'At least' 70,000 march in Leipzig

Associated Press

BERLIN— Tens of thousands of demonstrators marched and shouted "We need freedom!" in Leipzig on Monday during the largest pro-democracy rally in East Germany since a 1953 workers' uprising, witnesses said.

Protesters also held a vigil in East Berlin to demand democratic reforms after a weekend of demonstrations across this hard-line Communist nation.

On Saturday and Sunday, clashes broke out between police and demonstrators with hundreds arrested, several injuries, and one death reported by news organizations and witnesses. The government has issued no official toll.

Christoph Wonneberger, pastor for the Lukas Lutheran Church in Leipzig, said "at least" 70,000 demonstrators marched in Leipzig on Monday night.

Wonneberger said he was surprised by the restraint of police and paramilitary troops who were deployed nearby.

"Even though this demonstration is the largest (since 1953), to our knowledge it went off completely without violence," he said in a telephone interview with West Germany's ZDF television network.

In 1953, Soviet forces crushed a workers' uprising.

Some Leipzig demonstrators even "began conversations with paramilitary troops" after the crowd started dispersing by mid-evening, Wonneberger said.

He said, "I consider this (police restraint) a very hopeful sign following the violence" in earlier demonstrations.

Police clubbed pro-democracy protesters in six East German cities over the weekend and an opposition leader said that unless the government eases its policies, violence may increase.

Before the Leipzig march, officials of the Leipzig Communist Party promised publicly they would push for an open dialogue between citizens and the government, church sources said.

ND language dept. divided into 3 parts

Change is currently in effect

The Arts and Letters language department, previously called the department of modern and classical languages, has been reorganized into three new departments: German and Russian languages and literatures, classical and oriental languages and literatures, and romance languages and literatures.

The languages were grouped into these three categories in accordance with their similarities, said Dean of the College of Arts and Letters Michael Loux.

German and Russian have historical as well as cultural linkages and the connection between romance languages is obvious, he said.

The relationship between classical and oriental languages is a more ancient one, said David Ladouceur, chairman and associate professor of classical and oriental languages and literatures.

Having all the languages grouped into one department makes it "difficult for the department to set common goals," Loux said. With three separate departments, each one will "be able to proceed with their own research agendas," he added.

The division has been effective as of the beginning of the fall semester. Hopefully it will create more classes and thus decrease class size, said Klaus Lanzinger, chairman and professor of German and Russian languages and literatures.

He said that since the departments each have their own office in O'Shaughnessey Hall, the faculty is more available for consultation with the students.

This division (into three departments) offers "more personal attention for the students," Lanzinger said. He also hopes that the reorganization will provide a closer interaction among the faculty.

The department's main goal is "to achieve bilingual competence" through language instruction, and to then build on that knowledge with a focus on literature, Lanzinger said.

Associate Professor and Chairwoman of the romance languages and literatures department JoAnn Della Neva stated that her first goal is to "really improve lower-level language courses." She has instituted a video-oriented French class and would like to expand the concept.

She also stresses communication and improved speaking ability.

Della Neva stated that her second goal is to improve and expand the graduate program by offering a graduate degree in Italian next year.

Since the titles of the new departments include literature, each department is emphasizing this aspect. "Literature is really what the program is about," Della Neva said. It is only through reading the great works of a language that you can improve upon your understanding and skills in that language, she added.

The German and Russian languages and literatures department will be having an inaugural AT&T Visiting Scholar lecture series about Russian and German literatures, as is the romance languages and literatures department.

The classical and oriental languages and literatures department is also sponsoring an inaugural lecture series bring-

Senate debate over racially offensive remarks goes on

By SANDRA WIEGAND

Verbal complaints are not a satisfactory method of combating faculty who make racially offensive remarks, said Rob Price, president of the Black Cultural Arts Council at the Student Senate meeting yesterday.

Presently, all complaints to the provost's office are verbal, and often no complaints are on file for a specific faculty member because the complaints are not in written form, said Price.

In regard to a recent incident Price said: "We wanted to meet with the provost and with the professor to discuss this issue... so that they could be aware of what was happening. The provost told us that we can't make that move because this professor has no file. Our point was, you have no method of complaint, no form so that we can get complaints in his file..."

the procedure is no procedure basically."

"I think that there should be something where we are conscious of exactly what to do, where to channel our complaints," he added.

Student Senator Sigi Loya, who is working with minority club presidents, said they would be drawing up a proposal for the provost on this issue.

The presentation of a proposal to the administration for a security escort service was approved at the senate meeting.

The proposal will be given to Director of Security Rex Rakow this week and Student Activities will be contacted about the prospect of basing the service in LaFortune.

Gina Mahony, the student who drew up the proposal, hopes to meet with the administration within the next week to receive their approval.

If the proposal is approved,

WORLD BRIEFS

A 22-1/2-foot-tall paper clip was unveiled outside a business college Monday to honor the Norwegian who invented the office helper 90 years ago. The paper clip, weighing a desk-crushing 1,320 pounds, is a faithful copy of Norwegian Johan Vaaler's 1899 invention, said Per Langanker of the Norwegian School of Management. "The paper clip is 100 percent accurate and fully functional if anyone has big enough paper," said Langanker, 23, of the school's student committee. The paper clip was made from steel tubing and is mounted on a 6-ton concrete base outside the institute in Baerum, an Oslo suburb.

Pope John Paul II began a visit to the world's most populous Moslem nation Monday with a message of friendship and assurances that his Roman Catholic flock was loyal to Indonesia. In an atmosphere of controversy over a scheduled stop in East Timor, a predominantly Catholic former Portuguese territory annexed by Indonesia in 1976, John Paul sought to make clear that Catholics were no threat to the archipelago's unity. "I have come as a friend to all Indonesians, with a great respect for all the people of this dynamic nation," he said.

NATO on Monday began a month-long naval exercise in the western Mediterranean that includes forces from Spain and France. France and Spain, which are not part of NATO's integrated military structure, are joining the "Deterrence Force" exercise as part of normal training relations with the allies, NATO said. Greece, which declined to take part in the "Display Determination" maneuvers last month in the eastern Mediterranean, sent the frigate Elli to take part in the current exercise that ends Nov. 14.

NATIONAL BRIEFS

Penny Lernoux, a prize-winning journalist and author noted for books on the role of the Catholic Church in Latin America, has died at the age of 49. Lernoux died of cancer Sunday at Northern Westchester Hospital Center in Mount Kisco, N.Y., according to Sister Elizabeth Roach of the Maryknoll Sisters. Lernoux had lived in South America since 1962, the past 20 years in Bogota, Colombia. Her 1980 book, "Cry of the People," received acclaim for its depiction of the struggle for human rights in Latin America and the church's involvement.

INDIANA BRIEFS

An explosion and two bomb threats closed school at Anderson High School on Monday. Students were sent home after an explosion caused minor damage, officials said. No one was hurt. Anderson Fire Chief Dan Edwards said the explosion occurred in a basement-level physical education activity room below the stage in the Wigwam, Anderson's 9,000-seat high school gymnasium. Investigators had not determined what caused the explosion, Edwards said. "Every once in a while we get bomb threats," Edwards said. "We've never had an actual bomb go off before and we're not sure we had one this time."

An Evansville billiards supply dealer was arrested Monday after allegedly selling Hoosier Lottery tickets before Friday's start of the game and for selling to a minor, authorities said. Don Poole of Don's Billiard Supply was arrested about 3:30 p.m. and charged with two counts of promoting professional gambling, which is a Class D felony, and one count each of unlawful sale of a lottery ticket and selling a lottery ticket to a minor, both Class A misdemeanors.

The Grim Reaper knocks when seniors interview

Senioritis is not all that it is cracked up to be. As an underclassman, I often found my mind wandering away from my studies and dreaming of the days, when, as a proud Notre Dame senior, I would be able to lay around like a slug.

What a rude awakening I have undergone in the past few weeks. Contrary to all expectations, I have discovered that the most common symptom of senioritis is stress. A study was recently conducted in which several physiological measurements were used to determine stress levels in college students as a function of their year in college. The highest stress levels were found in seniors, followed closely by freshmen, with sophomores and juniors bringing up the rear.

To me, at least, this shows that stress tends to accompany times of monumental change. For the college senior, this change is perhaps most acute. The real world, like the Grim Reaper himself, is rapping with bony knuckles upon his door.

Indeed, many changes and important events take place in one's senior year. But, I would like to focus here on one particularly nerve-fraying phenomenon: the interview.

I happen to be interviewing at medical schools, but I am certain that my misadventures are not restricted to pre-meds.

The interview experience begins as soon as you receive a happy letter from a prospective school or place of employment, "inviting" you to attend "a friendly meeting for a mutual exchange of information." Do not be fooled by these people; they are professionals. The sanguine letter they send is merely the set-up for the bloodbath that is to follow. The manifold compliments contained within are analogous to the increased feed that is given to turkeys prior to Thanksgiving.

Lets look at the facts. The places at which you are interviewing (schools or businesses) usually speak with five or six times as many students as they are planning to admit. Given this fact alone, it begins to seem rather unlikely that the interviewing goal of the companies or schools is really to "get to know you better as a person." It would be inappropriate to even call this notion euphemistic — it is an out and out lie.

I purport that the sole purpose for the interview is to verbally and psychologically bludgeon you until your personal weaknesses are clearly spelled out by profuse sweating, stuttering or (in an interviewer's dream) an all-out nervous breakdown. Medical schools sometimes refer to this process as "ascertaining the presence of unfavorable mental qualities in the applicant."

Consider an example. A friend of mine, let us call him Hunna to protect his identity, recently finished an interview that opened up with questions about his religion. The interviewer/torturer then proceeded to challenge Hunna's specific moral beliefs and use his views to illuminate contradictions and weaknesses in the reasons for Hunna's beliefs.

After about 40 minutes of this hell, the interviewer left the student with this comforting tip: "I noticed that you got a little nervous during the ethical questions, Hunna, because you kept playing with your shoe. It might be a good idea to avoid doing that in future interviews."

At this point, you are probably beginning to get a little worried and asking, "But what can I do about this interviewing horror?"

In a word, the key is PREPARATION.

In the span of time between your "invitation" to interview and the actual interview you should realize that the school or business is not just sitting back and chilling out. No siree, your record and preliminary application materials

'Sometimes an interviewer will play on your honesty to give him the ammo he needs to waste you.'

Greg Lucas
Assistant News Editor

are being painstakingly scrutinized, people from your proximate and distant past are being contacted, phones are being tapped, and mail is being monitored.

Thus, you should be ready for the following scenario: "Gee Greg, your participation in the basket-weaving club is impressive... Oh, what's this newspaper clipping mixed in with your file... Well I'll bet, it's a police report in which you were cited for..."

Also beware of the subtle approach.

Interviewer: "What do you feel is the greatest single problem facing medicine today?" Greg: "It's got to be medical incompetence." Interviewer: "I think that you're absolutely correct, but speaking of incompetence, I noticed that in your second semester of organic chemistry you..."

Get the idea. In addition, interviewers love to throw curves just to see how much you can sweat up your new interview suit. My personal favorite is this loaded question: "Boy, you certainly have an excellent record, but can you tell me about an incident of which you are most ashamed?"

The interviewee who has done his homework will be ready for kidney punches like this and respond in the following manner: "Well, I remember one time when I saw a school bus crash. I successfully performed CPR on eight of the children, but when I got to the ninth it was too late... he had already passed away. I am most ashamed of the fact that I did not work faster on the first eight."

