ND students to attend conference on environment

By DAVID KINNEY
News Writer

Members of Notre Dame's Environmental Action Club (EAC) plan to participate in a national conference which hopes to develop better student awareness of environmental issues.

CATALYST, the National Student Environmental Conference, will be held on October 5-7 at the University of Illinois in Champaign-Urbana. Its aim is to bring together thousands of students from around the world to organize the future of the student movement.

The objective of the conference is not only to educate, but also to diversify the student effort. According to a press release, it will equip students with effective tactics for action and help participants create change at the campus level.

"Students are key to these environmental movements," said Helen Denham, CATALYST committee member. "A gathering of 3000 students will have a dramatic influence on both students...and decision makers." It will also allow students to shrug off the image of apathy and aimlessness with which they are often associated, she added.

The two-day conference will feature many student-led workshops on organizing environmental groups and action. Also to be featured are several speakers, including Ralph Nader, environmental advocate; Helen Caldicott of Physicians For Social Responsibility; Robert Redford, actor; Cesar Chavez, President of the United Farm Workers; and several others. Billy Bragg and other bands will perform during the conference.

In addition, the Student Environmental Action Coalition (SEAC), sponsor of the event, will launch a campaign to establish corporate environmental accountability. The group plans to use job boycotts, divestment campaigns, and direct action to affect corporate behavior.

The conference also plans to address the issue of maintaining the environmental accountability of the university as a corporation. Students should have a say in what is done with the money that they invest in their institutions, according to Denham.

Direct action is vital after the conference; groups are encouraged to participate in letter writing campaigns, to boycott jobs of companies who are not environmentally sound, and to support Congressional bills that help the environment.

Government report calls for better ways of avoiding teen pregnancy

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal government spent more than $21.5 billion last year on welfare programs for families started by teen-agers, according to a report released Sunday.

The amount is $1.7 billion higher than for 1988 — partly because of inflation and expansion of Medicaid benefits, but also due to an increase in births to teen-agers, said the Center for Population Options report.

The figures illustrate the need for greater efforts to prevent teen-age pregnancies — including sex education, family planning counseling, support for delaying sexual activity, access to contraception, and medical services, including abortion, the report said.

"We can no longer let our youth stumble into parenting, a course that should be embarked on only when one is ready, willing and able to become a parent," the report said.

The costs of teen-age pregnancies go far beyond those of public support, the report said.

"Too-early childbearing often impoverishes ... the lives of girls brought too soon into the rigors and responsibilities of motherhood, of boys bewildered and unable to parent and provide adequately, of babies not planned or welcomed," the report said.

"It places a heavy burden on families and communities and contributes to our country's unconscionably high rates of low birthweight and neonatal mortality," it said.

The most alarming increases in teen-age pregnancies are occurring among 15 to 17 year olds, the report said.

After a downward trend in births among this age group from 1970 into the mid 1980s, the rate began increasing. It jumped from 30.6 per 1,000 teen-agers in 1986 to 33.8 in 1988, according to the National Center for Health Statistics.

Iraq threatens oil fields and Israel

IRAQ (AP)—Iraq on Sunday threatened to destroy Middle East oil fields and attack Israel if other nations tried to force it from Kuwait.

At the same time, Iraq apparently sought to improve relations with France, admitting that its soldiers had raided the French ambassador's residence in Kuwait 10 days ago. It apologized for the incursion, which sparked a wave of retaliatory expulsions and increased tensions between Iraq and European nations.

Iraq also said it would not attend the U.N. General Assembly session which opens Monday because its delegation was not being allowed to travel to New York on Iraqi Airways. The airline has no landing rights because of the U.N. trade embargo.

Foreign women and children wrenched from their husbands and fathers flew home on the last U.S.-chartered flight from Baghdad.

In Washington, top finance officials from the world's wealthiest nations met for a second day, seeking to forge a united front against threats to the global economy stemming from the gulf crisis. They met with mixed success.

In warning other nations not to try to force it to give up Kuwait, Iraq said: "We will never allow anybody, whomever he may be, to strangle the people of Iraq without having himself strangled."

Gas prices soar to record high

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Gasoline prices have hit an all-time high in the wake of the Persian Gulf crisis, with the average pump price jumping 2.91 cents per gallon in two weeks, an industry analyst said Sunday.

"The new high doesn't take into account inflation, but even so, it's significant," said Trilby Lundberg, who publishes the Lundberg Letter.

She said her latest two-monthly survey of 18,500 gasoline stations nationwide showed motorists were paying an average of 138.35 cents per gallon. The survey was

ND to hold conference on church gatherings

By JESSICA

Invigoration of Catholic parish life will be the subject of discussion at a Notre Dame conference, titled "Toward a Small Christian Community Model of Church in U.S. parishes."

The conference, running from September 30 to October 3, will focus on existing parochial structures and the prospect of changing church gatherings to those where members pray, study scripture, and commit themselves to service together on a larger scale.

Such experimentation has been an emphasis of the RENEW program, according to Father Robert Pelton, host of the conference and director of Notre Dame's Institute for Pastoral and Social Ministry. RENEW is a twelve year-old, nationwide parish renewal project.

Pelton hopes that the meeting will accomplish a "consensus statement addressed to the Catholic bishops of the U.S. on the appropriate role of the small faith communities."

Notre Dame plans to host and facilitate a national consultation that will follow

Roadtripping: a learning experience?

On the road again, I just can't wait to get on the road again...

Ahh, what a wicked web we weave when we commence to roadtrippin.' The Irish went to East Lansing this weekend and won big—on the field and off. I, as an upstanding member of the University media, decided it was my job to file a report from an exotic place. As that was not possible, I settled for MSU. From this trip, I acquired a plethora, no—a myriad, no—make that a cornucopia of knowledge.

John O'Brien

First, my colleagues on this roadtrip provided me with the most useful knowledge. With this being the Year of Women and all, I decided to venture north with five—count 'em FIVE—young ladies. When they cancelled out, I was stuck with 5 ND chicks.

The old saying says, "When in Rome, do as Romans do." While none of these ladies were actually Roman, I decided to spend the roadtrip being just "one of the girls." Thus, before I left, I learned all the words to "I Am Woman" by Helen Reddy, bought some "coolers," and even got some of those Leprechaun face tattoos for the big game.

I spent Friday night in a room at the Knights Inn with all five of the women, or more accurately on the floor of a room at the Knights Inn while the other five hogged the prime sleeping space (If you're reading this, Mom, don't worry—they're all in the convent program here and it was totally—almost painfully—platonic.)

Let me tell the men out there that I've been to the other side and I now know that women are just like us. Yes guys, they snore, they have cottonmouth breath in the morning, and in what must be the God-given equalizer, they pass gas. I'm serious.

Second, I learned that streets in East Lansing, and probably Michigan in general, are really weird. In three days, we drove for about 13.6 hours on a street called "Saginaw." I have come to the conclusion that all streets in East Lansing are actually one street—"Saginaw."

For example, to get to Dooley's Bar from the Knights Inn, you take "Saginaw" north to "Saginaw," and follow that for two miles until you hit "Saginaw." Turn right and there you are—Dooley's-1034 S. Saginaw.

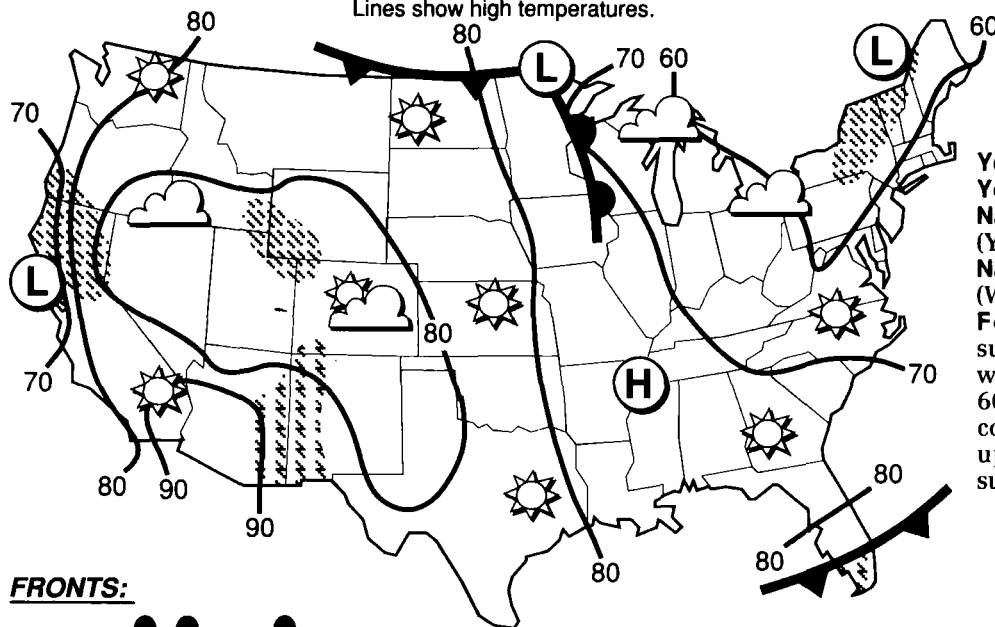

Next, I discovered that the only way to get around East Lansing is in an open convertible packed with five women. People who saw us cruising down "Saginaw" in the car probably thought I was a pimp, or at the very least, a stud. As anyone who knows me will attest, neither of these is true.

What is true, however, is that roadtripping can be both fun AND educational. If you have never gone on a roadtrip, do it before it's too late. You never know what you might learn. And if you're considering going to the Tennessee game, call me. I have relatives there. They live on "Saginaw."

Newlyweds Kenneth and Stephanie Miller did not have the marriage made in heaven that they had envisioned, but they were in good spirits after the hot-air balloon they exchanged their vows in crashed into a tree in Nevada last Saturday. The balloon, with six people aboard, was launched at Gardnerville, Nev., 15 miles east of Lake Tahoe. An unexpected easterly breeze caught it and sent it west. The balloon deflated after it struck a tree and landed in Kinsbury Grade. The basket fell slowly to the ground, and no one was hurt. The reverend who performed the service commented, "We do specialty weddings but we don't guarantee such exciting landings."

