ND's debate team to discuss censorship

By MARK CAWLEY
News Writer

Resolved: government censorship of artistic expression is an undesirable infringement on the freedom of speech.

This is the topic which Notre Dame's debate team must both advocate and criticize throughout the semester. With such a controversial proposal ahead, the Irish debaters are preparing for an intense season.

The thirty-member team, under the leadership of varsity debaters John Kobers, Matt Salzman, Chris Kozoll, and Valerie Renegar, has already participated in two debates.

Some of the novice debaters attended a novice tournament at Wheaton College in Illinois last weekend. They had an outstanding tournament and captured a number of awards. Scot Graydon and Richard Toohy were named the sixth place negative team. The team of Tim Calmeyn and Mike Sayer placed second on the negative side. The varsity debaters journeyed to Atlanta, Georgia to participate in the Peachtree Debates at Emory University. While no awards were won, varsity member John Albers seemed pleased, anyway, because, "the program here is just getting off the ground," he said.

The team will be traveling to Northern Illinois University during the weekend of November 10th. "The number of debates we attend during the first semester is limited because of the football season," said Albers. "Our activities really pick up during the second semester," he added.

The Irish debaters practice with their coach, Nancy Wallace, who is a law student at Notre Dame. The practices center around developing new theories to support and defend the resolution on censorship.

During an actual debate the debaters must spend four rounds supporting the resolution and four rounds criticizing it. "You have to treat it as a fun activity," said Albers. "You can't go into it with a closed mind. You have to be loose," he said.

While team members are happy with their success thus far, they see areas that need improvement. The team must operate on a University funded budget that varsity debater Matt Salzman calls, "incredibly small." Salzman added that, "sometimes we have to drive fourteen hours to a debate." John Albers also noted that, "the University is not looking for a permanent debate coach."

DeBartolo ranks number 41 on Forbes richest 400

Observer Staff Report

Forbes magazine released its list of the 400 richest people in America Monday and two Notre Dame benefactors were included among the top 50.

Walter Annenberg, of Wynnewood, Pa., was listed as number 31 on the list with an estimated fortune of $1.65 billion. Annenberg, 82, amassed his fortune in the publishing industry.

His support of Notre Dame spans more than two decades since his first gifts to the University in the late 1960s. Most prominent of his gifts is the Annenberg Auditorium of the University's Snite Museum of Art.

In July, the Annenberg Foundation donated $5 million for the maintenance of the Hesburgh Library and the Joyce ACC.

Annenberg has been a major benefactor of individual colleges and universities as well as of the United Negro College Fund. A patron of the communications and the arts, he owns one of the world's finest collections of Impressionist and Post-Impressionist paintings.

Edward DeBartolo

Edward DeBartolo, a member of Notre Dame's class of 1932, is the 41st wealthiest man in America, according to Forbes. The magazine estimates that DeBartolo, 81, has a fortune of $1.4 billion.

A resident of Boardman, Ohio, he is well known on campus for his 1989 donation of $33 million to the University for the construction of a new academic quadrangle.

The quad, to be completed by 1992, will house the $16 million Edward DeBartolo classroom building and the $14 million Marie DeBartolo Center for the Performing Arts.

DeBartolo graduated with a degree in civil engineering from the University and built his fortune through the development of shopping centers.

Although their total wealth is awesome, the richest people in America are feeling a lot poorer this year.

From debt-dogged Donald Trump to financial felon Michael Milken and others, fortunes of the wealthiest declined dramatically this year, Forbes magazine says.

Fifty-three members of the Forbes 400 list suffered declines in net worth ranging from $100 million to $880 million, the magazine said in its recent Oct. 22 edition, released Monday.

Activities are planned for Parents' Weekend

By ANN MARIE
HARTMAN
News Writer

The days are numbered until thousands of proud "Irish" parents make their way to Notre Dame's campus for its annual Parents' Football Weekend.

Each year one weekend is designated as Parents' Weekend. This time, however, is different, according to Karen Leonard, assistant director of Student Activities Programming.

Leonard, who is this weekend's coordinator of events, said "this is the first year where Notre Dame parents are being pulled together to experience the Irish hype in a variety of activities outside the football stadium."

Parents' Weekend will take place Friday through Sunday, October 12th-14th. A Pep Rally will be held Friday at 7 p.m. in the Joyce Athletic and Convocation Center.

Casino Night at Stepan Center will immediately follow the Pep Rally. This event will feature dancing to the music of "The Saxophones," refreshments, and casino games. A raffle will be held at 10:30 p.m., which will give away Notre Dame memorabilia. All events are complimentary.

On Saturday, the day of the Air Force football game, concession stands will be located throughout campus. The Glee Club and Shenanigans will be performing at 10 a.m. and 10:30 a.m. at the JACC Hospitality Center.

At 10:40 a.m., the Marching Band Concert will be held at the steps under the Golden Dome. They will "step off" at 11:25 a.m. and march toward the stadium for the 12:10 p.m. kick-off.

After the game, Student Government will then sponsor the second annual Dessert Reception for all in the South Dining Hall from 8:00-11:30 p.m. Rob Pasin, student body president, said "The Dessert Reception was held for the first time last year and was an overwhelming success. We now hope to make it a tradition for all Parents' Football Weekends. The featured entertainment will again be the Glee Club.

Lastly, the Parents' Mass will be held in Sacred Heart Church at 11:45 a.m. Sunday, October 14. For those parents who have not been fortunate enough to view the new renovations in Sacred Heart, this is an opportune time.

For those parents who have a few free moments between events and are not taking one of the many guided campus tours offered this weekend, the Notre Dame Student Players will present the Broadway Musical, "Do Black Patent Leather Shoes Really Reflect Up?" Performances will be held Thursday, Friday, and Saturday at 8:10 p.m. in Washington Hall. Tickets can be purchased at the information desk in LaFortune for $3.

In addition, Notre Dame paraphernalia will be on sale all weekend at the Bookstore, the JACC Pro-shop, and at the Golf and Tennis Pro-shops. Featured items include the famous green "SHIRT" worn at the Michigan game and the navy blue T-shirt commemorating the final Notre Dame-Miami game. All proceeds from the sale of this shirt for "THE CAUSE" will be donated to the family of a Notre Dame graduate who was severely injured exactly one year ago.

list in 1982, the minimum net worth required to join the elite ranking dropped, from $275 million in 1989 to $260 million this year.

Some, such as Trump, were evicted, another symbolic boot to the 1980s era of living on borrowed money. Forbes said Trump's fortune, estimated at $1.7 billion in 1989, was possibly within "hailing distance of zero" because of looming loans and a slow economy.

Trump, who previously has denounced Forbes for downgrading his ranking on the list, did not immediately return a telephone call seeking comment.

"This year the entire Forbes 400 list seemed to stop going up and, on balance, start going down," the magazine said.

"This year all kinds of things went down: real estate, media, banks, public stocks, private companies, you name it," Forbes said.

It said the declines "reflected a general scaling down of capital values, brought about in good part by a worldwide shrinkage of credit and sinking stock markets."

In Jerusalem's worst bloodshed since 1967, police fired Monday on stone-throwing Palestinians at the Temple Mount sacred to both Jews and Moslems, and at least 19 Arabs died. The Arabs were apparently infuriated by rumors that Jewish extremists planned to march onto the Temple Mount, which is under Moslem control. The shooting began after Palestinians hurled a barrage of stones from the mount onto thousands of Jews gathered just below at the Western Wall, or Wailing Wall, where the Jews were celebrating the festival of Sukkot. The wall is Judaism's holiest site. The bloodbath touched off riots which Police Minister Roni Milo said killed a total of 9 Arabs and wounded about 140.

Two American airmen who volunteered for duty with the multinational force facing Iraq died in a jet crash Monday in Saudi Arabia. The United States is leading a multinational force of ships in the region and troops in Saudi Arabia, and the United Nations has imposed a land, sea and air embargo to isolate Iraq and try to force it to withdraw from Kuwait. U.S. warships had been playing a dominant role in enforcing the U.N.-ordered naval blockade to pressure Iraqi President Saddam Hussein into ending the 2-month-old occupation of Kuwait. But in recent weeks, British, Canadian, Australian and Spanish warships have joined in the interceptions.

David Duke, Louisiana State Representative, recently conceded his U.S. Senate seat to incumbent Bennett Johnston. His decision was officially announced during a recent news conference in Metairie, Louisiana, on Sunday morning. Initially, Duke refused to admit his loss. He threatened to file suit in an attempt to reverse the results. Duke changed his mind after arriving at his campaign headquarters in Harahan, Louisiana, last Saturday night. Johnston received approximately 54 percent of the vote.

