ND arrests cause police squabble

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — The arrest of Notre Dame quarterback Rick Mirer for public intoxication and disorderly conduct has caused a squabble inside the city's police department.

An internal memo written by an acting shift commander criticizes a police spokesman for siding with Mirer, according to a report published Tuesday.

Mirer and linebacker Demetrius DuBose were arrested late Friday night as police attempted to break up an off-campus party that attracted an estimated 500 revelers.

After Mirer and DuBose were released on $100 bonds, police department spokesman Lt. Norval Williams drove the pair to the South Bend Tribune to give reporters their side of the story.

"They weren't drunk," Williams said. "I think it was a case of them being at the wrong place at the wrong time."

Williams also said Mirer asked the arresting officer for a breathalyzer test, but was refused.

A memo drafted by Lt. David Shock, acting shift commander during the incident, said Williams' statements violated department rules against public criticism of fellow officers "made with reckless disregard for its truth or falsity."

Shock said Williams asked the arresting officer, Patrolman

Robert Culp, to release Mirer, DuBose, and sophomore John Neal, not a football player, of Tonawanda, N.Y., a third Notre Dame student arrested at the scene.

When Culp refused, Williams allegedly told the officer to "think about his career, and the career of the people he arrested," Shock wrote in the memo, a copy of which was obtained by the Tribune.

Shock said Williams' conversation with Culp was an attempt "to intimidate a rookie officer of this department into releasing the suspects and dropping the charges."

Williams declined to comment on the memo. Police have refused to release arrest reports on the incident.

Officers were called to the scene after revelers refused an apartment manager's demand to disperse.

Mirer, 21, a junior from Goshen, said he drank two beers within a two-hour period. DuBose, 20, of Seattle, said he drank two or three beers.

Coach Lou Holtz said both players would be disciplined, although neither will be suspended. The coach said Mirer and DuBose "were the victims of the situation and not the cause of it."

The students are scheduled to appear in court Oct. 9. No other arrests were made.

Notre Dame opens its season Saturday at home against Indiana.

Fighting threatens cease-fire

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — A renewal of fierce fighting involving Yugoslav soldiers, Croatian forces and Serb militants threatened on Tuesday to scuttle a new European Community peace plan in Yugoslavia.

The 12-nation EC called an urgent international peace conference on Yugoslavia in The Hague for Saturday. It named Lord Carrington, one of Britain's most widely respected statesmen, as its chief mediator.

Dozens of 200 cease-fire observers were leaving Tuesday for Croatia.

The Croatian stronghold of Osijek and surrounding villages in the ethnically mixed Slavonia region saw some of the heaviest clashes Tuesday. At least 16 people were killed.

The head of Yugoslavia's collective federal presidency, Stipe Mesic, appealed for peace late Tuesday. "The country is facing great trials and very grave risks," Mesic, a Croat, said on TV.

He said the presidency was asking the federal army to immediately appoint officers to oversee the cease-fire jointly with Croatian officials and representatives of Serb insurgents.

Rice named top school by Money

NEW YORK (AP) — Rice University, which offers 3,900 students an Ivy League-caliber education at half the price, was named the nation's best college buy Tuesday by Money Magazine.

The magazine's second annual survey, appearing in a $3.95 "Money Guide" that will go on sale at newsstands on Sept. 9, analyzed 1,011 colleges and universities and identified 100 best values based on quality of students, faculty and facilities and tuition.

The top-100 list contained 56 private schools, including some of the nation's priciest campuses: Yale, Stanford and the University of Chicago, where tuition exceeds $16,000 but which nonetheless were judged excellent values.

Others, such as Trenton State College in Trenton, N.J., and Texas A&M University in College Station, Texas, were rated bargains with tuitions of less than $5,000 even for out-of-state students.

On the cost side, the survey rated schools based on tuitions, and used out-of-state charges for public schools to make them more comparable to private institutions.

In measuring educational quality, the survey used such indicators as student-to-faculty ratio, average Scholastic Aptitude Test scores, library resources, graduation rates, percentage of graduates who earn doctorate degrees, and the number of graduates who make Standard & Poor's Executive-College Survey of 70,000 top corporate executives.

Rice, this year's winner, charges students $7,700 in tuition plus $4,900 in room and board, about half the cost of most Ivy League colleges, thanks largely to a $1 billion endowment. Until 1965, it charged no tuition.

The Houston-based school was founded in 1891 by cotton baron William Marsh Rice, whose dream was to establish a first-rate college open to all regardless of means. Rice's engineering, business and science programs rank among the nation's best.

Cooper Union, rated tops last year in the magazine's first survey, dropped out of the top 100 this year. The New York City-based school remains an "unbeatable bargain" at $300 a year, the magazine said, but offers degrees only in art, architecture and engineering.

Harvard failed to make the list because it "declined to disclose data ... needed to perform our calculations," according to the magazine.

Harvard spokesman Peter Costa said the university has a policy against releasing average SAT scores and other data that was asked for in the survey.

Besides Rice, other schools in this year's top 10 were:

- New College of The University of South Florida, Sarasota: 500 students pay low state tuition rates — $1,675 for residents, $6,690 for out-of-staters — but private foundation money helps keep student-faculty ratio to just 10-1.

- Trenton State: offers rolling green campus with lakes and small classes for just $3,079 for residents, and $4,400 for non-residents.

- University of Virginia, Charlottesville: The school that Thomas Jefferson founded stresses liberal arts even for engineering and architecture majors. Out-of-state tuition is $9,564.

- University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign: tuition is $2,236 for residents, $5,988 for non-residents. Boasts a 7.7 million volume library, bested only by Harvard and Yale.

- California Institute of Technology, Pasadena: A high-powered student body, with mean SATs of 1,410, and "top-notch" faculty make this private school a top value despite $14,100 tuition.

- State University of New York at Binghamton: 71 percent of students are in the top

INSIDE COLUMN

A name makes all the difference

My freshman year of high school, I couldn't wait for third period. I'd bolt out of gym class, grab a seat in the front row of my French class, smile brightly at Madame, and know that, for the next 50 minutes, I wasn't Paige anymore.

Paige Smoron
Assistant Accent
Editor

I was "Fifi."

Quite frankly, my given name is inadequate, its main drawbacks being:

- a.) When singing the Name Game, it doesn't form any obscene words (like "Chuck"), and
- b.) The inevitable confusion between myself and Nicolette Sheridan's character "Paige" on "Knots Landing" (the Domino's delivery man told me once that I resembled her greatly. I tipped him $10).

The bad associations with my name go back to second grade. My teacher, Miss Allendorf, was in the unfortunate habit of saying, "Open your Phonics books and turn to page..." at which point I would jump up from my flash cards and shriek, "WHAT?", to the riotous delight of Danny O'Connor, who made a point of calling me "Blank Paige" in a snide voice, and was incidentally also famous throughout the primary grades for never cleaning his ears.

Ever since, I've been fascinated with names, and the apparently advanced senses of humor of the parents responsible for many of them. How can a loving couple bring a beautiful new life into this world, and then shoot all his chances to hell by christening him "Englebert"? Poor Englebert will be depantsed throughout his formative years with alarming frequency.

Some families are very systematic about the naming process. I have a friend who was named alphabetically. His brothers and sisters were Arlene, Bill, Carol, etc. Mercifully, his parents decided to forego "I," or Jason might have been "Izzy."

On "The Bold and the Beautiful," all the characters, be they bold or be they beautiful (and to confuse viewers even more, some are both), are named after elements of nature: Thorn, Ridge, Storm . . . I'm so afraid Brook will name her (illegitimate) baby "Sapling."

According to figures I've recently fabricated, your name can make you or break you. How many football captains have we had that were named "Dewey"? How many porn stars have been named "Edwina"? (If you answered more than two to that last one, I'm scared.)

