Shirt to raise money for victim

By KELLEY TUTHILL
News Editor

A Miami-Notre Dame tee shirt will be sold on campus in an effort to raise money for hit-and-run victim Zheng-de Wang.

Wang, a graduate student from Tianjin, China, was struck down by a hit-and-run driver while walking on Notre Dame Avenue on October 20, 1989.

The Miami game marks the one-year anniversary of Wang's accident.

Wang had already received his master's degree from Notre Dame and was pursuing a doctoral degree. He was also hoping to obtain a law degree from Notre Dame.

Uninsured at the time of the accident, Wang was severely injured and comatose for several months. He injured the stem of his brain and spent 11 months at St. Joseph's Hospital in South Bend.

Now he is confined to a wheelchair and undergoing therapy at St. Paul's Retirement Community, said Sister Jean Lenz, assistant vice president for student affairs.

He has to learn how to do everything all over again, said Lenz. For example, Wang is learning how to communicate with others and eat solid food again.

Wang is able to recognize friends and move his fingers to communicate, but his recovery is uncertain at this point. He is conscious and his cognition is getting stronger, Lenz said.

"The hospital has been incredible," said Lenz. She said the rehabilitation staff at St. Joseph's Hospital did everything they could for Wang.

The fundraiser is very important because the family may need additional money if they decide to bring Wang to Boston to a rehabilitation center for patients who have suffered brain injuries.

"This car accident destroyed Zheng-de's future," said his mother Xueying Wu. "We worked so hard to send him here for (sic) study. We are very proud of him."

Wu and her husband, Goutong Wang, flew to South Bend last November to take care of their son. "The physical strain is actually nothing compared to the sadness in our heart. Seeing a brilliant young kid become handicapped, we often weep at midnight. Our hearts are broken. We love him better than anything else in the world, but we cannot cure him."

There is a civil suit pending in Wang's case, said Lenz. A grand jury found the driver innocent of criminal charges. She said it is possible the driver did not know he hit someone that night. The case is still in litigation over the medical expenses resulting from the accident.

The Athletic Department, the Office of Public Relations and Information and the Office of Student Activities have all agreed to sponsor this campus-wide endeavor, Lenz said.

Gobbi asks audience to follow Mary

By KATIE MOORE
News Writer

Father Stefano Gobbi, founder and promoter of The Marian Movement of Priests, urged all present to follow the Blessed Mother at a mass Thursday evening at Stepan Center.

Gobbi told the audience of approximately 900 that he had come to Notre Dame "to bring you Her (Mary) message." Gobbi also told the audience they should "become the Apostles of Mary."

"The times of Mary are here," said Gobbi, "and the times of Her adversary are about to end."

Speaking in Italian, Gobbi gave his homily with the assistance of an interpreter. "We comprehend each other over and above any language or nationality differences," Gobbi said.

Gobbi founded the Marian priests in 1972, a group characterized by a devotion to Our Blessed Lady and loyalty to the Holy Father. The Marian Priests have grown to 300 bishops, 60,000 priests and over one million lay associates.

Inspired to find the Marian Movement of Priests while on a pilgrimage to Fatima, Gobbi is also the author of a series of reflections for priests which are published in all major languages.

In addition to celebrating mass, Gobbi also conducted a Cenacle of prayer for priests Thursday afternoon in the crypt of Sacred Heart Church.

Gobbi's first visit to Notre Dame is being sponsored by Queen of Peace Ministries and The Knights of the Immaculata.

Saint Mary's students discuss AIDS programs

By CORINNE PAVLIS
Saint Mary's Editor

An AIDS awareness group composed mostly of students met with members of Saint Mary's administration yesterday to discuss possible AIDS education programs at Saint Mary's.

"We felt we had a really positive response today," said senior Wendy Gronek, one of the three students in the group. Gronek hopes to set up peer facilitated groups on Saint Mary's campus. "We are not experts," Gronek admitted, "but we are available as resources to students on our campus."

Junior Bridget Dunn, sophomore Catherine Funston, and Gronek joined Saint Mary's staff nurse Shelly Schultz last spring to attend a sixteen hour AIDS education seminar at Notre Dame. The group then presented their findings to the Saint Mary's Health Services staff.

The information was presented yesterday to Saint Mary's Director of Residence Life, Campus Ministry, Counseling Services, Dean of Students, Student Activities, the Athletic Department, the Wellness Group and hall directors.

The idea for the group came from Saint Mary's Health Services Director Gloria Chelminiak who attended a workshop at Indiana University - South Bend last spring. The workshop brought several schools together to discuss the AIDS crisis.

The seminar "showed a real need for peer education," said Chelminiak. Chelminiak commissioned Schultz to become coordinator for an AIDS awareness program at Saint Mary's. Three students were then recruited to serve with Schultz on the panel.

The state of Indiana has mandated that schools of higher education are obligated to present information concerning AIDS. The awareness panel plans to sponsor lectures and education seminars to continue to fulfill this obligation.

INSIDE COLUMN

Notre Dame, what art thou doing?

And they call it art...

A funny thing happened to me the other day as I walked out of Decio. I saw a pile of scrap metal lying on the sidewalk, and appalled at the seemingly careless disposal of trash, I asked the nearest ND groundskeeper if he knew why this lump of rusting metal was left there.

Florentine Hoelker
Assoc. News Editor

"That's not trash," said the friendly groundskeeper, "that's art."

"It is?" I confusedly asked. "But why is it left there to rust, and why does it not really look like anything definable or guessable but a lump of oxidized auto parts?"

"I don't know," he answered, "but I'm sure someone got paid for it."

Stunned, I nodded my thanks and wandered back to my dorm.

The next day, however, I noticed a few more odd-looking things on campus. One was a huge black propeller-thing in front of the Snite, called "Griffin" or "Buzzard" or some such nonsense.

And there were a mess of weird things in front of the Riley Art Building. Lots of metal, a few tree branches, some cardboard. Many disparate and incongruous forms, converging into a single, incoherent, and meaningless mass. All of them looked like they belonged in an auto graveyard or a recycling plant.

Then I glanced at the cover of my linguistics book- yikes! A blob of shapes and colors without form or fashion, and what was the name of it?

"Workshop."

Maybe it's irony, or cleverness, or even spite on the part of the artist. But what does it say about us, who so willingly accept this trite and trendy wave of nonexpressive garbage that some dare to call art? I'm not an art expert—although I play one on TV—but isn't art supposed to reflect some of the unique aspects of mankind? Some purpose or plan or sign of intelligence, at the least, right?

A hunk of metal that, once exposed, would resemble nothing more than someone's rubbish pile just doesn't seem to fit the bill. Neither do paintings that are random splashes of color or forms. What's the deal with this stuff? Is it the expression of the artist's view of reality, or their feelings? I hope I never feel like a pile of scrap metal, although after looking at modern art my stomach feels like most modern art paintings look.

If our society were to vanish and be rediscovered a thousand years from now, what would the discoverers think about the "Griffin"? Probably nothing significant except what most of us think when we see it - "Yuck."

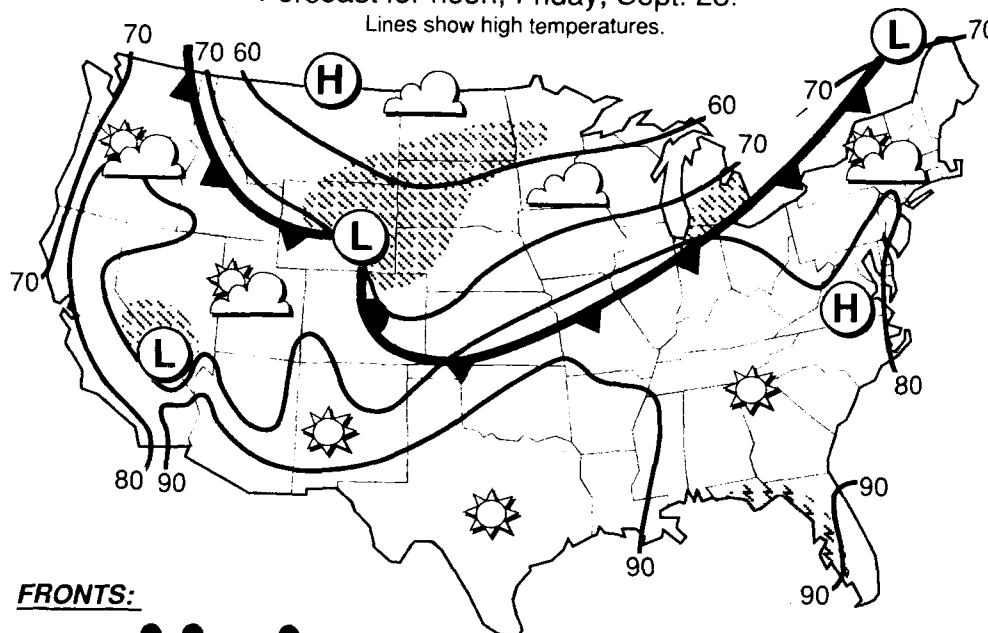

Perhaps art, like beauty, is in the eye of the beholder. Then again, maybe you need glasses.

The views expressed in the Inside Column are those of the author and not necessarily those of The Observer.

Benazir Bhutto, ousted prime minister of Pakistan, was ordered to stand trial on two more corruption charges in a mounting legal onslaught that could disqualify her from next month's election. Judge Wajihuddin Ahmed issued the notice for Bhutto to appear before the tribunal on Sunday to answer charges of misconduct and abuse of power during her 20-month administration. Bhutto's husband, Asif Ali Zardari, is also ordered to appear in court on Sunday charged with failing to cooperate in a police investigation, said the state news agency. Associated Press of Pakistan claimed the 38-year-old Zardari ignored several official requests to appear before the Federal Investigation Agency.

Pro-Cuban guerrillas claimed responsibility for the kidnapping of a congressman, the highest-level political official seized by rebels in 10 years of guerrilla insurgency, a Lima newspaper said Thursday. The Tupac Amaru Revolutionary Movement sent photos to the daily Pagina Libre showing Gerardo Lopez sitting beneath a rebel flag. Lopez, 34, who heads the governing Cambio 90 Movement congressional delegation, was dragged from his home Sunday by three rebels with machine guns. The Tupac Amaru used similar methods in the Sept. 11 kidnapping of a cement company executive, who is still missing, police said.

David Souter's nomination to the Supreme Court was approved by the Senate Judiciary Committee on Thursday with but one dissenting vote. The full Senate is expected to confirm him easily when it votes next Tuesday, the day after the court begins its session. Democrats as well as Republicans on the committee said they saw in President Bush's nominee a brilliant legal scholar and a man of good temperament and integrity. In the 13-1 vote, only Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., opposed him, saying he feared Souter would "solidify a 5-4 anti-civil-rights, anti-privacy majority."

William Webster, director of the Central Intelligence Agency, announced Thursday the appointment of Thomas Twetten, a career CIA officer, as deputy director for operations. The CIA said in a statement that Twetten, 55, on Jan. 1 will succeed Richard Stolz, 64, as chief of operations, the division that oversees espionage and covert activities. Stolz, who served in the agency from 1950 to 1981 and then returned to CIA duty in 1988, is retiring. Webster, in a statement, said Stolz "has made an enormous contribution in charting the role of human intelligence in a rapidly changing world. He has dealt with some extraordinarily challenging issues, serving the agency and the country with great distinction."

