Iraq to receive deadline from Security Council members

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Security Council ambassadors on Wednesday predicted adoption of a resolution allowing use of military force to liberate Kuwait if 450,000 Iraqi troops do not withdraw by Jan. 15.

Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze told reporters on arriving in New York, "Either we will build civilized relations between states, a new world order and new policy, or will live by the law of the jungle."

"That is the question we must answer tomorrow (Thursday), and I believe we will answer it."

Cuba opposes the measure but expects it to pass. "It is quite obvious that the resolution will be adopted," Cuban Ambassador Ricardo Alarcon said.

The only other time the United Nations sanctioned military force to counter aggression was in 1950, during the Korean conflict.

Thirteen of the 15 council members are expected to be represented by foreign ministers, making it one of the highest-level such sessions in U.N. history.

China had indicated it would support the measure but shifted its position Wednesday. Foreign Minister Qian Qichen said he would not vote in favor.

The statement was widely viewed as a move to win political concessions from Washington, which acted to punish Beijing after the June 1989 military crackdown on the pro-democracy movement.

Diplomats suggested China might abstain, but probably would not veto the measure.

The five permanent Security Council members — the United States, the Soviet Union, China, France and Britain — have veto power.

"It seems rather clear that they're not thinking of vetoing," said British Ambassador David Hannay.

On Wednesday, the council ended debate on allegations of Iraqi atrocities in Kuwait, and adopted a resolution 15-0 asking the United Nations to take custody of Kuwait's census records, smuggled out by the Kuwaiti resistance.

Iraq has been destroying records in a bid to erase Kuwaitis' national identity. It moved more than 100,000 Iraqis into occupied Kuwait to change its demographic character.

U.S. Ambassador Thomas Pickering told Wednesday's session:

"The record of rape, plunder, torture, and murder compiled by Iraqi authorities since their invasion of Kuwait has posed a direct challenge to the purposes for which this organization was founded. ...

"Iraq's policy must fail. As members of the United Nations we are all bound, by our charter obligations, to oppose Iraq's policy, accomplish the withdrawal of Iraqi forces from Kuwait, and to obtain the re-establishment of Kuwaiti authority. May that day come shortly."

The draft resolution gives Iraq a final chance to withdraw from Kuwait by Jan. 15. After that, the measure authorizes "all necessary means" to dislodge the Iraqi forces.

The measure also calls on Iraq to free all foreign hostages and restore the rule of the Kuwaiti royal family.

Baghdad has ignored a series of U.N. resolutions demanding it withdraw from Kuwait, which Iraq overran Aug. 2.

"There is political will to adopt another resolution," said Canadian Ambassador Yves Fortier. "I predict that an additional resolution will be adopted."

The British envoy said the measure "provides a breathing space of time for thought by Saddam Hussein to reflect really carefully on what would follow if he didn't come into line with the Security Council resolutions by the date fixed in the resolution."

Chief accuser of 'Keating Five' faces tough questions

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chief accuser of the "Keating Five" senators was forced to defend both his testimony and his honor under rigorous cross-examination Wednesday.

Despite the barrage of hostile questioning, Edwin Gray, former head of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, stuck to his previous day's testimony in Senate Ethics Committee hearings.

Gray insisted that Sen. Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz., proposed a deal on behalf of S&L owner Charles Keating and three other senators acquiesced. Gray said the offer was made at an April 2, 1987 meeting arranged by a fifth senator who did not attend.

The committee is trying to determine whether the five senators intervened improperly on behalf of Keating because of the $1.3 million he and associates donated to their campaigns and causes.

The other senators are Alan Cranston, D-Calif., John Glenn, D-Ohio, John McCain, R-Ariz., and Donald Riegle, D-Mich. Riegle did not attend the April 2 meeting.

Gray was still on the witness stand when the hearing adjourned Wednesday and was asked to return Thursday for a fourth day.

The lawyer representing DeConcini, James Hamilton, often shouted his questions at Gray as he tried to cast doubt on the alleged deal. Hamilton pointed out that all four senators at the meeting denied that DeConcini offered the quid pro quo for Keating, who wanted Gray to withdraw a rule that adversely affected the political donor's Lincoln Savings and Loan.

The attorney for Cranston, William Taylor, got more personal. He brought up Gray's acceptance of expense money from the thrift industry he regulated.

Taylor reminded Gray that he attended one industry-financed dinner for which the tab was $1,158.63, including $300 for wine and $91.45 for cigars.

"These practices had been standard for 20 to 25 years," Gray said, adding it was wrong for the thrift industry to wine and dine regulators and he stopped the practice.

And he said of the deal that he insists was offered: "I felt the whole setting and the request itself was wrong. Just plain wrong. I never had seen anything like this in my entire tenure as a regulator, and I feel that way today."

Hamilton forced Gray to acknowledge that he knew more about Keating's S&L problems than he indicated to the four senators.

Donations needed for 1+1+1 goal

By MARK BERRETTINI
News Writer

The Notre Dame/Saint Mary's Community has just one more day to donate food, clothing, and books to the nearly 16,000 needy South Bend families through the 1+1+1 Project.

The goal of this project is to have everyone in the community donate one non-perishable food item, one article of clothing, and one children's book to this cause. This program is designed to provide needy families and homeless people with items to brighten their Christmas.

Also, in conjunction with Project 1+1+1, a mass for the homeless will be held tonight in the Keenan-Stanford chapel at 7 p.m.

The idea for this project came from Student Government Social Concerns Co-Commissioners Barb Izzo, Dave Krier, and Sean Scanlon. It is their hope that this program will increase awareness of the plight of the homeless and needy.

Donations are still being accepted in the Student Government offices in LaFortune, through Friday. The items will be taken to St. Vincent DePaul's, where they will be distributed.

U.S. takes right position in Gulf crisis

I saw him the other day when I was out running on U.S. 31. The old soldier sits out there every day in front of his American flags, proud to wear the hat that identifies him as a former soldier for the United States of America.

He is a symbol of what it means to be an American. He isn't afraid to show his loyalty and devotion to America, and for what this country is all about - freedom.

The United States has taken flak for some of its recent adventures into foreign politics, and despite the initial near-universal support of Operation Desert Shield, some people have begun to criticize the Bush Administration's decision to involve American citizens in a conflict taking place in some remote desert region of the world.

Why? Some claim that we shouldn't be meddling in the affairs of other countries, or that simply keeping the price of oil low is no justification for putting the lives of our soldiers on the line.

Anyone who subscribes to either of these theories is missing the point entirely. The intent of Operation Desert Shield is not to keep us from paying a few more cents per gallon at the gas station. The fact is that the exiled Kuwaiti government wants the support of the U.S. in liberating its country.

The true intent of the operation is to free a small, helpless country which cannot defend itself, and to keep an evil dictator from having the world in his hands. If Saddam Hussein is not kicked out of Kuwait he will control the price of oil in the Middle East, and therefore the world economy.

Traditionally the U.S. has taken a leading role in defending the world against evil, and while that may sound a bit naive, that is exactly what we should be doing.

If the United States of America, the land of the free and the home of the brave, wimps out on this opportunity to defend the very principles on which it was created, then all of those grand words contained in the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution mean nothing.

This country was built on principles. Principles of freedom and justice. On the principle that all men are guaranteed "the right to life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness."

What kind of hypocrite would the United States be if we promised that to our own people, but didn't care about the rights of any other country? How would that advance international cooperation?

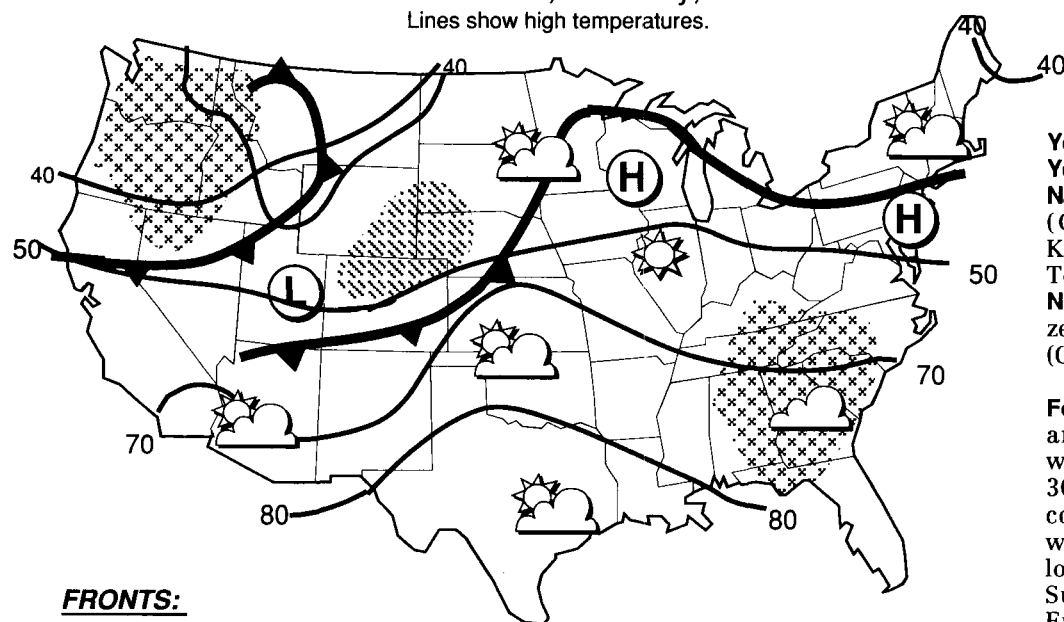

We as Americans should learn to be more like that man who sits on 31 all the time. We should believe in our country and the principles on which it was founded on, and we shouldn't be afraid to stand up to people who try to take those rights away.

