THE INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER SERVING NOTRE DAME AND SAINT MARY'S

Saint Mary's College awarded $250,000 grant by foundation

By CORINNE PAVLIS
Saint Mary's Editor

Saint Mary's College has been awarded a $250,000 challenge grant from the Knight Foundation of Akron, Ohio, to implement a comprehensive project aimed at attracting, cultivating and retaining highly qualified faculty.

Saint Mary's was one of only twenty-five private liberal arts institutions invited by the Knight Foundation's "Excellence in Undergraduate Education" program to submit project proposals, and one of just ten colleges awarded funding.

The project, entitled "Faculty for the Next Century: The Conditions for Quality," will establish mentor programs at key stages in the faculty career path, beginning with an extensive student research program designed to promote interest in academic careers. Encouraging faculty leadership within the college community is a main focus of the grant.

Implementation of the six component program will span the next three years. Each of the six interactive elements resulted from three years of intensive research by Saint Mary's faculty and administrators. The actual proposal was prepared by Associate Dean of Faculty Patrick White. The creation of the Student Independent Study and Research Program (SISTAR), the first component of the program, involves offering students opportunities for scholarly interaction with faculty. SISTAR will provide stipends to students who will work as junior colleagues with individual faculty members.

The teams will be conducting summer research projects. Similar student-faculty research programs currently exist in the scientific disciplines. The SISTAR program will include students from all academic areas and will encourage a more symbiotic relationship between student and teacher. This opportunity, usually not awarded until graduate school, will be extended to four Saint Mary's students each academic year. The College hopes to motivate students toward careers in teaching and research.

"The student research component is a real key to the project," said White, the program's creator. "Younger individuals interested in academic careers often have the misconception that their goals can only be achieved through teaching in a university setting."

White hopes to provide opportunities which will create a "grow our own" type of initiative for students. With such initiative White hopes to foster circumstances which will "allow our students to see that professional academic aspirations can be realized within the framework of a small liberal arts college."

Novice-Mentor partnerships, the second part of the proposal, will involve pairing new faculty with more experienced members. New faculty will be paired with colleagues in a mentoring program designed to better acquaint younger faculty with the traditions and missions of the College.

The College hopes that senior faculty will help the new members adjust to the demands of full-time teaching in a student-centered environment such as Saint Mary's. Decreased teaching loads for new faculty during their first year is another aspect of the plan. Saint Mary's intends to use this program to prepare faculty as future leaders within the college community.

Programs for tenured faculty, academic chairs and visiting scholars make up the three other dimensions of the proposal.

Man attacks SMC student

Special to the Observer

A Saint Mary's student was accosted on Saint Mary's road Thursday night.

The attacker approached her from the rear and forced her into an area south of the bushes along the road. Although the suspect told the victim he had a gun and a knife, she didn't see either weapon.

A sharp, pointed stick was held to her throat, however.

The suspect told her, "The cops are after me." He pinned her to the ground and tried to take her behind the Fatima Retreat Center.

Captain Joseph Araman heard a muffled scream while patrolling Saint Mary's Road. He got out of his car after observing a jacket lying on the roadside. The suspect released the victim, who ran to the officer from the south side of the hedges and told him she was being attacked. The suspect, believed to have seen the headlights, fled across U.S. 33 on foot, traveling southwest.

The suspect was described as a 6'2" black male in his early 20s with a muscular build and short hair. His complexion was medium dark, with no facial hair. He wore a navy blue windbreaker, black denim trousers and black tennis shoes with white stripes.

South Bend Police Department K-9 units were called in to help locate the suspect.

ND Professor discusses Vietnamese attitudes, future of Cambodia in speech

By PETER LOFTUS
Assistant News Editor

Now that the war with the United States is fifteen years behind them, the Vietnamese appear eager to establish normal relationships with the United States, according to a Notre Dame professor who recently visited Indochina.

Father Wilson Miscamble, assistant professor of history, and some colleagues visited Vietnam and Kampuchea (Cambodia) last January and were able to learn about Vietnamese attitudes on everything from their economy to relations with the United States.

The Vietnamese are willing to forget about the war, and would like to "normalize" their relationship with the United States, said Miscamble.

"The Vietnamese gave a favorable reception to Americans," said Miscamble, referring to his contact with the Vietnamese. "They're not possessed by the (Vietnam conflict) as much as the United States."

He explained this by comparing the United States to the South in the American Civil War. Because the South lost the Civil War, some Southerners today are more bitter about the war than the North, he said.

The twist on this comparison is that Vietnam suffered far more devastation than the United States, who Miscamble characterized as the "loser" in the Vietnam conflict.

Vietnamese are disappointed that the United States has maintained their economic embargo of Vietnam, despite the fact that the Vietnamese pulled their troops out of Cambodia two years ago, a move that many thought would ensure the lifting of the embargo.

Vietnam's economy would improve enormously if the the embargo was lifted, said Miscamble. Presently, many Vietnamese are preoccupied with the renovation of their economy.

"Economics are on the mind of everyone in Vietnam," said Miscamble.

Vietnam's economy has experienced some degree of renovation in recent years, he said. It has moved away from a centrally-planned economy and more towards a free-market system.

The privatization of Vietnam's economy has helped small businesses, but its greatest impact has been on Vietnamese agriculture. Miscamble said that approximately 90 percent of Vietnamese rice crops come from private farms or cooperatives.

Education and health care have experienced some degree of privatization, according to Miscamble. Teachers and doctors often "moonlight." In Hanoi, many people attended private evening schools, taught by moonlighters who worked for the state during the day.

In spite of all the recent renovations, Vietnam "still confronts enormous problems," said Miscamble.

The population has increased at a rapid rate, and is presently at around 60 million, he said. Unemployment is high, and the impending reduction of the large Vietnamese army will not help matters.

Communications, the water system and transportation are in bad shape, said Miscamble. A major problem is the large, incompetent ruling bureaucracy.

INSIDE COLUMN

Tree's return stirs thoughts of bands

Stanford is back in town, and that can only mean one thing: the Tree.

Stanford probably has one of the best mascots in college football. The Tree was the star of Stanford's halftime show two years ago, and the band with its laid-back attitude and uniforms make it my favorite visiting band.

The coming of the Tree got me to thinking about other memorable visiting bands (our own band will always be near and dear to my heart.) If there ever was a battle of the collegiate bands, these would be the likely winners:

BIGGEST BAND: It's got to be Purdue. Their band covers the entire playing field and the first three rows of the stadium. Plus, the added features make the Boiler-makers worthy of this title: the World's Largest Drum, the battalion of baton twirlers, the silver twins (one of whom kept dropping her baton at the last home game) and the Golden Girl.

MOST OBNOXIOUS BAND: USC. They play that stupid fight song after every damn play. My freshman year the band got so obnoxious that an entire section of Irish fans shouted in unison, "Will the USC band please SHUT UP!" The band members must hear that song in their dreams after playing it so many times.

BAND MOST LIKELY NEVER TO PLAY HERE AGAIN: Do any of the seniors remember the Boston College game? Okay, we were losing at the half and we were a little bit frustrated about it.

The BC Band did a salute to the Big Chill music for the halftime show. The band was dressed in garbage bags (I think they were trying to look like the dancing California Raisins) and female soloist performed "You Make Me Feel Like a Natural Woman." Was she any good?

We'll never know. She only managed to sing the first line of the song before the student section began booing her for no apparent reason except that we were losing the game (which we ended up winning.) It wasn't exactly what you would call a Notre Dame moment.

BEST BAND TO SING ALONG WITH: Michigan. Every time they play "Hail to the Victors" it gives their opponents a chance to sing their fight song with the revised lyrics, which are unfit for publishing in a family newspaper such as The Observer.

BAND MOST LIKELY TO NEED POLICE PROTECTION: Miami. Need I say more? I certainly hope that our students won't be too cruel to the Miami band. Sports Illustrated would just love to run a feature story about how the irate Irish fans attacked those poor defenseless members of the Miami marching band.

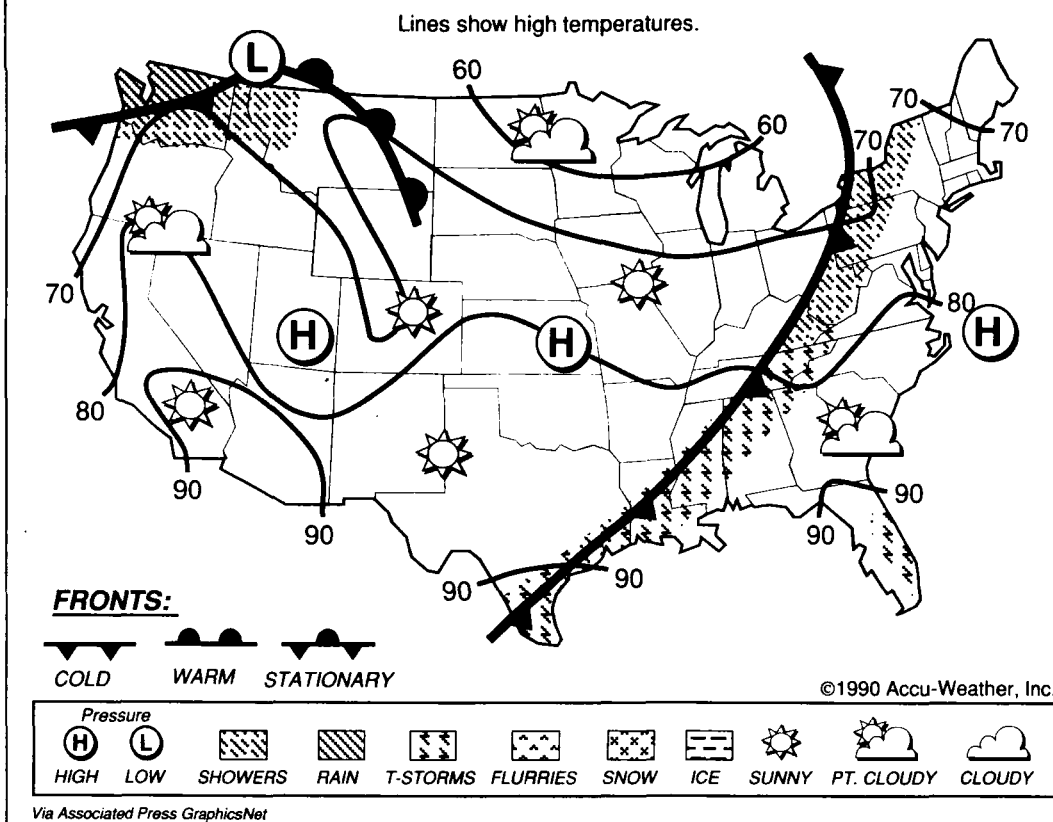

So when you see the Tree on the field Saturday, be sure to give him a warm Fighting Irish welcome. After all, he's already dressed up in green.