Faculty and staff have reported vandalism to their cars in lots D2 and D6, according to Chuck Hurley, during the past few weeks assistant director of Security. Stereo systems and hanging tags have been taken from the vehicles, in most cases. Security believes that it is the same group of two or three people committing the crimes because generally the same method is used during the break-ins. In most cases, a window is broken and then the material is taken, Hurley said.

Saint Mary's Freshmen elections resulted in a run-off for the President and Vice President tickets. ND graduate helps less fortunate in Central America

By MONICA YANT
Associate News Editor

When Michael Brennan left Notre Dame in 1984 with a degree in Government and International Studies, he never dreamed he would return as a registered nurse fundraising for the poor in Honduras.

Brennan has volunteered in Honduras for the past two years for CONCERN/America, an international development and refugee aid organization. The organization needs to raise $60,000 to $100,000 for emergency repair and rebuilding of bridges in Urraco Pueblo, on the northern coast of Honduras.

Brennan works as a teacher in an adult literacy program, while his wife teaches villagers to be health promoters. The duties of the 60 health promoters, four per village, is to instruct others in the basics of health care, such as how to prescribe antibiotics, give injections and pre-natal care.

"In our area, more than one-half of the children are malnourished," Brennan said, so increased awareness of health care techniques is of great urgency.

But it is the bridge problem which poses the most immediate threat to the Urraco Pueblo area. The community is accessible from the main road only by crossing four bridges, three of which are in disrepair, to the point of collapsing.

The bridges are impassable by motorized vehicles, he said.

Each year, the palm oil cooperatives that function in the area lose roughly the equivalent of $20,000, because they are unable to harvest or transport their crops due to the dilapidated bridges. Brennan said that the Hondurans also receive lower prices for their crops due to the cooperatives' loss, and must also pay higher prices for basic consumer goods.

At least three people have fallen and died from the bridges in the past five years. According to Brennan, a 53-year-old volunteer from California who had been in Honduras only a week recently fell while riding a bike across one of the bridges, breaking her wrist and fracturing her vertebrae. She had to be airlifted from the village.

Although Brennan said that Hundupalma, a Honduran-owned palm oil cooperative, is willing to finance half the project, outside assistance is needed to complete the repairs.

Brennan stressed that fundraising for projects more visible, such as malnutrition, "goes right to the heart-strings." With bridges, "it's harder, but it's important to see how important they are to their daily life."

The people of the communities will provide the labor for the project, on a volunteer basis. This is just one facet of the "self-empowerment" that Brennan hopes to instill in the Hondurans.

"The work we do is formation of the people, to educate them to get out and solve their problems," he said. Especially with the adult literacy program, Brennan said that, "the increased change in self-esteem is like giving sight to the blind."

Brennan has trained 50 villagers to be literacy teachers, and said they recently had "graduation" ceremonies for 150 adults who had learned to read and write.

Four years at ND afforded Brennan an interest in Latin American affairs and social work, he said. A stint with a Political Action Committee in Washington D.C. left him "empty, with a desire to embrace and live the Christian ideals" he developed at the University.

So Brennan headed to El Paso, working at a shelter for Central American refugees coming across the border. It was there, at the Catholic Enunciation House, where Brennan received his introduction to the Spanish language, Latin American people and the desire to help the less fortunate.

He and his new wife went to nursing school and left for Honduras to work for CONCERN/America. The organization utilizes non-salaried volunteers who are professionals in the fields of public health, nutrition, sanitation, education and community organizing.

Profs speak on human rights

By CLAIRE ROBINSON
News Writer

Studies of human rights violations need to take into account more than just the frequency of violations, according to Michael Stohl, visiting faculty fellow of the Institute for International Peace Studies.

Researchers should also note the severity of the violations, as well as the range, that is the size and character, of the population which is suffering from the violations, said Stohl.

Stohl spoke Thursday along with George Lopez, fellow at the Institute for International Peace Studies and associate professor of government and international studies. The two took turns speaking about the difficulties involved in the collection of data regarding gross violations of human rights.

The speakers proposed the exploration of the three different aspects of the human rights issue: severity, frequency and range.

According to the speakers, this approach remains untested as of yet, since past studies have only focused upon the frequency of human rights violations and have completely overlooked the severity of the violations and the particular group of the population to which the punishment is being administered.

Because of the narrow focus of human rights reports, an incomplete portrayal of human rights is being presented, said Stohl. For example, "The [decreasing] quantities of abuse may not indicate levels of improvement," he said. Judgments of improvements "should be based on qualitative, not quantitative analysis," Stohl said. Severity and frequency may both vary.

"The diverse agenda across the human rights groups really leads to diverse kinds of material being produced to tell us about human rights situations," said Lopez.

Lopez outlined the three general types of human rights groups as scholars, policy makers and activist groups such as Amnesty International. The concerns of each group include the victims, the ranking of human rights, and the data needs of the group, said Lopez. Each group approaches these subjects differently, corresponding to its needs "which tends to produce different kinds of information," he said.

"How do you help people decide whether things are getting better or worse?" asked Lopez. "These (varying) sources...present some conceptual problems and some data problems in having us really understand how human rights work."

Stohl and Lopez displayed political cartoons to demonstrate the widespread problems

FBI agent to visit ND, talk on white collar crime

By MICHAEL SCHOLL
News Writer

Although many people believe violent crime is America's worst problem, white collar crime may be causing more damage to the nation, according to William Clancy of the FBI.

Clancy, a Notre Dame alumnus, is currently assistant special agent in charge of the FBI's Chicago office. He will be on campus Oct. 3, to present a lecture entitled "The FBI and White Collar Crime."

Clancy has spent a good deal of his career investigating white collar crimes such as embezzlement and corporate fraud. He said the FBI devotes most of its resources to investigating white collar cases because such investigations are usually very complex.

Such investigations, said Clancy, need to be undertaken because white collar crime causes so much economic damage. The U.S. Chamber of Commerce estimates white collar crime costs the U.S. economy $40 billion a year.

Clancy said he wanted to speak to ND students, especially to those thinking of entering the business world, about the temptations they may face in the future to commit white collar crime.

"There has been an erosion of ethics in the business community," said Clancy, "and it's up to the future leaders of America to turn it around."

He will speak about possible careers in law enforcement and take questions from the audience regarding all facets of crime.

Clancy's lecture is being sponsored by the Notre Dame chapter of Beta Gamma Sigma, the national honor society for business students. Barry Keating, professor of finance and faculty advisor to the chapter, said Clancy is the first of many University graduates that the society hopes to bring back to ND to speak this year.

Exhibitionist caught by security

By MEGAN JUNIUS

Notre Dame Security has given the case concerning recent incidents of indecent exposure over to the St. Joseph's County prosecutor, according to Chuck Hurley, assistant director of Security.

The suspect was apprehended early Tuesday evening when two Saint Mary's students were stopped by a man in a car. The man asked the women for directions to the admissions building.

The students, who had heard about similar incidents at Notre Dame, called Saint Mary's security. Saint Mary's Security was able to stop the suspect's vehicle on the pretense of expired license plates. The suspect was then turned over to ND Security.

Thursday, ND Security contacted the women who had been approached by the suspect. These people were shown a photographic line-up. At least one victim identified the suspect as the man whom had indecently revealed himself to her, Hurley said.

If prosecuted, the suspect will most likely be charged with public indecency. He could be charged with either a Class A or Class C misdemeanor, depending on how flagrant the indecencies are considered. He could be imprisoned for up to one year and fined up to $5,000.

Aquino's killers convicted, 16 in all

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — A Philippine court on Friday convicted 16 people of murdering President Corazon Aquino's husband at the Manila airport and acquitted 20 others in the 1983 slaying.

The assassination of Sen. Benigno Aquino in broad daylight on his arrival home from self-imposed exile in the United States had enraged this nation and set the stage for former President Ferdinand Marcos' ouster in a popular uprising.

The verdict in the 3 1/2-year trial was announced on the first anniversary of the death of Marcos, who many Filipinos believe ordered the slaying of the Aquino, considered his chief political rival.

The anti-graft court sentenced the 16 to life imprisonment and ordered them to pay $300,000 to the late senator's heirs.

Those convicted included Brig. Gen. Luther Custodio, former chief of the airport security command who is terminally ill with cancer.

Among those acquitted was

Rep. Jose Aspiras, former tourism minister, former Air Transport Minister Jose Singson and Col. Arturo Custodio, former commander of Villamor Air Base.

Aquino was shot to death on Aug. 21, 1983, as he stepped from a China Airlines jet that brought him back to Manila after three years' exile in America, mostly in the Boston area.

Marcos claimed Aquino was slain by an alleged Communist assassin, Rolando Galman, who was himself shot to death moments after Aquino. Aquino had returned to the Philippines to challenge Marcos for leadership of the country.

The 16 were also convicted of killing Galman.

Aquino's killing galvanized the fragmented opposition against Marcos and set the stage for the February 1986 "people power revolution" that toppled the Marcos administration and propelled Mrs. Aquino into the presidency.

Marcos died in exile in Hawaii on Sept. 28, 1989.

Puerto Ricans return to homeland

Reverse immigration back to Puerto Rico is increasing said Ana Maria Diaz-Stevens at a seminar Thursday.

"Puerto Ricans that went to New York are now returning to their native land. We have not assimilated into the American Catholic Church," she said as she spoke of her own experiences as a Hispanic woman culturally adjusting to New York.

Everyone in attendance, both faculty and students, received a copy of Diaz-Stevens' informational essay on the topic. From her essay, she discussed the history of the development of the Catholic faith in Puerto Rico as well as the influence the Hispanic culture and Catholic symbols have had on their religion.

After her brief comments on the essay, the floor was opened to the audience where people raised cultural questions regarding the Catholicism of the third oldest diocese in the world. Even though Hispanics have failed to assimilate to the ways of the American bishops, said Diaz-Stevens, many Catholic Church leaders in the United States have adopted views of the conservative Puerto Ricans on controversial issues, such as abortion.

The discussion, "American Catholicism's Encounter with the Religion of the Puerto Rican People," was part of the American Catholic Studies Seminar and was sponsored by the Cushwa Center for the Study of American Catholicism.

Government admits error in weapons tests

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress approved a bill Thursday offering money and an apology to the so-called "victims of the Cold War" in some western states who may have developed cancer from nuclear bomb testing or uranium mining.

The bill, approved on voice vote by the House and sent to the president, is an admission that the government was wrong to test nuclear weapons above ground in Nevada while people were living in fallout areas downwind, said Rep. Barney Frank, D-Mass., who led debate for the measure.

It also recognizes the government's liability in allowing people to mine uranium for nuclear weapons without protective gear, he said.

"American citizens going about their business were exposed to radiation in degrees we would not allow now," said Frank. "Miners sent into the mines without even the slightest protection against the material they were being asked to mine."

The bill authorizes $100 million for a Radiation Exposure Trust Fund. Money for the fund would have to be appropriated in a separate bill.

The bill provides compensation for people who got cancer in certain time periods and:

—Spent two years — one year for some cancers — in downwind areas of Nevada, Arizona or Utah from nuclear tests between 1951 and 1958, or between June and July, 1962.