Just one more instructive example, sometimes a lazy interviewer will play on your honesty to give him the ammo he needs to waste you. Consider the following question: "Greg, you seem to have many favorable characteristics, what would you say are some of your unfavorable traits?"

Once again, the crafty college student can thwart this bullet by responding in the following way: "It's hard to say this, man, but sometimes it occurs to me that I just care too much for other people and consequently I neglect my own welfare."

The experienced student will incorporate statements like this into explanations of poor grades, i.e. "Yeah, that's what happened to me in second semester Orgo, my roommate was having some problems, and I just got excessively caught up in helping him."

My goal in this article has not been to get you more stressed than you are already, but merely to prepare you for the psychological catfish that await you in the interview. Remember, when you walk into that office, the interviewer is not thinking: "I wonder how many good things I can discover about this charming college student," but rather, "what junk can I unearth from this loser's past that I can use to justify tossing his application into the garbage." Panamanian coup leader buried, opposition leader ends his fast

Associated Press

PANAMA CITY, Panama—The army major who led the unsuccessful coup against Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega was buried Monday and opposition leader Guillermo Endara ended a 19-day hunger strike.

Several reports have said an enraged Noriega personally shot Maj. Moises Giroldi, 38, to death minutes after the coup attempt against the Panamanian leader ended a week ago.

Giroldi's relatives said he was shot once in the neck and twice in the chest. His mother, Eloisa, cried "They murdered him!" and flung herself on the coffin.

The major led an uprising Oct. 3 and captured Noriega, who commands the Panamanian military and controls the government, but gave up when loyalists counterattacked while U.S. troops looked on from a few hundred yards away.

Officials of the Panamanian Defense Forces said eight officers and two sergeants were killed. They have not explained the circumstances or responded to reports that some were slain after surrendering.

Endara ended his fast and entered a clinic to "normalize my body's system."

A medical bulletin said his "conscious process was excellent and his conversation coherent," but he was suffering "from progressive debilitation."

The opposition leader has urged Panamanians to delay paying taxes and utility bills, and to shun the government lottery and casinos, on which the government has depended for much of its revenue the past 18 months.

The United States has applied economic sanctions against Panama since federal grand juries in Florida indicted Noriega in February 1988 on charges of drug trafficking and money laundering.

Noriega claims all efforts to oust him are part of a U.S. plot to retain control of the Panama Canal after 1999, when it is to be turned over under treaties signed in 1977.

At a news conference, Endara said he felt his hunger strike was a success. He said the opposition did not approve of the coup because it represented "Noriegism without Noriega," not a movement toward democracy.

Capt. Leon Tejada, another rebel, was buried at the same small red stone church over the weekend. "He had one bullet wound in the right temple," said Tejada's mother, Esther, who was at the church again for Giroldi's burial.

About 100 people attended the funeral Mass for Giroldi.

Anti-nuclear activists try to ground shuttle

Associated Press

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla.—The countdown for this week's planned launch of space shuttle Atlantis began Monday as NASA headed for a court showdown with anti-nuclear activists seeking to stop the flight because of its plutonium-powered payload.

If a federal judge approves, Atlantis is to blast off at 1:29 p.m. Thursday with five astronauts who are to dispatch the Galileo spacecraft with its nuclear generators on the start of a six-year journey to Jupiter.

A band of 25 protesters demonstrated Monday at the Kennedy Space Center, played out a mock death scene, and vowed that if they are turned down by the court, they will sit on the launch pad if necessary to halt the launch.

Attorneys for the space agency and three citizens' groups are to present oral arguments Tuesday before U.S. District Judge Oliver Gasch in Washington.

The launch opponents contend that an explosion on liftoff could spread cancer-causing plutonium over a large area of east-central Florida.

NASA officials argue the two nuclear generators aboard the Galileo spacecraft have been thoroughly tested and that flying them poses minimal health and environmental risks. Similar devices have flown on 22 other U.S. spacecraft without a problem.

"We're going to count down to a launch on Thursday unless we are told to stop," NASA test director Ron Phelps said Monday as the countdown got under way. He described Atlantis as in "terrific shape."

The astronauts assigned to the mission flew here Monday from their training base in Houston for final flight preparations. All five have said they are not worried about the plutonium in the cargo bay.

"My family is going to be down there watching the launch, as well as other people that I love, and so I'm not concerned about it; I feel it's safe," said Ellen Baker, one of the crew members.

The others are commander Donald Williams, pilot Mike McCulley, Franklin Chang-Diaz and Shannon Lucid.

U.S. university reopens in Beirut

Associated Press

BEIRUT, Lebanon—Hundreds of students returned to campus Monday when the American University of Beirut reopened after being closed for six months, its longest shutdown since the sectarian civil war began 14 years ago.

"The whole family's back," said Radwan Mawlawi, spokesman for AUB, the alma mater of the Arab world's elite and once the most admired university in the Middle East.

The cafeteria was packed with students, who hugged each other and renewed friendships. Others jammed the campus post office, checking their accumulated mail.

Mawlawi said the campus was hit several times by artillery fire, causing "extensive damage...that has now been repaired."

"Everything's in place. The faculty and students are here," he said. Syrian troops and Lebanese police in red berets checked student ID cards at the three gates of the tree-lined campus overlooking the Mediterranean in Moslem west Beirut.

"Beirut's life is throbbing again now that the university has reopened," said a policeman who strolled through the campus.

It was not known how many of the 5,000 students returned on Monday. Ghada Sheib, a Shiite Moslem architecture student, said: "I'm very happy to be back. Let's hope it'll last."

Many students and other residents of Beirut share her doubts about the durability of a cease-fire that began Sept. 22.

HUD spent $35 million on last day of fiscal '88

Associated Press

WASHINGTON— Federal HUD officials approved $35 million in loans on the last day of fiscal 1988 in an apparent rush to spend the money before it was transferred to another program, according to auditors and agency documents.

Most of the Section 312 multifamily housing loans were approved despite incomplete applications or processing, according to auditors who alerted the department's general counsel to the questionable loans. The auditors were told the government was legally bound to fund nearly all of them.

"Where commitments were made they were honored, but (HUD) will not be making conditional commitments in the future," said Housing and Urban Development spokesman Jack Flynn.

Section 312 multifamily housing loans totaling more than $40 million were approved in the final month of fiscal 1988 — out of about $100 million budgeted for the entire fiscal year — including $35.3 million on Sept. 30, 1988, the final day of the budget year, according to HUD records.

During that eight-hour work day, 107 loans ranging from $15,000 to $6.1 million for conversion of a Spokane, Wash., hotel were approved, the records show.

A subsequent review of HUD records by The Associated Press found that 130 loans totaling $40.8 million were approved in September 1988, all but 23 of them, totaling $5.5 million, on the final day.

New chair to command endowment for the arts

Associated Press

WASHINGTON— The National Endowment for the Arts, shaken by a conservative furor over subsidizing "obscene art," is getting a new chairman this week who promises to strike a balance between freewheeling artistic freedom and respect for the public's trust.

"We are not the nation's official pornographer, and it's important that the country know that," said John Frohnmayer, a 47-year-old lawyer from Portland, Ore., who takes command of the beleaguered arts endowment today.

Nonetheless, some members of the cultural community are expressing fear that the bitter controversy over the endowment's role in financing controversial art might undermine future support for bold, innovative — and unpopular — artistic ventures.

The worst political crisis in the NEA's 24-year history began earlier this year when conservative members of Congress were outraged to discover that $45,000 in endowment funds had been used to support two exhibitions they found offensive.

One featured works by the late photographer Robert Mapplethorpe that included homosexual and sadomasochistic themes and pictures of nude children. The other show, by artist Andres Serrano, featured a photograph of a crucifix submerged in a container of urine.

In a surprise move, Jesse

Helms, R-N.C., won Senate approval of his sweeping proposal to prohibit spending federal funds on "obscene and indecent" art or any work that "denigrates, debases or reviles" anybody on the basis of race, creed, sex, handicap, age or national origin.

His amendment to the arts endowment's $171 million appropriations bill caused a furor in the arts community, and House-Senate negotiators finally produced a compromise last week that contains a watered-down version of the Helms proposal.

The legislation, awaiting action by President Bush, would bar government financing of works that "may be obscene" and lack "serious literary, artistic, political or scientific value" — the Supreme Court's 1973 guideline on obscenity.

The NEA chairman, however, would retain authority to make final decisions on the artistic merit of grant applications.

DRINKgOD DRINKS GOD

"I was trying to drink God out of the bottom of a bottle. If I would drink enough, I'd have done it."

That is a paraphrase of a statement made by Bill Wilson — one of the founders of Alcoholics Anonymous. While looking for the most he could get out of life, he found alcohol. As a result, he couldn't keep a job or friends. His marriage was in jeopardy. He was suffering ill-health emotionally, physically and spiritually.

As he began a process of recovery (with the help of his co-founder — Dr. Robert Smith), he began to realize that there was a great possibility that rather than sidetracking him from his quest, alcohol was leading him to a process of accomplishing it. The more he admitted how unmanageable his life became because of alcohol, the more rigorous his quest for meaning was to become.

As the Notre Dame community celebrates Alcohol Awareness Week (October 8-15), it might be of value to investigate some of the spiritual aspects of alcohol consumption. Approaching the topic from the point of view of persons most seriously impaired by alcohol does not serve well in giving warning to those with no disease predisposition, but such an approach could help identify some universal drives of imbibers and non-imbiber alike.

Alcohol plays a central role in the life of the Notre Dame community. The President's Task Force of Whole Health and the Use and Abuse of Alcohol began its report last spring with a very sober statement: NOTRE DAME HAS AN ALCOHOL PROBLEM.

So, a thesis: A primary goal of the consumption of alcohol at Notre Dame is to alter consciousness. A primary reason we drink alcohol is to become or to feel other than who we are. Our desire to "become other" might be temporary or it might be permanent. But, it is suggested, it is the common denominator of most drinking at Notre Dame.

Why would we want to be other than who we are? A number of reasons could be suggested (and some of them might even be valid!):

We don't like who we are.
We want to be someone else.
We don't like how we feel.
We want to feel something else.
We want other people to think we're someone else.
It's a way to do things we otherwise wouldn't do or even think of doing, but want to do.
We have a desire to go somewhere beyond ourselves.

The suggestion is that most of the time we at Notre Dame drink alcoholic beverages in quantity we do so for one or more of the above reasons. We might not like how we feel now, or feel about ourselves now, and want that to change for now. Or we might not like how we feel ever, and want that to change forever. But rarely do we at Notre Dame drink alcohol merely because we are thirsty or because we like the taste.

The bad news side of the task force statement on Notre Dame's alcohol problem is that the role alcohol plays in the life of the university community is detrimental to its health. If any of the above reasons for drinking are true, we can conclude that many members of the Notre Dame community don't like themselves as they are or don't like what they feel much of the time or want others to see them in ways other than as they are.

The good news might be that the Notre Dame community has a strong desire to move beyond itself. In other words, many people at Notre Dame have a great spiritual thirst, but most of us have not found healthy ways to satisfy that thirst.

For Bill Wilson, Bob Smith and millions of other alcoholics, alcohol came to be seen as the metaphor for their spiritual quest. They were indeed attempting to drink the meaning of life out of the bottom of a bottle. So are we. Alcohol becomes a mode of transport for our journey into the world of the spirit. When we use alcohol as a proxy for the spiritual journey, what feels like fulfillment under the influence really is a great emptiness which cannot be felt because of pleasure's own narcotic effect.