Rep. Barney Frank, D-Mass., completed his gradual return to work Wednesday as he attended a White House signing ceremony on housing legislation. Frank said his recovery from a mild heart attack on Nov. 17 will require him to give up weight lifting and cigar smoking but won't cut into his work on Capitol Hill. An awareness of his family history of heart trouble saved Frank's life when he felt chest pains and took himself to the hospital after working out at the Metropolitan Health Club in Boston. Doctors used balloon angioplasty to open a clogged coronary artery.

The nation's infant death rate appears to be showing little or no improvement, the March of Dimes Defects Foundation said Wednesday. At the current rate of progress, the country will fail to meet the goal of the Public Health Service to reduce infant death to seven per 1,000 births by the year 2000, the foundation said. There were 38,910 deaths of infants under 1 year of age in 1988. The overall infant death rate in 1988, though the lowest ever recorded for the United States, conceals sharp differences between blacks and whites. The rate for white infants was 8.5 per 1,000 births while for black infants it was 17.6.

The Indiana state government hiring freeze that had been scheduled to expire on Saturday has been extended for three months, an administration official said Wednesday. The freeze put in place by Bayh was expected to save the state $17.7 million over the three-month period through Dec. 1. Fred Nation, press secretary to Gov. Evan Bayh, said the freeze will be extended until March 1 because the current freeze ordered Sept. 5 hasn't produced "the kind of savings that had been targeted originally."

The Indiana Supreme Court upheld on Wednesday the murder conviction and 60-year sentence of a Williamsport man found guilty in the beating death of a retarded man whose body was found buried under a barn floor. In a 4-1 decision, the court rejected Ralph Corbin's claims that the evidence was insufficient to support his conviction in the November 1985 death of Corbin was found guilty.

Indiana Easter Seal Society sells limited edition 'Golden Dome design' ornament

By KATE MANUEL
News Writer

The Indiana Easter Seal Society is selling a limited number of "Christmas at Notre Dame" Ornaments of Hope, to raise money to help disabled children and adults in St. Joseph County.

The "Christmas at Notre Dame" ornaments, made of gold and brass and showing the Golden Dome of the Administration Building, are limited edition collector's ornaments. Each was handcrafted at the Franklin Mint in South Carolina and comes with a numbered and signed certificate of authenticity.

The Golden Dome design will be used only on the 1990 edition of the "Christmas at Notre Dame" Ornament of Hope and a new design will be selected each year, according to Richard Janisewski, President of the Indiana Easter Seal Society.

The number of ornaments minted in future years will never exceed 10,000 of a particular design, according to Janisewski. Because this is the first year for selling the ornaments, however, he expects that no more than 1,500 Notre Dame ornaments will be minted for the 1990 collection.

Nearly 500 of the $15 ornaments have sold already, but additional ornaments could be minted if the Indiana Easter

Seal Society receives additional orders more than three weeks before Christmas, Janisewski said. "If people want the ornaments, they should hurry. We could still order more and get them before Christmas," he said.

The Indiana Easter Seal Society is also selling commemorative ornaments featuring Purdue and Indiana University, but the Notre Dame ornaments are by far the best sellers, according to both Janisewski and Stan Williams, the member of the Indiana Easter Seal Society who first approached Notre Dame about the fundraiser.

"Purdue and I.U. are also doing this for the first time, and it has only been done once before, at Penn State. Notre Dame is the best seller by far, the most popular," added Janisewski.

"We have more freedom to talk about Christmas at Notre Dame. Students at this school really celebrate Christmas, so we are pleased to be able to say Christmas at Notre Dame," said Miller. "Nothing has been received quite so well as this Notre Dame ornament. We've had calls from all over the United States and Canada."

Although this is the first year the Indiana Easter Seal Society has sold Christmas ornaments featuring Indiana universities, Williams expects sales to increase in future years.

"This is the first year. Next year we expect to add about ten more universities in the state; we also offer city commemorative ornaments of South Bend and Mishawaka. We are the first state to fully immerse ourselves into universities. We expect to grow by leaps and bounds next year."

The first ornament in the series was presented to the University of Notre Dame and University President Father Edward Malloy at a press conference before Thanksgiving by Christopher Morris, a South Bend kindergartner who receives help from Easter Seals with his cerebral palsy.

The Indiana Easter Seal Society provides services that fall into three broad categories:

- furnishing adaptive equipment which a family cannot afford and governmental agencies and insurance will not provide.
- assisting farmers with disabilities in returning to their profession.
- running a camp providing camping experiences for persons with disabilities.

Those wishing to order commemorative ornaments can do so by picking up a brochure at one of over forty retail stores in South Bend, or by calling 1-800-966-4003 and placing a Visa or Master Card order.

Cultures clash over Stanford 'domestic partners' policy; tension builds

STANFORD, Calif. (AP) — Virginia Velez came to Stanford University seeking a safe place to live openly with her lesbian lover, but a policy expanding the rights of homosexual couples on campus leaves her feeling threatened.

Velez and others in the homosexual community fear a backlash, particularly from religious groups. The policy, which began this fall, guarantees unmarried couples the same housing, health care and campus privileges as married couples.

"I'm getting nervous about what's going on," said Velez, a graduate student in education. "What the administration has done is satisfying. But the fundamentalist groups — Islamic and Christian — are creating incredible tension, and they can erupt at any time."

Stanford's effort to build a tolerant, diverse, body of international students has led to verbal clashes and occasional harassment over attitudes about race, religion and sexual orientation. The latest involves the backlash to the "domestic partners" policy.

"I think Stanford is probably one of the best places to be openly gay or lesbian or bisexual, and it's still scary," said Susan Mizner, a third-year law student and gay activist.

"It's still got a number of people who I would unabashedly call bigots, and even more people who would prefer not to deal with anyone they know is gay, lesbian or bisexual."

Two-thirds of the students said in an informal survey they support the new policy. Foreign students, particularly from the Middle East, Asia and Africa, are among the most vocal opponents.

Of Stanford's 12,600 graduate and undergraduate students, nearly 2,500 are foreigners. Foreigners comprise about a quarter of the 6,100 graduate-student population, which dominates the married student housing village.

University officials say they won't revoke the policy, which allows unwed couples with "long-term commitments" to rent low-cost campus apartments, and have "spouse" privileges, such as subsidized medical care and access to the libraries and gyms.

The policy applies to six couples this term. Officials expect the number to rise to 20 to 30 during the next few years.

"We have a strong belief that what we did was the right thing to do," said Norm Robinson, dean of student affairs. "I think some of the (objections) that are based on religion also reflect quite a high degree of homophobia."

Mid-westerners prepare for possible Dec. earthquake

(AP)—Tavern owners jammed jukeboxes with earth-shaking tunes and worried residents squirreled away water and flashlights Wednesday as the questionable countdown progressed for a major earthquake as early as next week on the New Madrid Fault.

The commotion is over a projection made by Dr. Iben Browning, who said there was a strong chance of a major earthquake Dec. 2-3 in an area that includes the New Madrid Fault, from Arkansas through Missouri to Illinois.

"We're ready for it. I have 13 gallon jugs of water, blankets, two sleeping bags, a pipe wrench, canned food, a flashlight and a radio with extra batteries," said Debbie Brunk of Bonne Terre, Mo., which is about 50 miles from the New Madrid fault zone.

Others took the projections a little more lightly.

Bumper stickers saying "It's Iben Browning's Fault" have started popping up on cars in the region.

One tavern owner has come up with a list of songs having to do with earthquakes.

Joe Edwards, owner of the Blueberry Hill tavern in St. Louis, said he's filling his jukebox with earthquake songs and serving special drinks to "help our customers cope with any anxiety they might be feeling."

He had culled more than 150 songs, including "Dancin' on the Ceiling," "Church Bells May Ring," "If We Make it Through December" and at least 13 titles containing the word "shake."

Meanwhile, Iben Browning's daughter, Evelyn Garriss, stood by her father's projection after San Francisco radio station KCBS reported that she said her father believes there's a 50-50 chance of a major quake outside the United States.

"We are less concerned about (San Francisco Bay area's Hayward fault) recently than we continue to be about some of the other places, like Japan," she said.

ND's Amnesty International acts for Human Rights Day

By DAVID CERTO
News Writer

In honor of the upcoming International Human Rights Day, the campus chapter of Amnesty International will be conducting a letter write-a-thon on Dec. 10.

Letters will be written in LaFortune, in the Sorin Room from 5 to 8 p.m., and in the Dooley Room from 8 to 11 on Monday, December 10. In addition, a videotape from the "Human Rights Now" concert tour will be shown. Refreshments will be served.

The Dean of the Notre Dame Law School, David Link, and other professors are expected to attend. All members of the community are invited to participate.

The writing campaign is intended to draw attention to human rights abuses around the world. Letters will be sent to many countries on behalf of individuals facing capital punishment, arrest for personal expression, detention without trial and other deprivations of rights.

International Human Rights Day will be celebrated by each chapter worldwide, according to Dan Gallagher, a representative of the local Amnesty International group.

"On that day in particular," Gallagher said, "everyone on campus should express his or her views on human rights; the write-a-thon is one easy but important way."

Amnesty International will be selling T-shirts at the write-a-thon. The sale is the group's largest fund raiser of the year.

The profits will be used to finance other projects, including speakers and international student panel discussions on torture and human rights abuses in foreign countries.

Intelligence study predicts that Yugoslavia will soon break apart, decline into civil war

WASHINGTON (AP) — A CIA study predicts Yugoslavia will break apart soon and probably decline into civil war, official sources said Wednesday.

One source, speaking on condition he not be identified, said members of the intelligence community "have been making dire predictions like that for some time" but that they are not shared by other foreign-policy specialists in the government.

An official who has read the most recent Central Intelligence Agency assessment, circulated several weeks ago in what is called a National Intelligence Estimate, said it predicts the various ethnic groups that make up Yugoslavia will begin fighting each other in a scenario likely to lead to civil war.

But that same official and another who is familiar with administration views on the issue said the U.S. Embassy in Belgrade, State Department specialists in Washington and Bush administration policymakers don't agree the situation is as serious as the CIA report indicates.

