 receptions for 179 yards) in the endzone to break the Irish defense's streak of 21 touchdown quarters without a touchdown and put the Middies up 7-3. Navy extended its lead to 14-3 as Leszczynski administered a five-play drive that culminated in a one-yard plunge by Larry Klawinski.

After that, Notre Dame quarterback Rick Slager (12 completions for 241 yards) and his receiving counterpart Dan Kelleher (seven catches for 162 yards) helped get the Irish back in the game. Slager hit Kelleher and Al Hunter on scoring tosses while Hunter ran in another to give Notre Dame a 24-14 advantage. Devine was forced to go with the pass because of injuries to key running backs Jerome Heavens and Terry Eurick.

Early in the fourth quarter, the Middies capitalized on a Slager interception as Reggie Thompson burst in from one-yard out to cut the lead 24-21. The Irish marched right back on the following series and settled for a 24-yard field goal by Dave Reeve, his second of the game.

The Midshipmen had a chance to take the lead and the game with just under five minutes remaining.

Leszczynski riddled the Irish defenders and drove his team to Notre Dame's 16-yard line. On fourth and two, Leszczynski eluded a furious rush by the Irish defense and launched a pass into the end zone for Steve Scott.

The ball never got there. At the last second, Notre Dame defensive back Dave Waymer deflected the ball and prevented what could have been humiliating Irish defeat.

"I think we outplayed Notre Dame," said a dejected Leszczynski. "I think today we were a better team than they were."

Notre Dame linebacker Bob Crable and the 1976 Irish football team fended off a threat from unheralded Navy to earn a 27-21 victory over the Midshipmen. Vic Lombardi recalls that game in Time Capsule at right.

a presence on the soccer field back at Adams High. He captained both teams in high school.

"Soccer was to help me out for football with conditioning and balance," said Johnson. "I did pretty well in both sports, but not well enough to succeed in college."

