THE INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER SERVING NOTRE DAME AND SAINT MARY'S

SMC fall festival is discussed by SAB

By Kelly Jennings
News Writer

The traditional Fall Fest celebration, and a possible renovation of the current Saint Mary's clubhouse, were among the topics addressed at Wednesday night's Saint Mary's Student Activities Board meeting.

The week-long Fall Fest will be held from October 28 - November 1, coinciding with both Halloween and the Notre Dame Homecoming festivities. Some events scheduled for the week include an International day, a costume contest, giveaways, a story teller, pumpkin carving, an evening of music, hayrides, and a bonfire; and a float sponsored by the Holy Cross Sisters to be part of Notre Dame's Sesquicentennial celebration.

Work has also started on turning the clubhouse into a coffee shop, where students could gather either during special events or for studying. According to Meg McGowan, Vice President of Student Affairs, the new coffee house could open by late October or early November. The idea is to initially have the new coffee house open perhaps two nights a week, with later expansion possible.

Other upcoming events on campus include Club Tuesday on October 1, featuring hypnotist Jon Lautrec; and a month long clothing drive to benefit the local YWCA women's shelter, beginning October 7.

Dr. Seuss, rhyme master, dies

SAN DIEGO — Theodor Seuss Geisel, the master of rhyme and doodle who as Dr. Seuss wrote such whimsical children's classics as "The Cat in the Hat" and "How the Grinch Stole Christmas," has died. He was 87.

Geisel died Tuesday night at his home in La Jolla, and his family was at his bedside, said his 33-year-old stepdaughter, Lea Dimond. He had been ill for several months, she said.

He wrote and illustrated 47 books, selling more than 100 million copies in 18 languages. He was awarded a 1984 Pulitzer Prize for his contribution to children's literature.

"If you asked people today to name one children's author, I'd venture it would probably be Dr. Seuss," said Julie Cummins, the New York Public Library's coordinator of children's services.

His works seemed like journeys into nonsense, magical worlds of truffle trees, green eggs and ham, ziffs and zuffs and nerkles and nerds, where top-hatted cats run rampant through youngsters' homes while goldfish scold.

But they often included subtle messages on issues important to him, from internationalism to environmentalism.

When asked two weeks ago whether he had any final message, a valedictory Geisel told the San Diego Tribune: "Whenever things go a bit sour in a job I'm doing, I always tell myself: 'You can do better than this.' The best slogan I can think of to leave with the U.S.A. would be: 'We can do and we've got to do better than this.'"

In his 1986 book, "You're Only Old Once," Geisel came to grips with his own mortality. He subtitled the work "A Book for Obsolete Children," and described it as a book for adults in a children's format.

An immediate best-seller, it took a satirical look at the medical profession through the eyes of an old man who has to be poked, prodded and examined during a stay in the Golden Years Clinic. He is confronted by an array of medical gadgetry capped by a mechanized pill drill and a patient assembly line.

Geisel spoke for many a frustrated patient when he wrote: "When at last we are sure you've been properly pilled, then a few paper forms must be properly filled so that you and your heirs may be properly billed."

In his 1984 best-seller, "The Butter Battle Book," Geisel offered a parable for the atomic age. It chronicled the escalating arms race between the Yooks, who eat their bread butter side down, and the Zooks, who do just the opposite.

It ends with the two sides at the Yook-Zook border, each armed with the ultimate weapon — a Big-Boy Boomerang bomb.

A boy asks his grandpa, "Who's going to drop it. Will you? Will he?"

"Be patient," grandpa says. "We'll see. We will see."

Geisel was childless himself — after his first wife's death in 1967, he married Audrey Stone Diamond, a mother of two — but had an unrivaled gift for delighting children.

"You make 'em, I amuse 'em," he said.

Born March 2, 1904, in Springfield, Mass., son of a brewer who ran a zoo for a time during Prohibition, Geisel graduated in 1925 from Dartmouth, where he drew cartoons for the humor magazine, Jack-O-Lantern.

During a year studying literature at Oxford University in England, he met another American literature student, Helen Palmer, who encouraged Geisel's artistic career.

After dropping out of Oxford, Geisel drifted to Paris, where he mingled with Lost Generation writers such as Ernest Hemingway, James Joyce and Gertrude Stein.

He returned to the United States in 1927 to marry Miss Palmer and to pursue his hope of being a novelist. But the Great Depression forced him to put the great American novel on hold, and he went to work writing two-line gags for Judge and Life, both humor magazines at the time.

It was on a spoof of scientific developments that he first used the name that would become his trademark. He added "Dr." to his middle name to sound more scientific.

"I wrote my first children's book because my exclusive contract forbade me from doing virtually anything else in the world," he said. That book was "... And to Think That I Saw It on Mulberry Street," penned on a ship crossing the Atlantic. He said that the words, strung together in the sing-song style that became his trademark, were written to the rhythm of the ship's engine.

"Mulberry Street" was published in 1937, the same year as his first adult novel, "The Seven Lady Godivas." The children's book, rejected by 27 publishers before being accepted by Vanguard Press, became a spectacular success. His novel was a commercial dud.

He wrote three more children's books and switched to Random House publishers before World War II.

On his 80th birthday, the publishing company held a party at the New York Public Library, Cummins said.

"He seemed very alert and spry for his age," she said. "He had a little twinkle in those eyes and you knew it was the genius where all those whimsical characters came from."

Children liked his writing because he treated them as equals, Geisel often said. His illustrations were another matter. His creatures often looked like stuffed animals missing much of their sawdust.

"I've taken the mistakes and refined them a little bit," Geisel said in a 1986 interview with The San Diego Union. "It's all mistakes — controlled mistakes."

"Horton Hatches the Egg," published in 1940, reflected Geisel's impatience with pacifist sentiment in America at a time of international crisis.

Jack Mann, oldest hostage in Lebanon, arrives at his home

LYNEHAM, England — Jack Mann, the 77-year-old Briton who had been the oldest Western hostage in Lebanon, came home to England today after 2 1/2 harrowing years of captivity during which he reportedly was tortured by his kidnappers and saw no one but them.

In New York, U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar, who has been working to arrange a comprehensive deal to free the hostages, expressed hope today that another Western captive could be freed before the end of the week.

But a potential snag to any overall deal emerged today when Israel accused Iran of breaking a promise to provide information on an Israeli soldier missing in Lebanon — a condition that is part of a broad deal to free Western hostages.

The military VC-10 carrying Mann and his wife from Cyprus touched down at 1:10 p.m. (8:10 a.m. EDT) at the Lyneham air base 80 miles west of London. The Royal Air Force saluted Mann, a World War II pilot, and a Spitfire fighter like the ones he flew against Nazi Germany made a victory roll overhead.

Mann was freed by the pro-Iranian Revolutionary Justice Organization on Tuesday, and reunited in Damascus, Syria with his wife, Sunnie.

Mann smiled as he emerged from the plane, and a nurse helped him down the steps. But after a night's rest, turned out in a sports jacket and ascot, he appeared more energetic than he had in his first hours of freedom.

He said nothing to the crowd of well-wishers, but shook hands cordially with the base commander and kissed a woman who had a bouquet for his wife. Sunnie Mann told the crowd: "It's the most wonderful day of my life."

During the stopover in Cyprus, Mann told his wife of his ordeal. CNN showed a tape of their reunion made by Britain's ITN television news, which reported that Mrs. Mann said her husband told her he never saw another human being apart from his captors and did not know which faction was holding him. He also said he was tortured and his medication was withheld, she was quoted as saying, but she gave no details.

Despite the reports of mistreatment, the chief medical officer aboard the flight, Squadron Leader Garth Manning, said Mann was in "remarkably good shape when you consider he has been in a cell for 2 1/2 years."

"He is a very resilient man who obviously has great strength of spirit and is quite remarkably well," Manning said. The crew toasted the Manns with champagne during their flight, he said.

Late Tuesday, at a news conference at the Syrian Foreign Ministry, Mann angrily denounced his captors.

"My voice has gone after 2 1/2 years of chaining, of saying: 'Do this, do that. Don't do that!' or 'Be quiet!' " he whispered, banging his hand on a table to illustrate the orders from his kidnappers.

Perez de Cuellar, speaking to reporters outside the United Nations, said efforts to arrange a swap continued.

"We will continue our effort...and I hope that perhaps one (hostage) will be released before the end of the week," he said. "That is my hope."

Pro-Iranian Muslim kidnappers holding Westerners in Lebanon are demanding Israel release Arab prisoners in exchange for their captives. Shiite Muslim cleric Hussein Musawi, who is involved in the hostage negotiations, said the kidnappers were awaiting a reciprocal action after freeing Mann.

Notre Dame rules are not strict enough

Lots of people have been complaining how strict the rules are here at Notre Dame. "The alcohol policy is so strict," they whine. "Parietals don't promote responsibility," they cry.

John O'Brien
Accent Editor

I think they should quit their whining. To be quite honest, I think the rules should be stricter. That's right—stricter.

Now critics will probably go on and on about how already paternalistic and patronizing this place is, but they don't realize that it is for their own good.

The University is supposed to be patronizing and paternalistic—that's what in loco parentis means. And you thought it meant "We is crazy parents."

Take, for instance, that sex rule. We, as young adults, are cursed with glandular desires that far exceed our moral abilities.

Thankfully, we have people—most of them celibate men—to help tame the desires that the devil is putting into our hands. They have made it against the rules for us to satisfy those desires. They think that will stop us. But I don't think they're working hard enough.

The current rule simply prohibits sex. That's not good enough. When I was in high school, we had a rule prohibiting "public displays of affection." That may seem like a weird rule, but it was even stranger considering I went to an all-male school.

Nonetheless, they enforced it strictly. I once got a detention for petting a dog. One of my friends even got a detention for kissing his mom goodbye, although that was also covered by the school's so-called "Oedipus rule."

There's also schools like Brigham Young University, which prohibit not only the possession of alcohol, but also drinking it; as well as drinking caffeine and smoking.