Any spiritual journey is a process of moving from self and increasing conscious contact with and awareness of a power greater than ourselves: Allah, Buddha, Jehovah, Adonai, Yahweh, God. The journey leads to an understanding of existing not to satisfy senses or ego but to grow along spiritual lines beyond what is explicitly known, felt or seen into a relationship with God as God becomes understood.

When we move beyond the narcotic and acknowledge great emptiness, we experience God most profoundly. When we are so rubbed up against our own will and our own pleasure and great emptiness then we know God is present, waiting to be recognized and seen.

Then alcohol can take its rightful place in our lives and our real journey can begin.

Americans win Nobel Prize

Two cancer researchers to share $469K

Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO—Two University of California cancer researchers won the Nobel Prize in medicine Monday and immediately reaped the perquisites of success: box seats at the National League baseball playoffs. "We're off to the game — just got tickets," a jubilant J. Michael Bishop said shortly after he and Harold Varmus learned that they had won this year's prize.

The 50-member Nobel Assembly of the Karolinska Institute, Sweden's largest and oldest medical university, cited Bishop and Varmus for their discovery that cancer genes in certain viruses are altered forms of normal animal genes.

The research helped scientists understand how cancer begins, and it "widened our insight into the complicated signal systems which govern the normal growth of cells," the assembly said.

Varmus called the research a "cornerstone in understanding the genetic mosaic of cancer."

"The basic idea that we helped establish is that cancer has its origins in genes that normally do us some good. But after they become abnormal through mutation, they cause a role in cancer," he said.

The two scientists are colleagues at the University of California School of Medicine in San Francisco. They originally published their prize-winning findings in 1976.

Bishop said winning the award was "surreal," while Varmus said it was startling when the telephone began ringing at 4 a.m.

"We just assumed one of the grandparents had some trouble, so we were frightened," he said.

But his alarm quickly turned to exultation, especially when the $469,000 award — to be split between the two — began paying off in unexpected ways.

When reporters swarmed to his home early in the morning, Varmus had said he only wished he could use the Nobel money to buy tickets to the sold-out championship game between the San Francisco Giants and the Chicago Cubs at Candlestick Park.

A short time later, he received four free tickets compliments of the San Francisco Examiner, University of California spokesman Robert Sanders said. Bishop already had his own tickets.

At a news conference at the University of California Medical Center, Bishop and Varmus were optimistic about the practical applications of their work, how it helps understand the nature of cancer and possibly some aspects of the AIDS virus.

But they were cautious about forecasting a cancer cure in the foreseeable future.

"This is just another step in what's a long journey," Bishop said. "It's very difficult to predict when a full view of the cancer cell will be at hand."

Although Varmus stressed that he and Bishop "stood on the shoulders of those who came before us," at least one scientist said he resented carrying their weight.

Dr. Dominique Stehelin, a French researcher who carried out experiments overseen by Bishop and Varmus at San Francisco in the 1970s, said it was "very unfair and rotten" that he wasn't included in the prize.

"I did the work all by myself, from A to Z," Stehelin told the French news agency Agence France-Presse.

Bishop and Varmus called Stehelin's work "crucial" to their research, but referred questions about the prize to the Nobel committee.

"We didn't nominate each other," Varmus said.

"You may know you're in the running, but nevertheless, there are a lot of other good people in there too. ... It's a shock," said Varmus, dressed casually in blue jeans and a red and white striped shirt, and a light beard that was apparently the result of a hasty shaving job.

Varmus, 49, who once hoped to become an English professor, said he abandoned his studies of 17th century literature to attend medical school. He said he switched fields after learning that writer Gertrude Stein had enrolled at Johns Hopkins Medical School after being told that "medicine opens all doors."

Gradually, he discovered he enjoyed being in the laboratory more than the clinic, and his research career began, he said.

ND alum DeBartolo makes Forbes 400 list

Associated Press

NEW YORK—Metromedia Co. Chairman John Werner Kluge is worth an estimated $5.2 billion, but he had to back into first place on Forbes magazine's annual list of the 400 richest Americans.

Kluge displaced Sam Walton, head of the Wal-Mart stores discount chain, who divided his $9 billion fortune among himself and his four children and ended a four-year reign as Forbes's wealthiest person.

Notre Dame alumnus Edward DeBartolo, 80, of Boardman, Ohio is number 42 on the Forbes list. DeBartolo's estimated net worth: $1.4 billion, mostly in shopping centers.

Among other notables on the list released Monday, developer Donald Trump compounded his already considerable fortune and financiers Michael Milken and Carl Icahn joined the billionaires club.

Overall, Forbes' richest are worth an estimated total of about $269 billion, up nearly $50 billion from the previous year, a 22 percent increase that substantially outpaced last year's 4.4 percent inflation rate.

That total wealth would come just short of bailing out the nation's failed savings and loans over the next 30 years, the cost of which was estimated by Congress at $285 billion.

The list appears in the Oct. 23 edition of Forbes and is based on estimated holdings as of Sept. 8.

The prototypical member of Forbes' ultra-rich was a 63-year-old male with 3.1 children working on his 1.4th marriage with a net worth of $672 million last year, more than the gross national product of Lesotho, Forbes said.

The list contains 346 men and 54 women; 159 inherited their wealth; no one from Maine, North Dakota or Alaska qualified; Yale had 22 of the richest, Harvard 17 and the University of Pennsylvania 12; the 45 with master's degrees in business had an average net worth of $895 million, while the 10 high-school dropouts had an average of $854 million.

About 20 percent, or 82, of those listed live in or near New York City, with Los Angeles second with 32 and San Francisco third at 19.

Soviet scientists vouch for UFO landing in park

Associated Press

MOSCOW— It was a close encounter of the Communist kind. Towering, tiny-headed humanoids from outer space landed their UFO in the Russian city of Voronezh and emerged for a promenade around the park, spreading fear among residents.

At least that's what the official Tass news agency said Monday.

Tass, contributing to a string of weird tales that have crept into the formerly stuffy state-controlled media in recent months, said in a straight-faced report that Soviet scientists vouched for the UFO's landing.

"Scientists have confirmed that an unidentified flying object recently landed in a park in the Russian city of Voronezh," Tass said. "They have also identified the landing site and found traces of aliens who made a short promenade about the park."

A Tass duty officer, contacted Monday evening by telephone, refused to identify the reporter who sent the dispatch from Voronezh, but stood by the story. "It is not April Fool's today," he said.

The Soviet media, unleashed by the Kremlin's policy of glasnost — greater openness — feel free now to hype incredible stories that seem more at home in the supermarket tabloids of the West. Recent examples have included other accounts of UFOs, sightings of abominable snowman-type creatures, and a tale about a young mystic who goes into a trance and flies about the cosmos. A rash of mystics and ESP-artists also have invaded state TV.

In Buffalo, N.Y., Paul Kurtz, chairman of the Committee for the Scientific Investigation of Claims of the Paranormal, commented: "We're extremely skeptical of this claim. It's not the first one (in the Soviet media). There's many. There seems to be a rash of reports, largely uncorroborated."

According to Monday's Tass report, a large shining ball or disk was seen hovering over the park by Voronezh residents. They saw the UFO land and up to three creatures similar to humans emerge, accompanied by a small robot, Tass said.

Nuclear plant operator did not heed warning

Associated Press

WASHINGTON— The operator of the Rocky Flats nuclear arms plant near Denver knew as early as 1984 that dangerous amounts of radioactive plutonium may have accumulated in building air ducts but failed to act on the information, a former employee said Monday.

James Stone, a utility design engineer at the site from 1980 to 1986, said he raised the probability of such plutonium deposits — and the safety hazard they would pose — with Rockwell International Corp., which operates the plant under an Energy Department contract.

"They said we cannot afford to clean it," Stone said in a telephone interview.

Stone's suspicion of a buildup of plutonium residue in the ventilation system at Rocky Flats was borne out by a team of independent investigators who disclosed in a report to the Energy Department last week that such plutonium deposits raised "a real possibility" of an accidental nuclear chain reaction at Rocky Flats.

An accidental nuclear reaction could release lethal amounts of radiation to plant workers.

The independent investigators, dispatched to the weapons plant in July by Energy Secretary James Watkins, reported finding 11 pounds of weapon-grade plutonium in a pipe that serves as an exhaust ventilation duct at one of the plant's main buildings.

The amount of plutonium residue was more than enough to cause an uncontrolled nuclear reaction under certain circumstances but was not an immediate danger to the public or the workers because it was not escaping from the ducts, the investigators said.

Rockwell had insisted prior to the investigation that no plutonium was accumulating in air ducts, the investigators said.

The investigation was conducted by a team of nuclear experts from Sciencetech Inc., an Idaho Falls, Idaho, engineering and management company. The probe raised many questions about the safety of Rockwell's operations and suggested that plant workers had not voiced all safety concerns out of fear of retaliation.

Larry Ybarrondo, president of Sciencetech, said in a telephone interview that the investigators verified that Stone had warned Rockwell about the plutonium problem.

Rockwell last month announced it was withdrawing from Rocky Flats because of a disagreement with the Energy Department over liability for possible criminal acts in connection with waste disposal and other plant operations. An Idaho company, EG&G Inc., last Friday signed a contract to take over Rocky Flats on Jan. 1, 1990.

Stone said he realized the probability of plutonium deposits in the ventilation system in 1984 while he was helping to plan a renovation of Building 881, a former site of uranium and plutonium processing that now is used as a laboratory and computer center.

Stone said Rockwell did not act on his advice that the hundreds of feet of stainless steel ducts be sandblasted or cleaned in some other way to remove any plutonium buildup.

"It wasn't part of the original scope of their work so they weren't going to do it," he said, even though Rockwell possessed the technical capability to test for the presence of plutonium residue in the ventilation system.

Roger Mattson, a vice president of Sciencetech and leader of the Rocky Flats investigation, said in a telephone interview that his group found 11 pounds of plutonium in the ventilation system of Building 771, where plutonium is processed in "gloveboxes." Rockwell shut down several of the gloveboxes after the discovery in August and began taking steps to correct the problem, he said.

SECURITY BEAT

WEDNESDAY, OCT. 4

9:10 a.m. Notre Dame Police were called to the scene of a one vehicle accident at the East gate. No injuries were reported and damages were minor.

9:47 a.m. An off-campus student reported that her car had been struck by an unknown vehicle while the student was parked in the C-1 lot.

12:07 p.m. Notre Dame Security responded to a report of 3 suspicious males in the Lewis Hall lobby. The men were escorted off campus and given trespass warnings.

1:10 p.m. Notre Dame Security received a report of a theft from an off-campus student. The student had placed his wallet in a secured locker at 12:35 p.m. When he returned at 1:10 p.m., his wallet and contents were missing.

1:15 p.m. An off-campus student reported the theft of his wallet and contents from a secured locker in the men's locker room of the JACC. The theft occurred sometime between 12:05 and 1:15 p.m.

1:50 p.m. A number of students reported that items had been stolen from the men's locker room of the Rockne Memorial.

2:45 p.m. A resident of University Village reported the theft of his wallet and contents from a secured locker in the men's locker room. The theft occurred sometime between 12:50 and 2:10 p.m.