A typical child may watch 10,000 hours to 15,000 hours of television before age 18. Because of this, a coalition of children's advocates and educators now wants President Bush to sign legislation that would require TV stations to pay more attention to the educational needs of young viewers. The bill would establish a $6 million endowment for children's programming and require the Federal Communications Commission to begin a review of programs that interweave programming and commercial material, usually toys.

INDIANA

An elementary school principal in Rolling Prairie, Indiana agreed Monday to burn a telephone booth-sized detention box after parents complained that it amounted to child abuse. The 2-by-4-by-8-foot plywood box would have been used by the Principal as a means of dealing with disruptive students. It was never used. Hochstetler agreed to burn the box after he was confronted by about 40 parents during an emotional early-morning meeting at the school Monday. The plywood box contained only a bench and a one-way window.

A Boone Superior Court jury in Lebanon, Indiana convicted an Alexandria man of murder and conspiracy to commit murder in the 1985 shooting of a Boone County woman Monday. John Morgan Jr., 57, showed little reaction when the jury's verdict was announced after less than three hours of deliberation. Special Judge Thomas Milligan scheduled sentencing for Oct. 30. Patricia Ann Mason, 42, was beaten in the head with a hammer and then shot four times in the garage of her rural Boone County home on Oct. 15, 1985.

Lecture will discuss search for 'living' God

By CORINNE PAVLIS
Saint Mary's Editor

Two Saint Mary's students will address the community on their search for a "living" God.

The Lecture, "The Never Ending Road: Our Search for a Living God," is the forth installment of a five part lecture series sponsored by the Saint Mary's Center for Spirituality.

The series, "Women Looking for God," gives members of the community, as well as two students, "the opportunity to share their thoughts and experiences concerning women searching for a God that means something," said Keith Egan, Chair of Religious Studies and Co-Director for the Center of Spirituality.

Egan emphasized the critical importance of involving students in the lecture series. "It is important for faculty and administrators to hear what students have to say rather than having them only listen to us," said Egan.

Egan said that students have been chosen for the last three annual Fall lecture series since "the notion of students having something to say about Religious Studies is an important one: they must feel they have a voice."

The two students, Angela Appleby and Rachel Tomas, are both seniors at Saint Mary's with double majors in Religious Studies and Psychology.

Egan praised the students and said "they are both very active in the Saint Mary's and Notre Dame Community." Both women are involved with the "Encounter with Christ" program at Notre Dame.

The address will take place on Wednesday, October 10, at 12:15 p.m. at Stapleton lounge.

Bishop Rodriguez holds Mass in Spanish

By CRISTINA ORTIZ
News Writer

Notre Dame students should search for their true vocations, all the while keeping it in perspective as they continue their academic studies, said Bishop Palácido Rodriguez, the auxiliary bishop of the Diocese of Chicago.

"Just as each seed grows into a particular plant, so each of us grows in our particular vocation," said Rodriguez.

Rodriguez was the guest celebrant at a Spanish Mass held in Cavanaugh Hall last night, organized through the efforts of the ND Hispanic-American Organization. Immediately following the mass was a reception in the study lounge of Cavanaugh.

Because ND is the leading Catholic institution in the nation, said Rodriguez, and is increasingly providing an opportunity for Hispanics to develop as leaders, he welcomes the opportunity to visit.

Rodriguez is the only Hispanic bishop in the Midwest. Because of this, one of his duties is with the Midwest Institute for Hispanic Ministry located in the Holy Cross Annex near Colombia Hall.

He has been auxiliary bishop for seven years, and during this time he has ministered to the Hispanic community in the Chicago metropolitan area, an area which has seen the need for Spanish-speaking priests.

SMC to sponsor Founder's day

By CORINNE PAVLIS
Saint Mary's Editor

Saturday October 13, marks the 147th anniversary for the College which was founded in 1843 when four Sisters of the Holy Cross came from Le Mann, France and founded the school.

The day will begin with a reception, "A Return to Tradition," in Stapleton Lounge from 12 p.m. to 1 p.m. The reception is intended to express appreciation towards students, faculty, and administrators. International Coffee and cookies will be served.

From 12 p.m.-1:30 p.m. a Directory give-away will take place outside in front of Haggard College Center.

The new directories are organized by students' home towns in order to make ride-sharing easier to plan for breaks and visits home. These directories are free to students. Complimentary Founder's day cups will also be distributed.

An open house in the Riedinger Alumnae House will follow the reception. The open house will run from 3:30 p.m. to 5 p.m.

So Many students have seen the Riedinger House, yet never had the chance to take a tour of it," said Alumnae Relations director Trisha Burke.

Riedinger House, originally utilized by Home Economics majors, is presently used to house special guests such as Alumnae Board, visiting professors, and Board of Regents members.

A celebratory dinner will be held in the Dining Hall from 4:30-6:15 p.m. The dinner will feature a crepe bar to symbolize the schools French heritage. A slide show will run simultaneously.

At 9 p.m., in Haggard Game Room, "Returning to Tradition" will continue with a showing of "The Belles of Saint Mary's." Refreshments will be provided. Also, the library will host a commemorative display of photos, books, and awards involving Saint Mary's over the last 147 years.

"We feel it is important to honor the people and accomplishment of Saint Mary's," said Burke. The slide show, display, tour, and movie are geared at accomplishing this.

White supremacists to begin defense in lawsuit

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — A white supremacist and his son began defending themselves Monday against a $10 million lawsuit that accuses them of inciting the fatal beating of a black man.

Police in riot gear stood by as Tom Metzger, 52, and his son, John, 22, jumped from a van and into a sidewalk elevator that took them to the courtroom of another black man, Multnomah County Circuit Judge Ancer Haggerty.

Dozens of helmeted police, some on horseback, stood guard and a patrol helicopter circled overhead as the Metzgers arrived.

The violent demonstration police prepared for failed to materialize, although a few "skinheads" — young, white racists who affect shaved heads and military garb — waited outside the courthouse. Three young men were arrested outside the courthouse, two for carrying concealed weapons and one in an earlier assault case after the victim pointed him out to police as his alleged attacker.

Metzger, of Fallbrook, Calif., founded White Aryan Resistance and is a former Ku Klux Klan grand dragon. He and his son — also active in the white supremacy movement — are acting as their own attorneys.

The wrongful-death lawsuit, filed by the victim's uncle, accuses the Metzgers of sending agents to Portland to incite violence against blacks shortly before Mulugeta Seraw, 27, was beaten to death with a baseball bat in November 1988. Two of the Ethiopian's friends were severely beaten.

Three skinheads, all members of the neo-Nazi group East Side White Pride, were convicted in Seraw's death.

Campus Ministry and You

WE'VE GOT A GIFT FOR YOU!

Notre Dame has received a new GIFT - one that helps graduating students continue some of the sensitivities developed during their years at the University.

As you've heard many times, about seventy-five percent of Notre Dame students are involved during their time here in some sort of activity designed to help those not as fortunate or lucky as themselves. It is presumed that this concern for others continues beyond the years here, and that graduates leave Notre Dame with caring values well in place.

Many, of course, arrived with such values already established, but their Notre Dame years - it is hoped - do nothing to erode them. Others arrive ready to learn such values from the University's gospel-centered milieu.

Now, the GIFT. GIFT is a program designed by a graduating senior to help establish educational opportunities for those who would not otherwise have them. GIFT stands for Graduates Interviewing For Tomorrow. It's a program designed to direct savings from corporate interviews to educational grants. The savings are made based on the initiative of the interviewing student.

For example: You are scheduled to interview with the Boise office of big nine ledger firm Andrew Arthurson. They want to put you up in the Grand Idahoan, Idaho's only Mobil Five Star rated luxury spa. You tell them about GIFT and say that you prefer to stay in the Vacation Manger, not a bad place at all, and have the $100 a night savings given to GIFT. Or you stay with your friend Orin Hatch and Andrew Arthurson donates the entire expense to GIFT.

It costs Andrew Arthurson no more to interview you, and they get a tax benefit. In addition, they're realizing what a great caring person you are, and thus you are hired over those party animals who had a great time at the Idahoan.

What does GIFT do with the money? This first year, the benefit of your kindness will be donated to the Center for Basic Learning Skills, a program teaching inner-city South Bend adults to read. It's run by a couple of Catholic nuns who are well beyond the retirement age but actually go door to door asking if anyone wants to learn to read. Then, they teach them. They've been doing this for years, and pay for their supplies mostly out of pocket.

