Soviets call for meeting to discuss Middle East

MOSCOW (AP)—The Soviets on Tuesday proposed an international conference to discuss the Persian Gulf crisis, the Arab-Israeli dispute and the Lebanese civil war.

Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir reiterated his opposition to discussing the Palestinian issue at an international conference, but he welcomed the idea of a conference on the Persian Gulf.

A spokesman for President Mikhail Gorbachev declined to say how hard he will press the issue at the summit with President Bush on Sunday.

"The Soviet president intends to discuss ... ways of defusing the Persian Gulf crisis, and he believes that all efforts, including those of a mediator, are viewed positively in the Soviet Union," presidential spokesman Vitaly Ignatenko told a news conference.

Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze proposed the conference earlier in the day during a speech in Vladivostok, in the Soviet Far East. Shevardnadze said the summit in Helsinki, Finland, "will mark a major milestone on the road toward resolving the crisis in the Persian Gulf."

But he said that "after one more look at the situation, we still have come to the same conclusion" that an international conference on the Middle East is necessary. He stressed that in the meantime, efforts to bring about a settlement of the Persian Gulf situation under U.N. auspices should continue.

The Soviet Union voted for a

U.N. Security Council embargo against Iraq after its invasion of Kuwait on Aug. 2 and has given lukewarm support to U.S. Navy actions to enforce the sanctions.

This is a departure from the Kremlin's historic stance. In the past, it shipped arms to militant Arab states, including Iraq; was hostile to Israel; and supported the Palestine Liberation Organization.

Shevardnadze criticized the previous arms sales to Iraq, which ended after the invasion, and said the Soviet Union might re-examine its relations with Israel. But he also linked solution of the Persian Gulf crisis to the Palestinian issue, as well as to the civil war in Lebanon.

Iraqi President Saddam Hussein at one point proposed that a pullout of his troops from Kuwait be contingent upon an Israeli withdrawal from the occupied territories. The United States rejected the plan.

"At this point in time, there is a growing awareness ... that a complex of problems involving the Arab-Israeli conflict, the fate of the Palestinians and the tragedy in Lebanon awaits its resolution in the Middle East," Shevardnadze said in his speech, which was carried by the state news agency Tass.

"Presumably, Israel's agreement to its (a conference's) convocation could exert a positive influence on the overall situation in the Middle East and on efforts to defuse the crisis in the Persian Gulf," he said.

"For its part, the Soviet Union ... might take a fresh look at the issue of Soviet-Israeli relations," Shevardnadze added.

The Soviet Union and Israel have not had diplomatic relations since the 1967 Middle East War, although both countries have been moving closer in recent months.

In Jerusalem, Shamir said in response to the proposal: "On the subject of the Persian Gulf, yes."

He continued: "We have our position about an international conference around the solution of the Israeli-Arab conflict. We will not participate in such an international conference."

Israel has vehemently opposed Soviet ideas to hold an international conference to resolve the Arab-Israeli conflict.

Ignatenko, while declining to disclose what proposals Gorbachev might make at the summit, read a statement saying that: "The president of the U.S.S.R. attaches great importance to the forthcoming Helsinki meeting."

"Mikhail Gorbachev will use this meeting as a continuation of contacts to maintain the spirit of the Malta meeting, and the Washington meeting," he said referring to summits last December and June.

"It is going to be a working meeting to discuss a great host of international topics and bilateral relations," he said.

South Korean leader asks for tension relief

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — South Korea asked North Korean delegates Wednesday to agree to a proposal on easing tensions between the two enemies that includes recognizing the others' sovereignty, free travel and gradual arms reduction.

The South's eight-point proposal was based on its conviction that lesser agreements must precede talks on unification of the peninsula, divided in 1945. North Korea believes the two Koreas can only establish trust if they agree to the major issues of arms cuts and reunification.

The South's proposal came at the opening session of the first-ever premiers talks between North and South Korea, the highest level conference between the two rivals in 45 years.

"Should the authorities of both sides persist in confrontational and hostile attitudes, inter-Korean relations will never be improved," said South Korean Prime Minister Kang Yoon-hoon.

Kang, speaking first at the meeting, also proposed the two governments work jointly to locate family members separated by the Korean War. An estimated 10 million Koreans were separated from family members during the 1950-53 conflict.

Kang said multi-faceted exchanges and cooperation between the two sides should include free travel across the border during major holidays, economic and trade cooperation, reconnection of broken railroad, highway, mail and telephone service lines, and recognizing the others' existence.

He suggested the two sides jointly develop tourist resources and create a North-South tourist route in the beautiful eastern coast called the Diamond Mountains, a haven favored by all Koreans.

North and South Korea opened two days of formal prime ministers' talks Wednesday at 10 a.m. (9 p.m. EDT Tuesday) with the seven-member official delegations of both sides sitting across from one another at a table in main

INSIDE COLUMN

Attention SMC students: We want you!

I am starting my senior year at Saint Mary's. At the same time I am starting my first school year as Saint Mary's Editor for the fine paper you are presently reading. This is my big chance to beg all of the students, administrators, and faculty on my campus to give me HELP.

Corinne Pavlis

Saint Mary's Editor

A great many people believe that all of the people across the street at that other school with the great football team don't really care about Saint Mary's. In fact, it is that attitude that causes Saint Mary's women to not take full advantage of all that both schools have to offer.

There is a plethora of activities that incorporate both schools. Many of these activities encourage, if not depend on, Saint Mary's involvement. The Observer is a great example.

If you turn back to the front page of this paper, you will see that right under our name it clearly states that that you are reading the "independent newspaper serving Notre Dame and Saint Mary's."

In order to effectively serve both schools, Saint Mary's women must get involved. Too many of you enjoy sitting back and complaining that The Observer does not cover enough Saint Mary's stories. It certainly is not because the staff does not wish to include us. In fact, that couldn't be farther from the truth.

When I was chosen as Saint Mary's Editor, it was made very clear to me that the job required someone with an outgoing personality who could get more Saint Mary's involved as editors, writers, photographers, etc. I guess I just have not been outgoing enough.

So, it's no more mister nice guy. GET INVOLVED NOW! Your school needs you. Ask not what The Observer can do for you, but what you can do can do for The Observer.

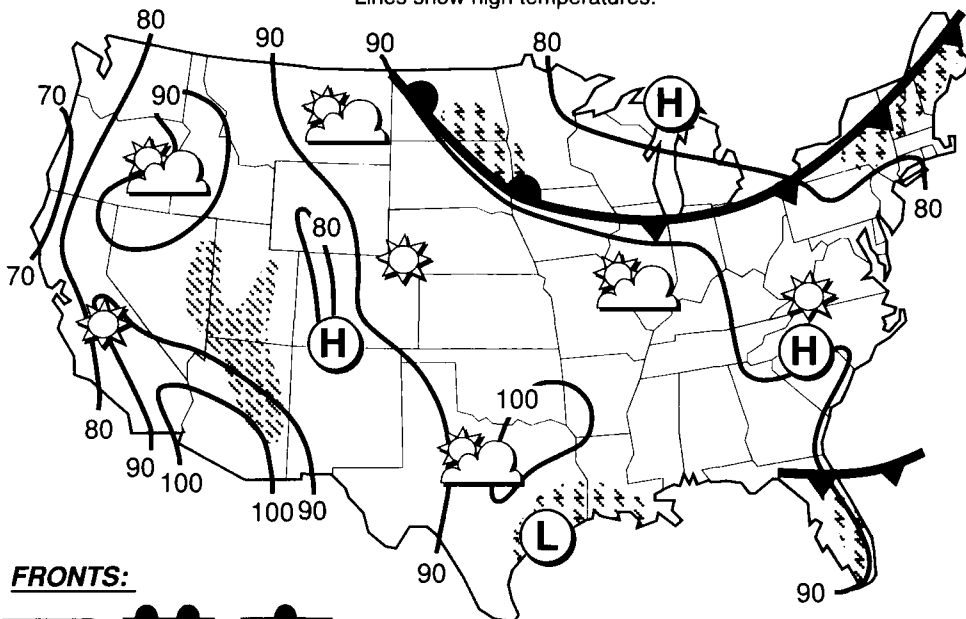

In all fairness, I must point out that this plea is aimed not only at the students of Saint Mary's, but also at the faculty and administration. Aside from the public relations department, few offices and organizations keep us informed of what is going on at Saint Mary's.