"The Cosby Show" drew more than twice the number of viewers than a repeat of Fox's cartoon clan, "The Simpsons," national Nielsen audience estimates showed Friday in New York. Bill Cosby's TV family averaged a 19.8 rating on Thursday night. Fox, which startled the industry by scheduling "The Simpsons" opposite Cosby's series, got only an 8.3 rating for its show. Part of Fox's lower rating is due to the fact that it only has 133 affiliates, compared to more than 200 each for NBC, CBS and ABC. Another new series premiering Thursday, CBS' "The Flash," was second to Cosby's show in head-on competition.

Witness describes Doe's grisly death

ABIDJAN, Ivory Coast (AP) — Grisly details emerged Sunday about the torture-slaying of former Liberian President Samuel Doe, who died earlier this month at the hands of rebels led by Prince Johnson.

In Liberia's capital of Monrovia, meanwhile, a cease-fire continued to hold between two rebel factions, a West African army and soldiers of the deposed leader.

In an account in London's Sunday Observer newspaper, a Lebanese merchant from Monrovia said he watched Johnson's men torture Doe after the president was captured during a battle Sept. 9 at the headquarters of the West African army.

"Doe's hands were cuffed together and he had been shot in both legs and was bleeding heavily. They were abusing him," said the merchant, identified only as Joseph.

"Then one of Johnson's men took a knife, a machete, and cut off his ear. Then they cut his face like this," he told the newspaper, indicating diagonal slashes across the cheeks. "He was crying and the blood was running down his cheeks from his face and head."

The man said Doe at one point blew on the blood that had pooled on his body, and "one of Johnson's men thought he was trying to do some kind of juju (magic), blowing on himself to make himself disappear."

"So he shot him again," the merchant continued. "He was nearly dead then, anyway, from loss of blood." The man said that was the last he saw of Doe.

The Observer also quoted a Liberian teacher, identified only as Oliver, as saying he saw Doe's body later in the day.

"They had him in a wheelbarrow and were pushing the body around the town. They were shouting, 'We've killed Doe,' and firing their guns in the air."

"People were coming up to the body and cutting it with knives. Slashing at him. He had two fingers, maybe three, missing from one hand and they had cut off his testicles," the teacher said.

"Then they took his body to the Island Clinic. For the first two or three days a lot of people were going to see it, but then the smell got too bad," Oliver said.

Both witnesses were interviewed in Freetown, Sierra Leone.

Their description was reminiscent of an October 1985 scene when Doe put the mutilated body of Brig. Gen. Thomas Quiwonkpa on display in an open car that toured Monrovia.

Quiwonkpa was a mentor of Johnson, who served under the former army commander when Quiwonkpa tried to overthrow Doe and was captured.

IU's trustees will study proposal to ban ROTC over program's homosexual policy

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (AP) — Indiana University trustees have agreed to study a request from students to ban the ROTC program if military policy toward homosexuals doesn't change.

The Bloomington student Senate approved such a resolution last week by a 16-3 vote.

The students are seeking a ban on the student military organization if the U.S. military doesn't begin allowing homosexuals into the service by 1995.

IU-Bloomington Student Association President Jerry Knight presented the request at the trustees' business meeting Saturday morning.

Trustee John Walda said the panel wants feedback about ROTC from student groups on other campuses. They also need information about the effect of such a ban on military science classes and student scholarships.

Trustee Robert McKinney noted that IU has about $2.5 million worth of Department of Defense grants in health areas "and we'd hate to lose those."

About 300 students are in ROTC on the Bloomington campus. Although gay students may take ROTC classes, they may not enlist as many students do after the first two years of classes, and are not eligible for ROTC scholarships.

"The oil areas in Saudi Arabia and in other states of the region, all the oil installations, will be rendered incapable ... and Israel will be transformed into something different from what they are now," said an Iraqi government statement broadcast by state-run Radio Baghdad and monitored in Nicosia, Cyprus.

"America must realize clearly that it is pushing the entire region ... in fact, even the whole world ... to the brink of a bottomless abyss, from which the region will never see light for dozens of years," said the statement, translated from Arabic by The Associated Press.

Iraq's decision to stay away from the General Assembly session was reported by the official Iraqi News Agency. It said Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz told U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar that Iraq's delegation would not come to New York unless restrictions on Iraqi Airways, its flag carrier, were lifted.

A State Department official said the matter was still under consideration.

In any event, Iraq was hardly likely to get a warm welcome at the United Nations. The Security Council was to meet Tuesday and consider tightening the trade embargo against Baghdad with an air blockade. Baghdad also was expected to come in for widespread condemnation in General Assembly debate.

Among the first scheduled to speak was French President Francois Mitterrand, who dispatched troops to the gulf after Iraqi soldiers violated French and other diplomatic compounds in Kuwait earlier this month.

The Iraqi Foreign Ministry Sunday apologized for the Sept. 14 raid. It said its soldiers had not realized they were entering the French ambassador's residence because the house was outside the diplomatic quarter of Kuwait City. Iraq previously had denied the raid took place.

The first units of a French rapid deployment force arrived in the gulf region Sunday, joining tens of thousands of U.S. troops deployed in the Saudi Arabian desert.

Secretary of State James Baker said that despite the huge deployment, the United States was still seeking non-military means of forcing Iraq out of Kuwait.

Baker, interviewed Sunday on NBC-TV's "Meet the Press," was asked about the possibility of war. "We have said many times we hoped there won't be," he replied, but added that President Bush was not ruling out any Meanwhile, a charter flight carrying 112 evacuees from Iraq and Kuwait left London for North Carolina on Sunday. The passengers had left Baghdad a day earlier aboard what the State Department said was the last U.S.-chartered airlift planned from Iraq.

At the London stopover, the exhausted evacuees told of hardship and terror in Kuwait and Iraq. Western women and children have been allowed to leave, but the Baghdad government has kept foreign men captive to serve as human shields at strategic sites.

conducted Friday.

The previous record high was just under 138 cents, set in March 1981, she said.

Motorists were spending an average of 135.44 cents a gallon for gasoline on Sept. 7, Lundberg said.

Fear of war in the Middle East in the wake of Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion of neighboring Kuwait and a subsequent military buildup have caused oil prices to fluctuate greatly in recent days, said Lundberg.

"The fears are that a war could create a serious supply upheaval and that supply replacement could be difficult," she said.

Those fears are causing the price of crude to go up and, in turn, pushing up gasoline prices, she said.

Analysts cited continued fear of war in the Middle East among reasons for the surge in crude oil prices during late futures trading on the New York Mercantile Exchange on Friday.

The price of crude oil for October delivery rose $1.53 a barrel, to $34.71.

ronmental issues through the conference, according to Amy Jenista, Chairperson of the Board of Directors of the EAC on campus. "We have a lot of energy in this club. This conference will help us to know what we can do and how we can get organized."

The ND club has been attempting to affect the environmental issue through both education and action. EAC sponsors speakers around the University and keeps students informed about some of the most pressing issues.

The group has attempted to designate some of the land owned by the University as wilderness areas, to support recycling, and to reduce the amount of paper waste on campus. The club is also pushing for an environmental audit of ND in order to determine problem areas.

The EAC hopes that the conference will lead to direct talks with the Administration about issues on which the club is working and an increased awareness of students on campus.

"I think everyone should be aware," said Jenista. "It (the environment) should be something that everyone should feel personally responsible to find out about."

She encourages all students to attend the conference. "Going to a conference like this will really shock a lot of people into understanding how pressing the issues are."

"I don't think it's a fad...the issues are real and they're not going away," Jenista added.

Anyone interested in attending the conference or joining the Environmental Action Club should contact Jenista.

Firing of Dallas police chief highlights city's racial woes

DALLAS (AP) — A black county commissioner's threat that a violent street war would erupt if the city hires a "good old boy" police chief exposed festering racial tensions that some say threaten to tear Dallas apart.

"The problem in Dallas is not the minority community and the Dallas Police Department," said Pettis Norman, a former Dallas Cowboys football star who is now a successful local businessman. "The problem is the institutionalized racism we have in Dallas."

As the talk turned last week to who would replace the ousted Mack Vines as police chief, minority activist and County Commissioner John Wiley Price issued a call to arms. He warned that Vines, a white whose policies were praised by minority leaders, had better not be replaced by a "good old boy" — a traditional Southern white.

If that happened, Price said, a violent street war would follow in which he and others would shoot at police and "take this whole city."

Although shocking, Price's words were only the latest of several indicators that all is far from well in this city of nearly 1 million residents, of which about a third are black.

•The southern suburbs are threatening to secede amid reports that more tax money is spent in affluent, mostly white North Dallas.

•In December, residents go to the polls to vote on a referendum that would eliminate at-large City Council districts, which a judge ruled dilute minority voting strength.

•Last month, a Dallas Times Herald survey of 1988 sentencing revealed killers and rapists whose victims were white received harsher punishment than those whose victims were black or Hispanic.

•A Dallas Morning News survey in 1988 reported that 44 percent of the city's black population and 44 percent of its white population agree race relations have deteriorated within the past five years.

"Change must take place now that lessens racial polarization and bridges the gaps between our people," a task force called Dallas Together concluded last year. The force was formed after a record number of police shootings of citizens, most of them black or Hispanic, in 1988.

Norman said the racism extends beyond the police department and includes churches that don't denounce racism and a business community that makes it hard for black business people to get loans.

Israelis debate Arab retaliation

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israeli Cabinet ministers recommended Sunday that Israelis be allowed to shoot more freely at Arab rock-throwers and retaliate forcefully for the death of a reservist stoned and burned in his car by Palestinians.

For the fourth day, the army clamped a curfew on the El Bureij refugee camp in the occupied Gaza Strip, where Capt. Amnon Pomeranz was slain Thursday.

Vengeful Jews stoned cars of Arab laborers leaving for work in Israel Sunday morning, forcing many to turn back, Israel radio said. A 47-year-old Gaza man was hospitalized with head wounds, Arab reports said.

"This is a murder that cannot be ignored or regarded as statistics," said the right-wing agriculture minister, Rafael Eitan.

"The punishment they deserve is ... that today, tonight, we need to go in there, grab 200 local youths and deport them to Lebanon," he said in an interview.

"No stone should be left standing around the gutted car; the residents should be prevented from going to work or traveling on the roads until they decide if they want war or not. If they do, they will get it," said Eitan, a former army chief of staff.