Hungary Communists elect centrist leader of old party

Associated Press

BUDAPEST, Hungary— The ruling Hungarian communist party that earlier changed its name and embraced democratic aspirations elected the centrist leader of the old party on Monday to head a slate of reformers in the new one.

Rezső Nyers, president of the Hungarian Socialist Party, told reporters Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev was the first to congratulate him.

"Gorbachev conducts very fast diplomacy," a tired but elated Nyers said. "They gave me his telegram within two hours of my election."

He was named president in closed session after key reformers reluctantly shelved some of their reservations about him to avoid a possible split.

Spokesman Emil Kimmel told state TV the congress also elected a 25-member National Steering Committee, the new party's executive leadership and successor of the communist party Politburo.

Delegates said reformists Imre Pozsgay and Premier Miklós Nemeth, members of the old party's collective leadership, were among the 25. They were not picked as deputies to Nyers, however, in a new indication of resistance to too much radical reformist influence.

The new party's statutes provide for two vice presidents, but Nyers told reporters, "The congress could not agree on choices for these positions."

A copy of the Steering Committee list given to The Associated Press contained names of reformers only, including some former Politburo members such as Foreign Minister Gyula Horn.

Missing were Politburo members considered less enthusiastic about reform, including party spokesman János Barabás.

Politburo member Karoly Grosz, the most conservative of the old party's collective leadership, also was not elected to the Steering Committee, but said beforehand he would not seek a senior post.

The clearly reformist makeup of the executive body was expected to gratify some liberals unhappy with the choice of Nyers, former chairman of the communist party.

Delegate Gyoergy Kerekes said Nyers won the support of 86 percent of those present, and Barabás said from 70 to 80 percent voted for the Steering Committee list.

The congress opened Friday and ended early Tuesday with the more than 1,200 delegates approving the following resolutions — all watered-down versions of what radical reformers wanted:

—Start of discussions in Parliament about the fate of party-controlled assets accrued illegally during its predecessor's 41 years in power.

—Informal support of the largely volunteer Workers' Militia, now facing dissolution, if it decides to give up its paramilitary character and become an emergency aid organization during fires, floods and other catastrophes.

Case closes for Indiana bomber

Associated Press

NEW ALBANY, Ind.— A federal court jury began deliberations Monday in the government's case against John Hubbard, who is accused of making and planting 13 bombs under bridges and behind buildings in Salem.

The jury of seven women and five men went out about 4:50 p.m. EDT following instructions from U.S. District Judge Sarah Barker, who has presided during the six-day trial.

Hubbard's attorney, Paul Watts of Spencer, surprised spectators in the courtroom by resting his case Monday afternoon without calling any witnesses.

Hubbard, 31, of Salem, was charged with 29 federal counts including conspiracy, illegal possession of dynamite, 14 counts of making bombs and 13 counts of attempting to destroy bridges and buildings used in interstate commerce.

"He wanted the thrill of being able to see the fear and the panic on people's faces about the bombs and the chaos he had created in Salem," said

Jerry Conrad, 42, one of Hubbard's co-workers at a Salem factory, was convicted on all 29 counts following a trial last month.

In closing arguments Monday, Assistant U.S. Attorney Robert Powell described Hubbard as a "guerrilla fighter in his own mind."

Powell, who delivered the government's rebuttal.

Powell said Hubbard was motivated by his lifelong rivalry and hatred for state Rep. Frank Newkirk, a Democrat from Salem.

"He resented him for a lifetime of accomplishments that he thought Frank Newkirk Jr. had that Mr. Hubbard didn't," Powell said.

But Watts contended it was absurd to suggest Hubbard would plant one of the bombs within 150 feet of his own house and then return home to his wife and children to "wait to be blown off the face of the earth because he didn't get a part in a school play in high school."

Florida Rep. who is a doctor gets heat for abortion ruling

Associated Press

TALLAHASSEE, Fla.— A first-term state representative and physician is in the center of Florida's abortion storm this week because he's the only legislator who performs abortions, making him a lightning rod for protests.

Ben Graber even gets hate mail.

"They need something to marshal their forces around," he said of abortion opponents.

The obstetrician-gynecologist's Pompano Beach women's clinic drew a raucous demonstration Saturday, three days before the state Legislature was to begin a special session on abortion called by Gov. Bob Martinez.

"They were frustrated by the (Florida) Supreme Court decision. They decided to make me the target, an ideal situation with the legislative session coming up," Graber said Monday.

The state Supreme Court last week cited the state privacy law to strike down a 1988 statute requiring minors to get parental consent for abortion, uphold a woman's unrestricted right to abortion in the first trimester, and emphasize individual privacy rights in abortion decision-making.

The governor acted within weeks of the U.S. Supreme Court's July 3 ruling upholding Missouri state restrictions on abortions, making Florida the first state since then to call a session devoted to abortion.

At Saturday's demonstration, Graber said several of his patients, none there for abortions, were jostled by a 200-strong crowd and others were scared away. Graber says he performs two or three abortions a week and only as part of his practice.

The Rev. Pat Mahoney, a South Florida coordinator for Operation Rescue, an anti-abortion group that demonstrates at clinics, was arrested and charged with assault on a police officer, obstructing justice without violence and trespassing.

Graber called Operation Rescue "a terrorist organization" and said he will seek a restraining order against the group and damages.

His office has been picketed before. But the latest protest was perhaps the most strident, he said.

British deny involvement with Hong Kong activists

Associated Press

LONDON— The Foreign Office on Monday rejected a Chinese official's accusation that Britain is conniving with activists in Hong Kong to overthrow China's government.

The Chinese army's attacks on pro-democracy students in June, which left hundreds dead, "are the cause of the loss of confidence in Hong Kong," said a Foreign Office spokesman.

The British colony is scheduled to revert to Chinese rule in 1997.

"As for the view that we have connived at acts of sabotage in an attempt to overthrow the Chinese government, that is quite wrong," said the spokesman, speaking on condition of anonymity.

"The people of Hong Kong attach great importance to democratic freedoms, under their own legal system," he said. "Equally it is important that such freedoms are used with a sense of responsibility."

"There is no evidence that Hong Kong is used as a base for activities against the Chinese government. The democratic freedoms of Hong Kong must be preserved."

Ke Zaishuo, who heads China's delegation to a Chinese-British liaison committee on Hong Kong, on Sunday accused Britain of adopting an "attitude of condescension" toward alleged efforts in Hong Kong to overthrow the Communist government. He did not elaborate on the charge.

The official Xinhua News Agency also quoted Ke as saying Britain had "unshirkable responsibility" for widespread fears in Hong Kong about the Chinese takeover that have triggered mass efforts to emigrate.

Hundreds of thousands of Hong Kong residents have protested the army attack in Beijing, and several groups have been formed to work for democratic change in China. China has called the groups subversive but Hong Kong's British-appointed governor has refused to ban them.

IRA claims responsibility for shooting

Associated Press

BELFAST, Northern Ireland— An attacker pulled up in a car and fatally shot a 28-year-old man in another vehicle Monday, police reported. The outlawed IRA claimed responsibility.

Police said Thomas Gibson was shot several times as he sat in his car in the village of Kilrea. They said the gunman opened fire at point-blank range from a car that pulled up alongside Gibson's.

The Irish Republican Army claimed responsibility in a statement delivered to news organizations. It said Gibson worked for the Ulster Volunteer Force, an outlawed Protestant paramilitary group that frequently is an IRA target.

Downtown Radio, a Belfast station, said the Protestant group denied Gibson was a member. Police said he was not connected with security forces.

Ukraine: a ray of hope behind the Iron Curtain

By Sergei Basarab

Due to perestroika and glasnost, which were warmly welcomed into the U.S. political vocabulary, most Americans no longer identify all Soviet people with being "Russians." Baltic Popular Fronts (radical movements in support of reconstruction) show the whole world how creative the peaceful, parliamentary revolution is.

Latvians, Lithuanians and Estonians proved that criticism by words is a mightier weapon than criticism by arms. Ethnic Azerbaijanians and Armenians chose the latter, but they couldn't put out the flames on national conflict. Instead, they fanned these flames. It is no surprise that people in both republics are very anxious. "How to live?" "What is to be done?" Such questions are common there, but unfortunately, there are still no answers. Citizens of Georgia also failed to find them. On the square of Georgia's capital, Tbilisi, Georgians were met by units of the Soviet Army. The blood has been shed. Not long ago a special commission of the Georgian S.S.R. Supreme Soviet (Parliament) stated that the decision to use armed forces was an unlawful act. Such is the situation in yesterday's "territories" which today want to be dignified states (still within the Soviet Union).

And how about Ukraine? This mighty republic of fifty million people is a rich land larger than the states of California and Florida combined. The Ukrainian S.S.R. holds a separate membership in the United Nations, UNESCO and other international organizations, where its voice, I have heard, is highly respected. But for a long time, there has been silence at home. While neighboring Moldavia resembles something of a seething pot, Ukrainians have been thinking quietly to themselves. That's why, I guess, the top Party Boss, who has the dubious distinction of having been the close friend of late Leonid Brezhnev, was "unanimously" elected to the new Soviet Parliament. As a matter of fact, our computers began to perspire as they calculated this "unanimous" victory with 50.00...1% of the votes cast. This is why the submissive press has kept silent.

To my great regret, the space afforded by a newspaper article does not allow me to tell much about the events which preceded the "conservation" of the Ukraine. A historic essay could occupy bulky volumes, but there is one greater evil to be mentioned now: the destruction of the Ukrainian nation and culture. This policy of destruction, carried out by the government of tsarist Russia, was surpassed by Stalin and his comrades-in-arms. Hundreds of thousands of people died during an artificial famine and by execution following unjust trials. What had once been rich grain fields became an unpromised land. Bloody butchers even tried to do away with language, and they were nearly successful. According to the last census, five million Ukrainians considered Russian to be their mother tongue.

But luckily, even the most horrible oppression meets a resistance. Consciousness fades away but doesn't die. This is a stable law of social life. Insulted and humiliated, the Ukraine is coming out of hibernation. Popular Fronts have already risen in different regions. Their demands include granting Ukraine greater economic independence, cancellation of the construction of more nuclear power plants (no more Chernobyls) and recognition of Ukrainian as the official state language. Sometimes these people resemble unhelpful babies in the cradle, but at other times they become Hercules incarnate. For example, voters in Kiev, the capital of the Ukraine, rejected unpopular officials in the last election. In Chernovtsy, a large city in the western Ukraine, the influential "old guard", Leonid Kravchuk suffered a great defeat at the polls. Not long ago, the Society of Ukrainian Language, named after Taras Shevchenko, the father of our national literature, was established.

But these successes are but drops of water in an ocean of problems. The main difficulty is a lack of concrete and realistic programs which can take in to account all of the complicated processes now happening in the republic. Some people try to confine the activities of the Popular Front to national issues, neglecting the fact that several Ukrainian regions (Crimea, Donetsk, the area where miners recently went on strike, Voroshilovgrad) are completely Russian-speaking where people are more interested in economic and social reform. On the other hand, there are certain elements in our society which pay no attention to the national issues, hurting the radical majority in traditional Ukrainian-speaking areas. How can we bridge the two extremes? I believe that there is but one way: the deliberate enlightenment of people with different points of view, making them aware of the importance of both national and economic matters. This is a challenge for all Ukrainian intellectuals who are proud daughters and sons of their land. Chances are that by working together, they can unite a divided nation.