As GIFT grows, the desire of the founder is to establish a scholarship fund for persons who attend the University under difficult financial straits. Examples would include those strongly desiring an alternative to ROTC, students whose financial circumstances change after enrollment and those losing loans or other scholarships.

In Summary: GIFT is an opportunity to serve the educational needs of others and to let potential employers know your own values include concern for others. It encourages those interviewing for jobs - whether with law firms, accounting firms, labs or financial institutions - to let the potential employer know about GIFT and ask them to participate. The results of this effort help others have an opportunity for the same education you had yourself.

Interested in learning more? Call Kevin Cavanaugh at 283-4307 and leave a message. He'll get back to you. It's his GIFT.

Recycling program begins at SMC

By RENEE YOUNG
News Writer

Saint Mary's College kicked off the official beginning of a new aluminum can recycling program yesterday.

The student run program, entitled "Saint Mary's Recycles," hoped to promote environmentally responsible behavior on campus. According to the program president, Lauren Leshnock, the program is working to educate students, faculty and others about the resource crisis our country is facing today.

The program plans to educate the students by conducting environmental awareness workshops and inviting environmental activists to speak on campus.

The support for the program will be entirely up to the Saint Mary's Community. Receptacles have been placed in all of the resident halls, the academic buildings, and the Haggar College Center. Each building has a building coordinator and section or area representatives responsible for collecting the cans from the containers and taking them to the central locations for that building. They will then be transported to the recycling center.

According to vice-president of "Saint Mary's Recycles," Christina Varallo, the money raised from the can collecting will go directly back into the program for supplies, creating a self-supportive system.

The majority of the response to the program has been positive, Saint Mary's student Kim Martin said. "It was about time we started all recycling. I hope this program encourages everyone at Saint Mary's to do so."

The next meeting of "Saint Mary's Recycles" is on October 18 at 7 p.m., in room 303 of the Haggar College Center.

Mixon passes office of President to Cathcart

By PETER AMEND
News Writer

In Student Senate this week, Dave Cathcart, former vice president of the Sophomore Class, was officially named the new president of the class due to the resignation of Patrick Mixon.

According to the Student Government Constitution, "In the event of a vacancy in the office of Class President, the Class Vice-President shall become Class President. In the event of a vacancy in a Class Office position, the Class President shall fill the vacant position(s), subject to the approval of a majority vote of the entire Student Senate."

"In the event that the offices of both the class President and Class Vice-President shall simultaneously become vacant, the Student Senate shall appoint, by a majority vote, an eligible student to serve as Acting Class President. The Acting Class President and the Acting Class Vice-President shall become official upon approval of a majority vote of the entire Student Senate."

The changes approved by the Senate are as follows:

- Molly O'Neill remains treasurer.

- Dave Cathcart moves from VP to President.

- Robin Stumpf moves from secretary to VP.

- Jennifer Swize moves from Service Commissioner to secretary.

In other business, the Senate discussed the possible avenues for preventing the annual snowball fight from occurring this year. Some of the suggestions presented were:

- 1) Make individuals caught doing damage pay for all the damage.

- 2) Have Hall Presidents warn students in respective dorms not to participate in the activity.

- 3) Have security deter the fight completely.

NOTRE DAME VS MIAMI T SHIRTS OCTOBER 20, 1990

On the evening of October 20 last year, Zheng-de Wang, a Notre Dame graduate student from Tianjin, China, was struck down by a car while walking on Notre Dame Avenue. Zheng-de had already received his master's degree in sociology, was pursuing a doctoral degree and was hoping to obtain a law degree from Notre Dame for what would certainly have been a distinguished career in international law. Uninsured at the time of the accident, Zheng-de was severely injured and comatose for several months. Now confined to a wheelchair and undergoing therapy, Zheng-de is able to recognize old friends and to move his fingers for rudimentary communication, but his recovery is far from complete and far from certain.

Profits derived from the sales of this T-shirt will be donated to Zheng-de's family for the enormous expenses this tragedy has inflicted on them.

2 Live Crew challenges court

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — An attorney defending the rap group 2 Live Crew against obscenity charges on Monday challenged the county's voter-based jury pool as unconstitutional in cases that depend on community standards.

"Because it relies only on voter registration lists it leaves you always with a pretty middle-class, semi-middle-aged disproportionately white jury pool because those are the people who register to vote in the greatest numbers," said attorney Bruce Rogow.

He also represented Charles Freeman, a black record store owner convicted last week by an all-white jury on a similar charge for selling the group's album, "As Nasty As They Wanna Be."

The defense attorney didn't suggest an alternative way to choose potential jurors.

The album, which U.S. District Judge Jose Gonzalez earlier ruled obscene, has sold about 2 million copies.

Crew leader Luther Campbell and band members Chris Wongwon and Mark Ross face misdemeanor obscenity charges stemming from a June 10 adults-only performance at a nightclub in Hollywood, Fla.

Campbell angrily walked out of the courtroom Monday while the judge read aloud his allegedly obscene lyrics.

If convicted, the three could be sentenced to a year in jail and fined $1000.

Only three of 25 potential jurors questioned Monday were black. However, Broward Circuit Judge June Johnson said she wanted to see the whole 70-person pool before ruling on the defense motion. No jurors were chosen Monday.

Most obscenity cases are argued on the U.S. Supreme Court's Miller v. California test. Essentially, it holds that material is obscene if the average person, applying contemporary local community standards, would find that it is designed to cause sexual arousal, if it depicts sex in a patently offensive way, and if, taken as a whole, it lacks serious literary, artistic, political or scientific value.

Freeman complained after his conviction that the jury "doesn't represent my community."

An elections official said about 8.5 percent of registered voters in Broward County are black.

Johnson rejected a prosecution request Monday that she disqualify herself from the case because she had been a law student of defense attorney Rogow.

Prosecutors are appealing the decision.

The judge approved a defense motion that neither Freeman's conviction nor Gonzalez's ruling should be allowed as evidence at the group's trial.

Two American doctors win Nobel prizes in medicine

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — Two American doctors won the Nobel Prize in medicine Monday for their work in transplanting human organs and bone marrow, revolutionary procedures that have saved thousands of lives over three decades.

Joseph Murray, 71, who performed the first successful organ transplant — a kidney — and Donnell Thomas, 70, who pioneered bone marrow transplants to cure leukemia, will share the $704,000 (4 million kronor) prize.

Most Nobel Prizes in medicine have been awarded for basic research, not for clinical treatment.

"I really thought this work was too clinical to ever win the prize," Thomas said from his home in Bellevue, Wash. He is affiliated with the Fred Hutchinson Cancer Research Center in Seattle, one of the world's major bone marrow transplant institutions.

But in the case of transplants, the clinical treatment was a radical advance.

"This was astonishing, to take one organ and move it to another person. It was science fiction 30 years ago," said Dr. Carl-Gustav Groth, a member of the Nobel Assembly at the Karolinska Institute, which awarded the prize.

CHICAGO (AP) — The rate at which Americans died from accidents decreased an estimated 21 percent in the last decade, according to a group that promotes safety. Experts attributed the improvement to seat belt laws, smoke alarm requirements and other toughened safety regulations.

The National Safety Council, a public service organization with headquarters here, reports that accidents still rank as the fourth leading cause of death, as they were at the beginning of the 1980s.

But the combination of new laws and lower public tolerance for unsafe behavior at home, at work and especially behind the wheel of a car has improved Americans' safety record, said Alan Hoskin, director of the council's statistics department.

"In general, people are demonstrating more concern for safety in numerous aspects of their lives," Hoskin said Monday.

Cancellation of 'U' a disappointing decision

Student Government's decision to cancel the subscription to the national college newspaper, "U," is a regrettable one.

Student Body President Rob Pasin cited two reasons for the decision. First, according to Pasin, "No one reads it." Secondly, "some people complained" about the appearance of condom ads in the paper.

Pasin and Student Body Vice President Fred Tombar said they saw copies of the paper's September issue scattered around the dining halls. While the mess is not exactly a show of respect for University Food Services employees, it does not necessarily indicate a lack of readers. In fact, their presence implies the students actually took the trouble to take them out of The Observer and look at them.

The second reason is equally disturbing. By cancelling the subscription for this reason, the University avoids the existence of condoms. If the University wants its students to adopt certain viewpoints toward sex and birth control, the best solution is to educate them to make the choice for themselves. By censoring the ads, the University is not solving the problem; it is fostering a more dangerous one: ignorance. Not only are the students being encouraged to avoid making adult decisions, they are not being encouraged to view sex responsibly.