We need to go even further. Ban that Yo-Cream garbage, for it is the cause of many campuses problems.

First, all of that sugar makes us hyper, which causes us to lose sleep. Thus, we become drowsy during our classes, and that offends our incredibly interesting professors.

Second, men and women are always arguing about who eats more of the stuff, so getting rid of it would promote better relations between the sexes.

Finally, no one will admit it—but I will: Those cones are obviously phallic. This is another example of the sexual demon thrusting itself forcefully into our lives.

Once again, the University could penetrate the core of our sexual desires—desires that permeate all aspects of our existence, even our food. I think we could all use a good penetration now and then.

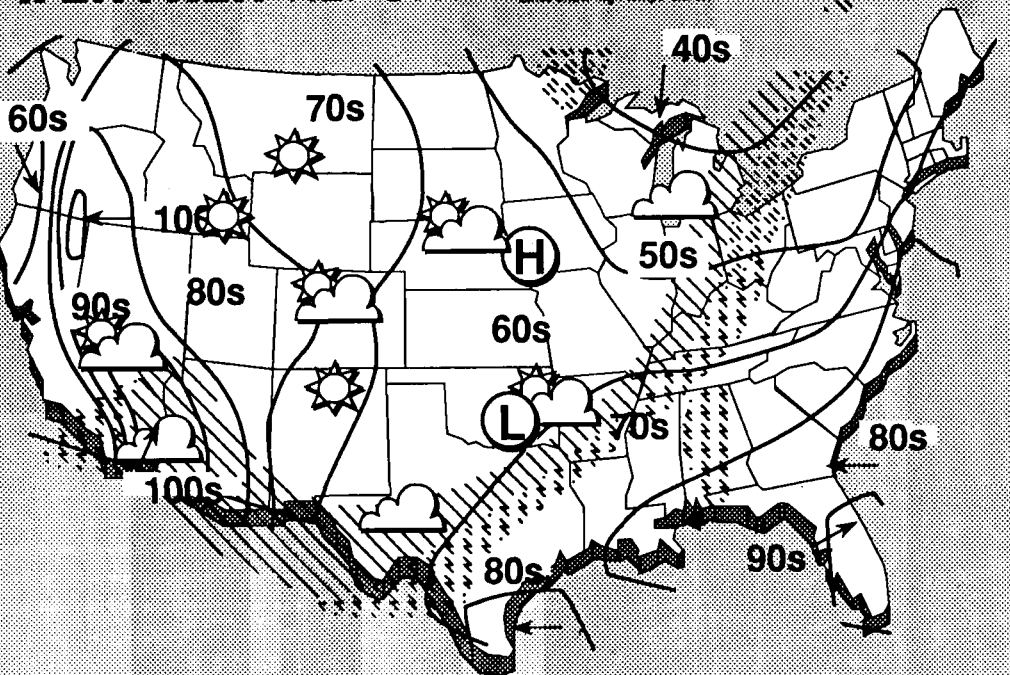

I may be going out on a limb right now, but I think the University should consider mandatory castration for males and spading for females (I'm not sure if 'spading' is the medical term, but I think you know what I mean.) Then, once and for all, all of the University's problems would be solved.

Then we could all concentrate on real important things. Like football.

Gastroenteritis claims lives

■DHAKA, Bangladesh — Thirty-one more people died of gastroenteritis in the flood-hit north, officials said Wednesday, bringing the total number of deaths in flood-stricken areas to 467.

The disease has spread mainly because of a shortage of lifesaving drugs and water-purifying tablets, said a doctor at the International Center for Diarrheal Disease Research in Dhaka. Gastroenteritis is a major killer in tropical Bangladesh, where most poor people drink water from polluted rivers and ponds. A Health Ministry official said the 31 deaths occurred Tuesday, and that more than 27,000 people have been affected by the disease since Sept. 1.

NATIONAL

Ice floe carrying research station

■ANCHORAGE, Alaska — An ice floe carrying an abandoned Soviet research station and hundreds of drums of fuel and potentially hazardous chemicals is lost somewhere north of Alaska, federal officials say. The island of ice broke loose from the Soviet coast July 24, according to the U.S. Coast Guard. On Sept. 2 it was reported in the Arctic Ocean 56 miles from Barrow, the nation's northernmost city. Officials say the Soviets have promised to remove the chemicals and the buildings from the floe once it is found, but with bad weather making it difficult to locate by satellite or airplane, that could take awhile.

INDIANA

Ministers want death re-examined

■INDIANAPOLIS, In — The investigation into the death of a black teenager while in police custody four years ago should be re-opened, a ministers group says. Indianapolis police officials, the Marion County coroner and the FBI concluded that Taylor shot himself while handcuffed in the back of a police patrol car. Some unanswered questions are: Why was there blood on the ground near the police car in which Taylor was riding?; What is the exact location of some witnesses at the time of the incident?; and why witness reports a policeman appear to be wrestling with Taylor and that Taylor was removed from the patrol car before rescue personnel arrived. Concerned Clergy will assemble the task force with its president, the Rev. C.V. Jetter, pastor of Shiloh Missionary Baptist Church, serving as temporary chairperson.

Campus Greetings needs student work

■SOUTH BEND — A greeting card company is soliciting artwork, photography and verse from college students around the country for a new line of cards designed by students for students. The company, called Campus Greetings, plans to produce cards with a friendship or love theme that specifically reflect the words and lifestyles of college students. Prizes for the winners are $100 for each piece of art or photography chosen and $50 for each verse selected. Students can get information about the program by writing Campus Greetings, c/o McCallum Design Company, 1380 Pearl Road, Brunswick, OH 44212.

Mysterious cracks are found on Atlantis wings

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — Space shuttle workers removed thermal seals from Atlantis' wings for inspections Wednesday after mysterious cracks were found in some of the protective gaskets.

NASA officials said it's too soon to say if the problem will delay a military mission by Atlantis in November.

Technicians discovered the cracks during routine inspections of Atlantis in the hangar.

Workers pulled off three of the 44 reinforced carbon seals Tuesday to check for damage from the ship's last flight, in August. All three had hairline cracks, said NASA spokesman Mitch Varnes.

Five more seals were pulled off, and four of them were cracked, Varnes said. Shuttle managers decided Wednesday to remove all the seals to check for further damage.

The seals — 22 per wing — serve as expansion joints for the reinforced carbon panels that protect the leading edge of the shuttle wings against the intense heat of atmospheric re-entry.

"The issue is not at this point so much a safety issue," Varnes said. "The concern is how did these happen and why are we only seeing them now."

Installation procedures were being reviewed, as well as stress placed on the seals during ground operations and during flight.

The seals are original shuttle parts. There are not enough spares available to replace all the seals, but extras could be removed from the new shuttle Endeavour, Varnes said.

Atlantis, NASA's youngest working shuttle, has made nine trips into space. Its planned 10th mission involves delivery of a missile-warning satellite.

The shuttle Discovery, meanwhile, got a little closer to home Wednesday. The modified 747 jet carrying Discovery back to Kennedy Space Center arrived at Columbus Air Force Base in Mississippi for an overnight stay.

The jet, with Discovery bolted on top, left Edwards Air Force Base, Calif., on Tuesday and spent the night at Tinker Air Force Base in Oklahoma City.

OPEC agrees to keep oil flowing

GENEVA — OPEC agreed Wednesday to keep its crude taps wide open in the winter, but oil ministers hope prices will rise anyway.

"Everybody is allowed to produce whatever they want," said Indonesian Oil Minister Ginandjar Kartasasmita after the cartel decided to continue the "free-for-all" policy started during the Persian Gulf crisis.

After two days of talks, ministers of the 13-nation Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries agreed to boost the output ceiling to 23.65 million barrels of crude a day in the October-December period.

The new cap replaces the informal limit of 22.3 million barrels set last spring. It also is about the level of the cartel's current production — and capacity.

The decision represented a victory for heavyweight Saudi Arabia, which fended off calls for restraint by Iran, Algeria and others to take steps pushing up prices immediately to the cartel's target of $21 a barrel.

The average price of a basket of crudes monitored by OPEC was $19.24 a barrel last week. It was $18.78 in the previous week.

Even so, ministers and some analysts forecast prices would rise because of increased demand in the winter. They cited cold weather in North America, economic recovery in industrialized nations and declining output in the Soviet Union, the world's No. 1 producer.

"There is a buoyant market," said Saudi Arabian Oil Minister Hisham Nazer. "We can't keep up with it."

Oil analysts in New York have differing views on whether prices will rise or fall in coming months, however.

Every dollar rise — or decline — in the price of a barrel of oil amounts to a 2-cent to 5-cent change in gasoline prices, experts say.

Iranian Oil Minister Gholamreza Aqazadeh said in an interview that prices could hit $21 a barrel by year's end, but he said if the cartel was serious about getting prices higher, it could have done more.

A senior OPEC delegate, demanding anonymity, said Aqazadeh and Saudi Arabia's minister, Nazer, held heated discussions about the price issue in the closed-door sessions.

The delegate said Iran wanted a stronger reference in the final statement to reaching the price target as soon as possible.

Mother shoots her three children dead

COLUMBUS, Ohio — A woman charged in the shooting deaths of her three children received counseling from a children's services agency earlier this year because of the problems she was having as a single parent.

Kimberly Chandler felt the stress of trying to raise her children while working and going to school to get the high school education that she gave up years ago.

Chandler, 25, often told relatives she would kill her children, but not many believed her.

"She said things, but I never took it to heart," said David Ferguson, 34, father of two of the children. "She took good care of the kids."

Chandler was charged with three counts of aggravated murder in deaths of her children, Quiana Chandler, 7; Quincy Chandler 3; and Ericka Archie, 7 months.

They were found shot in her Nelson Park apartment on the city's east side Tuesday. Ericka was slain while secured in a child's safety seat.