All of you department heads who attract respected lecturers from across the country could draw an even better crowd if the public relations department knew about the event a week or two in advance. Announcements made in class often only get the message out to students in a particular major.

Not only does the message not get to half of our campus, but practically no one across the street finds out about all of the incredible events sponsored by Saint Mary's. It is time that Saint Mary's and Notre Dame students start taking advantage of all that is offered on both campuses. It's time that Saint Mary's finally becomes a true member of the community.

Authorities on Tuesday uncovered a clandestine mass grave containing the remains of an estimated 1,700 bodies — mostly poor people but also some political foes of Brazil's former military dictatorship. The skeletons were packed in blue plastic bags and buried in an unmarked section of the hillside cemetery of Perus, a working-class suburb of Sao Paulo, the country's largest city.

The youngest son of Romania's former dictator, Nicolae Ceausescu, is being treated for cirrhosis of the liver as a court considers his role in dozens of deaths during the Dictator revolution that resulted in the downfall of his Dictator father. Nicu Ceausescu, who faces charges of "complicity in genocide," celebrated his 39th birthday Saturday with relatives coming to his bed at Fundeni Hospital. Police guarded his door.

Brian Watkins, an annual visitor to New York City from Provo, Utah, came back once too often. He was waiting in a midtown Manhattan station Sunday night when a group of youths robbed his father and punched his mother. Watkins fought back, and one of the youths stabbed him to death. Eight teenagers were arrested Monday and charged with murder and robbery, police said. Watkins' slaying was the 18th this year in the subway system, versus 20 in all of 1989.

Class clowns around the country are returning to school armed with a new tool for teacher torture: "Spit Wads," a high-tech version of the old-fashioned spitball. "You can't stand in the way of progress," inventor Ted Skup said, tongue in cheek. "It sounds simple, but try developing one," said Skup, who created the wads after a year's worth of sticky, slippery research. For $1.29 you get a quarter-ounce of a light blue non-toxic compound, enough for several traditional-size spitballs. The material is described as a polymeric improvement on the original spitball that won't stain when stuck.

Lecturer: Conflict between Iraq and Kuwait is not new

By JOHANNA KELLY
News writer

The Iraqi invasion of Kuwait is another part of a long and historic struggle in the Middle East, Father Patrick Gaffney said Tuesday.

Gaffney, an associate professor of anthropology at Notre Dame, spoke at a seminar titled "Iraq and the Gulf: Background of the Crisis," held at Notre Dame's Law School Tuesday. The seminar was the first of a series of lectures concerning the crisis in the Middle East.

Concentrating on the origin and structure of the Iraqi state and party system, Gaffney explored the beginnings of Iraq's claim on Kuwait.

Gaffney described Iraq as having a "checkered background." Iraq declared its independence from Britain in 1932 but did not actually secure its freedom until 1958. After ten years marked by chaos and disorganization, the Ba'ath party took power in 1968 and Iraq began to prosper.

In recent years, Iraq has employed enormous numbers of military personnel, government employees, and secret policemen. Gaffney also noted a distinct line between the rich and poor, the poor being a great majority.

Gaffney pointed out that imperialism is still very much alive in Iraq and stated that the nation is considered the "top of the iceberg of the Middle East," or a major power. Gaffney stressed, though, that Iraq is characterized by a lack of linguistic or ethnic unity, and has several distinct religious factions.

Kuwait, on the other hand, was described as a country plagued with troubles, yet reluctant to yield to Iraqi "help". As proof of this, Gaffney said that, after Iraq's invasion of Kuwait on September 2, Iraqi leader Saddam Hussein received no backing from the Kuwaiti people.

Gaffney continued to explain that the conflict between Iraq and Kuwait originated during British control in the Middle East. After the discovery of oil in Kuwait, the British created a port to purposely make Iraqi travel in Kuwait difficult, preventing an Iraqi invasion, he said.

"The British were the first underminers of the Iraqi invasion," said Gaffney.

According to Gaffney, Kuwait has always had "an illegitimacy in Iraq's eyes." Unknown to many, the majority of Iraq's citizens believe that Kuwait rightfully belongs to Iraq, thus explaining the recent invasion, he said.

Gaffney tends to doubt any further offensive moves will be made by Iraq. The invasion of Kuwait was not unanticipated by those of the Middle East and, furthermore, according to Gaffney, Hussein lacks popular support.

"He may have intended to invade Saudi Arabia, it is a possibility," said Gaffney.

Gaffney later added, "The long term prospects are very tricky."

Smoking banned in Sorin Hall

By MICHAEL OWEN
News Writer

Due to a referendum passed by the residents last year, smoking in Sorin Hall will now be completely prohibited, according to Father Steve Newton, rector of Sorin.

The results of last year's referendum showed "almost 80 percent of the dorm voting in favor of going smoke free," Newton said.

The referendum was added to last year's Sorin Hall Government election, along with other possibilities such as University dorms going co-ed.

According to Jim Joyce, president of Sorin Hall, some of the residents "did not think that it was exactly fair, since the referendum did not state that this policy would go into effect if enough people agreed with it."

As for the enforcement of the smoking ban in Sorin, Newton stated "there are signs everywhere in Sorin such as 'Thank you for not smoking' or the recognized 'no smoking' sign."

Newton said, "I don't hesitate to say 'I'm sorry, this is a smoke-free hall.'"

"The first real test of our policy will be on the first home football weekend when many parents and guests come to Sorin and may want to smoke," Newton said.

When asked about his dorm's smoking policy, Father Joseph Ross, rector of Morrissey Hall, stated "the basis of all of our rules is the common good." He added that smoking "has never been an issue" in Morrissey.

Newton said that he was very pleased with the decision to go smoke-free.

"Second-hand smoke is easy to tell and has been linked to cancer. It gets in the curtains and the rugs and stays forever. This (decision) makes my environment cleaner and since the other Holy Cross members and I stay here year round, it is our only home."

Joyce added that this move was a positive step for the residents of Sorin but that they "do not want to preach to everyone." The issue may be put to a re-vote at the end of this year, according to Joyce.

According to Evelyn Reinebold, director of Student Residences, the decision whether a dorm will be smoke-free or not is up to the hall itself.

Newton stated that incoming freshman did not have a vote in this issue but were informed of the new smoking status in their freshman information packets.

Amendment revision given to HPC

By FRANK RIVERA
News Writer

Student Body Vice-President Fred Tombar presented the Hall Presidents' Council with a proposed amendment revision submitted by President Rob Pasin to the Student Senate.

According to Tombar, the revised amendment will provide for the filling of any sudden vacancies in the offices of student body president or vice-president.

Tombar also announced preliminary plans for a Student Body Address to be given by Pasin and Tombar in the Center for Continuing Education at some point during the semester.

Roy Landry, Upper Crust Pizza Supply representative, announced plans to begin deliveries to interested dormitory food sales. Upper Crust, started by two students is a non-University affiliated organization.

Irish Insanity President Mark Mueller said this year's window spirit posters will be distributed to students on Saturday.

The HPC discussed several tentative dates for the the Quarter Mile to benefit the United Way. They agreed to hold it in front of the bookstore some time between the ND at Michigan State and ND vs. Miami football games.

The Best Buddies program also announced a meeting. It will be held Wednesday at 7pm in the Center for Social Concerns. The program is sponsored by the Kennedy Foundation and matches an ND student with a specially-needy child from the Logan Center in South Bend.

Other events discussed included an Aerobathon to be held Sep. 12, and the Lyons' Volleyball Tournament to be held Sep. 23.

In other business, funds applications for special events and hall allocations were distributed for the semester.

Some UF students enroll in gun safety

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP)—Most University of Florida students returned to their classes Tuesday after a week of mourning for five slain college students. But some have begun adding an off-campus gun course to their academic load.

Investigators revisited the scenes of the five killings with a new laser device to search for additional evidence.

As fearful and apprehensive students returned from the Labor Day weekend, police warned that the killer may still be in their midst.