Chances are... When will they become reality? Nobody can answer for sure. Meanwhile, as I've stressed above, there are some signs of awakening, but we are far from being wide awake. We are still quiet Ukrainians, though our backs are unbending, and our voices are sounding louder. I am reminded of the famous words of Lincoln: "You can fool all the people some of the time, and some of the people all the time, but you can't fool all the people all of the time."

There was a time in the Ukraine when even the recipe for a cake had to be approved by officials in Moscow. Then people realized that this was absurd, and they became furious. I guess the more days that pass, the wiser (or more sober) we will become. Finally, we will rush to the point which far-sighted people have already seen. I mean a prosperous Ukraine within the Union of sovereign republics.

Grace debate covers role of US in aiding perestroika and glasnost

Dear Editor:

The Grace Hall Debate Series, now in its fourth year, will begin on Tuesday, October 10. The debates will run through the end of November and will cover a wide range of topics, the first of which is "The United States should immediately grant laws and other economic incentives to the U.S.S.R. in an effort to promote perestroika and glasnost."

Each debate will pit three representatives from each participating floor in Grace against each other to discuss lively and relevant issues of the day. There will be a championship debate at the end of the "season" between the two best floors.

Tonight's debate will be judged by Professor Thomas Swartz of the Economics Department. It will be held at 9:00 pm in the Grace Hall "Pit." All are welcome, so please come and enjoy the intellectual match-up!

MARCH ON THE CAPITOL

ND students and national organizations band together for the homeless

Michelle Berninger
accent writer

"Power concedes nothing without a demand. It never has, and it never will." These words inspired the Housing NOW! March on Washington, D.C. last Saturday.

Twenty-three Notre Dame and Saint Mary's students joined 200,000 to 300,000 other protesters from across the country to march from the Washington

The march was a culmination of a week of protests to demand decent, affordable shelter as a human right in the United States.

Monument to the Capitol. Along with the students, over 60 people from the community travelled in buses to Washington, D.C. on Friday afternoon and marched the next morning.

The march was a culmination of a week of protests to demand decent, affordable shelter as a human right in the United States. From a stage behind the Capitol, Rev. Jesse Jackson, actress Susan Dey and others spoke out against homelessness, and musicians such as Tracy Chapman, and the Jefferson Starship entertained the crowds. Over 200 other celebrities were present to help draw attention to the housing problem which has left no corner of America untouched.

According to Kathleen Royer, coordinator of Service/Social Actions Groups for the Center for Social Concerns, participation in the march was a good way for students to work with the local community on an important issue, and understand how social changes take place in a democratic society.

Several of the participating students are involved in CILA, or work at the homeless shelter in South Bend, but many others were motivated solely by the idea of such a huge march.

"This national event was an effective way of initiating action for housing the homeless on a local level," said Mary Sue Twohy, one of the student organizers of the trip. "The experience of the march was very unifying."

One of the most moving speeches of the day was an address made by a 9-year-old homeless child to President Bush, who was at Camp David at the time.

The march was attended by people of all ages and from many groups, but also by many homeless from other cities. This fact, according to Notre Dame participant Dave Palumbro, was one of the most positive aspects of the march. "It was neat to think that these homeless people were marching for a problem that they shared with the homeless of Washington."

Another student, Jeanne Ballot, called the march "an incredible experience." The emotion felt by such a national call to action was enhanced by the large number of different people participating for the same cause. "There were a lot of groups represented with many individual causes," she said, "but they were all united for one reason."

The march occurred at a time when most experts now estimate the number of homeless Americans at 3 million, with families representing the fastest growing sector of the homeless population. Today, the nation's capital is experiencing the largest increase in homeless families.

The Housing NOW! brochure claims that at the start of Ronald Reagan's first term, the U.S. spent $7 on defense for every $1 spent on housing. Today, the ratio is $44 to $1. Furthermore, since 1980, Budget Authority for all federal housing assistance programs has been cut by more than 75 percent — from $32 to $7.5 billion a year.

These are the types of statistics that the Housing NOW! coalition of over 200 organizations hopes to change.

You know what to do

I finally broke down and bought an answering machine. I really had no choice in that AT&T was having a 2 for 1 sale and had I not acted now I would not have been able to save 50%. Although, had I bought nothing I would have saved 100%, but I guess they'd rather not have us look at it that way.

I think that they should simply be honest about it, and come right out in the ad and say that if you buy now you'll only lose 50% as compared to the 100% you usually lose when you buy something. I can just see the ads now, "Honest Abe's Midnight Madness Sale, buy NOW and LOSE UP TO 75%!!!"

The problem I'm having, though, is that I can't think of a good message for the machine. Sure, it came with a pre-recorded message, but the guy who recorded it sounds like the kind of person who would starch his shorts, just for kicks. This is not exactly the kind of image I'm trying to convey. And let's not forget, image is EVERYTHING. I mean, this is your machine — it's your buddy. If you don't have a machine, you're nobody. Your machine is your gateway to the Age of Communication, and the message you leave on it is becoming more important than the color of your tie. You know you're a success when you not only have a machine, but you've created THE message.

This is why I'm so worried: you can tell a lot about a person from the outgoing message they leave. For example, you can tell that someone who leaves the message, "I'm sorry, but I'm unable to come to the phone now (etc.)," is a damn poor liar.

You know who you are. EVERYONE knows that you could come to the phone, but that you're screening your calls to avoid talking to that person who cannot get it through his or her thick skull that you are more attracted, sexually, to bullfrogs than to them, and that they should stop calling.

Not that honesty, in this situation, is all that good an idea either. Once I heard a message that said, "I'm screening my calls so say something and if I recognize your voice and like you I'll pick up." This is the kind of person who would get a call from his mother, not pick up, and later wonder why she stopped sending money. I think, by the way, that this would be a good time to mention that those Outgoing Message Tapes fall into the same category as clip-on power ties. Need I elaborate? I think not.

Another thing to look out for is a message that's too long. Nobody wants to call you and sit there for 30 seconds listening to you drone on about who knows what. What they want is to get to the part where they hear the beep and use the "S" and "F" words at you for leaving that damn thing on in the first place.

So your goal should be to have a short message that creates a kind of "Beemer" image. Namely, that you have enough money to lose $40,000 on a car that performs no better than one at half the loss. The reason you need this image is that the person calling may very well be looking to go out with you. Obviously, this new trend of burping into the machine is unacceptable. Burps simply do not turn on prospective dates (unless it's a really good burp).

Most importantly, you must not insult the caller's intelligence. For example, you need not tell them that you are not answering the phone personally. Obviously you're not home or you wouldn't sound like Darth Vader on helium. You need also not tell them to leave a message. I mean, come on, what else would they leave? Recipes? For that matter, why bother telling them to leave their name and number? Don't they KNOW that much by now? This is almost the '90's you know.

Come to think of it, I think what I'll do with my machine is to skip the message. I'll just set it up so that when a person calls, it just beeps and that's that. I figure this will create a kind of intelligent, yet "with it" sort of image. I mean, if anyone calls, hears the beep, and doesn't know what to do, I'm not to terribly sure I want to talk to them anyway.

Vikings express interest in Dallas running back Walker

Associated Press

EDEN PRAIRIE, Minn. — Calling Herschel Walker unique, Minnesota Vikings general manager Mike Lynn said Monday that he will pursue a trade for the Cowboys' star runner this week when he is in Dallas for NFL meetings.

Lynn, who on Tuesday will begin meeting with other owners in an effort to select a successor to retiring commissioner Pete Rozelle, hopes to do a little dealing on the side with Dallas owner Jerry Jones and Coach Jimmy Johnson.

He also said he'll be talking to other organizations in an effort to improve the Vikings before the Oct. 17 trading deadline.

Lynn considers the Vikings very close to being a Super Bowl team and agrees with Coach Jerry Burns that championship teams need overpowering running games.

Walker led the NFC with 1,514 rushing yards last year and caught 53 passes for 505 yards. He hasn't been as effective for the Cowboys this year. Dallas (0-5) is rebuilding and is going with a more pass-oriented offense under Johnson.

The Vikings and Cowboys had reportedly worked out a trade last week, but the runner said he didn't want to come to Minnesota.

What would it take for Walker to change his mind?

Lynn needs to convince Walker that Minnesota is a swell place to play and, at the same time, will have to make Walker's wallet swell.

Walker said he's "always been happy in Dallas" but wouldn't mind playing for a contender, which Minnesota is.

And though he said he wouldn't "let money tell me what to do," he'd also like a healthy raise. He's in the fourth season of a five-year, $5 million contract.

Several players were rumored to be part of the deal, but Lynn has hinted that the offer consisted only of several high draft picks.

Burns said he would happily trade draft choices for impact players like Walker. The Vikings have been successful doing that in recent years, getting linebacker Mike Merriweather, tackle Gary Zimmerman and receiver Anthony Carter via draft trades.

"There's always a conflict between the coach and front office," Lynn said. "The coach wants to win now. So do I, but I have to be very careful about mortgaging the future."

Nevertheless, he acknowledged that a possible deal for Walker "is the kind of case that brings the coaches and front office together."

"You're talking about a guy

The Dallas Cowboys' Herschel Walker (34) is looking to escape his team's dismal exploits. Last year's leading rusher has been talking trade with the Minnesota Vikings, a team which sports greater potential to be Super Bowl contenders than his 0-5 Cowboys.

with total yardage over 2,000 yards last year. There's very few players around that can give you that type of production," Lynn said. "This is a unique case for a unique player."

He said it was more important to win one Super Bowl than to have four 10-victory seasons and that another impact player could put the Vikings closer to that goal.

"We like to add four new starters every year, but we made the Merriweather trade last draft day, so we're not going to get four this year," Lynn said. "So you would think our draft choices would be very important to us now."

"But Herschel Walker, that's a very unique case, one that doesn't come around but once every 10 years."

"I think we've taken some risk and, so far, the deals have panned out."

Vikings backs averaged only 2.8 yards a carry in last week's 24-17 victory over winless Detroit but Burns said, "I don't like to blame it all on the running backs."

The poll says No. 2 Miami is better than No. 3 Colorado. Missouri cornerback Otis Smith says the poll is wrong.

"My belief is that Colorado is way better than Miami," Smith said. "They're faster, bigger, stronger and a better team overall."

His opinion is based on first-hand experience. Two weeks ago, Missouri was beaten by Miami 38-7. Saturday, the Tigers fell to Colorado 49-3.

Smith wasn't the only one impressed by Colorado. The Buffaloes received two first-place votes in Monday's Associated Press poll and drew closer to Miami and top-ranked Notre Dame. All three teams are 5-0.

Notre Dame, which defeated Stanford 27-17 Saturday, received 54 first-place votes and 1,494 points from a nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters. The Fighting Irish have been No. 1 in every poll since the season started.

Miami remained No. 2 following a 56-0 rout of Cincinnati. The Hurricanes received four first-place votes and 1,428 points, 57 more than Colorado.

Next is Nebraska, which improved to 5-0 with a 58-7 victory over Kansas State. The Cornhuskers are followed by Michigan (3-1), Tennessee (5-0), Arkansas (4-0), Houston (4-0), Pittsburgh (4-0-1) and Southern California (4-1).

Michigan beat Wisconsin 24-0, Tennessee edged Georgia 17-14 and Arkansas defeated Texas Christian 41-19. Their rankings were unchanged from last week.