Police say Chandler then went outside and shot a neighbor, 5-year-old David Warren. The boy remained in fair condition Wednesday in Children's Hospital. She was charged with felonious assault in that shooting.

Chandler was being held in the Franklin County jail Wednesday on $850,000 bond.

Eric Archie, 22, father of Ericka, said Chandler had threatened several times during the past two months to kill him and the children. Archie said he called Franklin County Children Services in August to report the threats but was told the children were in no danger.

"They said they went down to check on the kids before and that the kids looked so good and that there was nothing they could do," Archie said Wednesday. "I asked them what has to happen. Does my baby have to be dead and gone?"

Children Services spokeswoman Kay Marshall said she was not aware of any calls from Archie.

Marshall said the agency sent a social worker to Chandler's home in May at the request of police.

The Columbus Dispatch reported that police went to her apartment because of domestic dispute involving a boyfriend. Marshall said Chandler told police she also needed help with her children.

One child was placed in a foster home overnight and another child went with a grandmother. The children were returned the next morning, Marshall said.

Marshall said Ms. Chandler agreed to meet with a social worker.

The agency then made several scheduled and surprise visits to the home and counseled Chandler through July 22.

Chandler and the social worker agreed that she no longer needed counseling, and the case was closed, Marshall said.

"We had done an investigation for possible abuse or neglect and had found no signs of either," Marshall said.

Officers also responded to domestic disturbances at the home March 8 and Aug. 4, both incidents apparently involving boyfriends, the Dispatch said.

Franklin County court records show that in 1981, Chandler was found to be a neglected child and was in Children Services custody, the Dispatch said. She was again placed in the agency's custody in 1983 for truancy.

Chandler was working toward obtaining a diploma equivalent to a high school education. She also was working part-time in a supermarket.

"Her goal was to better her situation," Ms. Marshall said.

Earlier this year, a neighbor who used to baby sit for Chandler referred her to a crisis center because she appeared to be under stress during her pregnancy with Ericka.

"Kim was either real up or real down," said LaVerne Ford, who also is a retired mental health worker.

"I knew she was disturbed when she was pregnant, and I thought she could use professional help," Ford said. "She was saying she didn't want the baby and that she wanted to get rid of it."

She said Chandler appeared to benefit from the crisis center's help but then began to behave erratically about two months ago.

Noriega possibly accepts bribes

MIAMI — The Medellin cocaine cartel poured almost $2 billion into Panama in the early 1980s, some of it on Manuel Noriega's plane, a confessed money launderer testified at the deposed Panamanian leader's trial Wednesday.

Among the charges Noriega faces is accepting bribes to let the cartel launder its drug profits in Panamanian banks.

Late in the day the government's star witness, Panamanian pilot Floyd Carlton, also took the stand, but only began tracing his relationship with Noriega when court adjourned.

Carlton said he built up a charter business in the early 1980s at a Panama City airport with Noriega's protection.

"Nobody messed with us, nobody inspected our planes, nobody did anything to us," Carlton said.

Most of Wednesday's prosecution testimony was from Eric Guerra, a Panamanian businessman who said the drug cash was flown into the Panama City airport aboard commercial and private flights, all under the watchful eye of Noriega's intelligence branch.

"It came in suitcases, it came tied up in bundles, by denomination, and with rubber bands around it," Guerra testified.

He said that from 1980 until he left the money laundering operation in July 1984, passengers aboard daily flights from Miami carried in $500,000 to $800,000 each. Sometimes two couriers were on the same flight, he said.

In 1982, private jets began weekly flights from Fort Lauderdale to Panama City, each carrying $10 million to $15 million, he said.

A jet the government says was Noriega's personal plane made several of the flights, said Guerra, identifying it from photos.

Flights from Fort Lauderdale began in 1982 and lasted about 18 months until the cash smugglers were caught in Florida, he said.

Guerra said Colombian Carlos Molina approached him in 1981 with the money-laundering scheme. He later found out Molina worked for Medellin cartel leaders Pablo Escobar and Gustavo Gaviria, both of whom were indicted with Noriega, but weren't extradited to the United States.

Molina called him each day from Medellin to direct him either to deposit the money in various banks or deliver it to individuals, he said.

"I was the one who disposed of it all," Guerra testified.

Family mysteriously disappears from suburb home

BARRINGTON, R.I. — This affluent town's suburban tranquility has been shattered by a family's disappearance and charges filed against a Sunday school teacher who is the prime suspect.

Authorities fear they are searching for bodies after finding blood stains and crossbows in the family garage and car, and signs of a struggle in the house.

Federal, state and local authorities have searched several sites around town without finding lawyer Ernest Brendel, 53, his librarian wife, Alice, 49, or their daughter, Emily, 8. They have not been seen since late Friday.

Investigators using dogs searched soggy woods and a Coast Guard helicopter circled over town unsuccessfully looking for any trace of the family. "I'm not coming to any conclusions about the family," Police Chief Charles Brule said.

Christopher Hightower, 42, a commodities broker and prominent member of the local Congregational Church, was arrested Monday while driving the Brendels' bloodstained car and was charged Tuesday, authorities said.

Hightower was jailed in lieu of $100,000 bail on state and federal charges including extortion, possession of stolen property — the family's car and credit cards — and possession of a sawed-off shotgun. He wasn't charged with any violent crimes, however, because the fate of the Brendels was unknown, authorities said.

Brule said investigators had confirmed that Hightower picked up Emily Brendel from a YMCA after-school program Friday.

Barrington, a Providence suburb of 16,000 that is one of the state's wealthiest communities, has been the sort of town where many people feel so safe they don't even lock their doors.

Barrington is the kind of place where "once every eight years, something happens," said John Calitri, 29, owner of Barrington Radio and Electric.

Residents said that what was most difficult was not knowing the full story.

"It's weird. I wish we could know something," said retiree Frances Taft, 66, who lives just around the corner. "I don't lock my doors or anything."

"I think it's kind of scary. It really is very nerve-wracking not to know, to think that anything of this magnitude has happened, first of all, and then not to know," said Carole Collins, the Brendels' next-door neighbor.

Police began searching on Monday after Brendel's sister in Guilford, Conn., alerted the FBI that Hightower tried to extort $75,000 from her and her husband after driving there Sunday in the Brendels' car.

Christine Scriabine said Hightower told her and her husband an anonymous caller had claimed Hightower's wife, two children and the entire Brendel family had been kidnapped.

Hightower allegedly said the caller demanded $300,000 ransom. He showed the Scriabines the bloodstains to persuade them to put up $75,000, the FBI said.

"We talked for six hours. Unfortunately, his story didn't hang together," Mrs. Scriabine said.

The Scriabines offered a $5,000 reward for information about the Brendels' whereabouts. "We are living on hope," she said.

The FBI and state and local police scoured the family's two-story house, a garage and an outbuilding. They appeared to concentrate on the garage, using drills, saws and a crowbar, apparently searching for arrowheads from the crossbow, authorities said.

Investigators removed pieces of the garage wall.

After Hightower's arrest, state prosecutor Patrick Youngs said weapons — later identified as crossbows — blood stains and signs of a struggle were found in the car and the house.

The only known connection between Brendel and Hightower was investments Brendel had made. Brendel filed a complaint against Hightower last summer with the Commodities Futures Trading Commission alleging that Hightower made false representations and lost his investment of $11,861.

A commission spokeswoman said Hightower had not responded to the complaint.

Hightower and his family are prominent in Barrington, U.S. Attorney Lincoln Almond said.

"They're always out there working — real homebodies from what I can see," said neighbor Joseph Simas, 52.

The Rev. Joseph Dye, pastor at the Barrington Congregational Church where Hightower headed Sunday school and a youth program, began putting together a counseling program for the youngsters Hightower led.

Testimony begins in trial of the murder of LA actress

LOS ANGELES — The man charged with murdering actress Rebecca Schaeffer hung his head and sat perfectly still Wednesday as a movie studio security chief described Robert John Bardo's obsession with the young star.

John Egger said he tried to talk Bardo into abandoning his quest to see Miss Schaeffer after the young man arrived one day at the Burbank Studios carrying a huge bouquet of flowers and a 5-foot tall teddy bear.

Miss Schaeffer then was starring in the TV series "My Sister Sam."

Egger said he never suspected this fan might turn violent.

"He was one of the most lucid and intelligent types of people that I've dealt with," Egger said.

His testimony came as Bardo's trial opened without a jury two years after Miss Schaeffer, 21, was shot to death as she answered the door to her Fairfax area apartment.

Deputy District Attorney Marcia Clark gave no opening statement but launched immediately into Egger's testimony.

The witness, a retired Beverly Hills policeman who has headed security at Burbank Studios for 12 years, said in June 1987, two years before Miss Schaeffer was slain, Bardo was brought to his office with his flowers and teddy bear by security guards. He had been begging the guards to take him to Miss Schaeffer, Egger said.

Egger said Bardo carried no weapons, didn't seem hostile and denied having mental problems.

"He proceeded to tell me now much he was in love with Rebecca Schaeffer and he just wanted to see her and give her the flowers and the teddy bear," Egger said.

"I let him know firmly that he wouldn't get in," Egger said, and after finding out that Bardo, of Tucson, Ariz., had taken a bus from his Hollywood hotel, Egger offered him a ride back.

"I dropped him off and told him the best thing would be for him to go back to Tucson. ... He said, 'I'm going to do that.'"

"All in all, it was a pleasant encounter," Egger said. "I felt I'd accomplished something."

Croatian factions urge for peace

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia — Leaders of the three main parties battling over Croatian independence agreed Wednesday to seek a peaceful end to the conflict, holding out a frail hope for the latest truce in the secessionist republic.

The meeting brought together the presidents of Croatia and rival Serbia with federal Defense Minister Veljko Kadijevic, whose troops have backed ethnic Serb rebels opposed to secession.

The three urged a complete cease-fire in Croatia and said the crisis "must be solved only by political means," the state news agency Tanjug reported.