It also seems to be a contradictory action on the University's part: on the one hand, students are encouraged to read AIDS literature which freely discusses birth control, but on the other hand, a national newspaper which advertises condoms is not permitted to be distributed on campus. The University's next logical step would seem to be to remove magazines from the Bookstore and the deli in LaFortune which treats similar subjects, such as GQ and Cosmopolitan.

Furthermore, reading U. provided students with a means of keeping up with events and trends on other college campuses. The paper featured a variety of stories from college newspapers around the country.

Cutting off the subscription isolates Notre Dame students further from national issues important to their peers, as well as distancing students around the nation from Notre Dame. It is difficult to understand how Notre Dame can consider itself a premier national university when students' contact with other national universities is curtailed.

Military needs Christian influence when making important decisions

Dear Editor:

Today I read yet another article in The Observer criticizing the ROTC programs at Notre Dame, the day after I was informed that ROTC students were not to wear their uniforms to the Mass for the Pasquerilla Center dedication because of anticipated protests. As a senior enrolled in naval ROTC, and as a Catholic, I would like to respond to the controversy created about ROTC at a Catholic university.

I did not join ROTC for purely financial reasons, contrary to what Mr. Long asserted in his letter on Oct. 4. I have always wanted to be an officer in the armed forces. I have chosen a career and a lifestyle, not a free ride through college.

As to the nature of my chosen career, it is important to consider the actual mission of the U.S. military. The mission of our armed forces is not to wage war, but to maintain peace. The current situation in the Persian Gulf demonstrates this mission. If the United States was not interested in keeping peace at all costs, thousands of Navy, Marine Corps, Army and Air Force personnel would not be deployed in Saudi Arabia. It is also important to notice that while the United States is not permitting Iraq to have its way in Kuwait, neither has the United States invaded Iraq. The United States has not sought unnecessary bloodshed in the past, nor does it now.

It is disturbing to me that individuals like Mr. Long seek to cut off the military from Christianity. In a time of national emergency, does Mr. Long really hope that there are no Catholics at the front? It only seems logical to hope that when military decisions are being made, individuals with a moral, ethical, Christian background are making them. Considering the difficult moral decisions that military personnel may be called upon to make, it certainly seems cruel to want to cast these people out of Christianity. My Catholic upbringing helped me to make the decision to join the military; I would hate to be alienated from my church when I have more crucial choices to make.

I would like to add that I do not want to stifle people like Mr. Long. It is vital to our country that individuals continue to question and criticize, and it is the right to such skepticism that I am prepared to defend.

Dear Editor:

As fellow students of Notre Dame, we all share one common goal: to achieve excellence in academics. If we are doing well within the academic part of life, some of us choose to participate in an extracurricular activity.

Some of us, however, have an extracurricular activity that requires so much time that our academics begin to suffer. I am a person who fits this profile perfectly. Therefore, having my priorities in the order of academics first and extracurricular activities second, I am resigning my position of President of the Sophomore Class.

This decision did not come easily for me. Foreseeing that my time would be limited, I took the initiative to attend summer school and take organic chemistry. I thought that this would alleviate some pressure for time, but it did not. My officers respect my decision to resign, and I hope that you, too, will respect the difficult decision I made.

The new officers of the sophomore class will be as follows: Dave Cathcart, president; Robin Stumpf, vice-president; Molly O'Neil, treasurer; Jennifer Swize, secretary. Having worked with these four people, I am highly confident that they will do an excellent job in serving the Class of 1993. I wish the four of them the best of luck.

In conclusion, I would like to thank the Class of 1993 for the opportunity they gave me to serve as their president.

U.S policy in Middle East neglects humanity's interests

By Paul Peralez

His country ravaged by eight successive years of war exacerbated by an American foreign policy rife with C.I.A. intrigue and wildcat imperialism, Saddam Hussein seeks nothing but to unite the Arab people and to restore to the Arab mastery of his house. Saddam Hussein saw in Kuwait not a nation, but a fiefdom ruled by a totalitarian emir whose power was maintained by a bevy of political whores in the United States Congress who prostituted their governmental authority to maintain an insufferable regime. The suffering of his own people, the callous indifference of Christian nations to their plight and the history of European colonialism, which divided a once-united community into a map of nation states, justify the restoration of Iraq to its former size. Saddam Hussein, by history and by right, must have dominion over Kuwait. President Bush must withdraw American forces from the Middle East and leave the Arab people to handle their own affairs.

Saddam Hussein has been portrayed in the West as a madman — a religious zealot who flouts international law and defies human decency. Let us forget, the United States has its own record of wanton aggression and brutality. The United States is the only state to have exploded nuclear weapons. This country, through clandestine agencies and through the abrogation of its own constitution, has been engaged in a continuous war for the past seventy-five years. The United States has sought to discredit foreign leaders that refuse to subordinate their humanity or sell the destinies of their people to the West. The United States has fomented revolutions around the world, bringing death and destruction to innocent peoples in Latin America, Africa, Asia and the Middle East. Now the United States government is working to further divide the Arab people and to persuade the world that the economic interests of the Western nations warrant an overt violation of Arab sovereignty. Indeed, oil seems to be the world's most precious commodity — more precious, even, than the blood of the young men who are now poised to fight a war in a foreign land.

Clearly, the media has profited generously from the events in the Middle East. Devoid of any moral considerations, many in the media have simultaneously exploited our nation's fears of war and its insatiable appetite for a strong-armed people who refuse to suffer a bastard foreign policy — a policy that places the economic interests of a handful of powerful American corporations over the interests of humanity. These born-again jingoists must revel at the possibility that American brinkmanship will collapse an American presidency — more copy, more money and more fuel for the seductive self-delusion that the media, and not the electorate, is the real American power broker.

Let the president of the United States be damned for dispatching tens of thousands of American soldiers to the Middle East in what amounts to attempt to redeem an American pride wounded by the Vietnam conflict or to shore up a presidency burdened by the legacy of a doddering incompetent — a massive debt, a disintegrating infrastructure, a third rate system of education and a people that faces a future fraught with uncertainty. Alas, a people who may soon be at war.

It is appalling that the president's actions command such a high approval rating among the American people. Are we so deluded by the myth of United States military supremacy that an American victory is a foregone conclusion? The casualties will be great in the event of war. Oil prices will soar to levels so precipitous that our already enfeebled economy will surely collapse and scores of soldiers, many of whom have not yet reached twenty, will be returned to their country in body bags. The United States has neglected to establish good diplomacy with the Arab nations and has altogether ignored their grievances in international conventions. The United States has placed itself on the brink of an unjust war.

Theirs is but a small parcel of Earth that has created the wealth of the mammoth industrial complex of the Western World, yet the Arab people themselves live in a state of shocking deprivation. The United States has sought to discredit Arab leaders who dare seek just compensation and an equitable distribution of the money derived from oil. In many ways, both subtle and direct, the United States has repeatedly attempted to foist its authority upon weaker nations. In the Arab world, the United States has selectively sold ordnance and sophisticated military hardware to those nations that oblige American political demands. Several days ago, the president proposed that many billions of dollars in outstanding debt owed to Egypt to the United States be forgiven in appreciation of Egypt's support for the American invasion of the Middle East. And early this week, the president announced a multi-billion dollar sale of arms to Saudi Arabia — arms which Saudi Arabia had sought for years and whose sale had been strongly opposed by Israel. Riven by struggles contrived and implemented by men in the United States Congress and in the Pentagon, the lives of the Arab people are fettered by protracted American intervention in their domestic affairs. We have discredited their leaders, manipulated their economies, blasphemed their religion and committed wholesale murder of their populations. For them, then, Saddam Hussein is a hero. By its own folly, the United States hazards making him a martyr.

Plans for war hinder possible peace settlements

By Tara Verdonk and Ellen Feeney

"War in the Middle East is inevitable."

"Saddam Hussein must eventually be removed from power, and that will inevitably require U.S. military action."

Such sentiments are reverberating across the U.S. and some regions in the world, as there seems to be no end in sight to the crisis in the Middle East. Is this the way we really want this crisis to end?

The cold war is over, and the world finds itself with unprecedented opportunities to effectively halt serious aggression without resorting to war. All but a very few nations of the world have come together to condemn the invasion of Kuwait. Their message is that aggressive action will no longer be tolerated as a means to resolve disputes.