—Or mined uranium in Colorado, New Mexico, Arizona, Wyoming or Utah from 1947 to 1971.

The Justice Department would process claims and determine the amount due.

A driving force behind the legislation was Stewart Udall, former member of Congress and interior secretary, whose brother Rep. Morris Udall, D-Ariz., is chairman of the House Interior Committee.

Stewart Udall represented the uranium miners in a lawsuit against the federal government. The courts ruled the government was immune from prosecution because national security dictated a need for the uranium, but judges involved in the case urged the miners to seek redress from Congress.

Shirt

The tee shirt is navy blue and comes in both short and long sleeves. A design of the Miami and Notre Dame football helmets is on the front pocket of the shirts and a larger design on the back, said Joe Cassidy, director of Student Activities. The design was a result of work done by Notre Dame students.

The shirts should be ready for sale on campus by Oct. 8 or 9. Student prices are $6 for short-sleeve shirts and $8 for the long-sleeve version. The shirts will probably be sold in the residents halls and the dining halls, Cassidy said.

On football weekends the shirt will be sold to visitors for $10 and $12. The shirts will be sold in the Bookstore, in LaFortune Student Center and by the Athletic Department.

Anyone interested in sending Zheng-de cards or letters, should mail them to St. Paul's Retirement Community, Health Care Center Room 215, 3602 Ironwood Drive, South Bend, IN, 46614.

which are connected with the gathering of data for human rights reports. The cartoons depicted government officials of various countries attempting to conceal evidence or reward torturers.

"A great deal of potential data is hidden because the perpetrators of human rights violations obviously do not want us to know about where they stand," said Stohl. Therefore, no truly accurate data exists regarding human rights violations in any country, he said.

Former dictator Ceausescu's son freed from prison in Romania

BUCHAREST, Romania (AP) — A military court on Thursday released Nicu Ceausescu, the youngest son of the former dictator, from jail for three months because of failing health, the official Rompress news agency said.

The same court on Friday convicted Ceausescu, who is suffering from an advanced case of cirrhosis of the liver, of complicity in murder and sentenced him to 20 years in prison.

But it also agreed to Defense Attorney Paula Iacob's request for a third medical examination after two earlier ones reached contradictory conclusions about the 39-year-old Ceausescu's ability to withstand an extended stay in jail.

Thursday's decision apparently was a result of the latest medical examination. Ceausescu also is appealing the conviction.

He initially was charged in connection with 89 deaths that took place during December's revolution in the Transylvanian city of Sibiu, where he had been Communist Party chief since 1987.

His father, Nicolae Ceausescu, and mother, Elena, were executed in the revolution, which ended more than four decades of communism in Romania.

Nicu, who had earned a reputation as a hard-living playboy with political ambitions, also is recovering from a stab wound suffered when he was arrested Dec. 22.

He was held in prison hospitals during most of his five-month trial. According to Romanian law, Ceausescu is eligible for successive releases on health grounds until he either recovers or the sentence expires.

Prosecutors were given three days to appeal the decision to release him.

Congress OKs gulf military build up

WASHINGTON (AP) — After three weeks of painstaking effort, a House committee Thursday endorsed a resolution that supports President Bush's moves in the Persian Gulf crisis but avoids approving any future military action.

The approval of the resolution by the Foreign Affairs Committee came on a voice vote late in the day after an earlier effort unraveled amid fears that lawmakers might be issuing an implicit blank check for war.

The panel acted in a hastily called session after Chairman Dante Fascell, D-Fla., worked out final details with the president's national security adviser, Brent Scowcroft.

The resolution is expected to go before the House on Monday.

At the same time, a new $7.5 billion arms package Bush proposes to sell to Saudi Arabia was winning qualified support on Capitol Hill.

The Saudi arms assortment included 150 advanced M-1A2 tanks, six Patriot anti-missile batteries with 384 missiles, a dozen Apache ground-attack helicopters with 155 Hellfire missiles, 1,750 improved TOW anti-tank missiles with 150 launchers, nine multiple-launch rocket systems with 2,880 rockets, seven KC-130 tanker planes, 10 C-130 cargo planes and 10,000 assorted trucks, transporters and trailers.

In other developments on Capitol Hill, the Senate Armed Services Committee approved legislation that would provide about $400 million in special benefits for military personnel stationed in Saudi Arabia.

The bill also includes a provision setting up a system by which Congress and the Bush administration would oversee and manage the expected donations from foreign governments to defray the cost of Operation Desert Shield.

Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, said the committee adopted the measure to ensure that the Pentagon "couldn't go out and spend money on some weapons systems that are unrelated" to Desert Shield without congressional approval.

The benefits legislation includes $11 million in free postage, $265 million to make danger pay retroactive to Aug. 1 and $12 million to compensate some people for leave they cannot take.

The immediate package includes items deemed necessary to meet Saudi defense needs in the current crisis.

Soviets to discuss independence of Baltics

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet Prime Minister Nikolai Ryzhkov and Lithuanian officials have agreed to meet next week for long-awaited talks on the Baltic republic's drive for independence, news agencies reported Thursday.

Both sides declined to term Tuesday's meeting at the Kremlin "negotiations" or "consultations," the official news agency Tass and Baltic news organizations said.

Lithuania announced its independence March 11, but agreed to suspend the declaration in exchange for the lifting of an oil and natural gas embargo imposed by President Mikhail Gorbachev in May. Lithuanian officials also called for negotiations with the national government.

Talks between officials of another breakaway Baltic state, Estonia, and the Soviet parliament were suspended Sept. 6 after the Soviet side announced it had no authority to engage in "negotiations."

Agreement on the Lithuania meeting came Thursday in a phone conversation between Ryzhkov and Lithuanian Prime Minister Kazimiera Prunskiene.

White House, Congress seek budget compromise

WASHINGTON (AP) — White House and congressional negotiators narrowed differences Thursday over their budget problems with reported agreements on energy and luxury taxes and cuts in benefit programs. But key disputes remained to block a deal that would avoid bone-deep cuts in federal programs on Monday.

The two sides, racing the calendar, swapped offers into the evening, trying to put together the final pieces of a $500 billion, five-year deficit-cutting package.

Parts of the pact tentatively agreed to were an additional 8-cent-per-gallon gasoline tax; a small tax on the energy content of all fuels and 10 percent taxes on luxury items ranging from fancy cars to electronic equipment, said one official who asked to not be identified.

The federal gasoline tax is now 9 cents per gallon. States add additional taxes on top of that.

The energy tax would be three-quarters of a cent per million BTU, a measure of energy. It takes about eight or nine gallons of gasoline to yield a million BTU, so the extra tax would amount to about 0.08 cents per gallon, hardly enough to register at the pump.

Applied to high-quality coal burned by an electric utility, the tax would raise the cost of a 500-kilowatt-hour monthly electric bill for a small home by about 4 cents.

If successful before Monday, the bargainers would allow the government to sidestep $85 billion in spending cuts that the law would otherwise require. The slashes would result in furloughs for many of the 2.1 million federal civilian workers, including FBI agents and air traffic controllers.

Republicans were willing to accept a toned-down version of the cut in capital gains tax rates that President Bush has sought since he was a presidential candidate in 1988. The battle between Democrats and the administration over the tax has been the key barrier to a budget deal.

Capital gains — the profits from the sale of assets such as corporate stock or houses — are now taxed like ordinary income.

But Democrats seemed uncertain about whether in return, they would demand higher income tax rates on the wealthy or a limit on the tax deductions the well-to-do could take, said officials who asked to not be identified.

"I don't mean to put it in a negative way, but there is still a possibility of failure," said House Speaker Thomas S. Foley, D-Wash. "The odds are we will succeed."

Bush had argued that cutting capital gains tax rates would boost the economy. Democrats say the tax cut would benefit the rich and want higher taxes on the wealthy in return.

But the president was now willing to leave the rates constant if the increased value of an asset due to inflation is exempted, officials close to the talks have said. The proposal would apply only to property purchased after the plan became law.

This official, like all the others who discussed the various proposals Tuesday night, spoke on condition of anonymity.

Still undecided, however, was which tax boost the two sides would agree to as a trade-off.

Republicans have proposed limiting income tax deductions for the wealthy, said one official who asked to not be identified. In one variation of the idea, people earning more than $200,000 annually would only be able to claim 95 percent of the deductions to which they would otherwise be entitled.

Democrats are interested in that idea, but have also advanced two other proposals, said another official who demanded anonymity.

They remain interested in raising the top-bracket income tax rate on the wealthiest Americans from the current 28 percent. People who are somewhat less well-off pay 33 percent in their top bracket.

Democrats would like to boost the top rate on the rich, but they are willing to settle for a new level below 33 percent.

They have also proposed lifting the earnings ceiling above which Medicare taxes are not taken out of paychecks.

As part of Social Security withholding, people now pay a 1.45 percent tax to support Medicare on earnings up to $51,300 per year. They pay nothing on money they earn above that amount. Under the proposal, that ceiling would be lifted to $65,000 or $75,000.

The bargainers remained close to agreeing on cuts in defense and domestic programs.

The two sides appeared close to agreeing to reduce the military budget by $170 billion over the next five years from the amount it would need to stay abreast with inflation.

They were also trying to find a way to reduce spending on benefit programs by $120 billion over the five years.

One GOP suggestion for finding additional savings in benefit programs was to delay next year's cost-of-living increase for the 39 million Social Security recipients for three months.

Another official said Republicans had offered to delay cost-of-living increases for 60 days for all federal benefits, including Social Security, veterans' benefits, and federal retirement programs.

Democrats prefer increasing the tax on Social Security benefits. Recipients who earn $25,000 annually — $32,000 for couples — now must pay taxes on half their Social Security benefits. The Democratic proposal would boost that proportion to 85 percent.

Soviets pass religious reform

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet religious leaders said Thursday they are satisfied with the country's new law on freedom of conscience, but consider it a stopgap measure.

The law, which the national legislature approved in principle on Wednesday, calls a halt to decades of repression by forbidding the government from interfering in the practice of religion.

It also improves the legal status of religious organizations, guarantees the right to study religious doctrine and calls for a religious council to advise the government on human rights.

Vatican chief spokesman Joaquin Navarro said the new law "renders justice to millions of believers."

"The Ukrainian Catholic Church welcomes this first step toward true religious freedom," added church head Cardinal Myroslav Ivan Lubachivsky.

Russian Orthodox, Baptist and Jewish leaders told reporters at a press conference organized by the Foreign Ministry that the law is a major step forward. But they said it is complex and unclear on some points.

"I think this law will be of a transitional nature," said Georgi Komendant, president of the Soviet Baptist Society. "In due time, if everything is okay, it should be more brief, less complicated."

Komendant also said the spirit of the law — official tolerance for religion — is more important than the wording.

"This is a good law ... and as Baptists, we are satisfied with it," he said.

Metropolitan Pitirim, a leader of the dominant Russian Orthodox Church, called the law "unprecedented" and said "it can be considered successful as a first offspring" of democratic reforms. But, he added, "A lot of provisions need clarifying."

Among the ambiguities are whether public schools can teach about various religions, whether the military should hold services for religious soldiers and whether conscientious objectors will be allowed an alternative to military duty.