Lately I've been thinking about dropping my last name altogether, and going solo with "Paige." Maybe then I'll be qualified to follow in the footsteps of Cher, or — do I dare make the comparison? — Tiffany.

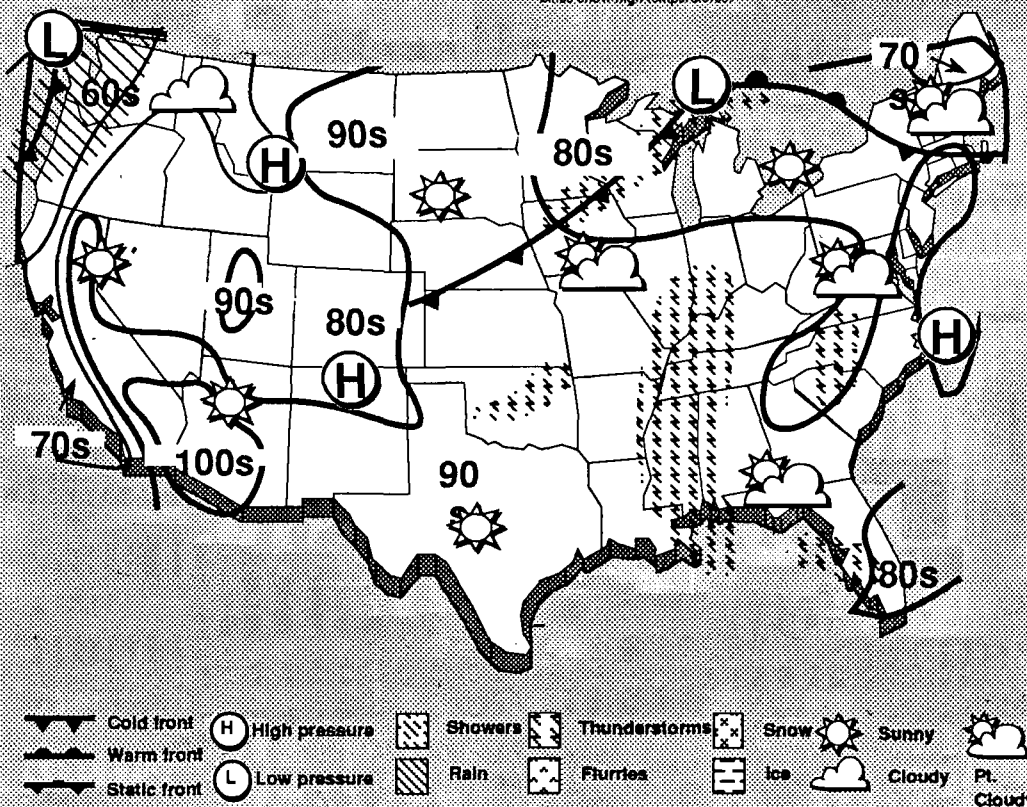

It might take a while to make the name change legal, and to assuage my Grandma Smoron. She's indignant over the flagrant effacement of the family name, which has apparently been around since the twelfth century, originally meaning "keeper of many yaks."

Until then, you can just call me Fifi.

New charges against Imelda Marcos

■ MANILA, Philippines— The government filed new fraud charges against Imelda Marcos today, alleging she illegally withdrew $25 million from a government bank branch for personal expenses while her husband was president. The action came a day after Mrs. Marcos said she was willing to return to the Philippines for trial on earlier fraud charges, but only if she received assurances that the body of her husband eventually would be allowed back. President Aquino announced in July that the 5-year-old ban on Mrs. Marcos entering the country was being lifted so she could return for trial. But she continued to bar the return of the body of former President Ferdinand Marcos. Marcos and his family fled to Hawaii shortly after a popular uprising toppled him from power in 1986.

■ NEW YORK— Rival newswEEKlies Time and Newsweek wound up with the same photo on their covers this week, after choosing similar photos a week earlier. This week, Time and Newsweek each used a photo of people celebrating the breakup of the Soviet Union beneath a paint-spattered poster of Lenin. Newsweek Managing Editor Ken Auchincloss said people there can recall only one other time when both magazines used the same photo on their covers — an A.P. photo of the Marine barracks bombed in Beirut in October 1983. A third newsweekly, U.S. News & World Report, has used an advertising campaign that cast Time and Newsweek as clones of each other. But U.S. News also used the photo of the crowd and the poster — on the table of contents page.

Low t-shirt sales dominates HPC's first meeting of year

By STEVEN KRAUSS
News Writer

The apparent lack of sales of 1991's The Shirt is causing a stir at the Student Union Board (SUB).

Matt Bomberger, chairman of the SUB Antostal committee spoke to the Hall Presidents Council (HPC) Tuesday about the sluggish sales, urging the presidents to go door to door, if necessary, to move the shirts.

SUB, which currently has a surplus of 5,000 to 6,000 shirts, kicked off a massive advertising campaign yesterday to alleviate what Bomberger alluded to as poor support by the dorm presidents.

HPC remained relatively calm about the prospect of so many unsold shirts and the subsequent $46,000 debt this problem would cause. "He [Bomberger] is just scared," said Carroll Hall President Tom Leahy, "you can't compare last year to this year because we don't have as much time [before the home opener] to sell shirts."

Dillon Hall President Anthony Coury thought poor planning might be behind The Shirt's slump. "It's very possible for two large groups like SUB and HPC to work together, but this project got off to a bad start," he said.

Coury also feels the time constraint is to blame: "The Shirt is the last thing on my mind. With Freshman Orientation, the Dillon Pep Rally, as well as academics and extra-curricular activities, I don't have an abundance of time to go out and sell shirts."

The dorm presidents remained positive as a whole, however, about the potential for the fund raiser now that section leaders have been elected and hall governments can put forth a concerted effort. As such, neither Leahy nor Coury are worried about selling all their shirts. Said Leahy, "I expect this to be a big week for sales."

Coury added, "They'll be sold out before January 1st, that's all that really matters."

Former ND head men's basketball coach Digger Phelps was the main speaker Tuesday as HPC began its 1991 - 92 session. He was seeking support from HPC for Greenwood Estates, a Wisconsin based camp for the disabled. The Logan Center sends many of its patients to the camp at a cost of $425 per patient each week.

Phelps talked at length about the virtues of the camp, and gave a slide show presenting images of campers engaged in such activities as hayrides, kickball, and sing-alongs. He then encouraged each dorm to sponsor a camper from the Logan Center for a week at the estates. "A week for them at the camp is like a lifetime for you or me," he said.

When Digger Phelps coached the Notre Dame men's basketball team from 1970 to 1991, his involvement with the Logan Center in South Bend was as much of a constant as the green carnation he wore on game days. Since retiring last spring, he's had even more time to devote to charitable organizations, including those in the public relations area.

Fire levels North Carolina plant; 25 killed, 40 injured

HAMLET, N.C. (AP) — Fire engulfed a chicken processing plant Tuesday, creating an inferno in which panicked workers were trapped by blocked or locked doors, witnesses said. Authorities reported 25 people were killed and 40 injured.

"They were screaming 'Let me out!'" said passer-by Sam Breeden. "They were beating on the door."

Witnesses said a fryer at the Imperial Food Products plant caught fire about 8:30 a.m. The company makes chicken nuggets and marinated chicken breasts sold at fast-food restaurants and grocery stores.

The 11-year-old plant had never been inspected by state safety officials, said Charles Jeffress, assistant commissioner of the North Carolina labor department.

"I'm sure that there are many others" that have not been inspected, said Jeffress. He said the state does not have enough inspectors to get to every plant. He said the state never received a safety complaint about Imperial plant.

Renee Hoffman, a spokeswoman for the state Department of Crime Control and Public Safety, said 25 were confirmed dead by late afternoon. Hospitals reported at least 40 injured.