WORLD

President F.W. de Klerk was cheered Thursday when he made an unannounced visit to black townships in Natal Province that have been wracked for years by factional fighting. He praised local leaders of the warring factions for negotiating a Shongweni township truce that halted the fighting, which has claimed 5,000 lives in Natal in five years. Such a trip would have been unthinkable a year ago, before de Klerk pushed for an end to apartheid and freed African National Congress leader Nelson Mandela from prison. The white-led government and the ANC have held peace talks since May on eliminating apartheid. The black faction fighting spread to Johannesburg area townships in August, killing about 800 people.

Deputies in Slovenia on Thursday proposed a plebiscite on independence from Yugoslavia after declaring many federal laws incompatible with the republic's newly drawn constitution. In the neighboring republic of Croatia, deputies voted down a proposal to follow Slovenia's lead and declare independence. Debate also raged over ethnic tensions between Croats and Serbs. One irate deputy hurled his briefcase at an opponent. In the Parliament of Slovenia, the smallest of Yugoslavia's six republics, legislators ruled that 30 federal laws touching on the economy, politics and defense were incompatible with the Slovenian constitution as it was amended last week.

NATIONAL

The $500-billion deficit-reduction plan cleared its first congressional hurdle Thursday night as the House moved toward a late-night showdown over election-year tax boosts and spending cuts. Following a week of intense arm-twisting by President Bush and congressional leaders of both parties, the House voted 339-94 to approve conditions for debate.

The Bush administration is withdrawing the nomination of Frederick Vreeland to be ambassador to Burma, a Republican senator who raised questions about the nomination said Thursday. Sen. Alfonse D'Amato of New York said State Department officials told him that Vreeland's name had been withdrawn because of objections from Burma about statements Vreeland made.

Vigil for peace

Candlelight vigil held to promote peace in Mid-East

By SCOTT KEEGEL
News Writer

A candlelight vigil for peace held near the Old Fieldhouse Mall last night was "inspired primarily by the current situation in the Middle East," said Father Newton of Campus Ministry, "and this week was thought to be an appropriate time."

This week marks the feast of Saint Francis of Assisi, who is often regarded as the patron saint of peace.

After reciting the Prayer of Saint Francis at the War Memorial, each person in the crowd of about 150 lit a candle, which was carried in procession to the Grotto. Many sang such hymns as "Amazing Grace" and "Let There Be Peace on Earth" as they walked. There the group sang and prayed en masse, and moments of silence were observed for personal reflection.

Michael Affleck, assistant professional specialist at the center for Social Concerns pointed out that the vigil served "to remind us of our responsibility as Christians to promote peace. The vigil is a public activity for peace; not one in protest, but rather in prayer."

When asked if the vigil could be made an annual event, Father Newton commented that "it has been considered, but it will depend upon the overall response it receives."

The event was well attended and many people indicated their belief that the vigil is well worth repeating each year. Yesterday Robert Pasin, student body president, urged people to attend, noting that, "our prayers for peace are needed now more than ever."

ND to stop paying for "U" paper

By BETSY PUNSALAN
News Writer

The "U" college paper supplement will no longer be distributed with the Observer, according to Student Body President Rob Pasin.

"When Fred and I were considering renewing the subscription, we asked ourselves: 'Do students really read these?' Last week, we saw [the 'U'] all over the floor of the dining hall," Pasin said.

The subscription costs $15,000 a year and is paid for by the student activity fee.

A second reason for stopping distribution of the "U" on campus is because of complaints received concerning the advertisements for condoms in the classified section.

"Since the money used to pay for the 'U' comes out of the student activities fee and some people complained [about the condom ads], we looked into having the ads removed," Pasin said.

This practice would follow last year's request from Student Government to "U" publishers that Notre Dame receive "U" papers without any alcohol advertisements.

The publishers had agreed to provide Notre Dame with "U" editions free of condom ads. However, last week's edition did contain the offensive ads.

"The overwhelming reason for discontinuing the 'U' is that students don't read it," Pasin said. "The secondary reason is that the 'U' broke the contract we had with them regarding the condom ads."

Joe Cassidy, director of Student Activities, received the initial complaints about the offensive ads.

"I think it's one of those ethical, student responsibility decisions," said Cassidy. "Student leaders have to decide on how they want to project the University."

Alison Cocks, editor-in-chief of The Observer, regrets that the "U" will no longer be distributed.

"I think that the 'U' was an excellent way of keeping up with what's going on on other college campuses. I think it's unfortunate that more people didn't appreciate the opportunity."

Vietnam

Eastern European countries has decreased, said Miscamble. In addition, Vietnam can no longer rely on cheap goods from the Soviet Union. The American embargo is seen by Vietnamese as a "big barrier" to economic progress.

The Vietnamese, however, are aware of their situation, and are contemplating ways to improve it.

"There is an enormous interest in Vietnam in the operation of a market economy," said Miscamble, who said that he is not a "big fan" of market economies.

There is hope for the Vietnam economy, he said. There are sizable amounts of off-shore oil, as well as other raw materials, in Vietnam. And the Vietnamese are hard-working, talented laborers.

Miscamble spoke of the differences between Hanoi, a northern city, and Ho Chi Minh City (formerly Saigon), a southern city.

In Hanoi, which "withstood incredible bombardment" during the Vietnam War, there is little military presence, and little evidence of human injuries resulting from the war, according to Miscamble.

There is an active market in Hanoi, with a decent availability of food, said Miscamble. With little direct begging, there seems to be a "Puritan ethic" in the air.

Ho Chi Minh City, which, according to Miscamble, is still referred to as "Saigon" by most Vietnamese, is twice as large as Hanoi. While bicycles are prevalent in Hanoi, motor scooters and even cars fill the streets of Saigon.

"Moneymaking is in the air in Saigon," said Miscamble, which accounts for the larger markets. Saigon is more modern than Hanoi, which is a reflection of the American presence in the southern city. One can find "all kinds of consumer goods in Saigon."

While one finds a "Puritan ethic" in Hanoi, one can find "Asian rock"—noise pollution, as far as Miscamble is concerned—and action-packed Hong Kong movies in Saigon.

On the down side, there is a "greater disparity of wealth" and more begging in Saigon than in Hanoi, according to Miscamble.

Miscamble also visited Kampuchea, which he refers to as Cambodia, and was struck by the horror of former ruler Pol Pot, whose regime was responsible for the Cambodian genocide in the 1970s. The present government is partly responsible for making people aware of the evils of Pol Pot, according to Miscamble. He said that terror still exists in Cambodia.

"The national nightmare really hasn't ended," said Miscamble, referring to the Khmer Rouge, a militant political movement that still brings violence to the country along with two other opposition movements. Miscamble said that a friend who was a doctor in a Cambodian village had to perform amputations on 20 victims of the violence of the Khmer Rouge.

Regarding the prospect of peace in Cambodia, Miscamble said that one cannot underestimate the "continuing danger" of the Khmer Rouge. Western nations such as the United States, which has supported the Khmer Rouge, have never

"named them for what they are."

He said there is no guarantee that the Khmer Rouge will be disarmed, even with the intervention of the United Nations, which recently proposed a peace plan for Cambodia.

In spite of the unrest in Cambodia, Miscamble said that the culture is being rebuilt. Some medical schools, hospitals and universities have been constructed, he said.

O'Leary defines, urges women to embrace "authentic womanhood"

BY ANN MARIE
HARTMAN
News Writer

Magazine columnist Dale O'Leary believes that women can change the world, and she brought these sentiments last night to a crowd of spectators who came to see her speak at Hayes-Healy Center.

In the spirit of the Year of Women, the Student Union Board sponsored O'Leary speech on the change within the feminist movement today.

"Women are listening to feminists today and are dissatisfied," said O'Leary. "Today's woman is looking for authentic womanhood."

O'Leary defined "authentic womanhood" as being separate from the ideal that feminists are looking for in the sense that the mode in which feminists are now operating is more ideal and radical than the one that originated at the beginning of the movement in the sixties.

O'Leary expressed that women around the country have the impression that leaders in the feminist movement lied to them when they said that women, like men, could manage both a career and parenthood. With the opportunities that exist for today's modern woman, the fact still remains that the woman is the primary caretaker in homes.

She said that the feminist movement was taken over by liberals on a quest for equality between men and women and their thoughts were too idealistic. According to O'Leary, radical feminists "want equality of result not equality of opportunity and they will use force."

Radical feminists say the woman will only be free if she can find a non-coercive family. "The feminist revolution has realized how drastic it was to take the family out of the center of society...now they have decided to destroy it. Personal autonomy is the highest good," she said.

O'Leary said the "authentic womanhood" that women may now turn to encompasses the ideology of a woman as a mother, having respect for men, where the family is good. With this in mind, O'Leary said that it is still possible to manage both a family and career.

Quoting a doctrine from the Pope, she said that the role model for women today should be the Virgin Mother, Mary. "She is the perfect example of woman," said O'Leary.

At the conclusion of O'Leary's discussion, the floor was opened to questions from those in attendance. A question was voiced with regard to women serving equally in the military with men. When asked if she would send her daughter as well as her son to fight for liberty, she said that she would not. Her justification was that, at times, men are better suited for certain tasks and it is male instinct to want to protect the women and children. However, O'Leary stressed that these differences between men and women do not make them unequal.

O'Leary made it clear that equality between the sexes is not something that is going to be granted by the government or the result of a sexual revolution. It is at this time that we turn to theology, she said.

Newspaper recycling to expand

Special to The Observer

University Food Services will begin recycling The Observer in the dining halls this semester starting with collection in the North Dining Hall during lunch hours on Monday, Oct. 8. Collection will also begin in the South Dining Hall on the same day.

Cardboard recycling containers will be placed near the meal tray returns and near the exits to provide easy and convenient collection of the student newspaper. The food services' newspaper collection program will eventually expand to include LaFortune Student Center and the Oak Room.

Newspaper recycling is currently available in participating residence halls for students.

This recycling effort is the result of a newly formed University Food Services Recycling Task Force. The task force includes Chairman Mike Davy, manager of the North Dining Hall, and involves staff from all campus food services' facilities.

The task force was designated by David Prentkowski, director of University Food Services, a member of the University Task Force on Recycling, which has been working for approximately one year to establish a comprehensive recycling program on campus.

University Food Services is one of the largest departments on campus and consequently generates a sizable portion of the waste stream at the university.

This concentrated effort by food services is an attempt to begin reducing this waste and actively participate in the current campus-wide recycling program.

The task force, which meets every week, will address such issues as recycling paper, cardboard, glass and plastic materials, as well as reducing the amount of office waste it currently produces.

Tough job, great reward

Gregory Tuel, in ND sweatshirt, stands with residents of Isla Alta, Paraguay. Tuel a 1987 ND graduate, served for two years in Isla Alta as part of his duty with the United States Peace Corps.

Tuel describes Peace Corps work in Paraguay

By DANNIKA SIMPSON
News Writer

"Many of the children suffered from malnutrition."