United States morally obligated to counter Hussein

Dear Editor:

I am writing this letter in response to Michael Masone's column of Sept. 24, concerning the Persian Gulf crisis. Mr. Masone argues that the United States must make a commitment to integrity and reevaluate its position in the Persian Gulf. He goes on to rebuff President Bush's decision-making and the unyielding patriotism of the American people.

The description of President Saddam Hussein which Mr. Masone offers us is a very justifiable one. He is indeed a "crazed . . . Dictator who will not be moved back" and "has not hesitated to use chemical weapons. . . on his own people." These realistic perceptions conjure up the image of another "crazed dictator," Adolf Hitler. Although seemingly far-fetched the comparison can be made. Both leaders had the rallied support of their troops and fought in the name of religion (Hitler's being Fascism). Hussein, as did Hitler, sees himself as an empire-builder; the one of oil producing countries, the other of Anglo-Saxon dominated countries. Many other parallels can be drawn but the similarity is evident.

The point is that the United States, which is the dominant world force militarily and diplomatically, must stand against President Hussein as it did against Hitler. If Mr. Hussein is allowed to continue to conquer smaller oil-producing countries, the devastating consequences would be felt throughout the world. It is for this reason that America, as the premiere world power, is obliged to lead the united world against the tyrannical acts of Saddam Hussein.

Another parallel which many people have been trying to draw is between the current situation in the Persian Gulf and the Vietnam War. The two situations are, however, fundamentally different. The United States involved itself in Vietnam on a moral basis. It was unnecessary to defend a democratic state against the threat of communism: a purely philosophical battle. The Iraqi invasion of Kuwait and the pursuing situation is much more than a moralistic battle. It is a threat to world balance and stability. Thus, critics of the Vietnam war cannot use the same arguments against current situations in the Middle East. It is imperative that the United States remain in Saudi Arabia and lead the fight against Hussein.

Obnoxious behavior of one reflects poorly on everyone

Dear Editor:

The MSU road trip is over, and I'm sure it holds fun memories for everyone who went, myself included. Unfortunately, there is one issue that marred an otherwise exciting day, and it must be addressed. This issue involves a Notre Dame student (I don't know his name, so I'll refer to him as "Mouth") who, in short, managed to offend everyone around him at the game.

We sat in section 2 in the end zone, and there was a bit of a dilemma as to whether or not we should stand for the whole game like we do at home. Of course all of the ND students wanted to stand, but there were many MSU fans who were not accustomed to this. Moreover, seated in front of me were four elderly Irish fans, who, even if they had wanted to, were probably incapable of standing for a three and a half hour game. Being the considerate people that we are, the ND students decided to be polite and sit down so everyone could see. I think everyone will agree that we cheered just as loudly and showed just as much spirit as we usually do when standing up.

This is where "Mouth" comes in. He yelled at MSU fans for complaining that they couldn't see. He swore unmercifully. He insulted fellow Notre Dame students for sitting down, and suggested that we leave if we didn't want to cheer when he thought we should.

At the beginning of the game, "Mouth" thought he was being cute when he led his buddies in a rousing chorus of "If You Can't Go To College, Go To State." It may be a fun song to sing in the ND student section at home, but it is totally uncalled for when you're surrounded by MSU fans. If people wanted to accuse us of being intellectual snobs, they'd have some pretty powerful ammunition.

This was the first time in my four years here that I was embarrassed to be an ND student. I think the rest of us did a good job of making up for "Mouth's" rudeness, but it's a shame that such an obnoxious person degraded the name of our fine university. I hope that people will read this and make a conscious effort to behave civilly at other away games. Coach Holtz has made our football team into a class act that everyone respects. It's a shame that an insensitive loud like "Mouth" can do such damage by having a little too much to drink and being a little too sure of his own importance.

Dear Editor:

Beginning with this Saturday's football game against Purdue University, we have four games in a row in Notre Dame Stadium.

One nice thing about being a Notre Dame student is that you can be introduced anywhere in the country and you never have to explain where you're from. People know Notre Dame, and they know the things it stands for. That's why it's important to remember the role of host and the courtesy that implies for the fans of visiting teams.

Bad taste in language, signs and T-shirts is beneath the dignity of Notre Dame students. Let us make sure that we show our support and enthusiasm for the team with the class people expect of us.

And after a game is over, please do not come to the team on the field; the team will come to you with its traditional gesture of thanks.

Opposition to U.S. policy in Gulf not reasonable

By Kevin Smant

There have been passionate arguments in this country concerning the crisis in the Persian Gulf, both in favor of and against the United States' commitment of troops to the region. Perhaps the most striking thing thus far concerning the opposition to President Bush's policy is that it emanates from both the American Right and Left. Now that we have (at least temporarily) settled in for a long autumn night in the Saudi Arabian desert, it would be a good idea to examine the arguments of the opponents of America's Persian Gulf strategy to see if we can draw any lessons from them.

1. "We should not risk war merely to protect oil supplies." And why not? The first goal of a nation's foreign policy must be to protect its national interests. The Iraqi threat to Kuwait and Saudi Arabia menaced over 10 percent of our oil imports and 40 percent of the world's oil reserves. America must have oil in order to function. These factors thus dictated an American response to Iraq's aggression.

Furthermore, it is irrelevant to our present military policy that the U.S. supposedly has no energy policy, that we are too dependent on foreign oil, etc. President Bush cannot indulge in pondering what might have been or finding scapegoats. He must deal with the situation as he finds it—and right now that requires protecting America's right to buy oil from the Persian Gulf.

2. "It is wrong for the United States to lead the operation. Rather, the job should be done by a United Nations peacekeeping force, or even better, by a strictly Arab force." This argument appears to agree with the end, but disputes the choice of means. This is its fatal flaw, for our most important goal should be to stop Saddam Hussein. Whether the U.S., the Egyptians, the French Foreign Legion or Daffy Duck leads the operation should not matter, as long as we accomplish the goal.

Some claim that the strong U.S. leadership alienates Arab nationalist sentiment and allows other Western nations to make minimal contributions to the buildup. However, Japan's recent contribution of $4 billion in cash, as well as commitments of arms and men from Syria, Egypt and Great Britain belie this claim. The fact is that the United States, as the world's leading superpower with its largest and most capable military establishment, is best equipped to lead this fight, and must lead.

3. "The United States should not risk war in order to restore a corrupt, undemocratic Kuwaiti regime." This view is utopian and unrealistic, and misses the point anyway. We do not deploy our forces in the Persian Gulf merely to restore the status quo ante in Kuwait. In fact, this is not even the primary reason. Rather, President Bush's statements clearly imply that we move in order to stop Iraqi aggression. Any country which wantonly attacks its neighbor, loots its medical and food supplies, seeks (and demonstrates) the capability to use both chemical and nuclear weapons, moves its troops to the border of yet another nation immediately after its conquest of a first, and then rounds up foreigners to use as "human shields" against its foes must be defeated. "Defeat" in this case must mean Iraq's complete withdrawal from Kuwait, which is the fundamental reason for the start of the crisis in the first place; ergo, this becomes the first and most important American demand.

And since when have we become so fussy about our allies? We fought in World War II alongside Josef Stalin's Soviet Union—far from a model of democracy. Many today urge the U.S. to support Nelson Mandela and the African National Congress in South Africa. Where is the guarantee that the ANC will be democratic? Conservative opponents of Mr. Bush's policy should remember that they supported our efforts to defend South Vietnam not so long ago. South Vietnam was not a democracy either; but it was better than the alternative, and the consequences of allowing it to fall proved very grave. Conservatives believed then that reality and the nature of the enemy required acceptance of the fact that our allies may not be angels. Is the situation really so different now?

Actually, there is one area in which President Bush could be criticized. Judging from his recent speeches, America's goals are twofold in this crisis: a complete withdrawal of Iraqi troops from Kuwait and the permanent reduction of Saddam Hussein's ability to threaten the peace and stability of the Persian Gulf. This would require substantial decreases in the size of the Iraqi army, as well as the removal of Iraq's chemical and nuclear weapon potential. These are just and laudable goals, I think, and should be pursued. Now it remains possible that Iraq will be forced to leave Kuwait as a result of the current economic blockade. But this is in no way a sure thing, and with Iran's apparent defection into the Iraqi camp, it could very well fail. And in any case, no serious strategist can argue that an economic blockade alone will force Saddam Hussein to abandon chemical and nuclear weapons facilities. More will be needed, and the American people should be aware of this.

It is the job of President Bush to prepare Americans for even more sacrifices ahead. There is a lot at stake in this crisis; we dare not come out the loser. Given political and military realities, we must use all that we have at our disposal. As a wise political observer once said, "We are bound to lose in the end if we refuse to try to win." To win, in this case, means Saddam Hussein's removal as a threat to the region—which will inevitably require U.S. military action against Iraq.

Palestine has drawn the shortest straw once again

By Rick Acker
In My Opinion

No matter who the winners in the Gulf crisis are, the Palestinians will be losers. One year ago, the Palestinians were riding high; they had established diplomatic relations with America, won the moral high ground from Israel by renouncing terrorism and recognizing Israel right to exist, and gotten the West to solidly denounce Israel's handling of the Palestinian "intifada." Now, all these accomplishments have come to nothing. Indeed, when the Gulf crisis is over, the Palestinians will be worse off than they have been in decades. There are three ways in which the crisis has hurt the Palestinians.

First, the Gulf crisis has replaced the Palestinian question as the most important Middle East issue. The world rarely has the energy or interest to deal with more than one Middle Eastern problem at a time. From 1979 to 1981, the Iranian hostage crisis was the "Middle East Crisis." From 1982 to 1985, the "Middle East Crisis" was the civil war in Lebanon. From 1985 to 1988, the "Middle East Crisis" was the Iran-Iraq War. From 1988 until the summer of 1990, the Palestinian intifada was "the Middle East Crisis." Now, Saddam Hussein has stolen the spotlight from the intifada, and no one has much time to help the Palestinians anymore. The Palestinians will have to wait for another period of relative calm in the Middle East before they will get more outside help in reaching their goals.

Second, the importance of Israel has risen dramatically since August. There is only one nation in the Middle East which has the military might to stop Iraq, and that nation is Israel. The Arabs are 0-5 versus the Israeli military. Iraq has gotten a lot stronger since the last time it took part in a war with Israel, but it is still not strong enough to beat the Israelis—and Saddam Hussein knows it. Also, Israel is a strong American ally. If an all-out war breaks out in the Middle East, Israel will, unlike some of our Arab allies, undoubtedly side with America. Israel would be, as one general put it, "our unsinkable aircraft carrier." To top it off, the West recently rediscovered the effectiveness of the Mossad (Israel's intelligence agency). The Israelis were the only ones who took Iraq's threats to invade Kuwait seriously, largely because of information collected by the highly efficient Mossad.

When things go well for the Israelis, they go badly for the Palestinians. The only way the Palestinians can achieve their goal of a Palestinian state is to get Israel to withdraw from the territories it occupied during the Six Day War in 1967. The Israelis won't do that unless they are pressured by America. And America is in no mood to pressure Israel now that war is imminent in the Gulf. Thus, Palestinian political aspirations have been put on hold at least until the end of the Gulf crisis.