The interior of the building was gutted.

A woman who was in the canteen said people rushed in yelling, "Fire! Fire!" The door from the canteen to the outside was locked and a man had to break the door open so those inside could escape.

Carolyn Rainwater, a plant worker, said she heard people screaming and "I saw a big puff of black smoke and I started running for the back

Pinochet jokes about discovered graves

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — Former President Augusto Pinochet has angered the civilian government with his flip-pant remarks about the exhumation of hundreds of reported victims of his military regime.

Asked late Monday about the fact that some victims were buried two to a grave, Pinochet responded: "What a big savings."

Workers on Monday had begun digging up unmarked graves at Santiago's General Cemetery, where more than 120 bodies were buried shortly after the bloody 1973 coup that brought Pinochet to power. The exhumations were ordered by two judges at the request of the Roman Catholic Church.

When reporters asked Pinochet to comment on the discovery of the corpse of a missing leftist leader, he replied in a sarcastic tone, "My congratulations to the body searchers."

Asked whether he continues to maintain that his military regime did not kidnap and kill its opponents, he said "There was an irregular war that was well-planned by the KGB."

The elected government of President Patricio Aylwin, which took office from Pinochet last year after 17 years of military rule, responded angrily.

"The government is very shaken and astonished by the way in which Gen. Pinochet referred to the painful fact that two bodies were buried in the same tomb," said Enrique Correa, Aylwin's spokesman. "These cruel remarks offend the sensitivities of relatives and of the entire country."

In two days of digging, 18 sets of remains have been exhumed from the cemetery's Yard 19, a section where corpses were buried anonymously by the military regime, according to human rights groups. Some of the bodies reportedly were buried together.

None of the bodies have been officially identified, but relatives said one of the victims was Bautista van Schouwen, a leader of the Leftist Revolutionary Movement who was arrested shortly after the coup.

door." The door was blocked by a delivery truck and the workers had to wait for it to be moved, she said.

"When I arrived, I didn't have hope for anybody coming out of here," said a police officer who would not give his name.

"They're beating all the odds."

The officer was trying to control a growing crowd of worried relatives, friends and curiosity-seekers.

Several witnesses said employees couldn't escape because of locked doors.

Brad Roe, operations manager and son of owner Emmett Roe, said he did not know if doors were locked.

"I can't tell you right now," he said. "But there were plenty of doors that were open."

He said he believed the building has nine doors. "Certain doors are locked at certain times," he said. "I can't tell you which doors were locked, if any were locked."

The State Bureau of Investigation is investigating. Hamlet Fire Chief David Fuller said authorities are looking into the deep-fat fryer as a possible cause.

Asked if there had been previous problems with the fryer, Roe said: "Nothing more than natural breakdowns and maintenance. Nothing that we believe would start a fire."

Fuller said the person who reported the fire said an explosion had occurred, but that has not been confirmed.

The fryer is 26 feet long and situated in the middle of the 30,000-square-foot plant. It's fueled by natural gas.

O'Neil Patrick said he was walking near the plant and saw another man trying to help workers. He said only one door was open and that was in the front of the building.

He said he could hear people screaming on the other side of a locked door and inside the truck that was backed up to a loading dock door.

RIT president retires in storm of controversy

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — The president of Rochester Institute of Technology announced his retirement Tuesday, five months after his work for the CIA and ensuing revelations galvanized the campus.

M. Richard Rose, 58, said he planned to leave next spring, in part because he was concerned that debate over CIA influence on campus overshadowed other school activities.

"We run the very real risk of losing institutional momentum," Rose said in his annual state of the institute address. "I don't want the current controversy that is symbolized in me to hinder the significant progress that is possible for this university."

Rose, RIT president since 1979, said his decision coincides with retirement plans made two years ago. He didn't disclose future plans.

RIT board Chairman Thomas Gosnell said the board would regretfully accept Rose's retirement, which is effective June 1, 1992.

"Rich's leadership has significantly advanced RIT to a position among the world's finest universities," Gosnell said.

Jack Smith, a school spokesman, said later that Rose was resigning voluntarily.

For decades the CIA has had ties to RIT, which specializes in photography and the evolving field of imaging science, which combines photography and electronics.

But this past April a furious debate over the relationship erupted when Rose disclosed he was spending a four-month sabbatical at the agency's headquarters in Langley, Va.

It then came to light that the school gets more than $1 million every year from the CIA for research.

Further outcries were raised when a newspaper reported about two leaked documents: a report titled "Japan: 2000" that described Japanese as "amoral, manipulative and controlling," and a 1985 memorandum suggesting the CIA had a hand shaping school curriculum.

School officials said the documents were only drafts and were never approved.

Gorbachev, Yeltsin press Soviet congress for change

MOSCOW (AP) — Mikhail Gorbachev and Boris Yeltsin urged lawmakers on Tuesday to approve sweeping changes in the Soviet government, and Gorbachev warned Congress that it might cease to exist if it failed to accept radical change.

Meanwhile, Yeltsin called for an end to underground nuclear tests and sought to reassure the world that Soviet nuclear weapons would all be moved inside the huge borders of his Russian republic, controlled centrally and kept from the hands of "hawks" and "terrorists."

Even as Gorbachev and the Congress of People's Deputies wrestled with the question of what would replace the old Soviet Union, ethnic tensions flared along its southwestern fringe. Clashes between demonstrators and police were reported in Georgia, a strike was called in Azerbaijan to protest Sept. 8 elections there, and ethnic Russians and Ukrainians demonstrated in Moldavia.

The Soviet president, seeking to sweep away hard-line opponents of reform, seemed intent on getting rid of the Communist-dominated Congress as part of his plan to reshape the country and its governmental structures.

Gorbachev, Yeltsin and the leaders of nine other republics on Monday had put before the Congress a broad proposal to strip the Kremlin of most powers and transfer them to the republics, while first concentrating power in a State Council made up of the Soviet president and leaders of the republics.

Emerging from the second day of the three-day session, Gorbachev issued a stern warning, telling reporters that if lawmakers didn't approve his proposal, then "the people will reject this Congress. ... The Congress will have exhausted its usefulness."

But Gorbachev also gave a sop to the lawmakers, withdrawing a proposal for a new, smaller legislature with 20 representatives from each republic — which would have given the six predominantly Muslim republics more representatives than Russia, Byelorussia and the Ukraine.

Instead, he suggested reforming the Supreme Soviet — the 542-member standing legislature elected by the Congress from its membership.

Gorbachev also put off a vote on independence for the Baltics, which he originally said might occur at the session.

More than 300 people have been killed in fighting in Croatia since it declared independence June 25. Many of Croatia's 600,000 Serbs, 12 percent of the republic's population, are unwilling to live in an independent Croatia.

AP photographer Franz Pammer reported that Osijek, 140 miles east of Zagreb, echoed with constant submachine-gun and light artillery fire Tuesday. The army blocked a road to Vukovar, 18 miles to the southeast, he said.

He saw two air force planes dropping bombs on neighboring Bilje village, a last Croat stronghold in the Baranja area stretching north of Osijek toward Hungary.

In the town of Beli Manastir, Serbs claimed to have taken Bilje and Mece, the last two Croat-held villages in Baranja.

Bush: Parents should help improve education

LEWISTON, Maine (AP) — President Bush, delivering a troubling back-to-school message, said Tuesday that America's education system is failing and "we must blame ourselves for betraying our children."

"The ringing school bell sounds an alarm, a warning to all of us who care about the state of American education," Bush said. "Every day brings new evidence of crisis."

Bush pressed his crusade to improve schools during a brief stop here before returning to Washington at the end of his 29-day Maine vacation.

Bush's speech marked the beginning of a new emphasis on education, the environment and other domestic issues likely to be major themes of the coming election year.