"We do not have a timetable on an arrest, warrants or fruition of this case," said Lt. Spencer Mann, an Alachua County Sheriff's Office spokesman.

Larry Humes, a University of Florida spokesman, said although exact figures were not available "our feeling is the majority of the students are back."

Many are frightened, however. Since the killings, about 60 people have signed up for a gun-safety course offered by Beckwith Indoor Pistol Range. That compares to three or four students a week normally taking the $35 class.

"It's been crazy," instructor Joe Parker said Tuesday.

The three-hour course teaches how to shoot in self-defense.

"Safety is heavily stressed," Parker said. "We don't want them hurting themselves or another innocent person."

Firearms are not allowed on the University of Florida campus.

The university doesn't offer any martial-art self-defense classes but is considering them, said Martha Varnes, a spokeswoman with the University of Florida Police Department.

The bodies of University of Florida freshmen Sonja Larson, 18, and Christina Powell, 17, were found Aug. 26. The body of Santa Fe Community College student Christa Hoyt was found the next day, while the bodies of Tracey Paules, 23, and Manuel Taboada, 23, were found Aug. 28.

On Tuesday, investigators returned to the three murder sites with a laser device invented by a Hattiesburg, Miss., dentist, Dr. Michael West.

Lt. Sadie Darnell, a Gainesville police spokeswoman, said the laser may be able "to pick up information not apparent to the naked eye."

Darnell said investigators will take any help offered — even information from psychics and people who have reported dreams.

Of 20 binders full of initial investigative reports, 11 represent such information and do not require follow-ups, she said. Only four or five notebooks contain investigative leads of the highest priority.

Bush, Gorbachev to discuss Hussein, arms during summit

WASHINGTON (AP)—Next weekend's U.S.-Soviet summit will give Presidents Bush and Mikhail Gorbachev a chance to prod slow-moving conventional-arms talks as well as forge "an even stronger bond" of opposition to Iraq's Saddam Hussein, administration officials said Tuesday.

Bush also is considering adding a stop in Europe to brief NATO allies on his way back from Sunday's super-power summit in Helsinki, presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said.

Administration officials said planners were focusing on a Monday session in Brussels.

Originally, Bush planned to return directly to Washington from the capital of Finland. But Fitzwater said the president would like to be able to brief allied leaders on the summit if possible, just as he did after his meeting last December with Gorbachev at Malta. After that earlier summit, Bush stopped briefly in Brussels to brief NATO.

"There is some discussion about whether we need to make another stop," Fitzwater said. "Pack another pair of underwear," he added in an aside to reporters who cover the president.

Bush, on his first day back from an often-interrupted three-week vacation in Maine, met with his Cabinet and other top advisers to discuss the upcoming summit.

"A new foundation for world order is being built and the spadework begins in Helsinki," Fitzwater declared. "It is somewhat ironic that the prospect of war is forging a new blueprint for world peace. Both leaders will want to apply some new brushstrokes to this emerging picture."

Most public attention has focused on what the two leaders might say on the subject of Iraq's invasion and continuing occupation of Kuwait. But arms talks also were sure to be discussed.

Although negotiations on troop reductions are moving along well, officials who spoke on the condition of anonymity said there still are serious problems in negotiating reductions on cuts in aircraft and artillery.

Both countries hope to wind up the Conventional Forces in Europe (CFE) pact in time for November's planned 35-country Paris summit of all European nations plus the United States and Canada.

"The two presidents will not be negotiating details of this agreement," Fitzwater said. "But they will be attempting to add the impetus that will assure that that agreement is ready to sign and that the summit can be held."

The two leaders will also likely discuss progress on a treaty to reduce long-range nuclear weapons. But officials said those talks appear to be moving along smoothly, and less of a push is needed for them than for the conventional arms talks.

Soviet economic reforms will also be on the agenda, Fitzwater and other officials said. In particular, Bush is expected to bring up a study by the International Monetary Fund — commissioned at last July's economic summit of industrial democracies in Houston — of Soviet needs, the officials said.

Bush and Gorbachev will also discuss regional hotspots, including Cambodia and Afghanistan, officials said.

Still, officials stressed that the main purpose of the summit was to provide a highly visible show of superpower solidarity in bringing pressure to bear on Saddam to end his month-old occupation of Kuwait.

NASA on schedule in third space shuttle launch attempt

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) NASA enjoyed a calm, uneventful countdown Tuesday as the space agency moved closer to its third attempt to send Columbia on an astronomy mission and its first shuttle flight in months.

Columbia is scheduled to lift off at 1:20 a.m. Thursday with seven astronauts and the $150 million Astro observatory.

"Everybody's very comfortable. The firing room is very calm," said test director Al Sofge. "We're just proceeding down through the count, business as usual, doing what we do best, no problems."

NASA's first attempt to launch Columbia with Astro ended six hours before the scheduled May 30 liftoff when hydrogen leaked during fueling. The next countdown was halted Thursday after engineers lost contact with one of four telescopes inside Columbia's cargo bay.

The communications problem with the X-ray telescope was corrected Sunday, allowing NASA to begin counting down once again.

"We've had our share of problems. I figure it's time to have something go right for Astro," said project manager Bill Huddleston.

The latest delay required a slight juggling of Astro's observing schedule, said Arthur Davidsen, principal investigator of Johns Hopkins University's ultraviolet telescope.

Astronomers now will be able to observe Jupiter, which was too close to the sun as of last week, Davidsen said. But an important quasar — the brightest one, in fact — has moved too close to the sun and will not be visible to Astro until late fall.

"We don't want to delay that long," Davidsen said.

Scientists have been waiting for years for NASA to send up the observatory, which will study ultraviolet light and X-rays emitted from some of the hottest objects in the universe. About 150 objects will be observed during the nine- to 10-day flight, including a comet that is making its first recorded pass through the solar system.

Astro had been scheduled for a ride on Columbia in March 1986, but the Challenger disaster two months earlier put all missions on hold.

Astro's three ultraviolet telescopes will be operated round-the-clock by the four astronomers aboard Columbia. The X-ray telescope will be managed by computer commands sent from Goddard Space Flight Center in Greenbelt, Md.

It will be the first scientific mission in five years dedicated entirely to scientific research. Astro will remain in the cargo bay and be returned to Earth for possible use on a future mission.

Columbia will be the first shuttle to fly since the entire fleet was grounded by hydrogen leaks this summer.

A month after Columbia's leaks were discovered, Atlantis was found to have a similar problem and its July flight delayed. NASA has since replaced Columbia's hydrogen lines and rescheduled Atlantis' secret military mission for November.

"We're looking for a success," Huddleston said. "We have all expectations that we're going to have a success."

NASA last launched a shuttle in April. Discovery's crew successfully placed the Hubble Space Telescope in orbit, but the $1.5 billion telescope later was found to have a defective mirror that produces blurry images.

NASA is wasting no time getting its shuttle program back on track. Discovery was to be moved out to the other shuttle launch pad Tuesday night to await an October flight with the Ulysses satellite.

South African troops fire on black protestors; at least 40 dead in township battles

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP)- Troops Shot on Blacks. At Least 40 Dead in Latest Township Battles

Soldiers fired on thousands of angry blacks Tuesday and rival gangs fought with axes, knives and spears as at least 40 people were killed in township violence.

The violence came as President F.W. de Klerk and African National Congress leader Nelson Mandela visited black townships near Johannesburg to call for a halt in fighting that has killed more than 550 people since Aug. 12.

The government has imposed emergency restrictions and sent elite army units to the townships, but fighting between Zulu followers of the conservative Inkatha movement and other blacks loyal to the ANC raged for a fourth week.

In Sebokeng, a pre-dawn clash killed four people at a migrant workers' hostel, police said. The victims were believed to be township residents abducted by hostel dwellers.

About 5,000 township residents angered by the killings gathered at the hostel, police said.

When the mob refused to disperse, army troops were called in and a "shooting incident occurred," said police Col. Frans Malherbe. "The bodies of 11 persons were found after the mob dispersed."

South African newspaper photographer N. Khumalo told the South African Press Association that "people came toward (the soldiers) waving their hands, saying 'peace, we are not fighting.' Some of them even sat down."