These officials and others discussed the content of the CIA report on condition that they not be identified.

Existence of the report was disclosed Wednesday by the

New York Times, which quoted unidentified sources who had read it.

Yugoslavia was created as an independent monarchy after World War I with the addition of various territories to the old kingdom of Serbia. It became a Communist-ruled federation after World War II, consisting of six republics with a long history of ethnic and economic rivalry.

The country has more divisions among its people than most. Two alphabets are in use, the Roman and the Cyrillic. The Roman Catholic, the Eastern Orthodox and the Moslem faiths all have large followings.

Gray said he had received a memo from one of his staff in September 1986 detailing problems at Lincoln.

Despite the memo, Hamilton pointed out, Gray told the senators he knew little of Lincoln's problems and suggested the senators question the staff members handling the examination of the failing Irvine, Calif. thrift.

Each of the Senate participants in the April 2 meeting said he could not recall a deal being offered on Keating's behalf. DeConcini has been most vehement in denying such a proposal was made.

"Why should the American public believe you and not four prominent U.S. senators?" Hamilton asked Gray.

"The American public can believe whatever they will," a testy Gray responded. "I had nothing to gain by not telling the truth."

Hamilton bore in on Gray's comment that "If my life depended on it," he could not answer senators' questions about the Lincoln examination because he had little knowledge of the investigation.

After establishing that the memo Gray received eight months earlier from a regulator contained much of the information senators sought to know about Lincoln, Hamilton asked, "In hindsight, was it irresponsible for you not to have given" the memo to the senators?

Gray said he mentioned the memo to the senators at the meeting and they didn't ask for a copy.

And he added he did not regret his decision, telling Hamilton: "The real purpose (of the meeting) in my mind was not the 55 or 56 minutes" senators asked questions about Lincoln's examination.

"The real purpose was to get me to withdraw" a regulation that was harming Lincoln, he said, a subject that Gray said DeConcini broached only in the initial moments.

According to Gray, DeConcini proposed that if the regulators would withdraw a regulation limiting risky thrift investments, Lincoln would step up its issuance of home mortgages.

Taylor, in his cross-examination, told Gray repeatedly that reasonable senators could have problems with him because of the negative publicity he received.

Taylor cited news stories that Gray spent $50,000 decorating his office and that former White House Chief of Staff Donald Regan sought his ouster.

Gray said he considered it a "badge of honor" that Regan wanted him out, a suggestion that former President Ronald Reagan did not follow.

The $50,000 was to build new walls in his office and fix the heating system, Gray said.

Gorbachev asks Germans for emergency shipments of food to prevent shortages

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet capital began dipping into its meat reserves, and President Mikhail Gorbachev met with a German envoy Wednesday to arrange emergency food shipments to help the Soviet Union get through the winter.

Horst Teltschik, a top aide to Chancellor Helmut Kohl, told reporters he met with Gorbachev to ensure that a huge outpouring of German charity would not be wasted.

In the past, shipments of imported food have disappeared into the Soviet black market and spoiled in rail cars for lack of trucks to take them to stores.

Teltschik said Gorbachev agreed to expedite customs procedures and visas for the aid program. Similar steps were taken to smooth the flow of foreign relief after the December 1988 Armenian earthquake, which killed more than 25,000 people.

The Soviet president also promised that Germans could accompany the aid deliveries and check that supplies were distributed properly, he said.

Meanwhile, First Deputy Premier Lev Voronin said that despite more and more barren store shelves, Soviet food production is actually no lower than last year.

"The amount of food in the Soviet Union has not diminished," Tass quoted Voronin as saying. He blamed a crumbling distribution system and panicky consumers for the shortages.

Moscow's chief executive, Yuri Luzhkov, told a news conference the city is dipping into its meat reserves because daily shipments are below the normal level.

The reserves themselves, normally totalling up to 50,000 tons, are down to 15,000 tons, enough to last three days if no new shipments arrived, Luzhkov said.

He also said the city is receiving 40 percent less milk than its usual 2,300 to 2,500 tons per day. He blamed officials outside Moscow who are holding back scarce supplies for their own people.

Neither meat nor milk has been plentiful in Moscow lately. Until now, a determined shopper could always find some sort of sausage and milk, although perhaps sour. But now, even major stores are running out of such basic supplies early in the day.

Many republics and regions of the Soviet Union have halted shipments of food and consumer goods to other areas to protest policies of the central government.

Rather than obey the Kremlin's demands for deliveries of food to the cities at state prices they consider too low, they are trading directly with factories and regions, bartering for other scarce supplies.

Judge lifts ban on broadcast of Noriega tapes; CNN hails 'victory over censorship'

MIAMI (AP) — A federal judge Wednesday lifted a ban on broadcasting tapes of Manuel Noriega's prison telephone calls, defusing a confrontation between the rights of the media and those of a criminal defendant.

While CNN hailed the decision as a victory over censorship, Noriega's defense and constitutional specialists said the case showed the U.S. Supreme Court was willing to accept at least temporary restrictions on the press.

U.S. District Judge William Hoever's decision ended a three-week legal battle between Noriega and the network, which aired some of the tapes before the judge ordered CNN to stop.

CNN President Tom Johnson said the decision would allow the network to pursue its story on the government's taping of the ousted Panamanian leader's conversations.

"CNN's coverage of this possible misconduct was delayed by this judicial prior restraint on press freedom," he said. "Despite the unfortunate delay, CNN's reporting of government taping of Noriega phone conversations will continue."

Network spokesman Steve Haworth said CNN had no plans to broadcast previously unaired tapes in the next few days, but said they could be used later in coverage of the Noriega story.

The judge ruled after he and the attorneys reviewed transcripts of seven tapes the network submitted to the court last week following the Supreme Court's refusal to overturn Hoever's initial ban.

At Wednesday's hearing, Noriega defense attorney Frank Rubino told the judge he would withdraw his request to stop the broadcasts. He said the only tape that appeared to violate lawyer-client privilege already had been broadcast.

"The problem today is that the tape's out, it's been published to the world," Rubino said.

"It does no good to close the barn door after the horse is out."

Federal prosecutors said they had no objections to lifting the ban, once again insisting that Noriega's rights were never violated by the routine prison taping.

Rubino said outside the courtroom that the case has already left its mark in the balancing of First Amendment protections for freedom of speech and Sixth Amendment guarantees of a fair trial.

"The Supreme Court has upheld prior restraint and ordered CNN to turn the tapes over to the court, and CNN complied with the court," Rubino said. "Prior restraint is in full force and effect."

Rodney Smolla, a William and Mary law professor who heads the school's Institute of Bill of Rights Law, also said the case has left a legacy, in part because the Supreme Court refused to halt the ban.

He said it would have been better had the issue returned to the high court for a final resolution.

"It casts its shadow, and the shadow is negative," said Smolla. "Other lawyers will aggressively pursue these sorts of strategies against news organization. The battle isn't over yet."

Jane Kirtley, head of the Reporters Committee for Freedom of the Press, said the ruling showed the gag order should never have been issued in the first place, but she added she was worried about the precedent set.

"The unfortunate effect of that is that a new organization has been unconstitutionally constrained for several weeks from bringing information lawfully obtained to the attention of the general public," she said. "That damage cannot be rectified."

CNN's legal problems haven't ended, Noriega's defense attorneys contend. They want the judge to find CNN in contempt of court for airing one of the tapes even after the judge's initial ban, and fine the network $300,000 per violation. The judge has not said whether he will schedule a contempt hearing.

Such a hearing could reopen the issue of whether the prior restraint was permissible, said William Greenhalgh a law professor at Georgetown University.

"Now, it's much ado about nothing," he said. "We've avoided the constitutional issue — but if there is a contempt proceeding, then we would really get into it."

The tape that touched off the dispute was between Noriega and one of Rubino's investigators, with the lawyer's Spanish-speaking secretary serving as an interpreter. In the conversation, Noriega is asked about two recently arrested Panamanians, and speculates that prosecutors intend to use them as witnesses against him.

Rubino went into court Nov. 8 and Hoever ordered CNN not to broadcast any tapes that interfere with attorney-client privilege. The network aired the tape later that day, but withdrew it the following day when the 11th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals backed Hoever.

The Supreme Court then refused to intervene on a 7-2 vote, forcing CNN to submit the tapes to the judge for review.

The government has acknowledged routine taping of prisoners' phone calls at federal prisons, including the Metropolitan Correctional Center, where Noriega is being held on drug-smuggling charges.

Investors in mutual funds should wait until new year

NEW YORK (AP) — Many long-term investors in mutual funds who usually don't worry much about the timing of their decisions are making an exception to that rule right now.

Heading into December they start picking their spots carefully to dodge a potential pitfall that can arise from year-end distributions by funds that invest for capital gains.

The strategy they follow, as summarized by the mutual fund specialists at Donoghue's Moneyletter in Holliston, Mass.: "Don't invest any new money in a domestic stock fund from now until after the fund has declared its year-end capital gains distribution."

By law, funds that accumulate capital gains by selling stocks or other securities at a profit must pass those gains through to their shareholders in order to stay clear of tax problems of their own.

Until a few years ago, these distributions were commonly made in the year after the gains were realized. Now the law requires that they must be declared before Dec. 31.

But many experts on mutual fund investing say the unwary can incur a needless tax problem if they put new money into a fund when a distribution is about to be made.

To see how that can work against you, consider this example: On Dec. 15, you invest $1,000 in the Hypothetical Fund at $10 a share, giving you 100 shares. Then, on Dec. 18, the fund declares a $2 per share capital gains distribution, payable Jan. 5.

You will be credited with a $200 payout, whether you receive distributions in cash or reinvest the proceeds, and it will be taxable as 1990 income.

By contrast, if you waited until Dec. 19 to make your investment, none of your money would be cycled back to you. After the payout, the per-share value would have dropped to $8, and your $1,000 would buy you 125 shares.

In either case, the net value of the investor's position is the same. But any pre-distribution buyer who is in, say, the 28 percent tax bracket, faces a tax bill of $56.