Democrats, frustrated by polls showing Bush with high ratings on foreign policy matters, hope to exploit what they believe is the president's weakness on problems at home, such as the flailing economy and the lack of health insurance for many Americans.

Democratic Party Chairman Ronald Brown said the president's speech was intended to open Bush's 1992 re-election campaign and "redeem George Bush's embarrassing failure to live up to his lofty promise to be our education president."

"George Bush and his White House must match rhetoric with real action and substitute direct presidential responsibility for the same old photo opportunity," Brown said in a statement. "Campaign pledges don't cut the mustard when our economic future depends on smart kids and a skilled work force."

Rep. Tom Andrews, D-Maine, said it was good that the president was drawing attention to the problem, but that his proposals don't go far enough. Bush, he said, should shift millions of dollars from the defense budget into education.

President Bush

"Which is more important to our national security today — another B-2 bomber or a nation of well-educated young people?" Andrews asked.

Maine Gov. John McKernan Jr., a Republican, introduced Bush to an audience of parents, students and educators who filled Lewiston High School gym.

"Much of what the president has tried to do on the domestic agenda has been overlooked" because of dramatic events around the world, McKernan said.

Baltics apply for U.N. membership

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The three Baltic republics, which were extinguished as independent nations by the Soviet Union a half-century ago, on Tuesday applied for full U.N. membership as free countries.

Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania, which were forcibly annexed in 1940, could be seated as early as this month to take part in the 46th General Assembly.

On Tuesday, the formal applications were submitted to Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar by French Ambassador Jean-Bernard Merimee and British Ambassador Sir David Hannay.

Representatives of the Baltic states were not present, but are expected to participate in membership consultations next week.

"This is a big and a historic step," Hannay told reporters after handing over the applications to the secretary-general.

But Hannay and Merimee said that British and French support for the Baltics' applications did not necessarily mean that Britain would support possible U.N. applications by other former Soviet republics.

In order for a country to join the United Nations, the 15-member Security Council must approve an application and two-thirds of the General Assembly must endorse it. France is president of the council this month and the application process is expected to be expedited.

The Soviet Union holds veto power on the Security Council but a spokesman for the Soviet mission to the United Nations, Aleksander Denisov, said Moscow would not block the Baltics' application.

"On the contrary, we will support it," he said in a telephone interview.

The Soviet Union already has indicated it will let the Baltics go their own way, but Soviet lawmakers have not yet approved the legislation recognizing their independence.

The former Soviet republics of Byelorussia and the Ukraine have declared their independence.

Bush told the audience that parents and students, in particular, must get involved in the campaign to improve education.

He noted that the verbal scores of high school seniors declined to an all-time low on the Scholastic Aptitude Test. "These numbers tell us: Our schools are in trouble."

"But before we point fingers, assign blame, how many of us demand more of children, ourselves, our schools? Survey after survey suggests too many parents and students remain unconcerned, unconvinced that the state of their own schools should worry them."

Bush said: "The truth is, all our children are at risk. ... If our schools fail, we can't blame Washington. We can't blame Augusta," the capital of Maine.

"We must blame ourselves for betraying our children."

Bush and the nation's governors have adopted a package of lofty education goals to be achieved by 2000. The strategy calls for American students to be first in the world in science and math, two subjects where they rank last among industrialized nations.

To accomplish the goals, Bush has proposed creation of national standards in English, math, science, history and geography, and a system of national examinations to measure performance.

Bush told parents they are expecting too much of teachers.

"We expect them to act as social workers and psychologists and family counselors," he said. "At the same time, we ask too little of our students. We shy away from demanding excellence and accountability."

Moreover, he said parents must accept the blame for declining test scores.

"We haven't taken the time to read to our kids, to talk with them, to teach them the art of communication, how to think, how to write, how to speak clearly. What happens at home really matters."

Teachers spend first day of school on picket lines

(AP) - Teachers in Pennsylvania, Rhode Island and Michigan spent the first day of school on the picket lines Tuesday, and more than 35,000 students stayed home.

In Dallas, meanwhile, more than 2,000 high school students and supporters marched on school district headquarters Tuesday in a day-long protest of teacher layoffs. Three students were arrested when a police officer was hit in the head by a bottle, Dallas police spokesman Ed Spencer said.

"If we're out of school, we're not getting an education. If we're in school, we're not getting an education either," Jenni Sandlin, 16, who skipped classes to attend the demonstration.

But a strike was averted in Seattle when teachers voted overwhelmingly Tuesday to accept a contract offer one day before classes were to open in the state's largest school district.

The district's 2,800 instructors agreed to a 3.65 percent raise that could increase to 5 percent with incentive payment. The average teacher salary last year was $32,000.

Wages and benefits were the main issues in many strikes.

About 8,100 students showed up for class in Pawtucket, R.I., but were dismissed after two hours when teachers rejected what the School Committee said was its final offer. The committee said it and the union were $12 million apart on a three-year pact.

Saddam refuses to allow major opposition parties

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — After promising to end one-party rule in Iraq, Saddam Hussein has released a law that bars his main opponents — Shiite Muslims and Kurds — from forming political parties.

The law, which technically ends 23 years of one-party rule and was adopted with much fanfare by the National Assembly on July 4, was amended last month to include bans on parties that pose any real challenge to Saddam's Arab Baath Socialist Party.

The text of the law, as released by Iraqi News Agency on Tuesday, was signed by Saddam as chairman of the ruling Revolutionary Command Council, but bore no date. The agency, monitored in Nicosia, said the law would take effect when published in the Official Gazette, but didn't say when that would occur.

After failed uprisings by Shiites in southern Iraq and Kurds in the north following his defeat in the Gulf War, Saddam promised political reforms. But no real freedoms have materialized.

The Kurds agreed to a ceasefire after extracting promises that Saddam would grant the 3.5 million-member ethnic minority an autonomous homeland. But talks between the government and the Kurds have broken down over guarantees the government is unwilling to make.

In the south, Saddam's forces ruthlessly crushed the Shiites, who make up 55 percent of the 17 million population but have few rights under a government dominated by Sunni Muslims like Saddam.

The new law includes articles banning the formation of a party "based on atheism, religion, racism or ethnicity."

It also bars creation of "any form of a political militia or any other paramilitary force," and prohibits possession of "firearms, explosives or military equipment of any kind."

These conditions rule out legalizing the Kurdish and Shiite factions opposed to Saddam's regime and prevent formation of new parties among these ethnic groups.

The new law also states that no political party, other than the Baath, will be allowed into the "armed forces, the police or any other security agency."

'Cheerleader hitman' trial results in guilty verdict

HOUSTON (AP) — A jury Tuesday convicted a woman of trying to hire a hitman to kill the mother of her daughter's cheerleading rival to further her own daughter's cheerleading career.

Wanda Holloway, 37, of Channelview, could face up to life in prison.

Holloway was convicted of trying to hire someone to kill Verna Heath. In closing arguments earlier Tuesday, prosecutors said Holloway believed Heath's daughter, Amber, would be so distressed she would drop out of competition.

The defense had attacked the credibility of the state's star witness.

Holloway burst into tears after she was convicted on the solicitation of murder charge. Relatives and friends surrounded her, yelling at members of the media to stay away.

Holloway also faced an attempted aggravated kidnapping charge, but no verdict on that charge was announced. Attorneys on both sides said they couldn't explain the circumstances of the jury's decision because of a judge's gag order.

Earlier Tuesday, Prosecutor Casey O'Brien replayed several segments of tapes of conversations secretly recorded for police by Holloway's former brother-in-law, Terry Harper, the state's star witness.

"You listen to that tape. You don't hear fear in her voice. You hear hate. She's consumed with hate," O'Brien said.

On the tape, Harper asked Holloway: "If you don't want to do it, I'll understand."

"It's not that I don't want to do it. I just have to get the money," Holloway replied.