Gregory Tuel, a 1987 graduate of Notre Dame and a member of the U. S. Peace Corps, advises students interested in volunteering for the Peace Corps to "make sure they're dedicated to the basic ideals of the Peace Corps."

He said they should "believe in the importance of helping people."

Tuel became interested in the Peace Corps during his senior year at ND. He sent in his application in July 1987 and was interviewed three times. Six months later, he was invited to be a volunteer.

In April 1988, he began three months of training in Paraguay. During these three months he studied Spanish, Guarani (an ancient Indian language), and the customs, traditions, geography and politics of Paraguay.

Tuel was sworn in and sent to Isla Alta, where he spent two years in the performing his service. He said of his experience in Paraguay, "It was like being born again, but not having parents."

Tuel reflected on his attitude towards his relations with the people of Isla Alta, "In order to influence the people of my community, I must live with them."

This meant living without electricity and running water. He awoke at 7:30 a.m. to do his day's work which included yardwork and house cleaning. He said, "All of my everyday jobs are part of my mission: volunteers are actually trained to promote development by maintaining a model home."

Tuel also taught classes at the local high school. "We (Peace Corps volunteers) are taught to plant ideas for progress by means of well-placed information, suggestions and provocative questions."

Tuel also helped to form a health commission for the people of Isla Alta. The citizens of this town were not educated about proper hygiene, according to Tuel. As a result, "ninety-six percent of the population" had worms. Tuel said,

By the summer of 1989, the health commission had improved the sanitation in Isla Alta by helping "ninety percent of the 110 families" build latrines and by conducting town meetings to discuss and teach hygiene.

Tuel said the basic goals of the Peace Corps are to help people of underdeveloped countries, introduce another viewpoint to these people and to introduce U.S. citizens to foreign lands.

When asked whether the people of Isla Alta received him with open arms or were suspicious of him when he arrived in their community, he said, "Some people had a lot of respect for the Peace Corps. At the same time, some people were uninformed."

Tuel says there was a baby smuggling ring operating at the time and about twenty-five percent of the people thought he was a baby smuggler and another twenty-five percent were convinced he was an agent for the CIA.

"After a year," said Tuel, "people still thought I was a CIA agent, but I was still respected."

Tuel said he gained a lot from his two years in Isla Alta. He became fluent in another language and learned new customs. "In Paraguay, volunteers talk to and listen to people in two foreign languages in order to reveal and learn from the other possible ways to live."

"The hard work necessary every day to keep the self healthy and adjust to the conditions," seemed to "stick out" most from his experience.

He also said one can overcome these obstacles by being dedicated to the "pursuit of helping other people."

To Peace Corps volunteers and those interested in volunteering, he said, "Your amount of initiative determines success."

He also said, "Each experience serves as a point of reference when trying to make informed decisions about the world."

Gorman-Jacobs plays music, speaks about women

By MEGAN JUNIUS
News Writer

The petite, dark-haired woman strummed her guitar as she sang humorous but inspiring folk songs about women and their acceptance over the years.

"Women's greatest assets have always been thought to be their ability to give life. Through thousands of years, men held women down to only doing this and they were prevented from seriously exploring other things, like music," said Judy Gorman-Jacobs.

Gorman-Jacobs gave a music-filled workshop Thursday on the History of Women and Music, at the Center for Social Concerns.

She spoke about women and music in the ancient times and songs about, against and for women. Gorman-Jacobs went on to say that most songs in history have been written by men, so they cannot give the true feelings of a woman.

"There may not have been any female Bachs or Beethovens, but women have been involved musically," Gorman-Jacobs said. "They just were not allowed to sing in the church or courts as were men."

Gorman-Jacobs is a junior-high school English teacher who became a professional musician. She sings at festivals, clubs and universities, as well as giving various concerts in Europe.

This lecture was part of the series of events in part of "The Year of Women."

Saint Mary's within the faculty. At the same time, workshops will be created for academic chairs to help them better understand their role as mentors of faculty groups.

Such workshops will encourage cooperation among different departments, address institutional concerns and promote chairs' sense of leadership within their respective departments and in the College as a whole. "The Knight Grant will help Saint Mary's retain the high quality faculty we now have as well as help us to attain and nurture new faculty with a commitment to Saint Mary's, a special community of learning," said White.

Furthering the "mentor" concept, visiting scholars will be invited to the campus for four to six week periods each year to "mentor the mentors". Visiting scholars will offer brief courses for students and faculty.

The formation of an information technology study group is the final component of the plan. Through a three-stage process of study and examination, system trials and recommendations, Saint Mary's will seek to provide on-campus information systems dependent on new technology.

"The selective nature of the program makes it one of the most prestigious honors that can be bestowed upon an independent liberal arts college," said Saint Mary's College President William Hickey.

According to the foundation, "The award to Saint Mary's is intended to recognize the leadership role played by the College among liberal arts institutions in the Midwest and nationwide."

The terms of the three-year grant agreement require Saint Mary's to raise $250,000 in matching project funds.

The "Excellence in Education" program was initiated by the Knight Foundation in 1989 with approximately $2 million in grants awarded to eight select institutions.

Colleges selected to participate in the program are those that "are firmly committed to the liberal arts, emphasize undergraduate education, and feature solid academic programs of sufficient breadth to allow students a rich variety of choices." The institution must also be financially sound and "enjoy effective leadership by the president and boards, as well as support of their graduates."

The tee shirt's cause

Zheng-de Wang, left, a graduate student from Tianjin, China, holds the Notre Dame-Miami tee shirt, while his mother Xueying Wu looks on. The shirt will be sold on campus in an effort to raise money for Wang, an October 20, 1989, hit-and-run victim. The Miami game marks the one year anniversary of Wang's accident.

Fireside chat introduces new philosophy

By MOLLY MALLOY
News Writer

By thinking of occurrences only in their relationship to past, present and future, Western society has trapped itself, according to the Circular Frame of Reference.

The Circular Frame of Reference helps to avoid this tendency, by putting everything into a continuous circle giving different vantage points, according to Ronald Dorris, assistant professor of American Studies.

At a fireside chat yesterday, "African Philosophy and the Circular Frame of Reference," Dorris said this cyclical philosophy is non-secular and is found in all cultures. This philosophy can combat "the bid of Western society to control our essence."

Registration is the first part of the Circular Frame of Reference, according to Dorris. Registration is followed by a noticeable sensation.

Under this philosophy, sensation is the basis of one's perceptions, Dorris said. Perceptions then lead to conceptions.

Only through this series of reactions can anything be conceived as real or "is," according to Dorris. Therefore, "to do something for the sake of doing it is to do something to be seen," he said.

The whole point of the Circular Frame of Reference is to avoid doing things just to be seen, according to Dorris. This philosophy concentrates on capturing the "is"ness of things through a six point model which relates back to the four step process of registration, sensation, conception, perception and conception.

The first step is presentation of a challenge as a revelation, Dorris explained. To illustrate this step, he used as an example someone whose house is destroyed by a hurricane.

Rather than view the hurricane as a tragedy, it can be seen as an opportunity to start over. Thus, the challenge becomes a sign of what one should do next, he said.

These revelations come from nature, other humans or within oneself, according to Dorris.

Acceptance or rejection of what has been revealed is the next step in the philosophy. If one rejects the revelation, the cycle stops there. But acceptance leads to the search for some greater truth, which is what Dorris called the third step.

Through this search comes discovery, which comes when "you begin to understand how to name what's coming at you," he said.

Confirmation of discovery, like the revelation, comes from nature, from others or from within oneself, Dorris said. Once this confirmation is established, only the final step remains.

This step, planning of the strategy, brings the philosophy full circle as it provides a knowledge of the immediate action when one is confronted with a similar challenge or revelation.

Westerners escape Iraq

DHAHRAN, Saudi Arabia (AP) — Three Britons who escaped from Iraq by sea said Thursday their fear of Iraq sustained them through their long hours bobbing in 10-foot swells of the open Persian Gulf.

The three, rescued Wednesday morning along with two Frenchmen off the border city of Khafji, spent 25 hours in a 10-foot fiberglass boat floating through the marshes and canals of southern Iraq, down the Shatt-al-Arab waterway and into the gulf.

They avoided lights, used a small compass to navigate and got lost several times before being picked up by a Saudi coast guard vessel.

"It's a trip I wouldn't like to do again, but it was well worth it now that I am here," Mike Teesdale, 40, told a news conference. "My fear was of Iraq, not of the trip."

The men said they would fly back to London early Friday.

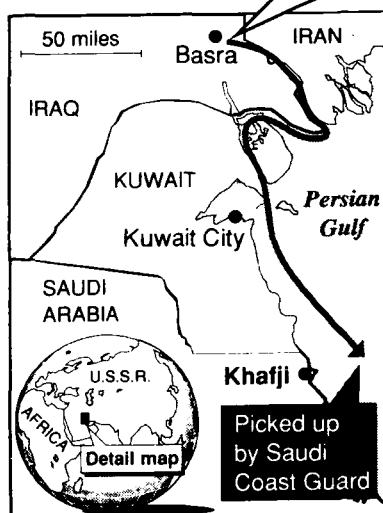

It was the first report of Western men escaping Iraq in over six weeks. Baghdad has permitted hundreds of women and children to leave Iraq and Kuwait since its invasion Aug. 2 of Kuwait, but has restricted departures of thousands of Western men.

Iraq has taken several hundred of the hostages and put them near key military and civilian targets, describing them as "guests" serving to prevent a military attack on Iraq. Western leaders have described them as a "human shield."

The Britons said they knew of some Americans being held near the oil installation where they worked south of the Iraqi port of Basra. They said they did not want to reveal the information about the detainees publicly.

The other escapees were Britons Ivan Manning, 44, and Keith Barkworth, 36. The Frenchman were Amedee du Paty, 53, and Janel Cellier de Buriane, 55, both barge masters. They refused to talk to the press on the advice of their embassy.

The Britons said they had been planning their trip for a month.

While they had plenty of food and water and were not being held at gunpoint, they were worried about what might happen if a war breaks out over the Iraqi occupation.

"The conditions were OK," Teesdale said. "What we feared most was if trouble started who knows what would have happened. I just don't trust a lot of people in Iraq."

ROTC enables many to attend Notre Dame

The impending dedication of the new Pasquerilla Center has prompted members of the Notre Dame/Saint Mary's community to suggest that the Reserve Officer's Training Corps (ROTC) program goes against the mission of this Catholic institution and should be dropped. These changes are uncalled for and unfair.

The main goal of ROTC is not to train these students to kill, but to instill leadership and disciplinary skills that will benefit them both as members of the military and as civilians.

While it is true that weapons training is a part of the ROTC program, it is training at a basic level. Participants in the program are not being brainwashed to kill. The foundation of the ROTC program, and of the United States military in general, is defense. These students are giving up their valuable free time during college and also fulfilling a commitment to their country after graduation.

Furthermore, through the Army, Navy and Air Force ROTC programs, hundreds of scholarships are awarded every year. Without these scholarships many students would not be at Notre Dame.