Third, the Palestinians have decided to back Iraq. This spectacularly bad piece of political decision-making is certain to hurt the Palestinians for years to come. By siding with Iraq, the Palestinians have managed to alienate virtually the entire world at a time when they desperately need global support. The Palestine Liberation Organization, in the words of The Economist, "never blows a chance to blow a chance."

The chance the Palestinians have blown this time may be their last for a long time. The tens of millions of dollars which flow to the Palestinians each year from the wealthy oil states of the Gulf is almost certain to be reduced, perhaps even cut off entirely. Likewise, the financial and military help which the Palestinians receive from the Soviet Union will drop markedly. The political help which the Palestinians have gotten from Western Europe and America will also vanish, taking with it any chance of a Palestinian settlement with Israel. As Elias Freij, the Palestinian mayor of Bethlehem, put it, "We, the Palestinians, are now entering a deep freeze of 60 degrees below zero."

The Palestinian deep freeze may thaw sooner than Freij expects. There is some talk of a joint resolution of the Gulf crisis and the Palestinian question, but this is doubtful. America and its allies oppose such a solution because it would turn Iraqi defeat into victory and would make Saddam Hussein an Arab hero. Israel opposes the idea because it would involve Israel giving up its occupied territories, which would damage Israel's military position against Iraq. Thus, the hopes of the Palestinians will probably stay frozen for a long time.

The Palestinians have been dealt a bad hand by the Gulf crisis and have played it poorly. The Gulf crisis has distracted world attention from the plight of the Palestinians and has greatly increased the importance of Israel. The Palestinians have only made things worse by siding with Iraq. The Palestinians have been called "the tragic Arabs"—an appropriate name for them today.

university-issued phones. I am not sure how to respond to the little stuffed Fighting Irish figurines found in the back of the bookstore. I can only describe these as voodoo dolls. Isn't voodoo against Dulac? Though, I must admit, the bookstore does come in handy when one needs to buy presents for someone. My father's birthday is coming up in two weeks, and I, like every college student, have agonized in the past to find my dad a meaningful gift. No more. For a mere $16.95, one can buy what every father covets - a Knute Rockne bust.

Why, just the other day, my dad said to me, "Gee, Nancy. If you ever happen run across a bust of Knute Rockne, nab one for me." Or, if your father already has Knute Rockne's bust, you can always get that timeless gift - a giant, furry Notre Dame hockey puck.

The Hammes Notre Dame Bookstore - you've laughed here, you've cried here, you've spent your entire summer savings here. It's as much a part of Notre Dame life as Theodore's and meatless baked ziti.

There is no better place than the bookstore to purchase deodorant, needlepoint equipment, and the highly revered notes of Cliff. Which brings me to my final question: Who is Cliff anyway, and how do we know he takes good notes?

Until asked to write this review, the only time I had ever heard of Rocco's Restaurant was the time a friend hid out in the bathroom to avoid being arrested when the party she was attending got busted.

Was I missing out. The menu boldly proclaims "The First Original Pizza In Town—The Best Pizza In Town!", and this claim is certainly well deserved.

Located at 537 N. St. Louis Street, Rocco's is easily accessible from campus (or when fleeing from a raid). The owners, Rocco and Julia Ameduri, have been serving up their fine pizza since 1951, with little change in recipe, quality or decor.

The restaurant itself is rather small, but is liberally decorated with pictures (the daughters' First Communion portraits and the one of the Pope are my personal favorites), Notre Dame paraphernalia, and huge wall murals of the Italian country side.

Everything is red, green, or orange, including the doors to those now-famous bathrooms. The booth seats are Naugahyde, the tablecloths are vinyl, and the glasses and plates are plastic. Frank Sinatra is on the juke box. It is the consummate cheesy (no pun intended) Italian restaurant. The kind of restaurant that categorically has great Italian food. Rocco's is no exception.

My most esteemed dining companion/driver and I started with a selection from Rocco's fairly comprehensive wine list. We chose a nice blush as a compromise, being unsure of the correct wine to compliment pizza. In addition to wine, Rocco's offers domestic and imported beers, and the standard soft drinks and coffee.

The menu itself is very extensive, offering many different pasta dishes, sandwiches, and specials such as veal scallopine and scampi. Every Friday and Saturday, home made baked lasagna is offered as a special treat. The prices for these items range from $3 (a meatball sub) to $12.50 (the scampi). Diners get their money's worth of the pasta. We saw huge platefuls of spaghetti, ravioli, and mostaccioli being taken to anxiously awaiting customers.

Then there's the pizza. Rocco's offers both thick and thin crust, and a variety of toppings from which to choose. No matter what your personal preferences, you won't be disappointed. We opted for the thin crust with mushrooms. It was fabulous. The crust was crisp, the sauce unbelievably fresh, and the cheese and mushrooms abundant. The average pizza cost is about $12.00, depending on what you choose.

Rocco's also offers cannoli and cheese cake, but unfortunately, time and stomach capacities wouldn't allow for dessert. Be forewarned—Rocco's doesn't accept personal checks or credit cards, so if you are hungry, a stop at the cash machine might be in order.

All in all, Rocco's is a great place for a great meal. The food, the ambiance, even Rocco and Julia themselves all contribute to the overall experience. It's a lot like going to an Italian grandmother's house for dinner, if only Grandma had seating for 50 and neon beer signs in her window.

as well as organize." These skills were beneficial to Murphy in the development of the TANC program as well as her involvement with the "Navy Kids" program.

She also mentioned how another teacher from the University of Notre Dame had a great influence on her. "Dr. Lewis Soens helped me a great deal. He was exceptional."

In response to this being the Year of Women at Notre Dame, Murphy said that she is proud to be one of the first women to graduate as a lay person from Notre Dame, but she also acknowledges the nuns who earned degrees from Notre Dame. "It is about time that nuns are given credit as human beings," said Murphy.

In a world where few people can find time to help others in need, Mary Murphy is a person who is making a difference by sharing her wealth of knowledge and kindness.

What if the Lord had been a woman?

As a priest who cares about women's rights, I hope to God that I have the humility to be a good listener.

Does anyone have the patience to answer some questions? For example, would Christianity, as we know it, have been different if Jesus had been a woman? When you consider the violence He met, and the sacrificial death, wouldn't the picture have looked even uglier if the victim had been a woman, hassled to death by bullies?

One summer, living in Greenwich Village, a young woman told me how she had been grilled by the police after she had reported being raped.

"Had she struggled and were there signs of struggle on her body?" She explained that the rapist had held a knife on her, threatening to cut her, if she didn't submit.

"Had the alleged perpetrator cut the clothes off her?" No. "Had he ripped them off, then?" No. Terrified of being slashed, she took them off herself. "She undressed herself without any kind of struggle?" Her struggle was with fear that the rapist would kill her.

"Had the alleged perpetrator physically harmed her, wounded her even slightly, or left pricks on the skin with his knife?" With that question, the young woman lashed out at him, "No, officer, the bastard merely raped me."

She explained to me, "Alleged perpetrator is language the District Attorney uses on television to refer to a suspect to save himself from being sued. Hearing him say it to me implied I might be lying about being raped."

Father Robert Griffin

Letters to a Lonely God

"But you came out of it without a scratch on your body?"

"Officer, I'm sorry I didn't have the heart to act brave after he warned me my boyfriend could find my body in his hallway if I got smart."

"So she was coming from her boyfriend's apartment?" Yes.

"How did the perpetrator know that?" He must have been watching me. "Had she spent the night in her boyfriend's apartment?" Yes. "But does that prove I wasn't raped?"

The officer shrugged his shoulders, implying that if she stayed over night, that proved she wasn't a virgin. She may not have been a tramp, either, but she certainly had a track record.

When she finished her story, reported here verbatim, as best as I can remember it, she had tears in her eyes from recalling the humiliation she was subjected to by New York's finest.

Years ago in Boston, a woman asked me if I would go to court on behalf of her husband, who was in jail waiting to go on trial for stealing furniture.

Visiting him, I found out that he had spent time behind bars as a lad of eighteen. "Why were you there?" "I served ten years for raping the minister's daughter." "Were you guilty?" "I only beat her up for infecting me with venereal disease."

The man had a history of lying; how could I trust him not to lie to me? When he died in a street fight two months after the judge entrusted him to me for rehabilitation, I felt his widow should have inscribed, "Born to lose," on his headstone.

The sun never sets on the battered women in the world. Our Lord shames the dirty old men, ready to stone the woman taken in adultery. In the Old Testament, we read of the virtuous Susanna, falsely accused by dirty old men of committing adultery; this was their way of getting even with her for refusing to sleep with them.

Civilization itself bears witness to the sexual tension underlying the violence that men offer women. Would it have seemed otherwise if the Man of Sorrows had been a woman? Imagine the Suffering Servant as a woman mocked and spit upon, scourged, and crowned with thorns, hanging naked upon the Cross. Would not the accounts of the Passion then seem like prime matter for a case study in rage we would find hard to read?

Calvary was the mankind's great high noon when a shootout took place that was as cosmic as Armageddon. The Son of God rode into town to play sheriff; surprisingly, he didn't wear shootin' irons; in fact, He was as meek as a lamb. Every gun-slinger on Main Street took potshots at Him; when the smoke cleared, there was nothing to do with the remains of that lawman plugged with holes, but to plant Him.

To the surprise of His enemies, He wasn't ready to start pushing up daisies. To the surprise of Death, which is mankind's archenemy, the love in Him was stronger than Death. Because of the love in Him, Death itself would one day die.

In the shootout at Calvary, the principal actors were God, Who so loved the world that He sent His Son, and the Prince of Darkness, who fathers the sin in all of us, represented at Calvary by the mobs yelling, "Crucify Him."

If the crowds had been yelling, "Crucify Her," Calvary might have seemed a heightened version of the Susanna story, this time with the elders having a field day with the blameless daughter of Israel.

Could this be the reason the Church is nervous about ordaining women as symbolic figures representing Christ as the victim of Calvary's violence? This is an argument that the religion editor of the London Times has used. The Catholic Church is more enlightened than the Times religion editor. I'm tempted to believe that what the Church is, is a century of women, or even a millennium, if that's how long it takes to reform the paternalistic chauvinism that's been passed down in the Church like the apostolic succession.

When God writes the scenario for a revelation, He's artistic enough to keep the imagery consistent. This Incarnate Word of His is conscious of God as His Abba, Whose image He is. Abba seems like a non-negotiable term of affection that keeps the New Testament on track. After that, revelation comes to us heavy with male images, thus saving the Church from ambiguities that could confuse the imagination.

I mean, if God is more than father and mother, which He is, how do you think of God or imagine God in a non-sexist way as Abba or the Good Shepherd, without contributing to the sexual tension which was not, nor should it have been, the main issue in the battle between worlds at Calvary? How do you read the parables that begin: "A man had two sons?"

How long has it taken Notre Dame to become coeducational? How long is it going to take to reform a chauvinist Church? Must we impoverish the Church of its devotional language before the reform can begin? Or should we pray to the Holy Spirit to send us new kinds of images and devotional language, and even a new sacrament of orders that will give Catholic women their place in the sun?