Business council increases international consciousness

By MIKE DeFRANCO
Business Writer

The International Business Council was founded with the purpose of raising the level of awareness of Notre Dame students with regard to the changing international business scene.

About two years ago, an idea was born to form a group on campus that would "take students heads out of textbooks and put them in the real world," according to Mike Boyle, head of the council.

Seller's market?

At first the organization only consisted of an executive council made up of various committee heads, but over the past year the council has grown considerably and now has over 100 members.

The council is active in bringing various business and political leaders to campus in order to host discussions.

Each month, a different leader is brought to speak before a group of about 30 council members at a dinner in the Morris Inn. In the discussions, speakers give a statement to the audience and then the floor is opened for a dialogue.

Some of the issues that have been recently debated by the council include business ethics, the effectiveness of using economic sanctions for foreign policy goals and the globalization of businesses.

Another important function of the council is to secure internships in foreign nations for students.

Currently, the council has contacts in Western Europe and Asia and is presently working on opening doors in the Soviet Union and other Eastern European nations. Over the summer about 30 to 35 students will be given a chance to gain one of these internships and will be able to work in one of these countries.

These various activities students are not only given the chance to see what the real world is like, but also "develop into ethical business leaders and gain public speaking experience," said Boyle. These qualities are almost imperative if one wishes to be successful in today's highly competitive business world, he said.

ND campus suffers issue imbalance

Dear Editor:

We seem to be under a two-pronged assault from women and homosexuals. Hardly a week has gone by this semester without a lecture, seminar, manifesto, advertisement, exhortation, letter to the editor or even a library window display on one or both of these topics.

They are indeed subjects worthy of university discussion. But it is my impression that, rather than a balanced and objective consideration of their various aspects, there has been a systematic propagandizing of a single viewpoint. When the ROTC was discussed here a couple weeks ago, one expert spoke for it and another against. That is what one would expect at a university. But when all voices reiterate the same line, one begins to suspect a kind of brainwashing.

If the views being promoted were distinctively Catholic, such methods would still be regrettable, but at least understandable, at a university to whose role it belongs to examine human topics in the light of faith. But the very opposite seems to be happening. Correct me if I am wrong, but I have not been aware of any sympathetic exposition of the Church's stand on either of these subjects, either in the lectures that have been given thus far, or among those announced for the future.

The Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith has issued two major documents on women's ordination, and the Holy Father has published a major encyclical on the Dignity of Woman. How can the prestigious committee on The Year of Women claim any credibility if it provides nothing more than casual and often contemptuous allusions to these texts?

The Church's position on homosexuality has been established and refined by many centuries of carefully reasoned theological traditions, and officially enunciated notably in the 1975 Declaration on Sexual ethics. But at Notre Dame one gets the impression that it can be mocked and criticized, not, however, defended. We have indeed heard a few vague professions of loyalty to the Church's teaching, but has there been any serious, competent attempt to expound it?

There may well be a profound philosophical connection between these two issues, having to do with the natural complementarity of man and woman. However that may be, the reverence for the order of nature characteristic of Catholicism is not a position that can be brushed aside as if wanting in serious rationale or competent exponents. In any case, let us not redefine the Catholic University as a place where the Catholic viewpoint is not to be considered.

Student groups sponsor life marchers

Dear Editor:

January 22, 1991, marks the nineteenth year of legalized abortion in this country. This year, Notre Dame/Saint Mary's Right to Life and the Notre Dame student government are cosponsoring a trip to Washington, D.C. to protest the Roe v. Wade decision. While in Washington, participants will march with thousands of others who believe in the sanctity of life.

I urge you to participate in this important event.

Spirit guides group by charisms

Dear Editor:

In a recent letter to the editor (The Observer, Nov. 12), questions were raised about the charismatic gifts and their role in the church. As members of a Christian group on campus, Campus Fellowship, we would like to take this opportunity to explain our experience of living a life in Christ with these gifts of the Holy Spirit.

A personal relationship with Christ has challenged us to live a life of committed love to both Him and those around us. Just as the Apostles needed the Holy Spirit to empower them to live this life, so too do we need the Holy Spirit.

John Paul II, at the Sixth International Leaders Conference in 1987, stated, "The history of the church is at the same time the history of two thousand years of the action of the Holy Spirit." The Holy spirit, then, was not given for the Apostles alone, but for all time. According to Kilian McDonnell, OSB, in his book, "Open the Windows," the charisms of the Holy Spirit are essential to this "perpetual Pentecost." These charisms, as found in I Corinthians 12, the gifts of wisdom and knowledge, faith, healing, prophecy, discernment of spirits, tongues and the interpretation of tongues, belong not to "charismatics," but to the whole church. Indeed, this experience of the Spirit and its acceptance have been endorsed by Pope Paul VI, Pope John Paul II, and the National Conference of Catholic bishops.

How do these charisms help us to live the Christian life? They instruct us by giving us new insights into Scripture, and a fuller understanding and experience of the sacramental nature of the church. They console and encourage us as we come to recognize God's presence. They empower us to live out in a concrete way our faith with each other.

The choice to live as Christians includes sharing our lives with others who also have chosen Christ. This community revolves around the necessary encouragement others give us to deepen our personal relationships with Christ. Who would better encourage us than our friends, those with whom we share both this common vision and desire? We can't do it on our own. Together, with the grace of the Holy Spirit, we lead each other on to holiness, and so become the men and women God has created us to be.

Human rights extend to unborn persons

By David Certo

In 1969, the member nations of the Organization of American States gathered in San Jose, Costa Rica, to write a treaty which would guarantee human rights for all citizens of Latin America. The final product, the American Convention on Human Rights, assured people throughout the hemisphere the rights to fair trial, peaceful assembly, freedom of religion, privacy, free speech and other rights that the United States had long accused its neighbors of violating. Oddly enough, the Convention was ratified by nations with appalling human rights records, such as Chile, El Salvador, Panama, and Columbia, while the United States refused to do so.

The United States rejected it largely because of Article Four of the treaty. It reads: "Every person has the right to have his life respected. This right shall be protected, by law and in general, from the moment of conception. No one shall be arbitrarily deprived of his life."

I find it highly ironic that our country condemns Haitian election violence or El Salvadoran death squads when an average of one million, six hundred thousand infants are aborted in the United States each year (The New York Times, 20 Nov 1990). Nations we dare to call barbaric outlaw this sort of killing.

Many people favor the option to abort in cases of rape and incest which produce a pregnancy. However, few people know that these crimes cause less than one percent of all abortions. Likewise, abortions for the health of the mother only constitute three to seven percent of all abortions. Likewise, abortions for the health of the mother only constitute three to seven percent of pregnancies terminated (ibid). These numbers hardly justify the amount of abortions performed each year.

It strikes me as curious that the pro-choice movement has appropriated the phrase "reproductive freedom" and applied it to women who choose to abort. Why not share the right with men and put it where it belongs? The right to reproductive freedom is the right of people to engage in, or refrain from, sexual intercourse, not the right to tear an infant from the womb. Any person who has sex and is not raped has chosen to do so. It is society's duty to hold the parents responsible for that act, not to allow one of its members to be destroyed before he takes his first breath. Why should we, as a people, permit such killing simply because of the foolishness and carelessness of some among us?

Another phrase which amazes me is calling an unborn infant "the potential to be a human." This is wholly inaccurate. I have the potential to earn an "A" on my next calculus test; I am by no means assured of one. On the other hand, every time in the history of the world that a woman has taken a pregnancy to full term, she has given birth to a human being. Never, despite tabloid articles, has she produced a rhino, an alien or a rat. Invariably, she is the mother of a human child. Therefore, what dies in an abortion is not simply potential; rather, a child is killed.

As a citizen, the Constitution of the United States gives me the right to print my opinion on abortion. However, until I was born and adopted on 14 March 1972, I was the silent but living child of two unmarried teens. If Indiana law had not then protected my right to be born and to live, the ultimate human right, all the other rights in the world would have had no meaning to me. The rights in the Constitution protect minors, mutes, and citizens who do not speak English; should they not also protect other citizens who cannot speak for themselves?

Debates blind reason whenever emotional issues are addressed

Dear Editor:

I would like to express my reservations about the recent decision of the Student Union Board to sponsor an abortion debate here at Notre Dame.

My principle reason is that this is a Catholic university, and it seems that as responsible student leaders we should not pay people to come and try to win people over to a pro-abortion stance. This is not a political issue about how best to make policy, where debates may be quite suitable.

Abortion is condemned by human reason and the Church as a heinous crime. If people stop for a minute and consider what abortion really is, not the "extraction of fetal tissue from a helpless woman victim," but rather the taking of innocent life, they may realize that it is as evil as the slaughter of Jews or any other group determined by race, age or sex. With the seriousness of abortion in mind, I withheld my vote to have this debate as I would also withhold my vote if SUB wanted to bring in a Neo-Nazi to campus to debate about killing Jews, or brought an advocate of the KKK to debate whether or not African-Americans should be lynched.

People argue that there are non-Catholic views among the diverse student body here despite the fact that this is a Catholic university. Furthermore, Catholics and other pro-life people fear leaving Notre Dame and not being able to argue intelligently with pro-abortion people. I firmly agree that we should know both the arguments of those who accept abortion, and the refutations of those arguments. The proper place to study those arguments, however, seems to be the classroom, where serious learning is done, and not the debate floor where emotions are aroused which can blind reason. The role emotions play at a debate seems to create the risk of swaying people to the view that a pregnant woman has a "problem" rather than a child in her womb. If during a concert on campus one person was stampeded in the crowds, we would all be up in arms. Should we not be concerned that after this debate, a child might be killed?

