East Germans scared by unification, leader says

EAST BERLIN (AP) — The last leader of a sovereign East Germany said Tuesday his people are truly afraid as they prepare to join the competitive, free-thinking and robust society next door.

Lothar de Maiziere, in a wide-ranging talk with The Associated Press board, said his nation's 16 million people will need help to thrive in a new world based on initiative and free enterprise.

He said East Germans, forced to live in a Communist society for four decades, have grown accustomed to a life in which their futures — and their jobs — were largely preordained by the government.

Although most East Germans desperately desire the German unification that takes place Oct. 3, de Maiziere said they realize they will be expected to take control of their individual destinies.

"The future in the past meant the future prescribed by the Politburo," he said. "Now the people see their future is not a prescribed time, but a free time. This is something people did not learn, and they are afraid of that."

■ Bush urges treaty ratification/ page 6

He said the government of a united Germany must have a "strong social consciousness" to help East Germans make the transition and avoid becoming a second-class population.

De Maiziere, a 50-year-old lawyer, will turn over to West Germany the leadership of his nation in just eight days.

He was East Germany's first freely chosen leader and guided it through a rocky, six-month period of tough negotiations on the terms and timing of unification.

He said he has made no decision on whether to accept one of the four new Cabinet posts that will be filled by East Germans in the newly expanded government of West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl.

But de Maiziere said he has viewed his role as prime minister as that of a lawyer representing a very large client, and he would accept a similar role in a united Germany.

He defended his people, who critics say will be bringing nothing to a united Germany but debts, social problems, a questionable work ethic and a crumbling economy.

He said East Germans did not choose their system, which was imposed by the Soviets and remains a legacy of the war started by the Nazis. The nation, de Maiziere said, is part of German history and the cradle of the culture that gave the world Bach, Goethe and Handel.

He said the former Communist secret police that entwined the nation for 40 years remains one of the old regime's "most difficult legacies."

Tens of thousands of people worked for the dreaded security apparatus, which compiled intimate dossiers on 6 million people.

He said German law enforcement officials should have access to those files to punish people who committed crimes

Saddam: Iraqi war would be worse than Vietnam

WASHINGTON (AP) — Iraqi President Saddam Hussein said in a message to Americans broadcast Tuesday that President Bush was sending their sons to a war more terrible than Vietnam.

In a 75-minute address taped last week, Saddam warned that if Bush were to launch war against Iraq, "it would not be up to him to end it."

Sitting at his desk with an Iraqi flag at his side,

Saddam said he was addressing his message to the American people to explain the truth behind Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion and occupation of Kuwait.

The rambling address, peppered with references to Allah and his teachings, repeatedly accused Bush and Kuwait's rulers of plotting to impoverish his country and steal its oil.

Bush is "placing you in a critically embarrassing situation ... on the edge of a bottomless abyss," by defending undemocratic governments like those of Kuwait, Saddam said.

Saddam Hussein

"Bush, ladies and gentlemen, is sending your sons to war for no purpose save fatal arrogance."

Saddam spoke in Arabic. His remarks were translated with English subtitles supplied by Iraqi authorities.

"Bush wants to bring back the sorrows of America and humanity by repeating the Vietnam experience, only this time in a more radical manner and more violent and more casualties," Saddam said.

The four major television networks broadcast excerpts of the tape on their evening news shows.

Only CNN honored Saddam's request to show the whole tape, scheduling a 1 a.m. EDT broadcast.

Notre Dame to host national conference on alumni service

By PATRICK HEALY
News Writer

Notre Dame will host the first nationwide conference on alumni volunteer service from September 30 through October 2.

According to Peter Pratica, assistant director for Alumni Clubs, The James F. Andrews Conference signifies a trend of greater involvement by alumni in service projects throughout the country.

The conference was initiated by Notre Dame, and is directed by Pratica and Kathleen Sullivan, coordinator of Alumni Community Service.

According to Pratica, the purpose of the conference is to allow the colleges and universities participating to "create a database" of information, allowing each to know what alumni programs others are in-involved in.

Pratica said Notre Dame alumni were sparked to community service in a number of ways. One example is the Summer Service Project, which is sponsored by the Alumni Association but performed by the students. The positive feedback alumni received from the students inspired the alumni to volunteer themselves.

Another example was the adoption of St. Anne's Home for the Elderly by the Notre Dame Club of Milwaukee. Once again, "the students led the alumni" into volunteering because of the students' enthusiasm, according to Pratica.

Pratica said the alumni found such experiences "invigorating", and wanted to do more in a "hands-on" capacity. He stressed that alumni programs contribute "to the betterment of both the people being served as well as the alumni providing the service," some of whom are often far along in their professional careers yet have not contributed to their communities.

Pratica emphasized that Notre Dame is considered "the leader" in service, and that other schools looking to start or expand alumni service programs "are looking to Notre Dame for guidance." He noted that many of the schools attending "are excited about the Andrews Conference."

University President Father Edward Malloy, a member of President Bush's Points of Light Initiative, will address the conference, and a keynote speech will be given by Thomas Morris, an associate professor of philosophy at Notre Dame.

James Andrews was a 1961 Notre Dame graduate and co-founder of the Universal Press Syndicate. His wife, Kathleen, established a fund in 1981 which promotes 155 Summer Service Projects organized by the 200-club network of Notre Dame's alumni association.

INSIDE COLUMN

The unethical don't deserve to govern

How disturbing it is when a former Democratic vice-presidential candidate announces that the personal moral and ethical beliefs of a political candidate have nothing to do with his or her performance in public office.

Christine Walsh
Business Editor

It is even more amazing how a politician as well versed as Geraldine Ferraro could make such a blasphemous statement at an institution which prides itself on fostering the development of moral and ethical citizens.

Specifically, Ferraro was referring to the Gary Hart incident during his presidential candidacy. The Miami Herald was wrong to make such an issue of the alleged affair, said Ferraro, as she proceeded to point a disapproving finger at the press in general. Ferraro claimed that there are aspects of a public figure's life that should not be privy to the media.

Whether the Miami Herald's allegations were true or not, said Ferraro, does not matter because a candidate's personal code of ethics does not have a direct relation to how the candidate will negotiate with the Soviets or conduct domestic policy.

I wholly disagree. One's moral beliefs cannot be separated into public and private entities. A person is either moral or she is not. One who behaves unethically in her personal life can hardly be expected to act ethically in any context.

The Congress appeared 'morally outraged' when it became aware of the Iran-Contra affair, but has anything been done since then to guarantee that such infractions by government officials do not occur again? The answer is rightly no, for it is not the sole responsibility of positive law to ensure that public officials behave ethically.

The only way the electorate can insure that government is conducted with any degree of ethical standards is to elect moral and ethical politicians. How do we judge who is ethical and who is not? Inadequate as it is, we must rely largely on information we receive (from the media) regarding a candidate's public, and more often in the 1980s and 1990s, personal character.

If someone is cheating on his or her spouse, I would view as highly suspect that person's ability to honestly conduct matters of state. Ethics for this type of person become a platform whereby he or she can appear to act morally and ethically when it is advantageous to do so, which is not ethical conduct at all.

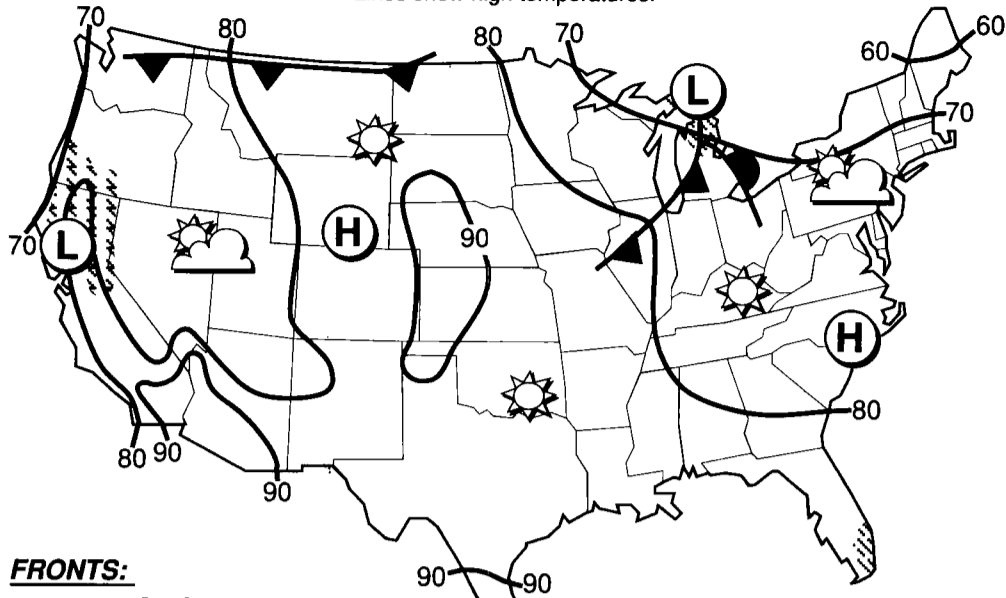

When prominent public figures say it is acceptable to lead a morally 'dual life' they condone corrupt politics, and I say these people have no place in governing this country.

The views expressed in the Inside Column are those of the author and not necessarily those of The Observer.