Iconoclasm, as Catholics should know by now, is stupidity that leaves tradition trashed. Don't Anglicans feel impoverished by the iconoclasts who re-wrote their prayer book and their King James Bible, both masterpieces of language about God?

apiece, with the Irish winning 4-1 last year at Moose Krause Stadium. Indiana downed the Irish 2-0 in Bloomington in 1988. On the other hand, Louisville topped the Irish 1-0 at Notre Dame last year in the first-ever varsity-level meeting between the two teams.

"Indiana is a very recognizable soccer name because of the success which their men's program has enjoyed," explained coach Petrucelli. "I'm not looking forward to playing them at their place because they are very experienced."

Meanwhile, the Irish will have their hands full with 1-7 Louisville. The squad from Kentucky has lost 2-0 to Dayton, 4-1 to Xavier, and 2-0 to Wright State—all of which are ranked in the Top 10 of the Central region.

"Louisville has been struggling with winning games lately," said Petrucelli. "They don't have many wins, but they play a very tough schedule. You shouldn't just look at their record—they are a much better team than their record shows. They have really changed their early-season trend of scoring lots of goals. But going into games like this, our biggest opponent is ourselves. If we play to our abilities, we should win these games."

Keys to the Notre Dame cause this weekend include consistent play of the defense and a productive offense. So far this season, the Irish have held their opponents to a mere 13 goals on 50 shots.

Additionally, only four of the scores surrendered by the Notre Dame defensive unit have come in the second half of play.

The Irish, on the other hand, have amassed 31 goals on 190 shots, while notching 20 assists. Notre Dame also has a 45-22 edge in corner kicks attempted. In fact, the Irish have dominated their opponents in most statistical categories.

One significant category is the goals-against-average, where sophomore keepers Michelle Lodyga and Cara Lewis sit atop a pleasant 1.39 GAA.

"If you look at the defensive side of things, the kids in the back have been playing very hard and very smart," said Petrucelli. "But every once in a while, especially early in the game, we just tend to have some lapses. It seems that when we make a mistake in the back, the other team scores. For the most part, I'm happy with the backfield. It's only been a few lapses that have cost us goals."

"A lot of our defensive breakdowns have to do with the youth of the players, but they are starting to mature. We will be much better—we are already much better than we were the first day of the season. I only see us getting better."

Added Molly Lennon: "We're definitely moving upward. We're much better players and a much better team, because we're improving every day. We're more serious and more devoted than we have been in the past. We realize that this is an important part of our lives, and we must give 100% as long as we play."

"It's difficult when the level of competition fluctuates, though. It really is hard to play a team like Marquette and then play a team that is maybe not on the same level and still accomplish what we need to each day."

On offense, the Irish are coming off of a record-setting 59 shot demolition of I.U.S.B. Yet considering the character of this Notre Dame team, that shot total should come as no surprise.

"We spent all day Tuesday working on shooting," continued Petrucelli. "We worked on taking chances when we have them. I thought that we held the ball too much against Marquette. I also think that because our work on shooting in practice is the reason why we set that record. These kids just do everything you ask of them."

"Of course, it's also very important to realize that not just one person has carried our offense. There are five people scoring goals for us. Before the season, everybody thought that they could stop us by stopping Susie, but that isn't true. Nobody has stopped her yet, and everybody else is scoring anyways."

Sox beat Tigers, tie Jays in AL East

DETROIT (AP)—The Boston Red Sox withstood Cecil Fielder's 49th home run of the season and pulled even with the idle Toronto Blue Jays atop the American League East by defeating the Detroit Tigers 3-2 Thursday night.

Tom Bolton, knocked out in the second inning of his previous start, held Detroit to an unearned run and four hits in seven innings and Mike Greenwell hit a two-run double in Boston's three-run fourth.

With six games remaining in the regular season, the Red Sox and Blue Jays have 84-72 records. They begin a three-game series in Boston on Friday night.

Bolton (10-5) struck out five and walked one. Dennis Lamp started the eighth for Boston and surrendered Fielder's home run into the first row of the upper deck in left field.

Rob Murphy came on and walked the only batter he faced but Jeff Gray got the final out in the eighth. Jeff Reardon got the final two outs of the game for his 19th save and first since July 20.

The Red Sox scored all their runs in the fourth inning, chasing Detroit starter Steve Searcy (2-7). Carlos Quintana singled, Dwight Evans doubled and Ellis Burks had an infield single to load the bases for Greenwell, who hit a two-run double. Burks scored on a sacrifice fly by Tom Brunansky.

White Sox 6, Brewers 4

CHICAGO—Bobby Thigpen extended his record to 55 saves with one perfect inning and the White Sox set a major league mark of 65 saves. Frank Thomas' sixth home run of the season snapped a 4-4 tie in the third inning. It came off Tom Edens (5-3), who relieved Kevin Brown in the second inning, and extended Thomas' hitting streak to 10 games.

The White Sox won 11 of the 12 games with Milwaukee this season. They added a run off Edens in the sixth on consecutive singles by Ron Karkovice, Robin Ventura and Scott Fletcher.

The former major league record of 64 saves in a season was set by the Oakland Athletics in 1988.

Orioles 5, Indians 3

CLEVELAND—Dave Johnson won on the road for the first time since July 28 and Gregg Olson set a club record with his 35th save. Johnson (13-8), Baltimore's winningest pitcher, yielded two runs and eight hits over eight innings, including Joel Skinner's home run. Olson gave up a run and three hits in the ninth and broke the mark of 34 saves set by Don Aase in 1986.

John Farrell (4-5) was the loser in his second start after spending almost three months on the disabled list because of tendinitis in his right elbow. He yielded four runs and seven hits in 4 1-3 innings, including Mike Devereaux's 11th home run in the third inning and consecutive RBI singles by Leo Gomez, Billy Ripken and Steve Finley in the fifth.

Red Sox base runner Carlos Quintana, left, tries to slide past Cleveland catcher Sandy Alomar on Wednesday. Boston beat Cleveland 7-2 and Detroit 3-2 Thursday night, tying Toronto for the division lead.

Scott Chiamparino earned his first major league win against the team that let him go. Chiamparino (1-2), who came to Texas from Oakland last month in the Harold Baines trade, yielded four runs and seven hits in seven innings.

The Rangers had scored only three runs for Chiamparino in 24 1-3 innings but raked Scott Sanderson (17-11) for eight runs in three innings. Jack Daugherty and Pete Incaviglia hit consecutive homers in the Rangers' five-run first. Rickey Henderson and Jamie Quirk homered for Oakland.

Reds 4, Braves 2

CINCINNATI—The Cincinnati Reds reduced their magic number for winning the National League West to two Thursday night by beating the Atlanta Braves 4-2 on Glenn Braggs' two-run homer.

The Reds' sixth victory in seven games opened their lead in the West to five games over idle Los Angeles with six to play.

Cincinnati was handcuffed on four hits through five innings by Steve Avery (3-10), who was protecting a 2-1 lead while pitching with a blister on his hand. But the rookie walked Eric Davis to open the Reds sixth, and Braggs hit the next pitch over the left-center wall for his sixth homer.

Tom Browning (15-9) settled down after pitching erratically in the first three innings. The left-hander allowed seven hits — all in the first three innings — and struck out two in seven innings. Browning improved to 12-3 lifetime against Atlanta. Rob Dibble pitched two innings for his 11th save.

Pirates 3, Cubs 2

PITTSBURGH—Pittsburgh reduced its magic number to four as rookie left-hander Randy Tomlin survived a shaky start and Sid Bream hit a tie-breaking double in the sixth inning to lead the Pirates past the Chicago.

Andy Van Slyke added a run-scoring double and Bobby Bonilla drove in his 117th run as the Pirates swept the three-game series. The Pirates have won seven of their last eight.

The Pirates, nearing what would be their first National League East title in 11 years, finished 14-4 against the Cubs. Pittsburgh plays three weekend games in St. Louis, then finish the season at home with three games against the second-place Mets.

Mets 6, Expos 0

MONTREAL—New York stayed three games behind Pittsburgh as Ron Darling turned in his second straight solid start to help the Mets beat Montreal.

Men ready for Invite challenge

By BARBARA MORAN
Sports Writer

The National Catholics will be the second meet of the season for the 10th-ranked Irish, who captured a 20-41 upset over Georgetown in their first competition. The Irish, who have won the Invitational for the past two years, will be defending their title against a field of 20 prominent Catholic institutions from around the country, including Boston College and St. Thomas College.

Notre Dame will receive a boost due to the absence of 16th-ranked Providence, which finished second last year. Irish head coach Joe Piane, however, asserts that there will be plenty of competition for his team despite the absence of the Friars, and he expects a strong challenge from Boston College, last year's third place finisher.

"Boston College is returning six of their top seven runners, and they're awful good," said Piane. "They're running with the best team they've ever had."

Notre Dame senior captain Mike O'Connor agreed with his coach, and also expressed confidence in the team's ability to capture the title again.

"BC is one of the better teams in the country," said O'Connor. "They're a whole different team than last year—they're a lot better. But we should definitely be in the hunt to win the meet. We have the ability to repeat."

The outcome of the meet may be affected by injuries to two key members of the Irish squad. J.T. Burke, who took seventh in this meet last year, is recovering from a summer illness and has yet to compete this season. Mike O'Connor, last year's top finisher for the Irish, is suffering from a sore hip flexor and was unable to practice for several days. He is, however, definite for the meet, and it is unknown whether his injury will have any effect on his racing.

This meet is an important one for the Irish, who are focused on their season goal of competing in the NCAA tournament. Both Piane and O'Connor were pleased with the team's current ranking, and believed that the team should climb a few notches should the Irish win today's tournament.

"It (the ranking) is pretty good for this time in the season," said O'Connor. "It shows the country that we have the strength to get to Nationals and do some damage when we get there."

Cahill

you want to do well."

This ethic has worked for Cahill, who finished third for the Irish in their first meet of the season against Georgetown. But despite his strong finish, his season goals are focused on the team's rather than just his own improvement.

"Last year was real disappointing," explained Cahill. "We were doing well all season and everyone expected us to go far. We didn't even make it to the NCAA's. I want to run the best I can to help the team make it to the NCAA's this year. Every meet until then is just a step to that final goal."

"We have the team and the people to make it to NCAA's, and once we're there, we have the ability to do well. And if the team does well, I'll do well."

The cross country teams, with men shown here at home in a dual meet with Georgetown, plays host to the National Catholics this weekend.

Men's golf travels to Northern Invitational

Observer Staff Report

The Notre Dame men's golf team will travel to Purdue this weekend for the Northern Collegiate Invitational.

Irish coach George Thomas says that the Northern Collegiate, like the rest of the fall schedule, will be used to evaluate players so they will have a good idea of who will be ready to contribute in the spring.

"We're trying to give everybody a chance," Thomas says. "The battles for the fourth, fifth and sixth positions are real dogfights right now."

Junior Mike O'Connell, who won the 36-hole Notre Dame Campus Golf Championship last weekend, and senior captain Paul Nolte are expected to lead the Irish in this weekend's 54-hole tournament.

Thomas anticipates that Big 10 schools Ohio State, Wisconsin and Indiana will be prime contenders in the tournament. Altogether 22 schools will participate in the Northern Intercollegiate, playing 18 holes on Friday, Saturday, and Sunday.

"Our purpose here is primarily to sort out the top seven players," Thomas says.

Women at Michigan St.