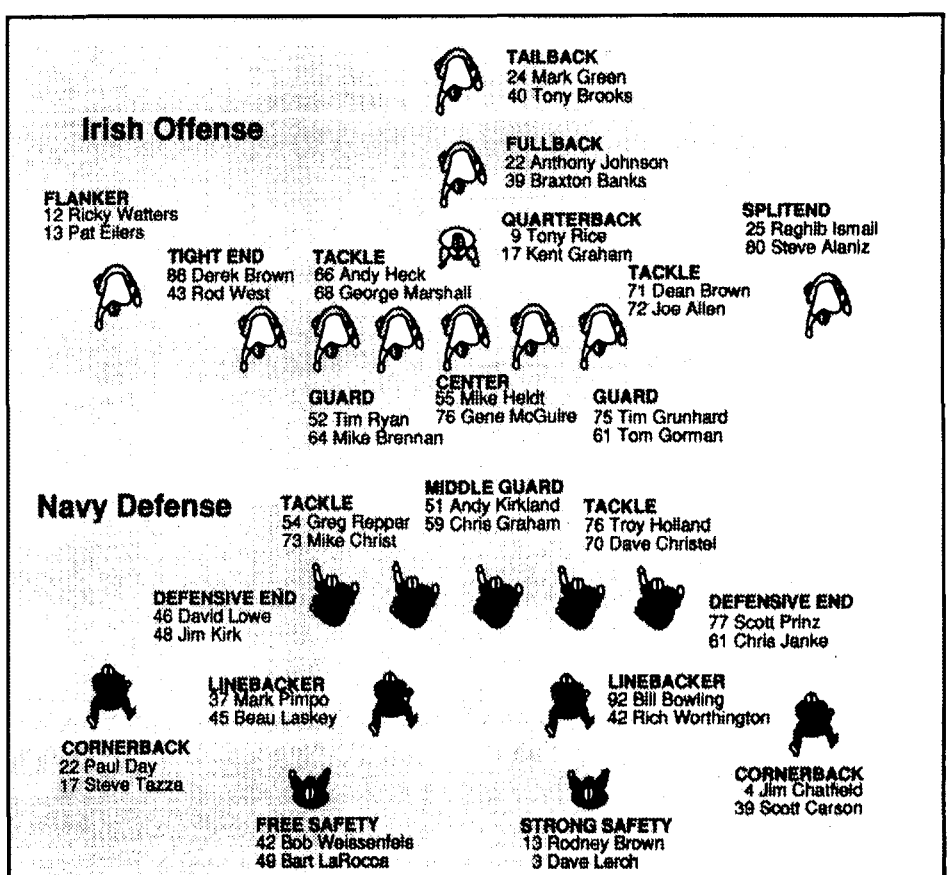

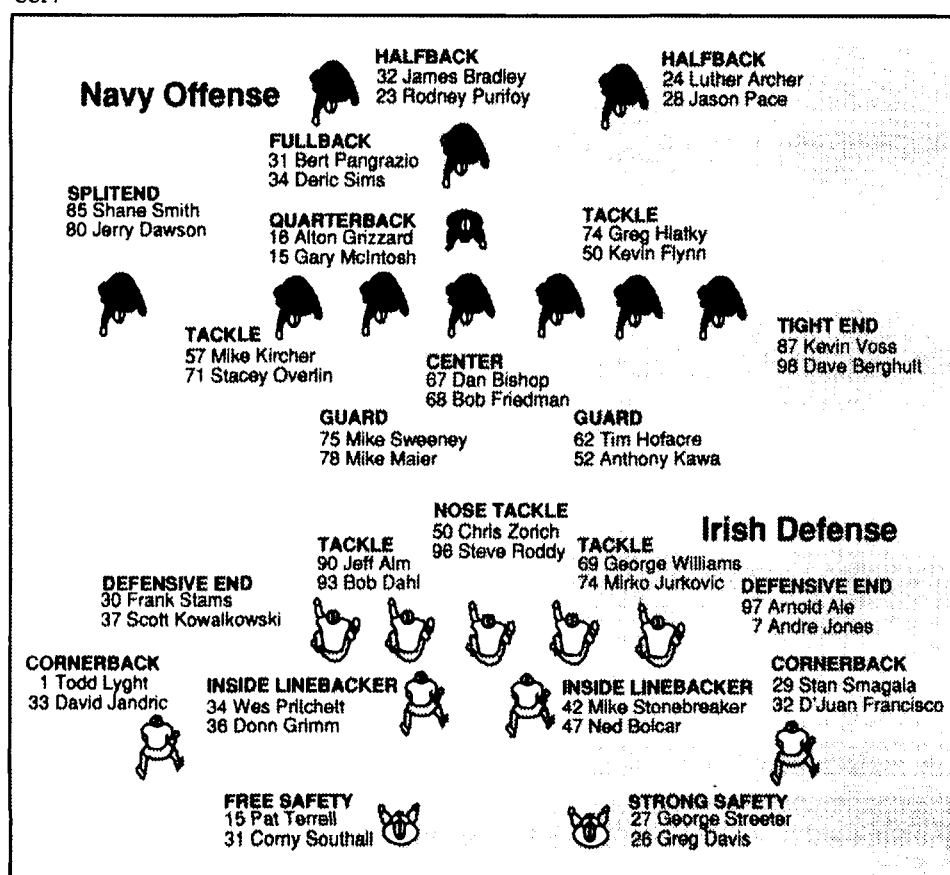

Or so he thought. Now it appears as though those soccer skills may allow Johnson to take on another role with the Irish football squad. After handling the last two kickoffs of the Air Force game, Johnson has worked on field goals, punts and kickoffs during this week's practices.

"We're looking at him as a kickoff man," said Strong. "He's a versatile athlete. I know this—if that (soccer) is what helped him develop as a player, we ought to get more of our players involved in soccer."

Notre Dame cornerback Todd Lyght (right) chases down Air Force quarterback Dee Dowis in the 41-13 Irish victory last weekend. Lou Holtz says Lyght is as fine a defensive back as any he has coached, ing 19 passes during his career. The Ann Arbor News named Lyght the best player in the state after his senior season.

Early in his freshman season, Lyght moved from flanker to help a struggling and injury-riddled defensive secondary. After cornerback Brandy Wells injured a knee in the opener against Michigan and Corny Southall tore a knee ligament against Pittsburgh, the playing time mounted for Lyght.

"We didn't have too much depth at defensive back," Lyght said. "I did whatever helped the team. Now, I like defense a lot better. It's nice to be giving the licks out."

Lyght played in all 12 games last year, starting at free safety against Air Force and Miami. He recorded 21 solo tackles and had eight assists. He also boasts blazing speed, evidenced by his high school letters in track as a hurdler and sprinter.

Heading into spring practice, Lyght was listed on the second team behind Francisco. That was all the incentive he needed. Francisco started the opener against Michigan, but Lyght has started every game since.

"I just played harder and tried to do the things I knew I could do," Lyght said. "After coming out this year and working with the No. 2 defense, it gave me a lot of incentive to get back on the No. 1 defense."

Much of the credit for the performance of the secondary goes to first-year coach Chuck Heater. The practices are more demanding, but according to Lyght the Irish have a new-found intensity under Heater.

Lyght shows that intensity both on and off the field. Notre Dame coach Lou Holtz has taken notice of his play, saying after the Stanford game that Lyght was as fine a defensive back as he's been around.

"I'm pleased that he thinks I have that kind of ability, but I have a long way to go," Lyght said. "It's the very little things, footwork, drops, reading the wide receiver and the quarterback."

Lyght is the youngest of three children, the last in a long line of athletic relatives. His father, William, played basketball at Morgan State, his brother, Trent, was a swimmer at Arizona State and his sister, Cheryl, was a swimmer at Rochester. If the Irish continue their current play, the Lyght team could soon boast a national championship member.

Even in the heat of that national championship drive, Lyght, a business major, can see beyond the tunnels lined with possible title banners.

"My studies are very, very important," Lyght said. "I can't play football forever."

Indeed, Lyght is not just another football player.

U2

RATTLE AND HUM

NATE FITZGERALD
accent writer

The title of U2's new album, Rattle and Hum, may strike fear into those Domers who haven't been able to sleep recently because their radiators rattle all night long.

Have no fear, Rattle and Hum is not as strange as its title suggests, yet it will be a definite challenge to U2's audience, considering its stylistic divergence from past albums.