O'Brien said Holloway's contention that she was afraid of Harper or the hitman was ludicrous. The prosecutor said she was so intent on getting Harper to find a hitman she obtained such details about Heath as the make of her car and license-plate numbers.

But defense attorney Stan Schneider told jurors the state did not prove its case against Holloway.

"Terry Harper is unbelievable. He's a liar," Schneider said, adding that none of the other witnesses corroborated Harper's testimony.

"Without Terry Harper, Wanda Holloway is innocent. They can't substantiate Terry Harper," Schneider said.

Defense attorneys said Holloway was framed by her ex-husband, Tony Harper, who is Terry Harper's brother. Terry Harper's estranged wife, Marla Harper, testified that he hoped to get back into the family's good graces by helping Tony win custody of his children from Holloway. The two divorced in 1980.

Marla Harper said she heard her husband talking to his brother about the scheme in a New Year's Eve telephone conversation. She said Terry Harper bragged that he would become rich and famous from the deal. Tony Harper testified that he and his brother have been approached by at least 20 filmmakers about selling the rights to the story.

Terry Harper has been married seven times, held 15 jobs during the past three years and has a string of minor convictions.

Tony Harper testified that he never wanted full custody of his children, but sought a modification of the custody agreement because he wanted the children to get counseling Holloway was reluctant to provide.

Nation's first public school to be run jointly with private company opens

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — The nation's first public school run jointly with a private company opened for business Tuesday. Its principal says new teaching methods there could "revolutionize education in America."

South Pointe Elementary's 550 pupils will get no grades and the classrooms have computers instead of desks.

The school, located in a low-income neighborhood, will test whether the techniques can drastically improve education in the United States.

Dade County has teamed up with Education Alternatives, Inc., a private Minneapolis-based company, to run the school.

The EAI system stresses individual instruction, parental participation and getting the children involved in their own education. Teachers are guides instead of lecturers.

"We're taking the teacher off center stage and putting the child on center stage," said Principal Patricia Parham. "We feel like what we're going to do is going to revolutionize education in America."

EAI Chairman John Golle said schools in Egan, Minn., and Pleasant Valley, Ariz., have been using his company's teaching methods for several years. EAI claims pupils at those schools have advanced 1 1/2 grade levels per year.

But they're suburban private schools. South Pointe is a public school in an area where about 95 percent of the families qualify for public assistance.

The children, ages 3 to 12, won't be graded on how they meet universal standards. Instead they'll be judged on how well they meet their own personal goals.

And for when they succeed, there are telephones in the classrooms so they can call their parents and tell them about it.

The school's 35 teachers are aided by 16 student teachers from the University of Miami. The pupil-teacher ratio is about 12-to-1.

Children, parents and teachers spoke enthusiastically about the program during the first day of school.

"Everything here is different," said fourth-grader Linda Danielyus, 10.

"The school's like new and stuff," said classmate Travis Hernandez, 10. "The teachers don't scream at you."

Maria Pintado, 33, who has a 5-year-old daughter enrolled at South Pointe, said her daughter would receive a better education at South Pointe than she would at a private school.

"It's great. I'm happy for the job they're doing," Pintado said.

Teacher Michael Bell said, "We were told by many we would never get the parents in because it's an economically deprived community, but we haven't had any trouble so far."

South Pointe, on the southern tip of Miami Beach, was built with county funds, but will get no more public funding. EAI hopes to raise $2.4 million in private donations over five years to pay for the faculty and materials.

The WEAR-'EM-DOWN OFFENSE

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Reader found statements unfair, insulting, and elitist

Dear Editor,

I read with interest Stephen Alpert's letter from September 3, regarding the arrests of Rick Mirer and Demetrius Dubose this past weekend. I agree with Mr. Alpert's decision that the South Bend Police Force's seemingly hypocritical action is cause for concern to all of us as Notre Dame students, because as members of the South Bend Community we deserve and should expect fair and equal treatment.

I take offense, however, at

Mr. Alpert's suggestion that "just because the police are not themselves intelligent enough to be admitted to the University of Notre Dame....they vent their jealousies against those who are." I find this statement unfair, insulting, and disturbingly elitist. Insults will not win sympathy from the police. If we expect them to respect our lifestyle, we should respect theirs.

Preliminary directory incomplete

Have you been trying to call me or my roommates? Well, probably not. But even if you were, you wouldn't be able to. That's because we're not in the preliminary phone book—although we should be.

Even with all of the benefits of living off-campus, it is not perfect. Recent columnists have documented the good things about the land O-C, but it does have its drawbacks. The worst of these is that it's hard for people to get in touch with you—and the Registrar's office isn't helping much.

My roommates and I have known our address since March and our phone number since May. In early August, I remembered what a hassle it used to be to call friends who lived off-campus because their numbers weren't in the preliminary phone directory. Since I had our information, I figured I could call up the University and tell them, and magically it would appear in the preliminary phone book.

Sounds easy, huh? It was—NOT.

First, I called the Telecommunications Office. They directed me to the Registrar. When I called the Registrar, they had no clue of what to do, so they directed me to Student Residences. Of course, I live off-campus, so Student Residences directed me back to the Registrar, but gave me the name of the woman who handles phone numbers. So I called her.

John O'Brien
Guest columnist

"Can I give you the phone number of me and my roommates?" I asked.

"No, you'll have to wait until you enroll to do that," she replied.

"But I know the information now and I would like it in the preliminary directory," I said.

"What's the preliminary directory?" she replied. At that point I should've given up. But I didn't, and I explained the concept to her.

"Oh, if you fill out the forms when you enroll, it will be in there," she assured me. Finally I had gotten through, or at least I thought so.

When I opened up the directory last week, was mine or any of my roommates' information in there? Not. So, because the Registrar's office, which doesn't seem to even be aware that there is something called a preliminary phone directory, would not take my information this summer, that information won't be known until the real phone book comes out—probably around May.

I am not alone. Everyone who lives off-campus is in the same boat. Not only don't we get any of our mail (that's another column in itself) but no one has our phone numbers. Of course, they could call 411, but then they have to guess who's name the phone bill is under. It's probably easier to send a letter.

So until the Registrar's office decides to start taking the information from off-campus students when it is available, all of us off-campus residents will just have to sit around in our living rooms, drinking keg beer after parietals, and wearing sweaters because the air-conditioning is set at 32 degrees.

And I suppose the people who we really want to talk to will have our numbers, but for the most part the phone will be silent. And that might have its advantages. But, say, someone actually wants to call us or send us something (like football ticket applications), they'll just have to wait until May. That's probably about when the official directory will come out.

John O'Brien is a senior American Studies major and Accent editor of The Observer.

Alumnus Matt Bannon feels the need for speed

By Palge Smoron
Assistant Accent Editor

Last year, most of us had our eyes glued to the evening news, eager to hear about the latest developments in Operation Desert Storm.

Alumnus Matt Bannon had a much better view of Iraq.

Bannon, a member of Notre Dame's class of 1986, reported for training as a U.S. Navy pilot soon after graduation.

Four weeks into his first assignment, he was flying F-14 combat missions over Iraq.

"We were flying some of the most advanced fighters in the world," says Bannon.

'Our men are doing this day and night, around the clock, always at danger to themselves. Just because you don't read about it all the time doesn't mean it's not dangerous'

Bannon is assigned to the Naval Air Station Oceana based Fighter Squadron 33, which was deployed on board USS America during Operation Desert Storm. He flew more than forty sorties from the America, which operated in both the Red Sea and the Arabian Gulf.

"Flying off a carrier is one of the hardest things I've ever done in my life, but I love it. I want to fly Navy fighters as long as they'll let me," said Bannon.

As far back as he can remember, Bannon wanted to be a pilot. "When I was a kid, I used to enjoy old World War II movies with the Hellcats and Bearcats, but the F-14 was my dream."