The troops "took up position, cocked their guns — I thought maybe they wanted to scare the people," Khumalo was quoted as saying. "All of a sudden there was shooting. Many of the people ran. Some of the people fell."

The shooting marked the first time soldiers have been involved in a clash that has resulted in a loss of lives since they were deployed last month in the townships.

In March, police opened fire on black demonstrators in Sebokeng, killing at least five and wounding more than 150. A judicial inquiry criticized police for the killings, saying gunfire was unjustified.

Malherbe said both police and military were investigating Tuesday's shooting.

A later police report Tuesday put the Sebokeng death toll at 36, with the other killings occurring in sporadic clashes near the hostel and adjacent areas. Police said more than 150 people were arrested.

Black crowds also stoned journalists in Sebokeng and burned one reporter's car.

A soundman for WTN, a British television agency, was arrested in Vosloorus after being told to leave the area, WTN bureau chief Vincent Francis said.

Palestinian uprising in Israel hits 1,000th day

RAMALLAH, Occupied West Bank (AP)—When an army truck broke down recently in the middle of this West Bank town, Palestinian teen-agers sprang into action.

"They trashed it," said an Israeli army officer who witnessed the scene. "They broke every window, smashed every door and fender."

The incident was a reminder that the Palestinian revolt against Israeli occupation, though eclipsed by the gulf crisis, persists as an angry war of stones and empty bottles against well-armed Israeli troops.

The uprising, known in Arabic as the "intefadeh," marks its 1,000th day Wednesday. The PLO-backed underground leadership of the revolt called for the anniversary to be marked with protest marches under the banner "Intefadeh until a Palestinian state."

That goal remains illusive for the 1.7 million Palestinians in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip, and the character of the struggle is changing amid a more restrained Israeli military policy and the impact of Iraq's invasion of Kuwait.

Palestinian support for Iraqi leader Saddam Hussein has disappointed the United States and other Western nations that tried to mediate the Israeli-Palestinian conflict.

"There's no doubt that Israel is reaping political gains from the gulf crisis," said Ghassan Khatib, a Palestinian professor from this town just north of Jerusalem.

"There are fewer pressures on Israel from the United States to start a dialogue with the Palestinians," Khatib said. "There is no more talk about Israeli violations of human rights in the occupied territories."

Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir on Tuesday dismissed reporters' questions about the anniversary.

"It doesn't have any impact on the progress of the Jewish people and the Jewish state," Shamir said.

Since the revolt began in December 1987, a total of 728 Palestinians have been killed by Israeli soldiers or civilians. In addition, 255 Palestinians have been killed by fellow Arabs, most on suspicion of collaboration with Israel. Forty-seven Israelis have died.

In recent months, according to both Palestinians and Israeli army officials, there has been a marked slowdown in the uprising.

Under Defense Minister Moshe Arens, the army since June has reduced its forces in heavily populated areas and tightened firing rules, sharply reducing Palestinian casualties.

In the past three months, 11 Palestinians have died from Israeli army gunfire. In the same period last year, the toll was 77.

"It reflects more experience by the army in handling the situation," said an army spokesman, who cannot be identified by name under military rules. "Troops are positioned so there is less friction with the local population."

Meanwhile, the Palestinian side shows signs of fatigue from the almost weekly general strikes ordered by uprising leaders and forced closures by the army.

"Our business barely feeds our family," said Zaki Musleh, a 60-year-old carpenter with a shop on Ramallah's Palestine Street. "No one has any money."

Palestinians remain resilient despite the revolt's failure to achieve its main political goal of getting the Israelis out of the territories they seized in the 1967 Middle East war.

Most pro-aborts don't deny fetus is a life

Dear Editor:

I must agree with the main point of Rick Acker's recent editorial, "Abortion 'moderates' hold morally questionable position" (The Observer, Aug. 29), that those who hold a "moderate" opinion on abortion are in fact holding a more extreme position than those who claim that abortion kills an unborn human being, or those who claim that a fetus is not a human being.

However, I must question Acker's statement that he's "never heard any pro-choice advocate, no matter how radical, argue as the 'moderates' do, that abortion should be legal even if the fetus is a person." The statement may be literally true — with the exception of Kay Michaelman, the current president of NARAL (National Abortion Rights Action League), I have never heard another public figure make that claim. However, his statement implies much more than that. It implies that the pro-choicers claim exactly the opposite: that the unborn aren't human beings.

But wait a minute. Let's think about this. The last time you heard someone argue the pro-choice position, what did they talk about? Maybe they said that they're for women's rights. What a coincidence, I'm also for women's rights. As a matter of fact, I have a hard time thinking of anyone who is against them. And what else? They probably claimed that "one person shouldn't enforce their morals on another person." Boy, that sure sounds like something else I agree with. And I'll bet they mentioned the fact that "thousands" or even "tens of thousands" of mothers died from abortion each year when it was illegal. Now death, there's something I'm strongly against. No, I don't like death.

And, in the same way, the pro-choicer probably talked about "how poor the woman was" and "how much better off society is since we have abortion" or even "what if 'it' was mentally retarded." And when the pro-lifer claimed that abortion takes a human life, the pro-choicer didn't agree, but probably said something like, "Well, maybe it's a person to you, but there are others who disagree, and shouldn't there be room in society for differing opinions?..." But the one thing the pro-choicer never actually got around to mentioning was the unborn human being that the abortion is being performed upon.

How often does a pro-choicer actually claim that "it's not a human being?" How often do they acknowledge or deny any of the basic biological facts concerning unborn human life? How often do they sit down and rationally discuss why the unborn are or are not human? (Compare this to the crux of your average pro-life position.) It very rarely happens, if at all.

Instead, pro-abortion forces would rather talk about contraceptives, illegal abortion, religion or "what terrible people pro-lifers are" than actually talk about abortion. Perhaps this is because they know that if they actually stuck to the subject of abortion, their side wouldn't stand a chance.

In all my years in the right-to-life movement, I've never met one person who has advocated making contraceptives, such as condoms, illegal — despite what the pro-aborts may claim. However, the fact that many right-to-lifers don't want to use contraceptives themselves means that the pro-aborts will continue to try to make this the issue. The truth is that only 120 mothers died from illegal abortion in 1966, the last year the unborn were protected in all 50 states (Abortion Surveillance, Nov. 1980, U.S. Department of Health and Human Services). And just think of how many more lives we'd save if we legalized holding up convenience stores. No one needs to use religion to tell them that abortion kills another human being — basic science already does this just fine. Nevertheless, as long as most Catholics, Fundamentalists and Evangelicals come out against abortion, the pro-aborts will try to make religion the issue, despite the fact that most Protestant and Jewish denominations support abortion. The truth is that it is the pro-lifers who have opened their homes to unwed mothers, set up the free day care centers, sponsored groups for women with post-abortion syndrome, and volunteered at crisis pregnancy centers. Yet, many pro-aborts go right on claiming that "the pro-lifers only care about life before it's born." I guess I can understand where the rest of their arguments come from, but this one is a blatant smear on what is one of the most giving groups of people that I've ever met.

And what did the liberal majority of the Supreme Court have to say in Roe vs. Wade, the 1973 decision that legalized abortion on demand? They didn't say that the unborn weren't human beings. No, such a statement is too direct, too unscientific. Instead, they fudged and said that the unborn don't possess "meaningful human life." There it is, meaningful human life. Meaningful to whom? Meaningful to the Supreme Court? Meaningful to the life's parents? Meaningful to the one living the life in question?

If you really listen to those who actively promote abortion (as compared to those who simply favor it but don't espouse it), if you actually pin them down as to the question of whether or not the unborn are human beings, that is what you will hear in the vast majority of cases. To them, someone else's life does not possess value, therefore it is okay to kill. To them, if your life is judged to be without meaning, then you may be "eliminated" if it is convenient.

At the same time, there is no proof that they would accept, no logical scientific evidence that would get them to actually admit that the unborn are indeed human beings. Tell them about brainwaves, a heartbeat and the fact that human beings produce human offspring, and they scoff. Show them a picture of a eight, twelve or even 20 week old baby, and they will keep denying what has become bluntly obvious by this point, if it wasn't obvious enough to begin with. Mention the fact that 400 to 500 aborted babies are born alive each year (The Philadelphia Inquirer, August 2, 1981) and they call it "unfortunate, but unnecessary to preserve a women's right...."