Health Minister Ehud Olmert said on Israel radio and television that any civilian or soldier surrounded by Palestinians "must feel he can use his gun and kill those who want to kill him, plain and simple."

The comments reflected the shock felt in Israel over the killing, which came at a time when many believed the 34-month-old Palestinian uprising in the occupied lands was waning.

The Palestine Liberation Organization on Sunday called for the escalation of the uprising in the West Bank and Gaza Strip to confront "a new Israeli plan to step up the use of fire and gas bombs."

Krushchev critical of Castro in memoirs

NEW YORK (AP) — Nikita Khrushchev, in memoirs dictated in the late 1960s but just now released, called Fidel Castro hotheaded for advocating a nuclear strike against the United States during the Cuban missile crisis.

Khrushchev, who was ousted from power in the Soviet Union in 1964 and who died in 1971, also thanked Julius and Ethel Rosenberg for helping the Soviet Union develop the atomic bomb.

Khrushchev made a series of tapes as he lived out his last seven years under virtual house arrest in the village of Petrovo-Dalneye, on the outskirts of Moscow. Many of the tapes were smuggled to the West and two volumes of memoirs, "Khrushchev Remembers" and "Khrushchev Remembers: The Last Testament" were published in the 1970s.

But Khrushchev's friends and relatives withheld some of the tapes, fearing that he had been too candid. Last year, Time magazine acquired the tapes. Excerpts were published in the Oct. 1 issue and another book, "Khrushchev Remembers: The Glasnost Tapes," is due out in October from Little, Brown.

In the memoirs, Khrushchev said Josef Stalin was grateful to the Rosenbergs, who were executed in 1953 after being convicted of conspiracy to commit espionage by spying on American atom bomb secrets for the Soviet Union.

Khrushchev said: "I was part of Stalin's circle when he mentioned the Rosenbergs with warmth. I cannot specifically say what kind of help they gave us, but I heard from both Stalin and (Vyacheslav) Molotov, then Minister of Foreign Affairs, that the Rosenbergs provided very significant help in accelerating the production of our atom bomb.

"Let this be a worthy tribute to the memory of those people. Let my words serve as an expression of gratitude to those who sacrificed their lives to a great cause of the Soviet state at a time when the U.S. was using its advantage over us to blackmail our state and undermine our proletarian cause," he added.

On the Cuban missile crisis, Khrushchev said the Soviets decided to place missiles in Cuba to deter the United States from an invasion.

Khrushchev said President Kennedy "understood that in spite of the American advantages, the missiles we had already installed could strike New York City, Washington and other centers."

Then, Khrushchev recalled, intelligence reports indicated that the United States was preparing to strike Cuba and that an invasion was unavoidable.

"Castro suggested that to prevent our nuclear missiles from being destroyed, we should launch a pre-emptive strike against the U.S.," he said. "My comrades in the leadership and I realized that our friend Fidel totally failed to understand our purpose. We had installed the missiles not for the purpose of attacking the U.S. but to keep the U.S. from attacking Cuba."

Khrushchev said Kennedy then sent a message "somewhere between threat and prayer; he both demanded and begged that we remove the missiles. We agreed to remove the rockets and warheads if the president would publicly give assurance, in his own name and that of his allies, that their armed forces would not invade Cuba."

Kennedy did. "Castro was hotheaded. He thought we were retreating — worse, capitulating. He did not understand that our action was necessary to prevent a military confrontation," Khrushchev said.

City officials unhappy with Census figures

WASHINGTON (AP) — From the great cities to the small towns, America's municipalities are telling the federal government they can't possibly be as small as census takers say.

By the thousands, local officials are demanding something be done about the 1990 Census. Even states are contesting the preliminary figures, aware that the more residents they are credited with, the more federal aid they will get and the greater their representation in Congress will be.

Some voices from the nationwide chorus:

• "Unadulterated nonsense ... statistical grand larceny," said New York Mayor David N. Dinkins.

• "There are errors everywhere," said Detroit research director Juliette Okotie-Eboh.

• "It really stretches credibility to the breaking point," said Hartford, Conn., Mayor Carrie Saxon Perry.

• "They missed our farthest south street," said Hays, Iowa, City Clerk Judy Grothe.

All were reacting to the preliminary results of the Census Bureau's April 15 head count.

The preliminary reports were sent out in late August and early this month to give officials a chance to file challenges in time for the bureau to double-check its numbers before announcing its final count Dec. 31.

Census Director Barbara Everitt Bryant has already told Congress there will be big changes in the initial numbers.

Irate New Jersey taxpayers protest governor's record-high tax hike

TRENTON, N.J. (AP) — Thousands of New Jersey taxpayers gathered at the Statehouse on Sunday to protest $2.8 billion in tax hikes.

Protesters focused their anger on Gov. Jim Florio — hanging his likeness in effigy, hawking $2 posters of Florio disguised as Adolf Hitler and singing anti-Florio songs.

The event was organized by Hands Across New Jersey, the group leading a statewide tax revolt.

"We need accountability in government and criminal prosecution for those who rip us off," said John Budzash, a Howell mailman and Hands Across New Jersey co-founder. "Do we have efficient spending in government? No."

State Police Sgt. Peter Hinkle said that the 4 1/2 hour rally peaked at about 4,000 people. Budzash disputed the police estimate, saying at least 10,000 attended the event. A similar rally in July drew about 6,000.

The $2.8 billion tax hike, the largest in state history, was passed by the Democrat-controlled Legislature less than seven months after Florio took office. The governor is a Democrat.

"Politicians will not budge until you make yourself heard," said Ken Chiampou, a talk show host on WKXW-FM, a Trenton-area radio station which publicized the anti-tax movement. "This is about getting politicians to respond to the people."

The $2.8 billion tax package is designed to close a budget gap of more than $1 billion, provide $1.1 billion in new state aid to public schools and ease some property taxes. The state's income tax will be increased for those in the top 17 percent of the tax bracket.

Florio also raised the state's sales tax from 6 percent to 7 percent. The sales tax also was expanded to include some previously exempt items such as alcohol, cigarettes, telephone bills, soap and disposable paper products.

Budzash said his group is seeking four goals: the repeal of the tax increases, the right to recall the governor and legislators, the right to use initiative and referendum to make laws, and a more efficient state government.

Florio declined an invitation to attend the rally, instead speaking to supporters at Trenton State College. Florio spokesman Jon Shure said the governor "remained convinced that what he did was right."

Washington Post defends reporter arrested while interviewing youths for curfew story

WASHINGTON (AP) — The managing editor of The Washington Post says a staff reporter broke no law when he was arrested for allegedly contributing to the delinquency of a minor while working on a story for the newspaper and called the police action "unwarranted."

"Based on the information we have, the arrest of a Washington Post reporter while he is reporting a story and breaking no law himself appears unwarranted to us," said Leonard Downie, Jr., Managing Editor of the Post.

"I'm particularly concerned that the police pursued this after the reporter identified himself and his purpose and that the police took his notes," Downie said.

Michael J. Ybarra, 23, a reporter with the Post's Metro staff was arrested late Friday while working on a report about a new curfew for minors in Quantico, Va.

Ybarra's supervisors said the reporter was not available for comment concerning the incident.

Ybarra was taken into custody and his notes confiscated while conducting an interview of two 12-year-old boys in a restaurant in the Virginia town about 30 miles south of the nation's capital.

The Quantico Town Council recently imposed a 10 p.m. to 6 a.m. curfew for youths under age 18 following recent vandalism in the area.

Ybarra is the second adult charged in connection with a curfew violation, but no youths have been arrested.

"I believe that the reporter was trying to do his job and just got mixed up at the wrong place and the wrong time," said Leo Rodriguez, Quantico Police Chief.

Rodriguez said the reporter's notes were held as evidence but a copy would be made available to the Post.

Comment shows Japan's prejudices

TOKYO (AP) — A Japanese Cabinet minister's offhand suggestion that American blacks ruin white neighborhoods reflects the deep prejudices and provincialism that still hinder Japan's much-touted internationalism, analysts say.

Justice Minister Seiroku Kajiyama's public comments Friday, in which he compared blacks to prostitutes, were the latest to aggravate relations between Japanese politicians and U.S. minorities. Blacks also have heard themselves belittled in recent years as illiterate and financially irresponsible.

Each incident has drawn howls of U.S. protest. Yet such comments keep cropping up because Japan, for all its export savvy and love of Western goods, remains in many ways as isolated from Western thinking as it has for most of its long history, observers say.

"Japan is a society of fundamental discrimination against other ethnic and racial groups," said Patricia Steinhoff, former head of the University of Hawaii's Center for Japanese Studies.

"Japanese politicians used to be able to get away with this kind of thing, but now all of a sudden they can't" because of adverse publicity, she said. "I don't really think they know where to draw the line."

At a news conference following a police roundup of foreign prostitutes in Tokyo, Kajiyama commented Friday that such prostitutes "ruin the atmosphere" of neighborhoods when they arrive.

"It's like in America when neighborhoods become mixed because blacks move in, and whites are forced out," said the newly appointed minister, who previously held two other key Cabinet posts, including head of the Ministry of International Trade and Industry.

Shortly afterward, the Justice Ministry issued a statement from Kajiyama, who said he meant to convey that people living in that district of Tokyo feel insecure.

It said the 64-year-old minister's comments contained "expressions that may cause misunderstanding." But it did not offer an explicit apology.

Ralph Neas, executive director of the Leadership Conference on Civil Rights in Washington, called Kajiyama's comments "reprehensible and racist."

Japanese analysts say racism here often reflects the nation's pride in its own supposed racial purity. In 1985, for example, the Ministry of Foreign Affairs issued a report attributing Japan's economic successes to its racial homogeneity.

"Japanese are continuously being reminded of the uniqueness of their culture ... by their teachers, newspapers and TV programs," Dutch author Karel Van Wolferen wrote in a much-discussed recent book, "The Enigma of Japanese Power."

Even Japanese who have been partially educated abroad "are actively discriminated against and are often the object of teasing and class bullying" when they return, Van Wolferen said. "They are invariably made to feel they are contaminated."

Black athletes and entertainers are popular on Japanese television, along with others who seem to satisfy an everlasting hunger here for things Western. And officially, the government continues its policy of "internationalization" — urging companies to hire more foreigners.