OIL AND BLOOD DON'T MIX

Complacent students avoid activism

Dear Editor:

I applaud Janet Meissner's effort in organizing the petition to the president. 1,819 of us here at Notre Dame believe that our government would overstep its bounds if it invaded Kuwait in an offensive strike. (My lord, can our government do wrong?). It is an achievement to be aware of world affairs; many of us citizens do not realize our real responsibility to help dictate the policies of the most powerful country in the world. It has overstepped its bounds and will continue to do so if we do not stop it. Preventing this crisis is ultimately up to us, something that Meissner realizes.

Life can be very sheltered here at Notre Dame. Many people would not realize by looking at this campus that 300,000 yank soldiers are at the brink of war in the searing Saudi Arabian desert. We are indeed conservative here at Notre Dame. For example, Notre Dame was one of the last campuses in America to decry the Vietnam War in the late 60's. This seems to contradict the supposed Catholic character of this university. A friend once told me, "Why are Notre Dame students so complacent? Don't they follow the example of Jesus Christ? Didn't he rebel against the big boys?"

I once again applaud Janet Meissner for her efforts. Let's hope that more of us can follow her example of public awareness and responsibility.

Program helps people work through pain

By Liz Conger

Solitude

A close friend of mine died today.
All around me life went on,
passing me by
not even looking my way.
I wasn't even there.
There was no sound,
the birds sang for someone else.
The sky was dark,
the sun shone on another's face.
And I, in darkness
walked in solitude
alone.
A familiar face passed by me
today,
he did not recognize me,
I just lowered my eyes,
he did not know me.
And I should not be surprised
I do not even know myself.
And so I am
Solitude
alone.

A close friend of mine died today.
He did not know me
Nor I him.

Yet I knew him better than anyone else.
And now he walks,
in solitude
alone.

Death. Shock. Denial. Death is an inescapable reality that we try to escape daily. We build walls so that we will not have to face the pain that would envelop us if we were to lower our defenses. We mask our true feelings with smiles until we can no longer hide from the truth: Death leaves no living being unscathed. Though in different magnitudes, we have all been affected.

Anger. "How could God have let this happen?" Guilt. "If only I had ... , things would be different." Unable to admit that we cannot control our surroundings, we get angry at ourselves, others, and God. We desperately try to believe that if something had been done or said differently, then the loss of our loved one would not have occurred.

Depression. Emptiness. Solitude. The aching sets in. Grief. Mourning. A woman in black. A man in tears. We feel alone, and though we are able to interact with others on a superficial level, our loneliness is particularly strong when we attend parties on Friday night where others are having fun; when we watch people playing frisbee on Sunday afternoon; and when we enter our classrooms on Monday morning, ready to attempt another day of work. What makes it worse is that no one seems to realize that we feel different. We are alone with our pain.

While it is true that no person can feel exactly what another is feeling, there are many who have suffered through various traumas and have experienced similar stages of grief. With the help of those who have "been through it," others in pain can find some comfort and help. In order to offer support and education for people who are undergoing the trials that death and divorce leave in their wake, for example, Alumni Continuing Education of Notre Dame is presenting its fourth annual workshop entitled, "Death, Divorce & Dismantled Dreams: Working Through The Pain."

Recovery. Acceptance. Healing. Growth. "Working through the pain" is not an easy process, but it can be rewarding. There is no time limit on recovery. We are all individuals who must live and heal in our own unique ways. Fortunately, we have each other.

Recovery. It can be done.

Semester at Sea: Two ND students' perspectives on a unique method of studying abroad

Foreign studies programs have been very popular among college students for years. London, Rome, Paris... the possibilities are endless and very exciting. Two Notre Dame students have, however, found a new twist to the study abroad idea. Diana Barnes and Dan Miller both took to the seas to satisfy their urge for travel and adventure.

By LISA EATON
Accent Writer

Diana Barnes, a senior living in Farley, had the unique experience last summer of spending her summer at sea through a program offered by the Sea Education Association (SEA).

Barnes left her home in Pittsburgh, Pa. for Woods Hole, Mass. two weeks after school ended last May. She spent the first six weeks of her summer in classes at the campus of SEA in preparation for the sea voyage.

She took one Oceanography class which was a basic science class in the study of the sea. Her class in Nautical Science taught her all about sailing and included instruction on such things as navigating a ship by the stars.

Barnes also took Maritime Studies as her final "land" class. This was a class which covered the literature, history and public policies of the sea. Of course, a class like this would not be complete without a reading of the famous sea novel Moby Dick.

After spending the first six weeks of the summer on land Barnes and her fellow sailors got the opportunity to finally take to the sea. There were 35 people, 10 crew and 25 students, on the SSV Corwith Cramer when it set sail from Woods Hole, Mass. on July 13, 1990.

The time on the boat was very different from the time on land, according to Barnes. One thing that was an enormous adjustment for the students was the constant motion of the ship. Barnes says, "They warned us about the constant motion. Things are constantly going up and down and side to side whether you're eating, sleeping or in classes."

While on the ship the students passed their time by doing many things. All of the research were working on a research science project for their time on the sea. Barnes did her project in the field of physical oceanography. She studied the different currents and water masses of Nova Scotia.

The students also attended classes while on the ship. "We had practical oceanography I and II while on the ship. Basically, we learned how to sail." In addition to the research projects and the classes there were also guest speakers who would join the students for a leg of their journey and lecture on a topic relating to their experiences on the water.

Most importantly, the students were able to apply what they had learned academically on the water. They were responsible for the navigation, sailing, and maintenance of the ship. All of the students were assigned to Watch Duty which entailed early mornings and the actual sailing of the ship. According to Barnes, "Two days out of three I was up at 3 am and on Watch Duty."

If they were not sailing the ship or in classes, then the students had galley duty. On any given day the sailor with galley duty would have to prepare three meals for 35 people, which is not an easy task according to Barnes. "We were fed well, though. In addition to three meals a day we got three snacks a day—good things like brownies."

The ship sailed from Massachusetts up to Nova Scotia and Newfoundland and then returned to Gloucester, Mass. on August 24, 1990. About every other week they would stop at a port for about two days. And what were the favorite port activities? "We called home, did laundry and grabbed some fast food."

The most exciting part of the whole summer for Barnes was when they almost had a run-in with Hurricane Bertha. The ship was forced to go off course in its attempt to outrun the storm because Hurricane Bertha was heading straight towards them. Although the hurricane never caught up with them, they experienced some very rough weather. There were waves up to 15 feet high. Barnes recalls, "You looked out at a wall of water. It was wild."

Barnes found the SEA program while searching for a summer job. She was looking for a job in an oceanography laboratory when someone directed her to this program. She had always loved sailing and had been thinking about a possible career in physical oceanography when she happened upon this program.

All that is required for the program is that the student be in college and have some basic science classes. Barnes stresses that it is not important to be interested in sailing or have any experience in studying the ocean because you have the opportunity to learn everything you need to know. "You don't have to have any sailing experience or be interested in oceanography. There was a guy from Indiana who had never even seen the ocean before," says Barnes.

Life on the ocean was definitely a different experience for Barnes. She says, "It was another world, it had its own characteristics. It was amazing. It was such a different experience. It is hard to believe that I was at sea now that I am in cornfields, doing homework and looking at trees."

Study at sea programs provide interesting and exciting changes from the routine of spending four years in Indiana and are a little more adventuresome than the very popular Western Europe study abroad programs as Barnes and Miller have both found out. Who knows? This new twist to the genre of foreign study programs could be the wave of the future.

While all of the Domers in South Bend are preparing to bundle up and face the unpleasant onslaught of another Indiana winter, Dan Miller, a Notre Dame junior, is preparing to visit the beautiful and sunny country of Brazil. Miller is another sea-going Domer who is currently participating in the Semester at Sea program through the University of Pittsburgh.

The Semester at Sea program is a 100-day voyage that began on September 14, 1990 in Vancouver, British Columbia on the SS Universe. By the time the semester is finished in December, the 500 students on board will have visited such interesting countries as Japan, Taiwan, Hong Kong, Malaysia, India, Seychelles, Kenya, Brazil and Venezuela.

The program is administered academically by the University of Pittsburgh and has existed since 1963 when it was started at Chapman College by the Institute for Shipboard Education.

Since the beginning, the program has provided students with the opportunity to experience foreign studies from a new perspective.

Paul Watson, the director of the program at the University of Pittsburgh, emphasizes the global focus of the program. He says, "We emphasize a variety of cultural, economic, and political perspectives. We pay particular attention to Third World and developing countries, so students get a diversity of experience."

In contrast to the program in which Diana Barnes participated, the Semester at Sea program does not require the students to be involved in the actual navigation and maintenance of the ship.

The program that Miller is on is mainly an academic program with a liberal arts focus. The classes that the students take while on the ship are very similar to the classes that they would be taking at the university from which they have come.

Watson says that the classes "are taught from an international perspective. The faculty all possess resident experience in one or more countries. There are also many international faculty members. We try to integrate the courses with the countries that they are visiting."

Watson feels very strongly about the importance of foreign studies and believes that the Semester at Sea provides the students with an invaluable learning experience. "They [the students] often have life changing experiences."

Army, Navy mobilizing for traditional matchup

WEST POINT, N.Y. (AP) —
Army vs. Navy.

One of college football's most storied rivalries began 100 years ago Thursday. And, to no one's surprise, it started as the result of a challenge.

Navy began playing football in 1879, but sports were slow to gain a foothold at West Point. A century ago about the only athletic endeavors on campus were fencing and horseback riding.

Cadet Dennis Michie
contrived to change all that.

Michie, born at West Point in 1870, had learned football in prep school before entering the academy with the class of 1892.
During the summer before his junior year, he met a group of Midshipmen who were itching to play Army in football, no doubt because they figured it would be no contest.

But Michie (pronounced MIKE-ee) knew a game was out of the question unless Navy issued a formal challenge. The Middies did, and it wasn't very difficult for Michie to convince the Army brass to answer that challenge.

That was the easy part. Now all Michie had to do was form a team from a corps of 271
cadets who didn't know a thing about the game.