Alexander Solzhenitsyn's proposal to replace the Soviet Union with an all-Slavic state is destructive and disrespectful to the country's other ethnic groups, President Mikhail Gorbachev said Tuesday. Solzhenitsyn, the Nobel Prize-winning author who was expelled from the Soviet Union for treason in 1974, made his proposal in an article published a week ago by two Soviet newspapers. In his first public comment on the article, Gorbachev told the national legislature that Solzhenitsyn was an "undoubtedly great man," but "his views on the future of our multinational state are unacceptable."

Men firing submachine guns massacred 26 laborers at a ranch in western Colombia on Tuesday, an official in a nearby town said.

Twenty-four workers were rounded up, taken to a soccer field and shot as they huddled together, an official in the town of Candelaria said in a live broadcast interview with the radio chain RCN.

The town government spokesman, Jorge Ramirez, said in the interview with the radio chain RCN that two peasants on a road near the ranch were shot to death by the killers as they fled in three vehicles.

Witnesses said the killers wore uniforms like those of Colombia's anti-narcotics police, RCN said.

Both leftist guerrillas and right-wing death squads often disguise themselves in police uniforms.

NATIONAL

Crime laboratory results given to police investigating five student slayings at the University of Florida failed to link any of several suspects to the killings, a newspaper reported. It's uncertain whether the test results received last week actually cleared any suspects, or if they just failed to support existing suspicions, The Gainesville Sun said in its Wednesday editions. Police last week increased night patrols in the area where the college students were slain. The tests didn't link any of the eight to the crimes, the newspaper said.

One major witness was allowed to testify in secret and one refused to appear voluntarily as a hearing began Tuesday on conflict-of-interest allegations against Neil Bush, the president's son. The only thing missing was the center of all the attention. The federal Office of Thrift Supervision is trying to bar Bush from the banking and savings industry for his alleged actions as a director of Silverado Banking, Savings and Loan, which failed in late 1988 at a cost to taxpayers of $1 billion.

Malloy assists Pope John Paul II with report on Catholic colleges

By BRADLEY GALKO
Assistant News Editor

Pope John Paul II released his Apostolic Constitution on Catholic Universities Tuesday, which University President Father Edward Malloy assisted in revising.

Malloy was one of three North American representatives elected onto a 15 member commission to assist the Vatican in revising a draft document released last November by the World Congress on Catholic higher education.

The congress, which consisted of Catholic educators from around the world, including Malloy, submitted their recommendations to the pope on the proper mission and norms of Catholic universities after their meeting in Rome last April.

"I think that the quality of the document improved dramatically (from rough draft to final draft)" said Malloy. He also said that the document, which has been nine years in the making, "broadened the perspective that the people in Rome had about Catholic education."

"(It) recognizes the significant role Catholic universities play in the life of the Church," he said.

The document reads in part, "Through teaching and research, a Catholic University offers an indispensable contribution to the Church. . . it prepares men and women . . . to assume positions of responsibility in the Church. Moreover, by offering the results of its scientific research, a Catholic University will be able to help the Church respond to the problems and needs of this age."

Malloy said the document "recognizes the significant role played by lay people, (and) is strong in . . . affirmation of academic freedom." It concurs that "lay men and women are assuming important functions and responsibilities for the direction of these (Catholic) Institutions."

The document adds, "every Catholic University . . . possesses the institutional autonomy necessary to perform its functions effectively and guarantees its members academic freedom, so long as the rights of the individual person and of the community are preserved within the confines of the truth and the common good."

Malloy also said the document is ecumenical in its treatment of other religions. "Non-Catholic members," it reads, "are required to respect the Catholic character of the University, while the University in turn respects their religious liberty."

Other strengths of the Apostolic Constitution, according to Malloy, include the fact that it is "short, readable, and basically positive in orientation." In fact, the final document includes 11 norms, down from 72 in earlier versions.

"These General Norms are based on, and are a further development of, the Code of Canon Law and the complementary Church legislation," the document reads, "(They) are to be applied concretely at the local and regional levels . . . (and) will be valid for all Catholic Universities and other Catholic Institutes of Higher Studies in the region."

"I don't expect any significant changes at Notre Dame either in written material or how we do things," said Malloy of the newly published norms. "The document reinforces the direction we have been taking for a long time."

The Apostolic Constitution also stressed the role of Catholic Universities in promoting pastoral ministry and evangelism in the Church. Malloy also said it promoted a positive and friendly relationship between local bishops and Catholic institutions.

Malloy was joined on the commission by two other U.S. educators: Father Joseph O'Hare, president of Fordham University; and Sister Sally Furay, vice-president and provost of the University of San Diego. Furay was the only woman on the commission.

Counselors: Most campus rape victims know attackers

By DANNIKA SIMPSON
News Writer

Acquaintance rape is the most common type of rape on college campuses, according to Mickey Franco, a staff member of the University Counseling Center, and April Metzler, an intern at the center.

The two held a presentation on the issue of sexual aggression and rape on college campuses Tuesday.

"One out of eight women by the time they graduate from college will have been raped," said Franco. "One out of four will have been raped or forced to fight off an attack." Metzler said 18 is the age at which most women are likely to be raped.

Franco and Metzler gave the definition of rape. According to the Indiana Criminal Code, rape is a Class B Felony if a person knowingly or intentionally has sexual intercourse with a member of the opposite sex through use of force, or if the person in not aware that intercourse is occurring, or if the person is mentally incapacitated so as not to give consent to sexual intercourse.

To be considered a Class A felony, the rapist must use or threaten to use deadly force with a deadly weapon, or must bodily injure the victim.

Acquaintance rape is defined as a rape by someone the victim knows. Date rape occurs when two people interact at a social event ending with "one person forcing the other to participate in...intercourse against his or her will."

Franco and Metzler also said date/acquaintance rape are the least violent types of rape. Metzler stated, "Most of the time most women do not fight back because they know the guy. Psychologically they are hurt much greater (than physically)."

Metzler then gave some characteristics of acquaintance rapists. Metzler said, "There is no set way to identify acquaintance rapists, but there are certain clues to identify this type." Some of the characteristics a person should look for are emotional abuse, negative talk about women in general, physical violence, or intimidation.

Metzler stated, "Basically, we're talking about manipulative behavior here." She told females to listen to their "inner voice."

Franco added, "Be aware how boundaries can be violated, verbally or physically. Violation of boundaries is subtle, but it's there."

Metzler advises rape victims not to blame themselves or deny that the rape has occurred. According to Metzler, friends of rape victims should believe, listen and comfort the victim. They should also encourage the victim to report the crime, call a rape crisis center, and seek medical and psychological treatment.

Franco and Metzler concluded the lecture by urging people to join community organizations. They suggested the Campus Alliance for Rape Elimination and encouraged victims to call the SOS Help Line at 289-HELP. Metzler also suggested students use Safewalk. She said, "It's not the ultimate solution, but a resource."

The presentation was sponsored by the University Counseling Center and the Year of Women Committee.

Wife, lawyer claim POWs still being held in SE Asia

By DAVID KINNEY
News Writer

American prisoners of war still remain captive in Southeast Asia, according to the wife of an unconfirmed POW and a lawyer who brought a POW case to court.

This issue was discussed Tuesday at a presentation sponsored by the Student Union Board called "Missing in Action." The presentation featured Ann Hart, the wife of POW Thomas Hart, whose plane was shot down over Laos in 1972, and Mark Waple, a lawyer who presented overwhelming evidence in a case concerning the POW issue which he brought against President Reagan and the U.S. government.

Continual confirmed sightings of prisoners and past missions planned to retrieve POWs make it clear that American men are still held captive, according to Waple. However, he added, the U.S. is unwilling to attempt to solve the problem.

Waple, Hart, and several others filed a suit against the U.S. government for failing to protect the rights that were due the POWs and their families as provided by the Hostage Act and the Fifth Amendment.

The suit was dismissed when the defense convinced the court that the issue was a political question and that Waple and Hart were attempting to dictate the foreign policy of the President rather than simply attempting to protect rights.

The case came about as a result of both the overwhelming amount of evidence proving the existence of POWs and from the problem faced by Ann Hart and others after their relatives were declared POWs.

"Family members were not provided with all the information," said Hart. Upon the examination of bones found at the crash site, the U.S. government claimed that Thomas Hart was dead. Further analysis rebuked this conclusion, yet officially, Hart was no longer missing.

Much of the blame, said the speakers, falls on the U.S. government. There was a "concerted effort," said Hart "to prevent that (the return of POWs) from happening."

for the secret police, and to help others whose lives were ruined by it.

But there should not be wide public access because the information contained in them could be damaging, divisive and distorted, de Maiziere said.

About 5,000 secret police workers were used exclusively to listen to telephone conversations, he said, and the details in the files not only contain political views but reveal whether people were faithful to their spouses.

Each file on a particular person also contains, on average, the names and activities of 40 to 50 other people who came in contact with that person.

De Maiziere said he chose not to read his own file when questions arose about whether he cooperated with the secret police, but allowed respected leaders to do it for him. He was subsequently cleared.

He also said he hoped for a political solution in the Persian Gulf crisis, and believes a united Germany will refute critics who say it is too preoccupied with itself to assume a role of global leadership.

He credited President Bush, former President Reagan and Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev for creating the political climate that made German unity possible.

Magellan satellite finds old lava river on Venus

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — The Magellan spacecraft's "jazzy" pictures of cloud-covered Venus show windblown dust deposits, a crater the size of Los Angeles and a solidified lava river 200 miles long, scientists said Tuesday.

"Believe me, it's giving us a revolutionary new view of Venus," said Brown University geologist Jim Head, a Magellan scientist at NASA's Jet Propulsion Laboratory.