Now ask yourself, if you were to try to convince a 19th century pro-slaver (who was certainly as pro-choice as today's pro-aborts, after all no one was making you own slaves if you didn't want to) that blacks were human, what proof do you think you could show him? What evidence would convince him?

As one pro-life leader put it, "claiming that the unborn aren't human beings is the scientific equivalent of claiming that the world is flat." The truth is that no matter how much they avoid the subject, the pro-aborts already know that every abortion kills a human being — they simply want to pass judgment on the value of someone else's life.

QUOTE OF THE DAY

'You can't measure time in days the way you can money in dollars because every day is different.'

Jorge Luis Borges

Rock artist Phil Keaggy visits Saint Mary's

Christian musician expresses emotions through varied uses of instrumentation

accent writer

Sometimes concerts can be very complicated - stages can be filled with props and special effects, and the presentation can overshadow the music. Phil Keaggy would like to present something very different from that in his show on September fourteenth at Saint Mary's O'Laughlin Auditorium. "My show is very stripped down and open-ended," Keaggy says. "I like to let the music and the emotion in it fill the room."

Keaggy has been performing for over twenty-five years. He first started out as a member of the group Glass Harp in the late sixties. He later quit the group, and in August of 1972 released his first Christian-rock album, What A Day.

Keaggy offers his listeners an interesting blend of music styles, ranging from acoustic guitar playing to classical sounds. He feels the secret to his success for all these years was his concentration on writing original music. "When you do it that way," he explains, "you're not immediately compared. They don't say, 'Oops, you're just not cutting it like the original.' I communicate with more confidence when I know it is my music, and people tend to receive it at face value."

In addition, Keaggy attempts to create a friendly and spontaneous atmosphere with his voice and array of guitars. "College students lead very structured lives most of the time, and because of that they appreciate the change my style has to offer," he reveals. "If I say something humorous, it's because I just thought to say it, not because it was planned."

If you have never heard of Keaggy, there may be a good reason why. Most of the country does not have Christian music stations, and the ones that do often share this Christian format with other types of music formats as well.

Keaggy's current album, Find Me in These Fields, has sold fifty-thousand copies almost entirely by word of mouth. "I appreciate the marketplace in which my music has been distributed, and I am grateful to the people who have bought my records and come to my concerts," he says, "but it's such a small segment of the real world. I'd like to see my music have a wider range of distribution." Keaggy thinks that this could be possible through his distributor Myrrh records and their affiliation with A&M records.

Keaggy describes his audience as people who enjoy instrumental, folk, and Beatle-influenced music. "I sing a lot of songs about love, forgiveness, family, and relationship with God," he says. Ultimately, Keaggy would just like to share his music with those around him. He explains, "When I put on a guitar it becomes an outward expression of what I feel inside. It's an honest transmission because there have been times when I didn't feel so good about myself or I didn't feel so joyful or positive, and that comes through in my playing. When I feel very up and at peace with myself and the circumstances around me, that comes through too."

Tickets for the show are $9.50 in advance and can be purchased at the O'Laughlin box office.

Christian-rock artist Phil Keaggy's original music writing as well as his use of various instrumental sounds has brought him a large, yet diverse group of followers. He can be seen in concert at Saint Mary's in O'Laughlin Auditorium on September 14.

Nitzer Ebb shines in opening for Depeche Mode

accent writer

Summer was the chance to catch all the best bands in the open air. Whatever tastes one may have, there were many concerts worth seeing. Although everyone might not agree, I feel that the Depeche Mode show was one of these.

This article will not sing the praises of this band, for many in the media have suddenly jumped on the Depeche Mode bandwagon and done this for me. This article will instead focus on the lesser known band, Nitzer Ebb, who opened for Depeche Mode and, in turn, provided a show with just as much intensity and power.

Actually, Nitzer Ebb almost missed this opportunity to open for Depeche Mode. When entering the United States, they were arrested for importation of illegal narcotics. If the group had not been allowed to enter the country, it was rumored that Erasure would have replaced Nitzer Ebb.

Fortunately this scenario never occurred, and Nitzer Ebb did indeed play to the hordes who, more than likely, came to see Depeche Mode's newest Top 40 singles. I was also more interested in seeing Depeche Mode perform their Violator tour, but what I saw before that part of the concert was all the more pleasurable in its unexpectedness.

The name of Nitzer Ebb's newest album is Showtime, and it follows exactly in the footsteps of their release of Belief, two years earlier. The sound is not exactly for everyone, as the expressions of some of Depeche Mode's teeny-bopper fans attested.

The heavily synthesized sound so characteristic of the "industrial" music from which Nitzer Ebb finds its roots is present throughout. This may seem monotonous upon first listening, but each song contains a certain style and distinctive sound deserving, as all albums, more than just one listening.

"Fun to Be Had" is one of the best cuts on the record. To be classified as a good industrial noise song, there is no need for an abundance of deep and meaningful lyrics (which this song does not have), nor is there a need for the singer to have an especially strong voice (which he does not). The main requirement is energy, and this is present throughout the entire album of Showtime.

At this point in time, many with a working knowledge of music may debate the value of music without deep lyrics or harmonious vocals.

Yes, most of the music is produced by machine, and yes, listening to the album probably was not that different from attending the concert, but music is what you make of it, and an opinion based on personal taste cannot necessarily be wrong. It is my opinion that Showtime is a "must hear" album.

WVFI Top 10 Albums

1. Sonic Youth - Goo
2. Breeders - Pod
3. David J - Songs From Another Season
4. Iggy Pop - Brick by Brick
5. Ultra Vivid Scene - Joy 1967-1990
6. Jesus Jones - Liquidizer
7. 24-7 Spyz - Gumbo Millennium
8. Concrete Blonde - Bloodletting
9. Devo - Smooth Noodle Maps
10. Gene Loves Jezebel - Kiss of Life

Nitzer Ebb's new album Showtime, is characterized by its intensity and power generated from the band's heavily synthesized tracks. The band's introduction of these new songs at the opening of the Depeche Mode concert proved their "industrial" style is a hit with listeners.

Tricoci hopes for major impact with ND soccer

First-year coach Berticelli anticipates big contribution from sophomore sweeper

By ROLANDO DE AGUIAR
Sports Writer

Upon first seeing Mario Tricoci, an image of a brash young star is conjured up in one's mind. The sophomore sweeper's mop of curly hair and aggressive style of play are reminiscent of athletes such as Mark Gastineau and Andre Agassi.

But unlike these individuals, the first-year starter on the Irish men's soccer team plays with one motive: to help his team win.

The sweeper's role on the soccer field is integral. He is the last line of defense before the goalkeeper, and it is his job to direct the defense.

Playing sweeper is a pressure-filled situation, but Tricoci thrives on it.

"I enjoy the pressure," Tricoci said. "If you're scared back there, there's only one guy behind you."

Despite a stellar prep career, during which he scored 75 goals, Tricoci played in only three games last season. However, this year, under first-year coach Mike Berticelli, Tricoci felt that he had a chance to start, and he made the best of it.

"I played well last year, but the system was confusing to most players," said Tricoci. "I worked real hard this summer and I knew I could start."

Tricoci was pushed into the forward spot during the 1989 campaign, despite the fact that he had played midfield and defense throughout his high school career. But this year, he is glad to be back on the defensive side of the ball.

"I control the tempo and set the defense. I can see the whole field, while the midfielders and forwards cannot," Tricoci said.

Co-captain Danny Stebbins has confidence in Tricoci's abilities.

"Mario can read the game really well," said Stebbins. "All he needs is a little confidence."

During training this summer, Mario's exceptional work ethic caught the eye of Berticelli, who was looking for athletes to fill his starting roster.

"I liked his work rate, intensity, and competitive spirit," Berticelli said. "We tried to get 11 competitive players, and (Tricoci) had an extremely good preseason."

Tricoci felt that last year's system stressed raw athleticism over skill. However, Berticelli's system puts equal importance on conditioning and skill, and a balance is created between the offense, midfield and defense.