Houston climbed four spots after beating Baylor 66-10, while Pittsburgh and Southern Cal each fell one place despite winning. The Panthers beat Temple 27-3 and the Trojans downed Washington 24-16.

West Virginia fell the farthest, dropping from a tie for ninth to 20th after being upset by Virginia Tech 12-10. It was the Mountaineers' first regular-season defeat since 1987.

Alabama led off the Second Ten, followed by Auburn, North Carolina State, Clemson, Oklahoma, Illinois, Air Force, Washington State and Florida State. Air Force and Washington State are tied for 17th.

No. 21 Michigan State and No. 22 UCLA each moved up three spots. Rounding out the Top 25 were newcomers Penn State, South Carolina, Brigham Young and Florida. BYU and Florida were tied for 25th.

Penn State, coming off its first losing season in 50 years, improved to 4-1 with a 17-0 victory over Rutgers.

Dropping out of the rankings were Syracuse, Texas A&M and Oregon. Syracuse lost to Florida State 41-10, Texas A&M was beaten by Texas Tech 27-24 and Oregon fell to Washington State 51-38.

The rest of the game was a gladiatorial brawl for Cavanaugh the eventual victor, as free safety Marty Kelly and defensive lineman Wally Crapps hauled in interceptions to settle the issue. The Dog defense closed the game on an up note, with a smothering goal-line stand to halt a 94-yard drive by Cavanaugh.

Rockne League competition saw Sorin (2-0) top Fisher (1-2) 7-6, as the Otters broke up a two-point conversion attempt Sorin reached the end zone in the third quarter with a 20-yard pass, which had been set up by Mark Massinopale's interception. Yet the Sorin defense saved the day, as Fisher's two-point conversion attempt was batted down with no time left.

In the day's other action, Zahm (1-2) ended a long dry season, paralyzing the Holy Cross Hogs (0-2-1) 13-0, while Carroll (2-1) topped Pangborn (1-1) 8-6, and Morrissey (1-2) hit paydirt with a 12-7 rout of Keenan (0-2-1).

Howe plans to return to NHL

Associated Press

DETROIT — Gordie Howe, who retired in 1980 as hockey's all-time scoring leader after a 26-year career, says he will return to the ice in 1990 to add another record to his long list of achievements — playing in six decades.

The 61-year-old Howe, who finished his NHL career with 1,850 points, said he plans to rejoin the Hartford Whalers for one game next year. Howe finished his career with Hartford in 1980 after a career spent mostly with the Detroit Red Wings.

Asked Sunday what he thought about Wayne Gretzky's drive to topple his point record, Howe said he planned to set a new record and challenged Gretzky to match it. He and the Los Angeles Kings star are friends.

Howe watched Gretzky pick up three assists in 5-0 victory over the Red Wings in Los Angeles on Sunday night to move within seven points of Howe's career point mark.

"The only record I'm going to make sure about is that I'm going to come out of retirement after the New Year to play one more game in the '90s so that I've played in six decades," Howe told the Detroit Free Press. "Then I challenge the little guy (Gretzky) to do that."

Howe also holds the NHL records for most seasons (26), games (1,767), goals (801), game-winning goals (122), All-Star selections (21) and playoff appearances (20).

Howe played for Detroit from 1946-71 and for Hartford in 1980.

If Gretzky stays on pace he will break Howe's scoring record this year in his 11th season—15 seasons sooner than it took Howe to achieve that milestone.

Islanders beat Canucks 5-2; Bruins down Canadiens 2-0

Associated Press

VANCOUVER, British Columbia — The New York Islanders scored four times within five minutes in the third period and rallied to beat the Vancouver Canucks 5-2 Monday.

Goals by David Volek, Doug Crossman, Brent Sutter and Alan Kerr wiped out a 2-1 Vancouver lead.

Volek, who assisted on two other goals, tied the score when he batted in a rebound at 14:06. Crossman and Sutter scored on power plays and Kerr added an empty-net marker to complete the comeback. The Islanders had lost their first two games of the season.

Patrick Flatley scored the other New York goal and combined with Volek and Sutter to form the most dangerous attacking unit.

Vancouver scorers were Petri Skriko and Paul Reinhart as the Canucks dropped to 1-2.

In the third, New York fired 19 shots at Vancouver goalie Steve Weeks, who kept the Canucks in the game until the last five minutes. New York finished with 30 shots on goal, while the Canucks had 37 shots on Glen Healy, who made several difficult saves during the scoreless opening period, most of them during two Vancouver power plays.

Vancouver scored 33 seconds into the second when Skriko's long shot from inside the blue line handcuffed Healy.

The Islanders picked up the tempo in the second and were rewarded at 5:28 when Flatley converted a pass from Volek.

The play was started by a sharp headman pass from defenseman Jeff Norton in the neutral zone.

The Canucks failed to finish several good scoring chances in the second. Larionov put a backhand behind Healy and through the crease on a breakaway, while Krutov rattled a rising backhand off the post.

Reinhart gave the Canucks a 2-1 lead at 5:59 of the third.

Bruins 2, Canadiens 0

Cam Neeley and Randy Burridge scored in the first period and goalie Reggie Lemelin earned his ninth NHL shutout as the Boston Bruins edged Montreal Monday night for their first regular season victory over the Canadiens since Feb. 4, 1988.

Lemelin, making his 1989-90 season debut, had 24 saves as the Bruins improved their record to 2-1 while handing Canadiens their first loss in three starts.

The Bruins, 0-7-1 against Montreal last season, peppered goalie Brian Hayward with 40 shots, while dominating the action after the opening minutes.

Boston outshot Montreal 15-5 in the first period.

Neely broke a scoreless standoff at 11:44 when he took a passout from Craig Janney and scored from just outside the crease for his third power play of the season.

Then, at 19:57, Burridge took a pass from Glen Wesley and sent a short flip past Brian Hayward for his first goal a split second before he was leveled by Montreal defenseman Petr Svoboda. Burridge's goal was Boston's first at even strength after seven power play goals.

Svoboda received major and game misconduct penalties, but the Bruins were unable to capitalize on a 5-minute manpower advantage.

Lemelin protected the shutout with saves on three long shots while Montreal pressed a man advantage late in the second period.

Then he made a half dozen outstanding saves while the Bruins were shorthanded again after Neely was penalized at 12:55 of the final period.

Sailing steps towards prominence

The Sailing Club took a break from co-ed regattas so its women's team could travel to the United States Naval Academy to compete in the Navy Fall Women's Intersectional.

The Irish knew the competition would be tough going into the regatta, but they were not intimidated by the national powers from Brown, Connecticut College, Navy or Charleston.

Notre Dame finished ninth out of 16 teams to virtually guarantee a national ranking among the top 15 teams in the nation.

"We're ecstatic!" proclaimed club president Paige Cooper. "No team gets ranked overnight. The first step was getting invited to the Nationals last May where we finished 15th out of 16, but this is a major accomplishment."

A major accomplishment indeed, considering the fact that Notre Dame will be the only club team among the ranked teams. All that means is that the Irish use their talent and hearts to overcome the lack of varsity funding.

The A boat sailed by Paige Cooper and Patti Losinske finished 10th overall. The two girls split the skippering duties during the regatta. The B boat, piloted by Lisa Fox and crewed by the alternating Laura Sullivan and Kathleen Halloran, finished eighth.

The Irish weathered a blustery Saturday and a dead calm Sunday to finish ahead of already ranked teams Michigan and Charleston. The women's team will now have to wait until November to see exactly where they are in the rankings. The club will have a co-ed regatta at Ohio State this weekend.

The Rugby Club went into this weekend's Indiana Union Tournament hoping to knock off Purdue for the second straight weekend. Unfortunately, Notre Dame couldn't muster enough to defeat the tough Boilermakers again. They lost 13-0.

"We came out flat," said club president Mike Smiggen. "We weren't as up as we should have been."

Purdue got a 4-point try four minutes into the game and not soon after, converted a penalty kick to make the score 7-0. The Irish buckled down from there, but Purdue locked up the game with a try and conversion with 5 minutes to go.

The Irish rebounded on Sunday to beat Ball State and take third place in the tournament. The score stood at 4-4 in at the end of the first half, thanks to a Mike Mohlenkamp try. The Irish exploded for 15 second half points and were able to play every player, including seven alternate players in the 19-4 rout.

Mike Kamradt

Another plus to come out of the weekend is that on Sunday the Irish will have six players trying out for the Indiana select side. Rob Graham, Wally Maloney, Mike Smiggen, Jim Dudley, Brian Lennon and Sean McNamara will attempt to make a team that will compete against other select sides from Midwest states in a tournament in Peoria Ill. the following weekend.

This weekend the club will take three teams to Kalamazoo to take on a mixed club of older, bigger forwards and college-age, quick backs.

"This will be a real challenge for us," predicted Smiggen. "They beat us last year, and they have a really good organization with quality players."

The Boxing Club will have their Novice Tournament this Friday at 4:30 p.m. in the North Dome of the Joyce ACC. The novice boxers have been working out for the last five weeks.

"We've been working on getting them in boxing shape," explained club president Doug Biolchini. "The purpose of the Novice Tournament is to teach them techniques and to get them experience at a smaller level so that the Bengal Bouts don't feel new to them."

There will be 24 fighters competing in the tournament and all are anxious to get on the canvas and show what they have. Many of the fighters have discovered there is much more to boxing that meets the eye.

"I've learned that boxing isn't just a sport where two people just pummel each other," stated senior Chris Sullivan. "It requires a lot more mental preparation than I expected because you have to know when to throw your combinations."

Each fight will be three rounds. The weight classes will go from 120-pound flyweight to fighters weighing 210 in the heavyweight division.

we were still in it," said Augustyn in assessing the game. "Then, in the second half, their offense took over."

With the conclusion of the weekend games, the Irish remain winless in their last five games. In the downslide, the Irish have been outscored 12-4. Things do not get any easier on the Irish schedule either. This Friday night, they play top-twenty ranked Akron University at Krause Stadium. All this is reason for concern to Augustyn.

"We are a long way from finding ourselves as a team. We're stagnant right now," said the senior defender. "I felt we played our best game yet against Indiana last week (a 3-1 loss), but we haven't built on it; we haven't gone any further as a team."

Indeed the Irish do have the personnel and the potential to be a top twenty team. They have shown flashes of brilliance against some of the nation's best teams this season. If they can come together more as a cohesive unit and play consistently well, the Irish soccer team believes it can definitely achieve its goal of making the NCAA tournament.

"It's a long road left. We have a lot of games to play," Augustyn said. "If we start off with a good game against Akron and build off of it, I don't see why we can't move on and make the NCAA tournament."

Raiders improve to 2-4 with 14-7 win over Jets

Associated Press

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Eddie Anderson returned an interception 87 yards for a touchdown Monday night to lift the Los Angeles Raiders to a 14-7 victory over the New York Jets in Art Shell's debut as an NFL head coach.

Shell, 42, is the first black head coach in the league since 1925. He replaced Mike Shanahan, who was fired last Tuesday after the Raiders got off to a 1-3 start.

The Raiders showed little spark for much of the game. But they made more big plays than the Jets, who fell to 1-4, 0-3 at home. Los Angeles didn't even need star running back Marcus Allen, who strained his right knee in the third quarter, in lifting their all-time best prime time record to 27-6-1.

After the listless opening half — the first scoreless one in the NFL this season — the teams woke up for 9 1/2 minutes.

Los Angeles needed only two plays to go ahead in the third quarter.