Special to the Observer

The Notre Dame women's golf squad resumes its schedule this weekend when it heads to East Lansing, Mich. for the Michigan State Spartan Invitational.

In its third week of tournament competition last week the team finished ninth in the Illinois State Invitational held in Normal, Ill. Its two-day, 36-hole tally of 679 was 49 strokes behind tournament winner Northern Illinois's 630. The Irish shot 348 on the final 18, compared to a first-day total of 331.

The Irish will be paced by sophomore Kathy Phares, who led all Notre Dame golfers with a two-day tally of 161 at Northern Illinois. That score earned her an eighth-place individual finish.

Other golfers expected to shoot well in the Spartan Invitational include senior Roberta Bryer (who shot a 170 at Northern Illinois), and freshmen Crissy Klein and Alicia Murray.

Edmonton goalie suspended

NEW YORK (AP) — Calling his conduct "dishonorable and against the welfare of the league," NHL president John Ziegler on Thursday suspended Edmonton goaltender Grant Fuhr for a year for using drugs.

But Ziegler also left the door open for an early reinstatement by Feb. 18, 1991, should the All-Star goaltender meet certain conduct requirements. And the NHL president gave the Oilers a chance to challenge his decision.

"This has indeed been a most sad case," Ziegler said in a prepared statement. "Mr. Fuhr has been an All-Star player for most of his career. He admits he has made a major mistake and is working hard to redeem."

In his statement, Ziegler said Fuhr used "cocaine, an illegal drug" for approximately six to seven years prior to August 1989.

"This use was sporadic, sometimes 'bingeful,' but never at an addictive level."

The time period of Fuhr's admitted substance abuse came while he was considered one of the world's best goaltenders, and while he was backstopping the Oilers to four Stanley Cups.

He was not immediately available for comment.

Ziegler also said he had proof that Fuhr had not used any illegal drug "for over one year."

"I have given consideration to the fact that he has been drug free for 12 months," Ziegler said. "I have given weight to the fact that he has come forward and is facing this matter head on."

But Ziegler also said that he considered the long period of Fuhr's substance abuse.

"His conduct went on for a period of six to seven years," Ziegler said. "It went on in spite of a clear league policy that if you use illegal drugs you will be suspended."

"Mr. Fuhr's actions were intentional and were in defiance of this policy. He must suffer the consequences."

Ziegler, however, also said that "the Oilers and Mr. Fuhr may apply for a commutation of this order by presenting a written application to the President of the NHL on or before Feb. 1, 1991, but not prior to Jan. 15, 1991."

"If it can be demonstrated to the President's satisfaction that Mr. Fuhr has, in the interim, conducted himself in a manner so as not to have caused dishonor or prejudice to the league, the suspension will be lifted and he will be reinstated effective Feb. 18, 1991."

SPORTS BRIEFS

Student tickets and IDs will be checked very closely at Saturday's Notre Dame-Purdue football game, according to the ticket office. Each person using a student ticket must show his or her identification. If confiscated, the IDs and tickets will go directly to the Office of Student Affairs.

Red Sox vs. Blue Jays: It'll go down to the wire

BOSTON (AP)—One side promises to "fight and scratch." The other vows to "fight to the death."

Get ready for Toronto vs. Boston in a three-game weekend series at Fenway Park that could decide the winner of the American League East.

With six games left in the season, this series has players from both teams talking about what could have been. And what might be.

"Everybody has to wait until the very end," Toronto's Mookie Wilson says. "The series might not decide anything at all. If either of us had been consistent over a month, we'd be ahead."

The Blue Jays, smarting from two straight losses in Milwaukee, were off Thursday, while the Red Sox defeated Detroit in a makeup rescheduled because of last spring's training camp shutdown.

"We're gonna fight and scratch and give it everything we've got," said Boston's Mike Greenwell. "If it's meant to be, it will happen."

"It's important for us to go in and just fight, fight to the death," said Toronto pitcher David Wells. "We can't let up."

"It's in our hands, what more can you ask for," Toronto manager Cito Gaston said. "We can't worry about it."

"I'm sure they would like to be four games up and we'd like to be four games up. It just didn't happen that way. In your wildest dreams, would you picture us to be in this situation?" said Boston's Jody Reed.

"It's anybody's ballgame," Greenwell said. "You couldn't ask for a better scenario—unless we beat them three straight and get this thing over with."

The Red Sox led the Blue Jays by 6 1/2 games early this month, an advantage built with a 10-game winning streak that started with three victories in Toronto.

However, after a sweep by Oakland and the loss of Roger Clemens with shoulder tendinitis, the Red Sox went into a swoon. They lost 15 of 21 games, falling 1 1/2 games behind Toronto.

Then, with just their fourth victory in 12 games, a 3-2 decision over Detroit Thursday, they pulled even with the Blue Jays.

"We've been on a pretty good roller coaster ride, haven't we?" Reed asked. "We've been able to keep things in perspective. If we didn't, we could be buried right now."

The Red Sox have dominated the Blue Jays so far this season, leading the season series 8-2.

The two rivals split two games in Toronto June 19-20, leaving the Blue Jays with a 2-game lead.

Then, on June 25, the Red Sox ended the Blue Jays' 15-game Boston winning streak and went on to a four-game series sweep and a 2 1/2-game lead.

Then, after losing in Toronto on Aug. 23, Boston won the next three games to go from one game ahead to four games in front.

"Up and down," said Wilson. "First place for a day or a week. They're there for a day or a week. It was bound to come down to this. It's just one of those weird seasons, and no one knows why."

The Blue Jays expect to have third baseman Kelly Gruber back from a bout with the flu for Friday's game, while the Red Sox hope to have third baseman Wade Boggs back. Boggs had to leave early because of lower back pain in a game Tuesday night.

Toronto's Dave Steib (18-6) and Boston's Mike Boddicker (16-8) were named to open the series. Steib is 1-0 with a 4.91 ERA in three starts against the Red Sox this year. Boddicker is 1-0 in one start against Toronto.

Clemens (20-6), sidelined since Sept. 4, is scheduled to go Saturday against the Blue Jays' Jimmy Key (12-7). Boston's Greg Harris and Toronto's Bud Black, recently acquired from Cleveland, are Sunday's probable pitchers.

DiLucia goes to Texas for All-American tournament

By FRANK BARLETTA
Sports Writer

King David has moved south to stake his territory in distant lands.

Notre Dame tennis star David DiLucia was scheduled to compete Thursday in the Texas All-American tournament in Austin. DiLucia, the number-one singles' player on the men's tennis squad, was seeded second in the tournament and received a bye in the first round.

DiLucia's only competition so far this season came last weekend at home when Notre Dame played host to the Tom Fallon Invitational, at which he won the A-flight singles championship.

DiLucia, an All-American last season, won five straight set matches on his way to the championship, including a 6-2, 6-4 triumph over sophomore teammate Chuck Coleman in the finals.

DiLucia was scheduled to play

Hubert Karrasch of the University of Texas. Karrasch, the Longhorns' number-five man, finished last season with a record of 32-12 in singles competition. The results of the match were unavailable at press time.

Irish tennis coach Bob Bayliss expects an excellent fall campaign from DiLucia.

"David's become a more versatile player and found different ways to beat his opponent," said Bayliss. "He's also put on some weight and gotten stronger since his freshman year, and that should help him avoid some of the injuries that slowed him in the fall of his first two seasons."

The Texas All-American will continue over the weekend, with the finals on Sunday.

The men's tennis team will next see action October 5, when they face last year's defending national champions, the Stanford Cardinal, at the Eck Tennis Pavilion as part of Notre Dame's Weekend of Champions.

Belles volleyball fights back

By EILLEEN MCGUIRE
Sports Writer

The Saint Mary's volleyball team (6-3) defeated Division II St. Joseph's College at Rennselaer in a match that transpired down to the wire.

Saint Mary's won the first match 17-15 and then lost the next two 5-15, and 12-15. But the Belles came back strong and won the last two games to end the match 15-12, 15-13.

Senior Belle Katy Killilea led the team with 22 kills, three service aces and eight digs. Sophomore teammate Karen Lorton also proved herself strong by contributing 18 kills, three service aces and seven blocks. Senior Michelle Sibliski had 11 kills and seven digs and freshman Michelle Martino added 45 assists.

Coach Sue Medley praised her team.

"They were a very good team, but we outlasted them," she said. "We played to come back." In reference to the rest of the season, coach Medley stated, "The rest of the season will be just as tough. It will be very important to try and keep raising our level of play."

Sophomore Amy Persin, who is currently on the disabled list, added, "We came out ready to play in the first game. We didn't give up when we were down two games to one—and that made the difference. The teamwork and enthusiasm has been a big plus for us this year."

Saint Mary's continues its season Friday at Mundelien College and again Saturday at Illinois Benedictine College. Its next home match will be October 13 against Concordia University.

Missouri to face NCAA probe soon

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP)—More than 18 months after allegations against the basketball program surfaced, Missouri will go before the NCAA's Infractions Committee on Thursday to answer about 20 charges.

But a decision on whether to apply sanctions to the Missouri program probably won't be announced for another month.

"I believe we are prepared," Missouri chancellor Haskell Monroe said Thursday. "I think our investigators Mike Slive and Mike Glazier have done a splendid job preparing us and preparing our response. I believe we're in a much better position to respond than we were some weeks ago."

Glazier, a former NCAA investigator, and Slive are specialists in helping schools under NCAA investigation. They work out of a Chicago law office and were retained by Missouri after the school received notice of inquiry from the NCAA.

"I believe they've discovered about all the facts about this case that can be discovered," Monroe said.

The allegations center on recruiting players and providing illegal inducements. The most serious involve unethical conduct on the part of university employees, whose names have not been made public.

I would've bought a Macintosh even without the student discount.

Greg Gallent
Consumer Economics and Housing
Cornell University

"The first time I saw a Macintosh, I was immediately hooked. It's a work of art. I saw the student pricing and my next move was obvious: get one.

"Some other computers are cheaper, but they're a pain to learn, and working on them can be a grueling experience. Last year, a friend bought another kind of computer against my advice and has used it for maybe 15 hours. What a waste."

"Macintosh, on the other hand, is a logical extension of the mind. It lets you concentrate on what's in your paper, not on how to get it on paper. You can create professional-looking documents in minutes, and you lose the fear of learning new programs because they all work in the same way.

"Once you've worked with a Macintosh, there's no turning back."

Steve LaVigne is hoping that the soccer team can catch the luck that the Lady of the Dome has bestowing to the football team.

LaVigne tries to ease the pain

Senior midfielder back in lineup after two-week respite

By COQUESE WASHINGTON
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame men's soccer team wishes the lady on the dome would spread some of her wealth.

In the past two weekends, she has blessed the football team with miraculous catches that have propelled it to its current 2-0 record. The soccer team should be so lucky. With a schedule that is as tough as any squad in the nation, the team just isn't getting the breaks that could mean the difference between a win or loss.

Senior Steve LaVigne just can't understand it.

"We just haven't had much luck this year," he said. "Some teams are only getting one or two shots on goal and are scoring, while we're getting 10 to 15 shots, and can't hit."

While it doesn't make sense to LaVigne and the rest of the players, it makes perfect sense to Coach Berticelli.