A large portion of Rattle and Hum results from U2's venture into the American roots of rock, blues, and gospel music that took place during The Joshua Tree tour and the filming of "U2 Rattle and Hum," the accompanying movie that opens November 4.

Penetrating live covers of the Beatle's "Helter Skelter," and Bob Dylan's "All Along the Watchtower" initial U2's hat-tipping to the founders of rock.

Later, there is "Angel of Harlem" a catchy tune written in honor of Billie Holiday, complete with saxophone and trumpet by the Memphis Horns. This tribute continues with "When Love Comes to Town," a bluesy tangent that Bono wrote for B.B. King which also features a performance by King. For John Lennon, there is the peculiarly rappish "God Part II," a rebuttal to Albert Goldman's negative biography of Lennon. This song's message is strong with lyrics like "I don't believe in excess success is to give... I believe in love," but musically this tune is hard to swallow, even for the loyal fan. "Love Rescue Me," co-written by Bob Dylan, is another of the less exciting pieces on the album with its slow, country sound.

The six live songs on the album come across powerfully, allowing Bono to voice the band's political message outside lyrical confines. In the anti-apartheid "Silver and Gold," Bono describes a man "who is ready to take up arms against his oppressor, a man who has lost faith in the peacemakers of the West while they argue and fail to support a man like Bishop Tutu..." During "Bullet the Blue Sky," a song denouncing U.S. policy in El Salvador, Bono says, "... I can't tell the difference between ABC News, 'Hillstreet Blues,' and a preacher ...stealing money from the sick and the old. Well the God I believe in isn't short of cash mister."

The live version of "I Still Haven't Found What I'm Looking For," which features a Harlem Choir, will be initially disappointing to those expecting the same version they saw during the Joshua Tree tour. Nonetheless, this version has all of U2's emotion and energy and holds some definite appeal in its gospel rhythm.

Some of the new studio songs that resemble the established U2 sound are "Desire," the first release from the album, "Hawkmoon 269," "Heartland," a welcome return to the surreal sound of The Unforgettable Fire, and "All I Want Is You," a love song that builds with a string accompaniment to finish the album.

As with The Joshua Tree, the lyrics on Rattle and Hum are somewhat redundant, but for fans who want more poison rain, angels, devils, and fire, there is plenty of it.

One disappointing aspect of Rattle and Hum is the small number of live songs from The Joshua Tree tour. Still, U2 brought forth a new stock of impressive songs. Maybe the movie will include more of a taste of the live U2.

The blessed laughter of Jesus

Jesus dropped by the Vatican the other night to give the Pope his report card as Vicar of the Church on earth. John Paul got an A-plus in Faith and Morals, but only a B in Commandment keeping. "I don't understand," the Pontiff said. "Where did I go wrong?"

"Examine your own conscience," the Lord replied, "and let it be your accuser. Can you honestly say that you loved Jimmy Swaggart as you a day." He meant that if the Church could change overnight, it wouldn't be the Church; because the Church is in God's hands, and God isn't in a hurry.

"Sometimes, when I'm riding in the popemobile, seeing how torn apart the world is, seeing the hungry children in a Third World country, I stop to give the people my blessing; but that doesn't change anything. Later, I'll say Mass for them, of course, to show how human He is, in addition to being God.

"Once," Jesus said, "when I was being all things to all men, I spent some time with the street people in London. I met an old Scotsman who had been in jail. I asked him what he had done. He answered Me evasively, thinking I was an out-of-work preacher: 'It was an eye for an eye, and a tooth for a tooth,' meaning he had committed a crime of violence. Reading his face, I could tell that his anger was passed; and in his heart, he was at peace with himself.

"He said: 'After coming back from being incarcerated, do you know what I noticed, guv'nor? I noticed that people have forgotten how to laugh.' After telling Me two or three times how much the world needs laughter, he asked: 'Do you know what Our Lord's last words from the Cross were?' I said I knew what the words were, but I wanted to hear his version. "Then he told Me: 'As He was seeing the view from the Cross, Our Lord's last words were: What a way to spend Easter!'"

The Pope, hearing this, wasn't sure if he should laugh or cry.

Jesus continued, in a deliberate understatement: "Calvary, of course, was no laughing matter, but the nightmare of Calvary could never have happened if the Jews and Romans hadn't forgotten how to laugh. If you're able to laugh at yourself in a wholesome way, you aren't apt to get proud and spiteful toward other people, and feel that you have a right to put them on trial, and kill them.

"The irony of the situation was that the jeering crowd came to Calvary thinking the joke was on the Jew they crucified. But He was the only one there so in touch with His grace-filled humanity that He could have laughed if He'd wanted to, though He was in no mood to get off one-liners. The old Scotsman, with his wee bit of a joke, 'What a way to spend Easter,' delivered the shortest, finest Good Friday homily I've ever heard."

John Paul II, searching for words, finally said: "One of the questions Christians ask is: 'Did He ever laugh?' The Gospels don't tell us if You laughed. Did you go to the mountains to laugh, as You went there to pray, afraid, as Chesterton suggested, that Your mirth would be misunderstood?"