Vance Mueller ran 19 yards to the Raiders' 27, then Jay Schroeder hit Mervyn Fernandez on an out pattern. Fernandez eluded Bobby Humphery and Erik McMillan in the secondary, streaked down the right sideline, then cut toward the middle to complete a 73-yard touchdown on his only reception of the game. It was the sixth straight game that Fernandez had gotten into the end zone — he is averaging 23.3 yards on his 18 catches this season.

The Jets came right back, overcoming the errors that victimized them in the first half. They went 97 yards in 15 plays, sparked by a 23-yard completion to Billy Griggs and a 26-yarder to JoJo Townsell on third down.

Roger Vick dived in from the 1.

Late in the third period, Schroeder was intercepted at the New York 4 by McMillan, who returned it 41 yards. But that paled in comparison to Anderson's stunning run, the third-longest interception return in Raiders' history.

Anderson picked off Ken O'Brien's pass at the 13, seemed stopped near the 30, broke Griggs' weak attempt at a tackle and headed for the sideline. O'Brien was the only Jet within range but couldn't catch the safety.

It was Anderson's first interception this season and the first touchdown of his four-year career.

On the game's final possession, O'Brien led New York to the Los Angeles 11, but the Jets were penalized for holding and he threw an incomplete pass in the end zone on the final play.

The first half was a perfect example of two last-place teams doing what they've done all year — struggle.

The Raiders had almost no offense as they were plagued by poor field position, dropped passes and weak blocking. Schroeder even was sacked twice by the Jets' usually ineffective pass rush.

Their only scoring chance in the first half came on the final play, when Jeff Jaeger was well short on a 43-yard field goal attempt.

New York moved the ball well, getting into Los Angeles territory on its first four possessions. But O'Brien's passes were off-target, usually overthrown, and he clearly missed receivers Al Toon, Mickey Shuler and Wesley Walker. All three are injured and only Toon played briefly.

game ranked 4th in the nation. The Irish knew they would need to play a near-perfect game in order to emerge with a tie or a victory.

Santa Clara struck first, early in the first half. Jeff Baicher scored at the fourteen minute mark on a beautiful, individual effort. Baicher evaded two Irish defenders, Dave Augustyn and Jeff Rhodes, then gunned a hard shot into the upper right corner from twenty five yards out.

The Irish did not panic after this early goal. They eventually settled down and engineered some scoring chances of their own, although unsuccessful. At halftime, the Irish were down 1-0. Nevertheless, they believed that they could play with their opponent, according to senior co-captain Dave Augustyn.

Early in the second half, Santa Clara quickly squashed any aspirations the Irish had of pulling off the upset. In a span of 7:33, Santa Clara erupted for three goals to put the game out of reach. For the remainder of the half they continued to dominate play at both ends of the field. Santa Clara ended up out shooting the Irish, 17-3.

Athletics riding high after winning bid to '89 World Series

Oakland building 'dynasty' as they claim AL pennant

Associated Press

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Ever so slowly, when baseball people talk about the Oakland Athletics, they say: "potential dynasty."

The A's won the American League pennant in 1988 and made changes for this year. They signed free agent pitcher Mike Moore for $3.95 million last December. They traded for outfielder Rickey Henderson on June 20. And they won the pennant again, closing out the Toronto Blue Jays on Sunday in five games.

It doesn't take much for a dynasty these days. The A's are the first repeat pennant winner since the New York Yankees and Los Angeles Dodgers each did it in 1978. The 11-year stretch was the longest in baseball history without a team winning consecutive pennants. The A's will open the World Series at home Saturday.

Sandy Alderson, the vice president for baseball operations, and Tony La Russa, the manager, choose their words carefully.

"To me, we won the division the first three months of the season as much as anything we did," La Russa said.

That's because Jose Canseco didn't play until July 13 because a stress fracture in his right hand, Mark McGwire missed 14 games with a bad back and Dennis Eckersley missed 40 games with a strained right shoulder.

"I like to turn negative into positive," La Russa said. "It may have been helpful. I'd be curious to know how we would have done."

The biggest difference between the '89 A's and the '88 A's appears to be Henderson. His speed added to the offense and his presence brought out the flair.

"I think the addition of Rickey Henderson was the key," McGwire said. "He showed it by getting the MVP (in the AL playoffs). We didn't have a player like him last year, a guy who can steal at will and be a great leadoff hitter."

Henderson's snatch catches and his stutter-step home run trots got booed by the Toronto fans. But they, along with Dave Parker's home run strolls and Canseco's drives in the fast lane, give the A's their image.

"There's a fine line between rigidity and discipline," Alderson said. "Tony's there to maintain discipline yet not stifle creativity and originality and enthusiasm."

La Russa finished each playoff game drenched in sweat. Expending a little nervous energy, Tony?

"That was a struggle," he said after Saturday's 6-5 victory in Game 4. "Whew."

He said he thinks he handles the pressure well.

"I'm probably in better shape to go through these games than my family or the front office guys who don't see every game," he said.

Alderson disagreed. A little. "I see almost every game," he said.

However, Saturday's game did get to him. He didn't watch Game 3 of the National League playoffs that night.

"I had to avoid watching it," Alderson said Sunday before the A's won the AL series. "I can take only so much baseball a day and yesterday I got all I needed."

When they won three consecutive World Series during the 1970s and five straight AL West titles, they were known as "The Swingin' A's." Charlie Finley's team had bravado, braggards and brawn. They were led by Reggie Jackson and they had big talent and big mouths. But they backed it up.

This Oakland team is beginning to let loose, too. It certainly got to the Blue Jays and their fans.

AP Photo

Outfielder Rickey Henderson of the Oakland Athletics is one of the main reasons the A's are garnering a reputation as a dynasty. Henderson was a catalyst for the A's when Jose Canseco, Mark McGwire and Dennis Eckersley were missing from the lineup due to injuries and he helped the A's become the first team in 11 years to win consecutive pennants.

Athletics worth the wait for loyal fans

Associated Press

OAKLAND, Calif. — The Oakland Athletics missed a flight from Toronto and didn't expect many fans to welcome them home early Monday after winning the American League pennant.

But they were surprised. At least 500 enthusiastic fans were waiting at Oakland International Airport when their heroes appeared shortly after 1 a.m. Some fans had waited several hours for the team.

"We got ready to leave Toronto and someone said we'd get home too late and there wouldn't be anybody waiting for us," A's Manager Tony La Russa said, as the crowd let out a roar.

Dave Stewart, the winning pitcher in Sunday's 4-3 victory over the Blue Jays, and La Russa joined several players who walked from the customs clearance area to an outdoor podium in the balmy night air.

"We went to Toronto and we decided to have a little fun, but we still have some unfinished business," Stewart told the crowd, including some who wore green body paint and blond wigs. "And this time, we're going to try and get it done."

Other fans carried or wore A's paraphernalia to show their euphoria over Oakland's second straight AL pennant, the first team to accomplish that feat in 11 years.

"You go through every game with them, and you've just got to come out and support them," said Tony Tenorio, 18, of Alameda, an Ohlone College baseball player who was there to greet the A's.

Harry Legendre, of Antioch, wore a bright gold wig, an A's jacket and T-shirt and rang a cowbell with a team logo. He arrived at 10:30 p.m.

"My wife thinks I'm nuts," Legendre said. "I'm a diehard fan. I think the team is more with it this year. It came too easy for them last year."

Gladys Stout, who said she was in her 70s, arrived with her granddaughter and great-granddaughter.

"I want to see those A's come in," said Stout, who wore an A's cap and golf-ball sized gold earrings with an A's logo. "I just want to be here."

"We're sticking it out, doesn't matter how late," Martha

Johnston of Oakland said, an hour before the team arrived. "How many opportunities like this do you get? I'll call in sick if I have to, but I'll be here until they're here."

At many sports clubs in the Oakland area, people celebrated, then quickly made way for fans of the San Francisco Giants, whose fourth game in the National League playoffs began an hour after the A's victory.

The Giants also won, and on Monday they tried to beat the Chicago Cubs and win the National League pennant, creating a Bay Bridge World Series.

Some patrons at McGee's Bar and Grill in Alameda were less than thrilled Sunday night about the possibility of a Bay Bridge World Series. Some A's fans worried that if the Giants won the Series, they would suffer endless razzing from co-workers or relatives who root for San Francisco.

Alison Storar, 21, is an A's rooter, but her brother is a Giants fan.

Special to The Observer

The Notre Dame men's golf team is in first place in the Midwestern Collegiate Conference Golf Championships after 36-holes of play Monday at the Weatherwax Municipal Golf Course in Middletown, Ohio.

The Irish have 601 thus far in the 54-hole tournament, as they hold a healthy lead over second-place Xavier, who stands at 616 and Dayton and Marquette who are in third and fourth place with 627 and 630 points, respectively.

Notre Dame is led by Mike O'Connell, whose 75 and 73 put him one stroke ahead of Xavier's Jeff Lancaster at 148.

His teammate Pat Mohan, who had led the pack after the first round of play, dropped into third place with rounds of 74 and 76 for a two-round total of 150.

Irish golfers Paul Nolte and Dave Regnier are tied for fourth with 152 going into today's final 18 holes of play.

Mark Grace of the Chicago Cubs and his fellow first baseman Will Clark of the San Francisco Giants were stalwarts on their squads during the National League pennant race decided Monday by the Giants 3-2 win. Both turned in record performances during the series as Grace hit .647 with one homer and eight RBI and Clark tallied two dingers and eight RBI to hit .650.

Grace, Clark etch names in record book wielding big sticks in playoffs

Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — San Francisco's victory over Chicago for the National League pennant will become a line in the record book someday. The confrontation between Will Clark and Mark Grace may become legendary.

For five games, it was like watching Lou Gehrig go after Mel Ott.

For the record, Clark went 13-for-20 (.650) with two homers and eight RBIs. Grace was 11-for-17 (.647) with one homer and eight RBIs.

Not a bad month for some.

Just when it seemed Clark had reached ultimate human potential, he singled with the bases loaded and two outs in the eighth inning off Mitch Williams on Monday to give the Giants a 3-2 victory and the NL pennant.

"We've all see supreme athletes in all sports rise to the occasion," Giants manager Roger Craig said of Clark, the series' MVP. "But you won't see what he did today. This was unreal. You've got one of the best left-handers in the game out there, bases loaded, in a tough situation, 0-2 count, and he gets a base hit."

Clark set NL playoff records with 13 hits, eight runs and 24 total bases.

"I don't really think about what Mark is doing," Clark said. "When he's up I know he's hot and a threat, but I don't worry about the numbers."

There are a lot of numbers to fret about, too.

Clark and Grace had slugging percentages that resemble zip codes to Mars, and they are becoming must reading in the playoff record book.

Grace had 11 hits in 17 playoff at-bats with three doubles, one triple and one homer for a 1.118 slugging percentage. He also had eight RBIs in the series, second most in NL playoff history.

Clark finished with a 1.200 slugging percentage.

"I had a good series," Grace said. "But it wasn't enough. I'll trade the stats to be able to play in the World Series any day."

Watching Clark and Grace, one gets the feeling the best is yet to come.

"You're seeing the first basemen of the '90s," Giants manager Roger Craig said. "I can't imagine a better performance from two players than they have given."

In Game 1 at Wrigley Field, Clark was 4-for-4 with two homers and six RBIs. He hit a grand slam clear out of Wrigley Field in the fourth inning and never more looked the part of "The Natural."