The presence of hard-line Serbian President Slobodan Milosevic at Wednesday's meeting was significant because of the influence his republic has over the federal armed forces and the ethnic Serb fighters.

But there were also negative signs: The army ordered fresh mobilizations of Serb youth, and the deputy president of Serbia's parliament, Borijove Petrovic, told Belgrade radio, "the Croatian forces will first have to be brought to their knees before we start negotiating" with Croatian President Franjo Tudjman.

There were also scattered reports of spreading violence in the republics of Bosnia-Herzegovina and Montenegro.

At least five previous truce agreements have failed to halt the fighting in Croatia, which has claimed at least 500 lives since Croatia and its neighbor Slovenia declared independence on June 25. The latest was signed Sunday.

The federal army — short of recruits because many Yugoslavs are refusing the draft — on Wednesday ordered the mobilization of all male Serb refugees from Croatia under 40, and threatened legal measures against those who refuse.

More than 100,000 ethnic Serbs have fled to Serbia from Croatia since fighting started.

most of the few battles concentrated near the Croat-held towns of Vukovar and Vinkovci in eastern Croatia.

Sporadic fighting also continued in the central Adriatic port of Split, Tanjug said. There was no report of casualties.

Tanjug reported border shooting between Croatian and Montenegrin forces further south along the Adriatic, near the Bay of Kotor.

In Bosnia-Herzegovina — the republic that many expect to be the next where widespread violence erupts — a police reservist was shot and killed overnight while guarding a post office, Tanjug reported. The attackers were not identified.

Scattered shooting was reported in two other Bosnian towns, and a Muslim-owned restaurant was destroyed by a bomb, Tanjug said.

Bosnia-Herzegovina's population is roughly divided among Muslims, Serbs and Croats who have a long history of bloody ethnic feuds.

Meanwhile, the Serbian government said it would "use all means" to prevent an independence referendum in Kosovo, the predominantly ethnic-Albanian province of Serbia. The vote is scheduled begin Thursday.

Coal miners fight battles with police

BUCHAREST, Romania — Thousands of coal miners angered by their plunging living standard fought pitched battles with police Wednesday that left three dead and at least 60 injured. After a day of rioting, the president announced he would form a new government.

The miners, who had commandeered trains in central Romania to bring their demands to Bucharest, stormed the government building and fought police with firebombs, clubs, rocks and axes.

The injured in fighting that spread through downtown streets included 34 policemen, the Interior Ministry said.

President Ion Iliescu and Premier Petre Roman later announced they would move immediately to form a new government to restore order, according to state television. No other details were divulged.

"We are not going to leave this town until Roman resigns," said Miron Cosma, the leader of the miners. "The responsibility for the dead is his."

It was the largest and most violent protest in months against Roman's tough market-oriented reforms, which have resulted in a sharp price increases.

Romania was already one of Europe's poorest countries in the wake of Nicolae Ceausescu's decades of Communist dictatorship.

In the melee at the government headquarters, helmeted miners threw firebombs at the building, starting small fires.

Police responded with tear gas, and choking clouds hung over the building.

A photographer for Rompres said Roman was in the government building at the time of the assault. The miners forced their way in and demanded to meet him.

But they were pushed out by police and gathered at a square about half a mile away. Fresh battles erupted after they marched through downtown Bucharest, attracting at least 10,000 other people as they filed to University Square in the heart of the city.

Tear gas billowed over the square as police sought to disperse the crowd. Some of the miners threw firebombs and smashed windows of private shops on the main boulevard, and battled with about 1,000 paramilitary police.

Three policemen were seen lying on the ground unconscious, and an ambulance driver said he had taken four policemen to an emergency hospital with head injuries. A miner was seen with an open fracture of his leg and another appeared to have a broken arm.

"Down With Iliescu!" "Down with Communism!" the crowd chanted. Many of Romania's leaders are former Communists, although the draconian market reforms they are undertaking are far from communist in nature.

One miner, 38-year-old Ioan Misa, said he had to borrow money to feed his five children.

Palestinian delegates work on peace policy

ALGIERS, Algeria — Leaders of the Palestinian parliament-in-exile labored Wednesday to reconcile moderate and hard-line views over terms of Palestinian participation in Middle East peace talks.

After two days of impassioned speeches by Palestine National Council members, leading delegates were working on a final policy statement that will give the Palestine Liberation Organization authority to decide on Palestinian participation, said Yasser Abed Rabbo, a member of the PLO executive committee.

The statement should be submitted to the full parliament Thursday, he said. PLO spokesman Ahmed Abdel Rahman said the congress would likely be extended one day to Friday.

PLO leaders on Tuesday reluctantly endorsed the Mideast conference that would bring Israel and key Arab states together next month.

Algerian television, meanwhile, reported Wednesday that two Palestinians from the Israeli-occupied territories would defy Israeli law to address the national council in a closed evening session.

Faisal Husseini and Hanan Ashrawi have met with U.S. Secretary of State James Baker III several times to discuss the peace proposals. Israel bans contact between Palestinians from the PLO and those from the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip.

Many view the talks as a last chance for talks on a Palestinian homeland, yet virtually all delegates consider political guarantees offered to the Palestinians by Baker to be woefully inadequate.

Particularly irksome to them has been Baker's failure to address the issue of an independent state for Palestinians or guarantees that Israel would withdraw from the West Bank and Gaza Strip, occupied since 1967.

"We are between the options of suicide and suicide," Abed Rabbo said in debate early Wednesday.

Body found in Austrian glacier

INNSBRUCK, Austria — A man whose 4,000-year-old mummified body was discovered on a glacier's edge wore tattoos, dressed in leather and packed a knife, scientists said Wednesday.

Researchers called the Sept. 19 find by hikers an archaeological sensation, and said it could offer a rare glimpse into life in the Bronze Age, a time when men ate meat and stone-ground meal, judging from the mummy's chiseled teeth.

"We are absolutely sure this body is 4,000 years old," said Spindler of the University of Innsbruck's Institute for Pre- and Early History.

From an examination of the body and implements found with it, scholars dated the "Iceman from the Similaun" — so named by Austrian newspapers for the glacier where he was found — to the early Bronze Age, roughly 2,000 B.C. in the Alps, he said.

He said items found with the corpse were not purposely buried with it, but were carried by the living man. They included a flint stone, pieces of leather and fur clothing, and shoes.

Hikers in the Tyrolean mountains in Western Austria near the Italian border stumbled across the remarkably well-preserved man sticking out of the glacier at about 10,000 feet and notified local police.

Spindler said the man appeared to be between 20 and 40 years old and was "a good mountain climber." He wore winter clothing of leather and fur stuffed with hay at the time of his death, he said.

Colored tatoos are visible on the corpse's skin, in the form of crosses and lines, but their meaning was not immediately clear.

House Speaker Thomas Foley defended a plan Wednesday to tighten the House bank's rules including a halt to the free overdrafts.

Speaker Foley defends plan to tighten House bank rules

WASHINGTON (AP) — Speaker Thomas Foley made an unusual appearance on the House floor Wednesday to head off a Republican attempt to make political hay with the rampant check-bouncing reported at the House bank.

Rep. Toby Roth, R-Wis., was prepared to offer a resolution calling for an official inquiry to identify, at least to House officers, the biggest abusers. But he stopped short after Foley delivered a strongly worded address.

"Members will have the same rights, no more and no less, than any other member of the public," said Foley, adding that actions he ordered Tuesday included a halt to the free overdrafts.

Foley announced then that he had ordered an end to the free overdrafts and loose check-cashing privileges at the House bank.

He told reporters a system similar to that of a commercial bank would be set up, including penalties for bounced checks, but the details had not been worked out.

"Members should be on notice that I have told the bank that there will be no exceptions to this rule," Foley said on the floor, and bank employees who grant such exceptions would be fired.

"This is now a matter that is over, and done with, and it will not reoccur," he said. "I do not feel there is a need for any additional resolution of the House, except perhaps a resolution which will state the House's approval as I hope they will give it for the actions I have taken as Speaker in this matter."

Foley was backed by House Minority Leader Bob Michel, R-Ill., and he refused to entertain requests from others that the names be released, even by omission.

Rep. Bob Dornan, R-Calif., asked if he could get a letter from the House certifying he was not a check-bouncer. Such letters were needed, "not to identify the transgressors, but to free the innocent," he contended, to no avail.

The General Accounting Office reported last week that House members wrote more than 8,000 checks in a one-year period that overdrawed their accounts on the House bank. But the bank covered them, without penalty, even though hundreds of them were in excess of $1,000.

The GAO declined to release the names or party breakdown of the transgressors, saying it could not legally do so.

Roth, in a telephone interview, said he drew up his resolution following a meeting with other House Republicans on how to pursue the issue. While his intent was to publicly expose the violators, he said he was informed later a resolution alone might not be adequate.

"So I felt that my resolution... served its purpose because it brought this issue to a head," he said.

India's new open-door policy lures four American companies

WASHINGTON (AP) — India's commerce minister said Wednesday four of America's best known corporations have decided to do business in India under its new open-door policy for foreign investment.

International Business Machines and Ford Motor Co. have concluded joint venture agreements with prominent Indian firms, while General Motors and the Kellogg Company have submitted proposals, Minister Palaniappan Chidambaram told reporters.

Chidambaram said IBM has agreed with Tata Industries, India's largest private conglomerate, on manufacturing PS-2 personal computers and software and setting up a network of component vendors in India.

Ford, he said, has concluded an agreement with Maruti Motors to manufacture aluminum radiators.

GM is proposing a $290 million investment with another automaker, Hindustan Motors, to develop a new car and a range of components, he said.

The Kellogg Co. proposes to set up a food processing subsidiary. Under the new policy the project will receive automatic approval, Chidambaram said.

The four are the first major U.S. corporations to opt for investments in India under liberalized industrial, investment and trade policies adopted in July and August by Prime Minister P.V. Narasimha Rao's government, Chidambaram said.

The Random House Concise World Atlas

Six prominent German concerns that he did not name are also going to India, the minister said.