He took steps toward realizing that dream when he entered Notre Dame on a ROTC scholarship. As a third generation Notre Dame student, he developed the values that have stayed with him through his years in the Navy.

"There's nothing more important [than values]," said Bannon. "Without values you can't be a good leader of men, and the values I got from Notre Dame prepared me for my job in the Navy."

Bannon spent his summer vacations as a midshipman learning about the various options available upon graduation: submarines, surface ships, naval air, and Marines.

But he says that the naval ROTC summer indoctrination is what reinforced his plans to become a pilot. "The pilots and the air crews were more laid back, so I knew that's what I wanted," said Bannon.

He feels that Navy pilots operate under conditions that are more difficult than those encountered by pilots in other services. Landing a plane on a carrier when the weather deteriorates, for instance, is "...a whole new situation. There's only one place you can go back to — your carrier. It's not like an Air Force pilot who can head for another airfield."

Operating off a flattop is never dull, according to Bannon. "The catapult shots are always exciting. It knocks the wind out of you if you don't prepare for it properly."

Bannon concedes that he is putting his life on the line every day, in both war and peace. "Our men are doing this day and night, around the world, around the clock, always at danger to themselves. Just because you don't read about it all the time doesn't mean it's not dangerous," he says, but adds that because of the pilots' professionalism and pride, it occurs without incident.

He is impressed with the training and discipline of Navy pilots, as well as with the advanced technology of the F-14 Tomcats. With these combined assets, Bannon felt that the fighter planes from the Navy's carriers were up against a "paper tiger" in Iraq.

"...Everytime we went up against Iraqi planes, they turned and fled," he reported. "...The unrelenting air strikes ensured the allied ground forces a swift victory in the liberation of Kuwait."

Bannon's line of work is dangerous and challenging. But he also admits that a lot of the allure of being a Navy pilot is due to the glamour.

"Being cool is important, isn't it?"

Navy pilot Matt Bannon, a third generation graduate of Notre Dame, flew more than 40 sorties in Operation Desert Storm.

You've heard about Vagon poetry being some of the worst poetry in the known universe? Well, that's nothing compared to Juggler poetry.
During a public reading of last year's Juggler, 25 students died of internal hemorrhaging, and the chairman of the IUSB Poetry department survived only by gnawing his own leg off. In fact, last year's Juggler staff was killed when,
in an attempt to end the madness, their intestines leaped up into their brains and throttled the poor souls to death...
ENJOY THE WEEKEND!

Miami optimistic despite loss to Buffalo

MIAMI (AP) — The prospect of better days eased the sting of the Miami Dolphins' season-opening loss to Buffalo.

In a game Miami had been pointing toward since the start of training camp, the Bills rallied with four second-half touchdowns Sunday to win, 35-31.

"A tough one to lose," Coach Don Shula said Monday.

But there was plenty of consolation for the Dolphins: Their offense was rejuvenated, and they can look forward to a soft schedule for the next month and the return of three starters this week.

"There were a lot of good things that happened up there that we have to build on," Shula said.

Most of the good things happened when Miami had the ball. An offense that struggled throughout the preseason showed good balance between the run and pass and put together four scoring drives of at least 60 yards.

Bradley birdies way to LPGA title in Springfield

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — During rain delays at the LPGA Rail Charity Classic, Pat Bradley sat alone playing the course in her mind — getting birdies on every hole.

Then she put her imagination to work Tuesday, winning her 28th tournament and setting a 54-hole LPGA record.

"It was a very productive rain delay for me — very productive," she said.

Rockets sign draft pick early

HOUSTON (AP) — Forward John Turner, the 20th pick in the NBA draft, signed a three-year contract Tuesday with the Rockets that will pay him a reported $800,000 a year.

"This is the earliest signing of a Rockets first round draft pick since Hakeem Olajuwon seven years ago," Rockets general manager Steve Patterson said.

Olajuwon signed with the Rockets Aug. 8, 1984.

Turner was an NAIA All-American at Phillips University last season, where he led the Sooner Athletic Conference in scoring with 23.9 points and 13.7 rebounds per game.

Rockets coach Don Chaney plans to work Turner at both small and power forward when training camp begins.

"I don't think it will be difficult," Turner said. "Some people play the four position and also play outside. I don't think it will be a big change."

Turner started his college career at Georgetown but left for Phillips after running afoul with coach John Thompson's rules. Going to Phillips was a good move, Turner said. It helped reach his goal of playing in the pros.

"When I was at Georgetown this was one of my goals and when I left it was still a goal, I never gave up," Turner said. "You're going to have ups and downs in life. Hard work is also the answer."

The Rockets released Adrian Caldwell, Kennard Winchester and Dave Feitl to come under the NBA's $12.5 million salary cap to make room for Turner on the roster.

"Everybody offensively played a pretty good game," Shula said.

Defense was another matter. The Bills finished with 33 first downs and a team record 583 yards.

"We caved in defensively in the second half," Shula said.

A lot of teams figure to have trouble stopping the defending AFC champions, and the Dolphins won't have to deal with them again until Monday night, Nov. 18.

Miami's immediate concern is the home opener Sunday against Indianapolis. Then come games at Detroit and at home against Green Bay. The three upcoming opponents lost on opening day by a combined score of 81-10.

The Dolphins play five games before they meet another team that was over .500 last year — Kansas City, on Oct. 13. So there's still an outside chance of matching last year's 8-1 start, which propelled Miami to its first playoff berth since 1985.

Making it easier to capitalize

Stephenson in the 1981 Mary Kay Classic. Bradley's 28th victory on the LPGA tour left her just two short of the 30 needed to automatically enter the Hall of Fame.

Danielle Ammaccapane moved into second with a birdie on the 18th, finishing six strokes behind Bradley with a 13-under 203.

Laura Davies played a lackluster final round, dropping from a tie with Bradley to seven strokes back. She finished with a 12-under 204.

Meg Mallon also finished seven strokes back, bogeying her final hole to finish at 5-under for the final round and 12-under for the tournament.

Rain and lightning forced a two-hour delay Monday, giving Bradley plenty of time to visualize breezing through the course. When play resumed, she knocked in three straight birdies to open a 4-stroke lead.

Then new flashes of lightning forced officials to postpone the finish until Tuesday, when she started with two more birdies and then played par the rest of the way. Bradley missed going 20-under on the 18th hole when her putt of about 12 feet died a foot from the cup.

"It was the first time that I can tell you I really let down on the schedule will be the return of tackle Richmond Webb, tight end Ferrell Edmunds and cornerback J.B. Brown, all starters in 1990.

Edmunds and Brown joined the team late last week after ending summer-long salary squabbles, and they did not make the trip to Buffalo. Webb missed the game with a knee injury but likely will return to team drills this week, Shula said.

Four veterans remain unsigned as contract disputes and injuries continue to burden the Dolphins. But there's been a silver lining, Shula said.

"The benefits were that some (new) people got an opportunity, and some came through for us," he said.

Most visible was running back Mark Higgs, who rushed for 146 yards in 30 carries as a fill-in for the injured Sammie Smith. The 5-foot-7, 195-pound Higgs had carried a total of 59 times in his three previous NFL seasons.

since this tournament started," she said. "Yes, 20-under would have been great, but I'm very, very pleased with the 19 and I'm more than ecstatic with the 28th win."

Bradley, 40, is the LPGA's all-time leader in earnings and also leads the tour for this season. She's in a three-way battle with Beth Daniel and Mallon, the tour's only three-time winner this season, for player-of-the-year honors.

Davies led by five shots after the first round, thanks to a record-tying 10-under 62. But she was only 2-under for the next two rounds combined.

In the final round, the hard-driving Briton squandered a chance for eagle and then birdie by three-putting the third hole, then parred the 485-yard, par-5 sixth hole — which gave up three eagles that day.