However, if this message is to be made effective and credible, the means employed must fit and justify the ends sought. Those who convey the message must be confident that non-violent measures can repel aggression. Aggressive actions cannot be used to convey the message that aggressive action is to be renounced.

The more we focus on plans for war, the more we will miss opportunities for peaceful settlement, and, thus, truly cause war to be inevitable. Such a war could involve the unleashing of some of the deadliest weapons known to humankind and would undoubtedly result in large numbers of Americans coming home in body bags. Why, when so much of the world has changed, would war be considered to be either in our national interest or inevitable?

If our principle is that war must be the absolute last resort in resolving a dispute, then our goals and policies must reflect this. We should also take advantage of the fact that the Soviet Union and most of the Arab world are likewise condemning Hussein.

First, we must define our goals and de-escalate the rhetoric. Our immediate concern should be, and is, getting Iraq out of Kuwait and protecting Saudi Arabia from invasion. This does not necessarily entail the removal of Saddam Hussein from power, for to attempt to do so would violate the very end we seek. Hussein may have had legitimate grievances concerning Kuwait's use of an oil field on the border between the two countries. He undeniably had no right to invade Kuwait over this problem.

In the same way, we have legitimate grievances against Hussein. Even though he is in the wrong and deserves the condemnation and punishment he is receiving, we still do not have the right to forcibly remove him from power. The goal is to change his behavior, not his role in Iraq, however psychologically satisfying the latter may be.

Likewise, we must refrain from viewing the dispute solely in terms of good-bad, winners-losers, and us-them. Such terminology limits the option that could be utilized to peacefully settle this situation. Instead, we should be trying to find "face-saving options" for each of the parties involved so that each can claim some level of victory in forging a solution to the crisis.

Second, to facilitate the finding of "face-saving options," the U.S. must gradually turn over command of peace-keeping forces in the Gulf to the U.N. This would create the conditions for multi-lateral dialogue and negotiation and de-escalate the dispute from being a Bush-Hussein or U.S.-Iraq crisis. Further, replacing U.S. troops with U.N. troops would help to avoid a situation where aggressive action by the U.S. seems to be the only alternative to dealing with Hussein. Now with U.S. troops as the predominant force, Iraq is forced into a situation where aggressive action may soon seem its only chance for addressing its concerns or "saving-face". The U.S. is seen primarily as a threat, and our presence is used by Hussein to deflect discussion of the real issue-resolving the crisis brought about by his invasion of Kuwait.

A U.N. force, however, would be seen as less of a threat and more of a peace-keeping, police-like force that is encouraging diplomatic resolution efforts. While the U.S. is currently claiming to be such a force, it can not take it upon itself to play such a role effectively for the long term when it is so resented and seen as an interventionist power in the region. The only legitimate global peace-keeping police force is one that truly represents the interests of the world, and, right now, the U.N. is the only such body. With a U.N. force fulfilling such a peace-keeping role, it might be easier for Hussein to withdraw from Kuwait and save face without being seen as caving in to what is viewed as American interventionist pressure.

Furthermore, Iraq would be much less likely to attack a U.N. force. An attack now on forces controlled by the U.S. could easily split up the existing coalition of forces if U.S. commanders and strategies dominate and Israel gets involved. If Arab states are to remain a viable part of the peace-keeping operation, then they are more likely to do so under U.N. rather than U.S. command if the shooting starts. And Hussein would know that an attack on U.N. forces would be more of an attack on the whole world.

The costs of peace, some say, are too high and will result in dangerous appeasement of aggression. However, in this situation, the costs of war could easily outweigh any benefits derived from it. This is especially true when their is opportunity for allowing the economic sanctions to take their effects and to creatively use conflict resolution techniques that the U.S., the U.S.S.R., and the Arab world can accept and promote.

Hussein has shown that he is sensitive to world opinion. The video he produced concerning the hostages aptly demonstrated this. Furthermore, Hussein has also alluded to the possibility that he would be willing to take part in a conference to solve both the Kuwait problem and the Palestinian question. Perhaps, with continued pressure, Hussein would be willing to put off the Palestinian question if it was put second on the agenda, following the resolution of the Kuwait crisis.

It is too early to rule out a peaceful settlement and act as if war is inevitable. Our leaders need to know how strongly we want peaceful means of settlement to be pursued. We encourage those with similar sentiments to take action and begin by writing President Bush and local congressional representatives.

It is time to have the great moments of U.S. history be actions for peace and astute diplomacy and not war and cold war power politics.

Influential ND volunteers contribute much to Peace Corps program

By JOHN FISCHER
Accent Writer

Some people, when they graduate from college, go to live in Uganda for a couple years.

These people, including fifteen Notre Dame graduates, are members of the United States Peace Corps. While not everyone goes to Uganda, this is one of 70 countries which are on the receiving end of the Peace Corps' efforts.

Last week, in the Hesburgh Library lobby, Peace Corps recruiters attempted to encourage more Notre Dame students to join the program upon graduation. Since Father Hesburgh helped to found the organization 29 years ago, recruiters have been coming to Notre Dame looking for people to serve a two-year stint in a variety of nations.

The Peace Corps seeks graduates with a variety of different skills and areas of expertise, with a focus on such scarce skills as agriculture, nursing, and adult education. A college degree is usually necessary for most jobs, which is a requirement set forth by the nations who request Peace Corps assistance.

The application and acceptance process takes approximately nine months, according to recruiter Noreen Carrillo, who just recently returned from her assignment in Costa Rica. The process includes the initial application, medical screening, and interviews. There are currently 6,344 volunteers working abroad in developing countries.

Each volunteer is provided an allowance for food and transportation, but otherwise have no income while there, according to Carrillo. They live in, work in, and are a part of their community. Once their two-year commitment has ended, each volunteer is granted a $5,400 "readjustment allowance" to help ease their transition back into life in the United States. Some workers get a one year extension in their nation, depending on the program they are involved with.

Popular current programs include health services, technical education and advice, and literacy. Forestry and other environmental concerns are gaining ground in such regions as Eastern Europe, where a sizable number of nations have recently been added to the Peace Corps' agenda.

Carrillo says, "The beauty of the Peace Corps is its hands-on, grass roots feel." She states that Peace Corps members have more of an influence on individuals in other nations than the United States' official representation there. She says they are not a political organization.

Politics, however, can be a source of trouble and difficulty for the Peace Corps. Volunteers have had to leave Liberia, the Philippines, and Yemen recently due to political instability in those nations. In the Philippines, a volunteer was actually threatened, as a warning that the Peace Corps was not welcome in that nation at that time.

For the most part, however, the Peace Corps is highly appreciated by the host nation and its citizens, Carrillo says. The only other major problem the Corps may have to face is a possible budget cutback. Because the Peace Corps is 100 percent funded by the United States government, this is a possibility, although there is no current knowledge of a reduction of funds.

Carrillo's personal experience in Costa Rica was as an adult education coordinator, and a teacher of literacy in high school. Another of her tasks was to refurbish school facilities in rural areas of Costa Rica.

She also had time to participate in activities with and for the community, such as teaching dance and English to children, and taking them to the movies, which is something they had never done before. The children decorated her porch with wild flowers in appreciation of such efforts.

Carrillo says future goals include getting more minorities involved in order to show the people of other nations that the United States has various and diverse cultures to offer.

She says each volunteer makes his or her own mark on the program. "The goal is to bring an understanding to other countries of what America is all about, and for the volunteers to bring home to America an understanding of what foreign cultures are about. We are in our 30th year and are still going strong," she adds.

Chuck resorts to Mom and Dad for help with anxiety

Dear Mom and Dad,
I'm sorry I haven't been calling. I almost had to sell my Miami tickets to pay for the last CTI bill, so I decided to take a study break and write you a letter instead. Actually, almost everything I do — eating, sleeping, going to class — seems like a study break, lately.

Today's been busy. I went to the football game today and sunburned the right half of my face. My friend, Joe, did too, except he was wearing sunglasses so he looks like a raccoon.

After the game, I went to the dining hall. The split-pea soup they served really worries me. It looks just like the experiment I did in Chem Lab yesterday. Maybe that's why the food tastes better when alumni are here. They put chemicals in it.

After dinner, I read a newspaper for the first time since classes started. Seems like the government is going to shut down because they've finally run out of money, but the president says we shouldn't see any change in the quality of federal services. Hmmm...

Some of my friends are hoping they won't have to go to ROTC training until the shut down is over. I hope George is right, though. If the mail slows down any more, you probably won't get this until next semester.

The paper also said that U.S. News and World Report dropped Notre Dame from its list of top 25 universities. The administration says we just don't have enough quads.