"Last year, players needed to be aggressive runners; soccer skills weren't that important," said Tricoci, "but this year, everyone contributes."

Although he is a premier talent in his own right, Tricoci's goals center around the Irish team unit, and they are lofty indeed.

"I hope we can work toward a national ranking this year, and contend for the NCAA championship soon," said Tricoci. "We have the talent, and a world-class coach, to do it with."

Sabatini rallies to beat Soviet, will face Fernandez in semis

NEW YORK (AP) — Gabriela Sabatini danced along a tennis tightrope before knocking off a tiny Soviet slugger, and American teen Mary Joe Fernandez delivered on the promise she showed in her first U.S. Open at 14.

The shaky victories by No. 5 Sabatini and No. 8 Fernandez on Tuesday set up a semifinal match between them, and both will gladly take two days off first to recover from their jitters in getting there.

Sabatini, considered from the start of the Open a solid contender to take Steffi Graf's title, found herself in a 2 1/2 hour test of wills with unseeded Leila Meskhi before winning 7-6 (7-5), 6-4.

Sabatini, teetering on the edge of defeat in the first set, fought off a set point in the 10th game after the crowd rallied behind her, another in the 12th game when a lob by Meskhi landed an inch long, and came back from 2-5 down in the tie-breaker.

The athletic Argentine won the last five points of the tie-breaker as Meskhi's composure finally cracked. Meskhi had been winning points with deep, hard groundstrokes and an aggressive net game that belied her 5-foot-4 height and pixieish build.

But in the tie-breaker, she double-faulted for the first time at 5-4, then hit a forehand long, drilled an easy overhead into the net and lost the set on a weak backhand that Sabatini volleyed hard into the cement.

That set lasted one hour, 29 minutes — more than a half-hour longer than Graf took to beat Jennifer Capriati in two sets — but it served only as a prelude to an equally tense second set. A full moon shone brightly over the stadium, and the crowd of about 20,000 screamed and groaned with every exchange on seemingly endless rallies.

Sabatini, worried about early misses at the net, backed off and played into Meskhi's strength with topspin groundstrokes for most of the first set. But after realizing she could win points with low shots that Meskhi smacked into the net, Sabatini began to change her strategy.

Sabatini broke Meskhi twice to take a 4-2 lead in the second set. After the second break, at love, Meskhi looked glumly at the ground, as if already beaten, dispirited by bad calls and blown opportunities. Yet she rallied again, broke Sabatini back twice and was serving at 5-4 with a chance to tie the set.

Once more, though, Sabatini held on and broke Meskhi for the final time on a forehand long by Meskhi, ending the longest straight-set women's match of the tournament.

Fernandez came back from a bout of second-set wildness and took target practice at the corners and lines to reach her second Grand Slam semifinals this year.

Fernandez's 6-2, 2-6, 6-1 victory over Manuela Maleeva-Fragniere, the fourth-round conqueror of Martina Navratilova, confirmed that the 19-year-old Floridian's trip to the Australian final last January was no fluke.

This was a poised and mature Fernandez, able to shake off a sloppy second set and stick to her strategy of coming in behind deep shots down the lines. She showed a developing net attack honed in doubles matches and confidently approached the net 35 times to Maleeva-Fragniere's 18.

She attacked Maleeva-Fragniere from the start, breaking her after two deuces, then raced to a 4-0 lead by taking control both at the baseline and at the net.

"I got on top of her pretty fast in the first set," Fernandez

Fernandez, the youngest player to win a match here two weeks after she turned 14 in 1985, is still a tall, skinny teen with a long pigtail draping halfway down her back. But she's grown stronger, especially in the past year, and seems to be just on the brink of reaching her potential.

said. "I knew I had to be aggressive. I knew I had to keep the pressure on her to be on the defensive all the time."

Stewart downs Clemensas A's beat Red Sox 6-2

BOSTON (AP) — Oakland's Dave Stewart outdueled Boston's Roger Clemens for the sixth consecutive time since 1986 Tuesday night as the Athletics capitalized on walks and errors for a 6-2 win over the Red Sox.

Stewart (18-10) allowed six hits in eight innings, while Clemens (20-6) had an eight-game winning streak ended as he failed to get through the sixth.

Clemens, who still leads the AL with a 1.98 earned run average, gave up four runs, two unearned, in his shortest outing since June 18, when he lasted less than two innings against Baltimore.

The two-time Cy Young

Award winner struck out six, going over the 200-mark for a club record fifth time, but he walked six and committed two costly throwing errors.

White Sox 6, KC 3

CHICAGO (AP) — Jack McDowell won his sixth straight decision and record-breaking reliever Bobby Thigpen notched his 48th save as the Chicago White Sox beat the Kansas City Royals 6-3 Tuesday night.

Dan Pasqua had two hits and three RBI and Lance Johnson had two hits and scored three runs to key the Chicago offense as the White Sox remained 6 1/2 games behind the AL West-leading Oakland Athletics, who beat Boston 6-2.

McDowell (12-6) gave up six hits, struck out two and walked four in 7 2-3 innings. McDowell's last loss was a 9-5 decision in Boston on August 1. He is 6-0 in nine starts at home since California beat him 4-1 on June 18.

Thigpen, who broke Dave Righetti's major league save record with his 47th Monday, pitched the last 1 1-3 innings after McDowell gave up a two-run double to Danny Tartabull in the eighth.

Cardinals 1, Mets 0

ST. LOUIS — Joe Magrane, with help from two relievers, beat New York for the third time in less than six weeks as St. Louis ended the Mets' seven-game winning streak.

Magrane, Omar Olivares and Lee Smith combined on a five-hitter and Terry Pendleton's hit-and-run double in the fourth inning, only his second RBI since Aug. 8, scored Ozzie Smith from first with the only run.

Sid Fernandez (9-11) held St. Louis to three hits in seven innings but two of them came in the fourth. Smith singled with one out for the Cardinals' first hit. He was off and running and scored standing up when Pendleton ripped a grounder inside third base down the left-field line.

Braves 7, Reds 4

ATLANTA — Home runs by Ron Gant and Dave Justice on consecutive pitches in the fourth inning brought Atlanta from behind and Justice added another solo homer in the eighth. Tom Glavine (7-11) scattered six hits over eight innings in snapping a five-game losing streak dating back to July 17 and extending Atlanta's winning streak to five.

Cubs 3, Expos 1

MONTREAL — Ryne Sandberg hit his 32nd homer, a tie-breaking two-run shot in the ninth inning. Martinez (10-10) had a one-hitter until Dwight Smith's sixth home run in the eighth inning tied the score.

Gary Varsho, hitting for Cubs starter Mike Bielecki, opened the ninth with a checked-swing single in front of the mound that Martinez threw past first for an error.

passes for an average of 33.3 yards and two touchdowns.

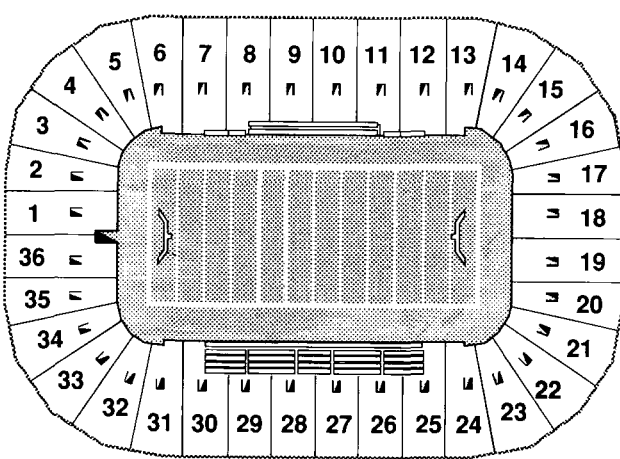

Arizona State's Nathan LaDuke finished right behind Lyght in the 1989 Thorpe balloting, proving wrong those who thought the 5-10, 195-pounder was neither big enough nor fast enough to play college football. With 238 career tackles, LaDuke also had six interceptions last year, including three off Houston's Heisman Trophy winner Andre Ware.