With Magellan only 10 days into its formal 243-day mission to map the planet's surface with radar, Head advised: "Don't touch your dial."

"We think we have a blockbuster fall season," he said at a news conference.

"These are extremely jazzy images," said Gordon Pettengill, a Massachusetts Institute of Technology scientist who leads Magellan's radar science team.

Magellan has relayed pictures of many lava flows, cinder cones, collapsed craters and other volcanic features.

So "there is an excellent possibility there is active volcanism somewhere on the planet," although Magellan hasn't yet seen one, Head said.

During the news conference, NASA also displayed a computer-generated videotape of three-dimensional images showing Venus from the perspective of someone swooping down to and around a crater on its surface.

"We're definitely not in Kansas anymore," Steve Saunders, Magellan's chief scientist, said as he played the videotape.

Magellan formally started its $744 million picture- and map-making mission Sept. 15, two weeks later than planned because engineers temporarily lost radio contact with the spacecraft twice during August.

By Wednesday, Magellan had used its radar to peer through Venus's thick clouds during 82 orbits, Saunders said.

"The spacecraft has been very well behaved," said chief engineer John Slonski Jr.

He said a backup computer that played a role in the radio blackouts still malfunctions occasionally — "reminders the computer isn't completely well" — and contact might be lost again.

The cause of the problems remains unknown. Suspicion focuses on possible damage to electronic components that happened when Magellan started orbiting Venus Aug. 10 and on "noise" or static in the wiring linking its computers, Slonski said.

The most stunning picture released Tuesday was a mosaic, or combination of numerous individual pictures, showing an area of Venus nicknamed "the crater farm." Three large meteorite impact craters, one of them 30 miles wide, are visible in the image, which covers an area the size of Wyoming.

Bush urges Senate to approve German unification treaty quickly

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush urged the Senate Tuesday to swiftly approve a historic treaty to end the division of Germany, 45 years after the defeat of the Nazis.

At a ceremony in the Rose Garden, Bush called the agreement "the culmination of more than four decades of Western resolve and determination, from the darkest hours of the Cold War to the bright new horizons that stretch before us."

The accord formally relinquishes all rights and responsibilities over Germany by the four victorious allies in World War II. It was signed in Moscow on Sept. 12 by officials from the United States, Soviet Union, Britain and France.

The treaty must be ratified by the four allied powers before their rights in Germany are formally terminated. However, the four countries have agreed to "suspend" their rights on Oct. 1, two days before the merger of East and West Germany.

In the transmittal letter to the Senate, Bush said, "It is wholly fitting that Germany formally and irrevocably achieve its unified status at the earliest possible moment, unfettered by four-power rights, shared by the Soviet Union, which are now outmoded and unnecessary."

He said the treaty "represents a major achievement for our German allies, who have not forgotten the past or the role Germany once played in the horrors of 1933-45, but who have demonstrated over four decades of steadfast support for democracy and the Western alliance what the world can expect from the united Germany."

After the defeat of the Nazis, the four allies divided Germany and its capital into four occupation zones, which became East and West Germany and East and West Berlin.

Aside from ending the division of the country, the treaty calls on the Soviet Union to complete the withdrawal of its estimated 370,000 troops from what is now East Germany by 1994. U.S., British and French troops will remain in Berlin during the interim.

In his remarks, Bush said the treaty "will end the artificial division of Germany and Berlin and it will restore to Germany sovereignty over all its territory and end all remaining four-power rights and responsibilities."

"This agreement clears the way to achievement of the goal we Americans have long shared with the German people, a united, democratic and sovereign Germany," the president said.

He congratulated West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl and the German people "for keeping their dream of national self-determination ever alive."

Saudis expel 12 Jordanian diplomats

AMMAN, Jordan (AP) — Saudi Arabia expelled 12 more diplomatic staff members from Jordan's consulate and embassy Tuesday, and Jordan recalled its ambassador in protest, the Foreign Ministry said.

The Saudi government's order left a skeleton staff of four employees each in the Jordanian embassy in Riyadh and its consulate in Jiddah, according to the announcement read on state Jordan Radio.

No comment was available immediately from Saudi authorities.

Naser Batayneh, Jordan's ambassador to Saudi Arabia, was recalled to protest the "inexcusable" Saudi action, the Jordanian announcement said.

Last week, Saudi Arabia expelled 20 Jordanian embassy and consulate employees for activities "incompatible with their status" — a diplomatic euphemism for espionage.

Saudi officials said the diplomats were spying on military installations in collaboration with Iraq. The Saudis expelled 46 of the 50 Yemenis at the embassy in Saudi Arabia for the same reason.

Jordanian Foreign Minister Marwan Kassem denied the spying report, but several Jordanian officials, including a Cabinet minister, privately confirmed it.

The expulsions showed Saudi irritation with Jordan's pro-Iraqi stance following the invasion and annexation of Kuwait last month. The Saudi government also was unhappy about a conference of radical Palestinians in Amman last week at which calls were heard for suicide attacks against the U.S. military buildup in Saudi Arabia.

Report: 10 million children could carry AIDS by 2000

GENEVA (AP) — The virus that causes AIDS is likely to have spread to at least 10 million children by the end of the century, the World Health Organization said Tuesday.

An additional 10 million children will have lost their parents to the deadly disease, a WHO official said.

Dr. Michael Merson said most victims would be in the Third World, where AIDS would become a major child killer, reversing progress made in improving health through vaccinations and other child care programs.

WHO forecast HIV, the Human Immunodeficiency Virus, would spread to 25 to 30 million people by the year 2000. Previous projections of 15 to 20 million did not take children into account, a statement said.

The U.N. agency estimates 8 to 10 million people, including 3 million women of childbearing age, may already be infected with the virus that leads to Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome.

Merson told a press conference that WHO only recently started compiling statistics on childhood cases because the upsurge in infection among women, and hence their offspring, was still relatively new.

AIDS destroys the body's immune system. The HIV virus is spread through sexual contact, shared syringes and contaminated blood. It often is transmitted from a mother to her unborn child, although occasionally can be spread through the mother's milk during breastfeeding.

Merson, head of WHO's anti-AIDS unit, said 30 percent of infants born to infected mothers were HIV-positive, and four-fifths of those young sufferers died before age 5.

Of the remaining 70 percent, many were likely to become orphans, placing a huge strain on the scarce resources of poor countries, he said.

He added that scientists did not know why so many children escaped infection from their mothers.

The WHO statement said an estimated 400,000 children had developed full-blown AIDS since the epidemic began a decade ago. Nearly 90 percent of the cases were in sub-Saharan Africa.

The statement said that during the next 10 years, the disease was expected to push up infant mortality rates by 50 percent in parts of Africa.

In addition to the young victims, 800,000 adults were also thought to have contracted the disease, the statement said.

Merson said that in some urban areas of Central and Eastern Africa, the virus may have affected one in four adults.

Only 283,000 AIDS cases have been officially reported to the Geneva-based WHO because of widespread under-reporting by its member countries.

his address in response to an eight-minute message delivered by President Bush unedited on state-run Iraqi television 10 days ago. In that speech, Bush said Saddam had brought his people to the brink of war.

Although Bush told the Iraqi people his administration had no quarrel with them, Saddam said, "We have evidence that President Bush was himself involved in the Iran-gate or Iran-Contra conspiracy against Iraq in 1986 when he was Reagan's vice president."

As vice president, Bush was privy to the Reagan administration's decision to sell weapons to Iran — which was engaged in war with Iraq — in an effort to win freedom for American hostages held by pro-Iranian radicals in Lebanon.

The United States gave important help to Iraq, however, when in 1987 it put Kuwaiti tankers under the U.S. flag and protected them against Iranian attacks in the Persian Gulf.

Saddam accused Bush of lacking faith in God, and of "promoting a form of neo-Nazism" by styling himself as the leader of the free world.

Congress, too, was involved in a conspiracy against Iraq long before the Aug. 2 invasion, Saddam said. Lawmakers wanted to impose economic sanctions against his country, under the influence of the powerful "Zionist" lobby of Israel's supporters, he said.

He challenged Bush, again, to an international television debate so he could tell the world the facts about Iraq's actions and so the American leader could learn about his intentions.

"If Bush has truth on his side, why should he evade debate?"

Iraq's detention of Americans and other foreigners "as guests in houses of our staff" is in the best interests of the United States because it could prevent a disastrous war, Saddam said.

U.S. officials say Saddam is holding 93 Americans, some of them at key military and financial installations, as "human shields" to ward off attack. The State Department has denounced the action in strong terms.

Mulroney faces awesome range of worries in new political season

TORONTO (AP) — Conservative Prime Minister Brian Mulroney heads into the new political season with an awesome array of worries ranging from rebellious Indians and unpopular taxes to threats of a breakup of the confederation.

Mulroney is in big trouble with voters, scoring 14 percent or less in the polls. But the opposition Liberals have been unable to capitalize on Mulroney's growing unpopularity and were drubbed in two recent provincial elections.

Many Canadians feel the country is leaderless and adrift.

Both Mulroney and Liberal Party leader Jean Chretien slipped out of sight for most of the summer and both may ultimately suffer for that.

Mulroney's government is the most unpopular since the Gallup organization began taking polls in the country 50 years ago. The polls say the Progressive Conservatives are favored by only 20 percent of the population.

At the end of July, Gallup asked Canadians who would make the best prime minister — Mulroney, Chretien or socialist New Democratic Party chief Audrey McLaughlin.