"Right now our goals are long range," explained the first-year head coach. "We are in the process of getting the team playing a different type of game than they are used to, and there will be an adjustment period. That may cause a few heartaches for the guys right now."

The insertion of LaVigne back into the lineup should help ease some of the pain. An early season battle with meningitis kept the 6-2, 185-pound midfielder out of action for a few weeks. Consequently, the Irish lost last year's assist leader, and their number two player in total points.

Since his return, Berticelli feels LaVigne has played "exceptionally well," and stated that his outstanding game against Loyola may have been the best single game by any player on the squad this season.

While the team still has its eye on winning the MCC tournament and thus gaining an NCAA tournament bid, this weekend the squad travels to Bloomington for a match against the third-ranked Hoosiers, and then to Madison where it will face Wisconsin. According to LaVigne, the team has a realistic chance of winning both games.

"If everyone plays as well as they are capable of, there's no telling how good we can be," he said.

A favorable twist of fate, and a smile from the lady on the dome wouldn't hurt their chances either.

Men

Irish victory came in 1987, when they won 4-3 in overtime.

One of the focal points of the game from an Indiana perspective is senior forward Ken Snow's opportunity to set IU's all-time record for career goals. With his next score, Snow will have 78 goals, tops for the storied Indiana program.

If the Irish cannot keep Snow off the scoreboard, it could prove fatal. In the 48 games in which he has scored, Indiana is an amazing 44-1-3. The Hoosiers have yet to lose a game in which Snow has scored two or more goals, holding a 22-0-1 record in those games.

The two teams have already squared off this season, with Indiana beating Notre Dame 1-0 in the Golden Boot Exhibition Match during the preseason. Neither coach is putting much faith in the results of that game, however.

"We got off to a bad start," said Indiana head coach Jerry Yeagley. "I'm pleased with our progress since then."

"They're at full stride," said Berticelli. "They'll be very excited about Snow's chance to break the record, and it'll be a good, pro-Indiana crowd. It's going to put added pressure on us."

Yeagley foresees a battle with the Irish.

"We expect a tough time," he said. "Anytime Indiana and Notre Dame play, it's going to be more than a soccer game," he said. "They're better team than their record indicates. They played with, and better than, many of the teams that defeated them."

The Irish players are psyched up for the game, and the three days off to hone their skills only could have helped.

"We expect to win every game we play," said junior midfielder Bobby Allong. "But it'll be a tough game. Coach said that today was our best practice in a while. The intensity level was very high."

Coach Berticelli was more philosophical about the game, preferring to view it as part of a learning process.

"If we have to take one step back to take two steps forward, then we'll do it," he said. "Our goal is to do it, and do it right. Corrections are a long-term thing."

After playing in such a high-intensity game as the Indiana match proves to be, the Irish need to be wary of slipping Sunday afternoon against the Wisconsin Badgers.

The Badgers are only 3-4-1, but they were also ranked as a preseason Top 20 team. Wisconsin leads the series with Notre Dame 4-1-2, having defeated the Irish 3-1 in overtime last year at Krause Stadium.

Penn

practice.

"We've worked hard and we're communicating well as a team," said Stark. "It (the communication) is starting to come together. We're starting to gel together at the right time with the toughest part of our schedule coming up."

Stark also has been a key piece to the blocking scheme. Her six solo blocks and 23 assists are good for second on the team. It seems as if the Irish have settled on a setter. Freshman Janelle Karlan did the setting this past weekend and continues to improve.

"Right now, she's the best setter we have," said Lambert.

The other setter, senior Amy White, will continue to make a contribution, but at right-side hitter. Last weekend she racked up 17 kills, including a 10-kill, .368-hit percentage performance against Syracuse.

"Amy will complement more at right side and we can move [Christine] Choquette to left side," said Lambert.

Choquette, a junior hitter, had an impressive weekend at Rhode Island in front of some hometown friends. She picked up 31 kills and 28 digs in three matches, not to mention All-Tournament honors.

"It was great," she said. "It's the only time I'd get to play in front of so many relatives because it's our only trip to the East Coast. It was good timing that I started playing well when we went out there."

Senior Ryan Cahill puts best foot forward for Irish team

By BARBARA MORAN

Some guys always finish first and win all the awards.

And some guys rarely finish first and win just the praise of their coach and their teammates.

Cahill, a native of Northbrook, Ill., has been a constant factor for the Notre Dame men's cross country team since he began running for them as a freshman, and will volunteer his selflessness and dedication to the team when it plays host to the 11th annual National Catholic Invitational today on Burke Memorial Golf Course.

Running steadily in the top five and improving with each season, the now-senior Cahill has, and continues to, strengthen his team in every race.

Cahill, who boasts impressive times in both the mile (4:07) and the 5,000 meters (14:16), has impressed Irish head coach Joe Piane with both his talent and dedication.

"He has a lot of natural talent," said Piane, "but at this level you have to work, too, and he puts it in."

Piane also praised Cahill as a selfless and goal-oriented runner.

"He's a real team player," said the coach, "and his goal for the season is for the team to reach the NCAA's."

Cahill ratified Piane's perceptions, speaking of himself reluctantly but expounding on the achievements of his team and discussing the necessity of hard work.

"As you get older, you realize that you have to work very hard to do well," he said. "As a freshman or sophomore you don't realize that. You can see all the achievements they (his teammates) make, and it's all from hard work. You really have to focus and work hard if

Women try to rebound from 15-50 loss to Georgetown

By RICHARD MATHURIN

The Notre Dame women's cross country will play host to the National Catholic Invitational today at 3 p.m. at Burke Memorial Golf Course.

The Irish will try to rebound from their disappointing 15-50 loss to national power Georgetown two weeks ago. There will be no Georgetown in the field, but all schools could challenge the Irish.

Leading the way this year is Boston College. The Eagles finished second in last year's meet to Providence and return a strong squad. Their top runner is Jennifer Rolfe, who finished seventh in last year's meet with a time of 18:53.0. Providence, which took five of the top six spots in last year's National Catholics, will not compete this year.

Other competitive teams in tomorrow's meet include St. Thomas, Loyola, DePaul, Detroit and Marquette. Michelle Auger of St. Thomas should challenge Rolfe in the meet.

"Boston College is head and shoulders above the rest of the field, but from there it should be a competitive race between DePaul, Loyola, St. Thomas, and Notre Dame," said Irish head coach Joe Piane.

Notre Dame will start seven runners in tomorrow's meet. The team will look to juniors Diana Bradley and Amy Blaising, who finished 12th and 13th, respectively, versus Georgetown. The Irish squad will be bolstered by the return of senior Jenny Ledrick, who sat out the Georgetown meet due to injury.

"It would be a nice goal to beat Boston College, but not necessarily realistic," said Piane. "We just want to improve on last year's performance."

Women's volleyball braces for No.8 Penn State

By MIKE KAMRADT
Sports Writer

After going 5-5 against competition not considered among the elite in the country and having eighth-ranked Penn State coming into town for a 7:30 match tonight, some teams might want to get down on themselves.

Not the Irish women's volleyball team.

"I'm positive about this weekend," said sophomore middle hitter Jessica Fiebelkorn. "We've looked good in practice. If we can knock down Penn State it would be a big upset."

Fellow middle hitter freshman Molly Stark agrees.

"I think this weekend is going to be good," she said. "I really do."

The Irish, who also will face Miami of Ohio Saturday at 7:30, will have their hands full with Nittany Lions. Their 13-0 record is certainly impressive in itself. Besides that, Penn State has only lost one game all season. The Lions lead the nation in kill percentage as a team with a startling .390. They have three players in the Top 10. Junior JoAnn Elwell leads the nation with a .538. Sophomore LeAnn Kling is sixth with a .439, while senior Noelle Zientara is eighth with .429.

Those big numbers are a direct result of good setting, and the Nittany Lions have the second best setter in the country as senior Michell Jaworski is averaging 13.3 assists per game.

"They're much better than anyone we've played so far," said head coach Art Lambert. "They don't make mistakes."

To combat the high-powered hitting attack of the Lions, the Irish have to block well. The problem is, the Irish haven't been blocking well as a team. The Irish sport a block average of 2.7 compared to 4.7 for the top team in the country.

"Our problem with blocking is just a lack of concentration," said Lambert.

"It's really not one thing," said Fiebelkorn, referring to the blocking problem. "We're very young and inexperienced but we have tremendous talent. We've faced a variety of hitting styles and it takes a while to get warmed up to them. We have to learn to be consistent."

Fiebelkorn continues to gain on single-season blocking records. She leads the team with 22 solo blocks and 30 assists.

A key for the Irish is that they've had a good week of

Men's soccer faces tough task at Indiana

By RICH KURZ
Sports Writer

After a few days off from its grinding schedule, the Notre Dame men's soccer team goes right back into the midst of the fire this weekend, traveling tonight to Bloomington to face Soccer America's ninth-ranked team, the Indiana Hoosiers.

After facing IU, on Sunday the Irish will visit the Wisconsin Badgers, a preseason Top 20 team.

There are few more daunting tasks in sport than facing perennial powerhouse Indiana in its home stadium. Factor in a sellout crowd hoping to see scoring-whiz Ken Snow break the Hoosier scoring record, and add the fact that IU is in the midst of a five-game winning streak, and you have an even more difficult job.

But wait, there's more. Senior co-captain Paul LaVigne, cornerstone of the Irish defense, most likely will miss both games this weekend with a probable pinched nerve in his shoulder.

How important is LaVigne? Ask Irish head coach Mike Berticelli.

"One of the best things we did [against Indiana] was shut down Snow," he said. "Paul LaVigne was very effective stopping him, but he might not be able to play because of an injury."

Indiana, NCAA co-champions last season, has won five games in row after dropping its first two games to Top 10-teams UCLA and UNLV. One of those wins came against eighth-ranked St. Louis, a one-goal victor over Notre Dame two weeks ago.

The Hoosiers hold a 12-1-3 decision in the all-time series against the Irish, including a 6-0-1 record at home. The only

Women's soccer tries to better road record

By DAVE DIETEMAN
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame women's soccer team (6-2-1) hits the road again this weekend, sweeping through the midwest for matchups against Indiana University and Louisville.

The Irish, 5-0 at home this year and ranked eighth in the Central region, are looking to improve on their 1-2-1 road mark. Yet while the 5 p.m. game Friday at Bloomington against traditional rival Indiana looms large, Sunday's 1p.m. meeting with Central region power Louisville seems just as ominous.

"As far as this weekend goes, we need to prove that we can win consistently on the road," said Notre Dame head coach Chris Petrucelli. "We haven't lost at home yet, so we're pretty confident when it comes to playing here. But our two losses and one tie came on the road. If you look at the past couple of years, this team has had trouble playing on the road. It's psychologically important for us to prove that we can win on the road."

"This weekend is going to be a big weekend for us because last weekend was so challenging," noted Molly Lennon, a junior sweeper from Adams High School in South Bend. "Louisville is in our region, and we have to beat them if we want to keep moving up in the rankings."

"Indiana is always a challenge, too. It's a big rivalry between us. Even though they are a club team, they're always good. We're looking to play well and dominate these games like we have been. After last weekend, we're really looking to dominate more on offense."

The Irish have good reason for being concerned about the two teams they will face this weekend. The lifetime series between Notre Dame and Indiana is even at one victory