Tuition is well over $10,000 and increasing by 9 percent every year, and when combined with room, board, books and living expenses the price of a good education becomes more than the average family can handle.

Today, the Army ROTC has 156 men and 43 women cadets; the Navy, 277 males and 25 females; and the Air Force, 139 males and 41 females.

This brings the number of students in ROTC to 681. Without ROTC scholarships, most of these 681 students would not be here. It is preposterous that opponents of the ROTC programs presence at Notre Dame would allow the elimination of 681 scholarships.

It is a gross misfortune when an intelligent and deserving students are unable to continue their education due to financial reasons. If they believe in the mission of ROTC and are willing to sacrifice free time for ROTC in return for an education, the chance ought to be available.

The ROTC program enriches the education of students as well as provides a means for financially strapped students to attend Notre Dame. Therefore, we believe the Reserve Officer's Training Corps program should remain a part of Notre Dame.

Caption ironic in its ignorance

Dear Editor:

The caption which ran underneath the picture of the Native American dancers at Monday's Entertainment on the Quad (The Observer, Oct. 1) was not only rude, but also a good demonstration of the ignorance that seems to persist on this campus. Despite the fact that this week is supposed to help dispel common stereotypes about other cultures, The Observer has chosen to perpetuate them.

It was hardly an "Indian invasion." The majority of the participants in Monday's event were Potawatomi Indians. This University would not stand where it is today if they had not been so generous. The Potawatomi Indians gave this land to the University in exchange for the education of their people. The University is now in violation of this agreement because qualified Potawatomi Indians do not receive a free education. It is very ironic that Notre Dame can so strongly claim that they are a family-based organization and at the same time leave important contributing members out in the cold.

Furthermore, explanations were given previous to the beginning of every dance. Therefore, labeling the Inter-tribal dance as "some sort of tribal dance" was inexcusable.

I hope that in the future The Observer takes more care in covering cultural events. What The Observer may deem unimportant is another person's life and history. I encourage everyone to attend this week's events sponsored by the Multicultural Executive Council. By doing so, you will not only learn about other people's cultures, but you will also learn about yourself.

Wording offensive to students

Dear Editor:

One objective of the 1990 Multicultural Fall Festival is to demonstrate the beauty of the various cultures represented at Notre Dame. For several of my colleagues and me, the caption below the photograph on page 1 of The Observer, Oct. 2, illustrates insensitivity to Notre Dame's American Indian students and their culture. We believe that this unfortunate choice of words works against the purposes of the Multicultural Fall Festival and deserves an apology from the person on The Observer staff who wrote the caption.

More attention needs to be given to children of poverty

By Maura McCabe Sheehan

As world leaders of more than 70 nations gathered at the United Nations last weekend for a summit on the plight of children, one was left to ponder over the hypocrisy of the Bush Administration's policies on children in this country.

On September 25, the Census Bureau released a report which revealed that half of the nation's poverty victims (to be officially "in poverty," a family of four must earn less than $12,675 a year) were children or elderly. The report cited that "the poverty rate for children continues, as it has since 1975, to be higher than that for any other age group." 19.6 percent of children under 18 years live below the poverty line and 22.5 percent of children under six fall into this category. In other words, almost one-quarter of American children under six years old live in poverty. Even more staggering is the fact that 50 percent of African-American children under the age of six are living in poverty.

Not only has the United States witnessed the pauperization of its youth under the Reagan and Bush Administrations, but there has also been a steady increase in the number of illegally employed children. In 1989, there were 22,500 detected cases of illegally employed children, up from 9,200 in 1983 and considerably above all 1970 levels. Most of the violations found by federal investigators are in the retail trade, especially restaurants. However, the growth of sweatshops in the urban immigrant communities has also contributed to the increase in child-labor law violations. Many mothers lacking affordable child care, must bring their children to the shops, where employers subsequently put the children to work. Other times, mothers working on a piece-rate system need assistance from their children to make enough money to pay for food and rent.

Although Bush declared himself the "education" President and in numerous speeches expressed how important family is to him, it appears that this sentiment of care and concern was merely election year rhetoric.

Over the past weekend, many statistics about the perils which the children of this world must endure were documented on broadcasts and in newspapers. In most cases, the center of attention was on the appalling statistics emerging from the "third world nations." However, the United States must also consider the statistics it is generating: infant mortality has climbed from a low of 11 percent (out of every 1,000 births) in the mid-1980s to 13 percent (out of every 1,000 births). This rate is higher than most other industrialized nations such as West Germany, Britain and even Russia; one out of five American children suffer from malnutrition and among minorities this figure increases to an inexcusable rate of one out of two children.

Clearly, these statistics are disturbing, and if the United States plans to compete with other industrial nations in the next few decades, it must take steps immediately to improve the lives of all the nation's impoverished, especially its children, who are its resource of the future, which the government is nonchalantly allowing to be systematically depleted.

Although the policy tools needed will be complex and must be well thought out and coordinated, there are several actions that the U.S. government could undertake immediately:

1. All women must be provided with pre- and post-natal care.
2. Nutritional counseling and immunizations must be provided for all women and their children.
3. Day care for children with working mothers must become a national priority. Government and business need to cooperate in providing day care centers for working mothers.
4. One of the reasons for the increase in child poverty is clearly related to the fact that there are more families headed by women. When one hears this, it appears that the woman is to blame. But is it any wonder that a household headed by a female is more likely to be in poverty when women's median earnings are only 68 percent of the earnings for men? Action must be taken to bring women's wages up to par with the earnings of their male counterparts.

5. Federal monitoring and prosecution of businesses engaging in illegal labor practices must be increased before U.S. factory conditions revert to early industrial revolution conditions.

6. Finally, there must be an increase in the quality of education provided to our nation's youth—especially for the children of the inner cities.

The United States cannot allow its most valuable resource—its children—to wither away in the vicious cycle of poverty. Action must be taken immediately, before it is too late.

Student Senate helps create equal rights

Dear Editor:

The Student Senate on Oct. 1 moved in a rare act of political courage that needs to be applauded. After a heated debate, the Senate approved a resolution recognizing "National Coming Out Day" for gay and lesbian persons. Their reason: to draw attention to the discrimination which this unrecognized minority suffers on our campus.

Rarely has the Senate shown the backbone it exhibited today. It exercised what is essentially its only power—to express the concerns of the student body to the administration and anyone who will listen.

In reality, the Senate has little other power. It has a limited budget, and all its actions of substance are controlled by the administration, through the veto power of Student Affairs. Its only real power is that described by Theodore Roosevelt as the "bully pulpit": a platform for ideas.

The real effect of the resolution may be the first step toward the achievement of equal civil rights for all Notre Dame students. The Senate, in effect, issued a direct challenge to the University administration. This administration, in denying recognition to the Gay and Lesbian organization, is officially discriminating against them and denying their civil rights, in the name of a vaguely-defined "University Mission" and "Catholic Character."

More importantly, the Senate held themselves accountable for their own actions, by a roll-call vote that makes every member's position known. The 11-5 vote makes clear that this Senate is going to force the administration to hear student concerns, and for that we can all be grateful.

Distinctions between sexes ever-existent

Dear Editor:

Sister Kathleen Cannon is quoted in The Observer (Sept. 19) as saying, "Sexist language is exclusive language related to gender."

Wrong. Sexist language is her feeling about certain words. She feels a certain way and, therefore, it is a certain way. This is the psychological basis of Gnosticism - feelings are professed as reality.

However, she redeems herself in part by the quote, "Language is the way we express belief in God. By no means is it insignificant or trivial." How true.

But does this not demand attention to the centuries-old imagery which has been given to us? Does this not accentuate the fact that God made us "male and female" and not a unisex creature out of man? Was God wrong? Or perhaps He was trying to tell us something - like do not forget that men and women are distinct and different. Or that life turns savage when the sexes are not loved in truth rather than by feelings (check out family life today and the myriad problems resultant from feelings).

Suprisingly, there is no protest about the language of the current "Notre Dame Year of..." Hmmm. Where are the word-police when we need them?

Every minority group deserves the same right to be recognized

Dear Editor:

As an American, I believe that I, as well as all other human beings, am guaranteed appropriate rights by the United States Constitution. Unfortunately, I find one problem with the concept of "rights." I see this problem when some group or organization of people demands special rights which infringe upon the rights of all others. The constitution guarantees us all the same rights, and no one should receive "special rights."

With this in mind, I was deeply concerned upon reading an article in the Sept. 25 Observer about the demands of the 'Gays and Lesbians' to the Notre Dame Student Senate. I am concerned that if the Senate votes to support the demands, my rights and all others of the ND/SMC community will be violated. I have therefore thought of a few proposals for the Senate so that my peers and I will be treated fairly.

As a Saint Mary's student, I too have been subject to some unfair discrimination and stereotypes. I therefore propose to the Senate that it "wholeheartedly condemns discrimination, harassment, and violence" against Saint Mary's women. Recognizing that Saint Mary's women on this campus "feel the oppression that comes from misinformation and misunderstanding" about our intelligence, I call upon the student body of Notre Dame "to open their minds and hearts" to their Saint Mary's colleagues across the road, and to stand up against any form of violence, discrimination or harassment," including that which concerns the panty raid.

Finally, I feel that as a heterosexual, I deserve a day to celebrate my sexual preference. I feel that the Student Senate of the University of Notre Dame tain that it is not the policy of the University of Notre Dame or Saint Mary's College to discriminate against anyone; therefore, it is unnecessary to demand further action from the two institutions to state that fact. We, as Americans, have the freedom to be who we want should proclaim Oct. 11, 1990 "National Straight Day" so that we heterosexuals at Notre Dame and Saint Mary's will feel equal to those who demand recognition of their celebration of "National Coming Out Day."

These proposals are obviously asinine, but sometimes it is necessary to show absurdity with absurdity. It is important for all of us to realize that we can use the basic rights already guaranteed to all of us to our advantage in fighting discrimination. The best way is for one to have confidence in one's own beliefs and morals. I am certo be, provided that we do not infringe upon the rights of others. I am a Saint Mary's College student and I am proud to attend an institution such as Saint Mary's. I have confidence that I am an intelligent woman. I challenge the gay and lesbian community to look at their problem in this way. If they are proud and have confidence in who they are, they should not need the approval of others. After all, everyone has a right to his/her own opinion.

United Way collects quarters for cause

Dear Editor:

Once again, the Hall President's Council will sponsor its annual Quarter Mile for the benefit of the United Way. This event will take place on Friday, Oct. 5, from 9AM until 5PM. Approximately 1/4 mile of double sided tape will be strung between poles placed outside of the Bookstore. Participants will be encouraged to help us collect a 1/4 mile of quarters by donating their spare change.

Each year, thousands of people are served by volunteers of the United Way. This organization helps to support such agencies as the American Red Cross, Big Brothers/Big Sisters and the Cancer Society. Your contributions will definitely be well spent.