Of those questioned, 30 percent chose Chretien, 18 percent McLaughlin and 14 percent Mulroney. Thirty-eight percent rejected all three or said they didn't know which one they liked.

"There is a conjunction of events that has made the public rather cranky about politicians in general, more so than usual," said Ron Watts, a professor of political science at Queen's University and director of the Institute for Intergovernmental Relations. "We are going through an unusually bad patch."

The bad patch includes:

- A country sliding into recession.
- Failure of the Meech Lake agreement to get Quebec to sign the constitution.
- A standoff between Mohawk Indians and the army over land rights.
- A new 7 percent goods and services tax scheduled to go into effect in January on virtually everything.
- The commitment of Canadian ships and fighters in the Persian Gulf crisis.
- A series of patronage appointments to the Senate, including Conservative Nova Scotia Premier John Buchanan, currently under criminal investigation.

Quebec Premier Robert Bourassa has formed a commission to study what steps the French-speaking province should take next — independence, sovereignty in association with Canada, or some other form of relationship with the central government. A report is due next spring.

To make matters worse, Mulroney's former Quebec lieutenant, Lucien Bouchard, betrayed him and formed a separatist Bloc Quebecois in the House of Commons dedicated to independence for Quebec.

Mulroney dismisses the bad news in the polls.

"What matters is where you are on election night, not some two or 2 1/2 years before," he said.

But Mulroney's low profile for much of the summer has led many Canadians to feel he has been avoiding the tough questions.

"It seems to have been an eternity this summer, and through all this, Mr. Mulroney has pulled a disappearing act," said Liberal Jean-Robert Gauthier.

Chretien, whose showing in the polls has slipped since he won the Liberal leadership in June, also is suffering.

Bad news for the Conservatives usually means good news for the Liberals. But not lately. The fallout has become impossible to read.

Both parties were thrashed in the Ontario provincial elections in August. The socialist New Democrats ousted the Liberals from the government of Canada's richest province. And in the Manitoba provincial elections a week later, the Conservatives won a majority, shoving the Liberals into third place behind the New Democrats — who are to the left of the Liberals.

Ontario New Democratic Party leader Bob Rae profited from voter unhappiness with Liberal Premier David Peterson.

Parietal hours make academic pursuits possible

Dear Editor:

Scholar's recent article, "Sexuality: A Report on the Report" portrays student government and a significant portion of the student body as obsessed with sex and uncommitted to education. The student government committee's suggestions rest on false assumptions concerning the impact of parietals and single-sex dorms on male-female relations. In an attempt to build a new-Gomorrah, student government advocates policies destructive to the pursuit of knowledge and privacy.

The article states, "79 percent of students surveyed did not feel that Notre Dame provides a healthy environment for interaction with the opposite sex. Of these, 75.7 percent cited parietals as a major reason." Why don't students hold themselves responsible for this unhealthy environment? The University provides a dance club, movies, the Senior bar, An Tostal, Beacon Bowling, periodic dances and a myriad of other activities. In addition to these social highlights, students have 14 hours of visitation time each day. During these 14 hours, students have infinite opportunities to experience the more mundane aspects of everyday life with members of the opposite sex.

Whether or not parietals are designed to prevent sexual activity is irrelevant. Parietals provide students with the time and privacy to pursue an education. Relative quiet settles over a dorm only after visiting hours expire. During visiting hours, study and sleep are constantly interrupted by noisy co-eds. Extending parietals would further diminish sleeping time for those who have early morning commitments. In short, parietals enable hundreds of people with varying schedules to live in the same building.

Opposition to parietals stems from the student body's obsession with sex, not from some lofty ideal to promote better relations. Several students opposed University policy during candid interviews with the authors of this article. Typical responses include alarming intentions:

"I came to college for women and liquor!"

"A chick is getting drunk, and you're scoring points with her when 2 a.m. rolls around and her friends tell her it's time to go. And I lose my chance to hit a home run."

In reference to co-ed dorms, the article states, "Single-sex dorms are one of the main reasons for unhealthy male/female relations at the University, said 76.6 percent of respondents to the survey." Student government recommends, "... co-residentiality be implemented as soon as possible." Co-residentiality means infinite visitation and therefore infinite disruption. Again, to indulge their obsession with sex, and alarming number of students ignore the need for quiet. The student government hides their obvious intentions behind noble claims of improving male-female relations. Students must accept responsibility for any failure in male-female relations instead of using single-sex dorms as a scapegoat for their lack of social initiative.

Obviously, the administration cannot be held responsible for the social shortcomings of the students. It can only attempt to foster a healthy environment in an atmosphere conducive to learning. Therefore, social extremism must yield to academic pursuits. As a premier Catholic university, Notre Dame must strive to achieve healthy sexual relations in an atmosphere of academic excellence and reverence.

Inconsistencies prevail in inclusivity debate

Dear Editor:

I found Heidi Hansan's column concerning sexism in the Notre Dame Victory March (The Observer, Sept. 21) very enlightening. I, like countless other male chauvinists, thought that the phrase "while her loyal sons go marching onward to victory" was appropriate considering the male-dominated football hierarchy still refuses to allow women on the football team. Not only do I join Ms. Hansan's call to amend the fight song, but I also demand that Coach Holtz recruit a female quarterback so there will be no doubt as to whether loyal daughters are marching to victory as well.

I would also like to take this opportunity to apply my heightened awareness of school song sexism to point out another disturbing instance of discrimination: the Alma Mater. After every game, students and alumni insensitively sing, "Notre Dame, Our Mother."

Identifying the University with the female gender is at least as offensive as identifying the football team with the male gender. How can the men on this campus help but feel alienated by this careless application of outdated sexual roles? I propose that we change the Alma Mater to Alma Mater et Pater, and change the first verse to "Notre Dame, Our Parent."

Of course, some people whose gender sensitivities have not been elevated by the Year of Women might point out that the Alma Mater identifies our university with the lady on the golden dome. However, it should be obvious that even a university dedicated to the Blessed Mother must embrace its entire family—both male and female. Accordingly, I propose the construction of a second golden dome to be topped by a statue of St. Joseph.

Finally, I wish to point out some sexist references in the Victory March which eluded Ms. Hansan. She would be satisfied by inserting the phrase, "While her loyal sons and daughters march on to victory." This change does not go far enough in addressing the problem of sexist language. It is distressing to many males that throughout the fight song, the personal pronoun of the university is "her" instead of "his and her" or "its." A commitment to nondiscrimination requires that the word "her" be replaced by a more neutral possessive. Thus, could the Year of Women (which will presumably be followed by a Year of Men) begin a new tradition of completely gender-inclusive language at Notre Dame.

Notre Dame 'conglomerate' shows heart where it counts

Dear Editor:

I take extreme exception to Flo Hoelker's Inside Column which appeared in the Sept. 20 issue of The Observer. Hoelker denigrated Notre Dame as a heartless "conglomerate" because the University wouldn't pay the hospital bill of a man stricken by a heart attack in the library.

Imagine the thousands of people who live, work or simply pass through Notre Dame each year. Must Notre Dame be compelled to care for each one in the event of an accident on campus? Certainly not.

Hoelker challenged his readers to look at his "conglomerate," and he asked them, "tell me what you see." Well, I did look around, and I saw an administration and staff who have devoted their lives to educating the close-knit community that is Notre Dame.

Kolman expects Year of Women to affect all Agenda to include admissions and scholarship

accent writer

While a Notre Dame woman might have a more difficult time winning the Student Body presidency, acknowledges

Eileen Kolman, she also emphasizes Geraldine Ferraro's words: "If you don't run, you can't win."

But the student body's attitude toward women mirrors

Notre Dame's and even society's, adds Kolman. Women contributing to the community in the role of Student Body President and as Commencement speaker would be indications of positive symbolic changes at the University.

"It takes a certain amount of stamina, courage and conviction for women to be successful here," adds Kolman, chair of Notre Dame's Year of Women committee and dean of the Freshman Year of Studies.

While today's men and women are reexamining traditional roles and stereotypes, Kolman senses that Notre Dame students are lagging behind in discussing relevant gender issues.

Certain types of behavior toward women have to be made socially unacceptable before attitudes change, she says. The sponsoring committee hopes to encourage discussions about male-female relationships and how Notre Dame women are treated, so that the year has lasting effects on the atmosphere on campus.

At male-oriented Notre Dame, effecting these changes could prove challenging.

Changes in attitudes towards women will not simply happen because "a person at the top makes a statement." Instead, Kolman says, the community must change its views of what is acceptable behavior.

The Year of Women committee's goals for the coming year are fourfold.

The committee hopes to improve relationships between male and female students. Changes in women's roles in the past twenty years is an important issue.

The change in women's roles is especially relevant at Notre Dame where the "tradition is so male," she said.

Another goal of the committee is to spotlight accomplishments of women in the Notre Dame community and in American society.

To help accomplish that goal, Kolman has asked departments to make an extra effort to include women when they are planning lectures or panels.

A third goal of the year is to examine scholarship and other issues concerning women, continues Kolman.

Finally, the committee hopes to look at whether Notre Dame is "as inclusive as we want to be," she adds.

Policies concerning gender-inclusive language and admissions policies will be examined.

The committee, however, is not a policy-making body, she says.

"It is clear that one of the biggest social revolutions in the past 20 years is the change in women's roles," she says. For that reason, a year focusing on women is important and timely

Although it is called the Year of Women, Kolman emphasizes the Year's activities are also relevant to the men on campus.