Several agreed to play, but only two had any experience, and they weren't able to gain much more from practices because sessions were staged on those Saturday afternoons

when the weather was too miserable to drill or parade. And Michie ran them ragged, getting them up every day a half-hour before reveille for morning runs.

That the Cadets now play at Michie Stadium is no surprise.
Not only did Dennis Michie secure the proper equipment and uniforms for his team, he even arranged to pay for half of Navy's travel expenses by getting each cadet to allow 52 cents to be charged to their cadet store accounts.

Football came to West Point for the first time on the morning of Nov. 29, 1890, when the Middies arrived at the school's docks along the Hudson River aboard a special ferry boat.

According to lore, they ran into an ornery goat on the long walk up to the parade field, thought the beast would make a good mascot, and decided to take him along to the game for good luck.

As it turned out, the Middies didn't need any. Despite a partisan crowd of about 2,000 cheering the Cadets on, Army's first-ever football game and its only game that year was no contest. Navy won 24-0 behind the play of Capt. Red Emrich, who scored four touchdowns (worth four points apiece in those days) and kicked two field goals for another four points.

The following November, 17 cadets traveled by train to Annapolis for a rematch. It was the first time any West Point team had gained permission to leave the hill for an athletic event, and the Cadets got their revenge.

Elmer Clark scored three touchdowns and Michie, the team captain, added a third, passed for another and kicked four goals (after touchdowns)
as the Cadets evened the series with a 32-16 victory.

Sledding potentially injurious, say experts

WASHINGTON (AP) — Think sledding is harmless fun? Well, it may be fun but it's not harmless.

"It's a very common misperception that sledding is perfectly safe," said Dr. Robert Dershewitz, chief of pediatrics at the Braintree, Mass., facility of a health maintenance organization, the Harvard Community Health Plan. "It has its own inherent dangers."

Dershewitz reviewed the dangers in a brief report in the American Journal of Diseases of Children. The study is based on hospital treatment statistics collected by the Massachusetts Department of Public Health over three years ending Aug. 30, 1982, but the breakdowns are similar to those in other studies, Dershewitz said.

The federal Consumer Product Safety Commission reports 31,809 cases in which sledders had to come to hospital emergency rooms in 1989.

Forty-one percent of injuries in Dershewitz' study were to children ages 5 to 9, and almost two thirds of the total 211 cases he studied came early in the sledding season — in December or January.

Serious injuries, such as concussion, internal injury or broken bones, took place in 21 percent of all sledding-related cases, often because the sledder ran into a fixed object such as a telephone pole, tree or fence, the study said. Nine percent of all sledding injuries required hospitalization, with an average stay of about six days.

A separate study of injuries brought to The Children's Hospital of Eastern Ontario in Ottawa found 38 percent happened because children fell off the sled, said Dr. Chandra Vaidyanathan, the study's prime author.

Another 13 percent of the 172 cases from December of 1987 to April of 1988 resulted from a collision with another sled, 18 percent from striking a tree, and 13 percent from striking other objects, such as a wall, said the emergency room physician.

Also, she said, 10 percent came from collisions with another person — generally, cases in which one child was walking up the run while another came sledding down. Sled runs should be divided into uphill and downhill lanes to avoid this, she said.

Dershewitz and Vaidyanathan conceded that their figures don't tell how much risk a child faces, because they had no total number of sledders against which they could compare the numbers of injured. But both say the sport could be made safer if parents and children paid attention to sledding conditions.

Pete Rose will teach school

Charlie Hustle to be aid in phys. ed. and health classes

CINCINNATI (AP) — Pete Rose, who was never much of a student in school, will become a teachers aide when he gets out of prison in January.

Rose has worked out an agreement with the Cincinnati public school system that will take him from jail to gymnasium. Rose has agreed to help teach physical education and health classes as part of his 1,000 hours of court-ordered community service when he's released from prison.

"He seems comfortable with the idea," said Cecil Good, an assistant superintendent in the school district.

Rose is serving a five-month prison sentence for failing to report income from gambling, memorabilia sales and autograph appearances on his taxes. He's scheduled to be released from a federal prison camp in Marion, Ill., on Jan. 7.

Rose then must serve three months at a halfway house in Cincinnati and perform 1,000 hours of community service at five inner-city elementary schools and a youth center designated by U.S. District Judge S. Arthur Spiegel. The judge decided last July that Rose should "return to his roots in the inner-city" as part of his rehabilitation.

It's unusual for a judge to specify community service in the schools. Good drove to the Illinois prison earlier this month to figure out how Rose can fit in.

The decision to use him as a teachers' aide grew out of that meeting.

"I shared our thoughts with him. He seemed real comfortable with the idea," Good said. "We worked it out mutually."

Details haven't been worked out. Good said Rose likely will spend one day a week at each of the five schools specified by the judge, working under the direction of teachers. The school district has many such instructor assistants.

"We've arranged for him to work full-time in the schools," Good said. "He'll be working the same calendar as any teacher in the district."

"He would be working directly under a certified teacher and do whatever kinds of tasks that teacher determines are most appropriate. For instance, in a gymnasium, if there are games going on, he may take a small group and work with them in a particular activity."

The school system was surprised when Spiegel specified that Rose work in the five schools for public service. Now educators are looking forward to having him around.

"We're always glad to have assistants," Good said. "We think with his athletic background he can help us in these schools. He's looking forward to this work."

He's also looking forward to getting it over. Spiegel specified that Rose must perform at least 20 hours of his community service per week, but Rose is planning to work in the schools full-time.

"He has 1,000 hours to perform. Obviously he's anxious to get it over with as quickly as he can," Good said.

Tide, Tigers ready to collide

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — This was supposed to be the year Alabama had a powerful offense and Auburn had a solid defense. Boy, was that wrong.

Defense has been the Crimson Tide's strength and neither team has a reliable offense. That's why Saturday's matchup at Legion Field isn't important to the national rankings.

Alabama (6-4) has allowed only two touchdowns in its last six games. But 20th-ranked Auburn (7-2-1) lost to Florida 48-7 and gave up 13 fourth-quarter points in a 13-12 defeat against Southern Mississippi on Nov. 10.

"They definitely can be scored on," Alabama receiver Lamonde Russell said, "and that's the biggest thing I look at."

Auburn will be seeking at least a share of its fourth consecutive Southeastern Conference title and a fifth consecutive victory over Alabama.

Last year, the Crimson Tide averaged 31 points per game for their first 10 games. Eleven offensive starters returned, but there have been injuries and the scoring average is down to 24 points per game this year.

Alabama was shut out against Penn State and rushed for only six yards against the Nittany Lions.

"They're a completely different offense this year," Auburn defensive coordinator Wayne Hall said. "The biggest thing is that they've lost a lot of experience at some positions, so they have to be a little more conservative in their game plan."

Auburn's offense is scoring 25 points per game but has been inconsistent. The Tigers had minus-14 yards rushing against Florida.

Tigers coach Pat Dye is hoping the game doesn't become an offensive battle. He said he believes Alabama, a 2 1/2-point favorite, has the best defense in the country.

"We're in deep trouble if it's a high-scoring game," Dye said.

The Crimson Tide defense leads the SEC and is fourth nationally in scoring defense, allowing only 12 points per game. It is third nationally in total defense with 228 yards per game.

Auburn, on the other hand, is allowing nearly 18 points per game — twice its average of last year.

Alabama's offense has improved since its 0-3 start. Crimson Tide quarterback Gary Hollingsworth has only four touchdown passes compared to 14 in 1989, but Auburn linebacker coach Reggie Herring said the numbers are deceptive.

"They're a ball-control offense that's putting the game more in the defense's hands," Herring said. "It has simplified things for Hollingsworth. It's call the play, run it, and get it done. That's given them confidence."

Locker room incident leaves Patriots in disarray

FOXBORO, Mass. (AP) — The scale has been moved, but New England cornerback Maurice Hurst has the same locker that turned into the eye of a storm.

Hurst sat at that locker Wednesday, the day after two of his Patriot teammates and one former New England player were fined by NFL commissioner Paul Tagliabue for a sexual harassment incident involving a reporter.

"Sitting here (when the incident occurred) possibly put me in a place where I could be a suspect," Hurst said. "I would have really been hurt if they had come up with a conclusion like that."

The fines followed an NFL report released Tuesday on an investigation of claims by Lisa Olson of the Boston Herald that she was harassed by several players on Sept. 17.

Zeke Mowatt, who was fined $12,500, was standing on the scale beside the locker where Olson was interviewing Hurst when the incident occurred, the report said. Michael Timpson and Robert Perryman, now with Dallas, were fined $5,000 each.

"According to a number of players he (Mowatt) turned toward her and said, 'you're not writing, you're looking,'" the report said. "Olson did not hear this remark, although she saw him addressing her. He smiled and purposely displayed himself to her in a suggestive way."

The scale has been moved into the nearby shower room.

Hurst said he was interviewed twice by investigators and did "not really" agree with what he heard was in the report. He said he hadn't read it.

"I don't think it was really a fair decision" for the team, he added. "I told (the investigators) whatever I had heard or seen."

Hurst voiced the hope of many of his teammates that "we can concentrate on just playing football now."

Cornerback Ronnie Lippett said the lesson of the report and Tagliabue's actions was "common courtesy."

"We're truly sorry ... that it's ever happened. We're trying to heal the wounds within our organization and go on about our business of winning games and getting the public behind us instead of against us."

SMC hoops drops opener to Hope College, 62-59

By CHRIS BACON
Saint Mary's Sports Editor

The Saint Mary's basketball team dropped its first game of the season Tuesday night after a close battle with NCAA Division III National Champion Hope College, 62-59.

Offensive weaknesses led to the team's downfall. Hope pulled out to a nine point lead in the first half as a result of poor shooting and passing by the Belles. But the Belles' harassing defense held Hope in check and the team climbed back into the game.

At halftime, the team only trailed by four, 33-29.