Ammaccapane, though, played 6-under in the final round. She used four birdies and an eagle to climb out of the pack and ahead of Davies. She started out flat when play resumed Tuesday but finished with a birdie.

"I was a bit nervous this morning. I was on a roll yesterday and I wanted to keep going," she said. "It's tough sometimes, coming back."

Irish punter Sexton arrested

■Notre Dame, IN (AP) — Notre Dame punter James Sexton, 22, was cited Aug. 26 for allegedly shoplifting at Martin's Supermarket, 18081 Indiana 23, according to the St. Joseph County Police Department. The Morrissey Hall resident was confronted at 9:45 p.m. by off-duty county police officer Chief Frank Canarecci after he noticed Sexton place five packs of Action Packed football cards in his shorts pocket, the police report said. Sexton told the officer he forgot to pay for the cards, but later said that he didn't want his girlfriend to know he was buying them. He was questioned and released. The case report has been forwarded to the St. Joseph County Prosecutor.

Umpire wants confrontation reviewed

■PITTSBURGH — National League umpire Eric Gregg said he will send a videotape of Pirates outfielder Bobby Bonilla's angry confrontation with him to the league offices for review.

"He embarrassed himself and his team," Gregg said.

Bonilla became enraged when he was called out on strikes in the eighth inning of the Pirates' 9-8 victory in San Francisco on Monday. Bonilla had been angered earlier by a strike call before he flied out in the sixth inning.

Bonilla erupted after striking out in the eighth, exchanging words with Gregg before being ejected. He then screamed a vulgarity at Gregg and had to be restrained by teammate Barry Bonds and manager Jim Leyland.

"I thought he was going to break my hand," Bonds said. "I grabbed his shirt and was saying, 'Be cool, be cool.'"

Gregg said Bonilla didn't bump him, but Bonilla definitely came in contact with him.

During the exchange, Pirates players said Gregg further angered Bonilla by saying: "You used to be a nice guy. But now all you guys make all that money. You think you can do anything."

Bonilla tried to smooth over the incident afterwards, saying "it's no big deal, Eric and I are fine."

Hockey star Kevin Stevens visits coach

■PITTSBURGH — Penguins forward Kevin Stevens came back to town and quickly went to visit seriously ill coach Bob Johnson.

Apparently, Johnson was as eager to see Stevens as the still-unsigned scoring star was to see him.

Stevens said that shortly after he entered Johnson's room Monday at Mercy Hospital, the coach handed him a note saying, "Get on a plane and go to Hamilton."

Johnson apparently realized how much Team USA could have used Stevens in its 6-3 Canada Cup loss to Canada on Sunday. Stevens wanted to play in the tournament, but was unable to arrange adequate insurance while negotiating a new contract.

Johnson was coaching Team USA before requiring emergency surgery to remove a brain tumor last Friday. He remained in critical but stable condition Tuesday but is no longer in the intensive care unit, team officials said.

Johnson has regained limited movement on his left side, which was temporarily paralyzed after the surgery to remove one of the two tumors on Johnson's brain.

Braves end skid in Montreal

Rangers streak to 15 with victory over Blue Jays

MONTREAL (AP) — For the Braves, losing three in a row was enough.

"Every team hits a flat period at some point in the year, it's normal and it's not so bad as long as you keep it to a couple of games," said Dave Justice after leading Atlanta to a 4-1 win over the Expos on Tuesday night.

Justice had a pair of hits and drove in three runs to lead Atlanta, which began the night tied with Los Angeles for first in the NL West.

"We didn't have the intensity we should have the last couple of nights, but I don't agree that it's because we've hit September," Justice said. "Even though we're tied for first place, I don't consider it a pennant race. It's not a race until the last week of September."

"The thing we have to worry about is getting back to doing the things we have to do. Tonight we did. We executed and we got some timely hitting, defense and real good pitching."

The pitching came mainly from starter John Smoltz, who has turned his season around in the second half. Smoltz (11-13) pitched 6 2-3 innings of six-hit ball before needing relief help.

Two-out walks to Rafael Belliard and Pendleton and an error by shortstop Bret Barberie on Gant's grounder loaded the bases for the Braves in the third before Justice singled to drive in two more runs.

Justice singled home Belliard for Atlanta's final run in the fifth, before Delino DeShields singled to drive in Barberie and chase Smoltz in the seventh.

Rangers 5, Yankees 1

ARLINGTON, Texas — Texas won its 15th consecutive home game over the Yankees as Jose Guzman pitched a five-hitter Tuesday night and led the Rangers to a 5-1 victory.

The Yankees have not won at Texas since May 4, 1989. The AL record for consecutive home victories over one team is 22, set by the Boston Red Sox against the Philadelphia Athletics in 1945 and 1946.

Guzman (10-5) struck out six and walked three in his third complete game this season.

Jeff Johnson (5-9) gave up four runs and nine hits in a 5 2-3 innings as the Yankees lost for the third time in four games.

Texas, which won its third straight, went ahead in the first on a run-scoring single by Mike Stanley. Jose Hernandez hit an RBI double in the fourth, but the Yankees pulled to 2-1 in the fifth when Guzman threw a run-scoring wild pitch with Matt Nokes on third.

Ruben Sierra hit his 20th home run in the fifth and Brian Downing made it 4-1 in the sixth with a run-scoring double.

Ivan Rodriguez hit his second career home run in the eighth.

Angels 2, Red Sox 0

BOSTON — Mark Langston beat Boston for the third time this season and Dave Parker drove in the go-ahead run with his 2,700th career hit as the Angels beat the Red Sox 2-0 Tuesday night.

Langston (16-7) allowed four hits in 6 1-3 innings, struck out three and walked two. Mark Eichhorn escaped a one-out jam with runners on second and third in the seventh and pitched a perfect eighth before Bryan Harvey finished for his 35th save in 38 chances.

Mike Gardiner (6-7), who had won his three previous starts, allowed six hits in 5 1-3 innings, struck out seven and walked two.

Orioles 8, Blue Jays 4

TORONTO (AP) — Dwight Evans hit a three-run homer and had his first four-hit game this season, and Glenn Davis also homered and had three hits.

Ben McDonald (6-8), winless in five starts since Aug. 2, allowed three runs and five hits in six innings, struck out four and walked none. Mike Flanagan finished with one-run, two-hit relief for his third save.

David Wells (13-10) gave up four runs and nine hits in 5 1-3 innings.

Baltimore, which ended a three-game losing streak, won for only the second time in eight games.

Royals 8, White Sox 0

CHICAGO — Danny Tartabull hit a pair of two-run homers for the sixth multiple-home run game of his career and Kevin Appier (11-9) pitched a five-hitter and struck out nine.

Bo Jackson, in his second game of his comeback, went 0-for-4, making him hitless in seven at-bats. He struck out twice and grounded out twice. The loss ended a three-game winning streak for the White Sox, who are 6-17 since Aug. 11.

Jack McDowell (15-9) allowed six runs and eight hits in 5 1-3 innings and struck out eight.

Brewers 5, Athletics 3

MILWAUKEE — Robin Yount hit a three-run homer in the ninth, capping the Brewers' comeback from a 3-0 deficit.

Jim Gantner hit his first home run in four years in the seventh and B.J. Surhoff hit his fifth home run in the eighth.

Milwaukee then rallied in the ninth off Dennis Eckersley (3-3), who blew his seventh save opportunity in 43 chances. Bill Spiers walked, Willie Randolph singled and Darryl Hamilton hit into a fielder's choice. Yount followed with his 10th home run, his first since May 26.

Edwin Nunez (2-1) pitched a perfect ninth, struck out three and walked two. Mark Eichhorn escaped a one-out jam with runners on second and third in the seventh and pitched a perfect eighth before Bryan Harvey finished for his 35th save in 38 chances.