In the past there was the notion of the "leading spouse" and the "trailing spouse," says Kolman. It appears that these roles will not be the same in the future and "men will have to come to terms with that."

Men have to ask themselves questions like "would they be willing to leave their job if their wife had a better (job) offer?" she notes.

The committee has decided that the target audience for this year's activities is the student body. Emphasis will be placed not only on lectures, but on dialogue and entertainment, she said.

Although she said she does not know what the result of the Year will be, "I can't help feeling that Notre Dame will be a better place for publicly discussing these issues."

Eileen Kolman has assumed the duties of Dean of Freshman Year of Studies just in time for the Year of Women.

Readers fight back: Chuck gets viewer mail

What a great weekend.

Amongst other activities (There's a strict Observer policy against using "amongst", but I don't care. They don't pay me.) I saw another fine performance by the Notre Dame drama department. Drink a lot of milk for that ulcer, Lou.

After the game, I asked a Morrissey Man for a column topic. "Beer and football," he said. "What else is there?"

Good point. But it's hard to talk about football all the time (wait, what am I saying?) so let's go to another highlight of my weekend.

I got some mail.

Getting mail never used to be so exciting, but there's something about being a freshman that makes it a highlight of your day. It also can be a very emotional thing.

Says one letter: "We just didn't want to send you any mail because we weren't getting any ourselves."

My favorite letters are the anonymous ones that beg for a free T-shirt.

One also asked "Dear Chuck, what is one hour martinizing?" They tell me it has something to do with laundry, so you're asking the wrong guy. Try Dr. Head.

Interesting stuff, but the focus of this week's column is a letter from an anonymous senior woman with dating troubles.

"Dear Chuck," she writes, "is it really true that there's nothing better than being a senior guy or a freshman girl (yes, it's true) and there's nothing worse than being a senior girl or a freshman guy?"

"Having been a freshman girl and now a senior girl, I think this is quite accurate. What's your perspective? Signed, Wondering and Inquisitive."

Easy answer.

A poll of 10 freshman guys in my dorm showed strong support for this idea: senior women should go out with freshman guys. That way everyone gets dates. The women could even drive us to an off-campus formal.

By the way, Wondering, what are you doing Friday night?

Expanding on that topic, I talked to a number of seniors willing to advise freshmen looking for their first SYR date. My editor, Colleen, has one word for the freshman girls out there: "dogbook."

One problem that seems to come up a lot is the infamous HTH (know this acronym).

A self-proclaimed Girl Guru in my dorm, called "chick magnet" by his friends, said not to worry. "When a girl says she has a boyfriend back home, it means nothing. Getting a new one is like switching majors."

What about double majoring? "Nah, she'd have to be a genius to pull it off."

Other seniors were adamant about the importance of taking social dance. Otherwise, they said, by far the best place for meeting members of the opposite sex is at the dining hall.

"Sit down and tell them you write a column and need story ideas," suggests one senior. Guys: If you don't actually write a column, that's OK. No one knows what I look like.

I also asked my informal board of senior advisors to talk about their best SYR. None of them could remember it.

And now, in a drastic break from Fresh Perspective's tradition of hard news, here's the first installment of Chuck's Gossip Report:

-A freshman from Columbus, Ohio was assigned the phone number 1492. An operator called by yours truly refused to comment and referred me to the Chief Office Operator. She also refused to comment and referred me to Jerry at the Housing Office. Says Jerry, "You guys are really reaching for material over there, aren't you?"

Chuck Young
Fresh Perspective

-Over the weekend, the weather became cold and overcast (no kidding, Chuck). In an annual reaction, the administration formed a committee to study this problem and take action in nine months if it persists.

-Student body president Rob Pasin, in charcoal black pants and a blue blazer, introduced Geraldine Ferraro. An Observer employee noted, "He looked heinous and totally square, but I work here so you can't quote me."

Asked to put the fashion statement into words, one observer said, "I'm an incumbent."

Fred Tombar, student body vice president, stated, "The man's a trendsetter. But he's usually very conservative in his dress and in his actions." How unusual for a student body president of Notre Dame.

-The widely advertised showing of "The Meaning of Life" was cancelled this weekend. Supposedly, the guy with the video took it to the Michigan State game, where the Irish were again victorious thanks to last-minute divine intervention. The theological implications are staggering.

Please keep sending me mail. (I was going to put an exclamation point here, but my copy editor said they're reserved for war and national championships.)

If we publish your letter, you'll receive a high-quality Fresh Perspective T-shirt (as soon as someone sends in a good design, anyway).

It's a great way to put off doing your laundry.

Letters to Chuck on hopefully really newsworthy topics should be sent to: Chuck, care of The Observer, Accent Department, third floor of LaFortune.

Dallas' Walsh traded to Saints

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The New Orleans Saints, with one quarterback a no-show and another struggling, traded three high draft picks on Tuesday to get Steve Walsh from Dallas.

"I'm excited. I'm ready to go to work. It feels like draft day all over again," Walsh said during a Tuesday night news conference at the Saints' suburban New Orleans training camp.

"I think he's a winner, but time will tell," Saints president and general manager Jim Finks said of the former University of Miami star. "If we didn't like him, we wouldn't have made the trade."

"He's a good young player," Coach Jim Mora said. "He proved it in college. He was one of the top players in the country coming out of college. We think, because we made the trade, he has a chance to be an outstanding player."

The Saints gave Dallas their No. 1 and No. 3 choices in 1991 and a No. 2 pick in 1992 for Walsh. Cowboys owner Jerry Jones said the No. 2 pick could be upgraded to a No. 1, depending on how well Walsh plays.

The deal didn't involve hold-out quarterback Bobby Hebert, who has consistently said he wants to be traded.

To make room for Walsh on the roster, the Saints cut backup quarterback Tommy Kramer, signed during training camp after the Minnesota Vikings left him unprotected under Plan B.

"I'm happy and excited," Walsh said after the trade was announced. "I have a great opportunity and chance to make my career."

Walsh will be competing for a starting spot with John Fourcade — currently the lowest-rated quarterback in the NFL. The third-string quarterback is rookie Mike Buck from Maine.

"I hope he doesn't think he's just going to come in and get the job because I have something to say about that," Fourcade said. "Obviously I'm threatened. He's not a running back, he's a quarterback and a former No. 1. They're going to want him to play because they paid a lot of money for him. It's my job to keep him off the field."

Mora said Fourcade will remain No. 1 on the depth chart for now and that the coaching staff will start working with Walsh on Wednesday. Walsh will work with the team when it returns from three days off on Friday.

The Saints and the rest of the NFC West have Sunday off. Mora said he thinks Walsh could be ready by the time play resumes against Atlanta on Oct. 7, but added that learning the Saints' system won't be easy.

Mora also said he didn't think the Saints needed another quarterback and noted that Fourcade improved last Sunday.

After two losses, the Saints defeated Phoenix 28-7 on Sunday. Fourcade threw his first touchdown pass of the season and his efficiency rating rose 11 points to 28.4, still the worst in the league. The Saints didn't score a touchdown in their first two games.

"We haven't gotten the play at quarterback we'd like, and yet it's been getting better. We saw an opportunity to go out and get a good young quarterback and we did it," Mora said.

"I think they were looking for more depth at the position," Walsh said Tuesday night. "I'm not saying I expect to be put in against Atlanta in two weeks, but that's what I'm working for."

Aikman was injured.

Walsh completed 110 of 219 passes for 1,371 yards last season. He threw five touchdown passes and nine interceptions. This season, Walsh was 4-for-9 for 40 yards.

Drabek continues quest for Cy Young as Bucs win

Uses arm and bat to beat Cubs as Pirates reduce magic number to six in NL East race

(AP) Doug Drabek's teammates have nicknamed him Cybek — as in Cy Young Award winner — but the Pittsburgh Pirates are one step closer to winning the National League East because of his hitting.

Drabek became Pittsburgh's first 21-game winner in 34 seasons, pitching a four-hitter and scoring twice as the Pirates beat the Chicago Cubs 5-3 Tuesday night and reduced their magic number to six.

The Pirates rallied from a 3-0 deficit in the second inning as Drabek (21-6) improved to 12-2 since the All-Star break. He has lost only twice in 17 starts dating to June 28.

Drabek, the Pirates' winningest starter since Bob Friend went 22-14 in 1958, allowed just one hit — Mark Grace's third-inning single — after giving up three runs and three hits in two innings. He struck out seven and walked three in his eighth complete game.

Drabek had two hits and started the Pirates' rally with a fifth-inning double off Steve Wilson (4-9) as the National League East-leading Pirates won for the fifth time in six games.

"When he came over here from the Yankees in 1986, he couldn't hit a foul ball," Pirates manager Jim Leyland said. "But he's worked hard on his hitting, and now you don't have to pull him out of a tight game in the fifth or the seventh for a pinch-hitter. He's helped himself win four or five games that way."

Drabek, who is hitting .212, didn't figure to be around that late after his shaky start, which prompted Leyland to make a first-inning visit to the mound.

"He told me I wasn't throwing the ball, that I was just tossing it up there," he said. "I wasn't fooling people out there. After that I got on a roll and felt stronger. At the plate, I was just trying to make contact and put the ball in play, because you can give yourself an extra inning or two by doing that."

Mets 3, Expos 1

MONTREAL — Pinch-hitter Dave Magadan's two-out, two-run single in the seventh inning sent New York over the Montreal Expos and kept the Mets three games behind Pittsburgh in the National League East.

The Mets and Pirates each have eight games left, including three against each other to end the season in Pittsburgh.