It will only take a minute of your time. Please stop by the Bookstore on Friday and make a donation to the United Way. Thank you in advance for your support and generosity.

The famous Irish Guard stand at attention as they provide security and clearance for the band.

Observer/Kevin Weise

KATE KECKLER accent writer

Where can one find some of the tallest men on campus when basketball isn't in season?

Just lend an eye to the football field after a victory and watch the Irish Guard perform the traditional victory clog.

But anyone who has ever questioned the true purpose of the Irish Guard, take note. According to senior Mike Norman, four year member and captain of the guard, the Irish Guard provides security and clears the way for the band.

And clear they do. On one occasion, the members physically lifted and moved a car out of the way so the band could practice, said Norman. Furthermore, they do all this in skirts.

Actually, the proper description of the Irish Guard's uniform is the kilt. The special Notre Dame plaid pattern was first conceived in 1966, and the design was officially approved by the Tartan Advisory Committee in Scotland in 1970.

Believe it or not, it takes approximately 1 1/2 hours for a member of the Irish Guard to get dressed. Their complete uniform consists not only of a kilt, but traditional (and curiously named) items such as hose, spats, flashers, a sporran, doublet, cairngorm and shako. Norman evaded an answer when questioned as to whether or not the guard members wear anything under their kilts.

The current guard consists of seniors Norman (captain), Dennis Very, Mike Stotzer, Jon Sampson, Dan O'Grady, and Pat Cosgrove, grad student Kevin Yaley, juniors Chris Woods and Trey Hester, and sophomore Pat Bednarz. Unofficially, the roster includes Chris Lamps, a senior and three year veteran of the guard who is currently recovering from a paralyzing disease.

No one can question the dedication of the men on the guard. They practice along with the band 1 1/2 hours a day, 5 days a week. They also attend morning practices on game days.

Men on the Irish Guard are chosen on the basis of marching ability, composure, and appearance. There is a 6'2" height requirement, and guardsmen must maintain a stern expression when performing. Try as you might, you won't get these guys to crack a smile.

This year, 33 people tried out for open positions. Except for the captain, all returning guardsmen are required to re-audition. Although no women have ever auditioned, they are welcome provided they meet the height requirement.

The guardsmen take particular care in their appearance because former guardsmen may inspect the group prior to a performance. After talking to a 1953 alumnus and former guardsman, Norman said, "Pride in the group fosters the tradition." These unique and special ties to the past promise to continue as long as Notre Dame has a football team.

Who is that Leprechaun?

accent writer

Junior Bryan Liptak may be too short to compete against a LaPhonso Ellis dunk and too small to tackle the likes of Mike Stonebreaker, but his height of 5'5" and his weight of 127 pounds allows him to bound along the sidelines with the players and cheer his heart out with the crowd as this year's ND/SMC mascot Leprechaun.

"I wanted to put my size to practical use," Liptak joked while explaining his reasons for trying out to be the 1990-91 Leprechaun. Size was not, however, an important deciding factor. Spirit was.

During his freshman and sophomore years, Liptak became notorious for his enthusiasm at the Irish football and basketball games. This enthusiasm never wavered - in fact, Liptak would be at his loudest and most obnoxious during the slow, predictable games, wanting no less than to have the entire crowd participating in his latest cheer.

"I would be at these games," he explained, "and someone standing near me would say 'You know, I could see you doing that.' That made me think."

By November of 1989, Liptak had made up his mind and the training had begun. Tryouts would take place one week after Spring Break.

Knowing no gymnastics, Liptak found himself taking a crash-course from some members of the ND/SMC Gymnastics Club, while learning how to walk on his hands by practicing in between the bookshelves at the library.

While he insists that, due to strong competition, winning the title of Leprechaun was never a given, Liptak's physical and mental preparation, his creativity and most importantly, his spirit and love for Notre Dame gave him that needed edge.

"I thought I could give the Leprechaun a classy representation, not just scream my brains out and roll all over the place," Liptak stated. He added knowingly, "The Athletic Department doesn't want a side show."

Ironically, Liptak's previous summer jobs include such 'side show' roles as Shamu and Fat Cat Mouse Buckle, at Sea World. His ultimate goal, tossing aside his psychology major, is to work for Walt Disney in the entertainment department.

Entertainment, in his eyes, requires spontaneity. Liptak confesses his difficulty with being spontaneous, "A lot of times I just have to think things out." Consequently, about an hour every night, on top of his two to three hour practices with the cheerleaders, is spent brainstorming ideas for upcoming games or special events.

Speaking of time, much has been spent readying himself to do the traditional touchdown push-ups, which, he assured, seems to be the most popular issue concerning the Leprechaun. So far he has not missed a single point and intends to match every one the team makes.

To remain the Leprechaun for the 1991-92 year, Liptak must tryout again. Will he?

Liptak answered, restating that the title would still not be a given, "If things go as well as they are going now, I would guess yes. Every game's a new experience, so you never know how you'll feel."

F.A.S.T. Services Team (F.A.S.T.) leaps into action to assist an injured fan at a recent football game.

F.A.S.T. helps the injured

accent writer

Notre Dame has won its last football game of the season, and fans pour onto the field, but the field is not at the same level of the stands. As your best friend jumps he twists his ankle, and you have no idea what your next course of action should be. Do you rush onto the field, or do you stay with your fallen comrade and try to treat his injury?

Actually, you will not need to do anything because of the services of a little appreciated campus organization. Any injuries to fans are tended to by the F.A.S.T. organization. This acronym stands for First Aid Services Team, and they are a presence at each Notre Dame football game.

These lifesaving techniques prove themselves necessary when least expected, and the Purdue football game illustrated this fact. For three quarters the expertise was unnecessary, but suddenly in a manner of five minutes, teams were called to accidents at three separate sites in the stands. A dialysis patient had collapsed, an usher had a seizure, and a woman fainted and hit her head. The F.A.S.T. team was probably never noticed in the stands, but they responded when needed.

Thirty-four trained members of the F.A.S.T. organization are present at each contest. They are on the sidelines of the field, in the top rows of the stands, and under the stands assisting injured fans to the two first aid stations they help operate. They can be distinguished by their red smocks with white crosses, and each member of F.A.S.T. can treat a variety of injuries based on their standard first aid and CPR training.

As may be assumed, a certain majority of the seventy members of F.A.S.T. are interested in the medical profession, but they can also count electrical engineers and English majors among their ranks. Of course a certain amount of training is necessary for these positions, but the most important requirement is a love for working with people.

While many Notre Dame students could not imagine watching the game from anywhere but the stands, members of F.A.S.T. relish the chance to be an active part of the weekend festivals. No one expresses any sadness at not watching every minute of every game with their friends, and co-workers must create new friendships in order to work together successfully.

A successful organization depends on the hard work of its members, and senior Laura Olszewski serves as the coordinator of these members. Her responsibility is to make certain that workers are present at not only every football game but at every event that first aid might be necessary. She not only coordinates football, but she also coordinates Non Varsity Athletics, basketball games, concerts, and any other event which occurs in the JACC.

The activities of her organization are coordinated with the desires of the administration and the actions of Joann Burrington. "She [Joann] does everything," said Olszewski.

The F.A.S.T. organization has come to depend on the work of Burrington more and more of late as the group has only recently come to exist as its own entity apart from the Red Cross. This new freedom has meant a budget and the ability to update equipment and conduct actual recruiting.

Although every home football game is not going to be an emergency-a-minute situation, when accidents do happen, the F.A.S.T. team will be ready to go into action at a moment's notice.

Bryan Liptak, ND's enthusiastic Leprechaun, whips the crowd into a frenzy with his spirited performances on the field.

The blood on the bricks at Notre Dame

I'm proud to see new buildings going up and Notre Dame; yet looking at them from the outside, newly landscaped, I have a feeling that they tend to lack souls. A late, great Notre Dame professor used to say that the blood of all the generations who have struggled at Notre Dame since the days of the Founder is on the bricks of the place.

The new buildings may be washed in the sweat, tears and honest spit of hard effort generated by our benefactors and fund-raisers; but how can you feel at home in a place if you're aware that there's no blood on the bricks that would confirm them in the grace that they need to become a deathless part of the school tradition?

Besides, there can be no remission of sin without the shedding of blood (Heb. 9:22). All decked out as a rich man's school, Notre Dame has no more milk of human kindness flowing through its veins than the Trump Tower, or any other symbol of wealth that lacks a heart, does. At least that's the way many good ole' boys feel about the landmark quads now on the rise at Notre Dame in every direction. Some of the senior alums don't have much forgiveness to offer the Emerald City, which is, in their view, now turning over its once-Catholic acres to the servants of Mammon, to use as a gold coast where they can build their monuments.

Withholding forgiveness is as Catholic as the Pope. Some Catholics spend a lifetime trying to forgive the Church, melting eventually in time for Christian burial. Some Domers resist forgiving Notre Dame, so that they can have lifestyle worth hanging onto. No Domer is required to forgive Notre Dame everything, even if it were humanly possible; and no Domer, I suspect, has ever tried to, except maybe the late great professor, who forgave Notre Dame for breaking his heart, because he saw blood on the bricks that gave them the appearance of a wailing wall.

I wonder if Father Hesburgh always forgives Notre Dame everything. Are there times when Notre Dame needs his forgiveness for falling short of his dreams for the campus? Like Gatsby, you can pay a high price for living too long with a single dream. Maybe Hesburgh's a salvation is that he has many dreams the size of the world.

Of students I have met, Chris, first winner of ND's Martin Luther King scholarship, tops the list as the brightest and best. Halfway through his first semester, he stopped going to classes. He never talked much to me about his problem; but it was all written down in the journal he showed me.

Chris couldn't forgive Notre Dame for not being Harvard. He'd been offered a free ride at Harvard. He came here because his brother, whom he idolized, asked him to. Chris found, after visiting fair Harvard, to his horror, that Notre Dame was like being in jail. He might have discovered that Notre Dame can be fair too, if he'd stayed long enough to see the blood on the bricks. I could have shown him the blood, if I had known then that it's there like a birthmark.

Father Robert Griffin

Letters to a Lonely God

Catholic students sometimes have a hard time forgiving Notre Dame for being more Catholic than their parents; and they stay angry with the University for refusing to run dorms like a wide-open town on a Saturday night when the moon is high. Catholicism is a religion that can leave its members feeling guilt-ridden and troubled in conscience, answerable to popes whom the real world laughs at. You can tell from the counter-culture that being a Catholic who tries to stay pure in thought, word, and deed isn't cool, easy, or possible.

So, nobody is perfect; and the Latin word "credo" doesn't mean "I behave." Christ's blood is on the bricks of the Church, as a sign that God became human in order to save sinners. But of course, that's Jesus-talk, used to brainwash the natives who have gotten restless, to get them back on the reservation. I find Domers, old enough to know better, unforgivable when they go to brothels wearing their class rings, as a way of proving to their drinking buddies that Catholics aren't hypocrites on their days off-duty.