Rounding out the field are David Key, Bruce Pickens and Jesse Campbell. Key, who joins Welborne in Michigan's lethal backfield, was nicknamed "Predator" last year and says he gets sick just watching the offensive players walk on the field. His distaste for those on the other side of the line helped him garner 51 tackles last season and earn a reputation as a hard knocker.

Pickens, a senior cornerback from Nebraska, is considered a superb coverage specialist, while North Carolina State's Campbell is hoping to improve from a disappointing 1989 season.

tangible signs of the fabled spirit of Fighting Irish football. You hear about Rockne. The Gipper. The Four Horsemen. Touchdown Jesus. The only one of these to appear in Notre Dame Stadium was Rockne, and that was only for one season, the stadium's first. But what about the students, who have made the House That Rockne Built the hallowed box of animated spirit that it always has been?

On Monday morning at 2:30 a.m., we went out to the line of attrition to ask the real sustainers of the Notre Dame mystique why they so willingly sacrifice sleep and comfort to wait for tickets that they were assured of getting later.

"It's something to tell your grandkids about," said Wong, huddled under a blanket, playing poker (for poker chips, of course). "You're only at Notre Dame once, and this is what Notre Dame is all about."

Squirrel, who was teaching his friends an alternate way to play poker in a game called Night Baseball, was a little less analytical.

"It's fun," said Squirrel, simply. "Unless security comes by."

Security. The one snag in an otherwise wonderful tradition. Although ticket lines are less rowdy these days than they were a decade ago, the existence of coolers, furniture and trash makes the security department uneasy.

"It's a very unsafe and irresponsible practice," said Rex Rakow, Director of Security at Notre Dame. "The students don't get any better seats by camping out anyway. And then people don't usually sit in their seats. It (the lines) seems an unnecessary burden for a lot of different people that doesn't need to happen. But it's sure not my call."

Though it may have seemed as though those grim security guards were pestering students over petty offenses, they simply were doing their jobs. The fact is that they were trying to maintain order without dispersing the whole party. In other words, if they had turned their heads at the activities, they could have lost their jobs.

But at 3 a.m., the students didn't see things that way.

"Put in there how the security guards are being —," said a few students. "Make sure you mention that."

Security aside, the positive sentiments flowed from students excited to be there Sunday night. Ticket buyers sang songs, played cards, threw Frisbees, socialized and even (gasp!) did homework.

Pat McQuillan offered the most truthful explanation for sitting out all night away from his dorm in Dillon: "to put off doing homework."

And another student, who didn't want the wrath of tall bodies coming down on him, had another explanation.

"I'm waiting out for football tickets because we don't have a basketball team."

The atmosphere in overnight ticket lines is always one to remember. One person could be sleeping, the next person reading, and the next yelling something to someone further up the line. As the hours passed, the activity waned, and at 7:30 a.m. the bleary-eyed students watched Lou Holtz walk to the front of the line and give out jelly doughnuts.

But one could find Squirrel throughout the night sitting in front, hardly moving his arm to take the poker chips he won in the last hand.

Suba calmly leads soccer

By JENNIFER MARTEN
Sports Writer

The women's soccer team started off its season on Sunday with a 5-1 win over Northeast Missouri State, thanks in part to senior co-captain Mimi Suba, who contributed her first assist of the year.

The victory, as well as Suba's effort against the team ranked second in Division II, were not surprising. The St. Louis native was the leading playmaker on the team last year with 10 assists and earns nothing but praise from first-year coach Chris Petricelli.

"Mimi is a talented striker off the ball who can score, but she's also a very smart tactical player," Petricelli said.

Suba's three year varsity career at Notre Dame has been a very productive one. She has scored seven times, including the first varsity goal for the women's soccer program. In addition, Suba has 18 assists, including two in a come from behind win against St. Mary's her sophomore year.

But, as Petricelli points out, her primary importance to the team stems not from her numbers, but from her attitude.

"Mimi has a calming effect on the team. She's a very level-headed player who is a team leader on and off the field," commented Petricelli.

Freshman Christy Lewis agreed.

"Mimi's an authority figure, but she isn't domineering," said Lewis. "Also, she made it a point to make all the freshmen, including myself, feel welcome."

Unfortunately for Suba and the team, the senior strained a hip flexor in the second half of Sunday's game and will be out temporarily. She will most likely miss Saturday's game against Duke, as well as Sunday's game against Greensboro.

But once she is back, expect to see Suba leading the women's soccer team to a Division I ranking.

Majkowski finally signs contract

GREEN BAY, Wis. (AP) — Don Majkowski, the Green Bay Packers' All-Pro quarterback, agreed Tuesday to end a 45-day holdout and sign a one-year contract that will pay him at least $1.5 million, his agent said.

Agent Randy Vataha said the contract agreement, which with incentives could pay Majkowski as much as $2 million, was reached during a meeting with Packers vice president Tom Braatz in Detroit.

Vataha said the two sides reviewed contracts of other NFL quarterbacks as part of their discussions. He said Majkowski would sign the contract Wednesday.

"Don's thrilled to be back," Vataha said. "We think it's a fair deal given the circumstances. Don is anxious to show what he can do."

Majkowski arrived at Green Bay's airport about 9 p.m. Tuesday, saying there were no hard feelings about the contract dispute.

"It was unfortunate it took so long. That's the business part of it," he said. "Once everything is done, both sides are glad it's over. I understand they had to say things as they are negotiating, and we had to say things. You've got to get over it."

Asked how the settlement was reached, he said, "Green Bay started talking a little more, and that's all they needed to do."

Infante said Tuesday he was pleased Majkowski would return to the team and the distraction of the holdout would end, but Dilweg would remain the starter for the opener.

receiver, so you can have a chance to make key plays and help the team."

Notre Dame's receiving corps has suffered a bit this fall because of injuries to sophomores William Pollard and Ray Griggs, who have missed a lot of practice since the beginning of two-a-days in August. Because of these injuries, the Irish are going to lean on Smith even more, but he doesn't seem to mind.

"I'd love to see Will and Ray get healthy, but right now I think I'm the one who can do the job," Smith says.

Those who still doubt that an Irish passing attack will be effective say that the inexperience of the receivers will force Notre Dame to rely too much on its running game. Yet Holtz claims the critics' perception of his players as untested is unwarranted.

"I'd say unproven is a better word than untested. We haven't thrown the ball much (in the past), so you could say that we have yet to prove ourselves," Holtz says.

With Tony Smith leading the way, the Irish could prove themselves as soon as the season opens September 15 against Michigan at Notre Dame Stadium.

Smith

so his speed certainly is not a problem, and although Holtz says Smith's hands are a weak point, he hasn't dropped too many passes this fall.

"I think that in all the offense versus defense scrimmaging we've done this fall I've dropped maybe three balls at the most. I've been working a lot on my hands, and I'm pretty confident when the ball is thrown to me," Smith says.

Confidence at the split end position is going to be crucial for the Irish this year as they unveil an attack which will better utilize the passing skills of sophomore quarterback Rick Mirer. Holtz says he welcomes the increased emphasis on the passing attack which will give the Irish receivers a more prominent role in the offense.

"This puts us in a position where we will have an opportunity to win more games," Holtz says. "That's why you play wide

At Notre Dame, among the 10,000 students and the faculty and staff and religious, there are likely one thousand gay, lesbian, and bisexual people

Gay people are everywhere, in all walks of life. Sociological studies show that about ten percent of the population is gay. It doesn't matter if someone is Catholic, Protestant, or Jewish; whether they are Black, Asian, Hispanic, or white; rich or poor; or from any culture or place - about one person in ten is gay, lesbian, or bisexual. Even here at Notre Dame, last semester's Student Government Survey showed that nearly ten percent of students here have engaged in same-sex sexual activity.

But gay people are a hidden minority, and our invisibility makes us easy targets for discrimination and oppression. And this atmosphere of hatred and intolerance makes it very difficult for gay people to live openly and freely.

We are dedicated to providing support and affirmation to gay, lesbian, and bisexual people and educating the Notre Dame community about homosexuality. If you're interested in helping us achieve these goals, please write or call us for more information.