But in Japanese eyes, foreigners always remain "gaijin" — "outside people."

Voters may be lying to pollsters, recent primary surprises indicate

BOSTON (AP) — Democrat John Silber's unexpected victory in the Massachusetts gubernatorial primary is renewing questions about whether voters lie to pollsters.

The same questions followed the careers of Barry Goldwater and George Wallace, whose support was understated in some polls.

Silber, on leave as president of Boston University, defeated former Attorney General Francis X. Bellotti by a comfortable 9-point margin, winning 53 percent of the vote in Tuesday's Democratic primary.

Polls published just before the election showed Bellotti ahead and "surging." One poll gave Bellotti a lead of 50 percent to 39 percent. An election-eve survey showed Bellotti leading 49 percent to 35 percent.

Gerry Chervinsky, whose polls at KRC Communications Research in Cambridge showed Bellotti in the lead close to the primary, believes some poll respondents hid their support for Silber.

They liked Silber's combative style and confrontational rhetoric, but weren't willing to admit it, he believes.

"I don't think there's any question at all that voters were not forthcoming about voting for Silber," Chervinsky said. "It was socially unacceptable to say, 'I'm voting for Silber.'"

Other factors also contributed to the polling problem, such as the difficulties of predicting turnout in a primary and of determining whether independent voters will take a Democratic or Republican ballot, Chervinsky said.

But Silber, in a television interview Sunday, said his and election results elsewhere in the nation reflected a growing "anti-media sentiment."

On ABC-TV's "This Week With David Brinkley's" program he said he believed one of the polls was "slanted in the sample that it took."

Silber had warned weeks before the primary that some pollsters would be "looking for work" after Sept. 18 because they were missing his supporters. He speculated that his backers viewed questions from pollsters as "an invasion of privacy."

The polls were off only in the Democratic gubernatorial primary. Other Massachusetts races, some of them close and volatile, were predicted accurately.

Exit polls indicated as many as 20 percent of the voters made up their minds in the last days of the campaign and went overwhelmingly for Silber. But Chervinsky said voters who concealed their support for Silber could have skewed polls by as much as 10 points.

Experts differ on whether voters willfully mislead pollsters.

"If I believed that people lied in the telephone interview process I'd have to get out of the polling business and get a broom," said John Becker of the Sudbury-based Becker Institute Inc., which conducted some early polls. "It's all speculation. No one ever produces any evidence that people lie."

University of Virginia political scientist Larry Sabato says lying "is more of a pollster's excuse than a reality."

Provost announces two faculty appointments

Special to The Observer

Timothy O'Meara, provost of the University, recently announced the appointment of two new faculty members to endowed academic chairs at Notre Dame.

Thomas Frecka has been appointed Vincent and Rose Lizzadro Professor of Accountancy and is chairing the accountancy department in the College of Business Administration. Philip Mirowski has been named Carl E. Koch Professor of Economics.

Previously, Frecka was the Ernst & Whinney Distinguished Professor of Accountancy at the University of Illinois, where he had been a member of the faculty since 1977.

Most recently, he was associate head of Academic Affairs and director of the Illinois Accountancy Ph.D. program. He received his doctorate from Syracuse University in 1978 and holds a bachelor's and a master's degree from Ohio University.

Prior to his career in academics, he worked as an auditor and senior consultant for the accounting firm of Arthur Andersen & Company. He also worked as an internal auditor for Kennecott Copper Corp.

Frecka's teaching interests lie in the fields of financial reporting and managerial accounting. His publications encompass a variety of empirical research areas, including capital markets theory, normative portfolio selection procedures, capital structure theory, inflation theory, market response to accounting information, and financial statement analysis.

He edited "Accounting for Manufacturing Productivity," which was published in 1988 by the Association for Manufacturing Excellence. He will be the editor of the forthcoming publication, "The State of Accounting Research As We Enter the 1990s."

The Vincent and Rose Lizzadro Chair in Accountancy was established by the couple's son, Dominic Lizzadro. Dominic received a degree in accounting from Notre Dame in 1933, and is currently an insurance executive in Oak Park, Illinois. He also underwrote the Lizzadro Magnetic Resonance Research Center in the University's College of Science.

Philip Mirowski was a faculty member at Tufts University for nine years. During this time, Mirowski was a visiting faculty member at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst and at Yale University. Prior to his stay at Tufts, he was on the faculty of the University of Santa Clara for three years.

Mirowski is the editor of the book, "The Reconstruction of Economic Theory." He is also the author of four books, the most recent of which is "Who's Afraid of Random Trade: How Stochastic Concepts Came to Economic Theory," published by the Princeton University Press. His research interests included examining the philosophical underpinnings of economics, which he has compared with the philosophical underpinnings of physics.

Mirowski graduated from Michigan State University in 1973. He received his master's and doctorate degrees in economics from the University of Michigan in 1976 and 1979, respectively.

The Carl E. Koch Professorship was endowed by Mrs. Paula Koch in memory of her husband, a successful Chicago businessman who established the Koch Foundation in order to aid the evangelization of the Catholic Church. The professorship is one of several benefactions to Notre Dame by the Koch family, who also established the Koch scholarship at the University.

Rushdie dedicates fairy tale to son

LONDON (AP) — Salman Rushdie's first book since Iran called for his death is a fairy tale for children, acclaimed by critics Sunday as a charming and lighthearted work with a serious message for adults as well.

Reviewers marveled that Rushdie could write with such mischievous humor despite 19 months in hiding under police guard, during which he has moved constantly and become separated from his wife, the American novelist Marianne Wiggins.

Most critics, however, also saw signs of pain and desperation in the prose of "Haroun and The Sea of Stories."

The late Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini called for Rushdie's death after the author's first novel, "The Satanic Verses," was deemed blasphemous to Islam.

The new book tells the tale of a Hindu storyteller whose talent is suddenly destroyed by a fanatical dictator who poisons the springs of his inspiration. His brave son, Haroun, eventually defeats the enemy of stories and restores his father's gift.

Rushdie dedicates the book to his own son with these lines: "As I wander far from view

Read, and bring me home to you."

British writer Anthony Burgess, reviewing the book in the Observer newspaper, said the dedication "renews rage" at "the stupidity of the Islamic deathmongers, burning a book they do not have the intelligence to understand."

Burgess called it a "great tribute to the resilience of Mr. Rushdie's beleaguered spirit that he should write so charmingly funny a book."

"It is a book to enjoy and not to explicate but, if we wish, we can take it as a piece of Swifitian outrage at human folly disguised as a children's tale," Burgess wrote.

Rushdie, a British citizen born into a Moslem family in India, was sentenced to death February 14, 1989. Even after Khomeini's death last year, the sentence was not lifted by Iranian leaders.

Keating to receive no 'bailout' or leniency from the courts

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Fallen savings and loan mogul Charles Keating was able to lead a lavish lifestyle, but now he leads a simpler life as a prisoner at the Los Angeles County Jail.

Keating, 66, surrendered last week to face a 42-count indictment alleging fraudulent sales of worthless junk bonds to thousands of elderly investors through his collapsed Lincoln Savings and Loan Association of Irvine.

Superior Court Judge Gary Klausner ordered Keating held in lieu of $5 million bail and refused Friday to reduce it to $500,000 despite pleas from Keating's attorneys that he posed no risk of fleeing.

Klausner said Keating has "significant reasons not to stay around."

The judge did reduce bail for three Keating associates named in the indictment.

Keating spent the weekend in the Men's Central Jail downtown, one of the nation's largest with nearly 7,000 inmates.

Keating occupied a private cell in a high-security wing adjacent to the jail hospital. He's not permitted to eat, exercise or otherwise mingle with any of the other prisoners.

"We do it because of his newsworthiness. Because of who he is," said sheriff's Deputy Bill Linnemeyer. "We do the same with all personalities for their well being and safety."

For Keating and the other inmates, the day begins at 5:30 a.m. when lights in the jail are turned on. It ends at 10 p.m. when the lights are turned off.

Keating is given one hour a day to exercise, watch the television or use the telephone.

Teachers complain of 'babysitting'

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The picket signs read "No raise, no work." But for many of the 3,000 teachers on strike in New Orleans, it's a matter of toilet paper, discipline and dignity.

"When teachers strike, you know it's more than just the pay. If all it was was money, they wouldn't be teaching in the first place," said Mike Stone, an English teacher at McMinn Magnet Secondary School.

United Teachers of New Orleans, which represents the New Orleans Parish's 4,420 teachers and 1,100 teachers' aides and secretaries, went on strike Sept. 17. The district kept schools open with substitutes and a little more than 1,600 regular teachers who crossed picket lines last week. On Friday, 62,277 of the district's estimated 85,000 students attended classes.

Union officials say a dispute over who would bear the burden of $400,000 in health insurance costs — the teachers or the district — triggered last week's walkout that has disrupted education in the state's largest school district.

But New Orleans Parish teachers on the picket lines say the issues are not only increased insurance costs, but poor working conditions, discipline and the feeling that many parents regard them as overpaid baby sitters.

Enrollment on the rise for business schools

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — A slow decline in the numbers of students opting to focus on business may be ending, a new study indicates.

Most business schools in Indiana are reporting slight increases in enrollment for the fall semester, according to projections.

The numbers came as a surprise to some observers, who said the interest in business studies declined in the 1980s as more students turned to liberal arts.

"A few years ago, my answer would have been that the number (of business school enrollees) would be down," said Neil Palomba, dean of the College of Business at Ball State University. "Now, I'm anticipating that they're going to stay about the same."

In the 1980s, interest in business, particularly at the graduate level, waned in part because of the scandals that hit Wall Street.

But that has begun to turn around, said John G. Keane, dean of the College of Business Administration at University of Notre Dame. Notre Dame's graduate program in business is operating at capacity and had to defer 13 admissions this semester, he said.

"I'd speculate that with global competition that (interest) reflects intense competition within the country; a desire to have more education," he said.

Emmet Edwards, dean of the University of Southern Indiana's School of Business, said he expects enrollment in the business school to be about 2,000 this year. That's up by almost 300 students over last year.

Part of the reason for that increase is that the school started a master's in business administration program this year and admitted 160 students. Also, Edwards said he has been noticing more people entering the work force out of high school and then deciding to enter college two to five years later.