Indian political leader Rajiv Gandhi, who was assassinated during a May 21 campaign tour, drafted the liberalized policies while his Congress Party was out of power, the minister said. They were adopted by Narasimha Rao's post-election Congress government.

Several other American companies including Pepsico entered India under a more gradual liberalization policy of the mid-1980s now revived and accelerated by Narasimha Rao.

The new policy says "India will grow faster as part of the world economy and not in isolation, trade must be free rather than shackled and the state must withdraw from areas of production where private enterprise has developed maturity," Chidambaram said. "Today our private sector is strong and mature."

The minister's staff said IBM and Tata would share 50 percent equities in their joint venture, with the U.S. company sending some senior officials to India and providing a training program.

Governor Cuomo outlines ambitious spending plan to 'rebuild' New York

NEW YORK (AP) — Gov. Mario Cuomo has outlined an ambitious $7 billion capital spending plan to "rebuild" New York City, but says both private and public sectors must pitch in.

It's time, Cuomo said, "to show what we are made of. We need to stop moaning and start moving."

Cuomo's plan to "rebuild the city from the ground up" includes a wide range of public works projects.

They include a light rail line to New York's airports, high-speed water ferries, and major renovations at commuter hubs such as Grand Central Terminal and Penn Station.

The cornerstone of the plan is for the state to gradually assume the local share of Medicaid costs in return for counties shifting some of their taxing authority to the state.

That plan has already generated criticism from smaller municipalities with low Medicaid costs and praise from officials in the Big Apple, which could save $1 billion annually.

Mario Cuomo

Cuomo, often touted as a potential Democratic presidential candidate, unveiled his "New New York" plan at a private meeting of 100 city officials, union leaders and business executives Monday night and publicly Tuesday.

The governor's proposals were intended to help lift the palpable depression Cuomo says has enveloped the city: "You can feel the tensions in the streets. You can see it in people's faces."

But he said it would only be accomplished if all sectors — public, private and particularly municipal unions — are willing to help.

The proposal calls for the multibillion-dollar plan to be funded through public and private money, with a minimal input from state coffers.

Cuomo said it could create 79,000 jobs — including 25,000 permanent slots — and generate $8.2 billion in economic activity by the year 2000.

Most of his proposals would have to be approved by the state Legislature or other city, state and federal authorities before officials could even begin drawing up plans.

Cuomo admitted he could offer no assurances that any of his proposals would become reality.

"I don't know if we're going to run into another Depression or have another period of growth and resurgence," he said. "But I'm saying it's worth pursuing and keeping the hope alive."

"What is important is saving this city and starting now," he said.

Although the tree has not been lit yet in Rockefeller Center, Christmas appears to have come early for New York City. Governor Mario Cuomo announced a $7 billion spending plan to "rebuild" the city.

Saint Mary's academics enviable

Nowhere is the idea that Saint Mary's is a second-class institution more noticeable than when students talk about academics. The typical Notre Dame stereotype is that Saint Mary's women attend the College because they were unable to get into Notre Dame.

This stereotype does not give credit where credit is due. In the recent U.S. News and World Report survey of American colleges and universities, Saint Mary's is ranked third among other small, Midwestern, liberal arts colleges. This rank is indicative of the fact that, in competition with other schools of similar size and focus, Saint Mary's is a first-rate academic institution.

Many believe that Saint Mary's small size is its greatest asset. A lower student to faculty ratio and smaller class sizes enable Saint Mary's students to receive a more individualized education than what is offered at larger institutions like Notre Dame.

Notre Dame and Saint Mary's participate in an academic exchange program which enables students to take classes at the other school. This program is mutually beneficial to both schools. Notre Dame students have the opportunity to take smaller classes. This is something that is especially valuable in view of the increasing number of large lecture classes offered at Notre Dame.

At the same time, Saint Mary's students have the opportunity to take classes in a wider variety of academic fields. Many Saint Mary's students are able to get a second major in an academic area that is not offered at the College.

In addition, Saint Mary's offers its students, as well as those from Notre Dame, the opportunity to receive a degree in education. Saint Mary's education program fills in the gap that exists in the academic offerings of Notre Dame.

One of the most revealing aspects of the U.S. News and World Report survey is the fact that Saint Mary's is ranked first in student satisfaction. This is indicative of the fact that many people do find value in the education that is offered by a small, all-female college like Saint Mary's.

Notre Dame and Saint Mary's are intrinsically different institutions with different focuses and purposes. The differences in the two should be able to compliment each other, not be a source of tension.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Community lacks sensitivity, contributes to abortions of unwed, pregnant women

Dear Editor:

Lately several articles have been written to Viewpoint concerning the abortion issue. In these articles, either the pro-life advocates attack the pro-choice advocates for killing helpless human beings, or the pro-choice advocates attack the pro-lifers for attempting to stop women from aborting their babies. We want to address the issue from another angle. This article is geared towards our peers, those women who are young, unmarried, and pregnant.

What needs to be focused on, rather than a back-and-forth character bashing, is the reason why so many unmarried women choose to abort their children. We feel that it can be safely stated that most of these young women who abort do not find it an easy decision to make. What they need to know is that there are alternatives to the killing of their babies. However, the community is to blame for making these alternatives so unattractive.

When a young woman of our age becomes pregnant, she is overwhelmed with countless and assorted fears; mainly, what will people think of her when they discover that she is, indeed, pregnant? For example, a close friend of ours at Notre Dame became pregnant in December of last year. As a result, she was virtually deserted by several of her "disapproving" closest friends at a time when she needed them most.

All of a sudden she was different, and somehow less "holy" in their eyes. As soon as her condition became apparent, she was constantly stared at and talked about by others, usually right before her eyes. Being pregnant is difficult enough without having to deal with the insensitivities that run rampant in this community.

We are not saying that the decision to abort is the right choice at all; in fact, we are saying the opposite. There are those people who do understand, who will not turn their backs on the situation.

Young pregnant women need to realize that the groups offering support, including women's care centers, crisis pregnancy centers, and homes for unwed mothers, are pro-life groups. They care very much about you and your unborn baby, and will give you all of the help you need. Families are often more understanding than expected, and your real friends will always be there for you.

In conclusion, if we could all just be a little more understanding and a lot less insensitive, an unwed, pregnant young woman might not decide to abort her baby. A good way to stop abortion is to be compassionate and supportive. No one has the right to pass judgment on someone because she has conceived a child before marriage. So she made a mistake; haven't we all?

Teaching pro-life ideas will make a difference

Dear Editor:

Up until this year, I believe I was like most students at our University who see abortion as fundamentally wrong, but are unwilling to get deeply involved in debate, discussion, and even protest of this sensitive issue. In my mind, I believed that just being a student at this Catholic institution of higher learning was a clear indicator of my attitudes and ideas.

I was wrong. Abortion is not a problem which is going to disappear from today's society without a fight. Within the next few years, Roe v. Wade may be overturned by an ever more conservative Supreme Court. That would leave women in today's society with two options: bringing a wonderful, new life into being or illegally and usually dangerously eliminating one. Only education and spread of pro-life ideas will lead to the morally correct choice of the former.

As members of Our Lady's University, we should set the example for our nation to follow. We must be open and willing to debate and make known where we, as a community, stand. Through a simple, easy commitment to communication and education, we may make enough of a difference to save young human lives.

Minority Student Affairs emphasizes their relationship with students and administration

The Observer/Kevin Weise

Iris Outlaw, director of Minority Student Affairs, listens to student concerns regarding minority relations.

By MEREDITH MCCULLOUGH
Accent Writer

Doors are opening at the office of Minority Student Affairs (MSA).

As Iris Outlaw, current director of the program, and her assistant Mari Fuentes assume their new positions, MSA teems with potential for growth and development.

This school year has been a fresh start for the office, stemming from small changes in organizational structure and big plans for new culturally diverse programs.

"This office has changed a lot" since the events surrounding Students United For Respect (SUFR) activities last fall, said Fuentes. The establishment of Fuentes' position was a direct result of the students' push for a much needed assistant director.

Also, there is more office space, a student lounge in the old club room, an assistant vice president who oversees the office, and a noticeable difference in relations with the administration.

The administration, according to Fuentes, "seems more sensitive to the needs of the office. The commitment is there."

"The assistant vice president is empathetic with the students," continued Outlaw. There is finally a move towards "trust-building" between the office and the administration. "I don't know if its ever been there before."

According to Outlaw and Fuentes, the official goal of the office is "to encourage and assist students of color in the utilization of all of the academic and social opportunities at the University of Notre Dame, as well as facing the academic challenges placed before them."

In order to activate this mission, the directing team has looked into implementing several new programs that include working within the residence halls and in conjunction with other universities.

The first step is to bring cultural diversity to the dorms by sponsoring speakers, showing films, and holding discussions.

The main focus is not necessarily cultural awareness, according to Outlaw. "Most students are already aware of cultural differences. We want to increase their sensitivity."

Both women indicated that their backgrounds helped to prepare them for their position in the MSA office.

Outlaw graduated from Indiana University in 1973, originally intending to attend medical school.

Instead, she headed to Notre Dame for a Master's degree in science administration.

Before accepting her current position, she worked at a housing allowance office for about 14 years. It was there that she learned about teamwork and goal setting.

"It (the housing office) was interesting," she said. "I worked with people on all social and economic levels ... it was a good learning experience."

"I got a lot out of the program that I have been able to use here, like how to deal with certain issues and the importance of goals and foresight."

Fuentes' position at the office of Minority Student Affairs was just established this year.

Technically, her duties include organizing educational programs, counseling students and helping out minority student organizations; but, as she stated, "Iris and I work together to divide all things."

An 1989 graduate of Notre Dame, Fuentes is no stranger to the minority scene at ND.

While a student here, she worked in the admissions office recruiting minority students. She also helped restart the Hispanic American Organization (HAO), initiated a Mexican folklore group, and was a member of the multi-cultural council.