Chris Naholz (6-1), who beat the Mets with a one-hitter last week, got his first major-league loss. Winner Alejandro Pena (3-3) gave up one hit in four innings and struck out five.

Braves 10, Reds 0

CINCINNATI — Dave Justice hit his first grand slam and Ron Gant homered to reach the 30-30 mark as the Atlanta Braves stalled Cincinnati, leaving the Reds' magic number at five.

The Reds managed only five hits and did not move any closer to clinching their first National League West title since 1979. Second-place Los Angeles began the day 4 1/2 games behind.

Justice's grand slam highlighted a six-run fifth off Norm Charlton (12-8), and Gant's solo homer made him the 13th player to hit 30 and steal 30 bases in a season. Lonnie Smith and Kelly Mann also homered for Atlanta.

Tom Glavine (10-11) took the loss, snapping the Reds' four-game winning streak.

Dodgers 3, Astros 1

HOUSTON — Hubie Brooks hit a two-run homer in the 10th inning and the Los Angeles

AP Photo

Bobby Bonds and the Pittsburgh Pirates slipped by the Chicago Cubs 5-3 last night. Doug Drabek gave up only one hit after the first two innings and also collected two hits of his own. The Pirates held their 1 1/2 game lead over the second place Mets.

Dodgers cut their deficit in the National League West back to 3 games, beating the Houston Astros.

The Dodgers moved closer to first-place Cincinnati, which lost to Atlanta 10-0. The Reds have eight games left and Los Angeles have seven remaining.

Eddie Murray drew a one-out walk from Juan Agosto (9-8) in the 10th and Brooks followed with his 20th homer of the year. Jay Howell (5-5) pitched two innings for the victory.

Rookie Ramon Martinez failed to join Doug Drabek as 20-game winners in the NL, giving up two hits in six innings. He left with the Dodgers trailing 1-0.

Cards 1, Phillies 0

PHILADELPHIA — Bernard Gilkey led off the game with a triple and doubled with two outs in the ninth inning — the only runner to reach base against Terry Mulholland — and the St. Louis Cardinals beat the Philadelphia Phillies.

Gilkey also threw out a run-

Mulholland (8-10), who pitched a no-hitter against San Francisco on Aug. 15, struck out two. Gilkey scored the lone run when tripled in the first inning and came home on Geronimo Pena's sacrifice fly.

Joe Magrane (10-16) gave up eight hits in seven innings. Mike Perez pitched the eighth and Ken Dayley worked the final inning for his second save.

Swindell keeps Boston 1 1/2 games back

BOSTON (AP) — Greg Swindell scattered seven hits in eight innings, Sandy Alomar homered and the Cleveland Indians dealt Boston's pennant hopes another jolt Tuesday night with a 5-2 victory over the staggering Red Sox.

Boston began the evening 1 1/2 games behind Toronto, which played in Milwaukee. The Red Sox suffered their third consecutive defeat and 15th in 21 games.

Swindell (12-8) was in command except for Tony Pena's two-run homer that pulled Boston within 3-2 in the fifth inning. The left-hander struck out six and didn't issue a walk. Doug Jones pitched a one-hit ninth for his 41st save. The Indians rapped Boston starter Greg Harris (13-9) and relievers Larry Andersen and Wes Gardner for 10 hits, including Alomar's ninth homer.

Cleveland went ahead with a run in the third on a walk, Felix Fermin's sacrifice, Alex Cole's infield hit and Jerry Browne's sacrifice fly. Alomar made it 2-0 with his homer into the left-field screen in the fourth and the Indians added a run in the fifth on a walk, a single by Cole and Browne's RBI grounder.

In the Boston fifth, Dwight Evans singled and Pena homered, his seventh of the year but his first since Aug. 7. But the Indians chased Harris in a two-run sixth that included RBI singles by Brook Jacoby and Felix Fermin.

Yankees 15, Orioles 3

NEW YORK — Randy Velarde capped New York's record-

equaling eight-run first inning with a three-run homer as the first eight batters hit safely. Roberto Kelly led off with his 15th homer and the next six Yankees — Steve Sax, Don Mattingly, Kevin Maas, Hensley Meulens, Matt Nokes and Jim Leyritz — all singled before Velarde homered, tying the major league record of eight consecutive first-inning hits before the first out.

Oscar Azocar grounded out to end the string but homered later, as did Kevin Maas and Hensley Meulens. Baltimore starter Anthony Telford (3-3) failed to retire any of the six batters he faced. New York's Dave Eiland (1-1) gave up four hits and three runs — two earned — in seven innings, including Mickey Tettleton's two-run homer, his 13th.

beat him out. I think I could lead this team like I led Notre Dame my sophomore year."

Although Rice is happy with his situation in Saskatchewan, he admits that he was distraught when he was passed over in the National Football League draft this past spring.

"Sure I was hurt and disappointed," Rice says. "But you can't always get what you want in life, and I wanted to go to the NFL very badly. But this is a professional team up here, and I'm happy to be playing for a professional team."

Rice might also be playing for another professional team in a different sport. He was drafted in the 50th round by the California Angels baseball team, and when the football season ends he plans on working out with that organization.

"They want me to come around slowly," says Rice, who quit playing baseball after the sixth grade. "I go out to the batting cages out here quite a bit, too. It's much harder to hit a machine, though, so I stay away from the 80 mile-per-hour machine and go to the 60 mph machine."

Rice also still entertains thoughts of playing in the NFL. There is some precedence for a former-Notre Dame quarterback finding his way to the NFL after a stay in the CFL; both Joe Theisman and Tom Clements have done it in the past. Rice wants to be the next former-Irish player to travel the road back to the States from the Great White North.

"I think Theisman and Clements were happy that they proved other people wrong," Rice says. "I want to go one step further, though. I want to do what they did, but I also believe that I can do even better."

Even if he does not succeed in his athletic endeavors, Rice still knows he has something to fall back on. Although it was difficult at times, he managed to earn his degree in Psychology on time last spring from the College of Arts and Letters.

"I came into contact with so many good people at Notre Dame, and it certainly makes things better for me now that I have my degree. Receiving a degree from Notre Dame certainly will help me realize my goal of being the best person I can be."

And he hasn't forgotten his former teammates. One gets the sense that he is still with them in spirit.

"I'm happy that Notre Dame won last weekend," Rice said after the 28-24 Irish victory over Michigan. "Tell all the guys on the team that I really hope that they go all the way."

Hawkeye coach Fry feels Irish don't deserve #1 ranking; thinks Miami will be champions

CHICAGO (AP) — Hayden Fry doesn't see Notre Dame as No. 1, but two other Big Ten coaches who have lost to the Irish and another who figures to lose to them this week claim they deserve their ranking.

Not surprising, Fry was pumping No. 10 Miami, Fla., Tuesday in the Big Ten coaches teleconference because his Iowa Hawkeyes will be facing the Hurricanes this week.

"I don't see anyone defeating Miami unless it is Florida State the week after we play them," said Fry. "I don't see Notre Dame beating them. They were upset by BYU and Notre Dame beat Michigan and Michigan State, two fine teams, but Miami is more explosive."

"They have a Heisman candidate (Craig Erickson) at quarterback and Notre Dame has a freshman (Rick Mirer, actually a sophomore)," said Fry. "Unless Florida State (No. 2) doesn't beat them, Miami will repeat (as national champion)."

Gary Moeller of No. 6 Michigan and George Perles of No. 22 Michigan State don't agree with Fry. The Irish, who take on Miami at South Bend Oct. 20, defeated Michigan 28-24 and edged Michigan 20-19 last week. Deflected interceptions late in each game led to the Notre Dame victories.

"I don't know yet," said Moeller when asked if Notre Dame was the best team in the nation. "We'll find out at midseason. One thing about Notre Dame is they find a way to win. There were tipped passes against us and Michigan State."

"Good teams find a way and, in the sport of football, you make those things happen," said Moeller. "They're going to get better as they go along. Close wins help to make you better."

Perles said of Notre Dame "I think they're very, very good. I'm not a reliable source but, in my opinion, they're No. 1. They did what they had to do, my hat's off to them."

Fred Akers takes his Purdue Boilermakers to South Bend this week and commented on the so-called luck of the Irish.

"One of our goals is to have people call us lucky," said Akers. "Luck follows people that are good and find ways to get it done. That describes Notre Dame."

Purdue opened the season with a 20-14 loss to No. 12 Washington, a surprising 31-0 winner over Southern Cal last week, and then defeated Indiana State 41-13.

"Comparing scores is not fruitful, but it is fun," Akers said. "I'm surprised that we're better than USC but I don't know if Notre Dame will be. I'm sure that by game time (Irish coach) Lou (Holtz) will have us 15-point favorites."

John Cooper of No. 15 Ohio State doesn't consider Southern Cal's loss to Washington funny since the Buckeyes take on the No. 18 Trojans on Saturday.

"They're going to be mad, they were embarrassed last week," said Cooper. "I'd rather have them come in undefeated."

Cooper also knows something about being embarrassed. Southern Cal defeated Ohio State 42-3 last year."

"I don't know how anybody gets through college today without a Macintosh. Sometimes I have so many assignments that I barely have time for sleep. Yet my Macintosh allows me to get my work done on time—without making sacrifices."

"Working on my dissertation and field studies means collecting an incredible amount of information."

So jumping from one program to another with ease is imperative, as is quickly making charts and graphs. By enabling me to do these things, Macintosh probably saves me an hour and a half each day.