At Indiana University's School of Business, enrollment into the graduate program is limited to about 600 students a year, said Dan Dalton, director of graduate programs. But the number of people applying to the master's program is up from previous years, he said.

About 1,700 people applied for the 1989-90 school year, but that figure rose to about 1,900 for 1990-91, he said. The undergraduate business program at Indiana University is limited to 1,200 students.

Robin Livesay, dean of the University of Indianapolis School of Business, said its undergraduate program is up about 20 students over last year to 410 full-time students.

Figures for this school year aren't in for Ball State's business program. But Palomba said he expects them to remain about the same as a year ago. For the 1989-90 school year, 3,689 people were undergraduate business majors and 169 people were in the graduate program, he said.

But enrollment has declined slightly at Indiana State University's School of Business.

There were 1,951 undergraduate business majors this fall, down from 2,036 in the fall semester of 1989. Graduate enrollment decreased slightly, by about 10 students.

the next day."

District officials refused to discuss student discipline policies. However, the district said the cars in question are two years old, are leased and needed by seven administrators whose jobs require regular visits to schools around the city.

Before last week's strike, teachers had dropped earlier demands for 10 percent pay raises, saying they would settle instead for having the district provide $1 million to cover half of a $300-per-person increase in health insurance costs. Management offered $600,000, saying that was all the district could afford.

After the walkout, teachers reinstated their demand for 10 percent raises as well as the $1 million insurance package.

Salaries range from $19,455 for a starting teacher to $35,111 for someone with a doctorate and 25 years experience.

But the teachers insist the real issue is respect.

"The real problem is the school board and top administration," said Ellen Picou, a school librarian. "We're on the picket line here on Claiborne Avenue because the school board ... has no idea how teachers feel."

Ticket distribution not fair to students

Tickets to last weekend's Michigan State football game were advertised and distributed in an unfair, inconsistent and arbitrary manner.

In a September 18 Observer ad, the Student Union Board instructed interested MSU spectators to "bring Student ID" with them when receiving their lottery numbers. The ad, however, did not specify that students could only get lottery numbers with Notre Dame student IDs. Since The Observer serves both the Notre Dame and Saint Mary's communities, SUB should not have assumed the only "students" who read the student newspaper are those who attend Notre Dame. As a result of SUB's ambiguous ad, several Saint Mary's students waited for lottery numbers--along with their Notre Dame peers--only to be turned away at the head of the line.

In addition to the advertisement, itself, being misleading, the policy behind the ad was blatantly inconsistent. As both Saint Mary's and Notre Dame students are granted equal access to student tickets for all home football games, the ticket office's failure to abide by a similar standard for away games is contradictory.

Furthermore, when the ticket office learned that an additional 150 MSU tickets were available, a representative from the office asked The Observer to publish a notice relaying the surplus in the following day's paper. Because the tickets went on sale at 9 a.m. the following morning, however, and most students read The Observer at lunch, individuals who were aware of the sale before the newspaper was distributed on Thursday were given an unfair advantage to get tickets. By the time most students learned of the surplus, the ticket office was already sold out.

To avoid this dilemma, the ticket office logically should have postponed the ticket sale to mid-afternoon, giving all students an equal opportunity to learn about the surplus and take advantage of the sale.

All students deserve an equal shot at acquiring tickets to away football games--particularly when demand exceeds supply and fair distribution is well within the University's reach. Publishing ambiguous advertisements and releasing privileged information about the sale of extra tickets to only a select group is unfair and undermines the credibility of both the Student Union Board and the ticket office.

A commitment to integrity is imperative in Persian Gulf

By Michael Masone

In a joint session of Congress on the Persian Gulf crisis last Tuesday night, President Bush declared that, "America and the world will not be blackmailed" by Iraqi President Saddam Hussein. "Vital issues of principle are at stake," Bush said, "and America will not be intimidated." Such a firm stance is precisely what Hussein's recent aggression calls for; in fact, Bush has promised that the United States will not recall its forces from the Gulf until Iraq has pulled its own out of Kuwait. But the stark reality is that this theory is being put into practice at the risk of thousands of young lives, and it compels one to ask: At what price is the U.S. willing to get what it wants?

To a generation too young to remember the horrors of Vietnam, the thought of full-fledged war involving conventional weapons appears unfathomable. Today's college students have been raised on a sort of false arrogance about the dominance of the United States and its military forces. But rest assured, a war with Iraq, which appears to be more of a reality everyday, would not be won easily. To begin with, our military buildup--the largest in any one place since Vietnam--still leaves us outnumbered in both manpower and equipment, such as the armored vehicles which are imperative for desert warfare. The U.S. has always relied on superior technology as its military advantage; however, it is a fact that warfare in desert conditions creates difficulties with the high-tech computer systems employed in our tanks. As a result, U.S. troops would be forced to go outside their tanks in the heat of battle in order to clear out sand which would cause malfunctions. Our soldiers, most of whom have never seen actual combat, are fighting on our opponent's own terrain against rivals who would benefit from eight years of intense battle experience from Iraq's war with Iran. In essence, our troops, who do not subscribe to the same union of religion and country that their adversaries do, are fighting against individuals who are not afraid to die.

Naturally, most hope that a diplomatic solution will be found. Unfortunately, however, rational thinking is not one of Hussein's trademarks, and the man who has been described as no more than a "ninth-century barbarian" will not withdraw his forces from Kuwait unless he is forced out. Our troops face an enemy whose leader has not hesitated to use chemical weapons, an act forbidden in the world's military community, on his own people. As a result, our fighting men would be forced to don burdensome protective gear which hinders movement in battle and causes excessive perspiration in the heat of the sweltering desert sun. Bush has called the Iraqi "isolated" and has said that this crisis is a "struggle between Iraq and the world." But while the U.S. does enjoy the verbal support of nearly the entire world, no nation capable of offering substantial manpower assistance has done so, and other U.S. officials have been forced to plead for financial assistance from economic superpowers Germany and Japan.

What it comes down to is a crazed Arab dictator who will not be moved back and the most influential leader in the world who stands firm in opposition. My aim is not to predict a victor as one would in a prizefight. But before we become content to accept the policies of one man, let us at least understand what will be the consequences of our actions. Let's not be fooled into becoming glassy-eyed, flag-waving American supporters, so sure of predominance in world affairs. A commitment to integrity is necessary in this situation; unfortunately, however, firm stances are much more easily taken in plush offices than on a desert plain by men and women no older than we here at Notre Dame.

Michael Masone is in the Freshman Year of Studies.

Black Man's Think Tank

Personal self-knowledge and community unity emphasized

"What good is a formal education if you don't know who you are?" demanded Michele Cage, co-president of Notre Dame's Black Cultural Arts Council, in the speech she presented on Friday to the participants in the University of Notre Dame's first annual Black Man's Think Tank.

The Think Tank, organized by Ken Durgans, Virge Gilliam and several others from both the South Bend and Notre Dame communities, was designed to begin to provide African American Students with a sense of "self." The theme of The Think Tank is "NOMMO - The Word Made Flesh." The bulk of the Think Tank consisted of the presentation of lectures by four very impressive and learned men.

Ellis Liddell provided the Black Man's Think Tank with an economic perspective which he termed "gettanomics." Liddell, who has worked successfully over the past ten years in life insurance and finance, recently founded Liddell Enterprises, Inc. to manage public speakers such as Wade Nobles, Susan Randolph, and Lynn Jeffries.

Liddell's whole idea of "gettanomics" is to generate additional money for the black community. He suggested the idea of redirecting funds and encouraged the audience to rethink ways of generating funds.

Liddell pointed out that the average business owned and operated by African-Americans makes only $45,000 annually. The cost of an effective advertising campaign itself greatly exceeds this figure. PP

In order to overcome this economic situation, Liddell asserts that the African-American student must have a vision as opposed to a dream. A "vision transcends the dream" in that the vision has a plan, he said. From here, Liddell went on to present the audience with a few possible plans to help to turn that economic vision into reality.

Haki Madhubuti, a widely acclaimed poet, publisher and educator, presented the participants of the Think Tank with a powerful presentation of his philosophy on several issues facing the African American today.

Madhubuti's credentials could take up a page by themselves, but include co-founder of the Organization of Black American Culture Writer's Workshop (OBAC) and co-organizer of the Midwest contingency for the Second World Black and African Festival of Art and Culture (FESTAC) that took place in Nigeria in 1977.

Madhubuti asserted that black people "cannot continue to use racism as an excuse for not going to get ours" and went on to outline the resolutions that he feels African-Americans must adopt to do just that. These resolutions included the necessity for black people to know and understand themselves, to listen to wise people, to define and understand their enemies, and to develop their own world view.

The rest of the speech was designed to give guidelines to achieve those resolutions. Madhubuti also pointed out that destructive behavior comes from one's environment and stressed the ability to look at oneself honestly in order to discover that inner power that every person possesses. The key, he said, is being able to tap into this power.

Madhubuti stated that when a person is in a constant state of material and mental slavery, there ceases to be a self. Madhubuti, in following in the tradition of The Black Man's Think Tank, touched on some very deep and crucial subjects.

Wade Nobles, an experimental social psychologist, also came to the Think Tank with a pageful of credentials. He is the founder and Executive Director of the Institute for the Advanced Study of Black Family, Life and Culture, Inc., and has recently been given the responsibility of developing a center in California to identify, explain and apply the culturally consistent educational teaching and practice relative to African-American educational excellence.

Nobles brought this knowledge and experience to the Think Tank this past weekend in the form of a lecture in which he touched upon a variety of different ideas.

It was with Nobles that the Word "Nommo" began to acquire a definition. He placed great emphasis on not only "Nommo," but on any uttered word by asserting that any spoken word has power and that by proclaiming something verbally, it is brought into existence.

Nobles also played with the word by varying it to "no more" as in the black man will take no more abuse and also to "know more" as in the acquisition of knowledge. Nobles touched many other ideas and topics that stimulated the audience and challenged them to think, reflect and act.

The last speaker was Na'im Akbar. Akbar, like the rest of the men that lectured this weekend, came to the Think Tank with an impressive list of credentials. He has received many awards and recognitions, including the Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. Distinguished Scholar Award and the honor of having the mayor of Atlantic City, N.J., proclaim a "Na'im Akbar Day."