Recruiting students for ND was "personally rewarding." Now as assistant director of MSA, she said she will be able to "make these students experience better."

According to Fuentes, her age and ND experience make her ideal for the job. She is able to speak to the administration honestly and realistically, while still being able to relate to the students.

Both Fuentes and Outlaw have optimistic hopes for the future of MSA.

"I see it (MSA) going in a very positive, growing direction. We have a lot of room to grow — that's our challenge, where we take it," said Fuentes.

Outlaw expressed a sincere desire that students stop by the office whenever the need arises: "We have an open door policy."

Adopting a quote from Chuck Lennon, assistant vice president of University relations, Outlaw said, "People don't interrupt our business; they are our business."

"If it weren't for the students, there wouldn't be a need for us," she explained.

Grant's new pop image promises to uplift audience

By GERALDINE HAMILTON
Accent Writer

Want your spirits lifted? Then go see Amy Grant tonight at 7:30 pm at the Joyce ACC. Her reputation of being a star in the Christian music scene is piling in comparison to her new found fame as a pop singer.

On her Heart in Motion Tour, Amy Grant is capturing the attention of not only her devoted followers, but also a whole new generation of secular listeners with her most recent hit, "Baby Baby," which is a song dedicated to her baby daughter.

She states that the song "helps to explain where my base is - where I'm coming from."

Grant assisted in the writing of all the songs on her latest album, Heart in Motion. For the first time she is breaking away from music that speaks only about spiritual matters and is now concentrating on topics such as love, sexual abuse and matters of every day life.

Her on-stage performance is filled with color and enthusiasm. There is the usual dancing and lighting, but there is also a great deal of humor and personality.

When Grant performs "Hats," she appears on stage with a cart of hats and proceeds to model them to the audience while singing.

Grant's down to earth character is also evident. She relates stories about her children and her life to the audience. Her success as a pop singer has not transformed her charm and warmth in the least.

When Grant achieved crossover success from Christian to secular music, much of her core audience was wary of her new music.

She responded by saying, "I'm just being who I am and hoping to God that I am writing music that you can live with and that adds something to your life."

She has maintained the admiration of her old listeners even though she is quickly entering into the ranks of superstardom.

Grant has shattered the image that all Christian singers are from the "Barbie and Ken" mold. She is not the lily-white stereotype that people have associated with Christian singers. She, however, has kept her spirituality very much alive underneath the new pop singer image.

She started singing when she was 15 years old. She achieved extraordinary success as a Christian singer and transformed contemporary gospel music sales.

Now, she is setting precedents for herself. Her new album has sold over 10 million records worldwide.

Even though this album is a stepping stone for Grant, she claims, "this is probably the least self-conscious of any album I have done."

Amy Grant brings her exciting live performance to the JACC tonight at 7:30 p.m.

Eagles convinced that Green more than just 34 years old

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Roy Green has been asked about his age so often that the Philadelphia Eagles' wide receiver is beginning to think his last name is 34.

"Everybody talks about my age," said the 34-year-old Green, who signed with the Eagles last week and then caught six passes for 114 yards in a 23-14 victory over the Pittsburgh Steelers. "Sooner or later people are going to stop putting emphasis on age.

"All they have to do is look at George Foreman, Nolan Ryan, O.J. Anderson and James Lofton. Look at the individual's track record. Maybe it's because the NFL has the biggest player turnover ratio in America, an average of four or five years."

Green, in his 13th NFL season, said people should look at the accomplishments and competitiveness of an athlete.

His statistics are impressive. Green has caught 534 passes for 8,724 yards, a 16.3 average, and 66 touchdowns. He started out as a kick returner and defensive back. He returned 84 kicks 1,932 yards (23-yard average). He tied the record of 106 yards for a kickoff return.

In 1981, Green became the first player in more than 30 years to catch a touchdown pass and intercept a pass in the same game.

Green said his performance Sunday against the Steelers was exciting because he had another chance to play.

He's looking forward to Monday night's game against the Washington Redskins because "you can't rest on your laurels. I know that especially because of what has happened to me in the last year."

After playing 12 seasons with the Phoenix Cardinals, Green was traded to Cleveland for a draft pick. He went to training camp with the Browns and was waived before the season.

Green, 19th on the NFL all-time reception list, admits being cut put him in a state of shock. He also admits slowing up a step. "Yeah, I run in 4.5 instead of 4.4. How many can run 4.5?"

Green said his experience, especially having played both offense and defense, gives him a big advantage. "I know what the defensive back is thinking,"

America was tired of losing at the only sport in which it dominated internationally. So it tried to have NBA professionals allowed to participate in the Olympics. "Professionals from other countries play," whined the Americans, despite the fact that the reasons the United States was losing were numerous.

The talent at American universities is consistently on a higher level than that on European club teams. However, the United States would still lose. Foreign teams won because they concentrated on the Olympics and other international play over professional play. Finally,

American coaching was simply not geared for international play. John Thompson's failure to win a gold medal at Seoul was the biggest step toward NBA participation. With another, more flexible coach, it is likely that the United States would have put up more than a bronze-medal fight.

The complaining of the Yankees, however, coupled with hopes of big American dollars from television, won the IOC over, and NBA professionals were voted eligible to play in the Olympics.

The United States, therefore, will go to Barcelona and beat up on inferior competition, flexing its basketball muscle for all the world to see.

Are we so insecure that we must not only beat up on smaller, poorer countries with guns, but also with Magic's behind-the-back passes and Jordan's jams?

Did the United States not just come off of a tremendous ego boost eight months ago with Iraq's submission? Must we immediately show the world that we can not only shoot 'em up, but shoot the lights out as well?

As a country, we are preoccupied with our own success. The essential message of the Olympics, of people from the entire world coming together, forgetting their territorial and political differences, and taking part in two weeks of unadulterated athletic competition, has become lost as the United States sends a team of ringers to Barcelona to show that they can run 'n gun like no one else.

4, according to senior president Pete Slamkowski.

The predicted strength for this season's Irish Crew Team should be the Heavyweights, as Chappuie, Mike Bertin, Dave Mercurio, Curt Lindgren, and Joe Werner all return from last year's squad.

"As for the lightweights, most graduated," said Chappuie.

The squad will rebuild around a pair of junior returnees, Tim Sosnowski and Christian Dunbar.

The ND Crew team will be under the direction of a new coach, Mike Brose, this season.

"Last year's coach, John Stratton, will take on a more administrative position and assistant coach," commented Chappuie.

Team captain Joe Werner spoke of the attributes of his new coach. "Coach Brose had a lot of experience in the sport and he communicates well. He has a lot more recent experience [than Stratton]."

While the Irish are in Pittsburgh this weekend, Brose, an MIT engineering graduate in his fifties, will be competing at the Masters Championships in Austin, Texas this weekend. Also a current CEO for a local business, Brose hopes to establish a South Bend rowing club in the near future.

The women's team hopes their daily 5 a.m. practices pay off this year. "Our Light-4 and Open-8 did really well last year [at the Head of the Ohio race]," said captain Terra Duffy. "We hope to do as well this go around."

In addition to the Open-8, keyed by Trisha Coty and Amy Mehan, and the Light-4, which consists of Duffy, Megan Quail, Shannon Guiltinan, and Jennifer Retter, the Lady Irish will also enter an Open-4 shell.

"Our fall season is pretty strong. We're especially excited about racing at the St. Charles [on October 20]," said Duffy.

Magic hurt by racial comments

DETROIT (AP) — Magic Johnson has asked for the resignation of the school board member who described the NBA star as "a big, dumb black kid" during his school years in Lansing.

William Carter made the statements during a Sept. 12 board meeting. He said he deeply regretted them, but added they were taken out of context and he will not resign.

Johnson said Wednesday he and his family have been hurt by Carter's remarks.

"Not only were his comments hurtful to myself and my family, but especially to the children of Lansing, Michigan, if not everywhere," Johnson said in a statement released by the Lakers.

"I feel it is inappropriate and dangerous for a man with his ideas and feelings to be in such a powerful and influential public position," Johnson said. "Should Mr. Carter choose not to resign, I would ask that the Lansing school board seek a recall election against him immediately."

School board president Nancy Erickson reprimanded Carter in a letter Tuesday. She declined comment Wednesday on whether the board would ask for Carter's resignation. She said a decision could be made following a board meeting on Thursday.

The district cannot initiate a recall effort because state law prohibits the use of public funds for such purposes, Erickson said.

School board president Nancy Erickson reprimanded Carter in a letter Tuesday. Erickson was not immediately available for comment Wednesday.

Carter, 66, said he was not surprised by Johnson's reaction. "If I was in Magic's shoes I guess I would say the same thing," he said Wednesday. "This is an embarrassment for his family. I've tried to apologize to everybody that I can conceivably think of."

"It was a dumb thing to do, a poor choice of words."

Carter's comments came as he argued for spending more money on athletic programs for sixth-, seventh-, and eighth-graders.

Carter said he was trying to make the point that athletics help keep a lot of kids in school and interested in school, but "I tried to make my point in a disgustingly offensive way."

"I was trying to explain that Earvin Johnson was a total success picture, a product of Lansing schools, and of elementary, junior high and high school athletics," he said.

Johnson attended high school in Lansing, and led nearby Michigan State to a national championship in 1979.

School board member Adell Flourry Jr. said Carter should resign, as did the Lansing branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Texas A&M freshman dies on practice field COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — James Glenn, a freshman kicker for Texas A&M, collapsed before practice Wednesday and died later at a College Station hospital, school officials said.

Glenn, 19, a walk-on from Clear Creek High School in League City, was pronounced dead at 4:20 p.m. at Humana Hospital-Brazos Valley, said Alan Cannon, Texas A&M's sports information director.

"Words cannot describe the pain and sorrow felt by the football team, coaching staff and the entire Texas A&M family at the loss of this fine young man," coach R.C. Slocum said. "His family is in our thoughts and prayers."