In the second half, Hope again jumped out ahead with a 12 point lead. But the Belles slowly picked at the Hope lead. The team stole the lead with only 3:14 minutes left to play to go on top 55-53. However, missed free throws by the Belles allowed Hope to recapture the lead. With only 18 seconds left in the game, Hope led 60-59. Hope sank both of its free throw shots, clinching their 62-59 victory over the Belles.

"They have a good basketball team. They played well in spurts against us and we played well at times against them," said Belles head coach Marv Wood. "Down the stretch they hit their free throws and we didn't."

"We did really well considering they are the national champions," said junior forward Catherine Restovich of the Belles effort. "In the previous game our fast-break game worked well. In this game we had to work much harder."

Restovich led the team with 12 points, eight rebounds and four assists. Sophomore center Kim Holmes tallied 12 points. The team shot for 35.8 percent from the field and 43 percent from the line.

The Belles will be back in action this weekend when it hosts the annual Round Ball Classic in Angela Athletic Facilities.

Orlando Thunder first WLAFL team unveiled

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — The first entry into the NFL's new World League of American Football will be called the Orlando Thunder.

The team's logo and colors were unveiled Wednesday by World League president Mike Lynn, who also announced that California businessman Raj Bhathal would be the team's majority owner.

"Owning a team in this league might be better than being in the NFL," said Bhathal, who founded Far Western Bank in Tustin, Calif. "I love, love football. I was interested in this six months ago. This city was the No. 1 city in the World League's marketing. We feel this is an international league and Orlando is an international city."

Orlando was granted the first World League franchise on March 15.

The team's logo features a yellow lightning bolt streaking between two blue clouds. The Thunder's uniforms are white, trimmed in blue, yellow and lime green.

The World League will have 10 franchises when its season starts March 10, 1991. In addition to Orlando, franchises in Charlotte, N.C.; New York; Montreal; Sacramento, Calif.; San Antonio; and Birmingham, Ala., will make up the North American teams, while London; Barcelona, Spain; and Frankfurt, Germany, will comprise the European entries.

Lynn also said building supplies magnate Fred Anderson would own the team in Sacramento. Anderson quickly selected Mike Keller, a former executive in the NFL and United States Football League, as his team's general manager.

Raghib "Rocket" Ismail accepted the Walter Camp Trophy at the J.A.C.C. last night. The trophy is given to the best college football player by the Division I-A Sports Information Directors and coaches.

Rocket wins Camp Trophy

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — Raghib "Rocket" Ismail, Notre Dame's triple offensive threat who collected 1,726 all-purpose yards and six touchdowns this season, was named Wednesday the winner of the 1990 Walter Camp player of the year trophy.

"He's the most exciting player we have seen play in many, many years," said Kevin O'Brien, president of the Walter Camp Football Foundation in New Haven, Conn., during a presentation ceremony.

"It's a tremendous honor, and I feel very privileged," said Ismail, a candidate for the Heisman Trophy to be awarded Saturday in New York.

Ismail beat out Virginia quarterback Shawn Moore, who finished second in the balloting among Division I-A coaches and sports information directors for the honor, said O'Brien.

Quarterback Ty Detmer of Brigham Young and Colorado running back Eric Bieniemy finished third and fourth, ahead of quarterbacks Craig Erickson of Miami and David Klingler of Houston.

O'Brien said Ismail "has demonstrated that he is a dedicated competitor who has made effective use of his athletic talent to enhance the great American game of college football. He is an outstanding young man."

Notre Dame coach Lou Holtz said Ismail's talents as a return specialist, receiver and tailback are unquestionable. "There's not been any controversy over Rocket this year," he said. "He's an incredible athlete, but he's been an incredible person."

Ismail declined to speculate on his chances of becoming the eighth Notre Dame player to capture the Heisman. "There's nothing I can do going in there Saturday," he said. "Hopefully the best man will win, and that'll be that."

No. 7 Notre Dame (9-2) finished the regular season Saturday with a 10-6 victory over Southern Cal. The Irish will play No. 1 Colorado (10-1-1) in the Orange Bowl on New Year's Day.

Ismail, a junior, is the third Notre Dame player selected for the honor since it was first awarded in 1967 to O.J. Simpson. Ken MacAfee won the award in 1977 and Tim Brown received it in 1987, the same year he became Notre Dame's seventh Heisman winner.

Indiana's Anthony Thompson won the award last year.

Ismail and the Walter Camp All-America team will be honored at a banquet at Yale University Commons in New Haven on Feb. 16.

Happy Hoosiers awaiting Peach Bowl

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (AP) — Indiana football coach Bill Mallory will be in Atlanta Thursday to meet with Peach Bowl officials.

The Hoosiers probably will face the loser of Saturday's Auburn-Alabama game in the bowl game Dec. 29.

The team had Thanksgiving week off but is preparing this week for the Peach Bowl. Mallory will send an assistant to scout the Auburn-Alabama game.

The 6-4-1 Hoosiers will lose only four starters and the Big Ten's top punter, Macky Smith (42.2-yard average, 13th nationally). They finished seventh in the Big Ten at 3-4-1, winning only two of their last seven games. But the 28-14 Old Oaken Bucket victory over Purdue Saturday salvaged the season. Had the Hoosiers lost, the situation could have become critical.

"It's just such a good feeling going back to a bowl," said Mallory, who recorded his fourth winning season and bowl appearance with the Hoosiers. "It'll be a great shot in the arm for our recruiting. Our program needed it. It kind of had plateaued."

Mallory was most pleased with his defense. Although the Hoosiers finished sixth in the league in total defense (333.8 total yards per game) — two notches below last season — they didn't give up as many big plays, and made more, intercepting 19 passes and recovering 13 fumbles.

The biggest struggles came with an inexperienced and injury-riddled offensive line and at quarterback, where both redshirt freshman Chris Dyer and redshirt sophomore Trent Green struggled. The Hoosiers passed just 30 percent of the time and finished last in passing (139.6).

"We had some tough moments, but we had good moments in the way we hung in there and battled, fought through some adversity and came out with this victory Saturday," Mallory said. "We're a young ballclub. We had some injuries, but I'm not one to make a lot of excuses. I think in some ways we made good progress, yet we know we're going to have to get ourselves better for the future.

"It's imperative that we go out and have a good year recruiting."

Mallory most covets high-quality running backs, though he already has one in junior tailback Vaughn Dunbar. Dunbar came back from two junior college seasons and a redshirt year to finish third in Big Ten rushing and 16th nationally with 1,143 yards (5.0 per carry, 103.9 per game) and 13 touchdowns.

"I think next year he can be without a question one of the top running backs in the country," said Mallory.

Fullback Cal Miller is graduating, and Mallory has only one more year with Dunbar, backup Steve Goodrich and fullback Ernie Thompson. Mallory hopes Dunbar's emergence and the legacy of 1989 Heisman Trophy runnerup Anthony Thompson will make IU an attractive place for aspiring running backs.

coming here, I wouldn't be just another player on the roster. Coming here it was like they cared more about you than winning a national championship."

Coach Schafer is clearly impressed with the play of his young netminder, especially his mental approach to the game.

"It doesn't seem to upset his play (when he's scored on)," says Schafer. "As soon as the puck has been dropped, he's ready to start over again."

Louder feels that his physical tools are a big part of his success in goal.

"My size (6-1, 185) helps a lot," he says. "I use it to my advantage, playing the angles as opposed to reactions."

His success in high school should have been an indicator of his success in college, but his immediate impact has surprised even himself.

"I expected the transition to take a little longer," he says, "but so far I'm doing OK."

With accolades and honors piled on him, it seems that Louder has a bright future in front of him and Coach Schafer agrees.

"It's hard to say with 3 1/2 years of college ahead of him, but he has the tools and proper temperament," says Schafer.

Louder would like to play professionally some day, but as a freshman he's not overly concerned with his future after college.

"It'd be nice if things work out (to play professionally), if it's in the NHL or in Europe. It's nice to have that as one of your options. It's pretty much a dream of every hockey player," he says.

With Louder playing so well, it seems the Irish have found their goaltender of the present and future. For his part, Louder thinks the match is perfect.

"It's everything I could have asked for," said Louder. "Schoolwork has been going great and hockey's been going great."

Luckily, Coach Schafer will have a while to wait before he has to worry about who is going to be playing goal when the Irish take the ice.

Hoops

Ellis said. "We noticed it, it just took us a little too long to react. I let a couple of passes go inside that I shouldn't have; in that zone if the guard penetrates, I'm supposed to come up and stop penetration."

According to Daimon Sweet, who led Notre Dame with 19 points, the Irish have nobody to blame but themselves.

"We just have to play with the same pace and the same emotion in each half," Sweet said. "When we put two halves together, that will make us a better team, but I don't think we did that tonight."

It just appeared as if it was all going to come together for the Irish. It was almost a surprise when Elmer Bennett's three-pointer, which could have sent the game into overtime, rolled off the rim at the buzzer. After the losses to Duke and Arizona, this could have been a big victory for Notre Dame.

"We didn't play too well against Arizona," Irish forward Kevin Ellery said, "but against Duke we came back and played better. We still didn't win, though, and we thought tonight could be a turning point. We really wanted to beat them because they were a Top 10 team, but halfway through we just lost our intensity, we made turnovers, and missed boxouts on defense."

Notre Dame also looked lethargic on offense in the second half. The Irish didn't have any trouble with Indiana's man-to-man defense early in the game, but when it came to crunch time, Phelps's troops couldn't buy a hoop.

"We just stopped moving around on offense, we were standing around, and we couldn't really get into it. We weren't getting out and running the break, either," Ellery lamented.

Bennett, who scored the last seven Irish points and finished with 18, put it all in perspective.

"It's just a disappointment losing to a team in the Top 10 again," he said. "We had the game, but we didn't grab it, had some turnovers, and let them back into the game. I think things will come around really soon for us, though. We play the toughest schedule in the nation, but hopefully we'll be able to get some wins against these teams."

Irish

play than we got from Meeks today."