Akbar also stressed the Word "Nommo" and said that it can be seen as the unity of all things. He asserted that, because of this unity, all black people have a responsibility to each other.

Akbar also presented the idea that there are two types of assaults against African-Americans, exoteric and esoteric. Akbar defined an exoteric assault as an obvious attack from the outside. An esoteric assault, he said, is the first assault which leads to the esoteric attack from within the individual. It is also a delayed reaction in and against the individual, Akbar said.

It is this reaction, according to Akbar, that breaks up the community. Among the other concepts that Akbar brought up is the assertion that history should never be seen as a place to return to, but as a "launching pad from which to go."

Booths selling African and African-American books, clothing, jewelry and other miscellaneous items of interest were set up throughout the weekend. Saturday's events concluded with meetings For Black Women Only and For Black Men Only.

The Observer/E. G. Bailey

Na'im Akbar, a recipient of the Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., Distinguished Scholar Award, discusses various types of assaults against the individual at the Black Man's Think Tank.

Midnight Oil performs high-octane rock 'n roll

accent writer

Midnight Oil upheld its reputation as one of the most socially conscious bands around by playing an intense concert at the Michigan Theatre in Ann Arbor last week. The concert was played in front of 1700 people at the small theater.

It was very evident that big things were going to happen when I approached the door of the theater with two other Notre Dame students. The crowd outside was bubbling with excitement and anticipation while waiting for Midnight Oil to hit the stage.

Immediately we were accosted by a saleswoman who wanted to sell us shirts for six dollars. So we bought three shirts and went inside, only to find out that the shirts we bought were from their last tour. We also noticed that the shirts reeked of Mad Dog.

Right off the top, Oil came out fired up with "King Of The Mountain," a song off their newest release, Blue Sky Mining. The energy in the group was obviously high-octane.

The lead singer, a bald, tall, skinny Australian named Peter Garrett, was at the center of attention. He would dance madly around the stage, arms and legs going every which way, at a frenetic pace. The drummer complimented him by raising his left arm high in the air and pounding the drum on the beat and drumming at a rapid pace with his right arm.

After the initial set of songs, Garrett commented on their current tour. "After being on and off tour for the past 18 months, it is hard to keep up a high level of intensity," Garrett said. He also invited the crowd to help the Greenpeace environmental group and, "help something alive instead of something dead, as your tax dollars go to. One dollar to Greenpeace is like hundreds of thousands of dollars to your Congressman," Garrett said.

As the concert progressed, Midnight Oil would jump from old songs such as "Dead Heart" to their current hits like "Blue Sky Mine." After playing "Beds are Burning," the crowd roared and gave a standing ovation.

The group then went off stage briefly before returning to play "One Country," a new song. The lead guitarist started the song on a guitar solo, with Garrett and the rest of the group entering one by one.

Garrett made a plea to the crowd to avoid the use of drugs, using football players as an example. "There aren't many gridiron players here tonight," Garrett said to the crowd consisting of mostly Michigan students. "That is too bad because we know how big gridiron is here. But we do understand that the gridiron players have to go home and take their drugs and go to sleep."

The group concluded the concert with "Compassion," a song dedicated to a drug-free America. The song concluded with a two-minute long drum solo that rocked the house. The drummer would toss broken sticks into a barrel/instrument to the right of him while a stage hand would toss him a new piece of wood.

At the end of the song, the lights dimmed and the music slowed to the end. Then the lights flashed on and the drummer raised all his sticks high in the air and thrust them down on the stage and Midnight Oil exited the stage to a standing, clapping, stomping crowd.

The crowd was visually shaken by the intensity of the concert. When sophomore Matt Taylor was asked what he thought of the concert he responded, "What? My ears are ringing. I can't hear a damn thing. Good concert, though." Chris Lenhart had a more dramatic comment: "After seeing Midnight Oil in concert they have replaced New Kids On The Block and Milli Vanilli as my favorite groups."

The opening group, The Origin, was well received. They were a liberal group who played mostly mellow music. At the end of their concert they played a hard rocking intense song, finishing with a deafening guitar solo. The lead singer described the group before the final song by saying, "We are a liberal group who believes that people should know what they want and go out and get it."

Outside the concert hall there were two environmental groups, Greenpeace and The Rainforest Action Network (RAN), campaigning for supporters. Greenpeace was selling pins and shirts to help fund their cause. They also provided information for anyone interested in supporting the group. The RAN was trying to get people to sign a petition against the destruction of rain forests.

Midnight Oil exuded class throughout the concert and expressed a great concern for the welfare of people all over the world. They have touched base with many problems in the world, such as drugs, rain forest burning, homeless people, Third World hunger, and others. Throughout this they have maintained popularity and have produced good music. Keep an eye on them.

Reds near division title, Blue Jays lead Red Sox

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Eric Davis had four hits and Barry Larkin had three as the Cincinnati completed a four-game sweep of the Padres and lowered their magic number to five in the NL West.

Larkin drove in three runs and Luis Quinones homered for the Reds, who had 16 hits. Cincinnati outscored the Padres 34-12 in the series and outthit San Diego 54-31.

Danny Jackson (6-6) allowed two runs and six hits in seven innings, struck out six and walked two. Ed Whitson (13-9) gave up seven runs and 10 hits in four-plus innings as his ERA — second in the league at the day's start — rose from 2.39 to 2.63.

Giants 6, Dodgers 2

LOS ANGELES — Rookie John Burkett won his third consecutive game as San Francisco dropped the Dodgers five games out of first place with nine games remaining.

Matt Williams had three hits, including a pair of RBI singles, and tied Joe Carter of San Diego for the league RBI lead with 114. Stan Javier also had three hits for the defending NL champion Giants, who would have been eliminated with a loss.

Burkett (14-7) gave up eight hits and struck out a career-high nine in his second complete game in 30 starts. Jim Neidlinger (5-2) lost for the first time in six decisions, allowing four runs and five hits in three innings.

Phillies 2, Expos 1

PHILADELPHIA — Charlie Hayes singled home the winning run in the 16th inning as the Expos fell 6 1/2 games out of first place.

Howard Farmer (0-3), the sixth of seven Expos pitchers, walked Von Hayes to open the 16th. Hayes stole second, took third on a wild pitch and scored when Hayes looped a single down the right-field line off Bill Sampen.

Don Carman (6-2), the fifth Phillies pitcher, pitched 3 1-3 innings.

Tigers 6, Athletics 0

OAKLAND, Calif. — Cecil Fielder's 48th home run and second grand slam this year led the Detroit Tigers to a victory that postponed the Oakland Athletics' plans for a pennant-clinching party.

The Athletics could have clinched at least a tie for their third straight American League West title by winning, but instead fell victim to Fielder's slugging and Jack Morris' four-hit pitching.

while Jose Canseco and Carney Lansford sat out with sore backs, and posted his third shutout of the year. He walked three and struck out five in his 23rd career shutout as the Tigers and A's finished their season series with six games apiece.

Detroit opened the game with three straight singles to right field but failed to score, then cashed in big with six runs in the second inning against Mike Moore (12-14).

White Sox 2, Mariners 1

SEATTLE — Rookie Frank Thomas homered to break an eighth-inning tie and the Chicago White Sox stayed in the American League West race for at least another day, beating Seattle in the Mariners' home finale.

Chicago's victory, coupled with Detroit's 6-0 win over Oakland, kept the Athletics' magic number for clinching the division at two.

Blue Jays 5, Indians 4

TORONTO — The Toronto Blue Jays moved back into first place in the American League East on Sunday, rallying to tie Cleveland in the ninth inning and beating the Indians 5-4 in the 10th on Mookie Wilson's single.

The Blue Jays won their final game of the season at the SkyDome and moved one game ahead of Boston, which lost to New York 5-4. Toronto plays its last nine on the road while the Red Sox are home for eight of their last nine, including three against the Blue Jays next weekend.

Yankees 5, Red Sox 4

NEW YORK — Tom Bolton, starting instead of Roger Clemens, lasted only 1 1-3 innings Sunday as New York beat Boston 5-4 to send the Red Sox to their eighth loss in 10 games and drop them out of first place in the American League East.

Clemens, sidelined since Sept. 4 with severe tendinitis in his right shoulder, was scratched Saturday night because of continued tenderness. The Red Sox led Toronto by 6 1/2 games when Clemens last pitched, but are 6-12 since.

In 1890, Price Waterhouse opened its first U.S. office. Already recognized overseas for innovative accounting and business services, our goal was to introduce these new strategies to the American market. The response was phenomenal. Before long, we were one of the nation's most respected and fastest-growing firms. Today, we face a new century — not only as a respected worldwide public accounting firm, but also as a premier consulting firm offering the full range of quality technical and business services.

The Office of Government Services (OGS) in Washington, D.C. is a vital part of our nationwide information systems consulting practice. Our clients include Federal, state, and local civilian government agencies, as well as select private sector clients. Our engagements typically involve the development of financial, human resource, and manufacturing management information systems and information systems auditing. While the majority of our staff members are based in the Washington, D.C. area, our engagements are nationwide; subsequently, all staff must be willing to travel. Wherever and whatever your initial assignment may be, be assured you will be designing and implementing systems using such powerful tools and technologies as:

- DB2, Oracle, UNIX or C
- Structured Methodologies
- CASE tools

If a strong academic record in a technical major (e.g., MIS, Systems Engineering, etc.), consultant level communication skills, and career plans in a dynamic information systems consulting environment are part of your credentials, your future may well be with Price Waterhouse as we begin our next 100 years.

ND holds on to No. 1 in sportswriter's poll

By RENE FERRAN
Sports Writer

Notre Dame maintained its top ranking in this week's National Collegiate Sportswriters Poll released Sunday evening, but Florida State edged closer to knocking the Irish from their perch.

The top spots in the poll remained unchanged. The Irish, 20-19 victors over Michigan State, received 24 of the possible 36 first-place votes and compiled 698 points. Florida State, with its 31-13 victory over Tulane, placed second, gaining nine first-place votes and 677 points. Auburn, idle this week, held on to third position with one first-place vote and 641 points. Brigham Young stayed in fourth with one first-place vote and 595 points after defeating San Diego State 62-34.