Cannon said Glenn, 5-foot-11 and 167 pounds, was "just loosening up" before practice when he collapsed.

Coaches notified the university's health center and workers began administering cardiopulmonary resuscitation until an ambulance arrived.

"James received immediate attention from the Texas A&M training staff," Dr. Jesse Parr, a team physician, said.

"They were performing CPR just as soon as the young man dropped. Once he was in the ambulance, they continued trying to revive him. But he never regained consciousness," Cannon said.

Cannon said there was no indication that there was any drug use involved.

"The young man was one of the finest young men. He was a fine young man and there was never any indication that he would use drugs," Cannon said.

An autopsy will be performed to determine the cause of death, he said.

"James was a super young man," kicking coach John Pearce said. "His high school coach called us and told us he was an outstanding person, as well as an outstanding athlete. He was correct. James was a dedicated young man who set his goals and worked hard to achieve those goals. One of those goals was to kick for Texas A&M."

Glenn had kicked off three times last week against Tulsa, but had not attempted a field goal or extra point.

Most of the players hadn't yet reached the field Wednesday when Glenn was taken to the hospital. Slocum canceled practice for the day, but the Aggies (1-1) are expected to play Saturday's game against Southwestern Louisiana as scheduled.

Smith back in action

Higgs' job security in jeopardy

MIAMI (AP) — Mark Higgs, the third leading rusher in the NFL and perhaps the Miami Dolphins' most pleasant surprise this season, finds his job in jeopardy.

Higgs stepped in when Sammie Smith, Miami's top running back the past two years, sustained a sprained left knee Aug. 10. Smith missed the first four games but rejoined practice Monday and is eligible to come off injured reserve for Sunday's game against the Jets in New York.

"I'm not saying I expect to come in and just take over, because Mark has done a real good job," Smith said Wednesday. "But at the end of the last year I felt I was one of the best in the league. I just want to get back in there and pick up where I left off."

Smith said he's rusty and out of shape, but the knee feels good. A decision on whether to activate him for the Jets game will be made later this week.

With Smith's return pending, he and Higgs are wondering how coach Don Shula will parcel out playing time. Shula himself isn't sure.

"We're going to have to see," he said.

The 5-foot-7 Higgs, a fourth-year pro with only one career start before this season, has made a strong case for staying in the lineup. He topped 100 yards in the first two games and now has 371 yards in 94 carries for a 3.9 average. Shula absolved him of blame for the team's problems on offense the past two games.

But Higgs sounds almost eager for a reduced role.

"We have a double threat in the backfield now. We'll probably rotate in and out, and it'll keep us both a lot fresher," Higgs said. "I just want to get a chance to run the ball, like, 10 times a game. That would be OK with me."

Smith, however, would prefer not to share playing time. He averaged 15 carries a game in his first two seasons and likes a heavy workload.

"I feel like I'm better when I'm constantly in there and getting the ball, rather than sitting out a series and not really getting into the flow of the game," Smith said.

Higgs, signed by Miami as a free agent, has won the affection of Dolphin fans with his slashing running style. Smith, by contrast, was a first-round draft pick in 1989 who has struggled to meet high expectations.

Braves, Reds split doubleheader; Twins need three to clinch

ATLANTA (AP) — The Atlanta Braves wound up a wild day that included Delon Sanders' return and two arrests by splitting two 10-inning games with Cincinnati.

The Braves, who began the day two games behind NL West-leading Los Angeles, won the doubleheader opener 2-1 on Ron Gant's double, but lost the second one 10-9 when their two-run rally in the final inning fell short.

The Braves won the opener 2-1.

Atlanta's day started when rookies Brian Hunter and Keith Mitchell were arrested on drunken driving charges in separate, early-morning incidents. They both returned to the team in time to play in the first game.

finally won against a contender, routing the error-prone Los Angeles Dodgers.

The loss cut Los Angeles' lead in the NL West to 1 1/2 games over Atlanta.

Phillies 5, Cubs 4

CHICAGO — John Kruk drove in five runs with a pair of homers, including his third career grand slam, as Philadelphia edged Chicago on a windy day at Wrigley Field.

Tommy Greene (13-7) won his fourth consecutive start, allowing three runs and five hits in six innings. Mitch Williams got three outs for his 30th save, setting a club record for saves by a left-hander. Al Holland set the previous record in 1984.

Giants 2, Astros 1

HOUSTON — John Burkett pitched six strong innings and the San Francisco Giants beat Houston, ensuring the Astros' first losing home record since 1975.

Houston is 37-41 at the Astrodome with three games left. The Astros had most consecutive winning marks at home in the majors.

Expos 7, Cardinals 2

ST. LOUIS — Rookie Brian Barnes scattered 10 hits in his first complete game of the season, leading the Montreal Expos over the St. Louis Cardinals.

Barnes (5-6), a 23-year-old lefthander, struck out seven and walked none. He lost a bid for his first career shutout in the ninth on Tom Pagnozzi's RBI groundout and a run-scoring wild pitch.

Blue Jays 7, Angels 2

ANAHEIM, Calif. — Toronto increased its AL East lead to 2 1/2 games Wednesday, beating the California Angels 7-2 as John Olerud hit a three-run homer that capped a six-run rally in the fifth inning.

The Blue Jays began the day with a two-game lead in the AL East over Boston, which was rained out of a two-night doubleheader at Baltimore. Boston's doubleheader was rescheduled for Thursday, an off-day for the Blue Jays.

White Sox 6, Twins 1

MINNEAPOLIS — Scott Fletcher drove in two runs with a double and sacrifice fly, leading an early onslaught from the bottom of Chicago's order as the White Sox kept Minnesota from clinching a tie for the AL West.

Things still look bleak for the White Sox, who trail the Twins by eight games with 10 to play. Minnesota's magic number remains three.

Rangers 7, Mariners 1

SEATTLE — Nolan Ryan (12-6) gave up one run and three hits in eight innings for his 314th victory and tied Gaylord Perry for 13th on the career list, four behind Phil Niekro.

Athletics 8, Royals 4

OAKLAND, Calif. — On the afternoon after Oakland was eliminated from the AL West race, Rickey Henderson and Mike Gallego homered and Bob Welch (12-12) allowed five hits in 6 2-3 innings, ending his four-game losing streak.

Indians 6, Tigers 4

DETROIT — Doug Jones remained perfect as a starting pitcher, helping Cleveland beat Detroit. Jones (4-7), the Indians' career saves leader, was making his third major-league start. He gave up 10 hits, walking one and striking out five in seven-plus innings.

Yankees 8, Brewers 6

MILWAUKEE — Roberto Kelly hit a three-run homer in the 11th inning to lift New York over Milwaukee. The Brewers tied the score with two runs in the bottom of the ninth, including Greg Vaughn's 25th homer.

FSU's Buckley not impressed with Howard

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — It seems everyone is impressed with Michigan split end Desmond Howard. Everyone except Terrell Buckley.

But that's to be expected. Buckley is a cornerback for Florida State. It will be his job to stop Howard on Saturday when the No. 1 Seminoles (3-0) meet the No. 3 Wolverines (2-0).

"I face receivers as good as Desmond Howard every day in practice," Buckley said this week. "I look forward to taking on players like that. We'll both lace on our shoes and go out on the field and see who's the best."

There is no doubt that Buckley believes those words. That's part of the mind-game between receivers and their defenders. But practice plays don't count like the ones Howard has made in games.

Howard has six of Michigan's seven offensive touchdowns. He ran for one, returned a kickoff 93 yards for one and caught four TD passes, including that heart-stopping finger-tip grab that buried Notre Dame.

"He just amazes me every day, even if it's at practice," said Elvis Grbac, the Wolverines quarterback. "He comes up with big plays, plays that you haven't seen. That's what's special about Desmond Howard. He expects a lot of good things out of himself."

More often than not, he succeeds.

"I realize that week in and week out I have to keep proving myself," Howard said. "Come Saturday, the Notre Dame game will be irrelevant. I'm now in the same situation Klingler was in when everybody was talking about him until the Miami game, when his stock went down."

That doesn't mean Howard wouldn't like to win the Heisman Trophy. It's just that he has other priorities.

"The thing about Desmond is that he doesn't just sit down and say, 'I want to win the Heisman,'" Grbac said. "He just wants to win ballgames. He doesn't care about the individual aspect. And at the end of the season, if things work out all right for him, that's great."

It's difficult to win the Heisman Trophy at Michigan because the team is emphasized over individuals. Tom Harmon, in 1940, is the only Wolverine to win a Heisman. It's also difficult for a receiver.

Since the award was first given in 1935, only four receivers have ever won the Heisman — Yale's Larry Kelley (1936), Notre Dame's Leon Hart (1949), Nebraska's Johnny Rodgers (1972) and Notre Dame's Tim Brown (1987).

Part of the reason for that is defenders like Buckley. Tripp Welborne, who was an All-American safety a year ago at Michigan, has tried to help Howard understand that.

"Just as he made his name off other defensive backs, they'll want to make their names off him," Welborne said. "Not only will they try to stop him, they'll try to embarrass him and get recognition for themselves by doing it. That's why, just as hard as it is to get there, it's hard to stay there."

Howard accepts that, like he accepts most other things in life: with keen interest and an open mind.

Off the field, he is very interested in Black history. He is often outspoken on the subject.

"As a Black individual growing up, you're not really taught about yourself in schools," Howard said. "I can't recall a person who I learned about in school who is greater than Nelson Mandela in terms of personal beliefs and something he stood up for. Now, he was in jail for 27 years. I'm only 21. So he was in jail before I went to school. But I never learned about him."

Howard and Grbac both went to Cleveland St. Joseph, an all-male Catholic high school.

After college, and after what promises to be a lucrative NFL career, Howard wants to hold his own seminars. He plans to earn a graduate degree in sociology, then hit the nationwide lecture circuit. He already visits Ann Arbor schools, using his athletic success as the hook.

Refrigerator keeps his door shut this fall

CHICAGO (AP) — William Perry is keeping as low a profile as possible for a refrigerator.