Smith ready to contribute at Irish receiver spot

By KEN TYSIAC
Associate Sports Editor

A young, inexperienced Notre Dame receiving corps is looking for an upperclassman to take the lead in the new, diversified attack which will feature a more prominent passing game.

Junior split end Tony Smith just might be the man the Irish are looking for.

"On our team, at every position, the upperclassmen take over the leadership," Smith says. "Rocket (flanker Raghib Ismail) and I are the only upperclassmen at this position that have played consistently, so it's up to us to do the job."

Smith's leadership has not gone unnoticed.

"Tony's practice habits have improved 100 percent since this spring," says Skip Holtz, who coaches the receivers for the Irish. "He is in a position now to become a leader of this group."

Smith's performance this fall has been a pleasant surprise for the Irish after what Holtz said was a lackluster spring. The 6-2, 181-pound native of Gary, Ind. explains that his shortcomings in the spring were the result of a lack of motivation.

"In the spring, there is no

game to look forward to. You know you aren't going to play for months, but now it's time to show everybody what I can do and not hold anything back," Smith says.

Now Smith finds himself the frontrunner in the race for a starting split end position. Freshman Lake Dawson has also had an excellent fall, but he has yet to play a college game. The more experienced Smith, on the other hand, can boast of a resume which includes a crucial 27-yard reception in the 1990 Orange Bowl against Colorado which helped set up Notre Dame's first score.

Still, Holtz says Smith will have to play well to hold on to the starting spot.

"Tony has been working with the first group this fall, but Lake Dawson has had a great fall as well, and he is going to push Tony," Holtz says. "Tony will have to continue to fight for the position, and that's good, because competition is the best thing a coach can have at any position."

Smith does not worry too much about where he stands on the depth chart, though. He has all the necessary tools to be a good receiver. As a high school track star he ran the 110-meter high hurdles in 14.35 seconds,

Notre Dame All-American Todd Lyght leads this year's candidates for the Jim Thorpe Award, given annually to the nation's top collegiate defensive back.

New Michigan coach plans for ND

BY GREG GUFFEY
Sports Editor

New Michigan coach Gary Moeller could probably pick a better way to open his collegiate career than against second-ranked Notre Dame in the first game of the season for both teams.

"I'd like to have one game under our belts but that won't happen," Moeller said during Tuesday's Big Ten teleconference. "I would rather open with someone other than Notre Dame to let some of our younger kids get their feet on the ground."

The Irish and Wolverines will meet at 8 p.m. Sept. 15 in Notre Dame Stadium. The Irish have won the past three meetings against the Wolverines.

Moeller, a Michigan assistant from 1969-76 and again from 1980-89, succeeded the legendary Bo Schembechler, who retired last year after compiling a career mark of 234-65-8. Moeller was the head coach at Illinois from 1977-79 and had a 6-24-3 mark before returning to Michigan.

The Wolverines will finish

two-a-day practices today and classes begin Thursday.

"We've got a long way to go to be a good football team," Moeller said. "The key to us getting a good start is to get our young kids playing well."

Elvis Grbac, who finished the 1989 Notre Dame game after Michael Taylor was injured, will be the quarterback. He completed 73 of 116 passes last season for 824 yards and 8 touchdowns.

The strength of the Wolverine offense should be the line, where five veterans return. Veterans returning include center Steve Everitt, guards Matt Elliott and Dave Dingman, and tackles Greg Skrepenak and Tom Dohring.

"We should have a solid, veteran offensive line," Moeller said.

That line might be one of the keys if Michigan is to win its third consecutive Big Ten championship.

Former Notre Dame defensive coordinator and new Wisconsin head coach Barry Alvarez will open his collegiate career Saturday when the Badgers host California. Alvarez expects more than 60,000 fans in Camp Randall Stadium for the opener.

"I'm very anxious to get on the field in front of the crowd and get it rolling," Alvarez said. "One of the goals of this staff was to bring respect to this program."

The Badgers were 2-9 last season, including 1-7 in the Big Ten, but they have 16 starters returning. Another advantage for Alvarez is that seven of the 11 games will be played at home.

Alvarez has invited Notre Dame coach Lou Holtz to the opener, but Holtz is unsure if he will attend. Holtz did say that his former mentor, legendary Ohio State coach Woody Hayes, came to his opener at William and Mary in 1969.

A 1949 dark blue Chevrolet Coupe owned by Holtz sold for $7,000 in a classic car auction in Auburn, Ind., over the Labor Day weekend.

The car was purchased by Burl Keener, a Fort Wayne businessman.

Lyght leads Thorpe hopefuls

Notre Dame defensive back considered best in nation

By CHRIS COONEY
Assistant Sports Editor

Notre Dame doesn't open its 1990 football season for another week and a half, but already senior cornerback Todd Lyght is being touted by sportswriters and coaches around the country as the top candidate for this year's Jim Thorpe Award, given annually to the best defensive back in the nation.

One of three finalists for the title last year, Lyght joins a number of powerful hitters that are inspiring fear in wide receivers everywhere, preventing touchdowns by treating the backfield like their own personal property.

Cornerbacks and safeties everywhere are tougher than ever this year and should give Lyght a little competition for the award, presented since 1986 by the Jim Thorpe Athletic Club in Oklahoma City and named for former Carlisle standout Jim Thorpe, a native Oklahoma Indian.

The All-American Lyght, named by many as the best player in college football and a definite first-round draft pick next spring, will anchor an otherwise inexperienced Irish defensive backfield. His eight interceptions in 1989 are especially impressive considering that quarterbacks usually avoided throwing anywhere near Lyght's territory. In Notre Dame's game versus Stanford, the Cardinals threw 68 passes against the Irish, but only two to Lyght's side of the field.

A starter since his freshman year, the 6-1, 184-pound senior combines speed (he runs the 40 in 4.40) and aggressive tackling to lead the Irish defense. Lyght played more minutes last season than any other defensive player and will be relied upon to protect the Irish endzone.

The Irish will test Lyght's No. 1 opponent early in the year when they face Michigan's Tripp Welborne. Leading what might be the nation's best secondary, the 6-0, 221-pound safety had 80 tackles and three interceptions last year, even though offensive coordinators usually stayed away from him in the same way they did Lyght.

Although Welborne arrived at Michigan hoping to play wide receiver, a hard-hitting freshman campaign that included more tackles (seven) than receptions (two) convinced coaches that he would make a better defensive back. Since then, the senior has relied on his speed (he also returned 32 punts for the Wolverines in 1989, for a 9.3 yard average) and tenacity to become a consensus All-American last season.

Pittsburgh's Louis Riddick is another top candidate. The 6-3 senior will move from free to strong safety this year after tallying 63 tackles as a junior.

Although Riddick slimmed down in the off-season from 220 to 212 pounds, the Academic All-American can bench press close to 400 pounds and is known for his exemplary work ethic.

Another safety, Ken Swilling of Georgia Tech, has been called a new breed of defensive back. While the junior's 6-3, 238-pound frame seems more suited to play linebacker, Swilling enjoys using his size and 4.5 speed to intimidate even the bravest of receivers.

As a sophomore, Swillings ranked third on the team in tackles and intercepted six

Fans show spirit by sitting out for tickets

His name is Bob Wincer, but his friends know him as Squirrel, or Brown-Eyed Squirrel. He got his nickname when he imitated a certain campus rodent by sitting in a tree, almost stoically, for a long period of time at a Dillon Pep-Rally.

As it turns out, Squirrel is quite good at sitting out for a long period of time and hardly moving. He spends a good deal of time in his room, sitting on the floor and doing his homework while watching "Wonder Years" or some such show on television. He could spend hours there. If he didn't need to eat, he could spend days.

Squirrel used this talent for stoicism when he and friend Greg Wong arrived in front of Gate 10 of the JACC last Friday morning at 10 a.m. to wait for football tickets to go on sale. We're not talking about camping out for one night. Try three nights.

"Last year it was wild," said Squirrel Sunday night, "but this year it seemed to mellow out a bit."

As it turns out, Squirrel and Wong have camped out for football tickets every year at Notre Dame, and in their final year as students they wanted to make sure they were first in line.

And those lines, which numbered more than 200 persons in the wee hours of Monday morning, are one of the most