Washington and Houston made the largest jumps in the rankings. The Huskies climbed from 21st to 12th by knocking off USC, while the Cougars gained five places (19th to 14th) even though they were idle. The biggest decliners this week were the Trojans (5th to 13th) and Colorado, which fell from 14th to 19th despite its 29-22 victory over Texas. Arkansas, with its 21-17 loss to Mississippi, dropped out of the Top 20 altogether.

Thirty-five schools nationwide contributed to this week's poll, the largest number yet.

two-yard line Saturday against Michigan State. Jarrell's catch set up the winning touchdown with 1:30 left in the game.

An unscientific sampling of Irish players who had a part in the victory drives of the past two weeks reveals that the team believes that luck has been an integral part of these victories.

"I thought it was over," Mirer said of the pass which bounced off Murray's chest. "I thought, 'Man, there's no way I should have done that,' but we got fortunate, or lucky, or whatever you want to call it and Adrian was right there to make the catch."

Jarrell, who also caught the winning touchdown pass against Michigan a week ago, subscribes to the Divine Intervention theory.

"There's definitely someone looking over us," Jarrell said. "It makes you wonder."

Senior quad-captain Ricky Watters downplayed the importance of luck in the victories.

"I don't like to think about luck. I like to win going out. I think it's more like we're putting ourselves in a position to win," Watters said. "It's when everyone is running their patterns right and we have great concentration out of our receivers that we get a great play like that."

"On the deflection, you could say that was luck, but then he caught it, he had the concentration to catch it. Same thing last week- Lake Dawson had the concentration to watch the ball into his hands after the deflection off Rocket (Ismail). I guess you could say it's luck, but the players are putting themselves into a position to do it."

Notre Dame coach Lou Holtz admits that the Irish have been lucky, but agrees with Watters when he says that Notre Dame players help make their own luck.

"There's no doubt we were lucky in some respects, but with some people it would have hit the guy's chest and been an incompletion. One thing a Notre Dame player did do was go to the ball. That's one thing that they're taught. That's twice that we have done it. Yeah, we're lucky, but I also think we played well in some areas," Holtz said.

Holtz does think that Notre Dame has a certain mystique. These past two games appear to have reinforced that belief.

"I really and truly believe it," Holtz said. "I believe there's a special thing about Notre Dame, I really do. Is it true? I can't say. All I can say is that I believe it."

It seems that Holtz has convinced his players to believe it, too. And as long as they are resolved to preserve that mystique, the Irish will be tough to beat regardless of whether they are good, lucky, or blessed by God.

Improved defense holds MSU to 117 yards rushing

Hawkins' seven catches a problem for ND, Lyght missed in secondary and on punting team

EAST LANSING, Mich.—Notre Dame outside linebacker Scott Kowalkowski said he noticed an overall improvement in the Irish defense. Nose guard Chris Zorich said he thought the defense improved about 70 percent.

But both agreed that the defense is still not where it should be.

"We want to totally dominate an offense and a game," Kowalkowski said. "We're not to that point yet, but we will be."

Michigan State gained 117 yards on the ground, but 32 of those were on a cutback by Hyland Hickson in the second quarter. Michigan gained 253 yards on the ground last week. "Other than a couple of cutbacks, we played the run pretty well," Notre Dame coach Lou Holtz said.

Said Kowalkowski, "We shut them down for the most part. We were much improved over last week. Overall, I thought in our attitude and fundamentals, we made great strides. We're still not where we want to be."

Zorich recorded 11 total tackles, including one sack for a loss of six yards.

"I think we made about a 70 percent improvement compared to last week," Zorich said. "I think it's coming along."

It was obvious that Notre Dame missed All-American cornerback Todd Lyght in the secondary. Freshman Greg Lane, who replaced Lyght, had a hard time covering Michigan State star Courtney Hawkins, who caught seven passes for 94 yards.

Lyght's absence was less obvious, but just as critical, to the punting team. Michigan State almost got to punter Craig Hentrich early in the second quarter, and then managed to block a kick through the endzone for a safety with 8:13 remaining in the first half.

"We lost Todd Lyght in the kicking game and had to make a few changes, and we had a missed call," Irish coach Lou Holtz said. "On the one before we had one guy miss (a block) and we corrected him, and the next play another guy thought, 'Well, gee, I must have been wrong,' and we ended up with a blocked kick and those things are disastrous."

Lyght made the trip to East Lansing but did not dress for the game.

say, We've done it before and we'll do it again, that's part of our job," Mirer said. "We have guys like Ricky Watters and Tony Brooks who have been through this before and they carried us through again."

Senior quad-captain Ricky Watters explains that the seniors have to keep their emotions under control.

"What a senior has to do is just keep everyone calm," says Watters. "We have to have a lot of enthusiasm, but we can't be all radical and everything. The seniors are the ones who have to say, 'Hey, relax, everything's cool, we're just going to do like we always do.' We feel like we're the champs, and we just have to play like that."

Michigan State coach George Perles lived up to his promise that he would keep kickoffs away from Raghib Ismail.

tributed to some other source, though.

"We don't work on it all," Irish coach Lou Holtz said of the two-minute drill. "I don't even know if we have one. We've worked on it a total of maybe 20 minutes; 10 minutes twice. We've got enough things to work on besides the two-minute drill. If we run it right (throughout the game), we don't need a two-minute drill."

Notre Dame nose tackle Chris Zorich got the best of former teammate Jeff Pearson in the trenches. Pearson, the Spartan center who transferred out of Notre Dame three years ago, allowed Zorich to record a team-high 11 tackles. Zorich also sacked Michigan State quarterback Dan Enos in the fourth quarter for a six-yard loss.

Irish linebacker Mike Stonebreaker turned in his second straight outstanding performance against the Spartans. Saturday Stonebreaker sacked Enos once and had eight tackles and one interception as well. The Irish senior last faced the Spartans two years ago in East Lansing. In that game, Stonebreaker recorded 17 tackles and returned an interception for a touchdown which provided the final margin in a 20-3 Notre Dame victory.

on a five-yard run two plays later.

"We came out strong but then we died down a little bit in the second quarter," Mirer said.

Michigan State got on the board early in the second quarter when John Langeloh connected on a 43-yard field goal shortly after a Tom Carter interception was called back because of a roughing the passer call against the Irish. The Spartans added a safety on the next series when Murray blocked a Craig Hentrich punt into the endzone.

Michigan State made it seven points in less than 10 minutes after receiving the free kick from Notre Dame. The big play was a 32-yard run by Hyland Hickson to the one-yard line. Hickson, who finished the day with 63 yards rushing, scored the touchdown three plays later.

Mirer hit Tony Smith on third-and-four for a 13-yard gain to the Michigan State 43. Then on third-and-nine from the 42 - possibly the biggest play of the drive - Mirer found Brooks over the middle for an 11-yard gain and a first down. Two plays later, he connected with Jarrell on the deflection.

The Spartans had one last chance with 34 seconds remaining, but could not put anything together.

"There were a lot of breaks in the game," Michigan State coach George Perles said. "Some went with us and some went against us. Obviously, we think we can play with anyone in the country. Today we got beat by a point. The team was a point better than us."

Notre Dame scored first, but then Michigan State controlled the middle quarters.

Raghib Ismail got things started for the Irish, returning a Josh Butland punt 21 yards late in the first quarter to the Michigan State 41. Two plays later, Ismail gained 19 yards on a reverse around the left side. On third-and-nine from the 18, Mirer hit Ismail in the right flat for 10 yards and a first down. Watters scored the touchdown

The Spartans tallied their final score on their only possession of the third quarter, an 88-yard drive on 12 plays. Enos did the damage in this series, completing four of five passes for 75 yards, a third of his total 196 yards passing. Tico Duckett scored the touchdown on a one-yard run.

Bengals, Giants and Bears win

Montana leads San Francisco over Atlanta 19-13

(AP) - The Bengals, Giants and Bears remained unbeaten in varying fashions on Sunday. Cincinnati used quick-striking offense, New York did it with overpowering defense and Chicago won with special teams.

The 49ers and Los Angeles Raiders also won their third straight games, San Francisco doing it on the wing of Joe Montana, naturally, while the Raiders continued their hot play at home under Art Shell.

Montana threw for 398 yards and two scores in a 19-13 victory over Atlanta. Roger Craig tied Walter Payton's record for career receptions by a running back and Dave Waymer intercepted two passes.

The Raiders, now 8-0 under Shell in games at the LA Coliseum, got TDs from Marcus Allen and Mervyn Fernandez 2:31 apart in the fourth quarter in a 20-3 win over punless Pittsburgh.

The Bengals and Giants cruised over New England and Miami, respectively. The Bears, however, got a big break and converted it into Kevin Butler's 52-yard field goal with four seconds remaining for a 19-16 victory over Minnesota.

Vikings punter Harry Newsome fumbled a snap with 25 seconds left. The Bears recovered on the Minnesota 39, failed to make a first down, and Butler kicked his fourth field goal of the game.

With just 1:55 remaining, the Vikings (1-2) tied it on a 17-yard pass from Wade Wilson to Hassan Jones.

"It ranks right up there," Butler said of his game-winning kick. "Any kick that wins a game ranks right up there."

The Bengals grabbed a 31-0 lead on the way to a 41-7 rout of New England, which fell apart with four fumbles, two interceptions, two blown coverages on defense, a botched punt and an end zone interception nullified by a holding penalty. Cincinnati's Jim Breech hit a 46-yard field goal in the first period that gave him a league-record 152 consecutive games with a score, surpassing the NFL mark set by Fred Cox of Minnesota.

"I was glad to get it out of the way early," Breech said. "When I saw it fly through I said, 'Yeah!' It got that over, and it got us off to a quick start."

The Giants completely shackled Miami's offense, which managed only 39 yards rushing. Dan Marino had a mere 115 yards passing and New York kept the ball for 40 minutes, 18 seconds in a 20-3 win. Otis Anderson scored on a pair of 1-yard runs as he became the NFL's No. 8 all-time rusher with 9,433 yards, moving ahead of Earl Campbell.

In other games, it was Philadelphia 27, the Los Angeles Rams 21; Denver 34, Seattle 31 in overtime; Washington 19, Dallas 15; Houston 24, Indianapolis 10; Kansas City 17, Green Bay 3; New Orleans 28, Phoenix 7; San Diego 24, Cleveland 14; and Tampa Bay 23, Detroit 20.