Jesus, laughing, answered: "The world was made out of laughter and joy, out of the happiness in the heart of My Father. Rabbis studying the Torah could point out the jokes, puns and word-play that Yahweh left like a signature on His inspired books for His scholars to discover. Gloom entered the world when sin came. The Puritans elevated gloom into a religious art form, and Catholics elevated suffering which accompanies gloom into a holy lifestyle."

Taking the hand that was heavy with the weight of the Fisherman's ring, Jesus said to the Pope: "But you, poor Vicar, struggling with the unhappiness this age lays upon you—please get a sign made for your desk, and put it next to the other sign that says 'The Buck Stops Here.' The new sign should read 'What A Way To Spend Easter!' Remember, it's not a Polish joke, but a Scots joke, reminding you that God made Scots because he loves to laugh."

Now, at the Vatican, John Paul II makes the cardinals tell him a joke a day. They say he prefers humor to prayer, scandalous though it sounds. John Paul answers: "Humor is prayer, if it reminds you that Easter is not necessarily a bed of roses."

Father Robert Griffin

Letters to a Lonely God

love yourself? I mean, did you turn the other cheek when he said you were a phoney? When Oral Roberts pushed the panic button, did you offer to lend him money? Remember about being a Good Samaritan."

Jesus continued, "No one promised it would be a cinch to be the Pope."

"Thy will be done, Lord," answered John Paul in a sincere voice. "But what about some of your other teachings? I often look at all the heartache I could change, if I were allowed to say 'yes' sometimes instead of 'no' all the time, I think things would be easier, even for You, suffering wherever Your children are unhappy.

"You should tell them from Me that Rome wasn't built in but that doesn't change anything. I'll return to Rome to hold a synod, but synods don't change anything. Finally I'm faced with a moment of truth: as God's man for all seasons holding the keys of the kingdom, I don't help anybody. So I'd like to ask you face-to-face: is this any way to run the Church?"

When Jesus saw tears in the face of this good old man, He loved him too much to want to hurt him. As a good-will gesture, He tore up the report card he had brought. "I got the silly idea of evaluating you from a business management class, where a student used to pray for me to come and help him. Why should I pressure you with grades instead of allowing you to take a pass-fail?" Jesus said this,

Team tri-captain John Olmstead (29) will try to help lead the Notre Dame lacrosse team to an upset over national power Johns Hopkins tonight. Johns Hopkins has won 42 national championships in collegiate lacrosse.

Lacrosse: Information for novice spectators

By PETE LaFLEUR
Sports Writer

Lacrosse is a sport introduced by American Indians that incorporates the physical contact and speed of hockey with the running of soccer and the ball movement of basketball. Commonly referred to as the fastest game on two feet, lacrosse is a game that can often see over 20 goals scored per contest.

The 10 players on the field are divided into three attackmen, three midfielders, three defensemen, and a goalie. Several more players shuttle into the game much like in hockey and a special line called the defensive middies are key to stopping opposing attacks.

Just as in hockey, the area behind the net is in play and there is a crease surrounding the goal that opponents can't enter before shooting. "Fast breaks" can often see defensemen and even goalies break through for goals and man-down penalties are often key turning points.

Hopkins

midfield, although there are some good players and I certainly think they will play hard," said Corrigan. "The game surely will be a good learning experience for them."

With six players returning who played in six or more games last year, the Irish defense likely will anchor the team throughout the year. The defense is led by senior tri-captains O'Connor and Spencer, who both started last spring.

O'Connor will start the Hopkins game alongside senior Brendan Cahill and junior Mike Stephens, who has returned from France to further extend an already talented unit.

Spencer, meanwhile, will enter the game with the defensive-middle unit, which is inserted in place of the regular middle line in defensive situations. Joining Spencer in the line will be sophomore defenseman Eamon McAnaney and sophomore middle Pete Gillin. Senior Warren Sanger and sophomore Dave Barnard will provide defensive experience off the bench for the Irish.

"We have some good depth on defense and are much farther along defensively than offensively right now," Corrigan said. "If you want to be a good team in any sport, you have to play good defense and I want to see how well we handle them. A good defensive effort could build confidence for the whole year."

Junior Jeff Glazier will start in the goal for the Irish. Glazier, who started his freshman year and in two games last spring, is replacing Matt McQuillan, who graduated second on the all-time Irish list with 454 career saves.

Glazier can expect to be tested by the Hopkins players, who are capable at scoring from anywhere on the field. Nonetheless, Corrigan thinks Glazier is capable of having a good outing.

"Jeff is very quick and has great reactions, but he has to work on his positioning and on taking control," said Corrigan. "He has great seniors playing in front of him (on defense), but the goalie is really like a quarterback and, no matter what year he is, he has to take control."

John Hopkins will bring a team comprised of high school All-Americans and numerous NCAA All-Americans. Senior Dave Petramala, an imposing 6'3" 190 pound two-time All-American defenseman, is "probably the best defenseman in the country," according to Corrigan.

Other Bluejay players to watch include junior All-American goalie Quint Kesinich, sophomore attackman Matt Paneta, and the Kelly midfielders—senior captain Brendan and junior Greg. Greg Kelly, who is not related to Brendan, scored five goals in John Hopkins' recent 14-5 win in a scrimmage against the University of Maryland-Baltimore County.