"Another great thing about the Macintosh is that it makes you feel technically confident. Remember putting toys together when you were a kid? Who reads the directions? Nobody. You look at the picture of the bike and you know exactly what to do."

The Macintosh operates the same way. I actually taught a friend to use one in two minutes.

"What would my life be like without a Macintosh? Scary."

Alumni starts toward another championship season

BY RENE FERRAN

Sports Writer

Men's interhall football action began this Sunday with a slightly different look. Keenan dropped from the large-dorm Parseghian League down to the medium-dorm Leahy to replace recently demolished Holy Cross Hall. Thus, each of the three leagues has five teams, which will play each other once over the next five weeks, with each team receiving a bye sometime during the season.

ROCKNE LEAGUE

In the small-dorm division, Fisher defeated Pangborn 13-0 while defending league champ Carroll and St. Edward's played to a 0-0 tie.

Pangborn struggled throughout its contest with Fisher. The Violence's first play from scrimmage set the tone for the afternoon, as a 25-yard completion was called back for holding. "We were constantly plagued by penalties and turnovers," said Pangborn coach Rob Thomson.

Fisher capitalized on two such turnovers for its scores. With 22 seconds to play in the first half, Frank Becker blocked a Violence punt attempt, which the Green Wave recovered at the Pangborn 20. Mick Green took quarterback Rick Ebert's option pitch in from the two-yard line with eight seconds left, and with Don McGann's PAT, the score was 7-0.

"The blocked punt and score took the wind out of our sails. We thought we played a good first half, but we went into halftime with nothing to show for it," said Thomson.

Early in the third quarter, after recovering a Pangborn fumble at the Violence 30, Ebert ran a naked bootleg around right end 15 yards untouched to complete Fisher's scoring.

Ebert, who is also the Green Wave coach, complemented the defense, especially the play of inside linebackers Gene Richards and Joe Mattio.

In the other Rockne game, Carroll had a couple of good scoring opportunities, but the St. Edward's defense held tight, overcoming a sluggish offensive attack which made its deepest penetration only to the Vermin 30.

Late in the first half, Carroll drove to the St. Edward's 15, only to be called for two penalties, eventually losing the ball on downs. In the third quarter, Pat Coleman intercepted a St. Edward's pass and returned it 30 yards to the 10, only to have St. Edward's defense push the Vermin back 20 yards and force Carroll into an unsuccessful field goal try.

"Our offense played better than any Carroll offense in the past," said Vermin coach Mike Baumer. "We had several sustained drives, but little mental errors such as penalties cost us in the end."

LEAHY LEAGUE

Defending IH champ Alumni as well as runner-up and defending Leahy winner Cavanaugh tuned up for next week's rematch by shutting out their respective opponents. Alumni pummeled Stanford 16-0 and Cavanaugh easily handled Zahm 14-0. After stopping the Studs' initial drive of the game, Alumni marched down the field, capping the drive with a five-yard run by David Ludwig. After the two-point conversion, it was 8-0 Alumni.

Near the end of the first half, the Dogs gained two points when Stanford was called for a holding penalty in the end zone.

Alumni took the opening kickoff of the second half and used nearly the entire third period to score on Mark Ross' three-yard run.

"Considering the little amount of time for preparation, our offense executed rather well," said Dogs' coach Paul Szyperski. "Our defense [also] came out with good intensity."

The Studs' only scoring threat went for naught when Michael McKelvy's touchdown run off a draw play was negated by an illegal block penalty. According to coach Sean Gilboy, this particular type of block is illegal only under NVA rules. Still it didn't change the obvious for Stanford.

"We were flat," commented Gilboy. "We had about 15 missed tackles and too many penalties. They played a solid game and executed better than us."

Cavanaugh benefitted early on Dustin Klinger's interception return to the Zahm 16. Pat McCullough's two-yard quarterback sneak and Binh Le's PAT made it 7-0 in the first quarter.

"What turned the tide [was] we threw an interception and they capitalized," said Zahm coach Dan Stopar. "This put us in an early hole and we had to pass more than we wanted to."

A controversial fumble recovery by Cavanaugh's Leni

Sumich led to their second touchdown. Sumich returned the fumble 20 yards untouched after the Zahm players, thinking the play had been blown dead due to an illegal procedure call, did not give chase. Le's PAT produced the final margin of victory.

Cavanaugh captain Ken Cotter believed the key to the victory was that the players want to prove that last year's success was not a fluke. He attributes the infusion of this positive attitude to the enthusiasm of head coach Tom Gorman. Still a winning season isn't guaranteed.

"With the quality of our league, we can't say for sure how well we're going to do," said Cotter.

PARSEGHIAN LEAGUE

Last year's Parseghian champion Off-Campus began defense of their title by defeating Flanner 13-6, while Grace, trying to rebound from a disappointing 1989 season, downed Morrissey 13-0.

A fumble recovery of a muffed punt in the second quarter set up the Off-Campus Crime's first score. The Crime drove 40 yards, with Tim Murphy going over from the two. Bob Topel's PAT made it 7-0.

Late in the third quarter, Off-Campus quarterback Bob Allard connected with Chuck Moser for a 35-yard completion. Two plays later, Mike Deely's two-yard run made the score 13-0; the PAT was blocked.

After going through the 1989 campaign without scoring once, Flanner ensured 1990 would not be a repeat when Clark Warren hooked up with Scott McCarthy on a 10-yard touchdown pass late in the game to make the score 13-6.

"By scoring," coach Kevin Rice claimed, "we think we've shown we're a vastly improved team. I was happy with our performance. Just a couple of mental mistakes cost us."

The other Parseghian contest saw Grace's defense force five Morrissey turnovers to spark their attack.

"Grace Hall's key has always been a successful defense," said coach Chris Sullivan. "Defense wins football games."

However, it was a revamped Grace offense which led to its scores. Early in the second period, quarterback Jim Kossler scrambled in from the five after the original pass play broke down. Bob Sweeney's PAT made it 7-0. Kossler also scored early in the fourth quarter on a 12-yard sweep to complete the scoring.

Morrissey coach David Shaw's team features 10 freshmen on its 24-man roster. Their inexperience, he felt, hurt the team, especially on offense.

"We didn't have execution on offense at all," Shaw said. "Our defense played well, shutting them down on two different fourth-down plays, but our offense just gave them too many opportunities, turning the ball over and giving them good field position."

He is hopeful next week's bye will give him a chance to work on improving the offense in time for Off-Campus in two weeks.

Despite aches and pains, Nolan Ryan remains one of the best ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — It just doesn't seem right, does it? To look back at Nolan Ryan's incredible season and wonder what might have been.

You think of Ryan and you see Ruben Sierra racing into foul territory to catch the final out of Ryan's record sixth no-hitter on a cool summer night at the Oakland Coliseum. You hear A's manager Tony La Russa talking afterward. Something about how there can be dignity in defeat.

You see Ryan's teammates carrying him off the field and you hear about the bottle of champagne he leaves unopened in his locker while he celebrates with his family over a couple of pizzas back at the hotel.

You see Ryan's 14-year-old son Reese walking with him from the center field bullpen at Milwaukee County Stadium July 31, the night Ryan recorded his 300th victory. Father and son, wearing matching uniforms and matching smiles.

You also can't help but noticing the grimaces and gyrations between all those fastballs. You see Ryan stalling for a breather as he tries to overcome the discomfort of a stress fracture in his lower back, a strained Achilles tendon or a tightened hamstring.

You also see Ryan taking a shot off Bo Jackson's bat, one that misses his glove and caroms off his chin, slicing his lower lip with a two-inch gash he can stick his tongue through. He changes his usually white but now red-blotched jersey twice because the blood won't stop pouring out of his mouth.

But you don't see him come out of the game or even call timeout, much to the dismay of the opposing Kansas City Royals. Ryan said he didn't want to "let a little thing like a cut lip keep me from doing my job."

That's Nolan, all right. You'd know him anywhere.

"That's what makes this so hard to take," Rangers manager Bobby Valentine said. "Here's a guy who pitches his heart out every time he takes the mound. He keeps us in the game, gives us a lead and we blow it or we don't get any hits."

Like during the last six weeks, when Ryan was pitching like it was 1973 all over again. And his teammates were playing like they were in the minors all over again.

Take Monday night. Ryan takes a no-hitter into the sixth inning against the California Angels, and finally settles for a four-hitter, walking two and striking out 11. He loses 3-2 and his record falls to 13-8.

Ryan has yielded only 12 runs in his last six starts but is 1-1 over that stretch. In his last eight starts, he has a 2.01 ERA but is only 2-2. In those games, the Rangers have scored two or fewer runs five times.

Still, you won't find him criticizing his bullpen or his batters.

"That's just part of it," the 43-year-old Ryan said. "They scored a lot of runs for me early in the year. I won some games early that I didn't pitch as well in."

Ryan said he would like to have some of those games in his victory column, but "you really gotta pay more attention to your consistency. I think the second half I was throwing better and more consistent than the first half, even though my record doesn't show it."

Rafael Palmeiro said the Rangers are frustrated at not getting their ace the support he deserves. "I wish I could figure it out," he said. "It's very frustrating. Frustrating for everybody. He throws a great game and we just don't score."

Rangers pitching coach Tom House quotes Yogi Berra in searching for an answer.

"What was it he said, 'The harder we try, the worse we get?' Something along those lines," House said. "The guy goes out there and gives you everything he's got, day in and day out, and you want to do well for him. Sometimes it just doesn't happen."