"I just want to be left alone," the Chicago Bears' defensive lineman says in explaining why he has been ducking reporters this year.

Perry weighed in at 370 pounds for training camp in July, about 50 pounds heavier than coach Mike Ditka would have liked. But the Fridge is playing well again, with 23 tackles, one sack and a blocked field goal in the first four games.

"I'm having a lot of fun this year," Perry said on Ditka's television show on Sunday.

Ditka said Perry has a lot of competition for sacks from the other members of the front four — Richard Dent, Steve McMichael and Trace Armstrong, now on injured reserve for four weeks.

"They get real jealous when he makes a sack," Ditka said. "He gets to razz McMichael, Armstrong and Dent."

Nobody is saying how much Perry weighs now, but a good guess probably would be around 350.

"I work on my weight every day. I get up at 4 or 5 o'clock and go over to Halas Hall and work out an hour or two before anybody gets over there, just trying to get it on down," Perry said.

Ditka said he's impressed with Perry's effort in the weight and fitness room in suburban Lake Forest.

"You won't believe this, but he's there on the Stairmaster for an hour at 5:30 or 6 o'clock every morning," Ditka said, referring to a mechanical stair-climbing simulator. "Even though his weight is up, he's built up strength in his legs and that's the reason for his endurance he's shown this season."

After alternating last season with McMichael and Dan Hampton, Perry has been playing almost full-time this year.

Ditka still is thinking of using Perry again as a fullback on the goal-line unit, where his national popularity blossomed.

Pendergast clowns his way into opponents' sights

Irish junior forward has led team in goals for two years; always a threat to score for Berticelli

BY DAN PIER
Sports Writer

Kevin Pendergast takes things lightly off the soccer field.

"Most of the guys would tell you I'm a clown," he said. "The freshmen probably thought I had a screw loose when they first met me."

But when the junior forward suits up for the Irish, it's all business. His on-field intensity has made Pendergast a vital part of the soccer program in his first two years.

"Kevin's greatest asset is his intensity," said coach Mike Berticelli. "He is a very motivated player with a high level of commitment to winning."

Of course, intensity alone doesn't make a quality soccer player. Thanks to great speed and a powerful shot, Pendergast has led the team in goals over the last two years.

His seven goals last year tied him for the team lead with Kenyon Meyer, while he was tops on the Irish with twelve goals as a freshman.

Things might be more difficult for Pendergast this season, though, as opponents will be well prepared to defend against him. He has scored just once in Notre Dame's first five games. But Pendergast doesn't seem all that worried.

"I hope to put the ball in the back of the net more often," he said. "I don't think I'll keep scoring one goal in five games."

Berticelli's feelings mirror those of his star forward. In fact, he expects improvement from Pendergast over last year.

"Kevin is always a threat to score. He has tremendous potential, which he will reach with more experience as a front runner in our system," said the coach, who installed a new offense just last year, his first at

Kevin Pendergast

Notre Dame.

Pendergast also looks for the Irish to improve as a team after last year's 4-11-3 record. Notre Dame's start (2-2-1) isn't quite what he hoped for, but Pendergast believes things are looking up.

"I hope our game against Evansville on Sunday, even though we tied them, will be an indication of this year," he said. "We outshot them 19 to 6. We just need to be more offensive minded, and I need to contribute by being a little more hungry around the net. The defense has not been a problem."

Pendergast spoke of his own situation as well as the team's when he said, "Once the goals start coming, everything seems a lot easier."

Although last year was difficult for Pendergast and the whole team, he gained valuable experience. He feels he is more mentally ready for this season.

"I'm a little more comfortable with my role. As a freshman, you're not expected to contribute much as far as getting everyone fired up," he said. "Last year, the whole team's attitude was down because we were losing. My attitude now is probably better than it has been the last two years."

And, as one of only four upperclassmen starting, Pendergast will need that good attitude. He must be a leader as well as a scorer.

If the past is a good indicator, Pendergast should have no problem filling both of those roles. He compiled an impressive resumé both on and off of the athletic field at Simsbury High in Connecticut.

A soccer All-American, Pendergast was also honored as a Connecticut Scholar-Athlete and participated in Student Government and the National Honor Society. He has continued his record of success here at Notre Dame.

"Kevin is a tremendous student as well," Berticelli said. "He is very competitive both in the classroom and on the field. He is a fine representative of Notre Dame."

Even when he's just clowning around.

Senior midfielder Kenyon Meyer avoids the slide tackle. The Irish hope to keep their footing this weekend against Indiana.

Men's soccer faces ninth-ranked Hoosiers

By JASON KELLY
Sports Writer

After holding their opponents scoreless for three consecutive games, the Notre Dame men's soccer team will put their 2-2-1 record on the line tonight against ninth-ranked Indiana at South Bend's School Field.

Shutout wins over Central Michigan and Michigan State as well as a scoreless tie against Evansville have given the young Irish team confidence, but they will have to convert more of their scoring opportunities to be successful against the Hoosiers. In the last two games, the Irish offense has collected 36 shots, but only one goal, while the defense has held the opposition to just nine shots.

"Our defense hasn't been scored on in over 300 minutes," said senior co-captain Kenyon Meyer, "so the key to I.U. is that somebody will have to step forward and put in a goal or two."

Meyer leads the Irish this season with 21 shots on goal, but he has yet to score, while junior Kevin Pendergast, who is next with 13 shots, has netted only one goal in 1991. If they continue to create those scoring opportunities against the Hoosiers, the Irish should come out on top.

Defensively, the Irish are expected to continue their stifling play. Senior co-captain Brett Hofmann and junior Mario Tricoci anchor the defense, which has allowed only 41 shots on goal in the first five games of the season. Freshman goalie Bert Bader has been equally impressive this season, collecting 20 saves on the way to an impressive 0.56 goals against average.

In order to continue their dominance, however, the Irish defense will have to stop Hoosier star Todd Yeagley, who has netted seven goals and three assists in 1991. Indiana's top returning scorers Wane Lobring and Blake Rodgers will also be focal points of the Irish defense. Much of the rest of the 1991 Indiana team, however, will be visiting South Bend for the first time tonight.

"They're a different team from last year," Meyer commented. "They have a lot of first year players."

Those first year players will pose some problems for the Irish, but Notre Dame's rookies will pose some problems for the Hoosiers also. As many as eight freshmen have been in the starting lineup for the Irish and 12 have seen action this season. Despite their inexperience, however, they have proven their ability to play on the collegiate level against some of the nation's top teams.

Indiana has dominated the series, which began in 1978. In 12 meetings, the Hoosiers have collected ten wins against only one loss and one tie. The lone Irish victory was a 4-3 decision in 1987.

Crew travels to Pittsburgh to begin 1991 campaign

By JIM VOGL
Sports Writer

The Notre Dame Crew team plunges into the '91 fall season this weekend, traveling to the Head of the Ohio race in Pittsburgh.

Junior Lou Chappuie explained Notre Dame's training process in preparation for the race.

"The first week of school we had conditioning—running and aerobics. The next week we were on the water, rowing six days a week. We also had two work-outs last Sunday."

While the team hopes their hard work will pay off in Pittsburgh, Chappuie admitted some anxiousness.

"We don't really have any clear expectations," he said. "We obviously hope to win, but we simply need more water time."

The fall season for crew involves the head race, "which is an endurance race, two and a half to three and a half miles in range, with a staggered start," said Chappuie.

The spring season races, on the other hand, are short and quick 2000 meter sprints.

Chappuie elaborated on more technical goals of development.

"We'll focus on the techniques of rowing cleanly and learning how to apply power," he said.

Last year, the team's performance at the Head of the Ohio race showed promising signs of development. The Light-8 shell finished second, just ahead of Cornell, a national rowing powerhouse.

The Head of the Ohio traditionally features strong teams from the East Coast, the Midwest, and the South Region. Schools represented range from Georgetown, Cornell, Virginia, and Pitt, to schools from Miami, Orlando and Tampa Bay.

This year, the Irish will enter the Heavy-8, two Heavy-Fours, a Light-4, a Club-8 and a Club-

The fall of Olympic basketball

Last weekend, after Notre Dame Saturday had ended, NBC broadcast another anticlimactic piece of television. However, the announcement of ten members of the 1992 United States Olympic Team was not only disappointing because of its predictability and lifelessness, but because of the excitement with which America views this assembly of basketball's all-time superstars.

In fact, the team representing the United States will play in games that are anything but exciting. When Magic, Michael and Company defeat China 100-24, who will watch the second half? When Karl Malone charges down the court to dunk over Nigeria's second-string center, will there be any real thrill? When Chuck Daly's hair is in place after 10 games, 10 victories and 10 blowouts, will America's need to win finally be fulfilled?

The United States didn't lose an international basketball game until an infamous three seconds were replayed against the Soviet Union in Munich in 1972, some 80 years after James Naismith invented the game in Springfield,

Rolando de Aguiar

Athletic Agenda

Mass.

That loss to the USSR was but the first in a long series of disappointments for American basketball. The United States has not won any of the last five international competitions in which it has competed. The 1987 and 1991 Pan American Games, 1988 Olympics, 1989 World Championships, and 1990 Goodwill Games were all won by countries other than the U. S., including former basketball powerhouses Yugoslavia and the Soviet Union.

There is little doubt that the team assembled to compete for the U.S. would easily beat even the most experienced international teams. However, those teams no longer even exist. Lithuania, the homeland of several members of the 1988 gold medal-winning Soviet national team, has been granted athletic sovereignty by the International Olympic Committee, splitting the former Soviet team in half. Yugoslavia, also once dominant on the world scene, is split by civil war. A unified Yugoslavia is doubtful for Barcelona.

With those obstacles out of the way, any team of college all-stars would likely cruise to the gold medal, even with John Thompson as coach. Sending this overgrown NBA all-star team to Barcelona to show the rest of the world who is the basketball boss is like treating the common cold with chemotherapy.