Hopkins coach Don Zimmerman has won three national titles ('84, '86, and '87) while compiling a 57-8 record in his five years as Bluejays coach.

A former player for Hopkins, Zimmerman also has coached at North Carolina and was an assistant last year for the United States World Games team.

Irish look to get back on track

Loyola, injuries to test cross country team at MCC meet

By SCOTT BRUTOCAO
Sports Writer

It's time for the men's cross country team to reestablish its position as a national power when it competes in the Midwest Collegiate Conference Championships today in Chicago.

In the words of junior runner Tom O'Rourke, it's time to "put up or shut up."

The Irish, who finished seventh in the country last year at the NCAA Championships, have encountered many difficulties of late in their drive to repeat or even top last year's performance.

In the last two weeks, the Irish have suffered a defeat at Southern California and have lost their number-three runner, junior Mike O'Connor, to a leg injury.

The MCC Championships are looming big in the minds of the runners, due to their recent disappointments.

"The MCC's are especially important now," said fifth-year senior captain Dan Garrett. "After we ran so badly at USC, we have to get our confidence up or we won't do anything at districts."

The MCC Championships will precede the NCAA District IV meet by two weeks, with the latter being the qualifying race for the NCAA Championships.

The team hopes to improve its running in anticipation of the District IV meet, which is the most competitive district in the country and which lead coach Joe Piane has called a "hellacious district."

The MCC's, which will be hosted by Loyola (Ill.), will take place in Montrose Park in Chicago. Loyola and Notre Dame are expected to be the main competitors, but other strong teams such as Butler, Detroit and Marquette also will be attending.

Earlier this year, Notre Dame won the National Catholic meet held on its home course, with Loyola finishing second. Now, a new meet will take place on Loyola's home course, and the Irish will be without O'Connor.

Suddenly, a new rivalry with Loyola has emerged.

"(The rivalry) has become really big in the last two to three years," said Head Coach Joe Piane. "Loyola's front three runners will be very good. Based upon how banged up we are and how they (Loyola) ran at the National Catholic, they should be the team to beat."

One of the problems with the team lately is that the Irish have not run aggressively. It let USC take the initiative in Southern California and never really got back into the race.

"Being aggressive, getting out of the deadwood and getting in front from the gun are the keys to running well at this meet," said Piane. "The runners must also run more as a team, and in large part how we do will depend on our fourth, fifth, sixth and seventh runners."

The team looks ready for the challenge. Its workouts this week have been strong, and runners such as Ryan Cahill and Tom O'Rourke have trained especially well, according to Garrett.

"We're working out with a little more aggressiveness," said Garrett. "We're just pumped up for the race. We really want to do well and prove that we can run better than we have been."

With You In The Game, We'll Bring This Crowd To Its Feet.

Last year, Notre Dame's Drive to Cure Paralysis was the second most successful tournament in the country, raising over $6,300 for the Buonaconti Fund. Our #1 fundraising team, Big Bill's Team, was only dollars short of a free trip to the Sugar Bowl.

This year we want to blow this project out of the water and be the number one school in the nation. Help Non-Varsity Athletics set a precedent that hundreds of other schools will look up to.

ND looks to end slide in Miami

By TIM SULLIVAN
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame soccer team is facing possibly the most important weekend of its season.

Notre Dame will participate in the Florida International Gatorade Classic at Miami aiming to end a slide of three losses in four games and to turn the heads of the NCAA Tournament selection committee.

The Irish, 11-3-2, left on Thursday for Miami, where they will take on Penn State and Boston University.

Both teams sport excellent records entering the competition. Boston University has been ranked as high as 16th in the nation and is looking for its third tournament berth in four years.

It's that type of competition which Irish coach Dennis Grace feels could help his team in the long run.

"Those (tough, non-region) games can only help us," said Grace.

Unfortunately, the Irish did not take advantage of two similar opportunities last week with losses to College of Charleston and Rutgers. Now, Notre Dame's back is against the wall. One win is a must, with two wins almost a necessity.

Stategically, Grace could have a surprise for his weekend opponents. In last week's matches, a man-to-man attack proved successful in both second halves, and Grace may experiment with a full 90 minutes of pressure.

"We pulled our sweeper," noted Grace of the strategy move. "We decided to put our athleticism against theirs, and we really took it to them."

Notre Dame will be led by a trio of senior scoring machines in Bruce "Tiger" McCourt, Joe Sternberg and Randy Morris. The three have steadily moved up the all-time Irish scoring charts, and hold the four, five and six spots among the regional scoring leaders.

Notre Dame's season-long goal has been an NCAA berth. The key to strengthening those chances could be found in Miami.

"I realized the big shoes I had to fill, but he has been tremendous to me and I am his biggest fan," said Bayliss.

Besides paying tribute to Fallon, the Irish will tackle a very talented field of opponents. This year's 13-team field represents four of the eight geographical regions of the United States. The national field boasts traditionally strong programs such as Kentucky, which finished seventh in the nation last year, and top-25 squad Minnesota. Ball State, another participant this weekend, has won the Mid-American Conference title the past four years.