Buffalo visits the New York Jets on Monday night.

49ers 19, Falcons 13

At San Francisco, the defending champions didn't get many points, even though Montana was on fire. He made 24 of 36 throws, hitting Jerry Rice for a 35-yard score and Brent Jones for 67 yards. Jones carried Deion Sanders on his back the last 10 yards.

Craig tied Payton's record of 492 catches with a second-quarter reception that lost two yards.

Raiders 20, Steelers 3

As Pittsburgh's attack continued to sputter — the Steelers have not scored an offensive touchdown this season — the Raiders kept up the defensive pressure. They have yielded only 25 points so far and had six sacks of Bubby Brister.

Allen scored on a 1-yard run with 11:03 remaining and Fernandez caught a 66-yard TD pass from Jay Schroeder with 8:32 left for only the third and fourth touchdowns by the Raiders' offense this season. Fernandez had five receptions for 130 yards.

Bears 19, Vikings 16

At Chicago, Butler had field goals of 23, 51 and 32 yards before his winning kick, while Donald Igwebuike connected on three kicks for Minnesota.

Neal Anderson had an 8-yard touchdown run in the first half and the Bears controlled the ball with 17 straight running plays at one point in the second half. But Wilson completed five passes on an 80-yard drive to the tying touchdown.

Then came Newsome's bobble.

"I let down 47 guys, I let down the coaches," Newsome said. "I just wonder why it happened. I always considered myself to have good hands. I practice that 30 to 40 times a day. Now, it will stick in my mind the rest of my life. It was a wobbly snap and it went through my hands."

Bengals 41, Patriots 7

At Cincinnati, Rodney Holman scored two touchdowns, one on a shovel pass from holder Lee Johnson on a fake field goal, and the Bengals held New England to 34 yards rushing. Boomer Esiason had two TD passes, but none to Tim McGee, who still managed six catches for 163 yards.

Marc Wilson, starting in place of the injured Steve Grogan, had his first pass intercepted and things never got any better for the Patriots (1-2).

Giants 20, Dolphins 3

The first meeting between the Giants and Dolphins since 1972 — and only the second ever — was a disaster for Miami. The Dolphins got into New York territory only once and their running game, ranked second in the league, was invisible. Sammie Smith, whose 215 yards rushing led the league, went for nine on five carries.

"This was the first big game we've played in a while," said Dolphins coach Don Shula, whose team was trying to start a season 3-0 for the first time since 1984.

Eagles 27, Rams 21

At Anaheim, the Eagles finally got going after two losses. Randall Cunningham threw for two touchdowns and Andrew Toney ran for 103 yards in a matchup of last year's NFC wild card teams.

The weak running game was bolstered by Toney, who became the first Eagle since 1987 to rush for 100 yards. Tight end Keith Jackson caught four passes for 77 yards just four days after ending a 50-day holdout and Cunningham had scoring throws to Calvin Williams and Robert Drummond.

Broncos 34, Seahawks 31

At Denver, John Elway and David Treadwell reworked their magic six days after rallying the Broncos over Kansas City in the final moments.

This time, they needed to go into an extra period. Elway completed three passes and Bobby Humphrey ran 26 yards on a draw play, setting up Treadwell's 25-yard winning field goal.

Redskins 19, Cowboys 15

The Cowboys couldn't duplicate their last two trips to Washington, when they won. Chip Lohmiller kicked four field goals, one from 55 yards, and Darrell Green ran an interception back for a touchdown.

North, who defaulted in the second set of the B Flight semi-finals because of torn hip muscles suffered during the match. After taking the first set 6-3 and up 4-3 in the second, North was forced to withdraw.

Freshman Tad Eckert, the number 19 seed in the C Flight, also played much better at home than at Navy, reaching the singles final, which was postponed until later this week. Eckert has strep throat and teammate Ryan Wenger, the ninth seed, has the flu, which caused coach Bob Bayliss to postpone the match until later in the week.

"The freshmen played with more confidence and adjusted well to the switch from outdoor courts to indoors," said Eckert. "It was just a really bad time for us to get sick, but we're going to go out and have a good time and play good tennis."

DiLucia got his closest competition from Coleman, as he won his early matches 6-2, 6-1, 6-2, 6-1; 6-1, 6-4; and won his semi-final match 6-2, 6-2. He got his passing shots at the feet of his opponents and rarely missed when he played at the net.

Sophomore Paul Anthony was the surprise of the tournament, defeating his first round singles opponent and reaching the A Flight doubles quarter-final with Ryan Wenger.

"Paul showed the kind of performance that we thought he had the potential for," said Bayliss. "He didn't play much last year and came out and did a great job."

Ron Rosas lost in the B Flight singles quarter finals, 6-4, 6-1, but teamed with sophomore Mark Schmidt to reach the semis in B Flight Doubles competition.

Notre Dame pulls off second comeback miracle

Jarrell grabs deflected pass to set-up Culver's touchdown as Irish beat Michigan State 20-19

The Observer/Patrick Kusek

Rod Culver barrels past Spartan linebackers Dixon Edwards during Saturday's game against Michigan State. Culver had 39 yards rushing and scored the game-winning touchdown.

ND is more than lucky in two late-game victories

EAST LANSING, Mich.—For the second straight week a tipped pass was a pivotal play in a nailbiter of a Notre Dame football victory. Is the hand of God steering these key passes into the hands of Notre Dame receivers? Are the Irish just lucky? Or is this just another case of a team making its own breaks?

We will never know the answer to that first question. We do know that theologians generally frown on the concept of Divine Intervention in Football Games, but we cannot be certain in this life whether God really made Notre Dame number one the past two weeks.

But how much of a part does luck play?

In last week's game against Michigan, freshman receiver Lake Dawson plucked a Rick Mirer pass out of the air for a 45-yard gain on a key third-down play late in the third quarter. Normally, that would not seem unusual. But that pass had already bounced off the hands of Irish flanker Raghib Ismail, the intended receiver.

As if that wasn't enough, sophomore Adrian Jarrell caught a Mirer pass which caromed off the chest of Spartan cornerback Todd Murray for a 34-yard gain down to the EAST LANSING, Mich. - Another weekend, another miracle for the Notre Dame football team.

The top-ranked Irish overcame a 19-7 fourth-quarter deficit Saturday to defeat Michigan State 20-19 before 80,401 fans in Spartan Stadium, the largest crowd ever to watch a MSU game.

Notre Dame turned in a near repeat performance of last weekend's 28-24 victory over Michigan in improving to 2-0, while Michigan State fell to 0-1-1.

"We just have to find a way to win each and every week," Irish coach Lou Holtz said. "It looked bleak. Once again, we were down by two scores late in the football game but we found a way to win."

Rodney Culver scored the game-winning touchdown on a one-yard run with just under one-minute remaining in the game, but it was an improbable deflection that put the Irish in position to get the victory.

On second-and-five from the Michigan State 36, Notre Dame quarterback Rick Mirer threw a bullet near the right front corner of the endzone. The ball bounced off the numbers of Spartan cornerback Todd Murray and into the hands of Irish receiver Adrian Jarrell, who went out of bounds at the two-yard line. Culver scored three plays later.

"I was ready to make the tackle," said Jarrell, who caught the winning touchdown pass against Michigan. "It just hit him in the chest and I caught it. I was in the right place at the right time and I just stayed in bounds."

Said Mirer, "As soon as I let go of it, I saw the defender. I hadn't seen him coming. Adrian was right there again, making another great play. We were just trying to make something happen. I thought I was going to have to play defense for a second."

The Irish made little happen until late in the third quarter when Mirer orchestrated a 16-play, 66-yard drive that ended when tailback Rick Watters ran two yards for the touchdown. That pulled the Irish within six at 19-13.

The Spartans retaliated quickly, moving into Notre Dame territory on just four plays. But on second and 16 from the 39, Irish linebacker Michael Stonebreaker intercepted a Dan Enos pass at the Notre Dame 26 and returned it 23 yards. That was Stonebreaker's second interception in as many games.

After the teams traded punts, Notre Dame took over for its final drive with 5:15 left in the game on its own 19. Mirer opened with a 19-yard pass to Derek Brown, but then offensive holding negated a 12-yard run by Tony Brooks.

DiLucia beats Coleman in finals

By DAVE MCMAHON
Sports Writer

The return of All-American David DiLucia to the Notre Dame men's tennis team brought a surge of confidence that helped the Irish dominate this weekend at the Tom Fallon Invitational.

Rainy conditions forced the tournament inside to the Eck Pavilion and South Bend Racquet Club, which hurt some teams but allowed Irish teammates DiLucia and Chuck Coleman to reach the A Flight singles final, which DiLucia won 6-2, 6-4. The two also paired up to take the A Flight doubles championship, 6-3, 7-5 over a Ball State duo that beat the Notre Dame team of Ryan Wenger and Paul Anthony in the semi-finals.

The Sunday night singles matchup was tough for both, who had played eight previous matches over the course of the tournament. DiLucia, after an

All-America performance last season, is on the pace for an even better showing this year.

"DiLucia played extremely well," said coach Bob Bayliss. "He's playing at a level above where he was last year. He just mixed in high loops and short chips and ran everything down."

Coleman reached the finals by beating two of the best players in the tournament. An impressive 6-3, 6-2 win over West Virginia's Patrick Westoo, the singles champion at last week's Navy Tournament, was only the start for Coleman. He went on to an even more impressive 6-1, 6-2 semi-final victory against Michigan's Dan Brakus before facing DiLucia in the finals.

Neither player admired the task of facing a teammate to determine the winner, however. "We play each other so much in practice and we know what to expect from each other," said DiLucia, who played much of the tournament with a broken toenail. "After playing so many matches this weekend, it was kind of hard to get motivated for a Sunday night final, but I think we brought out the best in each other."

Coleman, able to play with the help of a stellar performance by the Irish trainers, was pleased with the overall team effort that was lacking last week.

"The Navy tournament woke us up and made us realize how bad we could actually play," said Coleman. "It was great to come back from last week and make it to the finals, but playing Dave was a tough situation to be in."

After an opening tournament last week on the road, the young Irish squad relished the chance to compete on its own courts.

"I was really nervous at the Navy tournament and just wasn't able to play my type of game," said freshman Tommy