"You expect them to make some kind of spurt because of their defensive capabilities," Phelps said, "because of their defensive capabilities. We just gave up too many points inside."

Guard Pat Graham nailed four free throws in the final minute to seal the win, including his school-record 38th consecutive free throw. Meeks's foul shot with six seconds left provided the final margin of victory.

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Sophomore guard Rich Mount is leaving the Purdue basketball team and will transfer to another school at the end of the semester, his father, former Boilermaker star Rick Mount, said Wednesday night.

Rick Mount, an All-American at Purdue and the school's all-time leading scorer, said his son cleaned out his locker Monday night after Purdue's win over Massachusetts and has not gone to practice since. The younger Mount met with Purdue coach Gene Keady Tuesday to tell the coach of his decision, the father said.

The elder Mount said in a telephone interview from his home in Lebanon that his son was leaving because of philosophical differences with Keady and a lack of playing time. Mount had played a total of 21 minutes in two games this season. He had scored two points, making one of six field goal attempts.

"He just couldn't play for the guy. Just too much negative input," Rick Mount said of Keady. "He's too negative toward his players. It just makes your confidence go downhill."

In an exhibition game against the touring Soviet national team, Rich Mount shot the ball well, his father said. "All that came about was negative input. Rich went through that last year and just got sick of it and decided to leave," his father said.

Mount said his son hasn't decided where he'll transfer.

"Right now we're waiting until he gets out of school," the elder Mount said. "We're looking at everything. We'll do some calling around."

The elder Mount is Purdue's all-time leading scorer, totaling 2,323 points from 1968-70. He said his son's decision was not affected by his career at Purdue.

"My ties were with George King and Bob King, not with Gene Keady," Rick Mount said. "Deep down I still remember them a lot. But with Gene Keady there, I have no ties with him. This is what Rich decided on his own. He asked me about it, and I told him, 'You have to make your own decision.' I respect his judgment."

Indiana defeats Irish 70-67

Jamal Meeks scores 11 points to fuel late Hoosier rally

By FRANK PASTOR
Associate Sports Editor

Jamal Meeks fumbled his way into Bobby Knight's heart Wednesday night.

Meeks, Indiana's third guard, recovered from an early second-half turnover against Notre Dame's full-court press to score 11 second-half points and dish out eight assists in the Hoosiers' 70-67 victory in the Joyce ACC.

The loss marked the third straight defeat to a top 10 team for Notre Dame (2-3), which lost to No. 3 Arizona and No. 6 Duke last week in the Dodge/NIT.

The Irish led by as many as 12 points in the second half before the Hoosiers (3-1) rallied to win. Forward Daimon Sweet's two free throws with 14:16 remaining gave Notre Dame a commanding 45-33 advantage, but Indiana rode a 14-4 spurt to draw to within two at 49-47.

Forward Calbert Cheaney pulled the Hoosiers even at 53 with an eight-foot jumper inside the paint at the 7:09 mark. Cheaney then put Indiana on top for the first time when he rebounded his own missed shot to give Indiana a 55-53 lead only minutes later.

The Hoosiers' comeback coincided with Meeks's entrance into the game.

"(Meeks) played with a heart the size of an elephant's heart in the second half," Knight said. "When he made a critical error and lost the ball against the press, he knew it. I like guys who know when they screw up."

Meeks played the entire second half after watching guards Damon Bailey and Chris Reynolds struggle to penetrate Notre Dame's 2-3 zone in the first half. The Irish jumped out to a 14-5 lead just six minutes into the game and led throughout the half, taking a 35-25 advantage into the locker room at intermission.

Sweet (19 points) and guard Elmer Bennett (18 points), Notre Dame's "Texas Express", combined for 19 points in the first half while the Irish defense held Cheaney, Indiana's leading scorer at 20.3 points per game, scoreless through the first 20 minutes.

"I thought we played well in the first 24 minutes," Irish head coach Digger Phelps said. "I felt it came down to the last 14 minutes. We didn't do the things defensively that we needed to do. We didn't protect the inside, and we committed turnovers that you can't make in a situation like that."

Indiana forced eight Notre Dame turnovers in the second half by changing to a tenacious man-to-man defense that forced the Irish into bad passes and hurried shots.

"We went into our transition game in the second half," Bennett said, "and we just couldn't get the ball inside. Everybody was standing out on the perimeter."

Meeks, meanwhile had his way with the Irish defense. The junior guard took over the point when Bailey fouled out at the 5:28 mark and set up Cheaney for 15 second-half points.

Meeks was left unguarded at the top of the key and hit several key jump shots down the stretch. He also found Cheaney underneath the basket with 54 seconds remaining to give the Hoosiers an insurmountable 63-60.

"We got a really good lift from Meeks in the second half," Knight said. "He gave us more as a guard than we've had from anybody in a long time. We couldn't ask for better guard

Irish come oh-so-close in third loss to Top 10 team

At halftime it seemed like they were finally going to pull it off. The Notre Dame men's basketball team had looked awful in a 91-61 loss to No. 2 Arizona last week. Against No. 8 Duke, the Irish looked a little bit better, and a second-half comeback left them just eight points short as the Blue Devils held on for an 85-77 win.

Last night at the Joyce ACC it looked like Digger Phelps's squad was about to bust out of its shell against a Top 10 team. The Irish led No. 10 Indiana 35-25 at the intermission, and everything was going their way.

Every time the Hoosiers made a run in the first half, Notre Dame responded. When Indiana cut the Irish lead to four with 6:20 to go in the first stanza, Daimon Sweet hit an off-balance bank shot and Tim Singleton followed with a steal and a rim-rattling breakaway dunk to increase Notre Dame's advantage to 27-19. A free throw by Kevin Ellery and an Elmer Bennett layup pushed the Irish out to an 11-point lead, and things looked glum for the Hoosiers at halftime. But it all fell apart in the second half, as Jamal Meeks and Calbert Cheaney, who were both scoreless at halftime, scored 11 and 15 points respectively. Meeks and Cheaney exploited the middle of the Irish zone defense which was extended out on the wings in order to stop Hoosier guards Greg Graham and Damon Bailey, who had combined for four three-pointers between them in the first half.

"There were a couple of holes in the zone," Irish forward LaPhonso Louder buoys Irish hockey

Head coach Schafer optimistic about freshman goalie

RICH KURZ
Sports Writer

When the 1989-90 hockey season ended last March, Notre Dame head coach Ric Schafer had a few questions to answer.

Like how he was going to replace 56 career wins and 3519 career saves (both Irish records) that deserted him when goaltender Lance Madson graduated last May, joining the Hartford Whaler organization as the holder of five Notre Dame goalkeeping records.

Enter freshman goalie Greg Louder.

"After graduating Madson, we were concerned about replacing him. Greg has calmed those fears," says Schafer.

And he might have even made Notre Dame hockey fans begin to forget Madson. Louder, a native of Acton, Mass., has started all 11 games to date, compiling a 5-5-1 record. He has turned away 315 shots so far, with an .870 save percentage, numbers very similar to Madson's.

In his freshman season, Madson saved 541 shots in 17 games, with a save percentage of .878. As far as the most important numbers go however, Louder is ahead of Madson. Madson's record freshman year was only 5-12, while Louder already has five wins just a third of the way through the season.

Louder doesn't feel much pressure following in the footsteps of a legend like Madson, however.

"I heard people talk about him," Louder says, "but I never really considered that I would have to pick up where he left off."

Those who have followed Louder's career to this point probably aren't too surprised about his success at Notre Dame. He was a four-year starter at the Cushing Academy in Massachusetts, where he was chosen as the Massachusetts Goalie of the Year, as well as the top goaltender at the All-American Tournament in Boston.

Yet the most important selection of Louder's hockey career took place last spring when the Edmonton Oilers chose him in the fifth round of the NHL Draft, making him the second American goaltender selected in the draft. Despite the obvious temptation of going pro, Louder says that it never really entered his mind.

"Not right out of high school," he says. "I'd pretty much decided to go to college, but it's nice to have that (professional hockey) after college."

Why would a goaltender who had his pick of colleges choose to attend Notre Dame over some of the more traditional hockey powers?

"The academics with the athletics," says Louder. "I felt

Olivieri leads Saint Mary's natators, divers

By EMILY WILLETT
Sports Writer

The Saint Mary's Swimming and Diving team look to senior Toni Olivieri to provide leadership and experience. As the only senior on the team, Toni has quite a position to fill.

"As a senior I feel that I need to provide motivation for the other swimmers," said Toni. "It's important to have someone there who is always cheering and keeping spirits up. I want to support the others as well as provide an example. I try to show the importance of concentrating in competition to perform my best as well as encouraging others to do their best.

While it is important to have senior guidance, Toni credits the other returning swimmers for the leadership that they provide the team. The nine returning team members provide a base of experience and strength for the underclass members.

Toni brings a background in swimming that began at the age of six. She swam in summer leagues until she joined the Saint Mary's team her freshman year. Shoulder injuries forced her to cut down her butterfly events, pushing her strength into the 50 meter and 100 meter freestyle events. The 200 meter individual medley is also a personal favorite which provides variety. As a Saint Mary's swimmer, she qualified for NAIA nationals both her freshman and junior years, and she was selected as a Scholar-Athlete last year. She spent her sophomore year in Rome, and therefore did not participate in swimming.

This week the Saint Mary's team will compete in the National Catholic Invitational at Notre Dame. The meet places Division III Saint Mary's against a large number of Division I schools. As far as team placement this will be a hindrance, however there is room for strong individual performances.

"This year Saint Mary's should have scorers in both swimming and diving. The meet provides a good opportunity for strong individual and relay performances," predicted Toni. Toni remembered National Catholics as her first meet for Saint Mary's.

"As a freshman I was scared. The meet was large, and I wasn't comfortable with my team yet," recalled Toni.

She thinks that this year's team, however, will find the meet to be a less threatening, more positive experience. The team has already competed in big meets including the Notre Dame Relays and the Little