Top individual participants include Ty Tucker, a freshman from Ohio State. Tucker won the National Indoor 18-and-under in Dallas, Tex., last year. Mark Leschly (Harvard's No. 1 player) and Duke Uihlein and Rafer Leach (Minnesota's No. 1 and No. 2 players) represent the other top competitors.

The tournament consists of an A and B draw in both singles and doubles competition. The tournament is an individual competition with no team standings being compiled.

In the singles competition, the Irish will enter Dave DiLucia, Brian Kalbas and Walter Dolhare in the A draw. In the B draw, Dave Reiter, Ryan Wenger and Paul Odland will represent the Irish.

"Odland will be our top B entry since he has played very strongly so far this season," said Bayliss. "He and Brian Kalbas have been our most consistent players. A couple of our players have lost their confidence but Odland has turned it up a notch."

In the doubles competition, Notre Dame will enter its top two tandems, DiLucia-Dolhare (No.1) and Dave Reiter and Mike Wallace (No.2) in the A draw. The No. 3 duo of Kalbas and Wenger will compete in the B draw.

"I hope everyone gets by the first round," said Bayliss. "I hope someone asserts himself and becomes a force."

nents and have had easy victories over Notre Dame opponents such as Purdue and Pacific earlier in the season. "There won't be any surprises with Nebraska," said Irish head coach Art Lambert, who earned his 100th Notre Dame victory against Ohio State last Tuesday. "They are a very solid team, a big team, and they have an excellent setter. I think they'll come here ready to play."

The Irish will face another challenging opponent Saturday when they play Louisiana State, which stands at 14-8, in the first meeting between the two teams.

The Tigers, although they sound more threatening than mere Cornhuskers, have not always lived up to the verocity that characterizes their mascots.

LSU has been plagued by inconsistencies this year--a problem which has overshadowed much of the team's success--but the Tigers still have been strong contenders nationally.

"LSU has been ranked in and out of the top 20 over the season," said Lambert. "They are second or third in the Southern region and can't be taken lightly."

The Irish will go after Nebraska and LSU with their big gun, senior middle blocker Mary Kay Waller.

Waller leads the team in kills with 258 for a .264 hitting percentage and also has accumulated a team-high 119 total blocks.

It still is questionable whether senior outside hitter Zanette Bennett will help Waller provide their usual one-two punch for the Irish offense because she is still fighting an illness.

But the Irish still can look to senior Maureen Shea, who has 181 kills thus far as well as 56 total blocks.

Notre Dame will need good passing and setting to get their offensive arsenal into full swing and lately have been getting both from senior Whitney Shewman and freshman Julie Bremner.

Defensively, Bremner has 213 digs to lead the Irish. Shewman has 209 to follow Bremner in that category.

Bremner also has been the key to making a smooth transition from defense to offense. She has given Irish hitters 1476 assists thus far for an impressive assist percentage of .549.

"I think we got back on track with the win over Ohio State," said Lambert. "We just need to put it all together, and keep it together, to win some games."

Women's C.C. is set for its 1st MCC race

By MARY GARINO
Sports Writer

Coming off a big win at Southern California, the women's cross country team travels to Chicago this weekend to compete in the Midwestern Collegiate Conference championships.

This is the first year in the MCC for Notre Dame. Until this season, the Irish have been affiliated with the North Star Conference, which was smaller and less competitive.

Saturday's race will be attended by nine teams, including Dayton, which placed one position in front of the Irish at last month's National Catholic meet. The Dayton runners will pose the most serious threat for the Irish. Marquette and Loyola, two solid teams, also will be in contention, but Notre Dame finished ahead of both of them earlier in the year.

Junior runner Wendy Murray is optimistic about the team's chances to win, especially after the victory at USC.

"Everyone on the team is really positive about how we'll do," said Murray. "The USC meet was a big boost. We know now that we can run well together."

Captain Theresa Rice backed this up.

"There will be good competition, but we should win," she said.

The team might feel the loss of Terry Kibelstis, a senior who will miss the race with a leg injury. Sophomore Jenny Ledrick, who sat out the first part of the season, will run, and Coach Tim Connelly says that she is in good shape. The rest of the team is at full strength.

With the absence of Kibelstis, the Irish will need good performances from Rice, Lucy Nusrata and Linda Filar, who have been the top three runners on the team so far this season. The Irish also should get support from Murray, Terese Lemanski and Kevaleen Ryan. The USC meet was the first race this year when the lower half of the lineup made a significant contribution, and knowing that they can help will be important.

"We've learned to work with each other," said Murray. "We're closer as a team, and that makes us stronger."

The overall outlook for the Irish is good, according to Connelly.

"I feel that if we can beat Dayton we can win," he said.

Army prefers ground attacks

Associated Press

"Thou shall not pass" could be Army's motto this season.

Since Coach Jim Young installed the wishbone offense in 1984, the Cadets are 22-0 when they throw six passes or less, 31-4 when they throw nine times or less. When they put the ball in the air more than nine times, their record is a sorry 3-14-1.

To paraphrase an old gag, Army is first in war, first in peace and last among the nation's 104 Division I-A teams in passing offense. In seven games, of which they have won six, the Cadets have thrown just 39 passes and completed 16 for an average of 56 yards a game. But they are third in rushing with a 377-yard average.