I receive mail from Catholic diehards all over the country, which denounce Notre Dame for being, unforgivably, a hotbed of heresy. Heretics don't bother me; I grew up among heretics; I'm part heretic myself. If you should catch me, or any other Notre Dame heretic showing our true colors, don't ask why we're promoting heresy. Ask us why we're using Notre Dame as a stage for promoting heresy.

The answer is that we would feel stifled, speaking only as Catholics. We'd feel stifled if Notre Dame only allowed us to speak as Catholics, loyal to the Pope. Notre Dame doesn't allow us to walk all over the Pope, either, as though he were fair game for trashing. Should we forgive Notre Dame for not being as tolerant as the Harvard Divinity School?

I see from the Observer that male chauvinism at Notre Dame is becoming even more unforgivable than smoking in public; unlike smokers, male chauvinists are not a dying breed, and who can blame them?

The central icon of our Christian redemption features the Son of Man meeting death on the Cross, while His sorrowful mother watches Him die. Juxtaposing the figures, you could imagine the pain-wracked woman stretched on those nails, while her Son waits in sorrow for her to give up the ghost.

Such an imaginary scene, turned into an icon, would do violence to some verifiable truth about our human condition. In the continuing passion-tide of the world, the woman as pieta--and possible as co-re-demprix--customarily receives the body of the victim--as Soldiers die on battlefields as though it were an unwritten law of the universe that when justice is bloody because of the curse that began when Cain killed Abel, then the violence must fall first on sons, husbands, and brothers, whose widows and orphans must afterwards be comforted.

The pictures of the Civil War dead, seen on PBS last week, didn't leave room for poetic license which could describe Antietam and Shiloh as scenes off a holy card.

But those grim corpses spoke louder than the crosses they were eventually buried under, about how expendable soldiers must feel when they're exposed on the so-called fields of glory as cannon-fodder. No wonder the generals felt outranked as Christian soldiers by the women who waited like "Stabat Mater Dolorosa," to receive the dead, and to nurse the wounded back to health. Here, one hopes, was the shedding of blood that remitted a nation's sins, and opened the gate that leads the lambs of God to eternal life.

How long will we have to wait for the theology to give us images of woman as alter Christus? I will forgive Notre Dame for its year of liberating women if Notre Dame can forgive me for insisting that neutering the church's fathers isn't liberation enough.

All our arguments are going to leave more blood on the bricks, which is needed anyway to give the new buildings their baptism of desire. After the blood-letting, can there be forgiveness?

If what happened
on your inside happened on your outside, would you still smoke?

SMOKEOUT.

Which eyes have glaucoma?

Only an eye examination can tell.

The eye disease glaucoma can steal sight without warning signs. Avoid needless sight loss with a glaucoma eye exam.

Good News For Anyone Who Has One Of These.

The good news is you can lower your major risk factors for heart disease. And the best news is that Americans have done just that. You've quit smoking, balanced your diet and watched your blood pressure.

In fact, since 1977 death rates from heart attack have gone down by 30.9%. Death rates from stroke have gone down 37.3%. So keep up the good work. And we'll keep on working to support the scientific breakthroughs and medical innovations that help us all make progress against America's number one killer.

To learn about reducing your risk, contact your local American Heart Association.

Your Life Is In Your Hands.

An inconsistent Saint Mary's College volleyball team bowed to an overpowering I.U. P.U. at Fort Wayne in three sets, 3-15, 8-15, 7-15.

"I.U. P.U. at Fort Wayne is the top division II school in the area," stated coach Sue Medley. "At points in the match we played very well against them, but we were inconsistent and couldn't capitalize on their errors."

Medley felt that there were too many mental errors with Saint Mary's serves and passing. She also said the Belle's defense in the backcourt was not up to par.

"They (IPFW) attacked us and we didn't adjust our defense," said Medley, who felt that Fort Wayne's aggressive outside hitters, Julie Huber (10 kills) and Temple Swoverland (14 kills) were the main antagonists to Saint Mary's defense.

Overall, Medley was pleased with the play of Saint Mary's. "The scores don't reflect the game," said Medley, "as a team we played much better and we had a lot more intensity and confidence."

Saint Mary's College will play in the Wisconsin Whitewater tournament this weekend.

kind of stats that Stenholt has.

I think that this game will be a challenge for us.

"We're going to give Andrea Kurek an opportunity to shut down Stenholt. It seems to me that if we can stop Stenholt, we can stop that team from scoring. They don't have a great deal of balance in their goal scoring. The game should come down to scoring and whether we finish our offensive chances."

Could the Irish possibly trip themselves by looking past Lewis to Creighton? Not likely.

"Looking ahead of Lewis is a concern of mine," stated Petrucelli. "We seem to struggle on days when we come right out of class onto the field. But I also think that these kids are starting to mature. I don't think that this is a group of freshmen any more. They have 11 games under their belt, and they are really maturing. I am concerned, but I hope that we have overcome all that."

The Lady Jays of Creighton, on the other hand, not only have a high-powered attack, but also possess an airtight defense.

Over its first ten games, Creighton's offensive corps has amassed 164 shots, 107 shots on goal, 32 goals, 19 assists, and 83 total points. Four players - midfielder Karen Kopp and forwards Jill Thurman, Gretta Matthews and Allison Dunham - all have five goals apiece. Two other Creighton players have each scored four goals.

On defense, the Lady Jay goalkeeping tandem of Denise Zaver and Lori Kwapiszeski has a GAA of .715 (six goals allowed, 92 shots saved).

"I think that as far as Creighton is concerned, we are two pretty even teams," said Petrucelli. "They have been scoring lots of goals, and they will be a really good test for us. This is the kind of game we've been waiting to play against a team that is evenly matched with us."

Any concerns about an Irish squad which has seemed to have trouble in the second games of doubleheaders?

"We have struggled all year on the second day when we play games back to back like this," confessed Petrucelli. "Coming out flat is a concern, but I think that playing at home will help, as will the fact that they are ranked ahead of us. That should give us motivation."

Yet while the Irish have been enjoying a good measure of success thus far this season, they have again been struck by a plague of injuries.

Notre Dame kicks off Soccer Classic against Ohio State

Western Michigan and Creighton to meet Irish as 'Weekend of Champions' moves outdoors

Observer Staff Report

The Notre Dame men's soccer team will host the four-team Irish Soccer Classic this weekend, meeting Ohio State at 8 p.m. Friday and Creighton at 3 p.m. Sunday.

Western Michigan will be the fourth team participating in the Classic and the Broncos will square off against Creighton at 5 p.m. Friday and Ohio State at 12:30 p.m. Sunday. All of this weekend's soccer matches will be held at Krause Stadium.

The Irish come into this weekend looking to get back on track. They have gone 0-3-1 since a 6-0 triumph over Valparaiso on Sept. 17; in fact, they haven't even scored a goal since that victory. Coach Mike Berticelli is not really concerned, though.

"Our problem is that the ball is too big and the net is too small," Berticelli jokes. "Seriously, though, it's not that big of a problem. Soccer is not necessarily the type of game where you score a lot of goals. We have an inexperienced team with no returning goal-scorers other than Kevin Pendergast, so we're not a team that is made up of goal scorers. We are just going to have to concentrate on keeping organized defensively."

Berticelli also notes that his team's 2-6-2 record is due to a difficult schedule rather than poor performance.

"People have to realize the fact that we had one of the toughest schedules in the country in September. Indiana, Duke, North Carolina State, and even Wisconsin in the beginning of the year were all top 20 teams. I don't think that as an inexperienced team we have to look at each game individually. Instead, we are going to have to look at the season as a culmination of individual games," Berticelli says.

Ohio State will present the next challenge for the Irish. The Buckeyes started the season strong, winning their first three games, but have been in a slump of late, dropping five of their last seven. Although his team may be catching the Buckeyes at a good time, Berticelli is cautious.

"They're always a very competitive team. They work very hard, they are physical, and they are very aggressive. The difference is that they have more talent this year than in the past. They have a freshman by the name of Carl Lombardo who is very dangerous and dynamic. He really adds another dimension to their team," Berticelli says.

Lombardo (four goals, five assists this season) will lead the Buckeye attack, as will senior Angelo Catenacci (three goals, three assists).

Creighton, meanwhile, is unbeaten coming into this weekend. The Blue Jays (9-0-1) are in their first year of varsity competition, so they will field a very young team this weekend. Their record is deceiving; they have won many of their games against teams like Concordia and Bradley.

Freshman Keith DeFini (13 goals, 13 assists) will lead the attack for Creighton, which has outscored opponents 41-7 this season. Freshman Kevin Doyle, who has a goals-against average of 0.58, will likely start in the net for the Blue Jays. The game will be televised nationally on tape delay on SportsChannel America.

"They've got a young team, with some talented kids. What Creighton did was hire a coach the year before they started their program and gave him some time to recruit. As a result, they got a lot of good, young players. They've got a great nucleus there and a good foundation on which to build a program," Berticelli says.

Berticelli says he hopes this weekend can be a turning point for his own young team.

said Jacobs. "I'm lucky I got the chance to play both sports."

Irish head coach Pat Murphy is definitely another person who is satisfied with the results of Jacobs' tough choices.

"I'm glad he's not playing tight end tonight," said Murphy, almost jokingly.

On the more serious side though, the Irish skipper felt that Jacobs silenced some of his critics.

"A lot of people said if he didn't sign [with the Astros] now, he wouldn't get another chance to play pro ball," Murphy said.

Notre Dame women's tennis accepts Cardinal challenge

Irish bring out the big guns for top-ranked and seven-time NCAA tennis champion Stanford

By ROLANDO DE AGUIAR
Sports Writer

A big showdown will go down at Eck Tennis Pavilion tonight between the Notre Dame women's tennis team and the Stanford Cardinal. Notre Dame will be ready to shoot, with several surprisingly big guns. Unfortunately for the Irish, top-ranked and seven-time NCAA champion Stanford has brought numerous cannons to the duel. The Cardinal's sheer firepower could make this contest look like a massacre.

The reign of the Stanford women's tennis team over the collegiate ranks began nine years ago. In 1981, the NCAA held its first women's tennis championships. The Cardinal won. There have been eight NCAA championships since. Women from Stanford have captured six. In 1991, the Cardinal will almost undoubtedly win another national championship. It is unlikely that anyone will stop them.

Stanford coach Frank Brennan carries a 250-29 career record into the match. His 12 years in Palo Alto earned him the ITCA/Wilson Intercollegiate Coach of the Decade award. A graduate of Indiana University, today's contest is a sort of homecoming for Brennan.

Stanford will carry a 65-match winning streak into Eck. The Cardinal have not lost a team match in the last two seasons. They have won five consecutive NCAA championships. The team has on its roster four of the top 11 singles players in the nation, as well as the top doubles combination in women's tennis.

However, the deadly doubles team of nationally top-ranked Debbie Graham and second-ranked Sandra Birch will not be in action. Though 1990 NCAA champion Graham will compete in singles, Birch, the 1989 NCAA singles champion, did not make the trip to Indiana due to scholastic commitments.