"If you go back over his career, this type of thing happens to him a lot."

Ryan will finish his 23rd season Sunday against the A's during fan appreciation day at Arlington Stadium. As of Tuesday, he held the major league lead with 221 strikeouts, despite a May 18-June 5 stint on the disabled list. Opposing batters are hitting a major league low .185 off him.

Nolan Ryan, who won his 300th game this season and pitched the sixth no-hitter of his illustrious career is probably the most durable and well respected pitcher in baseball.

Noticing their uniforms, a camper was perplexed. "I guess they don't wear white socks now, do they?"

Holtz prepared for worst with injury to All-American Lyght

Fears Run and Shoot as well as punt blocking prowess of Boilermakers will make trouble

BY KEN TYSIAC
Associate Sports Editor

Notre Dame football coach Lou Holtz is preparing for the worst with All-American cornerback Todd Lyght's hamstring injury.

"We do not expect Todd Lyght back," Holtz says. "When you have a hamstring muscle pull, in all honesty we're not counting on him the rest of the year. If we get anything out of him, hey that's a bonus."

Holtz's pessimism may be exaggerated. Lyght will not play this Saturday against Purdue, but realistically Irish fans can expect him to be back in action the following week against Stanford. There is a possibility that freshman Tom Carter will start in place of George Poorman at free safety, in which case there would be two freshmen (Carter and cornerback Greg Lane) and one sophomore (Reggie Brooks) starting in the secondary.

"I think there isn't any doubt that Greg Lane and Tommy Carter and even (fellow freshman) John Covington are going to be fine defensive backs if they continue to get better, but you have to remember that they are true freshmen. You get into a ballgame and you revert to old habits. They on occasion were probably using some coverages that they used last year that we aren't using this year," Holtz says.

Holtz was nevertheless pleased with the effort given by his young defensive backs. He says it will just take time for them to develop.

Time is something the Irish don't have, though. Another concern with Lyght gone is the punting unit.

"(Lyght) played the right sprinter for us on the outside. He had started there for three years," Holtz says. "The punting game, you don't really notice it until it doesn't show up, but there's a lot of different looks, a lot of different calls, and it gets to be a rather complicated process out there. I am really concerned when we punt the ball this week."

The Irish coach is doubly concerned because of the recent success the Boilermakers have had against opposing punters.

"I believe Purdue blocked three punts against Indiana State. Every time I turned around they were blocking a punt or returning one for a touchdown—they had an 87-yarder called back," Holtz says.

Lyght is also absent from the kickoff coverage team, but a familiar face has taken his place. Junior flanker Raghib Ismail replaced Lyght Saturday against Michigan State and ran down Spartan return man Courtney Hawkins to make a stop.

"Todd Lyght was one of our safeties (on the coverage team). We put Rocket (Ismail) in his place and all Rocket did was go down and make an excellent tackle, and he's never practiced it. The guy loves the game, that's what I like about him, he just loves to practice the game. He works exceptionally hard and is unbelievably talented," Holtz says.

Holtz would like to make greater use of Ismail's skills, but he is afraid that he might burn out the brightest star on his offense if he overworks Ismail.

"I think that some of the things Rocket does during the course of a football game are rather incredible. I really do. I think he's a great football player. We have to get the ball into his hands more often, I don't think there's any doubt about that, but it's a long season, it's a physical game that we play, and he's not very big. We just can't afford to get him beat down," Holtz says.

Purdue has run the option on occasion this season, but the Boilermakers are primarily a run-and-shoot team on offense. Holtz says that the run-and-shoot is dangerous in the hands of Purdue's sophomore quarterback Eric Hunter.

"I don't think you shut down Hunter or the run-and-shoot; I don't think anybody else has. What you try to do is have damage control so to speak. They really do have people open on every play, it's just a question of getting it to the right guy. I think that's true of most pass offenses where you have four or five receivers. We'd like to be able to pressure them, obviously, but with a young secondary, I'm not sure we can afford to do that on a consistent basis," Holtz says.

Rice adjusting fine to CFL; hopes to follow Theisman and Clements to NFL

BY KEN TYSIAC
Associate Sports Editor

There's not much to do in Regina, Saskatchewan.

Former Notre Dame quarterback Tony Rice should know. As a backup QB for the Saskatchewan Roughriders of the Canadian Football League, Rice lives in this northern city with a population of 185,000.

Although Regina is not exactly on the cutting edge of the latest social trends, Rice manages to keep himself entertained.

"I usually either stay at home or go out to the movies," Rice says. "They show some first-run movies here, and I see some of the re-runs, too; I go about twice a week. I get out and have fun, but I don't usually stay out too late."

Rice can't afford to stay out too late. His mission is to improve his quarterbacking skills and win a starting job some day.

Current Saskatchewan starter Kent Austin is standing in Rice's way, though. Austin leads the CFL in passing and has directed the Roughriders to a 6-6 record this season. Rice takes it all in stride; he is not discouraged by his lack of playing time.

"Everything looks okay here. I'm enjoying my stay here, and I see myself improving each and every day," Rice says.

The jump from college ball to the CFL is a big one, though. First off, the skill level improves as a player faces professional competition. Secondly, in the CFL the rules are quite different from those of the NCAA.

"You have three downs (instead of four) to get a first down. There are 12 players on the field. There are no fair catches. You get one point for a free kick of the ball through the end zone. And the field is wider, so there is a lot of room for the quarterback to run," Rice explains.

Rice says he has adjusted to the new rules. He has also had to adjust to being a third-string quarterback. The 6-1, 200 pound native of Woodruff, So. Car. was used to being a starter in college. He was 28-3 in almost three full seasons as a starting quarterback at Notre Dame, and he finished fourth in the Heisman Trophy balloting a year ago. Rice is keeping things in perspective, though.

"I was a backup at Notre Dame, too, for a while. This is just like my sophomore year (1987). I had to wait my turn. Unfortunately Terry Andrysiak went down, but I was able to lead the team. If Kent Austin goes down right now, we have another guy, but I think I can see RICE / page 16

Former Irish quarterback Tony Rice hopes his time in the Canadian Football League is well spent as he hopes to prove the NFL was wrong in not drafting him.

Worth a trip to Grand Old Ballpark as 80 years of tradition end

An observant passer-by on the Notre Dame campus might have noticed an advertisement for a junior class trip to Comiskey Park. It is curiously titled "Ode to Comiskey" with a loose set of instructions designed to be sung to the tune of "Take Me Out to the Ballgame."

Hah. Got them. We knew that Comiskey Park, home of the Chicago

White Sox, would be in its final homestand of existence this week. We knew that a slice of baseball's wonderful tradition would be gobbled up, so we avoided the line at the dessert counter by going early. So, on a partly cloudy Sunday in mid-September, armed only with a box of two dozen doughnuts, six Notre Dame "campers" piled into a car designed for five and set out for the aging confines of Comiskey. The White Sox were playing the Boston Red Sox for the very last time in that stadium, so the obligation clearly was there.

Before we get into this, let it be said that baseball is losing more than a unique ballpark when the Sox play their last game there Sunday afternoon versus Seattle. It is losing a living testimony of the sport's greatness, a chunk of history not replaceable by a mere construction from nuts, bolts and stucco.

Scott Brutocao
Irish Items

It's almost a moral obligation for sports fans within striking distance to make the trip. Call it a pilgrimage if you like. Besides, it's a road trip, and with proper provisions any mobile excursion can be fun, sometimes more fun than the event for which the trip was made.

Arriving into the stadium after the game had started, we already had been impressed by the cracked paint on the brick exterior on the building. But when we started walking to our seats, we noticed dusty beams and pipes overhead, graffitied walls, and a grimy floor.

"Kind of like our basement," observed a camper who lives off-campus.

Since we bought our tickets late, we were assigned to the right field bleachers where the view is slightly better than the parking lot. Before we reached those seats, we noticed beer sellers restocking their stacks in pits off the main walkways. It looked like they might have been co-renting with enterprising rats.

We arrived in right field, took some seats in the "general admission area," and immediately were greeted with a resplendent green on the field. Green grass, green beams, green seats, green walls.

As we were enjoying this display of emerald, a version of the Lite Beer commercial, "Hey, buddy, you're in the wrong seats" occurred.

Right field was not general admission, as the Ticketmaster agent had told us. We were in the wrong seats.

When we arrived at the correct ones, we found a belligerent, foot-wide post in our way. White Sox second baseman Scott Fletcher was sucked away from my view. But who needed a view, since we were experiencing an authentic baseball tradition?

"Please, don't steal from Comiskey Park," blared a kind man's voice from deteriorating loudspeakers. "It's a beautiful old ballpark."

Yes it is, soon to be was. The field itself is in fine shape, despite its being in its 80th year. The grounds will be removed and re-sodded in three local public parks, in living memory of the stadium.

Our afternoon was spent watching a game in which, as it should be, the home team won. Chicago reliever Bobby Thigpen re-made history again by notching his 50th save. centerfielder Lance Johnson lept up and blocked a homerun-bound ball with his glove, saving a run.

But it was the atmosphere within the stadium that was worth recording. In the bleachers, snow cones shared equal time with cigarettes. We relived our childhoods as we munched hot dogs, slurped snow cones and inhaled cotton candy.

The park even had a nifty gimmick in which a spectator could test the speed of his fastball, three throws for a dollar. The six of us obediently waited in a line that was composed primarily of pre-teens and sailors, an odd combination. But we all got to throw our heaters and all suffered torn rotator cuffs.