Rutgers, which beat Michigan State and Penn State, was Army's latest victim, falling 34-24 last Saturday. With Air Force, Vanderbilt, Boston College and Navy left, a 10-1 season is certainly possible.

"Army has a certain element of discipline simply by the nature of their institution," Rutgers coach Dick Anderson said.

"The wishbone, I think, is tailored to their temper, tailored to their institution, because it involves an extreme amount of discipline. I think they play it exceptionally well.

"They're not very big up front offensively or defensively, and yet they come after you very tough, very tough."

• • •

Coach Bob Ricca of St. John's (N.Y.) University has seen both sides of the NCAA's new conversion rule which allows the defensive team to score two points.

Earlier in the season, with the score tied 24-24, the Redmen blocked an extra-point attempt by Iona and ran it all the way for two points and a 26-24 victory.

Last Saturday, C.W. Post scored a touchdown to pull within 21-20 and lined up for an extra point that could have tied the game.

St. John's blocked it, but this time the ball bounced right back to holder Tim McIntee, who alertly passed to tight end Todd Hokunson in the end zone. Instead of a 21-21 tie, Post led 22-21 and went on to win 29-21.

"Although we do not have a designed play for a blocked extra point, we do have a play called 'Red-Red' for botched field goals where the ball recoverer throws to the tight end," Coach Tom Marshall said. "I give Tim a lot of credit. He had the wherewithal to regroup and make a great play."

McIntee is better known as a three-time All-American lacrosse player and is playing collegiate football for the first time.

In addition, he is a defensive back who ranked among the Division III leaders with seven interceptions in five games.

said Schafer. "I wouldn't be surprised if they were on a par with St. Cloud State."

Notre Dame split a two-game series at St. Cloud State last weekend.

Scott Brown, who led RIT in points last year, is one of the returning players. Brown scored 21 goals with 30 assists last season. Other top scorers returning are center Chris Palmer (27 goals, 14 assists) and forward James Cotie (17, 19).

RIT also has its top goaltender back in Fred Abraham, who recorded an 11-7 record with a 4.13 goals against average last year.

"It's their first series of the year with a new coach, so one never knows what to expect," said Schafer.

Freshman David Bankoske and senior Bobby Herber lead the Irish in points thus far in the young season. Bankoske has five assists, while Herber has two goals and two assists.

Schafer said he plans to make some changes in the lines for this weekend's games. With Alaska-Anchorage having scored four shorthanded goals on Tuesday, Schafer also is inserting a different power play unit. He had five forwards on the power play in Tuesday's game.

"We'll have a different power play setup with a couple more defensemen," said

Schafer. "It (five forwards) contributes to our offensive potential, but it's potentially disastrous too, and we paid dearly for it. That's a bad lesson, and we don't want it to happen again."

The first 500 people to enter Saturday's game will receive plastic goaltender's masks in a promotional event sponsored by Travel-More.

ND lacrosse hosts Johns Hopkins tonight

By PETE LaFLEUR
Sports Writer

The excitement and anticipation surrounding the Notre Dame lacrosse game tonight against John Hopkins University can be seen in something as simple as door prizes.

The prizes to be awarded according to program numbers and the halftime shootout include Notre Dame lacrosse sticks and sweatshirts, two general admission tickets to the Penn State football game and a pizza a month for a year from Godfather's Pizza.

But every fan who attends this eventful game should be awarded by the play of Notre Dame and John Hopkins, who many refer to as "the Notre Dame of college lacrosse."

Although the official NCAA season does not begin until the spring, first-year Notre Dame coach Kevin Corrigan said the Irish will be "doing everything we can to win the game." Faceoff will be 6:30 p.m. at Edward J. "Moose" Krause Stadium or the Loftus Center, depending on the weather.

The Irish will be trying to fuse the leadership of senior tri-captains John Olmstead, Kevin O'Connor and Doug Spencer with an experienced defense and a very young midfield.

Olmstead once again will lead the Irish attack. Olmstead led the team in scoring last season with 33 goals and 25 assists, and he is the fifth leading scorer in Irish history. Additionally, Olmstead holds Irish records for total points in a game (nine) and assists in a game (seven).

"John is an outstanding individual and will be very important to our success this year," said Corrigan. "He hasn't played much this fall, but he makes good decisions on the field and we need him in practice to make the whole team better."

Playing alongside Olmstead will be juniors Brian McHugh and Rob Lynn. McHugh, the team's strongman, was second in scoring last season and one of the team leaders in ground balls. Lynn, who Corrigan says has been a pleasant surprise, will be making his first start after seeing limited action last spring.

Lynn will be starting for fellow junior Dave Carey, who is nursing an ankle injury. Corrigan said Carey still should be able to contribute.

The Irish midfield warrants the greatest concern with 10 of last years midfielders lost to graduation, injury, cuts and re-positioning. Most notable is the loss of last year's tri-captains, who composed the first middle-line. This year's line contains no seniors and only one junior (Mike Quigley).

Quigley will be starting alongside sophomore John Capano and freshman Chris Nelson. The second middle line has an all-freshman look with Brian Shurf, Mike Sullivan, and Doug Murray.