Number-one singles matches resident superstar Tracey Barton against Graham. At number two, Stanford's Teri Whitlinger, ranked seventh in collegiate tennis, will take on Notre Dame freshman Christy Faustmann. The number-three and four spots are also filled by Irish freemen. Terri Vitale will face off with Stanford frosh Laxmi Poruri, ranked 11th in the nation, at number three. At the four spot, ND's Lisa Tholen will play Stanford's Heather Willens. The five and six players are not yet clearly cut for the Irish, but will be chosen from the group of senior Kim Pacella, junior Kristy Doran, and Sophomore Melissa Harris. Stanford will play Marlo Carruth at number five, and freshman Emma Woodhouse at number six.

contacted by The Observer over the past two days.

What is certain is that the team will play in this weekend's Golden Dome Classic. The Irish will meet Oklahoma at 8 p.m.

Friday, Hofstra at 10 a.m. Saturday and LSU at 8 p.m. Saturday.

What is uncertain is who will call the shots on the Irish bench. If Lambert is out, then assistant coach Maria Perez would probably take over the duties. Lambert's son, Greg, is the other assistant coach.

The final event in this escalating ordeal apparently came after the two losses last weekend. The Irish lost in straight games to Penn State and Miami (Ohio) by combined scores of 90-36 to drop to 5-7 on the season. The Miami loss took less than one hour and the Irish had negative hitting percentages in two of those three games.

"I have nothing to say," Lambert said after Saturday's debacle. "What can I possibly say?"

Lambert came to Notre Dame in 1984 and has an overall record of 127-86. He led the Irish to their first-ever NCAA Tournament berth in 1988 after compiling a 19-12 record.

But Notre Dame struggled last season, finishing with a 14-17 record. The Irish have also struggled throughout most of this season.

Fall season nears close for women golfers

By KEN TYSIAC
Associate Sports Editor

The Notre Dame women's golf squad will travel to the Oak Club of Genoa in DeKalb, Ill., Sunday for the Northern Illinois University Invitational. The Irish will play 96 holes over two days in the tournament.

Coach Tom Hanlon seems happy with his team's progress thus far in the fall.

"We are very encouraged by our play this season, and we're looking forward to this tournament," Hanlon says. "We're improving every week. We were only one shot behind Northern Illinois after two rounds last weekend (at the Michigan State Spartan Invitational), so I think we're playing pretty well."

The toughest competition for the Irish in the 10-team tournament will come from Northern Illinois, Illinois State and Kansas State. The Wildcats are the team which seems to intrigue Hanlon the most.

"We've never played in a tournament with them," Hanlon says. "They're in a little better geographic location than we are, so there's a good possibility they might do well."

Seniors Pandora Fecko and Roberta Bryer and junior Allison Wojnas will lead the Irish into the tournament this weekend. Sophomore Kathy Phares will also be expected to shoot well.

"Kathy is doing a really fine job for us this year," Hanlon says. "She has taken up where she left off last year as a top performer. We're getting good play out of our upperclassmen, too, and freshman Chrissy Klein is playing well for us, too."

Off-Campus, Farley take early lead in Interhall play

By CHAD WISHCHUK
Sports Writer

The 1990 women's Interhall football season is only three weeks old and yet there's a championship fever in the air. Stormy skies wiped out Wednesday night's slate of games for the twelve-team league but failed to dampen the competitive juices.

Halfway through the short season the race for the playoffs remains tight. The intimidating Off-Campus team shares the hold of first place with the exciting Breen-Philips Hall, both with an unblemished 2-0 record. Farley Hall, Lewis, and Pasquerilla West are closely clawing at the league-leaders, all at 2-1.

The games on Sunday, September 30 featured last-minute heroics and nail-biting action. Sigfried, Farley, Lewis and defending champion Howard, all recorded six-point victories, but it was Off-Campus' overtime thriller over winless Lyons and Breen Philips' 6-0 shutout of ill-fated Walsh that caught the attention of the Interhall football bowl scouts. With these two giants pitted to meet at 7 p.m. Wednesday the 10th, Cartier Field officials are bracing for the ensuing fireworks.

The "Black Plague" of Off-Campus got a scare of their own from a fired-up Lyons squad. The game see-sawed up and down the field for the entire forty minutes of regulation without a point on the board. Not until O.C.'s initial possession of the extra period when Jill Bodensteiner danced into the endzone on a quarterback sneak from the two did the game see a score and that decided it, 6-0.

Michelle Richards, the fast-talking captain of the high-powered Off-Campus team was excited with the outcome.

"Tonight was the first time we really played like a team," she said. "I think we are improving everytime out there and that's the most important thing. We're having a lot of fun."

Two individual highlights keyed Breen Philips to a slim victory. Kristy Alkidas took a pitch and blasted 98 yards for the lone score of the game in the first half.

CC to host National Invite

By BARBARA MORAN
Sports Writer

The eighth-ranked Notre Dame men's cross country team will face its third test of the season when it hosts the 35th annual Notre Dame Invitational this afternoon on Burke Memorial Golf Course.

The Invitational will consist of four races, with the Irish men racing at 2 p.m. against 16 competitors, including nationally-ranked Pitt and Virginia, and defending Division II national champion Edinboro.

The Irish enter this meet riding on the momentum of their first-place finish in last week's National Catholic Invitational and their recent boost in the national rankings. The team has a strong chance of besting its second place finish in last year's ND Invite, but will face an extremely tough field in its effort.

"I think Edinboro will be really good," said Notre Dame senior captain Mike O'Conner. "This is one of their only Division I meets, so they'll definitely be ready to run. Virginia and Pitt are both great teams also. They both deserve to be in the top 20."

Irish Head Coach Joe Piane agreed with O'Conner.

"Pitt just won the Penn State invitational, and Virginia just won their own invitational. Edinboro is the defending Division II national champion, and four of the top five Division III schools in the country are also competing. We also have the number-two team in the NAIA, Malone College, competing. It's a pretty good field."

Neither Piane nor O'Conner expects much competition from Central Michigan, the defending champion of the Notre Dame Invitational.

"The coach (of Central Michigan) transferred to William and Mary and took four of his best runners with him, and graduated two others," explained O'Conner. "They were completely devastated."

Also working to Notre Dame's advantage will be O'Conner's return to top racing condition. O'Conner, who had been suffering from a sore hip flexor before last week's meet.

Men's tennis braces for Stanford

By DAVE MCMAHON
Sports Writer

Dynasty. It's a level that only a few collegiate teams achieve, but the Stanford Cardinal men's tennis team, winner of the last three NCAA national championships, must be included when considering such great traditions. When the Cardinal faces the Irish today at the Eck Tennis Pavilion, look for their dominance to continue, despite playing without the best singles player in the nation, sophomore Jonathan Stark.

Although playing a team of Stanford's caliber, Irish head coach Bob Bayliss relishes the chance to go up against the best team in the nation.

"I'm excited about the opportunity to test ourselves against this quality of opposition," said Bayliss. "This will be a very high quality of tennis. Stanford is the team against whom all the rest of us are measured year after year."

Stanford will be without the services of Stark, who is recovering from a foot stress fracture, at singles, but he will team with sophomore Jared Palmer in the doubles competition, where the duo is presently ranked first.

Palmer, ranked in the top 12 in the nation, will face Irish All-American David DiLucia, currently ranked 10th nationally, at number one singles.

Although the junior from Norristown, PA will not be able to play, DiLucia, who defaulted from last week's Texas All-American Tournament with a pulled hamstring, will still have his work cut out for him.

"Dave's ready to play," said Bayliss. "He knows what he has to do to win."

After suffering the stress fracture in the spring, Stark was on the road to recovery before aggravating the injury at the end of the spring. Whereas most of the top players compete on the junior circuit during the summer, Stark did not play at all.

Alex O'Brien, a junior from Amarillo, TX, and also in the top 12 nationally, will face Irish sophomore Chuck Coleman in the number two singles match, while senior Glenn Solomon (Roslyn Heights, NY) battles Notre Dame sophomore Mark Schmidt (Atlanta, GA) in third singles matchup.

The Cardinal, winners of four of the last five national championships, are equally as awesome in the doubles bracket, where Palmer and Stark (1st in nation) will team up against the Irish duo of DiLucia and Coleman (14th in nation) in what should be one of the best matches of the evening.

Notre Dame men's team travels to Valparaiso Invite

By KEN TYSIAC
Associate Sports Editor

Notre Dame men's golf coach George Thomas will attempt to set his lineup when the Irish travel to Valparaiso today for the 18-hole Valparaiso Invitational.

Top Irish golfers Joe Dennen, Mike O'Connell, Paul Nolte and Chris Dayton will not make the trip because Thomas is trying to see what some of his less-experienced players can do.

"We're going down to Valpo with what you might call our second team," Thomas says. "We're trying to sort out who is the best among that second group of golfers, trying to find out who is the best under the gun on that second team."

"It's always easy to tell who your top golfers are. When you get down to the fourth, fifth and sixth spots, though, it gets a little bit tougher. I can empathize, with those guys, too, because that's the position I was in when I played at Purdue, but we have to get that lineup set now, because it's really hard to do that in April."

Thomas is very pleased with the progress he has seen in the men's golf program. He says he is pleased that the scores have steadily decreased since he took over as coach in 1988.

"For Notre Dame teams, we are at least respectable. It takes time to build a team. It's tough to find blue chippers who want to come to northern schools. The people who want to be on the tour usually want to go to Sun Belt schools, and they usually can't do the job academically, so we don't get a lot of them," Thomas says.

After the Irish get back from Valparaiso, Thomas will take Dennen, O'Connell, Dayton, Nolte and one other golfer to the Midwestern Collegiate Conference Championships in Middletown, Ohio. Notre Dame will play a practice round on Sunday, and then will play 54 holes total on Monday and Tuesday in that tournament.

Baseball

"This win was a great impetus for the rest of the season," said Murphy. "We feel like we can play with anybody."

Notre Dame starter David Sinnes got the win for the Irish, going five innings and allowing three hits and two walks, while striking out five. Sinnes, who last season led all Division I pitchers with a 1.05 ERA, was a freshman All-America choice last year.

Jacobs, a senior who is decided not to play football this season so he could devote all his time to developing his baseball skills, went 2 for 4 in the contest with 3 RBI.

Not only did Jacobs close the scoring, but he opened it as well. In the fourth inning with no score and Shockers star pitcher Kenny Steenstra on the mound, Danapilis singled over short. Jacobs followed by slamming a triple over center fielder Jim Audley's head, scoring Danapilis from first.

The scoring was largely a Danapilis-Jacobs affair, as Danapilis accounted for the other RBI when he singled up the middle in the fifth, scoring leadoff batter Mike Coss. Coss had doubled with two out to start the rally.

"Mike Coss is the backbone of our team," said Murphy. "I feel like he's got the experience and he's going to do the job."