The slam climbed into the Chicago night as the crowd fell still. The cameras caught Clark's pretty swing and his trot down the first-base line. Only the exploding light tower was missing.

"Yeah, that was something I'll remember," Clark said. "Winning it all is what really mattered though."

Grace, not to be outdone, went 3-for-4 with two RBIs in the opener.

"I admire Will Clark and I try to be the kind of player he is," Grace said. "But I'm not a power hitter."

Maybe not, but Grace sure looked like one in the playoffs.

In the Cubs' 9-5 victory in Game 2, Grace went 3-for-4 with four RBIs.

Clark and Grace each had two hits in Game 3, and kept it going Sunday night.

Clark had two doubles, a single and scored twice and Grace had two RBIs, including a triple.

Clark's 13 hits in the series broke the record held by Terry Puhl, Ozzie Smith and Jeffrey Leonard. Of course, Grace surpassed them, too.

The performances by Clark and Grace while outstanding, really aren't all that shocking.

In three major-league seasons, Clark has a .304 average with 98 homers and 352 RBIs. This season, he finished second to Tony Gwynn in batting with a .333 average.

"I would have liked to win the batting title, but I'm here and Tony's not," Clark said.

As a rookie for the Cubs last season, Grace hit .296 with seven home runs — all on the road.

He led the Cubs with a .314 average this year and hit 13 homers with 79 RBIs.

Clark and Grace are also among the best defensive first basemen around.

"It's been exciting to watch them go at it," Chicago manager Don Zimmer said. "Mark knows he's not where Will Clark is right now, though."

Reuschel outpitches Cubs to help Giants

Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — Rick Reuschel, the burly Big Daddy of the San Francisco Giants, put an emphatic end to suggestions that his arm might be tired.

The 40-year-old right-hander, clobbered by the Chicago Cubs in Game 2 of the NL playoffs, pitched like a master to win Game 5 Monday and give the Giants their first National League pennant since 1962.

Pitching three days' rest after giving up five runs on five hits in two-thirds of an inning, Reuschel held Chicago to seven hits and an unearned run through eight innings to win 3-2.

He also proved he can be counted on by the Giants when the Bay Bridge World Series begins Saturday at Oakland.

"He had a big monkey to shed today, and he went out there and proved why he won over 200 games," Giants pitcher Mike Krukow said. "The pressure was on him ... and he absolutely dealt. He pitched out of jams all day long. It was a thing of beauty to watch the way he mixed speeds."

Reuschel, a 6-foot-3, 240-pounder who sports a beefy belly, jowls and a small mustache, is a quiet, bookish leader. He rarely gets excited by victories and never worries about losses.

He wasn't particularly upset about the Game 2 loss. As usual, he took the attitude that he went to work, did his job and couldn't be blamed because the ball didn't go where he wanted it or that the Chicago batters hit it.

He also didn't worry about suggestions by writers and Giants manager Roger Craig that perhaps his arm was tired after going 17-8 during a season in which he also was the starter in the All-Star Game.

Reuschel went to work against the Cubs with his usual bag of tricks — 85 mph fastballs, slow fastballs, slower fastballs and breaking balls — before leaving for the pinch-hitter who started the Giants' winning rally in the eighth.

This time Reuschel abandoned his stoic pose and celebrated on the field with his teammates, shouting with them, pumping his fist and hugging everyone.

"This is a highlight," said the champagne-drenched Reuschel, who lost a game for the Giants in his only previous playoff appearance against St. Louis two years ago.

"I had no idea it could feel this good. I think I deserve a little bit of celebration. It's been a long haul."

Reuschel said that before the game he gave little thought to his Game 2 shellacking.

"There was no problem (forgetting Game 2)," he said. "It was a piece of cake. I've done it so many times in my career."

He also didn't think he pitched much differently this time, except for keeping the ball down a little more.

But his teammates could sense a difference, even before he took the mound.

"You could tell when Big Daddy's on," Giants slugger Kevin Mitchell said. "He was quiet in the clubhouse earlier. He always is. But you know he's there and he's going to be there spiritually. I knew he was going to throw a good game. Big Daddy was so calm out there."

"He's been doing it all year, ever since we've had him (since 1987) and he can still do it," said Giants president Al Rosen. "Reuschel gives you great stuff all the time."

"When they get to him, they get to him very early. If they don't get to him early, it's all over. He just knows how to pitch. He keeps coming at you with strikes, changing speeds, breaking balls. He knows all about it."

The first jam Reuschel escaped was in the first inning, when he gave up two singles. But he struck out Andre Dawson to end the threat.

The only run Reuschel gave up was an unearned one in the third, and a simple flip of the sunglasses by Mitchell might have prevented that.

The early afternoon sun shone blindingly over the rim of baking Candlestick Park when Chicago's Jerome Walton popped up to shallow left in front of Mitchell.

Irish soccer programs have ups and downs over weekend

Men's squad loses, ties to fall to 5-5-2

BY CHARLIE POLLARD
Sports Writer

The Chicago Cubs were not the only team of local interest to suffer on the West Coast this past weekend. The Notre Dame men's soccer team came home from the highly regarded Santa Clara Metropolitan Life Classic without a win. However, the trip did not produce entirely negative results.

Friday night, the Irish tied California State/Los Angeles 0-0 in overtime and controlled most of the play. On Sunday though, host Santa Clara University overpowered the Irish for a 4-0 victory. In the process, the Irish watched their record fall to .500 at 5-5-2.

The Irish could have won Friday's game. They had the better scoring chances throughout the game. Their overall team defense was outstanding as well. The Irish managed nineteen shots on goal, their second highest output of the season, yet not one found the Cal. State net. Freshman Kevin Pendergast led the way with five shots on net.

Towards the end of the game, especially in the two overtime periods, the high level of intensity led to numerous fouls on both sides. Five yellow card warnings were issued in the game to add to the 54 fouls whistled against the two teams.

Sunday's opponent, Santa Clara, entered the Women's team 7-6 after Miami shutout

BY COLLEEN HENNESSEY
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame women's soccer team raised its record to 7-6 this weekend by handily defeating Miami of Ohio 3-0.

The Irish, led by assistant coach Neil Schmidt while head coach Dennis Grace accompanied the men's team to California, took an early lead on two goals from sophomore Susie Zilvitis. Miami was unable to recover, and freshman Denise Chabot's first half goal added insurance to Notre Dame's shutout victory.

"We basically just dominated everything," said freshman Margaret Jarc. "We kept control and everyone got to play."

Finishing remains a problem as the Irish offense continues to struggle to convert shots into goals.

"We didn't test their keeper at all," Jarc said. "We certainly could have scored a lot more."

Notre Dame returns to Krause stadium tonight at 7:30 p.m., this time as host to Tri-State, the first in a four game home-stand that includes IUSB, Alma and St. Mary's.

"They're small colleges, but a lot of work has been put into women's soccer in the past few years, and they have strong programs," said Jarc.

Giants win NL pennant with 3-2 win over Cubs

Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO— Thanks to the ultimate Thrill from Will, the thrills are just beginning for the San Francisco Giants and the Bay area.

Clark's bases-loaded single with two outs in the eighth inning gave the Giants a 3-2 victory over the Chicago Cubs and the National League pennant Monday, setting up a Bay Bridge World Series starting Saturday night at the Oakland Coliseum.

Clark, in one of the greatest postseason performances ever, set an NL playoff record with 13 hits, a .650 batting average and 24 total bases and was voted the series' most valuable player. His single to center off Cubs ace reliever Mitch Williams gave the Giants their first pennant since 1962, four games to one.

"You saw one of the great performances ever," Giants manager Roger Craig said. "But Will has done that all year."

"I just try to hang in there," said Clark, who fouled off two tough pitches before his big hit. "I feel like I'm going to get a hit every time up. Just like Rickey (Henderson) did for the A's."

"Mitch is a gamer. He's come in all year and gotten people out. I fought off a few tough pitches and finally got one I could handle."

The Cubs, though, fought until the end. With two out in the ninth inning, Giants reliever Steve Bedrosian gave up three straight singles and a run before retiring Ryne Sandberg on a grounder to second.

Cubs manager Don Zimmer, who was second-guessed several times in the series for not changing pitchers, tempted fate — and Clark — once too often.

Starter Mike Bielecki, who allowed only three hits in 7 2-3 innings, walked pinch-hitter

AP Photo

Chicago Cubs' pitcher Mike Bielecki had allowed the San Francisco Giants only three hits in 7 and 2/3 innings Monday afternoon, but he ran out of juice in the bottom of the eighth inning. Bielecki walked Candy Maldonado, Brett Butler and Robby Thompson with two outs in the eighth to load the bases and set up Will Clark's eventual game winning hit off relief pitcher Mitch Williams.

Candy Maldonado, Brett Butler and Robby Thompson with two outs in the eighth to load the bases. Clark, who had eight RBIs in the series, then did what has come to be expected.

"Don asked me how I was and I thought I could get Thompson," Bielecki said. "I just got tired, so that I pushed the ball up a bit. I think the key to that inning was Candy Maldonado. I threw some good pitches on the corners but he fouled them off."

"The best team won," Zimmer said, "and I hope they go on and win the Series."

Clark scored eight runs and finished with a 1.200 slugging percentage.

"I hated to see Will Clark up there," Cubs first baseman Mark Grace said. "He buried us the whole series."

It was yet another disappointing loss for the Cubs, who have not won a World Series since beating Detroit in 1908 and have not even been to one since 1945.

"Don did a tremendous job with this club," Craig said of his longtime friend. "They shouldn't be too disappointed. They had a great year."

The Cubs had a 9-23 record in spring training, and most observers picked them for fifth or sixth in the NL East.

It was the 16th NL pennant for the Giants since the World Series started in 1903, with 14 coming when the team played in New York. The Giants last won a World Series in 1954 when they swept Cleveland.

It was the first time the Giants have clinched a title of any kind at Candlestick Park and sets up the first "Subway Series" since 1956 when the New York Yankees beat the Brooklyn Dodgers in seven games.

"My teammates were great and so were the Bay area fans," Clark said.

The Bay area can now look forward to a confrontation between former Olympians Clark and Mark McGwire at first base.

Four teams stay unbeaten in IH football action

The third Sunday of men's interhall football was a day that could have had historical ramifications, as four teams remained undefeated, the first playoff spot was clinched, and a stunning performance was turned in by a marching band.

In Parseghian League action, powerhouse-in-the-making Grace triumphed in the battle of the towers, blanking Flanner behind a face-mashing, stingy defense. Quarterback Bob Allard turned in a storybook performance, as did cornerback Jim Boylan and linebacker Jeff Abbot. "Happy to be winning," Grace has managed to hold its opponents scoreless in their first three games, and at 3-0, shares the top spot in the Big Dorm division with the Off-Campus Crime, also 3-0.

Off-Campus shattered the Dillon Big Red (1-2) early, returning a first half punt for a 7-0 lead. However, Dillon tied the game before the half, and led 10-7 midway through the second half. Yet it was the Crime who stole the show, recovering a fumbled snap on the Dillon 30 and cashing it in for six more points, seriously dampening the Big Red's playoff hopes.

Meanwhile, in the Leahy League, Cavanaugh (3-0) continued its winning ways, clinching the first men's interhall playoff spot with a 7-0 victory over Alumni (1-1), in front of throngs of fans and a marching violin. On the second play from scrimmage, as "Conquest"