ND to host Tom Fallon Invitational

By BOB MITCHELL
Sports Writer

In honor of the grandfather of Notre Dame men's tennis, Notre Dame hosts the Tom Fallon/Notre Dame Invitational this weekend at the Eck Tennis Pavilion.

"I thought you had to be dead to have a tournament named after you and I'm not quite there yet," said Fallon, who coached both the tennis and wrestling teams at Notre Dame.

Fallon, the winningest coach in Irish history, coached the men's team for 31 years (1957-1987). Fallon posted a 517-200 during his reign. He also established the Irish wrestling program and coached that team for 15 years.

"It is a very great honor for me," said Fallon who was inducted into the collegiate tennis Hall of Fame this past August. "It will be a homecoming of sorts, since I know some of the opposing coaches and players."

Current Irish coach Bob Bayliss had this to say about Fallon:

Cornhuskers might not be the most intimidating mascots, but they are some of the toughest volleyball players in the country.

The Notre Dame women's volleyball team will find out how tough they really are as they take on the Cornhuskers tonight in the Joyce ACC.

The Irish, 11-8 after defeating Ohio State in three games Tuesday night, will try to claim their third top 20 victim of the season against Nebraska.

Notre Dame beat Kentucky, which was ranked seventh at the time, and Pacific, then ranked 15th, and now faces a sixth-ranked Nebraska team that holds a 3-0 advantage over the Irish in their series history.

Nebraska is 18-3 thus far in the season, with its losses coming at the hands of top 20 powerhouses San Diego State, Illinois and Oklahoma.

Irish hockey games in North Dome

The Notre Dame hockey team enters its first home weekend series tonight hoping to keep last Tuesday's home opener in the past.

Alaska-Anchorage buried the Irish 8-3 last Tuesday in what Notre Dame coach Ric Schafer termed "a collectively poor effort." The Irish will need to be in much better form if they are to challenge the Rochester Institute of Technology this weekend. Faceoff is 7:30 p.m. for both Friday and Saturday's games at the Joyce ACC.

"It's time for our hockey team to make amends," said Schafer. "I think it (Tuesday) was just a bad night. Now it's over, and we carry on. Better play is ahead of us."

RIT, a Division III school, opens its first season under new coach Buddy Powers this weekend. The Tigers return 20 players from last year's 14-15-1 team.

"They're one of the better Division III teams in the country year in and year out,"

Irish may be 'raising Arizona' over New Year's

It might be too early to call the Irish football team Fiesta Bowl bound, but I think I'm going to the travel agency soon to check on the price of a plane ticket to Tempe, Ariz.

A number of things could happen between now and after the Notre Dame-Penn State game on Nov. 19, when bowl bids are officially extended. But right now the Fiesta Bowl looks to have the best opportunity to attract the 7-0, second-ranked Irish.

Assuming Notre Dame takes care of Navy and Rice (a bold prediction if ever there was one) and then beats Penn State in the final home game of the season, two teams could be in a position to make Tempe attractive to the Irish on Jan. 2:

West Virginia: The Mountaineers probably would face Notre Dame in the Fiesta Bowl if they remain undefeated. But that won't be an easy task. The No. 7 team in the nation takes on Penn State, Rutgers and Syracuse before bowl bids are extended.

Florida State: The No. 6 Seminoles also are in the Fiesta hunt, but must travel to South Carolina next weekend, then get past Virginia Tech at home before the bids go out.

Keep in mind that these scenarios are only valid if the Irish remain unbeaten over the next three games.

One thing about the Fiesta Bowl is that if the Irish play in it, Miami will not. Sorry, Jimmy. No rematch.

The Pac-10 and Big Ten have announced that the runners-up in those two conferences will not accept bids because the Fiesta Bowl airs on NBC television in the same time slot the Rose Bowl holds on ABC-TV.

The time might be changing, however, if the Fiesta can set up a game for the national title (which would exclude the USC-UCLA loser, anyway). In addition, assuming Notre Dame and West Virginia or Florida State win the rest of their games, a loss by UCLA somewhere almost certainly would be necessary for the Fiesta to stage a national title game.

"If we're able to match up a 1 vs. 2, or 1 vs. 3, and we believe it would determine the national championship, we would seriously consider moving the game to prime time on either Jan. 1 or Jan. 3," Fiesta team-selection chairman Don Meyers said. This arrangement was made two seasons ago when Penn State defeated Miami in the Fiesta Bowl's national championship matchup on Jan. 2. All the other major bowls were played on New Year's Day, as usual.

Blocking such a move is an NCAA agreement with the bowls not to change the date, time or site of the bowl games after Sept. 1. The NCAA probably would stop the move unless the Fiesta Bowl could prove that it would be helpful to more than just the Fiesta Bowl (ie. helping the Rose Bowl ratings).

Of course, if West Virginia and Florida State are tripped up during the next few weeks, a date with Nebraska or Oklahoma in the Orange Bowl, a return trip to the Cotton Bowl for a game with Arkansas, or a visit to the Sugar Bowl in New Orleans to meet the Southeastern Conference champion might become attractive to the Notre Dame Athletic Department.

I hope I don't have to go through this many options at the travel agency... or the Tempe airport.