The Notre Dame pitching staff shut down the Shockers, who last year hit a 13-year low .298 as a team and hit 43 home runs. Tony Livorsi took the mound in the sixth, pitching one and two-thirds innings and allowing three hits and one walk. Alan Walania inherited a first-and-second situation with two outs in the bottom of the seventh, but retired second baseman Billy Hall when Hall grounded out to first.

The Irish pitchers were helped by sparkling defensive plays, especially by second baseman Cory Mee. In the first, Mee made a last-second dive on a ground ball by Chris Wimmer, robbing him of a hit. In the eighth, Mee robbed Wimmer again when he leapt up and snared a line drive headed for right field.

ND to host National Invite

By RICHARD MATHURIN
Sports Writer

"It's the best field we've ever had for the Notre Dame Invitational," says Irish women's cross country coach Tim Connelly.

That seems to fit perfectly into the Weekend of Champions theme, as the Irish host the meet today at the Burke Memorial Golf Course beginning at 1 p.m.

Fifteen teams will be vying for the first place trophy, including national standouts the University of Virginia, Ohio University, Michigan St., Purdue, Western Ontario, and Wisconsin-Osh Kosh.

"Virginia is the class of the field," said Connelly. "They are better than Boston College, but not quite as good as Georgetown."

Last week, the Irish improved dramatically, finishing a close second to Boston College in the National Catholic's meet. The Irish will pin their hopes on their top junior runners, Amy Blasing and Diana Bradley.

Bradley ran well versus Georgetown in the first meet, but finished a disappointing fifteenth in the National Catholics. Blasing turned in an impressive performance in the National Catholics, leading the Irish with a tenth-place finish and a time of 18:59.3.

Irish swimmers to meet Cardinal

By KEN TYSIAC
Associate Sports Editor

When the Stanford men's and women's swim teams visit Notre Dame this weekend, they will field star-studded squads which are second-to-none.

There will be some pretty good swimmers on both Cardinal squads in the meet at the Rolfs Aquatic Center at 4 p.m. today. The Stanford men won three NCAA championships in the 1980s and have finished no less than fourth in the country for the past nine years. The Stanford women's team can boast of some pretty fair athletes as well.

Like Janet Evans, for instance. Evans won the 1989 Sullivan Award for being the nation's top amateur athlete. She holds the world record in three events—the 400-meter freestyle, the 800-meter freestyle and the 1500-meter freestyle. And she won three gold medals in the 1988 Olympic Games in Seoul, South Korea.

And Summer Sanders. She was the national champion in the 400 individual medley and the 200 butterfly last season. She also won three gold medals at the 1990 Goodwill Games.

And Janet Jorgensen, who also participated in the Goodwill games, the list goes on and on. So why would Stanford want to come all the way to Notre Dame for a meet.

"We've had so much success in the last 10 years that I think it's great to be able to share that experience with a school like Notre Dame," Stanford coach Skip Kenney says. "Notre Dame is the type of school that could be great at anything it chooses. (Notre Dame coach) Tim (Welsh) is one of the all-time great guys in coaching and helping his program is very special to me."

Stanford's men's team will feature some fantastic swimmers as well. World record holder Jeff Rouse is an NCAA backstroke champion. Distance freestyler Alec Kostich participated in the Goodwill Games this summer. And J.J. Frietgem, Matt Rodgers and Jason Plummer all should challenge for NCAA titles this year.

All of these athletes will be staying in the residences of Notre Dame swimmers and spending the weekend with them. It will give swimmers from both teams a chance for new experiences. The Irish will be able to swim against Olympic-caliber athletes. And the Cardinal athletes will get to see a Notre Dame football game in addition to swimming in a meet.

"I want our team to experience a part of America and Notre Dame football is part of that," Kenney says. "This is our opportunity to do more than see the inside of a hotel room."

"I plan on doing my résumé on my Mac.
And making Macintosh part of my résumé."

Bob Reich
Sophomore Accounting Major

There's a lot more to an Apple® Macintosh® computer than just something to make a résumé look good. Sure, it's got the capability to improve the look of practically any document. But once you get beyond Macintosh as just an elegant formatting tool, you begin to understand why it's becoming so widely accepted in the business world. My Mac® can crunch numbers with the best of them. It just plain makes me more efficient in everything I do. That frees me up for serious book time—and for not-so-serious stuff, too.

Having my own Macintosh is a big plus now, and I know it'll give me an edge in the real world, too. I'll be able to interface my Mac with mainframes and MS-DOS® computers and still have the ease-of-use that Macintosh is famous for. And that'll make me work better for whoever I work for.

Macintosh is going to make my résumé look better—in more ways than one.

Irish shock Wichita State 4-0 in opening game of twinbill

Shockers gain split in nightcap, 9-7

By SCOTT BRUTOCAO
Assistant Sports Editor

Stoking the embers of last year's slogan, the Notre Dame baseball team took "one more step" towards establishing itself as a national contender Thursday night when it defeated 1989 national champion Wichita State 4-0 at Coaleski Stadium.

Wichita State salvaged a split by winning the nightcap 9-7.

Starting pitcher David Sinnes combined with Tony Livorsi and Alan Walania to blank the Shockers on six hits in nine innings as Notre Dame took the first game of a doubleheader against Wichita State. The Shockers are playing the Irish in the fall in the spirit of "The Weekend of Champions" that gets underway in full today.

The victory was just one more Notre Dame upset of a national power in the last two years. Two years ago, the Irish upset Miami twice in a two-game exhibition during the Miami football weekend, and during that regular season defeated Texas and Miami again.

"We've done it before," said fourth-year Irish head coach Pat Murphy. "I'm not surprised by the win, but I'm proud as hell of these kids. I just stood there and watched. I can't say enough about the great job they did."

The Irish collected 10 hits off three Shockers pitchers, one being a towering home run by designated hitter Frank Jacobs. That blast, hit in the eighth inning with sophomore Eric Danapilis on first, provided two insurance runs that closed out the scoring.

Former football player Jacobs's mammoth home run results from correct decisions

By RICH KURZ
Sports Writer

Frank Jacobs has had quite a few tough decisions to make over the last few months.

The Notre Dame senior turned down an offer from the Houston Astros, who thought enough of his combination of power and speed to make him a 15th-round pick, and the former tight end also decided not to rejoin the Irish football team in its pursuit of the national championship in order to pursue baseball fulltime.

About the only easy decision Jacobs has had recently came in the eighth inning of the baseball team's 4-0 win over Wichita State last night, under a full moon so bright that it probably could have lit Coaleski Stadium on its own.

With the Irish up 2-0 and Eric Danapilis on first, Jacobs worked the count to 3-1 against Shocker reliever Morgan LeClair. Jacobs then decided to swing at the next pitch, which, when it re-entered the atmosphere, landed well over the 360-ft. mark in right-center field.

"I knew he'd be coming with something hard," said Jacobs. "I was just looking for something to drive."

Well, he certainly found it. He was surprised when it cleared the fence, so surprised that he had already sped into second base when he realized that the shot was a home run.

"I didn't get all of it," he said. "But I guess I got enough of it."

What made the distance of the home run even more remarkable is that it was hit using a wood bat, which usually do not generate as much power as the more common aluminum bats. Wood or aluminum, it doesn't make much of a difference to Jacobs.

"I feel pretty comfortable with wood bats," said Jacobs. "I used them last summer in my Great Lakes Region League."

Jacobs also contributed another of Notre Dame's RBI's, easily motoring into third with a triple in the fourth inning that scored Danapilis yet another time. On the night, Jacobs was 2-4, with 3 RBI's on a HR and a triple.

To his credit, Jacobs has few regrets about limiting his athletic escapades to the baseball diamond.

"I'm sticking to my decision,"

Lambert's future uncertain as volleyball team revolts

By GREG GUFFEY
Sports Editor

The future of Notre Dame volleyball coach Art Lambert remains unclear after Athletic Director Richard Rosenthal refused to comment Thursday night on the situation.

The Irish coaching situation -- mainly the future of the embattled Lambert -- has been uncertain since an apparent revolt by team members following two losses last weekend. The team met with athletic department officials earlier in the week to air their concerns.

"I don't really want to comment on the matter now," Rosenthal said when reached at his home Thursday night. "I'm sure we'll be commenting on that very soon."

It would seem that the athletic department must say something by Friday night because the volleyball team is scheduled to host a four-team tourney in the Joyce ACC.

Lambert declined comment when reached at his home Wednesday evening and was then unavailable for comment on Thursday. He did say that any decision regarding his fate at Notre Dame would come from Rosenthal's office before he made any public comments.

Lambert had been on a recruiting trip early in the week, while Rosenthal had also been out of town. It is unknown if the two men met to discuss the situation on Thursday.

Six Irish volleyball players also refused to comment

Lewis soccer team not to be taken lightly

By DAVE DIETEMAN
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame women's soccer team will be hosting the Notre Dame Invitational as part of the Weekend of Champions sports spectacular.

Scheduled to compete are teams from Dayton, Creighton, Lewis, and Notre Dame. The Irish take on Lewis at 4 p.m. on Friday afternoon before facing Creighton, the sixth-ranked team in the central region, at 4 p.m. on Saturday afternoon.

Dayton meets Creighton at 1:30 p.m. on Friday, while Lewis meets Dayton at 1:30 p.m. on Saturday. All four games are to be played at Alumni Field, which is adjacent to the Eck Tennis Pavilion.

It is appropriate that the Invitational is being held during the Weekend of Champions, considering the level of competition. Dayton, who will meet Notre Dame in the first round of the MCC tournament, is a perennial contender.

Lewis (3-5-1), a Division III school, boasts of a high quality program and should give the Irish quite a game. Creighton (7-3), aside from being ranked ahead of the Irish, plays a rigorous schedule and will provide Notre Dame with an idea of how well they match up with the upper echelon of Division I soccer.

As if the preceding enticements were not enough, the Irish team must still be considered a maturing superpower in its own right. Notre Dame (8-2-1), in its third year of varsity play, is ranked seventh in the central region -- the highest ranking yet achieved by an Irish team.

"We have really been looking closely at these next three games against Lewis, Creighton, and Wisconsin-Milwaukee," remarked Notre Dame head coach Chris Petrucelli. "I think that if we can win these three, we will find ourselves taking a jump in the poll and solidifying our position for the season. As we look around, these three games are very important for us."

The lowdown on Lewis is simple: they score. Over the first eight games of the season, Stenholt, the top scorer on the Lewis squad has recorded 65 shots, 15 goals and two assists, for a total of 32 points. Meanwhile, three other Lewis players have combined to tally 75 shots, eight goals and six assists, for a total of 22 points.

The Lewis defense, however, does not appear quite as solid at first glance. Goalkeeper Tammy Policci has a 3.13 goals-allowed-average (25 goals allowed, 64 saves).

"Lewis has had a lot of injuries recently," noted Petrucelli. "They started the season very well; they were a team that lots of people recognized as being good. The injuries caused them to lose their momentum early on. We have not yet faced a player with the