Mike Gardiner (6-7), who had won his three previous starts, allowed six hits in 5 1-3 innings, struck out seven and walked two.

Mets 6, Astros 1

NEW YORK (AP) — Howard Johnson, making his first out-field start since 1986, drove in two runs to help the Mets to a 6-1 victory over the Astros on Tuesday night.

Johnson doubled home a run in the Mets' three-run first and singled in another in a three-run fifth that helped Anthony Young (1-1) to his first major league win.

Young allowed seven hits over the first seven innings, walking none and striking out six. Tim Burke pitched two scoreless innings in relief for New York.

Johnson had appeared in 14 major league games as an out-fielder and was shifted to right partly because he leads NL third basemen in errors with 29.

Houston starter Mark Portugal (10-7) was the loser.

Reds 8, Phillies 5

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Jose Rijo won his fourth straight start, and Chris Sabo hit a two-run homer as the Reds ended their four-game losing streak by defeating the Phillies 8-5.

Rijo allowed nine hits, struck out four and walked one in seven innings to improve his record to 12-4. He has won 11 of his last 13 decisions covering 17 starts. Rob Dibble pitched two scoreless innings to gain his 28th save in 30 opportunities.

Sabo's 22nd homer gave Cincinnati a 6-3 lead in the fifth and the Reds' eventual winning run.

The loser was Cliff Brantley (0-1), who was making his major league debut for Philadelphia.

Irish secondary ready to surprise with old and new faces

Senior cornerback Rod Smith preserved a win at Tennessee last season with this last minute interception. Smith is expected to be a threat in the backfield again this year.

Davis, Smith to lead backfield with experience

By DAVE MCMAHON
Associate Sports Editor

For the Notre Dame secondary, the 1990 football season was anything but exceptional. With two-time All-America cornerback Todd Lyght now with the Los Angeles Rams, few people believe the 1991 version of the defensive backfield will hardly be a force to be reckoned with. The returning six sophomores and two seniors have different plans, however.

Under the direction of first-year coach Ron Cooper, the secondary looks to improve upon last season's spotty play, which included giving up an all-time Irish high of 267.1 yards per game. With at least two freshmen playing in the secondary at a given time last year, the experience gained should bolster Irish hopes of improving upon last year's effort.

"We're young in terms of putting guys out there who've played a lot of minutes," said Cooper, who joined the Irish staff in mid-February. "But we had great success throughout the spring and I feel really good about the talent we have."

Leading the Irish corps will be fifth-year senior safety Greg Davis (6-0, 204 lbs.), who led the squad in tackles (58) last season. Ranked 11th nationally among safeties in the preseason by The Sporting News, Davis sees a better season ahead for the entire secondary.

"We were nervous as a unit at the beginning of last year," said Davis. "But we're more relaxed right now because all of us have been there."

Greg Davis

Davis will be flanked by free safety Jeff Burris (6-0, 194), who gets the first start of his career after seeing action in eleven games during last year's freshman campaign. Burris will also see time as punt and kick-off returner.

Senior Rod Smith (6-0, 186), who started the final four games of the 1990 season, can play either corner slot, but will start at field cornerback.

Sophomore Tom Carter (5-11, 186), who moved from free safety during the spring, gets the nod over classmate Greg Lane at the other corner spot.

"Cornerback is more my natural position, so I was glad to get back there during the spring," said Carter, who attended the same high school as former Irish safety Pat Terrell.

That's not to say that those positions will be exclusively held, especially with such closely matched talent.

"Right now, we have seven-out-of-eight players who could go in at any time. Hopefully by Friday it'll be eight-out-of-eight," said Cooper.

Carter believes the competition among the sophomores makes a starting spot even more important.

"We all have to go all out on every play in practice, because we know that we all play at the same level and are closely matched," said Carter.

As is the case when any inexperienced team takes the field, the seniors will have a sizable burden on the shoulders. Cooper believes Davis and Smith will have no problem handling their leadership duties in the backfield.

"They've shown the other guys what it takes to get the job done. Those guys are ready to get on with it and play right now," said Cooper, the defensive coordinator and linebackers coach at UNLV in 1990.

While sophomores dominate the defensive backfield, Davis expects a more consistent effort than what they produced last year.

"We basically all played together at one time or another last season, so we know what to expect," said Davis. "We're communicating a lot more with each other, so that should eliminate some of the problems that we had at times last year."

Notre Dame will face many talented quarterbacks throughout the season, but the Irish are concerned with only one at the moment—Indiana's Trent Green. The secondary is determined to do their part in shutting down a quick Hoosier offense, powered by Green and potential All-America tailback Vaughn Dunbar.

"We feel that the way we play as a unit dictates the way the team will play, so we should be able to focus on that and get our jobs done," said Davis.

Seles advances to semifinals in Open

NEW YORK (AP) — Monica Seles, still promising to set the tennis world abuzz with her sexy new garb, put off the fashion show to concentrate on reaching the U.S. Open semifinals Tuesday for the first time in her career.

She wore the same old outfit and had the same old strokes.

The victim this time was Gigi Fernandez, only 27 but still a full decade older than Seles, who barely broke a sweat in winning 6-1, 6-2 in 53 minutes of tedious tennis.

Seles, who won the Australian Open this year and her second straight French Open, is trying to add the U.S. Open to her Grand Slam achievements.

Fernandez didn't act much like a serious threat on the court as she sprayed 36 unforced errors in her first match against Seles, who made only 10 errors.

Seles started as if she were out to break the record for fastest match of the tournament, winning the first four games in 12 minutes while not dropping a point on serve against a player appearing in her first Grand Slam quarterfinal.

"I don't think that I was so much nervous or impressed by the event as much as by her game," Fernandez said. "She came out really strong and she was jumping all over my serve and serving really well.

"She is always fighting and thinking. She is a very smart player, very tenacious, and keeps coming at you. If you look at her, you don't think she is a tennis player. She is not built like a tennis player, but her mind just keeps her in there."

"I think all the great players have that," Seles said. "I mean, Chris, Martina, also Jimmy Connors, Mac, everybody. I think you have to have that. I mean you can't be a dead person on the court."

A brief lapse in the fifth game, and a sudden spate of alert, aggressive net play by Fernandez, led to a break of Seles' service at 15-40.

Fernandez still couldn't cope with Seles' deep returns of service, and Seles came back to close out the set at love with a forehand crosscourt that Fernandez couldn't reach.

Fernandez finally held to start the second set, then held again after five deuces in the third game to make it 2-1. Seles ran into a little resistance with three break points in the fourth game, but pulled out the game and cruised through the next three games while dropping only four points.

Serving for the match, Seles again faced a break point but was saved by still another Fernandez mistake, an easy backhand return into the net. Fernandez saved two match points but succumbed on the third with a backhand that caught the net cord and bounced back.

Meanwhile, the tournament was still buzzing over the remarkable achievement of Jimmy Connors.

Energized by the National Tennis Center crowd and a couple of close calls that went against him, Connors summoned strength from the depths of his 39-year-old body Monday to reach the quarterfinals with a victory against Aaron Krickstein that defied logic.

The monumental Connors-Krickstein match overshadowed the other action. Earlier, the women's quarterfinal bracket was completed with four-time champion Martina Navratilova leading the advance. The 34-year-old reached the quarters for the 13th time in 15 years and settled a year-old score with a 7-6 (7-5), 1-6, 6-2 victory over 10th seeded Manuela Maleeva-Fragniere, who eliminated her from this event a year ago.

"This was a pretty big win for me at this stage because I haven't beaten her for a while," Navratilova, seeded No. 6, said. "I just wanted to do well in this tournament. I got through that one so now I am one round further than I was last year. Now I am where I wanted to be, which was winning the next match and waiting for the next one."