I went outside after I finished the paper. The smell changed again this weekend. It was a spoiled milk fragrance and now it's more of a rotting bananas aroma. Some days the air is so thick you can almost chew it. A lot of people are from megaopolises (notice I've been using the thesaurus Grandma gave me) and don't seem to mind.

You really can feel the big city influence here. Everyone walks on the sidewalks, for instance. The campus is still fairly safe, though. My biggest fear is that I'll get run over by a golf cart. Or that one of the planes that buzz the dome every hour will crash into my dorm.

Otherwise, all I really have to worry about is my laundry. Yesterday, I bought a sweatshirt at the bookstore to put it off another day. At least I know I'm not alone. If they gave freshmen course credit for learning how to wash your clothes (and they should), a lot of people would be failing. My classes are full of shrunken, light blue t-shirts. And someone else accidentally dried my laundry last week.

Most everyone wears t-shirts here, especially ones that say

Chuck Young Fresh Perspective

"Catholics vs. Convicts." I overheard a professor chastising another freshman for wearing one. He said he didn't think convicts should be defamed by being associated with the University of Miami.

Despite my wardrobe's lack of funny t-shirts, my social life is going well. But that's no reason to worry.

I went to a Barn Dance last night with a girl from Saint Mary's. It was a good time. When I went into her dorm afterwards, a hostile-looking nun took my I.D. and money. She said I always had to have an escort, but if I came into physical contact with anyone, she'd send a letter to the bishop and have me excommunicated. And I know a girl in Walsh Hall with a sign on her wall that says "No Boys In Horizontal."

Also, there's not much to do in South Bend, so the "big step" here is to ask a date to mass. Church is supposed to be the best place to meet a girl, anyway.

Whenever you have a question, you're supposed to ask your R.A., so I asked mine if people's crushes were as bad as mine.

He said, "Dude, it's worse here. They end in marriage." Oh, well.

I think I'll mention that in my column.

Working at The Observer is fun, but my friends say my writing flows like a glacier. "Trying writing about the same thing for more than one paragraph," one suggested. I'm going to work on that.

That's not the only interesting response to my work. I got a letter from Oregon, for example. It was from a Sophomore's mother who is already worried about what I'll call my column next year. I'll bet her son gets a lot of care packages. Hint.

I also got a dirty phone call from a girl who read me a poem about it. She was a real intellectual. She used words like "effervescent" and "tremulous" along with other ones I can't print. I wish she'd send me mail instead. My roommate wants to write a column, now, and I don't need the competition.

Well, that's about it. I'm out of time. I don't know what I'll send The Observer for Tuesday. The studying here is nuts. I never sleep. In fact, I've been on cruise control since Wednesday. Please save me. Better yet, send money...

Your Son of South Bend,
Chuck

Wolverines become quickest team with loss to reach No. 1

An early defeat didn't stop Michigan from an early rise to No. 1.

Losses by last week's top two teams lifted the once-beaten Wolverines to the top of The Associated Press college football poll Monday. It's the earliest a team with a loss has been ranked No. 1, ever.

"It's nice, but we've got a long way to go," coach Gary Moeller said. "If we're No. 1 at the end of the year, then we'll get excited."

Michigan, which has won three straight since losing its opener to Notre Dame, replaced the Fighting Irish as the nation's No. 1 team. The Wolverines moved up from No. 3 after Notre Dame lost to Stanford 36-31 and then No. 2 Florida State was beaten by Miami 31-22 Saturday.

Michigan received 34 first-place votes and 1,453 points from a nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters. Undefeated Virginia, which didn't play last week, was second with 14 first-place votes and 1,384 points.

Once-beaten Miami jumped six spots to No. 3 with six first-place votes and 1,324 points.

Rounding out the Top 10 are Oklahoma, Tennessee, Auburn, Nebraska, Notre Dame, Florida and Florida State.

The No. 8 ranking is the lowest for Notre Dame in two years.

Eight teams received first-place votes, the most since 1985. Nebraska received two, while Oklahoma, Tennessee, Florida and No. 12 Houston each got one. All of those teams are unbeaten, although Tennessee has two ties and Auburn one.

Michigan's ranking could also be good news for Michigan State, which plays the Wolverines on Saturday at Ann Arbor. The last two times the Wolverines were ranked first, they lost their next game.

Michigan was No. 1 in the 1989 preseason poll, but lost its first game to Notre Dame. After taking over the top spot in 1977, the Wolverines were beaten the following week by Minnesota.

Michigan fullback Jarrod Bunch says the No. 1 ranking will be a factor against Michigan State.

"It's more incentive for us to uphold it and more incentive for them to knock us off," he said.

Prior to this week, no team with a loss had been ranked No. 1 before November. The earliest No. 1 ranking for a once-beaten school had been Nov. 13, 1950, when Ohio State took over the top spot with a 6-1 record.

Ohio State, which was 20th last week, is one of four teams that dropped out of the Top 25 after losing on Saturday. The others, with last week's rankings, are Michigan State (18), Arkansas (21) and Fresno State (24).

Moving into the rankings were No. 22 Indiana, No. 23 Wyoming, No. 24 Mississippi and No. 25 Iowa. Indiana and Wyoming are undefeated, while Mississippi and Iowa each have one loss.

It's the first poll appearance for Mississippi in four years. Indiana and Wyoming haven't been ranked since 1988.

Illinois is ranked 11th, followed by Houston, Brigham Young, Colorado, Clemson, Southern Cal, Washington, Georgia Tech, Oregon, Texas A&M and Arizona.

Belles defeat Hope, Albion, now 9-1-1

By TASHA TIGHT
Sports Writer

The Saint Mary's soccer team was victorious this weekend with two big wins, one over Hope College 4-0 on Friday and another over Albion College 4-1 on Sunday afternoon.

The Belles record now stands at 9-1-1.

The team capped the weekend off by defeating Albion College after a slow start in the first half.

The team struggled in the beginning of the game and ended the half with the score at 1-1. The Belles pulled together in the second half when they found numerous scoring opportunities on which to capitalize.

Megan Dalsaso led the team with two goals. Freshman Amy Ross and Junior Greer Gilliland each added one goal to the Belles scoring effort.

"The team started sluggishly in the first half," said coach Tom Van Meter, "but the team showed intensity and execution throughout the second half and pulled away victorious."

The Belles soundly defeated Hope College under the leadership of senior co-captain Trish Troester. The team dominated play throughout the game and every player was able to contribute to the win.

Dalsaso, Gilliland, Marcia Gaus, and Troester led the team with one goal each while goalkeeper Mary Alice O'Neill recorded her sixth shutout of the season.

"The game against Hope opened up opportunities for all the players to get playing time," said Coach Tom Van Meter. "Trish Troester, especially, had one of her best games of the season."

The team faces University of Chicago today at 4 p.m. at Saint Mary's Field.

Rangers beat Lone Stars, 6-3

NEW YORK (AP) — Bernie Nicholls had a goal and two assists in a three-goal first period as the New York Rangers won their home opener Monday night after two road defeats, beating the Minnesota North Stars 6-3.

The Rangers, who lost in Chicago and Hartford, took a 3-0 first-period lead. Nicholls assisted on a goal by Darren Turcotte at 4:53 for his 800th NHL point, scored his third goal of the season on a power play at 10:53 and assisted on a goal by Mike Gartner at 17:21, the 450th of Gartner's career.

The Rangers, whose Patrick Division championship flag was raised in pregame ceremonies at Madison Square Garden, made it 4-0 on Mark Janssens' goal at 1:55 of the second period.

The North Stars, who split their first two home games, fell behind quickly as Nicholls fed a breakout pass to Turcotte, who roared down the right side and beat Minnesota goaltender Jarmo Myllys, who played on Finland's silver medal team at the 1988 Olympics.

Barry Larkin and the Cincinnati Reds overcame a batting slump and beat Pittsburgh 6-3 in Game 3 of the National League Championship.

Reds take 2-1 NLCS lead as bats awaken vs. Pirates, 6-3

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The Cincinnati Reds broke their hitting slump and Zane Smith's magic on Monday to take a 2-1 lead over the Pittsburgh Pirates in the National League playoffs.

Neither team did much hitting in the first two games, combining for only 10 runs and 23 hits. But the surprise was how easily the Reds got to Smith for a 6-3 victory.

In 10 starts for the Pirates after being acquired from Montreal on Aug. 8, Smith gave up nine earned runs in 75 innings. In Game 3, the Reds got five runs off Smith in five innings.

The power came from unlikely sources, too.

Former Pirate Billy Hatcher hit a two-run homer in the second inning and Mariano Duncan snapped a 2-2 tie with a three-run homer in the fifth and drove in another run in the ninth with his third hit of the game to make it 6-3.

Game 4 is scheduled for 8:15 p.m. Tuesday night as first-game starters Jose Rijo of the Reds and Bob Walk of the Pirates go at it again.

The Reds scored only 20 runs in their last nine regular-season games and showed no signs of breaking out of it in the first two games.

Both teams, however, got their wish in Game 3 as the skies were a steely gray and the shadows of Friday's mid-afternoon start were no problem.

Hatcher opened the fifth with a double and moved to third on winning pitcher Danny Jackson's sacrifice. Barry Larkin, in a 6-for-27 slump, reached on an infield single with Hatcher holding at third.

Duncan then hit a hanging curve over the left-field fence. The Reds second baseman was 0-for-8 in the playoffs and had only four hits in his previous 30 at-bats.

Hatcher gave the Reds a 2-0 lead when he homered to left after Joe Oliver singled with two outs in the second.

The Pirates traded Hatcher to the Reds on April 3 for minor leaguers Mike Roesler and Jeff Richardson.

Jackson was sharp in the first two innings but then appeared to lose a little velocity.

The Pirates tied the score with two runs in the fourth inning, and it could have been worse.

Jay Bell led off with a double, Andy Van Slyke walked and Bobby Bonilla singled home a run. One out later, Carmelo Martinez doubled to tie the score and Don Slaught was intentionally walked to load the bases.

But Jackson struck out Jose Lind and got Smith on a bouncer back to the mound to end the inning. The Pirates had the bases loaded and two outs in the fifth inning but Martinez popped out to short.

Jackson, 6-6 during the season, was replaced by Rob Dibble after Lind doubled with one out in the sixth. Dibble struck out pinch-hitter Gary Redus and Jeff King to end the threat.

On three occasions this season, Jackson was on the disabled list but he finished strong. In his final three starts, the left-hander gave up five runs in 21 innings.

Dibble worked 1 2-3 innings before Norm Charlton relieved to start the ninth.

American League? A's having fun at Sox expense

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — A day before the American League playoffs started, some Boston pitchers went to a batting cage buried beneath the Fenway Park bleachers to take a few swings.

They wanted to brush up on their hitting — or, in some cases, try it for the first time — so they'd be ready to bunt or whatever in the World Series.

On their way, they walked past a group of Oakland pitchers. The Athletics didn't say much, but their stares did: Don't bother, boys.

In actions and in words, these Athletics seldom fail to get their message across.

Fast forward to Game 1. Oakland trailed 1-0 in the seventh inning, but had a runner on first base, pinch hitter Jamie Quirk at the plate and Rickey Henderson on deck.

Henderson hears everything the crowd yells at him, and often talks back. It's how he relaxes, the way he gets ready to make things happen.

So when a couple of guys in the third-base box seats began razzing him, Henderson stopped adjusting his neon-green batting gloves and turned around.

"It's just a matter of time," he said, smiling.

Quirk singled, Henderson hit a tying sacrifice fly and Oakland was on its way. By the ninth, it was 7-1 when Henderson walked to the plate with the bases loaded and two outs.

Wait, one last piece of business before leaving the artificial turf square that serves as the on-deck area at Fenway. He looked back at the same seats, some of them now empty.

"It's time," he said, and then hit a two-run single.

On to the aftermath of Game 2, a 4-1 victory Sunday night that put the World Series champions in a familiar position — on track for another sweep. Both teams are talking about fun, in different ways.

"This is a winning team," Willie McGee said in the bustling Oakland clubhouse. "I've played on winning teams from the Little League on, and there's something about them where they're all pulling together. It's just fun to play on a team like that."

Across the way, in the quiet Red Sox locker room, reliever Larry Andersen presents another perspective.

"Let's go out and have fun," he said. "If we get swept, everybody will say, 'See, I told you so.' If we win, then it's a bonus."

Not hard to tell which team is having more fun, is it?

The Red Sox hope for something better Tuesday when they send 17-game winner Mike Boddicker against struggling Mike Moore (13-15) in Game 3. But it's hard to blame Boston for feeling things might not improve.

Stanford overwhelms women, 9-0

By ROLANDO DE AGUIAR
Sports Writer

Stanford University brought its women's tennis team to Eck Tennis Pavilion ranked first in the nation. Not having lost a match in nearly three years, Friday's meeting with the 25th-ranked Irish looked easy for the Cardinal, as they swept Notre Dame 9-0.

Despite the absence of Sandra Birch, ranked second in the nation, Stanford still had three of the top 11 NCAA players in the nation. Debbie Graham, the 1990 NCAA singles champion, took on Irish number one Tracy Barton, ranked 34th, in the top-seed match. Barton played well against the nation's top-ranked player, losing 6-4, 6-4.

"I think Graham was surprised that Barton hit the ball as hard as she did," said Irish coach Jay Louderback. "Tracy always hits the ball hard, but sometimes doesn't come to the net to back it up. She did a lot more of that against Graham."

At number two, Notre Dame freshman Christy Faustmann faced Cardinal senior Teri Whitlinger. The seventh-ranked Whitlinger downed Faustmann 6-4, 6-0. Despite the loss, Faustmann gained experience.

"It was a really good opportunity for me to be able to play so high and against such a good player," she said. "We weren't expected to do anything outstanding, but we all went out and did our best."

Two freshmen clashed at the number-three slot, Stanford's 11th-ranked Laxmi Poruri and Notre Dame's Terri Vitale. Poruri, too, won in straight sets, 6-4, 6-3. The last of the Irish freshmen, Lisa Tholen, confronted Stanford's Heather Willens. Tholen, who had an undefeated showing at LSU in late September, was defeated 6-2, 6-0 by the sophomore.

Louderback thought that the freshmen each learned from their matches against Stanford.

"All three of them saw that college tennis is a more aggressive game, with more coming to the net, than they faced in high school," he said.

The remainder of the singles matches pitted Irish players Kim Pacella and Kristy Doran against Marlo Carruth and Emma Woodhouse, respectively. Each Stanford player contributed to the Cardinal win by taking her Irish opponent in straight sets. Louderback, however, was pleased with his senior captain Pacella's performance.

"Pacella has played well all fall, but had a tough match at LSU, and some problems with the heat," said Louderback. "In losing (7-5, 6-4), she made a comeback."

The Cardinal doubles tandem of Whitlinger and Poruri downed Barton and Faustmann, the number one Irish team, 6-1, 6-2. The other two doubles matches, however, were closer. Willens and Carruth defeated Vitale and Tholen 7-5, 6-3. The number 3 doubles team of Doran and junior Katie Clark won the only set for the Irish, and nearly won a match before going down 2-6, 6-3, 7-6 (7-4) to Carina Rolley and Woodhouse.

"(Clark and Doran) had a few match points, and played as well as I have ever seen them play," said Louderback.

"When we went in, I don't think our players expected to win. But if we play well and get some breaks, we can beat those teams."

past few years.

Dance team Wynne and Druar, who turned professional in August after placing fourth in the world this year, began the figure skating portion of the show with a jazzy routine that featured synchronized tapping and some saucy flips and twirls.

In perhaps the most daring of the exhibitions, Carz and Williams, who will vie this year for the national and world pairs' titles, shocked the audience with some death-defying moves. Perfectly executing the "bounce spin," which is banned from competition, Williams lifted Carz high above his head and spun his partner by her ankles while her head bobbed precariously above the surface of the ice.

"I think this was the most successful (of these exhibitions)," said Carz. "The college atmosphere really made it fun."

"We're trying to interest skaters of all levels," said Sarah Balwin, the manager of special events and promotions for NutraSweet.

Monday's exhibition marked the first time NutraSweet included hockey on its schedule. David Bankoske slapped in two goals to lead the White team to a 5-1 win over the Blue squad. Robert Copeland, Tom Arkell and Matt Cronin also scored for the White while Dan Marvin tallied the Blue's only goal.

the players to shower, dress, and walk into the media room, they will lose valuable time and have trouble meeting their deadlines.

This is a valid complaint. But realistically, allowing an extra 15-20 minutes for the players to "get decent" will not increase deadline pressure much more. The reporters will still manage to get their story; they always do.

In my opinion, the women's right to equal access and the players' right to privacy should outweigh any considerations of deadline pressure. It is in the best interests of everybody involved to have players brought to a separate media room after the game.

I would've bought a Macintosh even without the student discount.

Greg Gallent
Consumer Economics and Housing

"The first time I saw a Macintosh, I was immediately hooked. It's a work of art. I saw the student pricing and my next move was obvious: get one.

"Some other computers are cheaper, but they're a pain to learn, and working on them can be a grueling experience. Last year, a friend bought another kind of computer against my advice and has used it for maybe 15 hours. What a waste.

"Macintosh, on the other hand, is a logical extension of the mind. It lets you concentrate on what's in your paper, not on how to get it on paper.

You can create professional-looking documents in minutes, and you lose the fear of learning new programs because they all work in the same way.

"Once you've worked with a Macintosh, there's no turning back."

Kenyon Meyer (14) looks on as the ball gets away from the Valparaiso goalie earlier this season. The Irish take to the road for Butler tonight.

Men's soccer faces MCC test Irish appear to have found defense, to play Butler today

Observer Staff Report

The Notre Dame soccer team, which has not allowed a goal in its past three games, travels to Butler today to meet the Bulldogs in a Midwestern Collegiate Conference match.

Butler (9-2) is fourth in the MCC with a 2-2 conference record and has outscored opponents by a margin of 46-14. Scott Lawler, who leads the MCC in scoring with 11 goals and seven assists, and Jeff Kurtz (six goals, four assists) will lead the Bulldog attack. Goalkeeper John Cone has recorded six shutouts to date this season.

"We know they're one of the top teams in the MCC," Irish co-captain Danny Stebbins says. "They're really scoring a lot of goals."

Today's game may be a matchup between an unstoppable force and an immovable object, though, since the Irish (3-6-3) have not given up many goals lately. Goalkeeper Peter Gulli (1.07 GAA) has recorded shutouts in Notre Dame's last three games.

"We're trying to set it in our minds that we want a shutout each game," Stebbins says. "We are trying to concentrate on that every game. Peter Gulli had kind of a rough start, and he needed to gain some confidence in himself. Once we started playing together as a team, though, we developed confidence in each other and confidence in Peter, and he's played well lately."

The Irish have had some problems, however, putting the ball in the goal lately. They have scored just two goals in its past six games, both of those coming in a 2-0 victory over Ohio State last Friday night.

Sophomore forward Kevin Pendergast (six goals, four as-team in scoring even though he hasn't scored since a 6-0 victory over Valparaiso on Sept. 17.

Junior wingback Kenyon Meyer (five goals, one assist) and Stebbins (three goals, one assist), both who scored against Ohio State, will also try to add some punch to the Notre Dame attack.

Although they haven't scored many goals lately, the Irish seem encouraged by the fact that their defense is coming around. They seem to think that if they can continue to improve as the season progresses, they will be ready to challenge MCC leaders Saint Louis and Evansville for the conference tournament title and earn a bid to the NCAA tourney.

"That is our ultimate goal," Stebbins says. "We want to win the MCC playoffs and go to the NCAA's. We are playing better right now, so we think we have a good chance of making it."

The Irish have their work cut out for them. They are 1-3-1 in the MCC at this point in the season, and they still haven't played powerful Evansville.

NOTES—The Irish are 0-4 when trailing at halftime, but 2-0 when they score the first goal

Holtz, Hamill, Bowman skate to benefit Irish hockey team

By CHRIS COONEY
Assistant Sports Editor

Lou Holtz finally got his miracle, but it wasn't until Monday night and it wasn't on the football field.

Instead, former Olympic and World Champion Dorothy Hamill, using what she called "a little magic of my own," transformed Holtz from a wobbly novice on skates to a twirling, jumping performer at the "Irish on Ice" figure skating and hockey exhibition at the Joyce ACC.

"I practiced all Saturday afternoon," joked Holtz. After Hamill locked the Notre Dame football coach inside a closet in the middle of the rink and chanted her magic words, a beefier, more confident skater emerged and wooed the crowds.

The capacity crowd soon realized that the transformed skater was really 1989 U.S. men's champion Christopher Bowman, but Holtz and Hamill's other pupils, Athletic Director Richard Rosenthal, Associate Athletic Director Joe O'Brien and Irish hockey coach Ric Shafer enjoyed their free lessons from the star.

In addition to the instructional period, the show featured performances by Bowman, 1990 World Champion Jill Trenary, 1990 U.S. pairs bronze medalists Sharon Carz and Doug Williams and two-time national dance champions Susan Wynne and Joseph Druar, as well as a single-period intrasquad game by the Notre Dame Hockey team.

The crowd cheered enthusiastically throughout the event, which NutraSweet and the United States Figure Skating Association sponsored to celebrate October as Ice Skating Month and to benefit the Notre Dame varsity hockey program.

Bowman, the 1990 world bronze medalist, returned to the ice for a dramatic performance that ended the show. Imitating a rock star, "Bowman the Showman" elicited screams and cheers from the audience as he executed double and triple jumps, before finally ripping open his shirt in the finale.

In contrast, three-time national champion Trenary was a picture of beauty and grace as she floated across the ice, demonstrating for the crowd of 2,500 why she has dominated woman's figure skating for the

Art Lambert submits resignation

Special to the Observer

Notre Dame Athletic Director Dick Rosenthal yesterday accepted the resignation of Art Lambert, who had been the Irish volleyball coach since 1984.

Maria Perez, in her second season as an assistant under Lambert, will handle coaching duties for the remainder of the 1990 Irish season. According to Rosenthal, Lambert will finish out the year serving on the athletic department administrative staff.

"We're certainly appreciative of the contributions Art has made during his seven years as head coach," Rosenthal said. "Our volleyball program has made great strides in the last half-dozen years, and Art certainly deserves the credit for the student athletes he has brought to Notre Dame and the manner in which he has built the program."

Since taking over the Irish six years ago, Lambert has guided Notre Dame to national prominence. He took over a team that finished 11-30 in 1983 and turned the Irish into a factor on the national volleyball scene almost immediately.

Despite facing an upgraded schedule, he coached Notre Dame to its two winningest seasons in history in 1986 and 1987, as the Irish finished 33-7 and 30-9 and claimed North Star Conference title each year. That marked the first time Notre Dame had put together back-to-back winning seasons.

The Irish then made their first-ever NCAA tournament appearance in 1988. Notre Dame finished 19-12 that season, defeating Penn State in a first-round NCAA matchup before falling to eventual final-four participant Illinois.

Notre Dame will travel to Chicago tonight to meet MCC foes Loyola and Marquette.

Locker room issue: Need equal access

Over the past few weeks there has been a lot of debate about whether female reporters should be allowed in locker rooms to talk with athletes after games.

•Coach Sam Wyche of the Cincinnati Bengals was fined $30,000 for subverting National Football League policy by barring a woman reporter from the Bengals' locker room after last Monday night's game against Seattle.

•Boston Herald reporter Lisa Olson reportedly was harassed by several naked players in the New England Patriots' locker room Sept. 17. Olson has since reported receiving death threats and has left the country for fear of her safety.

•An unidentified, unclothed Arizona football player challenged Orange County Register reporter Karen Crouse in the Rose Bowl locker room in Pasadena after the Wildcats' 28-21 win over UCLA Saturday. The player, referring to the Olson incident, confronted Crouse, saying, "What are we, in New England?" Arizona officials later apologized for the incident.

Obviously this is a very touchy subject. Whenever you set issues as important as "freedom of the press" and "the right to privacy" at odds with each other, sparks are going to fly.

At Notre Dame Stadium, male reporters are allowed into the locker rooms after games. Female reporters are not.

I agree with the University's stand that female reporters should not be allowed in the locker room after the game when players are showering and dressing. I think all of us, males and females alike, would feel a little bit uncomfortable having fully dressed members of the opposite sex ask us questions while we were stark naked.

But I also think that discriminatory locker room policies provide an unfair advantage to male reporters. Let's face it, if a man can go into the Notre Dame locker room to get quotes after a game, but a woman can't, the sports editor of whichever paper happens to be doing the story is going to give the assignment to the man.

And in fact, if the truth must be known, the locker room experience is not exactly uplifting for a male reporter, either. It is a very uncomfortable feeling to have to interview a player who clearly wants to dress in privacy.

The only solution to this problem is to institute a separate room where the players can be brought after they shower and dress. There they can be interviewed by all members of the media, male and female, and nobody will have unfair access to the players after the game.

Of course there is a drawback to this proposal. Most reporters have strict deadlines and often they are in a hurry to get their quotes after the game. If they have to wait for
